| BORROWER'S NO. | ISSUE DATE | BORROWER'S NO. | ISSUE DATE |
|---|---|---|---|
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |

56

Z

1063

DATE LABEL

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 12 | | | |
| 12 | 24-01 | | |
| 25/7/86 | | | |
| | 477— | 506 | |

Call No. _____ Date _____

Acc. No. _____

UNIVERSITY OF KASHMIR
LIBRARY

This book should be returned on or before the last date stamped above. An over-due charge of 10/20 Paise will be levied for each day, if the book is kept beyond that date.

| BORROWER'S NO. | ISSUE DATE | BORROWER'S NO. | ISSUE DATE |
|---|---|---|---|
| | | | |
| | | | |

PRINCIPLES OF HINDU LAW

AUSTRALIA
The Law Book Company Ltd.
Sydney

CANADA
The Carswell Company Ltd.
Agincourt, Ontario

MALAYSIA: SINGAPORE
BRUNEI: INDONESIA
Malayan Law Journal (Pte.) Ltd.
Singapore

NEW ZEALAND
Sweet & Maxwell (N.Z.) Ltd.
Wellington

PAKISTAN
Pakistan Law House
Karachi

U.K.
Sweet & Maxwell, Ltd.
London

U.S.A.
Fred B. Rothman & Co.
S. Hackensack, N.J.

MULLA # PRINCIPLES OF # HINDU LAW

WITH A GENERAL INTRODUCTION TO HINDU LAW AND WITH COMMENTARIES ON
THE HINDU MARRIAGE ACT, 1955
THE HINDU SUCCESSION ACT, 1956
THE HINDU MINORITY & GUARDIANSHIP ACT, 1956
THE HINDU ADOPTIONS & MAINTENANCE ACT, 1956

FOURTEENTH EDITION

By
SUNDERLAL T. DESAI, B.A., LL.B., Barrister-at-Law
Senior Advocate, Supreme Court of India
Formerly Chief Justice of the High Court of Gujarat

BOMBAY
N. M. TRIPATHI PRIVATE LIMITED

PIONEER PUBLICATIONS
LAW BOOKSELLERS & DISTRIBUTORS
12 U.B. BUNGALOW ROAD
DELHI-110007 PH. 229525

© 1974, 1978, N. M. TRIPATHI PRIVATE LTD.

In General Introduction and Commentaries on the four Acts—S. T. DESAI

| | |
|---|---|
| First edition | 1912 |
| Second edition | 1915 |
| Third edition | 1919 |
| Fourth edition | 1924 |
| Fifth edition | 1926 |
| Sixth edition | 1929 |
| Seventh edition | 1932 |
| Eighth edition | 1936 |
| Ninth edition | 1940 |
| Tenth edition | 1946 |
| Eleventh edition | 1952 |
| Twelfth edition | 1959 |
| Reprinted | 1960 |
| Thirteenth edition | 1966 |
| Reprinted | 1970 |
| Fourteenth edition | 1974 |
| Reprinted | 1978 |

KASHMIR UNIVERSITY
Acc. No. 128995 SV/02
Dated 18.10.79

Rs. 50.00

Paper used for the printing of this book was made available by the Government of India at concessional rates.

Printed by P. V. Rajan at R.M.D.C. Press Pvt. Ltd. 70/71, Worli Estate, Bombay-400 018 and published by A. S. Pandya for N. M. Tripathi Pvt. Ltd. 164, Samaldas Gandhi Marg, Bombay-400 002.

PREFACE TO THE FOURTEENTH EDITION

A number of important decisions have been given by the Supreme Court and also by the various High Courts after the last edition came out. In revising the book for the present edition, I have taken care to incorporate the same.

I am thankful to Mr. A. K. Sarkar, M.A., LL.B., Advocate, for his assistance in the preparation of this edition.

Supreme Court
New Delhi
March, 1974

SUNDERLAL T. DESAI

Title -

Author

Accession No

Call No. 820.8

| BORROWER'S NO. | ISSUE DATE | BORROWER'S NO. | ISSUE DATE |
|---|---|---|---|
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |

PREFACE TO THE TWELFTH EDITION

Since the publication of the last edition of this work fundamental changes and substantial modifications have been brought about in Hindu law by a series of enactments, intended to ensure a uniform civil code of personal law for Hindus in the whole country. History of legislation by democratic processes presents no parallel to basic changes in any system of personal law of the nature of the extensive alterations made by the recent legislation embodied in the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, the Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956, and the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956. These Acts abrogate and over-ride all the rules of Hindu law previously applicable to Hindus, whether by virtue of any text or rule of Hindu law or any custom or usage having the force of law in respect of matters dealt with in them. These Acts also supersede any other law contained in any Central or State legislation in force immediately before they came into operation, in so far as such legislation was inconsistent with the provisions contained in them. Bentham wrote of 'law reform' by codification and its stimulating and humanising effect. Bentham's conception of codification was that it should be a complete digest of the law on the subject dealt with and its style should be characterised by force and harmony. It should cause the debates of lawyers and the bad laws of former times to be forgotten and commentaries, if written, should not be read. This is indubitably an ideal to be pursued by any law-maker. It will be for the reader to judge how far Parliament has succeeded in giving complete self-sufficing enactments which, as Bentham phrased it, "should not require schools for their explanation or casuists to unravel subtleties". Bentham probably underrated the difficulties of carrying codification into execution.

The editing of another author's work is always a delicate task and more so when it has long been recognised as a standard work on its subject. This is especially true of a work when good deal of the law on the subject has undergone unmatched transformation and radical changes and the editor hopes to serve the need of the reader, who turns to it for the new law, and of the reader who only wants the old law with notes and citations to date, as well as of one whose requirement touches both the new and the old law. I hope that in my efforts to meet these requirements I have not in any manner impaired the high authority of this work.

The outstanding feature of the changes made in the law is that all disparity in the rights of men and women and disabilities based on caste or sex are eliminated in matters of marriage, succession and adoption. Even though some of the changes may seem to break violently with the past it cannot be denied that the fast moving conditions and the social, economic and political upheaval in the country had rendered imperative substantial and radical alterations in Hindu law. Far-reaching and fundamental changes had become inevitable, for they alone could furnish fair and equable solutions to some of the most controversial questions relating to the law of marriage and succession.

These recent enactments could not be and are not (except on certain matters expressly so stated) retroactive in their operation and even in respect of past matters to which they apply it will often be necessary to know the law as it previously existed. A part of Hindu law and usage as has hitherto been applicable—for instance, much of the law affecting joint family and joint family property—remains unabrogated by statute. Moreover these recent enactments leave an undetermined residue and the importance and necessity of knowing the entire system cannot be minimised. Reference to the recognised sources of Hindu law including the texts of the Smritikars and the authoritative works of the Commentators and Nibandhakars will, therefore, continue to be made.

These considerations and the unusual nature of the changes brought about in the law by these recent enactments are my apology for adding to this work a General Introduction to Hindu law with particular reference to the sources of Hindu law and the great juristheologians and jurisprudentes who compiled the Smritis and composed Commentaries and Digests of which the leading ones have acquired almost ex cathedra character. Otherwise I would deem it presumptuous on the part of an editor like me to write an Introduction to this standard work of Sir Dinshah Mulla. I dedicate the General Introduction to Hindu law and the Commentaries on the new enactments which I have written to the memory of the Right Honourable author of this work.

One inevitable consequence of the new legislation is a considerable increase in the length of this edition as compared with its predecessor. This is mainly due to the General Introduction added to this work and the Commentaries on the four recent enactments. The arrangement and text of the previous edition have been preserved though on a number of points the matter has been condensed. Despite changes in the law most of the text of the work of the eminent author and the illustrious editors of the previous editions will continue to be of the same usefulness and guidance until the lapse of a considerable time when the old law and in particular the old law of succession ceases to be of current importance. I have generally revised the book and it has been my endeavour to bring it up to the date of its going to press by reference to all the relevant cases reported since the last edition. The new statutes and commentaries on the same have been added as a separate part of the book though in the text of the original work I have taken care to draw attention to the new law wherever it was felt necessary to do so. I have also added some short preliminary notes to the Chapters of the original work.

The volume of case law that has grown up since the publication of the last edition is considerable. The Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, introduced far-reaching changes in the law of succession. It was ameliorative in character and enacted to carry out important social reform but unfortunately the rules of devolution set out in it were so penned that there have arisen anomalies and a number of conundrums and an attempt to resolve one difficulty has often caused misconceptions and equally great if not greater difficulties in other cases and raised problems which do not admit of logically consistent answers. Although that enactment is now repealed by the Hindu Succession Act of 1956, a number of questions affecting succession and titles to property governed by that enactment, some of them hard to deal with, have arisen since the last edition and there is a mass of case-law on the subject. These questions even now continue to crop up. This has required a new arrangement and § 35 has been rewritten so as to analyse and interpret the sections of that Act in the light of a number of recent decisions on the subject.

A number of important decisions of the Supreme Court and some Full Bench decisions of High Courts were given after the last edition came out. Although they do not come strictly within the category of judicial pronouncements which have totally altered the law on the topics dealt with in them they did require remodelling and recasting of a number of paragraphs in the text of the work.

It is difficult for me to say anything about the contents of the General Introduction to Hindu law and the Commentaries I have written on the new enactments or to draw attention to any features of the same, though tradition permits it and perhaps requires it to be done in a preface. But I may say that I have striven hard and long to write what I hope may be found dependable.

I am thankful to Mahamahopadhyaya Dr. Kane for reading and discussing with me the Introduction and making valuable suggestions. I am also thankful to Mr. Hemendra K. Shah, M.A., LL.B., Advocate (O.S.) and Mr. K. S. Shavaksha, Barrister-at-Law, for their assistance in the preparation of this edition.

High Court
BOMBAY
November 1958

SUNDERLAL T. DESAI

Title [redacted]

Author [redacted]

Accession No [redacted]

Call No. 820.8 [redacted]

| BORROWER'S NO. | ISSUE DATE | BORROWER'S NO. | ISSUE DATE |
|---|---|---|---|
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |

TABLE OF CONTENTS

| | PAGES |
|---|---|
| PREFACE TO THE FOURTEENTH EDITION ... ... ... | v |
| PREFACE TO THE TWELFTH EDITION ... ... ... ... | vii |
| TABLE OF CASES ... ... ... ... ... ... | xv |
| ADDENDA ... ... ... ... ... ... | lxix |
| INTRODUCTION ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 |
| CHAPTER | |
| I. OPERATION OF THE HINDU LAW ... ... ... | 71 |
| II. SOURCES OF HINDU LAW ... ... ... ... | 77 |
| III. GENERAL PRINCIPLES OF INHERITANCE ... ... | 85 |
| IV. INHERITANCE TO MALES—MITAKSHARA SCHOOL ... | 91 |
| V. FEMALE HEIRS ... ... ... ... ... | 142 |
| VI. SUCCESSION TO MALES—IN THE BOMBAY STATE ... | 147 |
| VII. INHERITANCE TO MALES—DAYABHAGA SCHOOL ... | 152 |
| VIII. POINTS OF DIFFERENCE BETWEEN MITAKSHARA AND DAYABHAGA SUCCESSION ... ... ... ... | 160 |
| IX. EXCLUSION FROM INHERITANCE AND PARTITION ... | 161 |
| X. WOMAN'S PROPERTY: PART I—STRIDHANA ... ... | 163 |
| (1) Stridhana according to the Smritis, Commentaries and Judicial Decisions (§§ 112-123) ... ... | 168-176 |
| (2) Special Features of Stridhana (§ 124) ... ... | 176 |
| (3) Enumeration of Stridhana (§§ 125-140) ... ... | 176-184 |
| (4) Rights of a Woman over the Stridhana (§§ 141-144) | 184-186 |
| (5) Succession to Stridhana (§§ 145-157) ... ... | 186-198 |
| (6) Rules common to all the Schools (§§ 145-165) ... | 198-200 |
| XI. WOMAN'S PROPERTY: PART II—PROPERTY ACQUIRED BY A WOMAN BY INHERITANCE ... ... ... | 201 |
| (1) To Property inherited by Females (§§ 168-173) ... | 201-206 |
| (2) Powers of Female Heirs over Inherited Property (§§ 174-201) ... ... ... ... ... | 206-253 |
| (3) Remedies against Unauthorised Acts of Widows (§§ 202-211) and other Limited Heirs ... ... | 253-260 |
| XII. COPARCENERS AND COPARCENARY PROPERTY—MITAKSHARA LAW ... ... ... ... ... | 261 |
| (1) Coparceners (§§ 212-217) ... ... ... | 261-267 |
| (2) Coparcenary Property (§§ 218-234A) ... ... | 267 |
| (3) Management and Enjoyment of Coparcenary Property (§§ 235-254) ... ... ... ... | 267-289 |
| (4) Alienation of Coparcenary Property (§§ 255-257) ... | 319-320 |
| (5) Alienation of undivided Coparcenary Interest (§§ 258-266) ... ... ... ... ... | 320-336 |
| (6) Setting aside Alienation (§§ 267-271A) ... ... | 336-344 |
| XIII. COPARCENERS AND COPARCENARY PROPERTY—DAYABHAGA LAW ... ... ... ... ... | 345-350 |

| CHAPTER | | PAGES |
|---|---|---|
| XIV. | DEBTS—MITAKSHARA LAW ... ... ... ... | 351 |
| | (1) LIABILITY OF SEPARATE PROPERTY FOR DEBTS (§ 288) ... | 351-352 |
| | (2) UNDIVIDED COPARCENER'S INTEREST WHEN LIABLE FOR HIS DEBT (§§ 289) ... ... ... ... | 352-354 |
| | (3) LIABILITY OF JOINT FAMILY PROPERTY FOR FATHER'S DEBTS (§§ 290-301) ... ... ... ... | 354-391 |
| XV. | DEBTS—DAYABHAGA LAW ... ... ... ... | 392 |
| XVI. | PARTITION AND REUNION—MITAKSHARA LAW ... | 393 |
| | (1) WHAT PROPERTY LIABLE TO PARTITION (§§ 303-305) ... | 393-397 |
| | (2) PERSONS ENTITLED TO A SHARE ON PARTITION (§§ 306-318) ... ... ... ... ... | 397-406 |
| | (3) RESTRAINT AGAINST PARTITIONS (§§ 319-320) ... | 406 |
| | (4) ALLOTMENT OF SHARES (§ 321) ... ... ... | 407-409 |
| | (5) PARTITION HOW EFFECTED (§§ 322-335) ... ... | 409-428 |
| | (6) RE-OPENING PARTITION (§§ 336-339) ... ... | 428-429 |
| | (7) EFFECT OF PARTITION (§§ 340-341) ... ... ... | 429-430 |
| | (8) RE-UNION (§§ 342-344) ... ... ... ... | 430-431 |
| | (9) PARTITION CREATED BY SO-CALLED WILL (§ 345) ... | 431-432 |
| XVII. | PARTITION—DAYABHAGA LAW ... ... ... | 433-437 |
| XVIII. | GIFTS ... ... ... ... ... ... | 438-443 |
| XIX. | WILLS ... ... ... ... ... ... | 444-454 |
| XX. | RULES COMMON TO GIFTS AND WILLS ... ... | 455-476 |
| XXI. | RELIGIOUS AND CHARITABLE ENDOWMENTS ... | 477-506 |
| XXII. | MARRIAGE ... ... ... ... ... ... | 507-522 |
| XXIII. | ADOPTION ... ... ... ... ... ... | 523-524 |
| | (1) WHO MAY ADOPT (§§ 449-473) ... ... ... | 524-547 |
| | (2) WHO MAY GIVE IN ADOPTION (§§ 474-479A) ... ... | 547-548 |
| | (3) WHO MAY BE ADOPTED (§§ 480-487) ... ... | 549-553 |
| | (4) CEREMONIES RELATING TO ADOPTION (§§ 488-493) ... | 553-556 |
| | (5) RESULTS OF DATTAK ADOPTION (§§ 494-500) ... ... | 556-563 |
| | (6) DIVESTING OF ESTATE ON ADOPTION (§§ 501-506) ... | 563-566 |
| | (7) ALIENATIONS MADE PRIOR TO ADOPTION (§§ 507-509) ... | 566-567 |
| | (8) SURRENDER PRIOR TO ADOPTION (§ 509A) ... ... | 567 |
| | (9) EFFECTS OF INVALID ADOPTION (§§ 510-511) ... ... | 568 |
| | (10) MODE OF PROOF AND ESTOPPEL (§§ 512-514) ... ... | 568-571 |
| | (11) KRITRIMA ADOPTION (§ 515) ... ... ... | 571-572 |
| | (12) ILLATOM ADOPTION (§ 515A) ... ... ... ... | 572-573 |
| | (13) CUSTOMARY ADOPTION IN THE PUNJAB (515B) ... ... | 573 |
| XXIV. | MINORITY AND GUARDIANSHIP ... ... ... | 574 |
| | (1) NATURAL GUARDIANS (§§ 518-531) ... ... | 575-584 |
| | (2) TESTAMENTARY GUARDIANS (§ 532) ... ... ... | 584-585 |
| | (3) GUARDIANS APPOINTED BY THE COURT (§§ 533-537) ... | 585-587 |
| | (4) GUARDIAN DE FACTO AND GUARDIAN AD HOC (§§ 538-538A) | 587-588 |
| | (5) REMEDIES FOR RECOVERING CUSTODY OF MINORS (§ 539) | 588-589 |

| CHAPTER | | PAGES |
|---|---|---|
| XXV | MAINTENANCE ... ... ... ... ... | 590 |
| | (1) NATURE AND EXTENT OF RIGHT OF MAINTENANCE (§§ 540-544A) ... ... ... ... ... | 590-592 |
| | (2) PERSONS ENTITLED TO MAINTENANCE (§§ 545-565) ... | 592-607 |
| | (3) AMOUNT OF MAINTENANCE (§§ 566-568) ... ... | 607-609 |
| | (4) TRANSFER OF FAMILY PROPERTY AND ITS EFFECT ON RIGHT OF MAINTENANCE (§§ 569-572) ... ... ... | 610-613 |
| | (5) TRANSFER OF FAMILY DWELLING-HOUSE AND ITS EFFECT ON THE RIGHT OF RESIDENCE (§§ 573-575) ... ... | 613-615 |
| | (6) RIGHT OF MAINTENANCE NOT AFFECTED BY WILL (§ 576) ... | 615 |
| | (7) TRANSFER AND ATTACHMENT OF RIGHT OF MAINTENANCE (§§ 577-578) ... ... ... ... ... | 615 |
| | (8) SUIT FOR MAINTENANCE (§§ 579-581) ... ... | 615-616 |
| XXVI. | CONVERSION FROM HINDUISM ... ... ... | 617-620 |
| XXVII. | IMPARTIBLE PROPERTY ... ... ... ... | 621-628 |
| XXVIII. | THE LAW OF DAMDUPAT ... ... ... ... | 629-633 |
| XXIX. | BENAMI TRANSACTIONS ... ... ... ... | 634-639 |
| XXX. | JAINS ... ... ... ... ... ... | 640-644 |
| XXXI. | SUDRAS ... ... ... ... ... ... | 645-650 |
| HINDU MARRIAGE ACT, 1955 | | ... ... ... ... ... 651-652 |
| | INTRODUCTORY NOTE ... ... ... ... ... | 653-664 |
| | PREAMBLE ... ... ... ... ... ... | 665-669 |
| | PRELIMINARY (Ss. 1-4) ... ... ... ... ... | 670-684 |
| | HINDU MARRIAGES (Ss. 5-8) ... ... ... ... | 684-695 |
| | RESTITUTION OF CONJUGAL RIGHTS AND JUDICIAL SEPARATION (Ss. 9-10) ... ... ... ... ... ... | 696-731 |
| | NULLITY OF MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE (Ss. 11-18) ... ... | 731-767 |
| | JURISDICTION AND PROCEDURE (Ss. 19-28) ... ... ... | 767-819 |
| | SAVINGS AND REPEALS (Ss. 29 & 30) ... ... ... ... | 819-822 |
| HINDU SUCCESSION ACT, 1956 | | ... ... ... ... ... 823-824 |
| | INTRODUCTORY NOTE ... ... ... ... ... ... | 825-833 |
| | PREAMBLE ... ... ... ... ... ... | 834-835 |
| | PRELIMINARY (Ss. 1-4) ... ... ... ... ... | 835-844 |
| | INTESTATE SUCCESSION—GENERAL (Ss. 5-17) ... ... ... | 844-934 |
| | GENERAL PROVISIONS RELATING TO SUCCESSION (Ss. 18-28) ... | 934-948 |
| | ESCHEAT (S. 29) ... ... ... ... ... ... | 948-949 |
| | TESTAMENTARY SUCCESSION (S. 30) ... ... ... ... | 949-950 |
| | REPEALS (S. 31) ... ... ... ... ... ... | 951 |
| | THE SCHEDULE ... ... ... ... ... ... | 951 |
| HINDU MINORITY AND GUARDIANSHIP ACT, 1956 | | ... ... 952 |
| | INTRODUCTORY NOTE ... ... ... ... ... | 953-957 |
| | SHORT TITLE AND EXTENT (S. 1) ... ... ... ... | 958 |
| | ACT TO BE SUPPLEMENTARY TO ACT 8 OF 1890 (S. 2) ... ... | 959 |
| | APPLICATION OF ACT (S. 3) ... ... ... ... ... | 959-960 |
| | DEFINITIONS (S. 4) ... ... ... ... ... ... | 960-961 |
| | OVER-RIDING EFFECT OF ACT (S. 5) ... ... ... ... | 961-962 |
| | NATURAL GUARDIANS OF A HINDU MINOR (S. 6) ... ... ... | 962-965 |

| CHAPTER | | PAGES |
|---|---|---|
| | NATURAL GUARDIANSHIP OF ADOPTED SON (S. 7) ... ... ... | 965 |
| | POWERS OF NATURAL GUARDIAN (S. 8) ... | 965-969 |
| | TESTAMENTARY GUARDIANS AND THEIR POWERS (S. 9) ... ... | 970-973 |
| | INCAPACITY OF MINOR TO ACT AS GUARDIAN OF PROPERTY (S. 10) ... | 973-974 |
| | DE FACTO GUARDIAN NOT TO DEAL WITH MINOR'S PROPERTY (S. 11) ... | 974 |
| | GUARDIAN NOT TO BE APPOINTED FOR MINOR'S UNDIVIDED INTEREST IN JOINT FAMILY PROPERTY (S. 12) ... ... ... ... | 975 |
| | WELFARE OF MINOR TO BE PARAMOUNT CONSIDERATION (S. 13) ... | 976 |
| HINDU ADOPTIONS AND MAINTENANCE ACT, 1956 ... ... | | 977-978 |
| | INTRODUCTORY NOTE ... ... ... ... ... | 979-988 |
| | PREAMBLE ... ... ... ... ... ... | 989-990 |
| | CHAPTER I—PRELIMINARY (SS. 1-4) ... ... ... ... | 990-994 |
| | CHAPTER II—ADOPTIONS (SS. 5-17) ... ... ... ... | 995-1016 |
| | CHAPTER III—MAINTENANCE (SS. 18-28) ... ... ... | 1016-1036 |
| | CHAPTER IV—REPEALS AND SAVINGS (SS. 29-30) ... ... | 1036 |

APPENDICES

| APPENDIX | | |
|---|---|---|
| I. | THE HINDU DISPOSITION OF PROPERTY ACT, 1916 (ACT XV OF 1916) ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1037-1038 |
| II. | THE HINDU INHERITANCE (REMOVAL OF DISABILITIES) ACT XII OF 1928 ... ... ... ... ... | 1038-1039 |
| III. | THE CHILD MARRIAGE RESTRAINT ACT XIX OF 1929 ... | 1039-1041 |
| IV. | THE HINDU GAINS OF LEARNING ACT XXX OF 1930 ... | 1041-1042 |
| V. | THE HINDU WOMEN'S RIGHTS TO PROPERTY ACT XVIII OF 1937 ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1042 |
| GENERAL INDEX ... ... ... ... ... ... | | 1043-1083 |

TABLE OF CASES

A. v. B. [(1868) L.R.I.P. & D. 559] 735, 738, 795.
A. v. B. (1952) Bom. 507, 735.
Abaji v. Mukta 439.
Abani Mohan v. Biswanath, 607.
Abdul Aziz v. Appayasami, 372, 373.
— — v. Nirma, 112.
— Cadur v. Turner, 618.
— Hameed v. Provident Investment Co. Ltd., 367, 369, 371, 617, 618.
— Hakim v. Fazu Mia, 669.
— Hussein Khan v. Bibi Sona Dero, 83, 84.
— Hye v. Mir Mahommed, 635.
— Karim v. Badrudeen, 426.
— — v. Karmali, 618.
— — v. Ram Kishore, 355, 365.
— Majid Khan v. Saraswathibai, 299.
— Rahman v. Gajendra Lal, 392.
Abdulla v. Ram Lal, 229.
Abdulsakur v. Abubakkar, 619.
Abdulsattar Ismail v. Abdul Hamid Sait, 619.
Abdurahim v. Halimabai, 82, 617, 619.
Abhai Churn v. Mangal Jana, 159, 430.
Abhaidat Singh v. Ragho, 286.
Abhaychandra v. Pyari Mohan, 296, 298, 396.
Abhiraj Kuer v. Debendra Singh, 80, 549.
Abhiram v. Shyama Charan, 483, 489, 490.
Abilakh v. Bhekhi, 164.
Abinash v. Harinath, 256, 257.
Abraham v. Abraham, 73, 75.
Achal Ram v. Udai Partab, 628.
Achratlal v. Chimanlal, 589.
Achutanand v. Surjanarain, 308, 390.
Achutaramayya v. Ratnajee, 389.
Achuthan Nair v. C. Amma, 858.
Achyut v. Ramachandra, 631.
Adambhai v. Allarakhia, 619.
Ademma v. Hanuman Reddi, 104, 129, 133.
Adhar Chandra v. Nobin Chandra, 274.
Adhibai v. Cursandas, 601, 606, 608.
Adhiranee v. Shona Malee, 590, 611.
Adi Deo v. Dukharan, 416.
Adikesavan v. Gurunatha, 302.
Adit Narayan v. Mahabir Prasad, 103, 121, 122, 128, 136.
Adiveppa v. Tontappa, 245.
— v. Veer Bhadrappa, 163.
Adivi Suryaprakasa Rao v. Nidamarty Gangaraju, 543.
Administrator-General v. Premlal, 669.
— — of Bengal v. Lalbihari Dhar, 459.
— — of Madras v. Anandachari, 517, 518, 519.
Adrishappa v. Gurushidappa, 393.
Adurmoni v. Chowdhry, 272.
Adusumilli v. Adusumilli, 532, 533.
Advi v. Fakirappa, 558.
Advocate-General v. Damodhar, 479.
— — v. Jimbabai, 617, 618, 619.
— — v. Karmali, 463, 617, 618.
Advyapa v. Rudrava, 114, 161, 199.
Aghore Nath, v. Grish Chunder, 300.
Ahmedbhoy v. Cassumbhoy, 617, 618.
Ahmed v. Ghisia, 450.
Ahuja v. Rameshwarlal, 95.
Aisha Bee Bee v. Noor Mohamed, 619.
Aiyyagari v. Aiyyagari, 321, 326.
Ajabsing v. Nanabhau, 568.
Ajab Singh v. Ram Singh, 907.
Ajaib Kaur v. Uttam Singh, 598.
Ajit v. Nagendra, 212.
Ajitkumar Mitra v. Tarubala Dasee, 461.
Ajit Kumar v. Kanan Bala, 770.
— — v. Ujayar, 109, 110.
— Singh v. Fateh Singh, 553.
— — v. Hem Raj, 369.
Ajitrai Mehta v. Vasumati, 746.
Ajodhia Prasad v. Mt. Sanjhari Kuer, 231.
Ajoodhia v. Kasee, 270.
Ajudhia v. Ram Sumer, 121.
Akasam Chinna v. Parbati, 806.
Akhoy Chunder v. Kala Pahar, 552.
Akkanna v. Venkayya, 212.
Akkawa v. Sayad Khan, 228, 235, 236, 237.
Akku Prahlad v. Ganesh Prahlad, 596.
Akoba Laxman v. Sai Genu Laxman, 97, 111.
— — v. Sai Jenu, 145.
Akora Suth v. Boreani, 111.
Akshay Chandra v. Hari Das, 78, 152, 159, 430.
Akshoy Kumar v. Jatindra Nath, 510.
Alabi v. Mussa, 440.
Alagammai v. Veerappa, 519.
Alagappa v. Vellian Chetti, 313, 315.
Alamelu v. Balu, 114, 416.
— Ammal v. Chellammal, 102.
Alangamonjori v. Sonamoni, 449.
Alapati Anand Rao & Ors. v. The President, Co-operative Credit Society, Pedatadepalli & Ors. 388.
Ali Hasan v. Dhirja, 443.
— Saheb v. Shabji, 631, 632.
Alla Venkataramanna v. Palacherla Mangamma, 336, 375.
Allahabad Bank Ltd. Bareilly v. Bhagwan Das, 333.
Allah Diya v. Sona Devi, 203, 227.
Allen v. Allen, 711.
Alluri Venkatapathi Raju v. D. Venkatanarasimha Raju, 423.
Alopbai v. Ramphal, 783.
Amar Chandra v. Sebak Chand, 374.
— — v. Saradamayee, 276.
— Dayal v. Har Pershad, 321, 337, 338.
Amar Kanta v. Sovana Sen, 808.
— Singh v. Baldev Singh, 897.
— — v. Sewa Ram, 900, 904.
Amarendra v. Banamali, 628.
— Mansingh v. Sanatan Singh, 540, 542, 546.
Amarjit v. Algu, 188.

Amarlal v. Vijaybai, 732.
Amarnath v. Achan Kuar, 225, 242.
Amava v. Mahadgauda, 537, 540, 641.
Ambabai v. Govind, 640, 641.
— v. Keshav Bandochand, 53, 119, 149.
Ambaidas v. Jijibhai, 145, 149.
Ambalagaran v. Neelamegam, 255.
Ambalal Khora v. Bihar Hosiery Mills Ltd., 288.
Ambayamma v. Ganapathi, 1033.
Ambi Pundalik v. Pundalik, 819.
Ambika v. Jamuna Prasad, 108.
— Prasad v. Chandramani, 227.
Ambu Bai Ammal v. Soni Bai Ammal, 593.
Amina Roy v. Mohan Roy, 738.
Amirthavalliammal v. Sironmani Ammal, 585.
Amrithammal & Ors. v. Vallimayil Ammal, 166, 507, 738.
Ammakannu v. Appu, 592, 606.
Ammal v. Vanniar, 818.
Ammammanna v. Kodanda Rao, 474.
Ammani Ammal v. Periasami Udayan, 223.
Ammaponammal v. Shanmugam, 443.
Amolak v. Chandan, 330.
Amrej Singh v. Shambhu Singh, 305.
Amrit Narayan v. Gaya Singh, 207; 208.
— Narayan Singh v. Gaya Singh, 207.
Amrita Kumari v. Lakhinarayan, 121.
Amrita Lall v. Manick Lal, 404.
Amritlal v. Jayantilal, 78.
Amrito Lall v. Surnomoni (25 Cal. 662), 470.
— — v. Surnomoye (24 Cal. 589), 470.
— — v. Surnomoye (27 Cal. 996), 470, 527, 528.
Amruti Dei v. Saradamoni, 224.
Amulya v. Kali Das, 446, 451.
Anand Chandra v. Pran Kisto, 406.
Ananda v. Haribandhu, 852.
Ananda Bibee v. Nownit Lal, 50, 122, 144.
— Chandra v. Braja Lal, 499.
Anandi v. Hari, 116.
Ananadibai v. Hari, 423.
Anandibai v. Kashibai, 540.
Anandibai v. Sundarabai, 901.
Anandi Lal v. Onkar, 80, 518, 559.
Anandrao v. Mt. Annapurnabai, 243, 251.
— v. Administrator-General of Bombay, 445.
— v. Vasantrao, 262, 275, 331.
Ananga Bhusan v. Uchhab Sahu, 389.
Anant v. Gopal, 294, 295.
— Bahadur Singh v. Ashtabhuja Bux Singh, 255.
— v. Shankar, 544.
— Bhikappa Patil v. Shankar Ramchandra Patil, 547, 623.
— Lal v. Ram Adhar, 93.
— Nilkanth v. Lala Rupnarayan, 245.
— Ram v. Channu Lall, 313, 316.
— — v. Collector of Etah, 306, 337, 338, 339.
— Singh v. Durga Singh, 116.
Ananta v. Damodhar, 416.
— v. Ramabai, 163.
— v. Ram Prasad, 378.
— Krishna Shastri v. Prayag Das, 488
Anantha v. Nagamuthu, 443, 484.
— Pai v. Kesava Pai, 358, 372.
Ananthachari v. Krishnaswami, 428.
Ananthakrishnan v. Chidambaram, 477, 482.
Ananthaya v. Vishnu, 594.
Ananto Mohini v. Khalil Sahu, 223.
Anantu v. Ram Prasad, 378, 381.
Anath Nath v. Mackintosh, 406.
Andal Ammal v. Sivaprakasa, 903.
Angammal v. Venkata, 161, 184.
Angamuthu v. Varatharajulu, 244.
— v. Kolandavelu, 314.
Anganna v. Ayyasami, 220.
Angney Lal v. Angney Lal, 289, 290, 292.
Angraj v. Ram Rup, 321, 337.
Angurbala v. Debabrata, 98.
Anita v. Birendra Chandra, 773, 818.
Anjirabai v. Pandurang, 540.
Anjaneyulu v. Ramayya, 330, 400.
Anjubai v. Hemchandrarao, 81.
Ankush v. Janabai, 1010.
Annabhat v. Shivappa, 356, 389.
Annada v. Atul, 232.
— v. Gour Mohan (48 Cal. 536), 207.
— Mohan v. Gour Mohan, 207.
Annada Prasad v. Ambica Prasad, 605.
Annagouda v. The Court of Wards, 186, 187, 189.
Annaji v. Chandrabai, 473, 474.
— v. Narayan, 500.
— v. Ragubai, 631.
Annamalai v. Murugesa, 296.
— v. Muthuswami, 581.
Annamalai v. Perumayee Ammal, 1019.
— Chetty v. Subramanian Chetty, 284, 286.
Annammah v. Mabbu Bali Reddi, 565.
Annapurnamma v. Appayya, 534.
— v. Appa Rao, 691, 726, 747.
— v. Bhima Sankararao, 909.
— v. Manikyamma, 538.
— v. Ramanjaneyaratnam, 521, 587.
— v. Ramakrishna, 800.
Annapurna v. Kalpana Debi, 901, 903.
Annapurni v. Forbes, 559.
Annasami v. Ramakrishna, 496, 499.
Anna Saheb v. Tarabai, 699.
Annaya v. Ammakka, 487.
Annayyan v. Chinnan, 109.
Annjana Devi v. Prahlad, 739.
Ansuya v. Rajaiah, 616, 808.
Antaji v. Dattaji, 567.
Anthonyswami v. Chinaswamy, 76
Anukul Chandra v. Surendra, 162.
Anunchand v. Kishen, 349.
Anundee v. Khedoo Lal, 419.
Anup Narayan v. Mohabir Prasad, 240.
Anupama v. Bhagaban, 783, 797.
— Singh v. Sardarni Harbans Kaur, 286.
Apaji v. Gangabai, 606.
— v. Ramchandra, 397, 592.
Aparna v. Sree Shiba Prashad, 623.
Aparti Bewa v. Suna Stree, 883, 923.
Appa v. Ranga, 330.
— Saheb v. Gurubasawwa, 97, 948.
Appalanaidu v. Narayana, 856.
Appalanarasimha v. Mahadevalla, 297.

Appalanarasimhan v. Udalama, 411.
Appalasuri v. Kannamma, 112.
Appalaswami v. Suryanarayana Murti, 277, 286, 399.
Appan Patra v. Srinivasa, 275.
Appandai v. Bagubai, 103, 131.
Apparao v. Narasimha Rao, 110.
Appasami v. Nagappa, 499.
Appavu v. Manikkam, 419.
Appavu v. Nallammal, 607.
Appibai v. Khimji Cooverji, 518, 598, 740.
Appovier v. Rama Subba Aiyan, 266, 293, 405, 415, 417, 420, 433.
Apya Shetthaya v. Rammanakka Apya, 548.
Arakhita v. Hari, 910.
Aravamudha Iyengar v. Ramaswami, 527, 538.
Arjun Mahto v. Monda Mahtain, 419.
Arjun Singh v. Virendra, 81, 240.
Armugham v. Muthu, 379.
Arumilli Perrazu v. Subbarayudu, 58.
Arumuga v. Nachimuthu, 901.
— v. Viraraghava, 521.
Arumugam v. Duraisinga, 580.
Arumugha v. Valliammal, 1010.
Arumugha Chetty v. Ranganathan Chetty, 406.
Arunachala v. Arumuga, 247.
— v. Vythialinga, 314.
— Mudaliar v. Muruganatha, 270.
Arunachalam v. Sabaratnam, 333.
Arunachalathammal v. Ramachandran, 847, 882, 883, 911, 923.
Arunachellam v. Venkatchalapathi, 487.
Arunagiri v. Ranganayaki, 114, 199.
Arya Kumar v. Ila, 800.
Aryamurthi v. Subbaraya, 287.
Asa Bai v. Prabhu Lal, 644.
— Ram v. Karam Singh, 390.
Asad Ali v. Haider Ali, 615.
Asarfa Kuer v. Bhuneshwar Rai, 92.
Ashabai v. Haji Tyeb, 191, 617, 618.
Ashalata v. Amiya Kumar, 244, 245.
Ashanullah v. Kali, 394.
Asharam v. Manager of Dakore Temple Committee, 503.
Asharfi v. Rup Chand, 642.
— Kunvar v. Rup Chand, 527.
Ashcroft v. Ashcroft & Roberts, 807.
Ashurfi Singh v. Bisesar, 476.
Ashutosh v. Chidam, 216, 218, 219.
— v. Doorga Churn, 482.
— v. Durga, 467.
— v. Lukhimoni, 616.
Asita v. Nirode, 559.
— Mohan v. Nirode Mohan, 71, 495, 553, 646, 647, 648.
Asstt. Controller of Estate Duty v. Bala-Krishna Menon, 860.
Aswini Kumar v. Arabinda Bose, 669.
Atar Singh v. Thakar Singh, 286.
Atchanna v. Appanna, 182.
Athilinga Gounder v. Ramaswami Gounder, 400.
Atma Ram v. Banku Mal, 316, 507.
Atmaram v. Bajirao, 58, 106.
— v. Madho Rao, 555.
Atmaram v. Vaman, 440.
Atmaramrao v. Bhupendranath, 330.
Atrabannesa v. Safatullah, 639.
Attorney-General v. Prince Ernest Augustus of Hanover, 834.
— — of Alberta v. Attorney-General of Canada, 667.
Attorney-General of Ceylon v. A. R. Arunachalam Chettiar, 262.
Atul v. Sanyasi, 177, 473, 474.
— Krishna Roy v. Lala Nandanji, 356, 357, 374, 413.
Audemma v. Varadareddi, 591.
Audh Kumari v. Chandra Dai, 113.
Audilaxamma v. Raghurami, 386.
Augustin v. Augustin, 724.
Aumirtolall v. Rajoneekant, 89, 114.
Aurabinda Nath v. Manorama, 252.
Authikesavulu v. Ramanujam, 190, 508, 509, 517.
Avdesh Kumar v. Zakaul Hasnain, 315.
Avinash Prasad v. Chandra Mohini, 727.
Awadh v. Sita Ram, 399.
— Behari v. Jhaman Manton, 102.
Ayesha Bibi v. Subodh Ch. Chakravarty, 520.
Ayi Ammal v. Subramania Asari, 923.
Ayiswaryanandaji v. Sivaji, 110, 111, 183, 189, 494.
Ayyangouda v. Godigeppagouda, 215.
Ayyanna v. Kotayya, 412.
Ayyavu v. Niladatchi, 559.

B.(L) v. B.(R), 723.
Baba v. Timma, 320, 403.
Babaji v. Balaji, 204.
— v. Jivaji, 278.
— v. Kashibai, 416.
— v. Vasudev, 324.
Babajirao v. Laxmandas, 485, 486.
Babanna v. Parawa, 421, 423.
Babarao v. Baburao, 557.
Babgonda v. Anna Nemgonda, 566.
Baboo Beer Pertap v. Rajender, 269.
— Bodhanarain v. Omrao, 162, 164.
Baboo Durga Pershad v. Kundun, 415, 416, 418.
— Hurdey Narain v. Ruder Perkash, 372, 373.
— Kameswar Pershad v. Run Bahadur, —302.
Baboo Nund Coomar v. Razeeooddeen, 272.
Babu v. Ratnoji, 565.
— Bhagwan Din v. Gir Harsarwoop, 503.
— Lal v. Babu Lal, 289.
— — v. Nanku Ram, 103, 122, 125, 517.
— — v. Satya Narain Prasad, 306.
— Motising v. Durgabai, 81, 82, 526.
— Ram v. Kishen Dei, 551.
— Ram v. Musammat Kokla, 598.
— Singh v. Behari Lal, 376.
— — v. Rameshwar Bakhsh, 236.
Babubhai Girdharlal v. Ujamlal Hargovandas, 285, 286.
Babui Panmato v. Ram Agya, 740
Babui Rita v. Mal Puran, 115.

Babulal v. Maniklal, 226, 240.
Babuna v. Jagat Narain, 405.
Baburao v. Sushila, 798.
Baburao v. Tukaram, 236.
Bacha Jha v. Jagmohan Jha, 50.
Bachcha v. Gajadhar Lal, 639.
Bachchan Singh v. Kamta Prasad, 580.
Bachchu Singh v. Harbans Singh, 237.
Bachha v. Jugmon, 195.
Bachiraja v. Venkatappadu, 202.
Bachoo v. Mankorebai, 275, 281, 399, 527, 545.
— v. Nagindas, 560.
Bachubhai v. Dhanlaxmi, 109.
Bada v. Hussu Bhai, 621.
Badam v. Madho Ram, 337, 338.
Badrinarayan v. Narayansingh, 252.
Badri Nath v. Hardeo, 108.
Badri Pershad v. Kanso Devi, 899, 902, 906.
— Prasad v. Madan Lal, 355, 375.
— Roy v. Bhugwat, 405.
Badsha Mia v. Rajjab Ali, 667.
Bageshar Rai v. Mahadevi, 406.
Bageshwari Prasad v. Deopati Kuer, 302.
Bahadur v. Debi Singh, 312.
Bahadur Singh v. Mohar Singh, 89, 207.
— — v. Ram Bahadur, 236, 237, 239.
Bahadursingh v. Dalipsingh, 74.
— v. Girdharilal, 289, 341.
Bahinabai v. Kisanlal, 557.
Bahubali v. Gundappa, 247, 567.
Bahu Rani v. Rajendra Bakhsh Singh, 472.
Bahuri Saraswathi Kuer v. Bahuria Sheoratan Kuer, 608.
Bai Amrit v. Bai Manik, 578, 587
— Baiji v. Bai Santok, 619.
— Bapi v. Jamnadas, 479.
— Daya v. Natha, 591, 606.
— Devkore v. Sanmukhram, 613.
— Dhanlaxmi v. Hariprasad, 457.
— Dhondubai v. Laxmanrao, 568.
— Diwali v. Moti, 512, 518.
— — v. Patel Bechardas, 472.
— Faiba v. Chudasma, 547.
— Ganga v. Emperor, 520.
— Gulab v. Jiwanlal, 513, 649.
— — v. Thakorelal, 444.
— Jaya v. Ganpatram Kalidas, 608.
— Jivi v. Narsingh, 522.
— Kanku v. Bai Jadav, 250, 592.
— Kashi v. Jamnadas, 513.
— Kesserbai v. Hunsraj, 80, 188, 189, 192, 195, 196, 204.
— Kushal v. Lakhma, 439.
— Mamubai v. Dossa, 440, 448.
— Manchha v. Narotamdas, 283.
— Mangal v. Bai Rukhmini, 593.
— Mani v. Usafali, 387.
— Nagubai v. Bai Monghibai, 109, 596.
— Nani v. Chunilal, 551.
— Narmada v. Bhagwantrai, 178, 191.
— Parson v. Bai Somli, 198.
— Parvati v. Dayabhai, 236.
— — v. Tarwadi, 607.
— Premkuvar v. Bhika, 521.
— Raman v. Jagjivan Das, 192.
Bai Rambai v. Bai Mani, 440.
— Ramkore v. Jamnadas, 511.
— Sakar v. Vora Ismail, 619.
— Vijli v. Bai Prabhalakshmi, 122, 138, 150.
Baidyanath v. Kunja Kumar, 491.
Baijnath v. Gokul, 306.
— v. Hiraman, 599.
— v. Mahabir, 115.
— v. Maharaj Bahadur, 271.
— v. Ramautar, 900.
— v. Tej Bali Singh, 621, 623, 626, 627.
— Prasad v. Binda Prasad, 305.
— Rai v. Mangla Prasad, 222, 240.
Baijun v. Brij Bhookun, 250.
Baikunth Nath v. Jai Kishun, 184.
Bairagidas v. Udayachandra, 497.
Baisnab v. Ramdhon, 298.
Baisni v. Rup Singh, 220, 607.
Bajaba v. Trimbak, 283.
Bajirao v. Atmaram, 46.
— v. Ramkrishna, 545.
Bajrang Singh v. Govind Prasad, 220, 224, 307.
Bajrangi v. Manokarnika, 115, 227, 230.
Baker v. Baker, 706, 711, 723.
Bakhtawar v. Bhagwana, 229, 256.
Bakhtawari v. Sadhu Singh, 903.
Bakshi Ram v. Shila Devi, 963.
Bakubai v. Manchhabai, 164.
Bal Gangadhar Tilak v. Shrinivas, 524, 528, 553, 554, 555.
— Krishna v. Hiralal, 224, 234, 235.
— — v. Ram Krishna, 421.
— Mukandji v. Gokaran Singh, 411.
— Rajaram Tukaram v. Maneklal Mansukhbhai, 375.
Bala v. Balaji, 320.
— v. Baya, 229.
— Anna v. Akubai, 537.
— Krishna v. Ganesh Prasad, 502.
Balabai v. Mahadu, 550.
Balabux v. Rukhmabai, 421, 422, 430, 431.
— Ladhuram v. Rukhmabai, 422.
Balaji v. Annapurnabai, 429.
— v. Ganesh, 324.
— v. Nana, 311.
— v. Sakharam, 78.
— Vasudeo v. Sadashiv Kashinath, 580.
Balak Ram v. Nanun Mal, 554, 569.
Balakrishna v. Ganesa, 579.
— v. Muthusami, 297, 349.
Balakrishna Menon v. Asstt. Collector of Estate Duty, 858, 860.
Balakrishna Menon v. Inspecting Asstt. Commissioner, 860.
Balamma v. Pullayya, 139, 142, 143, 144.
Balaram v. Appa, 440.
— v. Kevalram, 231.
— v. Ramchandra, 426, 427.
Balasubramania v. Narayana, 431.
Balasubrahmanya v. Subbayya, 214.
— Pandya Thalaiyar v. Subbayya Thevar, 104, 129, 133, 526, 533.
Balasundaram v. Kamakshi Ammal, 200.
Balaswamy v. Venkataswamy, 488.
Balbhadra v. Bhowani, 440.
Balbir Singh v. Ajudhia, 318.

Baldeo v. Bindeshri, 390.
—v. Mathura, 116, 161.
—v. Mobarak, 288, 318.
—Das v. Sham Lal, 296.
—Prasad v. Arya Priti Nidhi Sabha, 167, 748.
——v. Fateh Singh, 219.
Baldeodas v. Sarojini, 436.
Balgobind v. Badri Prasad, 115.
Balgobind v. Ramkumar, 256.
—Das v. Narain Lal, 321, 337.
Balinki v. Gopakrishna, 554.
Balkishen Das v. Ram Narain Sahu, 399, 410, 415, 416, 422, 430, 431, 433.
Balkrishna v. Gopal, 631.
—v. Lakshman, 79.
—v. Moro Krishna, 314.
—v. Municipality of Mahad, 314.
—v. Ramkrishna, 138.
—v. Savitribai, 429.
—v. Shri Uttar, 562.
Balmakund v. Bhagwan Das, 400.
Balmukund v. Kamla Wati, 304.
Balmukund Lal v. Musammat Sohano, 414.
Bal Mukundji v. Gokaran Singh, 419.
Balo v. Parbati, 184.
Balraj v. Jagatpal, 669.
Balu Sakharam v. Lahoo Sambhaji, 537, 547.
Balubhai v. Nanabhai, 518.
Balunki v. Benudhar, 426.
Balusami Ayyar in re, 332, 333, 334, 360.
—v. Balakrishna, 83, 84, 514, 688, 689.
—v. Narayana, 121, 130, 131, 133.
Balusu v. Balusu, 80, 512.
Balwant Kunwar v. Addl. Munsiff, Dehradun, 770.
Balwant Rao v. Baji Rao, 81, 82, 174, 204.
Balwant Singh v. Aman Singh, 383.
—Singh v. Balwant Kaur, 701.
——v. Clancy, 376, 583.
——v. Joti Prasad, 562.
——v. Rani Kishori, 50.
Balzor Singh v. Raghunandan Singh, 305.
Bamdeb Das v. Raja Brajasunder Deb, 509.
Bameswar Bamdev v. Anath Nath, 497.
Bamundoss v. Tarinee, 87.
Banarsi v. Marechia, 902.
Banarsi Das v. Sumat Prasad, 84, 519, 562, 642.
Banerjee v. Banerjee (3 Cal. W.N. 250), 769.
Banga Chandra v. Jagat Kishore, 226, 228.
Bangaru v. Vijayamachi, 609.
Bank of Bombay v. Ambalal Sarabhai, 451.
——England v. Vagliano, 665, 669.
——Hindustan v. Premchand, 439.
——New India v. S. Ponnamma, 859, 950.
Banke Bihari v. Brij Bihari, 411.
Bankey Lal v. Durga Prasad, 298, 333, 356.
——v. Raghunath, 252.
Bankim Chandra v. Anjali, 818.
Banku B. Das v. Kashi N. Das, 495.
Bansidhar v. Champoo, 609.
Bansidhar v. Dulhatia, 252, 259.
Bansilal v. Shivlal, 385.
Banso v. Charan Singh, 842, 904.
Banwari Lal v. Mahesh, 385.
Bapayya v. Rukhamma, 648.
Bappu Ayyar v. Renganayaki, 98, 297.
Bapu v. Bala, 311.
Bapuji v. Dattu, 162.
—v. Gangaram, 541.
—v. Pandurang, 166.
—Jagannath In re., 447.
Bapurao v. Anant, 631, 633.
—v. Kashinath, 629.
Bapurao v. Neroji, 903, 904.
Bapusaheb v. Gangabai, 906, 908.
Bapu Singh v. Bihari Lal, 376.
Baraboni Coal Concern, Ltd. v. Gokulananda Mohanta Thakur, 495.
Barada Prasad Saha v. Krishna Chandra Shah, 251.
Barahi v. Debkamini, 434, 436.
Baratilal v. Bindabai, 113.
Barati Lal v. Salik Ram, 237.
Barker v. Barker, 719, 728, 776.
Baroda Kanta v. Chunder Kanta, 638.
—Sundari v. Dino Bandhu, 639.
Bartholomew v. Bartholomew, 709.
Bartram v. Bartram, 712.
Basangavda v. Basangavda, 145, 148.
Basant Kaur v. Tej Kaur, 475.
Basantkumar Basu v. Ramshanker Ray, 81, 476, 561.
Basant Lal v. Rameshwar Prasad, 319.
Basanta v. Jogendra, 430.
—v. Kamikshya, 191, 197, 473.
—Kumar v. Jogendra Nath, 45.
—Kumari v. Kamikshya, 177.
Basappa v. Fakirappa, 236, 237.
—v. Gurlingawa, 116.
—v. Rayava, 111, 116.
—v. Sidramappa, 537, 538.
Basawantappa v. Mallappa, 561.
Baswant Gouda v. Channabasawwa, 901.
Basayya v. Balingayya, 340.
Bastable v. Bastable, 782.
Basudeo v. Baidyanath, 247.
—v. Muhammad, 302.
Bashetiappa v. Shivlingappa, 548, 551, 554.
Basvant v. Mallappa, 538, 647.
Bata v. Chintamani, 420.
—v. Gopal, 433.
Battie v. Brown, 759.
Bawa Magniram v. Kasturbhai, 491.
—Misser v. Raja Bishen, 269, 270.
Bawani v. Ambabay, 568.
Baxter v. Baxter, 737.
Bayabai v. Bala, 536, 537, 556.
Bayaya v. Parvateva, 87, 113.
Beale v. Beale, 792.
Becha v. Mothina, 601, 612.
Bechar v. Bai Lakshmi, 216.
Becker v. Becker, 795.
Bed Nath v. Rani Rajeswari Devi, 226, 306, 307.
Beeby v. Beeby, 790.
Beer Pertab v. Rajender Pertab, 444, 445.
Behara Viyyamma v. Ayyagari Veera Venkata Satya Suryaprakasa Rao, 554.

Behari Lal v. Kailas Chunder, 556.
— — v. Madho Lal, 243, 245, 248.
— — v. Shib Lal, 552.
Beharilal v. Sat Narain, 334.
Bejai Bahadur v. Bhupindar, 270, 272.
Bejoy v. Aloka, 699.
Bejoy Gopal v. Girindra Nath, 232.
Bellenden v. Satterthwaite, 814.
Bemola v. Mohun, 288, 349.
Ben Madhu v. Kalidas, 117, 118.
— — v. Bai Mahakore, 119.
Benares Bank Ltd. v. Hari Narain, 289, 290.
— — — v. Jagdip, 387.
Bengal Immunity Co. Ltd. v. State of Bihar, 851.
Bengal Insurance & Real Property Co. Ltd. v. Velayammal, 293.
Beni Madho v. Basdeo Patak, 366, 371.
— — v. Chander Prasad, 305.
— — v. Ram Kuer, 223.
— Parshad v. Puran Chand, 369, 372.
— — v. Mst. Gurdevi, 420.
— — v. Puran, 271.
— Ram v. Man Singh, 303, 388.
Benode v. Purdhan, 157.
— Behari v. Nistarini Dassi, 469.
Benoy Krishna Ghosh Chaudhri v. Amarendra Krishna Ghosh Chaudhri, 298.
Bepin Behari v. Durga Charan, 228, 246.
Bepin Behary v. Lakhsona, 101, 904.
Besant v. Narayaniah, 575, 576, 588, 964.
Beti v. Sikhdar Singh, 419.
Bhabha Tarini Debi v. Asha Lata Debi, 493.
Bhagabai v. Kanailal, 601.
Bhagaban v. Ram Prapanna, 493.
Bhagabati v. Kalicharan, 463, 471.
Bhagat Ram v. Ajudhia Parkash, 364.
— — v. Mst. Sahib Devi, 610.
Bhagatram v. Bhakluram, 256.
Bhagbut Pershad v. Girja Koer, 365, 368-373, 376, 377, 384.
Bhageran Rai v. Bhagwan Singh, 302.
Bhagirathi v. Anantha, 610.
Bhagirathi v. Darakke, 859.
— v. Jokhu, 303.
— v. Jokhu Ram, 519.
Bhagirathibai v. Manohar, 413, 431.
— v. Khanujirav, 52, 53, 80, 147, 204, 216.
Bhago v. Bachni, 1034.
Bhagobai v. Bhaiyalal, 96, 103.
Bhagwan v. Kala, 447.
— v. Krishnaji, 328.
— v. Warubai, 52, 80, 144.
— Das v. Bittam, 213.
Bhagwan Dass v. Jairam Dass, 499.
— Das v. Mahadeo, 304, 305.
— Dayal v. Reoti Devi, 263, 279, 418, 421.
— Koer v. Bose, 672.
— Singh v. Amar Kaur, 744, 745.
— — v. Beharilal, 289, 290, 311, 313.
— — v. Bhagwan Singh, 80, 549, 550.
— — v. Bhugwan Singh, 84.
— — v. Mst. Kewal Kaur, 591.
Bhagwandas v. Krishen Lal, 260.
— v. Rajmal, 74, 527, 554, 640, 641, 643.
Bhagwandeen v. Myna Baee, 111, 112, 113, 173, 174, 202, 216.
Bhagwanlal v. Divali, 186.
Bhagwant Kishore v. Bishambhar, 286, 412.
— Singh v. I.T. Commissioner, 282.
— — v. Kallu, 162.
Bhagwanta v. Sukhi, 207.
Bhagwantrao v. Punjaram, 110, 179.
Bhagwat v. Bhagwat, 725.
— v. Nivritti, 220.
— Dayal v. Debi Dayal, 225, 235.
— Koer v. Dhanukdhari, 243, 244, 248, 530.
— Ram v. Ramji Ram, 400.
— Shukul v. Mt. Kaporni, 273.
— Prasad Bahidar v. Debichand Bogra, 341.
Bhagwati v. Ram Ratan, 222.
— Charan v. Hirday Singh, 255.
— Prasad v. Dulhin Rameshwari, 421.
— Saran Singh v. Parmeshwari Nandan Singh, 165.
Bhaidas v. Bai Gulab, 467, 474.
Bhairab v. Birendra, 50, 430.
Bhairo v. Parmeshri, 443.
Bhaiya Ramanuj v. Lalu, 846.
Bhaiya Sher Bahadur v. Ganga Bakhsh, 73.
Bhajandas v. Nanuram, 554.
Bhaknarain v. Januk, 385.
Bhala v. Parbhu, 219.
— v. Parbhu Hari, 647.
Bhana v. Chindu, 318.
— v. Guman, 207.
Bhanbai v. Devji, 92.
Bhanwar Lal v. Mangi Bai, 512, 571.
Bhaoni v. Maharaj Singh, 508.
Bhaoorao v. Chandrabhagabai, 98.
Bharamappa v. Rudrappa, 352.
Bharamappa Murdeppa v. Hanmantappa Tippanna, 367.
Bharatpur State v. Gopal, 610.
— — v. Sri Kishan Das, 375.
Bharat Singh v. Bhagirathi, 284.
Bharawan Bai v. Lila Ram, 770.
Bharmanna v. Shiragondappa, 259.
Bharmappa v. Ujjangauda, 162, 525.
Bharosa Shukul v. Monbasi Kuer, 215.
Bharucha v. Bharucha, 803.
Bhasba Rabidat Singh v. Indar Kunwar, 562.
Bhaskar v. Laxmibai, 45, 80.
— v. Mahadeo, 204, 218.
— v. Sarasvatibai, 439, 443.
— v. Vijalal, 312.
Bhau v. Budha, 324, 325, 328.
— v. Gopala, 220.
— v. Raghunath, 174, 185, 204, 205.
— v. Narasagouda, 536.
Bhaurao v. State of Maharashtra, 686, 692, 766.
Bhausaheb v. Ramagauda, 236.
Bhawani v. Himmat, 220.
— Baksh v. Ram Dai, 366, 368, 371.
— Prasad v. Kallu, 383.
Bhawar Singh v. Pilabai, 902.

Bhekdhari Singh v. Sri Ramchanderji, 481, 482.
Bheron Singh v. Ramchandra Bai, 182.
Bhikabai v. Manilal, 74, 83, 642.
Bhikaji v. Jagannath, 256.
Bhikhabai v. Purshottam, 445.
Bhikhi v. Kodai, 307.
Bhiku v. Keshav, 111.
— v. Puttu, 324.
Bhikubai v. Hariba, 604, 605.
Bhikulal v. Kisanlal, 425.
Ehikya v. Babu, 114.
Bhim Singh v. Ram Singh, 378.
Bhimabai v. Dattatraya, 538.
— v. Gurunathgauda, 421, 537.
— v. Tavappa, 547.
Bhimacharya v. Ramacharya, 188.
Bhimaji v. Hanmanrao, 560.
Bhimappa v. Basawa, 565.
Bhimraj v. I.T. Commissioner, 416.
Bhirgu Nath v. Narsingh, 340.
Bhivrav v. Sitaram, 396.
Bhiwra v. Renuka, 90, 92, 403, 424.
Bhoba v. Peary Lall, 474.
Bhogaraju v. Addepalli, 251.
Bhojraj v. Nathuram, 321.
Bhola v. Ram Lall, 639.
— Nath v. Emperor, 71, 646, 649.
— Prasad v. Ramkumar Harwari, 335.
— Roy v. Jung Bahadur, 314.
— Uma v. Kausilla, 112.
— Umar v. Mt. Kausilla, 112, 605.
Bholanath v. Ghasi Ram, 398.
— v. Kartick, 340.
Bhondu v. Ramdayal, 95, 97, 112, 116.
Bhoobun Mohini v. Hurrish Chunder, 465.
— Moyee v. Ram Kishore, 540.
Bhoopathi Nath Chakrabarti v. Basanta Kumaree Debee, 484, 556, 592.
Bhowani v. Juggernath, 296, 429.
Bhuban Mohan v. Narendra Nath, 487.
Bhubaneshwar Prasad Narayan Singh v. Bihari Lal, 368.
Bhubneshwar Prasad v. Sidheswar, 325.
Bhubaneswari v. Nilcomul, 564.
Bhugbutti Das v. Bholanath, 214.
Bhuggobutty v. Gooroo, 480, 482, 484.
Bhugwandeen v. Myna Baee, 50, 89.
Bhujanga v. Ramayamma, 194, 473.
Bhujangouda v. Babu, 536.
Bhuneshwar Prasad v. Dropta Bai, 773.
Bhup Kunwar v. Balbir Sahai, 341.
— Singh v. Jhamman Singh, 227, 243.
— — v. Lachman, 604.
Bhupal v. Tavanappa, 592.
— Chandra v. Jagad Bhusan, 231.
— Ram v. Lachma Kuar, 246, 249.
Bhupati Nath v. Ram Lal, 477, 484.
Bhuri Bai v. Champa Bai, 841, 869, 903.
Bhoopati Nath Chakrabarti v. Vasantkumari Debee, 484.
Bhupendra v. Amarendra, 465.
Bhyah Ram Singh v. Bhyah Ugur Singh, 104, 105.
Bianda v. Dunni Chand, 909.
Bibhabati v. Ramendra, 259.
Bibha Bati Debee v. Mahendra Lahiri, 454, 461.
Bidhu v. Kuladaprasad, 485.
Bihar State Board v. Palat Lal, 501.
Bihar State Board of Religious Trust v. Biseshwar Das, 503.
Bihari Lal v. Daud Husain, 239.
— — v. Pt. Ramchandra Sharma, 314.
Bijai Raj Singh v. Ram Padarath, 383.
Bijan Majumdar v. Ranjit Lal Sen Gupta 515.
Bijaykumar Singh Buder, In re., 587.
Bijay Lal v. Bhubaneswar, 81, 190.
Bijoy v. Ranjit, 529.
— Gopal v. Girindra Nath, 227, 229.
— — v. Krishna, 208, 231, 232, 255, 257.
Bijoychand v. Kalipada, 484.
Bilige Laxminarayana Rao v. Fernandes, 247, 248.
Billabasini v. Dulal, 902.
Bimal Chandra v. Mahadeb, 155.
— Krishna Ghosh v. Jnanendra Krishna Ghosh, 495.
Bimla Bai v. Shankulal, 740.
Binda v. Kaunsilia, 521.
— Prasad v. Raj Ballabh, 362, 374.
Binda Prasad Singh v. Mundrika Devi, 1033.
Bindaji v. Mathurabai, 576, 577.
Bindbashini v. Sheorati, 908.
Bindeshri Tewari v. Lakhan Tewari, 237.
Bindeshwari v. Har Narain, 229.
— Singh v. Baij Nath Singh, 118.
Bindroo v. Munshi, 909.
Bindya Wasini v. Dharamnath Prasad, 333.
Binodini v. Susthee, 157.
Bipat Mahton v. Kulpat Mahton, 231.
Bipin Chunder v. Prabhawati, 663, 704, 705, 707, 712, 780, 782, 783.
Bipinchandra v. Madhuriben, 735.
Bipra Charan v. Mohan Sundar, 277.
Bipram Singh v. Sudarsan Singh 770.
Biradhmal v. Prabhavati, 554.
Birajun Koer v. Luchmi Narayan, 50.
Biram Prakash v. Narendra Dass, 490.
Biranchi Narayan v. Biranchi Narayan, 496.
Birch v. Birch, 790.
Bireshwar v. Ambika, 584.
— v. Ardha Chander, 548, 554, 568.
Birendra Nath v. Domon Chandra, 224.
— — v. Shibaram, 239.
— Kumar Biswas v. Hemlata Biswas, 735.
Biru v. Khandu, 144.
Bisarti v. Sukarti, 903.
Bishambar Das v. Mst. Phulgari, 493.
Bishambhar v. Fateh Lal, 289.
— v. Sheo Narain, 289.
— Das v. Kanshi Prasad, 426.
Bishan Dayal v. Lakshmi Narain, 250.
Bishen Singh v. Kidar Nath, 288, 299.
— Dayal Singh v. Musammat Jaisari Kuer, 219.
Bishnath Prasad Singh v. Chandika Prasad Kumari, 475.
Bishunlal v. Jagarnath, 667.

Bishun Singh v. Shri Thakurji Mangla Nain Bhagwan, 460.
Bishwanath v. Radha Ballabhji, 486.
Bissessor Ram v. Ramakant Dubey, 355.
Bissessur v. Seetul Chunder, 283.
— v. Luchmessur, 635.
— Lall v. Luchmussur Singh, 286.
Bissonauth v. Bamasoondery, 453, 465, 470, 472.
Bistoo Pershad v. Radha Soonder, 195.
Biswambhar v. Rajaram, 293.
Biswanath v. Dhapu, 526, 569.
Biswanath v. Gangadhar, 271.
— v. Jagdip, 300, 384.
— v. Kayastha Trading Corporation, 226, 307.
— v. Khantomani, 210, 250.
— v. Ram Prasad, 232.
— v. Shorashibala, 512, 646, 649.
— Singh v. Kayastha Trading Corporation, 289.
Bisweswar v. Jaineswar, 340.
Bithaldas v. Chandratan, 354.
Bithal Das v. Nand Kishore, 352.
Blair v. Duncan, 479.
Blanche Somerset v. Bleach, 814.
Blivso v. Dina Nath, 404.
Blunt v. Blunt, 794.
Blyth v. Blyth, 781, 782.
Bobba Suramma v. Chandramma, 231.
Boddu Veeraiah v. Aripirala Venkata, 246.
Bodh Singh v. Gunesh Chunder, 286, 636.
Bodhrao v. Nursing Rao, 393.
Bodi v. Venkataswami, 446.
Bodo v. Dondo, 80, 534.
Bolakee v. Court of Wards, 283.
Bolaram v. Suryaja, 766.
Bolye Chund v. Khetterpaul, 179.
Boologam v. Swornam, 283.
Bootan Bai v. Durgaprasad, 770.
Borgonha v. Borgonha, 768.
Bowman v. Bowman, 756.
Bowran v. Bowran, 707.
Brahma Sastri v. Sumitramma, 533.
Braja Lal v. Jiban, 156, 158.
Brajabala v. Sree Saradiya Durgamata, 477.
Brajeshwaree Dasee v. Manoranjan Datta, 244.
Bramamayi v. Jages Chandra, 469.
Bravery v. Bravery, 722.
Brewer v. Brewer, 708, 756.
Bright v. Bright, 769, 770, 776.
Brij Indar v. Janki Koer, 178, 186, 210.
— Lal v. Durga, 323.
— — v. Indar Kunwar, 226.
— Lal v. Narain Das, 478.
— — v. Suraj Bikram, 470.
— Mohan v. Kishenlal, 123, 127.
— Narain Rai v. Mangla Prasad, 355, 366, 368, 370, 372, 375, 378, 379.
— — v. Mangla, 379.
— Raj Kuar v. Ram Dayal, 598.
— — Saran v. Alliance Bank of Simla 342, 561.
Brijbhukan Das v. Ghasiram, 585.
Brijmohan v. Mahabeer, 331, 361.
Brijmohan v. Tulsi Ram, 669.
— Lal v. Sarabjit Singh, 305.
Brijnandan v. Bidya Prasad, 363, 381, 382, 384.
Brijraj Singh v. Sheodan Singh, 410, 432.
Brinda v. Radhica, 601.
Brindaban v. Chandubala, 81.
— v. Sri Godamaji, 498.
Brindabun v. Chundra, 512, 517, 518.
Brindavana v. Radhamani, 401, 509, 514.
Brojendra v. Prosanna Kumar, 580.
Brojo v. Gouree, 89.
Brojosoondery v. Luchmee, 481.
Browne v. Browne, 785.
Buchi v. Jagapathi, 216.
— Bai v. Nagpur University, 238, 472.
Buchler v. Buchler, 709.
Buddha Singh v. Laltu Singh, 46, 47, 49, 52, 56, 104, 117, 119.
Budaraju Venkatarathna v. Venkata Subbaiah 315.
Budh Karam Chaukhani v. Thakur Prasad Shah, 290.
Budha Mal v. Bhagwan Das, 416, 418.
Budhi Jena v. Dhobai Naik, 295, 974.
Budhilal v. Morarji, 584.
Budhu v. Dukhan, 74.
Bujahwan Singh v. Shyama Devi, 395.
Bulakhidas v. Keshavlal, 204.
Bungsee v. Soodist Lall, 313.
Bunseedhur v. Bindeseree, 588.
Bunwari Lal v. Daya Sunkar, 341.
Bulagan v. Ratan Lal, 640.
Burch v. Burch, 790.
Buta Mal v. Gopal Singh, 375, 385.
Buthawan v. Hanuman, 313.
Buti v. Shriram, 302.
Byjnath Lall v. Ramoodeen, 330.

C. v. C., 736, 756.
C. S. Nataraja Pillai v. C. S. Subbaraya Chettiar, 525.
C. S. V. Sarma v. C. Ramalakshmamma, 533.
C. Sriramamurthi v. Official Receiver, 399, 413.
C. V. C. Chetty v. P. L. D. Chetty, 541.
Cackett v. Cackett, 722.
Cade v. Cade, 714.
Cally Churn v. Bhuggobutty, 574.
— Nath v. Chunder Nath, 467, 469.
Canara Banking Corp. Ltd. v. S. I. Bank, 290, 292.
Caralapathi v. Cota, 474.
Carol v. Carol, 769.
Carpenter v. Carpenter, 714.
Casey v. Casey, 713.
Cassumbhoy v. Ahmedbhoy, 393.
Cavaly Venkata v. Collector of Masulipatam, 141, 225.
Cavendish-Bentinck v. Cavendish-Bentinck, 798.
Central Bank of India Ltd. v. Ram Narain, 670.
Chahlu v. Parmal, 237.
Chain Sukh Ram v. Parbati, 551.
Chajju Ram v. Bhuri, 909.

Chalakonda v. Chalakonda, 283.
Chalamanna v. Subbamma, 439.
Chalamayya v. Varadayya, 288, 298.
Challa Subbiah v. Paluri, 245, 246.
Chamanlal v. Bai Parvati, 216.
—v. Doshi Ganesh, 216.
—v. Ganesh, 122.
Chamanlal v. Mohinder Devi, 752.
Chamanlal v. Rupa, 735.
Chamar Haru v. Kashi, 111.
Chamatkari v. Narendra, 197.
Chamava v. Iraya, 595.
Champabai v. Raghunath Rao, 550, 596.
Champaklal Chimanlal v. Sodagar Amubhai, 394.
Chanamma v. Lingamma, 908, 909.
Chanbasappa v. Madiwalappa, 540, 547.
Chanchal Kumari v. Kewal Krishan, 734.
Chanda v. Nandu, 744.
Chandar v. Dampat, 321, 331.
Chanam v. Narayan, 399.
Chanderdeb v. Nandji, 285.
Chanderjit Das v. Debi Das, 112, 223, 227, 238, 419.
Chander Prabha v. Prem Nath, 815, 964.
Chander Prakash v. Sudesh Kumari, 751, 773.
Chandi Charan v. Dulal Chandra, 481, 482, 503.
——v. Haribola, 484.
——v. Nabagopal, 549.
—Churn v. Sidheswari, 448, 467.
Chandika Bakhsh v. Muna Kunwar, 84, 150.
Chandra v. Gojarabai, 543.
—Bala v. Province of Bengal, 199.
—Bhan v. Misrimal, 355.
—Kishore v. Prasanna Kumari, 450.
—Kunwar v. Narpat Singh, 568.
Chandra Mohini v. Avinash Prasad, 728, 760, 790.
Chandra Mohini v. Srivastava, 743.
Chandrabali Pathak v. Bhagwanprasad Pande, 259.
Chandrabhaga v. Anandarao, 278, 439.
Chandrabhagabai v. Rajaram, 753, 788.
Chandrabulee v. Brody, 211.
Chandrachoor Deo v. Bibhutibhushan Deva, 457, 498, 564.
Chandradeo v. Mata Prasad, 321, 337, 338, 375, 376, 379, 381, 382, 384.
—Singh v. Mata Prasad, 363, 366.
Chandradip Rai v. Mahip Rai, 218, 903.
Chandrakanto v. Ram Mohini, 80, 81, 416.
Chandrakisor Datta Majumdar v. Kumar Upendra Chandra Chaudhuri, 214, 221, 232.
Chandrakunverba v. Randhirsinhji, 616, 625.
Chandramala v. Muktamala, 555.
Chandramani Dubey v. Dubey, 514, 519.
Chandranath v. Jadabendra, 495.
Chandrapal Singh v. Sarabjit Singh, 576.
Chandrappa v. Gyanamma, 533.
Chandrasekhara v. Kulandaivelu, 531, 533, 535.
Chandrashekhara v. Kundandaivelu, 524.
—v. Sivaramakrishna, 900.
Chandreshwar v. Bisheshwar, 549, 558, 569.
Chandrika v. Narain, 388.
—Bakhsh Singh v. Bhola Singh, 494, 498, 506.
—Prasad v. Bhagwan Das, 220.
Chandulal Asharam v. Bai Kashi, 189.
Chandvasekharudu v. Bramhanna, 525.
Channa Basaregowda v. Rangegowda 318.
Chanvirappa v. Danava, 399.
Chanviravda v. District Magistrate of Dharwar, 592.
Chaplin v. Chaplin, 741.
Charandas v. Commissioner of Income Tax, 419.
Charandasi Debi v. Kanai Lal, 286, 350.
Charanjit Singh v. Amir Ali Khan, 75.
Charlesby v. Charlesby, 758.
Charu Chunder v. Nobo Sunderi,, 196
Charu Priya v. Roma Kanta, 161.
Chatar Sen v. Raja Ram, 380.
Chatarabhuj v. Chatarjit, 484.
Chatranarayan v. Uba Kunwari, 234.
Chatrati Sriramamurthi v. Official Receiver, 333.
Chatru v. The Crown, 597.
Chattar Singh v. Roshan Singh, 116, 259, 622, 628.
Chatti v. Pandrangi, 443.
Chatturbhooj v. Dharamsi, 272, 279.
Chaturbhuj v. Govind Ram, 375.
—Singh v. Sarada Charan Guha, 477, 498.
Chaturbhuj v. Sarbeshwar, 252, 904.
Chaudhri Atma Ram v. Umar Ali, 316.
Chelikani v. Vencata, 121.
Chelimy Chetty v. Subamma, 414.
Chelladorai v. Chinnathambiar, 624, 625.
Chellammal v. Ranganathan, 109, 518.
Chellappan Nair v. Madhavi Amma, 821.
Chellathammal alias Ammamuthammal v. Kalitheertha Pillai, 532, 535.
Chenchamma v. Subbayya, 573.
Chengama v. Munisami, 400.
Chengappa v. Buradagunta, 246.
Chengiah v. Subbaraya, 122, 129, 136.
Chennamma v. Srinivas, 80.
Chennappa v. Onkarappa, 584.
Chenvirappa v. Puttappa, 638.
Cherutty alias vasu v. Nangamparambil Ramu alias Kuttaman, 591, 592.
Cheruvu Nageswaraswami v. Rajah Vadrevu Viswasundara Rao, 333.
Chet Ram v. Ram Singh, 358, 375, 378.
Chetan Singh v. Sartaj Singh, 317.
Chetti v. Chetti, 514.
Chettiar v. Chettiar, 288.
Chettikulam v. Chettikulam Kumaraj, 386.
Chhaganram v. Bai Motigavri, 257.
Chhakauri v. Ganga, 388.
Chattar Singh v. Hukum Kunwar, 89, 114.
Chhaterpati v. Lachmidhar, 187.
Chhatradhari v. Akleshwar, 420.
Chhattanatha v. Ramchandra, 291.
Chhinu v. Kata, 116.
Chhittar v. Gaura, 112.
Chhotalal v. Bai Mahakore, 417.

Chhotey Lal v. Ganpat Rai, 354.
——Chaudhury v. Dalip Narain Singh, 289.
—Singh v. Surat Singh, 208.
Chhotiram v. Narayandas, 301, 303.
Chhotki v. Chandra Prakash, 96, 451.
Chichester v. Chichester, 800.
Chidambara v. Krishnasami, 452.
—v. Nallammal, 256.
—v. Rangasami, 585.
—Iyer v. Ananthakrishna, 509.
Chidambaram v. Ma Nyein Me, 72, 162.
—v. Gauri Nachiar, 423.
—v. Subramanian, 296.
Chidambaramma v. Husainamma, 231.
Chidambargauda v. Channappa, 327.
Chillingworth v. Bate, 938.
Chimabai v. Mallappa, 536.
Chimalakonda Ramasubbaraya Sastri v. Ganapathiraju Venkata Appalanarasimharaju, 330.
Chiman Lal v. Hari Chand, 83.
Chimappvu v. Meenakshi, 903.
Chimna v. Sada, 313.
Chimnaji v. Dinkar, 219.
China Ana Muthuyayyangar v. Thiruvengadammal, 555.
Chinna v. Pedda, 549, 648.
—v. Suriya, 326.
—Venkata v. Venkata Rama, 277, 398.
Chinnakolandi v. Thanji, 905.
Chinnammal v. Venkatachala, 122.
Chinnamarappa v. Narayammal, 246.
Chinnasami Pillai v. Kunju Pillai, 49, 55, 103.
Chinnaswami v. Appaswami, 244.
—v. Ponginamma Goundar, 116.
Chinnathayi v. Kulasekarapandia, 623.
—v. Kulasekara Pandiya Naicker, 623, 628.
Chinnaya v. Gurunatham, 312.
Chinnayya v. Perumal, 320.
Chinniah Chettiar v. Sivagami Achi, 93.
Chinnu Pillai v. Kalimuthu, 326, 327, 329.
Chintaman v. Bhagvan, 344.
Chintaman v. Dhondo, 499.
Chintamani v. Satyabadi Kar, 306.
Chintamanibhatla v. Rani of Wadhwan, 226.
Chintamanrav v. Kashinath, 376, 379, 381, 382, 383.
Chintamun v. Nowlukho, 393.
Chinti v. Daultu, 897.
Chippagiri Nagireddi v. Venkadhari Somappa, 299.
Chiragh Din v. Abdullah, 257.
Chiranji Lal v. Bankey Lal, 303.
Chiruvolu v. Chiruvolu, 258.
Chitko v. Janaki, 562.
Chockalingam v. Muthukaruppan, 288, 291, 354, 413.
Chodavarapu v. Chennuru, 582.
Chokalinga Sethurayar v. Arumanayakam, 493.
Chotalal v. Manohar, 486, 499, 500.
Chotay Lall v. Chunnoo Lall, 74, 89, 114, 202, 640.
Chotibai v. Ganeshlal, 569.
Chotkao Singh v. Hasan, 389.
Choudhuri v. Hayagriba, 386.
Chowdhry Ganesh Dutt v. Jewach, 261, 404, 405, 416.
—Pudum Singh v. Koer Oddey Singh, 524, 530.
Chowdry Chintamun v. Mussamut Nowlukho, 627.
—Junmejoy v. Russomoyee, 218.
Chowdrani v. Tariny Kanth, 184.
Chuckun v. Poran, 297.
Chunan Lal v. Hari Chand, 644.
Chunder v. Saranamoyi, 244.
—Nath v. Kristo Komul, 635.
Chundru Akkamma v. Ohundru Brahmadu, 245.
—Venkanna v. Chundru Satyanarayanamma, 603.
Chuni Lal v. Jai Gopal, 627.
Chuni Lal Haldar v. Srimati Makshada, 232.
Chunilal v. Bai Samarth, 465.
—v. Surajram, 189, 190, 508, 509, 517.
Chunka v. Bhabani, 74.
Chunnilal v. Kalu, 296.
Chuoturya v. Purhulad, 594.
—v. Sahub Purhulad, 71, 108, 401.
Churaman v. Gopi Sahu, 222.
Churchman v. Churchman, 787.
Churchward v. Churchward & Holliday, 793.
Chuttan Lal v. Kallu, 270, 341.
Clear v. Clear, 807.
Cleland v. Cleland, 777.
Cohen v. Cohen, 707.
Coimbatore Venkataramana Vilas Co. Ltd. v. Official Receiver, Coimbatore, 355.
Collector of Dacca v. Jagat Chunder, 140.
——Gorakhpur v. Ram Sundar Mal, 628.
——Madura v. Moottoo Ramalinga, 28, 44, 48, 52, 58, 59, 61, 66, 78, 80, 82, 170, 526, 532, 534, 535, 536.
——Masulipatam v. Cavaly Venkata, 140, 159, 202, 209, 210, 216, 217, 218, 221, 232, 235.
——Thana v. Hari, 489.
Collins v. Collins, 730.
Commissioner, Hindu Religious Endowments, Madras v. Swamiar, 487, 488.
———v. Sri Lakshmindra Thirtha Swamiar, 493, 503.
Commissioner of Income Tax v. Mills, 267.
Commissioner of Income Tax v. G. S. Mills, 95, 290, 291, 295.
Commissioner of Income Tax v. Indira, 112.
Commissioner of Income Tax v. Kalu Babu, 282.
———v. Luxminarayan, 95, 261, 262, 295, 603.
———v. Pannabai, 267.
———v. Pemsel, 479.
Commissioner of Income Tax, Punjab v. Krishna Kishore, 625.
———v. Thiagarajan, 99.
———U.P. & C.P. v. Sarwan Kumar, 603.
———v. Zamindar of Chemudu, 625.

Commissioner of Wealth Tax v. Champa Kumari, 640, 672, 837.
Controller of Estate Duty v. Anar Devi, 851, 852.
Cooper v. Cooper, 716, 719.
Co-operative Society of Patur v. Vasant, 102.
Cooverji v. Dewsey, 372.
Corbett v. Corbett, 816.
Cox v. Cox, 711.
Cox v. Hakes, 667.
Court of Wards v. Mohessur, 179.
Crabb v. Crabb, 700.
Cramp v. Cramp & Freeman, 789.
Crump v. Crump, 725.
Cundy v. Cundy, 791.
Cursandas v. Vundravandas. 479.

D. A. V. College v. S. N. A. S. H. School, 500.
D. Rangamma v. D. Chinnabbayi, 602.
D. Sadasiva v. B. Rattain. 277.
Dadaji v. Rukmabai, 517, 521, 696.
Dagadu v. Sakhubai, 420.
Dagai v. Mothura, 439.
Dagdu v. Balvant, 639.
— v. Namdeo, 93. 95, 101.
Dagdusa v. Ramchandra, 630.
Dagree v. Pacotti, 73, 75.
Dailey v. Dailey, 807.
Daji v. Laxman, 285.
Dal Bahadur Singh v. Bijai Bahadur Singh, 569.
Dal Chand v. Swarn Pratap, 771, 773, 819.
— Singh v. Dini. 116, 161.
Dalel v. Ambika, 565.
— Kunwar v. Ambika, 608.
Dalibai v. Gopibai, 306.
Dalip Singh v. Chaudhrain, 636.
— — v. Kundan Lal, 312.
Dalpatsingji v. Raisingji, 568.
Dalsingar Singh v. Jainath Kuar, 117.
Dalsukhram v. Lallubai. 613.
Damodar v. Banamali, 297.
Damodar v. Bhogilal, 500.
— v. Parmanandas, 177, 185, 473.
— Vishnu v. Shriram Laxman, 536.
Damodaram v. Bansilal, 292, 380.
— v. Uttamram, 288. 297, 394, 404.
Damodarji v. Collector of Banda, 648.
Damodar Rao v. Bhima Rao, 900, 903.
Damoodur v. Senabutty, 398, 404.
Danakoti v. Balsundra, 538.
Dandapani v. Ghumsur, 386.
Daneyi Gurumurty v. Raghu Podhan, 974.
Dangal Ram v. Jaimangal, 311.
Daniraiji v. Vahuji Maharaj Chandraprabha. 1015, 1036.
Danno v. Darbo, 113.
Darbari Lal v. Govind, 218, 221, 226, 227.
Darbeshwari v. Raghunath, 389.
Darling in re, 477.
Daroga Rai v. Basdeo Mahta, 215, 217
Darshan Singh v. Prabhu Singh, 286, 410.
Darsu Pandey v. Bikarmajit Lal, 376.
Das Mal v. Ram Chand, 255.
Das Mal Ram v. Tirtha Nath, 257.
Dasami v. Param, 480.
Dasarath v. Gura Bewa, 673.
Dasappa Setty v. Vedavathamma, 267, 312.
Dasarathara[illegible] v. Narasa, 313.
Dasaratharami v. Subha Rao, 482.
Dasharathi v. Bipin Behari, 196.
Dashrath Prasad v. Lallosingh, 75.
Dastane v. Dastane, 746.
Dassi v. Dhani Ram, 818.
Dattatraya v. Gangabai, 50, 52, 558.
— v. Govind. 557.
— v. Laxman, 82.
— Maruti v. Laxman Jettappayya, 550, 603, 604.
— v. Rukhmabai, 602.
— v. Shakuntalabai, 419.
— v. Vaman, 544.
— v. Vishnu, 376, 379. 381, 382.
— Tatya v. Matha Bala, 74.
Dattatreya Govind Haldankar, in re., 302, 306, 587.
— v. Matha Bala, 139.
Daulat v. Sankatha. 235, 309.
Daulat Ram v. Mehr Chand, 300, 313, 318, 372.
— — v. Ram Lal, 525.
Daulta Kuari v. Meghu, 604, 605.
Dawood v. Vullubhdas, 631.
Daya Ram v. Harcharan Das, 337, 338.
Dayaram v. Daulatshah, 626.
Dayaram v. Kashiram, 306.
Dayaldas v. Savitri Bai, 191.
Dayal Singh v. Bhajan Kaur, 804.
Dayamani v. Srinibash, 223, 232.
Dayanand v. Daji Narain, 372.
Dayrell-Steyning v. Dayrell-Steyning, 811.
D. E. v. A. G. 736.
Deacock v. Deacock, 804.
Debabrata Ghose v. Jnanendra, 429.
Deba Nand v. Anandmani, 584.
Debendra v. Brojendra, 345, 435.
— v. Fyzabad Bank, 355, 361.
Debendranath Sharma v. Nagendranath Datta, 226.
Debi Das v. Mukat Behari Lal. 129, 133.
— Dayal v. Bhan Pertap, 210, 219, 222, 223.
— — Sahoo v. Bhan Pertap Singh, 250.
— Lal v. Damodar Das, 292.
— — v. Nand Kishore, 519.
— Mangal Prasad v. Mahadeo Prasad, 175. 179.
Debi Prasad v. Tribeni Debi, 554, 569.
— Prosad v. Dharamjit, 313.
— — v. Golap Bhagat, 215, 227.
— Saran v. Daulata, 600.
— Singh v. Jia Ram, 383.
Debiprasanna v. Harendra. 198.
Deendayal v. Jugdeep Narain, 322, 323, 329, 352, 372, 373.
Deeplal v. Gulabchand, 480.
Deepo v. Kehar Singh, 698. 754.
Deivanai v. Chidambaram Chettiar, 83, 109, 509, 512, 517, 518.
Deivanayagam v. Subbiah, 116.
Dennis v. Dennis. 727.

Deo Kishen v. Budh Prakash, 162, 164, 165.
— Kuar v. Man Kuar, 443.
— Narain v. Bibikhaton, 299.
— — v. Ganga Singh, 340.
Deoki v. Jwala Prasad, 256.
— Nandan v. Madanlal, 549.
— — v. Murlidhar, 501.
— — v. Rikhi Ram, 551, 556.
Deonarain v. Agyan Ram, 286.
Deorao v. Raibhan, 538, 553.
Deosthan v. Ramdayal, 489.
Deputy Commissioner v. Sheo Nath, 421.
— — of Kheri v. Khanjan Singh, 235.
DeSilva v. DeSilva, 635.
Despatie v. Tremblay, 669.
DeSouza v. DeSouza, 768, 769.
Desu Rattamma v. Narayanarao, 289, 292.
— Reddiar v. Srinivasa Reddi, 254.
Devadattam v. Union of India, 359.
Devakka v. Giraddi, 569.
Devasakayam v. Devamony, 806.
Deveerachar v. Visweswariah, 410.
Devendranath Sarma v. Nagendranath Dutt, 236.
Devi Das v. Jada Ram, 355, 362, 374.
— Persad v. Gunwanti, 220, 601, 607.
Devidas v. Shrishailappa, 317.
— v. Yeotmal Central Bank, 633.
Devji v. Sambhu, 250.
Devki v. Purshotam, 801.
Devkore v. Amritram, 106.
Devshankar v. Motiram, 479.
Devyani v. Kantilal, 727.
Dewala v. Rupsir, 113.
Dhanabathi Bibi v. Pratapmull Agarwalla, 403, 412.
Dhanam v. Varadarajan, 98.
Dhanapala v. Krishna Chettiyar, 615.
Dhani Bai v. Neem Kanwar, 552.
Dhanji v. Dhuma, 231.
Dhanraj v. Soni Bai, 570, 571, 642, 643, 644.
Dhanraj v. Suraj Bai, 993, 996, 1001, 1007.
Dhanukha v. Saudagar, 102.
Dhanukdari v. Rambririch, 303.
Dhanurjay v. Dhano Ganda, 338.
Dhanwatey v. C.I.T., 282.
Dhapo v. Ram Chandra, 302.
Dharam Karan v. Shahzad Kunwar, 495.
— Kunwar v. Balwant Singh, 570.
— Narain v. Suraj Narain, 494, 506.
— Prakash v. Kalawati, 570.
— Singh v. Hira, 208.
Dharam Chand v. Bhawani, 225.
Dharamshi v. Bai Saker, 804-807, 814.
Dharani Kant v. Kristo Kumari, 635.
Dharma v. Ramkrishna, 550, 552.
— v. Sakharam, 110.
Dharampuram v. Virapandiyam, 140, 647.
Dharmarajsingh v. Chandrasekhar Rao, 300.
Dharmodas v. Nistarini, 440.
Dharnidhar v. Chinto, 564.
Dharwar Urban Bank Ltd. v. Krishnarao, 669.
Dhiraj Singh v. Manga Ram, 242.
Dhobani Dei v. Lingaraj, 580.
Dhondrappa v. Kasabai, 186.
Dhondi v. Radhabai, 204.
— Dnyamoo v. Rama Bala, 537.
Dhondiram v. Bhagubai, 276.
Dhondu Yeshwant v. Mishrilal Surajmall, 243.
— v. Gangabai, 144.
— v. Narayan, 629.
Dhondshet v. Ravji, 631, 633.
Dhoorjeti v. Dhoorjeti, 207.
Dhulabhai v. Lala Dhula, 326.
Dhullapa v. Krishnabai, 818.
Dhunookdharee v. Gunpat, 283.
Dhup Nath v. Ram Charitra, 180.
Dhurjati v. Ram Bharos, 182.
Dhurm Das v. Shama Soondri, 286.
— — Pandey v. Mussumat Shama Soondri Dibiah, 635.
Dhuronidhur, in the matter of, 521.
Digambar v. Dhanraj, 397, 425, 426.
Digumber v. Moti Lal, 152, 153, 158.
Digvijay Singh v. Pratap Kumari, 734.
Diltor Koer v. Harku Singh, 243.
Din Tarini v. Krishna, 447.
Dindayal v. Rajaram, 903.
Dinesh Chandra v. Biraj Kamini, 448.
Dinkar v. Appaji, 312.
— v. Ganesh, 536.
Dinonath v. Sati Prasad, 609.
Diwakar v. Chandanlal, 569.
Diwan Ram Bijai v. Indarpal, 184.
Dixon v. Dixon, 699.
Dnyaneshwar Krishna v. Anant Vasudeo, 411.
— Vishnu v. Anant Vasudeo, 399.
Dnyanu v. Tanu, 538.
Donaldson v. Donaldson, 811.
Donoghue v. Stevenson, 703.
Doongarsee v. Tribhawan, 499.
Doorga v. Teju, 179.
— Persad v. Doorga Konwari, 91, 235.
— Pershad v. Kundun, 415, 416, 418.
Dorai Babu v. Gopalkrishna, 402.
Dorai Raj v. S. R. Lakshmi, 577.
Dordisami v. Nondisami Saluvan, 344.
Dose Thimmanna v. Krishna, 612.
Douglas v. Douglas, 787.
Draupadi v. Sambari, 540.
Drobomoyee v. Shama Churn, 540.
Duchesne v. Duchesne, 812.
Dudh Nath v. Sat Narain, 78.
Dugappa v. Venkatramanya, 324.
Duggamma v. Ganeshayya, 81.
Dular Koeri v. Dwarkanath, 403, 521, 598.
Dulei Bewa v. Bimali Bewa, 902.
Dulhin Parbati Kuer v. Baijnath Prasad, 112, 190, 212, 223, 244, 252.
Dulip Narain v. Parmaoti, 370.
Dundappa v. Bhimawa, 199.
Dundoobai Anandrao v. Vithalrao Anandrao, 537.
Dunn v. Dunn, 704, 714, 792.
Durant v. Durant, 791.
Durbar v. Khachar, 388.
Durga v. Chanchal, 496.
— v. Lal Bahadur, 418.
— Das v. Santosh, 525.

Durga Das v. Tara Rani· 805.
——Pan v. Santosh Kumar Pan, 71.
—Dat v. Ganesh Dat, 283.
——v. Gita, 113.
—Nath v. Chintamoni, 152, 157, 216, 433.
—Parasada Rao v. Sudarsanaswami· 74.
—Prasad v. Bhajan, 343.
——v. Damodar Das, 313.
——v. Ghanshiam Das, 287.
——Singh v. Brajanath Bose, 621.
Durgadut v. Rameshwar, 625.
Durgaprasad Barhai v. Jewdhari Singh, 306, 307· 309.
Durgi v. Kanhaiya Lal, 562.
Duri v. Tadepatri, 425.
Durvasula v. Durvasula, 283.
Dwarka v. Kishan Das, 386.
—Nath v. Bungshi, 298, 349.
——v. Kedar Nath· 420.
Dwarka Nath v. Sarat Chandra, 50, 187.
—Ram v. Bakshi Parnaw Prasad, 307, 309.
——v. Jhulai, 235, 309.
—Das v. Krishan, 311· 341.
Dwarkanath v. Burroda, 477.
—v. Tafazar, 669.
Dwarkaprasad v. Jamnadas, 285.

Eastern Counties etc. Co. v. Marriage, 669.
East End Dwelling Co. Ltd. v. Finsbury, Burrow Council, 764, 850· 1008, 1014.
Edamma v. Hussainappa, 820.
Edwards v. Edwards, 699, 709.
Ekkari Ghosh v. Chittarekha, 240.
Ekoba v. Kashiram, 116.
Ekradeshwar v. Janeshwari· 625.
Ekradeshwari v. Homeshwar, 603, 607, 810, 1031.
Emmanual v. Mandakini, 789.
Emperor v. Bai Ganga, 519.
—v. Madan Gopal, 514.
—v. Munshi Ram· 517.
—v. Sat Narain, 185.
—v. Sital Prasad, 575.
Empress v. Prankrishna, 576.
England v. England, 728.
Eramma v. Muddappa, 527, 536.
Eramma v. Veeruppana, 863· 897, 903, 909.
Eshan Chunder v. Nund Coomar, 349.
Eshan Kishor v. Harish Chandra, 556.
Ethilavulu v. Pethakkal, 521, 575.
Eullamoni v. Netranand, 570.
Evans v. Evans· 723, 750.
Everitt v. Everitt, 713.

F. v. P., 737.
Faez Buksh v. Fukeerooden, 636.
Fagunswani v. Dhum Lal, 111.
Fairman v. Fairman, 730, 780.
Faizuddin v. Tincowri, 540.
Fakeer Bux v. Saira Begum, 836.
Fakirappa v. Chanapa, 321.
—v. Lumanna· 580.
—v. Savtrewa, 538.
—v. Yellappa, 108, 400.
Fakirchand v. Motichand, 280, 332, 335.
Fakirgauda v. Gangi, 512, 518, 646, 649.
Fakirnath v. Krushnachandra Nath, 162, 526.
Fakula Majhi v. Subhadra· 138.
Fanindra v. Adm. Gen. of Bengal, 477.
—v. Rajeshwar, 523.
—Deb v. Rajeshwar, 84, 568.
Faqir Chand v. Sant Lal· 352.
——v. Harnam Kaur, 366, 367.
Fatechand v. State of W. Bengal, 410.
Fateh Bibi v. Charan Das, 118.
Fateh Chand v. Rup Chand, 473, 475.
——v. Bhushan Prakash, 95.
—Singh v. Raghubir Sahai, 215.
——v. Thakur Rukmini, 236, 237.
Fatesangji v. Harisangji· 619.
Fatimunissa Begum v. Abu Bakar, 327.
Fatmabai v. Tukabai, 311.
Felaram v. Bagalanand, 234, 235.
Finch v. Finch, 667.
Firm Govindram Dwarkadas v. Nathulal, 356.
—Pirthirajganeshdas v. Kishunlal, 369.
Flowers v. Flowers· 769.
Fool Coomari Dasi v. Debendra Nath Sil, 607.
Forbes v. Forbes, 723.
Ford v. Stier, 739, 740, 789.
Foster v. Foster, 710, 723.
Fowle v. Fowle, 704, 785.
Fowler v. Fowler· 723.
France v. France, 715.
Fraser v. Fraser, 706.
Francis Ghosal v. Gabri Ghosal, 76.
Fraser v. Fraser, 706.
Fulchand, in re, 744.

G. v. G., 736, 737.
G. v. M. 738.
Gadadhar v. Chandrabhagabai, 174, 204, 216.
Gadadhar v. Gangadhar, 410.
Gadadhur Mullik v. Official Trustee of Bengal· 416.
Gadam v. Venkatarajulu, 908.
Gajadhar v. Jadubir, 370, 371, 383.
—v. Jagannath, 385, 390, 629.
—v. Kaunsilla, 605.
—v. Musammat Sukhdei, 605.
—Prasad v. Gauri Shankar· 126, 127.
Gajanan v. Kashinath, 550.
—v. Pandurang, 186.
Gajapathi v. Gajapathi, 416.
—Nilamani v. Radhamani, 112.
Gajapati v. Pusapati, 223.
Gajavalli Ammal v. Narayanaswami, 101.
Gajendar Singh v. Sardar Singh, 286, 419.
Gajja Nand v. The Crown, 512.
Gallagher v. Gallagher· 706.
Galler v. Galler, 730, 780.
Galloway v. Galloway, 815.
Ganpati v. Motiram, 321.
Ganpatrao v. Bhimrao, 359.
Ganap v. Subbi, 223, 232.
Ganapathi v. Sivamalai, 451.
Ganapati Maruti v. Anandrao· 547.
Gandhi Maganlal v. Bai Jadab, 205, 206.
Ganesh Mahanta v. Sukriya Bewa, 905.

Ganesh v. Narayan, 319.
Ganesh v. Radhakrishnan, 323.
— v. Shankar, 490.
— v. Waghu, 150.
— Chunder v. Lal Behary, 455, 460.
— — Dhur v. Lal Behari Dhur, 493, 498.
— Dutt v. Jewach, 418.
— Lal v. Khetra Mohan, 221.
Mahto v. Shib Charan Mahto, 73, 84.
— Prasad Singh v. Sheogovind Sahoo, 289.
Ganesha Row v. Tuljaram Row, 311.
Ganeshi Lal v. Ajudhia Prasad, 190.
— — v. Babu Lal, 429.
Ganeshji v. Hastuben, 736.
Ganeshram v. Mangilal, 316.
Ganeshrao v. Ramchandra, 544.
Ganga Bai v. Sita Ram, 606.
Ganga v. Jhalo, 577.
— v. Kanhai Lal, 255.
— v. Krishna Rao, 548.
— v. Lekhraj, 512, 571.
— v. Pirthi Pal, 276.
— Baksh v. Jagat Bahadur, 443.
— — v. Madho Singh, 232, 235.
— Dayal v. Mani Ram, 344.
— Dei v. Jagannath, 592, 613.
— Sah v. Hemlal Shah, 120.
— Sahai v. Kesri, 120, 636.
— — v. Lekhraj, 549.
— Saran v. Ganeshi Lal, 380.
Gangabai v. Anant, 549.
— v. Bandu, 109.
— v. Hari Ganesh, 207.
— v. Jankibai, 614.
— v. Punau Rajwa, 416.
— v. Thavar, 479, 618.
— v. Vamanaji, 301.
Gangabisan v. Vallabhdas, 337.
Gangadevi v. Krushna Prasad, 773.
Gangadhar v. Dindayal, 628.
— v. Hira Lal, 558.
— v. Ibrahim, 89, 108.
— v. Manjulal, 818,
— v. Prabhudha, 245.
— v. Saraswati, 842.
— v. Subhashini, 95, 96, 100.
— v. Yellu, 111, 161.
— Charan v. Saraswati, 903.
Gangamma v. Kuppammal, 267, 553.
Gangapershad v. Maharani Bibi, 586.
Gangaram v. Bapusaheb, 313.
— v. Dooboo, 497.
Gangayya v. Venkatramiah, 291.
Gangi Reddi v. Tammi Reddi, 276, 480, 483.
Gangu v. Chandrabhagabai, 163, 164.
Ganguly v. Sarkar, 549.
Ganpat v. Adarji, 629, 632.
— v. Annaji, 279, 288, 426.
— v. Gopalrao, 400.
— v. Namdeo, 417.
— v. Rameshwar, 367.
— v. Secretary of State, 140, 184, 188, 198.
— v. Tulsiram, 218, 222.
— v. Vithal, 668.
— Rai v. Munni Lal, 298.
— Rao v. Ishwar Singh, 306.
Ganpatrao Shripatrao v. Balkrishna Gururao, 552.
Ganpathy v. Subramaniam, 413, 424.
Ganu Purnaji v. Shriram, 212.
— v. Shivram, 539.
Gardner v. Gardner, 723, 754.
Garuda Sanyasayya v. Nerella Murthenna, 387.
Garudas v. Laldas, 120.
Gateppa v. Eramma, 74.
Gauri v. Chandramani, 613.
— Ammal v. Thulasi Ammal, 763.
— Nath Kakaji v. Gaya Kaur, 112, 223.
— Shankar v. Jiwan Singh, 308.
— — v. Jang, Bahadur, 367.
— — & Ors. v. Mohan Lal, 478.
— — v. Sheonandan, 378.
Gaurikumari v. Ramanimoyi, 498.
Gavadappa v. Girimallappa, 539.
Gaya Deen v. Amrauti, 259, 260.
— Din v. Badri Singh, 174.
— Prasad v. Murlidhar, 360.
Gayer v. Gayer, 772.
Geerdharee Doss v. Nundokissore Doss, 493.
Gendalal v. Nanalal, 314.
Genda Puri v. Chatar Puri, 493.
Gendulal v. Jangli, 299.
Gerulal v. Gopichand, 116.
Gettappa v. Eramma, 527, 641, 642.
Getty v. Getty, 730.
Ghambhirmal v. Hamirmal, 254.
Ghana v. Gereli, 595.
Ghanta China v. Moparthi, 115, 532.
Ghansham v. Badiya Lal, 221.
Gharib-Ullah v. Khalak Singh, 267, 298, 300, 303, 576, 586.
Ghasiram v. Girdhari, 232.
Ghasita v. Wazira, 589.
Ghasiti v. Umrao Jan, 553.
Ghassu Khan v. Najar Ali, 318.
Ghazi v. Sukru, 512.
Gheesi v. Shri Rama, 964.
Ghelabhai v. Bai Javer, 250.
— v. Har Gowan, 506.
Ghisiawan v. Mst. Raj Kumari, 227, 256.
Ghisibai v. Mangilal, 499.
Giani Ram v. Ramji Lal, 841.
Giano v. Moti Ram, 903.
Gigi v. Panna, 81.
Gilbey v. Gilbey, 809.
Girdharee Lal v. Kantoo Lal, 340, 354, 376.
Girdharilal v. Fatehchand, 89, 108, 411, 428, 518.
Girdhari Lal v. Kishenchand, 298.
— Lall v. Bengal Govt., 121, 122, 140.
Girdharlal v. Bai Shiv, 352,
— v. Manikamma, 637.
Girianna v. Honama, 603.
Giriappa v. Ningappa, 559.
Girija v. Girdhari, 417.
Girijanandini Devi v. Bijendra Narain, 419, 421, 422.
Girimallappa v. Kenchava, 138.
Girija Shankar v. Nayan Chandra, 368.
Girijanund v. Sailajanund, 499.
Giriowa v. Bhimaji, 541.

Girish v. Upendra, 486.
Girja Bai v. Sadashiv, 48, 410-412, 414-415, 424.
Girjanand v. Bhagwan, 493.
Girvar v. Makbunessa, 317.
Girwar Singh v. Premavati, 771.
Gitabai v. Fattoo, 754.
Giyana v. Kandasami, 485.
Gnanasambanda v. Velu, 494, 496, 498, 506.
Gobardhan v. Jasadamoni, 520.
Gobind v. Abdul, 427.
— v. Dowlut, 598.
— v. Gomti, 485.
— v. Lakhrani, 219.
— v. Mohesh, 158.
— Prosad v. Mohesh Chunder, 156.
— Singh v. Baldeo Singh, 309.
Gobinda v. Ram Charan Das, 493.
— Kumar v. Debendra Kumar, 503.
— Ramanuj Das Mohanta v. Mohant Ramcharan Ramanuj Das, 485, 487, 490, 496.
Gobindkar v. Mohan, 308.
Godabai v. Narayan, 731.
Godavaribai v. Sagunabai, 603.
Godawari Devi v. Subh Karan, 569.
— Lakshminarasamma v. Godavari Rama Brahman, 89.
Godavarthi Venkanna v. G. Venkatanarayana, 431.
Gohar Begum v. Suggi, 589.
Gojabai v. Shrimant Sahajirao, 52, 80, 189, 193.
Gojikabai v. Dattatraya, 609.
Gokal v. Amarchand, 288.
— Chand v. Hukam Chand-Nath Mal, 283, 288, 291.
— Chand v. Pravin Kumari, 83.
Gokha Ram v. Sham Lal, 385.
Gokibai v. Lakhmidas, 603, 608.
Gokool Nath v. Issur, 479.
Gokul Chand v. Mangal Sen, 447.
— — De v. Gopi Nath De, 460, 498.
Gokul Chandra v. Biswanath, 569.
— Nath v. Issur Lochun, 467.
— Pati Datta v. Pashu Pati Nath Datta, 431.
Gokhul Rai v. Janki Kuer, 572.
Gokulananda Harichandan v. Iswar Chhotrai, 257, 258.
Golab Koonwar v. Collector of Benares, 141.
Goli Eswariah v. Commissioner of Gift Tax, 277.
Gollins v. Gollins, 717.
Gomti v. Rameshwardas, 338.
Goodden v. Goodden, 807.
Goodhall v. Goodhall, 814.
Goolab Singh v. Kurun Singh, 255.
Goona Durgaprasad Rao alias Pedda Pabu v. Guna Sundaresan Swami and Ors., 513.
Gopal v. Gangaram, 633.
— v. Hanmant, 512, 571, 646.
— v. Kalu, 599.
— v. Kenaram, 431.
— v. Kesheosa, 277, 635.
Gopal Narain v. Goenka, 404, 841, 842.
— v. Narayan, 525.
— v. Radha, 503.
— v. Trimbak, 297.
— v. Vishnu, 536, 550.
— Chand v. Babu Kunwar, 276.
— Chandra v. Ram Chandra, 191, 197.
— Chunder v. Kartick Chunder, 498.
— Das v. Badri Nath, 313.
— — v. Topan Das, 375.
— Krishna Kasaudhan v. Mst. Jaggo, 519.
— Lal Sett v. Purna Chandra Basak, 482, 500.
— Pandey v. Parsotam, 669.
— Prosad v. Raghunath, 624.
— Singh v. Ujjar Singh, 244.
Gopalachariar v. Krishnamachariar, 551.
Gopalakrishnayya v. Gopalan, 334.
Gopalakrishnam v. Venkatanarasa, 519.
— v. Venkatanarasa, 303, 507.
Gopalakrishnan v. Ramula Reddi, 901.
Gopala Rao v. Sitharamamma, 109, 596, 994, 1028, 1033.
Gopalasami v. Arunachelam, 279, 402, 595.
Gopalaswamy v. Meenakshi, 451.
— v. Siddammal, 538.
Gopalayyan v. Raghupatiayyan, 83.
Gopalsami v. Chinnasami, 277.
Gopalu Pillai v. Kothandarama Ayyar, 316.
Gopee Kishen v. Hem Chunder, 350.
— Lall v. Chundraolee, 525, 538, 570.
Gopeekrist v. Gungapersaud, 286.
Gopendra Nath v. Prativa Rani, 798, 817.
Gopi v. Madanlal, 997.
Gopi v. Markande, 638.
— v. Musammat Jaldhara, 471.
Gopi Chand v. Bedamo Kuer, 863.
— Chand v. Bhagwani Devi, 842, 843.
— Krishna Kasandhan v. Mt. Jagoo, 512, 519.
— Nath v. Bhugwat, 638.
— — v. Satish Chandra, 291.
— Tihadi v. Gokhei Panda, 509.
— Wasudev v. Markande, 635.
Gopinath v. Jagannath, 319.
Gopu v. Sami, 480.
Gordhandas v. Bai Ramcoover, 87, 439, 443.
Gordhan Das v. Chunni Lal, 479.
Gorst v. Gorst, 787.
Gosavi Shivgar v. Rivett Carnac, 467.
Gosling v. Gosling, 467.
Gossami Sri Girdharji v. Romanlalji, 494, 497, 499.
Gostha Behari v. Haridas, 900.
Goswami Puran Lalji v. Ras Bihari Lal, 495.
Goswami Shri Mahalaxmi Vahuji v. Ranchhoddas, 501, 502.
Gourah v. Gujadhur, 576.
Goureenath v. Collector of Monghyr, 302.
Gouri Shankar v. Thakur Das, 482.
Gourishankar v. Atmaram, 420.
Government of Bombay v. Ganga, 519.
Govind v. Godubai, 538.

Govind Hanumantha v. Nagappa, 545, 565.
— v. Radha, 81.
— v. Ram Adhar, 113.
— v. Sakharam, 355.
— v. Savitri, 189, 508.
— v. Trimbak, 393.
— Balkrishna v. Ramchandra, 248, 252.
— Bhawshet v. Bhike Mahadeoshet, 114.
— Prasad; in the matter of, 587
— Ram v. Lila Devi, 817.
— Singh v. Baldeo Singh, 235.
Govinda v. Chimabai, 569.
Govinda v. Shenfad, 539, 541, 567.
Govindappa v. Doddathayappa, 975.
Govindarajulu v. Balu Ammal, 88, 110.
Govindram v. Chotumal, 855.
Govindram v. Sheoprasad, 526, 554.
Govindarazulu v. Devarabhotla, 303, 507, 519.
Govindayyar v. Dorasami, 554, 555.
Govindji v. Lakmidas, 200.
Govindoss v. Official Assignee of Madras, 431.
Govindprasad v. Rindabai, 555.
Govindu v. Venkatapathi, 226.
Gowardhan v. Gangabai, 604, 1027.
Gowardhan v. Dwarku, 129.
— Das v. Viru Mal, 231.
Gowli Buddanna v. C.I.T. Mysore, 262.
Gowri Thimma Reddy v. The State of Andhra Pradesh, 767.
Grey v. Pearson, 667.
— v. Walker, 291.
Griffith v. Griffith, 800, 811.
Grimond v. Grimond, 479.
Grose v. Amirtamayi, 210.
Guddati v. Ganapati, 553.
Gujrath Oil Mills & Mfg. Co. Ltd. v Patel Shakarbhai, 341.
Gul Mohammad v. King Emperor, 519.
Gulab v. Devilal, 553.
— Chand Lala v. Manni Lal Lala, 287.
— Dass v. Manohar Dass, 494, 498.
— Devi v. Banwari Lal, 222.
Gulabbhai v. Sohangdasji, 485.
Gulabchand v. Sheokaran, 901, 1026.
Gulabrao v. Nagorao, 140, 549.
Gulalchand v. Vadilal, 389.
Gulam Chand v. Manni Lal, 83.
Gulappa v. Tayawa, 147, 192, 204.
Gulbai, In re, 575.
Gulkandi v. Prahlad, 556.
Gulzara Singh v. Tej Kaur, 1026.
Gumanan v. Jahangira, 256.
Gummanna v. Nagaveniamma, 859.
Guneshwar v. Durga Prasad, 162.
Gundicha v. Eswara, 549.
Gunga Prosad v. Ajudhia Pershad, 381, 382.
Gunpat Rao v. Ram Chunder, 179.
Gur Dayal v. Kaunsila, 611, 612.
— Nanak v. Jai Narain, 251.
— Narain Das v. Gur Tahal Das, 109, 110, 402.
Gur Narayan v. Sheo Lal Singh, 638, 639.
— Prasad v. Ram Sukh, 219.
Guramma v. Mallappa, 276, 340, 525, 559, 648.
Guranditta v. Amar Dass, 505.
Guran Ditta v. Pokhar Ram, 311, 315.
— — v. Ram Ditta, 635.
Gurbachan Singh v. Khichar Singh, 917.
Gurbasappa v. Vankat, 318.
Gurcharan Prasad v. Krishnanand, 488.
Gurdas v. Prito, 903.
Gurdev Kaur v. Sarwan Singh, 699.
Guardial v. Bhagwan Devi, 188.
Gurdial Kaur v. Mukand Singh, 770.
— Singh v. The Central Board Local Committee, Amritsar, 668.
Gurdip Kaur v. Ghamed Singh, 1023.
Gurlingapa v. Nandapa, 327, 330.
— v. Sabu, 326.
Gurmit Singh v. Tara Singh, 843, 904.
Gurmukh Singh v. Intazamia Committee, 667.
Gurmukh Singh v. Shiv Ram, 289.
Gursarn Das v. Mohan Lal, 388.
Guru Charan v. Adikanda Behara, 693.
Guru Das v. Bijaya, 293.
— Gobind v. Anand Lal, 142, 152, 153, 156, 158, 159.
— — Shah Mandal v. Anand Lal Ghose Mazumdar, 129.
Gurulingaswami v. Ramalakshmamma, 570.
Gurunadham v. Venkata Rao, 327.
Gurunath v. Kamalabai, 63, 540, 541, 543.
Gurunath Chetty v. Navaneethamma, 906, 909.
Gurunatham v. Raghavalu, 388.
Gurusami v. Sivakami, 453.
Guruswami v. Marappa, 331.
Gurushiddappa v. Parwatewwa, 603, 604, 608.
Guruvappa v. Thimma, 318, 319.
Guruvayya v. Dattatraya, 315, 317.

H. v. H., 776.
H. v. P., 736.
Haddon v. Haddon, 808.
Hajarkhan v. Kesarkhan, 619.
Haji Ismail, in the matter of the will of, 618.
— Oosman v. Haroon, 617, 619.
— Saboo Sidick v. Ally Mahomed, 619.
— — — v. Ayeshabai, 604, 619.
Hakma Manji v. Meman Ayab, 629.
Hall v. Hall, 710.
Hammant Kashinath v. Ganesh Annaji, 365.
Hanamangouda v. Hanamangouda, 908.
Hanamgowda v. Irgowda, 567.
Hanmandas v. Valabhdas, 323, 325, 326, 372, 373.
Hanmant v. Bhimacharya, 399, 446, 525.
— v. Ganesh, 388.
— v. Krishna, 567.
— v. Rango, 185.
— Ramaji v. Vasudeo Hanmant, 123.
Hanmantappa v. Jivubai, 275
Hanmappa v. Hanmantgauda, 497.

Hans Raj v. Dhanwant Singh, 842, 843.
——v. Khushal Singh, 305.
Hanso Pathak v. Harmandil Pathak, 282.
Hansraj v. Musammat Somni, 233.
—Malji, in re., 335.
Hanumaiah v. Mallayya, 549.
Hanuman v. Tulsabai, 101.
—Prasad v. Indrawati, 900.
—Singh v. Nanak Chand, 376.
Hanumantamma v. Rami Reddi, 572, 573.
Hanumat v. Sonadhari, 303, 389.
Hanumayya v. Venkata Narasimha, 356, 360.
Haran Chunder v. Hurro, 550.
Har Bux Singh v. Musammat Shanti Devi, 454
—Lal v. Ganga Ram, 557.
—Mitra v. Raghubar, 219, 228.
—Narain v. Bishambhar, 404.
—Prasad v. Kewal, 512.
Harak Singh v. Kailash Singh, 900, 904.
Harbhaj v. Mohar Singh, 904.
Harbhajan Singh v. Brij Balab, 740.
Harbinson, re., 479.
Hardeep Singh v. Dalip Kaur, 698.
Hardeo Singh v. Kaushilla Kunwar, 245.
Hardi Narain v. Ruder Perkash, 322, 323, 325, 329.
Hardwari v. Gomi, 444.
Harekrishna v. Jujesthi, 96, 101, 103.
Harendra Nath Mukherji v. Hari Pada Mukherji, 227, 228, 230.
Hargobind v. Dharam Singh, 401, 595.
Hargovind Singh v. Collector of Etah, 622, 624.
Hari v. Antaji, 497.
—v. Bairand, 219.
—v. Balambhat, 629.
—Dass v. Hukmi, 98.
—Das Chatterji v. Manmatha Nath Maulik, 549, 568.
—v. Ganpatrao, 427.
—v. Jairam, 318.
—v. Moro Lakshman, 447.
—v. Narmadabai, 603.
—Annaji v. Vasudev, 144.
—Baksh v. Babu Lal, 421, 422.
—Charan v. Kaula Rai, 302.
—Charan v. Manakmall, 356.
—Das v. Bama Churn, 156, 158.
—Gobind v. Akhoy Kumar, 639.
—Gopal v. Gokaldas, 314, 317.
—Kishan v. Chandu Lal, 398.
—Kishen v. Kashi Pershad, 228.
——v. Rajeshwar, 89.
—Lal v. Munman Kunwar, 313, 318.
—Lall, in the matter of, 631.
—Narain Das, in re, 587.
—Narayan v. Vitai, 113.
—Nath v. Mothurmohun, 250.
—Prasad v. Lal Behari,. 318.
——v. Sourendra, 358, 379.
—Rao v. Venkaiah, 541.
—Shankar v. Raghuraj, 570.
—Singh v. Pritam Singh, 414.
Haribhai Anraji v. Narayan Hari, 244.
—v. Mathur, 150.
Haribhat v. Damodarbhat, 204.
Haribhau v. Agabrao, 548.
—v. Hakim, 302, 556.
Haridas v. Baroda, 615.
—v. Devkuvarbai, 276, 279.
—v. Pran Nath, 426.
Harihar v. Nabakishore, 426.
—v. Ram Daur, 121.
—v. Udai Nath, 229.
Hariharsingh v. Deonarayan, 212, 569.
Harilal v. Bai Mani, 445, 584.
—v. Bai Rewa, 473, 474.
—v. Gordhan, 588.
—v. Lilavati, 860, 817,
—v. Nagar, 631, 632.
—v. Pranvalavdas, 216.
Haripada Ojha v. Ichhamayee Debi, 476.
Hariram v. Madan Gopal, 629, 642.
Harisinhji v. Ajitsinhji, 594.
Harish Chandra v. Atir Mahomed, 140, 167, 647.
——v. Triloki Singh, 899.
Harjivan v. Naran, 439.
Harkash Singh v. Hardevi, 410.
Harmal Kaur v. Kartar Kaur, 901, 903.
Harnabh v. Mandil, 83, 203.
—Pershad v. Mandil Dass, 527, 641, 642.
Harnam Singh v. Mohan Lal, 454, 475.
Harnath Kuar v. Indar Bahadur, 207.
Haroddott v. Beer Narain, 342.
Haroon Mahomed, in the matter of, 287, 288, 291, 617, 618.
Harpershad v. Shoe Dayal, 277.
Harthan v. Harthan, 735.
Hassan Ali v. Naga Mal, 644.
Hassonally v. Popatlal, 618.
Hata v. Narayanan, 600.
Hayfield v. Hayfield, 813.
Hazarilal v. Halkulal, 113.
Hazari Lal v. Ram Lal, 412.
—Mall v. Abaninath, 273.
Hearsey v. Hearsey, 728.
Helava v. Sesigowda, 305.
Hem Chunder v. Sarnamoyi, 244, 245.
——v. Thako Moni, 330.
—Raj v. Bashesher Das, 361.
—Singh v. Harnam Singh, 553.
Hemchandra Ganguli v. Matilal Ganguli, 350.
Hemangini v. Kedarnath, 179.
Hemendra Nath Roy v. Jnanendra, 84.
——v. Jnanendra, 562.
Hemlata v. Goluck Chunder, 202.
Hemraj v. Nathu, 579, 580.
—alias Babu Lal & Ors., v. Khemchand & Ors., 388.
Hencower v. Hanscower, 553.
Henderson v. Henderson, 788, 790, 791.
Het Narain v. Ram Dein, 631.
Hewanchal Singh v. Ajodhiya Singh, 282.
Hickman v. Peacey, 938.
Hill v. Clifford, 746.
Hillier v. Hillier and Latham, 756.
Himmat v. Bhawani, 220.
—Bahadur v. Dhampat Rai, 239.
Himoti Bai v. Manoharsingh, 550.
Hindustan Commercial Bank Ltd. v. Sohanlal, 387.

Hindu Religious Endowments, Madras v. Sri Lakshmindra Thirtha Swamiar, 478.
Hira v. Buta, 87.
— v. Hansji, 508, 509.
— v. Radha, 553.
— Dei v. Bodhi Sahu, 605.
— Lal Mandal v. Sankar Lal, Mandal, 179.
— Mal v. Ronqi Ram, 259.
— Singh v. Mst. Manglan, 416, 430.
Hirabai v. Bhagirathibai, 81.
Hira Lal v. Kumud Behari, 904.
Hirabai v. Lakshmibai, 474.
— v. Jan Mahomed, 443.
Hiradas v. Jagannath, 388.
Hirakali v. Awasthi, 751, 782.
Hiralal v. Fulchand, 399, 410.
— v. Jagdish, 381.
— v. Rongiram, 259.
— Laxmandas v. Meghraj, Bhickchand, 108, 594.
— v. Tripura, 199.
— v. Tripura Charan, 57.
Hiran Bibi v. Sohan Bibi, 239, 241.
Hiranand v. Maya Das, 120.
Hiranath Koer v. Baboo Ram, 627.
Hirday Narain v. Ram Das, 360, 416.
Hitendra v. Sukhdeb, 309, 341.
— Singh v. Maharaja of Darbhanga, 475.
— — v. Rameshwar Singh, 476.
Holborn v. Holborn, 713, 723.
Holden v. Holden, 720.
Honamma v. Timannabhat, 604, 605.
Honapa v. Narsapa, 637.
Hoorbai v. Sooleman, 619.
Hori Dasi v. Secretary of State, 498.
Horton v. Horton, 737.
Hosbanna v. Devanna, 403.
Housabai v. Jijabai, 1004, 1011.
Hoymobutty v. Koroona, 615.
Hridoy Kant v. Behari Lal, 179.
Huchrao v. Bhimarao, 552.
Hudson v. Hudson, 775.
Hukum Chand v. Sital Prasad, 174, 183, 188.
Hukumchand v. Fulchand, 630.
Hunooman Persaud v. Mussamat Babooee, 225, 249, 298, 300, 306, 309, 354, 489, 578, 587.
Hungerford Investment Trust Ltd., In re., 667.
Hunter v. Att. Gen., 479.
Huradhun v. Muthoranath, 568.
Huri Das v. Bama Churn, 158.
— Doyal v. Grish Chunder, 203.
Hurpurshad v. Sheo Dayal, 82, 277, 440.
Hurro Nath v. Randhir Singh, 225, 307.
Hurry v. Gonesh, 223.
— Churn v. Nimai, 517.
— Mohun v. Gonesh Chunder, 306.
Hurrydoss v. Sreemutty Uppoornah, 210, 249, 254.
Husenbhoy v. Ahmedbhoy, 467.
Hutchinson v. Hutchinson, 706.
Hyman v. Hyman, 803, 813.

Ibrahim v. Ibrahim, 589, 973.
Iburamsa v. Thirumalai, 427.
— v. Theruvenkatasami, 326.
I.L.T. Development v. Kotayya, 96.
Ilata v. Narayanan, 600.
Imam v. Balamma, 611.
Imambandi v. Kumleswari, 637.
Imam-ud-din v. Liladhar, 314.
Imdad Ahmad v. Pateshri, 317.
Imperial Bank of India v. Mt. Maya Devi, 301.
Inayat v. Hardeo, 342.
Indar Pal v. The Imperial Bank, 365.
Indarjit Singh v. Jaddu, 227.
Inder Narayan v. Rup Narayan, 108.
Inderun v. Ramaswamy, 518, 649.
Inder Singh v. Sadhu Singh, 74.
Indramani Devi v. Raghunath Bhanja, 84.
Indranarayan v. Roop Narayan, 284, 636.
Indrapal v. Mst. Humangi, 189.
Indromoni v. Behari Lal, 553, 647.
Indubai v. Vyankati, 843, 902.
Indu Bhusan v. Mrityunjoy, 101, 435.
Indur Chunder v. Radhakishore, 581, 583.
Inspector Singh v. Kharak Singh, 289, 304.
Iqbal Kaur v. Pritam Singh, 717.
— Singh v. Jasmer Singh, 375.
Irappa Lokappa v. Rachayya Mudivalayya, 547.
Ishar Singh v. Gajadhar Prosad, 315.
Ishrappa v. Krishna, 324, 325.
Ishri Singh v. Baldeo Singh, 628.
Ishwar v. Janki, 256.
— Dadu v. Gajabai, 536, 537.
— Das v. Raj Kumar, 842.
Ishwari v. Babunandan, 219, 221.
— Bhuvaneshwari Thakurani v. Projonath Dey, 481, 483.
— Prasad v. Rai Hari Prashad, 71, 75, 550, 645, 646.
Ismali v. Hafiz Boo, 635.
Isree Pershad v. Nasib Koer, 274, 404.
Isri Dut v. Hansbutti, 211, 212, 214, 254, 255.
Issur Chandra v. Gopal Chandra, 639.
Iswar v. Kshetra, 486.
— Radhakanta v. Khetra, 74.
Iswarbai v. Bhagwandas, 83.

J. v. J., 736, 811, 812, 814.
J. D. Rao v. I.T.O., 387, 389.
J. P. Banerji v. B. Banerjee, 198.
Jackson v. Jackson, 759.
Jadaobai v. Purammal, 96, 451.
Jaddo Kunwar v. Sheo Shankar, 318.
Jadho Nagu v. Jadho Gangu, 111.
— Nagu Bai v. Jadho Gangu Bai, 161.
Jado Singh v. Nathu Singh, 305.
Jadoo Nath v. Brojonath, 404.
Jadu v. Abdul, 322, 339.
— Nath v. Rup Lal, 637.
— — Singh v. Thakur Sita Ramji, 481, 482.
Jadunath Kuar v. Bisheshar Baksh Singh, 104.
Jag Sah v. Ram Chandra, 313.
Jagabhai v. Rustamji, 313.

Jagadamba v. Narain Singh, 412.
— v. Satyanarayana, 81.
— Kumari v. Narain Singh, 622, 628.
Jagadambal v. Saraswathi Ammal, 199.
Jagadesan v. Saraswathi Ammal, 367, 369, 371.
Jagadindra Nath v. Hemanta, 482, 485, 494, 497, 505.
— v. Ulangini Dasi, 231.
Jagadish Lal v. Shyama, 699, 736.
Jagan Nath v. Champa, 142.
— — v. Dibbo, 207.
— — v. Mannu Lal, 311.
Jaganath v. Diccession Corporation, 426.
Jaganada v. Prasada Rao, 208.
Jagannadha v. Papamma, 562.
— v. Ramayamma, 584, 585.
— Rao v. Jatmal Madanlal, 475.
Jagannadham v. Vighneshwarudu, 220, 250.
Jagannadhan v. Adilakshmi, 138.
Jagannath v. Gur Charan, 221.
— v. Jugul Kishore, 387.
— v. Narayan, 81, 190, 198, 199, 509, 649.
— Ramji, In re., 587.
— v. Runjit Singh, 190, 496, 498.
— v. Rupnarain, 236.
— v. Shri Nath, 310.
— Prasad v. Ranjit Singh, 48.
— Rao Dani v. Rambharosa, 536.
Jagannatha v. Kunja, 444.
— Row v. Viswesan, 356.
Jagannatham v. Kunjithapatham, 905, 906.
Jagannathpuri Guru v. Godabai, 902, 907.
Jagarnath Gir v. Sher Bahadur Singh, 139.
Jagat Krishna v. Ajit Kumar, 276, 286, 399, 403.
Jagat Narain v. Mathura Das, 289, 304, 305.
Jagat Singh v. Teja Singh, 209, 905.
Jagdambika v. Kali, 390.
Jagdat Singh v. Rawat, 223.
Jagdeo Singh v. Mussammat Raja Kuer, 216.
Jagdeo Singh v. Shivadeni Singh, 569, 570.
Jagdish v. Rameshwar, 322.
— Bahadur v. Sheo Partab, 626.
— Kumar v. Sita Devi, 737.
— Prasad v. Hoshyar Singh, 367.
— — v. Shreedharkant, 208.
— — v. Shreedharpant, 305.
Jagesar v. Deo Dat, 301.
Jageshwar v. Manni Ram, 356, 359.
Jaggamma v. Satriyanarayanamurthi, 1020.
Jaggernath Singh v. Narayan, 295.
Jagir Kaur v. Jaswant Singh, 768.
Jal Kaur v. Pala Singh, 1023.
Jagmohan v. Official Liquidator, 44.
— v. Prag Ahir, 305.
— v. Ranchhoddas, 286, 289, 354, 420.
— Singh v. Sri Nath, 474.
Jagmohandas v. Allu Maria, 451.
— v. Pallonjee, 451.
Jagnahar Singh v. Sadhu Ram, 514.
Jaggo Bai v. Utsava Lal Bai, 252.
Jahan Singh v. Hardat Singh, 368, 371, 372, 383.
Jahangir v. Janardan, 318.
Jai Bansi v. Chattar, 498.
— Dayal v. Ram Saran Das, 480.
— Nand v. Musammat Paran, 606.
— Narain v. Baij Nath, 416.
— — v. Mahabir Prasad, 375, 382.
— — v. Munna Lal, 223.
— Ram v. Mst. Shiv Devi, 608.
— Singh v. Bijai Pal, 551.
Jaigobind v. Nagesar, 315.
Jaigobind Singh v. Brij Behari Singh, 421.
Jaikumar v. Gauri Nath, 388.
Jain v. Jain, 799.
Jainarain v. Bhagwan, 235, 309.
Jainarayan v. Hira, 112.
— Mulchand v. Sonaji, 383.
Jainkamma v. Mattareddi, 255.
Jaipal Singh v. Lachman Singh, 307, 343.
Jaiprakash v. Lilabai, 381.
Jairam v. Bhagirathi, 478.
— v. Nathu, 395, 403.
— v. Tota Ram, 901.
— Laxman In re., 587.
Jairath v. Jairath, 817.
Jaisri v. Rajdewan, 209, 224.
Jaiwanti v. Anandi Devi, 74, 188, 640.
Jaiwanti Mafatlal v. Arvind N. Mafatlal, 1024, 1026.
Jakati v. Borkar, 355, 356, 359, 387, 388.
Jamiat Rai v. Mt. Malan, 611, 613.
Jamieson v. Jamieson, 716, 717-720.
Jamna v. Machul, 612.
— Prasad v. Ram Partab, 271.
— v. Nain Sukh, 371, 376, 381, 382, 384.
— Das v. Ramautar, 473, 474.
Jamnabai v. Dharsey, 257, 479.
— v. Khimji, 113.
— v. Raychand, 548, 554, 565.
— v. Vasudeo, 405.
Jamsetji v. Kashinath, 302, 376.
Jamuna v. Ganga, 338.
— Kunwar v. Arjun Singh, 603.
Jan Mahomed v. Datu, 617, 620.
Jana v. Rakhma, 144.
— Gadi v. Parvati Santosh, 93, 99.
Janak Dulari v. Dist. Judge, Kanpur, 906.
— — v. Narain Dass, 770.
— Kishori v. Babu Debi Prasad, 240.
Janakiamma v. Chinnarao, 285.
Janaki Ammal v. Narayanasami, 207, 208, 253, 254.
— Nath Ray v. Jyotish Chandra Achariya Choudhuri, 246.
Janakiram v. Nagamony, 261, 472.
Janakisetty v. Miriyala, 203.
Janardhan v. Sonalai, 179.
Jandebi v. Upendra, 863.
Jang Bir v. Mst. Jamna, 142.
Jangi Lal v. Panna Lal, 486.
Janglubai v. Jetha, 187, 189, 190, 193.
Janki v. Bhairon, 473, 474.
— v. Kallu Mal, 447.
— v. Nand Ram, 270, 592, 606.
— Kuer v. Chhathu Prasad, 900.
— Prasad v. Dwarka Prasad, 622.
— Raman v. Koshalyanandan, 494.

Jankibai v. Sundra, 79, 192, 204.
Janku v. Kisan, 900, 904.
Janoki v. Gopal, 494.
— Debi v. Gopal, 487.
— Nath v. Mothuranath, 113.
Jaria Devi v. Shyam Sundar, 908.
Jasoda v. Sheo, 141.
— Kuer v. Phul Kuer, 93.
Jaswantlal v. Nichabhai, 397.
Jaswantrai v. Vimal Vaidya, 775.
Jatindra v. Ghanesyam, 449.
— Mohun v. Gouri Bala, 744.
Jatindranath Ray v. Nagendranath Ray, 104, 129-132.
Jatru Pahan v. Ambikajit Prasad, 430.
Jatti v. Banwari Lal, 421, 422, 431.
Jaudubchunder v. Benodbeharry, 420.
Javerbai v. Kablibai, 464, 470.
Javitri v. Gendan Singh, 188, 208.
Jawahar Lal v. Shri Thakur Radha Gopalji Maharaj, 276.
— Singh v. Parduman Singh, 356, 359, 611.
Jawahir Lal v. Jarau Lal, 204.
— Singh v. Udai Prakash, 344.
Jayalakshmi v. Ganesh Iyer, 871, 877, 948.
Jayanti v. Alamelu, 597, 601, 608, 610, 611, 612, 614.
Jayantilal v. Chhanalal, 923, 939.
Jayaraj v. Seeniammal, 735.
Jeapes v. Jeapes, 724.
Jeewanbai v. Manordas, 633.
Jekisondas v. Ranchoddas, 518.
Jeram v. Veerbai, 250.
Jetharam v. Hazarimal, 635.
Jhandu v. Tarif, 256.
Jhangalu Shivcharan v. Pancho Bai, 99.
Jhari v. Bijai, 231, 250.
Jhunka v. Nathu, 550.
Jhunparibahu v. Phoolchandra, 544.
Jiban v. Brojo Lal, 221.
Jiban Krishna v. Jitendra Nath, 473.
Jijabai v. Pathankhan, 963.
Jileba v. Parmesra, 605.
Jina Magan v. Bai Jethi, 520.
Jinnappa Mahadevappa v. Chimmava Krishnappa, 276.
Jitan Mahto v. Manji Rai, 358.
Jitendra Pratap v. Bhagwati Prasad, 118. 622, 628.
Jivabhai v. Vadilal, 397.
Jivaji v. Hanmant, 543, 544, 546, 566.
— v. Venkatesh Krishna, 344.
Jivubai v. Ningappa, 706, 773, 797.
Jiwan Singh v. Misri Lal, 236.
Jnanendranath Roy, in the goods of, 74.
Joala Prasad Singh v. Chanderjet Kuer, 412.
Jodha v. Darbari Lal, 188.
Jodhi Rai v. Basdeo Prasad, 485.
Jogendra v. Baladeb, 429.
— v. Fulkumari, 404, 435, 612.
— v. Phani, 203.
— Nath v. Charan Das, 494.
Jogendra Nath v. I.T. Commissioner, 486.
Jogesh Chandra v. Nrityakali, 548.
Jogeswar Narain v. Ram Chandra Dutt, 471, 475.
Jogi Das v. Ganga Ram, 375.
— Reddi v. Chinnabbi Reddi, 284.
Jogindar Singh v. The Punjab & Sind Bank Ltd., Amritsar, 367.
Joginder Singh v. Kehar Singh, 842, 898.
Joginder Singh v. Pushpa, 782.
Jogindra Kaur v. Shivcharan Singh, 697.
Jogul Kishore v. Shib Sahai, 397.
Joharmal v. Chetram, 288.
— v. Eknath, 369, 376.
Johnston v. Gopal Singh, 286, 308, 635.
Johurra v. Sreegopal, 611, 613.
Joitaram v. Ramkrishna, 439.
Jokhan v. Ram Deo, 312.
Joseph v. Ramamma, 780.
— Vadiar of Nazareth, In re., 73.
Joshy Assam, in the matter of, 578.
Jotiram Ekoba v. Ramachandra Trimbak, 405, 425.
Jowala v. Dharum, 73.
— Ram v. Hari, 222.
Joy Narain v. Girish Chunder, 423.
Joykisto v. Nittyanund, 289.
Joytara v. Ramhari, 612.
Judoo Nath v. Bussunt Coomar, 177, 185.
Jugal v. Anunda, 586.
Jugalkishore v. Wardhasa, 96, 102.
— v. Lakshmandas, 501.
Juggut Mohini v. Sokheemoney, 477, 498.
Jugmohandas v. Mangaldas, 270, 273, 274, 283, 297, 393, 396, 398.
Jugomohan v. Sarodamoyee, 435.
Jugul Kishore v. Jotendro Mohun, 250, 251.
Julam Missir v. Pradip Missir, 245, 247.
Jullessur v. Uggar, 116, 202.
Jumoona v. Bamasoondari, 255.
— Dassya v. Bamasoondari, 525.
Juttendromohun Tagore v. Ganendromohun Tagore, 62, 63.
Jwala Prasad v. Bhuda Ram, 299.
— — v. Maharajah Protap, 321.
— Singh v. Sardar, 514.
Jyotibati v. Lakshemeshwar, 297.
Jyotish Chandra v. Meera Guha, 709, 728, 780, 795.
Jyotish Chandra Narayan v. Rathika Chandra Narayan, 406.

K. Laxminarayan v. K. Padmanau, 1016.
K. Varadamma v. Kanchi Shankara Reddi, 535.
K. Venkatappayya v. K. Raghavayya, 273.
K. A. Samajam v. Commissioner of H.R. & C. Endowments Hyderabad, 478, 488.
K. S. Gopalachariar v. Krishnamachariar, 551.
Kachi v. Kachi, 621.
— Kalitana v. Kachi Yuva, 393, 623, 624, 627.
Kachra Khan v. Khant Ram, 102.
Kachrulal v. Nandlal, 81.
Kahandas v. Jivan, 549, 648.
— Narrandas in re., 403, 466.
Kailasanatha Mudaliar v. Parasakthi Vadivanni, 213, 508.

Kailash v. Kashi, 114.
— Nath v. Tulshi Ram, 309.
— Chandra v. Shri Devi, 98.
Kailashi v. Shanker, 290.
Kajikar v. Maru, 586.
Kalagouda v. Annagouda, 120, 556.
Kalamati v. Ratan Chand, 1020.
Kalandi v. Sadhu, 219.
Kalanka Devi Sansthan v. Maharashtra Revenue Tribunal, 486.
Kalawati Devi v. Dharam Prakash, 530.
Kalgavda v. Somappa, 557.
Kali Charan v. Bageshra, 256.
— — v. Piari, 260.
— Das v. Bijai Shanker, 562.
— Komul v. Uma Sunder, 558.
— Parshad v. Ram Charan, 398.
— Pershad v. Anund Roy, 61.
— Shankar v. Nawab Singh, 321, 337, 381, 382.
Kalliammal v. Andiammal, 902, 906.
Kalliammal v. Muthu Pillai, 129, 133, 139.
Kaliammal v. Sundarammal, 251, 431.
Kalian Rai v. Ram Chandra, 117.
— Singh v. Sanwal Singh, 447.
Kalianna Goundan v. Masayappa Goundan, 352.
Kaliaperumal v. Kuppayee Ammal, 247.
Kalidas v. Kanhaya Lal, 439.
— v. Krishan, 399, 400.
— v. Krishna, 87, 165.
— v. Nathu, 316, 317.
Kalika Prasad v. Jhenjho Kuer, 226.
Kalikrishna v. Makhan Lal, 497.
Kalilul v. Gobind, 385.
Kalimata Thakurani v. Jibandhan, 485, 487.
Kalimuthu v. Ammamuthu, 121, 128, 131, 132, 138.
Kalipada v. Purnabala, 308, 575.
— Chakraborti v. Palani Bala Devi, 252, 506.
Kalishanker Das v. Dhirendra Nath, 208, 209, 225.
Kalla Maistry v. Kanniammal, 1024.
Kallan v. Kallan, 715.
Kallapa v. Venkatesh, 324, 367, 375.
Kallu v. Faiyaz, 251.
— v. Kausilia, 744.
— Mal v. Barfo, 616.
Kally Churn v. Dukhee, 517.
— Prosonno Ghose v. Gocool Chunder, 564.
Kalu v. Barsu, 276.
— v. Kashibai, 593, 606.
Kalwa Devadattam v. Union of India, 389.
Kalyanadappa v. Chanbasappa, 571.
Kalyanasundaram v. Karuppa, 440.
Kalyan Singh v. Tej Kaur, 819.
Kamakshi v. Chakrapany, 275.
— v. Chidambara, 398.
Kamal Kishore v. Harihar, 95.
— Singh v. Sekhar Chand, 414.
Kamala v. Bhagirathi, 187.
— v. Rathnavelu, 599.
— Kant Gopalji v. Madhavji Meghji, 284, 285.
— Nair v. Narayana Nair, 821.
Kamala Sindhi v. Shama Sindhi, 798.
Kamalabala v. Jiban Krishna, 95, 103, 254.
Kamalakshmi Amma v. Bhaskara Menon, 962.
Kamalamma v. Laxminarayan, 964.
Kamalammal v. Venkatalakshmi, 54, 55, 166, 590, 591.
Kamalini v. Himangshu, 224.
Kamalnarayan v. R. Kishorelal, 482.
Kamalakshy v. Narayani, 63, 115.
Kamalaranjan Roy v. Secretary of State, 668.
Kamani Devi v. Sir Kameshwar Singh, 51, 509.
Kamarappa v. Saminatha, 395.
Kamawati v. Digbijai, 74, 75.
Kameswar Pershad v. Run Bahadur, 220, 225, 249.
Kameswara v. Veeracharlu, 303, 507, 519, 648.
Kameshwaramma v. Venkata Subba Row, 359.
Kameshwar Nath v. Raghubir, 286.
Kameswararao v. Vasudevrao, 923.
Kamikaprasad v. Srimati, 234.
Kamikhya v. Hari Churn, 232.
Kamini v. Chandra, 591, 606.
Kamla v. Ochhavlal, 900.
Kamla Devi v. Amar Nath, 724.
Kamla Devi v. Bachulal Gupta, 175, 217, 276.
— Prasad v. Lalji Prasad, 222.
— — v. Murli Manohar, 50, 195, 476, 509, 572.
Kamlabai v. Sheo Shankar, 244.
Kammathi v. Padmavathi, 80, 188.
Kammi v. Popur, 219.
Kamta Prasad v. Indomati, 639.
— — v. Om Wati, 816.
— — v. Parbati, 631.
Kamulammal v. Visvanathaswami, 109, 402.
Kanahi Ram v. Biddya Ram, 577.
Kanai Lal v. Kumar Purnendu, 463, 467.
Kanailal v. Pannasashi, 97, 111.
Kanaiyalal v. Dhanji, 80.
Kanakammal v. Ananthamathi, 143, 188, 198.
Kandarpamohan Goswami v. Akshaychandra Basu, 467, 498.
Kandasami v. Doraisami, 410.
— v. Kuppu, 361, 381, 382.
— v. Murugammal, 600.
— v. Somakanda, 301.
Kandasamy v. Velayutha, 323, 326, 328.
Kandhia Lal v. Muna Bibi, 306, 578, 580.
Kandulapati Kanakaratnam v. Kandulapati Narasimha Rao, 539.
Kanemar v. Krishna, 388.
Kanhai Lal v. Brij Lal, 237.
— Ram v. Amri, 182.
Kanhaiya Lal v. Gaura, 405.
— — v. Kishori Lal, 239.
— — v. Mt. Champa Devi, 118.
— — v. Mussammat Suga Kuer, 572.
— — v. Niranjan Lal, 378.
— — v. Raj Bahadur, 383.
Kanhaiya Singh v. Ram Kisto, 223.

Kanhaiyalal v. Harsingh, 588.
Kanhya Lal Missir v. Mst. Hira Bibi, 257, 453.
Kani Bewa v. Krushna, 256.
Kaniz v. Wali Ullah, 638.
Kanizak v. Monohur, 636.
Kanna v. Krishnaswami, 699.
Kanni Ammal v. Ammakannu, 114, 210.
Kantawa v. Sangangowda, 116, 553.
Kanshi Ram v. Lahori Ram, 300.
——v. Harnam Das, 311.
Kanteti v. Venkateswara, 488.
Kanti v. Al-i-Nabi, 406.
—Chunder v. Bisheswar, 302, 580.
Kanthimathinatha v. Vayyapuri, 904.
Kantilal v. Vimla, 507.
Kanuram v. Kashi Chandra, 245.
Kanwal Ram v. Himachal Pradesh, 766.
Kapur Kaur v. Kishan Singh, 1036.
Karali v. Ashutosh, 163.
Karamsi v. Karsandas, 568.
Karan Singh v. Bhup Singh, 365, 368.
——v. Mt. Tetar Kuer, 344.
Karapaya v. Mayandi, 729.
Karbasappa v. Kallava, 604.
Karhiley v. Hira, 116.
Karimuddin v. Gobind Krishna, 223.
Karm Chand v. Ram Labhaya, 301.
Karnail Singh v. Bhupinder Kaur, 699.
Karni v. Amru, 907.
Karoo Singh v. Ujagir Singh, 286.
Karpagathachi v. Nagarathinathachi, 112, 114, 223.
Karsandas v. Gangabai, 269, 279.
Kartar Singh v. Niranjan Singh, 123.
Kartic Chunder v. Saroda Sundari, 593.
Karunamoyee v. Maya Moyi, 245.
Karuppa v. Kumarasami, 402.
—Gounder v. Palaniammal, 273, 281, 852.
—Udayar v. Sellamuthu Udayar, 240.
Karuppai v. Sankaranarayanan, 89, 115, 188, 198, 272.
Karuppanna v. Bulokam, 401.
Karuppannan Ambalam v. Trumalai Ambalam, 498.
Karuppayee v. Ramaswami, 110.
Kasa v. Vinayak, 122, 123, 126.
Kashi, in the matter of, 512.
—Nath v. Bhagwan Das, 512.
—Nath v. Umapada, 98.
—Prasad v. Inda Kunwar, 210, 214.
Kashibai v. Moreshvar, 145.
—v. Tatya, 561.
Kashinath v. Bapurao, 301, 341.
—v. Chimnaji, 314, 318.
—Balkrishna v. Anant Murlidhar, 525.
—Prasad v. Dharamnath, 855.
Kashinathsa v. Narsingsa, 414.
Kashiram v. Bhaga, 292.
Kashirao v. Motiram, 217, 219.
Kasivisvanathan v. Somasundaram, 83, 525.
Kaslefsky v. Kaslefsky, 720
Kastoori Devi v. Chiranji Lal, 514, 819.
Kasturbai v. Shivajiram, 603.
Kasturi v. Chiranji Lal, 512.
—v. Panna Lal, 511, 512.
—v. Ponnammal, 525.
Kasturi v. S. V. Rao, 587.
Kasubai v. Bhagwan, 599.
—v. Chandrabhaga, 216, 223, 521.
Katama Natchiar v. The Rajah of Shivagunga, 91, 250, 269, 279, 281, 293, 294, 394, 625, 626, 628.
Kateeram v. Mussammat Gendhenee, 521.
Kathama Natchiar v. Dorasinga, 254.
Kathaperumal v. Rajendra, 303.
Katheesumma v. Beechu, 411.
Katki, v. Lakpati, 553.
Kattusheri v. Vallotil, 314.
Kaulesari v. Ambika Dutt, 420.
Kaulesra v. Jorai, 575, 577.
Kaur Singh v. Jaggar Singh, 842.
Kaura Devi v. Indra Devi, 513.
Kaushal Kishore v. Ram Dev, 360.
Kaushalya v. Wisakhi Ram, 717.
Kaushalya v. Lal Chand, 772.
Kaveri v. Parameswari, 611, 1035.
Kawal Nain v. Prabhulal, 412, 415.
Kayastha Pathshala, Allahabad v. Mt. Bhagwati Devi, 464.
Kedar Nath v. Radha Shyam, 96.
——v. Ratan Singh, 412.
——v. Suprava, 732.
Kedarnath v. Ganesh, 675.
—v. Khaitan Sons & Co. 316.
Kehar Singh v. Dewan Singh, 573.
Kehri Singh v. Chunni Lal, 383.
Keluni Dei v. Jagabandhu Naik, 96, 103.
Keluni Dei v. Kanhei Sahu, 579.
Kemp v. Kemp, 791.
Kempanna v. Shantarajiah, 909.
Kempiah v. Girigamma, 863, 904.
Kenaram v. Maniklal, 197.
Kenchava v. Girimallappa, 63, 138, 163.
Kershaw v. Kershaw, 768.
Kerwick v. Kerwick, 635.
Kery Kolitany v. Moneeram, 58.
Kesar Singh v. Secretary of State, 122, 126, 533.
——v. Santokh Singh, 306.
—Chand v. Uttam Chand, 380, 386.
Kesaree v. Samardhan, 109.
Kesava v. Govindan, 165.
Kesavan v. Narayanan, 419.
Kesavalu v. Nagarathnam, 519.
Keshao Rao v. Sadasheorao, 78, 82.
Keshav v. Govind, 542.
—v. Balaji, 581.
—v. Bai Gandhi, 520.
—v. Maruti, 212.
Keshavbhat v. Bhagirathibai, 487.
Kesho Prasad v. Sheo Pargash (44 All-19), 257.
Kesho Prasad v. Sheo Pargash, (51, I.A. 38), 258.
—Ram v. Musammat Ram Dulari, 382.
Keshri Lodhi v. Harprasad, 917.
Keshub Ram v. Nand Kishore, 420.
Kesserbai v. Hunsraj, 174, 473, 475, 476.
—v. Valab, 116, 143, 144, 151.
Keval v. Ganpati, 352.
Key v. Key, 795.
Khageswar v. Aduti Karnani, 697.
Khair Muhammad v. Umar, 258.

Khajeh Solehman Quadir v. Nawab Sir Salimullah, 449.
Khalilul Rahman v. Gobind Pershad, 379, 381, 382, 384, 387.
Khan Gul v. Lakha Singh, 668.
Khanna & Hari Raj v. Vishnu Datt, 360.
Kharag Narayan v. Janki Rai, 330, 338, 342.
Kharidar Kapra Co. v. Daya Kishan, 291.
Khatrani v. Tapeshwari, 98, 103.
Khatubai v. Mahomed, 619.
Khawani Singh v. Chet Ram, 229, 243.
Khazana Mal v. Jagan Nath, 298.
Khem Chand v. Narain Das, 310, 389.
Khemkor v. Umidshankar, 520.
Kherodemoney v. Doorgamoney, 451.
Khetramani v. Kashinath, 591.
Khetramoni Debya, In re., 244.
Khimji v. Morarji, 463.
—v. Narsi, 518.
Khodabhai v. Bahadhar, 116.
Khorshed v. Muncherji, 703.
Khubchand v. Maniklal, 518.
Khub Lal v. Ajodhya, 218, 219.
—Singh v. Ramji Lal, 568.
Khudiram v. Bonvari Lal, 521.
Khunni Lal v. Gobind Krishna, 72, 161, 239, 241, 427.
Khursedji v. Pestonji, 439, 440.
Khusalchand v. Mahadevgiri, 477.
Khushalchand v. Bai Mani, 50, 511, 512.
—v. Ibrahim, 629.
Khwaja Muhammad Khan v. Husaini Begam, 507.
Kidar Nath v. Mathu Mal, 233.
King v. King, 717, 720, 724.
—Emperor v. Sat Narain, 185.
Kiran Bala v. Bankim, 1020.
Kiranbala v. Sushil, 437.
Kirit Singh v. Chandra Kali Kuar, 387.
Kripal v. Sukurmoni, 109.
—Singh v. Balwant Singh, 388.
——v. Chandrawati Devi, 607.
Kirpo v. Bakhtawar Singh, 907, 908.
Kisanji v. Lakshmi, 604.
Kisan Dhondu v. Shevantabai, 138.
Kishan Chand v. Narinjan, 450.
—Dei v. Sheo Paltan, 508, 509.
—Gopal v. Suraj Mal, 288.
—Lal v. Muhammad Ishaq, 210.
——v. Ram Chandar, 315.
—Sarup v. Brijraj, 359, 360.
—Prasad v. Har Narain Singh, 300, 313, 315.
—Sahai v. Raghunath, 305, 380.
Kishni v. Ratna, 538, 548.
Kishore Sahu v. Snehaprabha Sahu, 737.
Kishori v. Moni Mohun, 404, 435, 437.
—Dubain v. Mundra Dubain, 472.
—Lal v. Chaltibai, 569, 570.
Kishun v. Tipan Pershad, 379, 381, 382, 384.
Knott v. Knott, 722, 723.
Kochukutti v. Bhavani Amma, 416, 417.
Kochunni v. Kuttanunni, 858, 860.
Kochuni v. State of Madras and Kerala, 860.
Kodu v. Lola, 510.
Koer Goolab Singh v. Kurun Singh, 153.
—Hasmat Rai v. Sunder Das, 338.
Kohli v. Kohli, 724.
Kojiyadu v. Lakshmi, 114, 116, 161.
Kollany v. Luchmee, 447, 473.
Konammal v. Annandana, 623, 628.
Kondai Row v. Swamulavaru, 167, 748.
Kondama Naicker v. Kandasami Goundar, 231.
Kondamma v. Seshamma, 245.
Kondamudi v. Myneni, 581, 584, 587, 974.
Kondapalli Vijayaratnam v. Mandapaka Sudarsana Rao, 444.
Kondappa v. Subba, 219.
Konerrav v. Gurrav, 297, 396.
Konwar Doorganath v. Ram Chunder, 481, 483, 489, 490, 491, 502.
Kooer Goolab Singh v. Rao Kurun Singh, 162, 228, 256.
Koonjbehari v. Premchand, 474.
Koonwar Bijoy v. Shama Soonduree, 349.
Korban Ally v. Sharoda, 78.
Kotarbasappa v. Chanverova, 473.
Kotayya v. Annapurnamma, 93.
Kotial v. Sitaramayya, 533.
Kothwale v. State of Maharashtra, 949.
Kottapalli Lakshminarayana v. Kanuparti Hanumantha Rao, 386.
Kotturuswami v. Veeravva, 528, 900, 901, 904.
Kounala v. Ram Huree, 349.
Koyarohana v. Subbaraya, 163.
Kripalani v. Kripalani, 751.
Krishan Das v. Nathu Ram, 310.
Krishen Lal v. Krishna, 760.
Krishendra v. Debendra, 406.
Krishna v. Baban, 245, 247.
—v. Balaram, 414.
—v. Krishnasami, 288, 298.
—v. Paramshri, 551, 552.
—v. Rama, 386.
—v. Sami, 166.
—v. Sarvagna Krishna, 623.
—v. Subbanna, 396.
—v. Vasudeo, 298.
—v. Venkatarama, 120, 122.
—Aiyar v. Balammal, 700.
—Ayyangar v. Nalla Perumal, 669.
——v. Venkatarama Ayyangar, 128.
—Bai v. Secretary of States, 203.
——v. Khangowda, 399.
—Beharilal v. Gulabchand, 238.
475.
—Chandra v. Ratan Ram, 579.
—Das v. Nathu Ram, 234, 302, 308, 309, 385.
—Dassi v. Akhil Chandra, 900, 901.
—Iyer v. Ramu Ammal, 598.
—Kant, In re., 963.
—Kumar v. Kayastha Pathshala. 284.
—Kumar v. Sheo Prasad, 56, 402.
—Lal v. Nandeshwar, 179, 405, 414, 424.
—Mudaliar v. Marimuthu Mudaliar & Ors., 106.
—Pillai v. Subhadra Amma, 776, 821.

Krishna Pratap Singh v. Prembada Kunwar, 222, 223.
— Rao v. Sundara Siva Rao, 444.
— Reddi v. Yaganti Reddi, 235, 237.
— Singh v. Mathura Ahir. 140, 167, 647.
Krishnabai v. Keshav, 143.
Krishnabihari v. Sarojinee, 197, 198.
Krishnadeb v. Jokhilal, 321.
Krishnagiri v. Shridhar, 493.
Krishnai v. Shripati, 189.
Krishnaji v. Hanmaraddi, 316.
— v. Moro Mahadev, 277, 278, 281, 283.
— v. Pandurang, 79.
— v. Sitaram, 324.
— v. Vithal, 368, 372, 373.
— Hanmant v. Raghavendra Keshav, 525.
— Lakshman v. Vithal, 381.
— Raghunath v. Rajaram Trimbak, 547.
Krishnamachari v. Dhanalakshmi, 425.
Krishnamachariar v. Krishnamachariar, 444.
— v. Ramabadran, 222.
Krishnamurti v. Chidambaram, 315.
Krishnamurthi v. Krishnamurthi, 560, 562, 563.
— Ayyar, In re., 667.
Krishnamurthy v. Dhruwaraj, 544, 546, 564.
— v. Sundaramurthy, 333.
— v. Suryakantamma, 604, 608.
Krishnan v. Rangachari, 278, 291.
Krishnan v. Sami, 358.
Krishnanand v. Raja Ram, 361.
— v. Raja Ram Singh, 298.
Krishnarajan v. Doraswamy, 302.
Krishnarao v. Benabai, 463.
Krishnarav v. Shankarrav, 541, 542.
Krishnasami v. Rajagopala, 274.
— v. Ramasami, 356, 377.
Krishnashet v. Hari, 299.
Krishnaswami v. Krishnaswami, 766.
Krishnaswami v. Pulukaruppa, 413.
— v. S. S. Chettiar, 88.
— v. Ramesh Chandra, 767, 771.
— Ayyar v. Ramachandra Rao, 475.
— Chettiar v. S. S. Chettiar, 189.
Krishnayya v. Pichamma, 121, 135.
— Rao v. Raja of Pittapur, 539.
— v. Muttusami, 401.
Krishtappa v. Gopal, 428.
Kristayya v. Narasimhan, 426.
Kristna Chandra v. Ratan Ram, 579.
Kristnamma v. Venkatasubbayya, 572.
Kristo Bhabiney v. Asutosh, 404, 435.
— Kissor v. Kadermoye, 575.
Kristoromoni v. Narendro, 457, 458, 465.
Krushna Behera v. Fakir Mahakud, 228.
K. S. R. M. Firm v. Subbiah, 416.
Kshetra Mohan v. E. P. T. Commissioner, 290.
Kshiteesh Chandra Chakrabarti v. Emperor, 512.
Kudomee v. Joteeram, 519.
Kulada v. Haripada, 76, 81, 356, 427.
— Prosad v. Kali Das, 482, 483.
Kulamani Hota v. Parbati Debi, 599.
Kulbhushan v. Raj Kumari, 1031.
Kuldip v. Ram Bujhawan, 378.
— Singh v. Karnail Singh, 893, 904.
Kulitalai Bank v. Nagamanickam, 292, 361.
Kuloda Prosad v. Jageshar, 602, 610.
Kumaji Sare Mal v. Kalwa Devadattam, 318, 358.
Kumara Assima v. Kumara Krishna, 462, 469.
Kumara Pillai v. Kunjulakshmi Amma, 887.
Kumarappa Chettiar v. Adaikkalam Chetty, 420.
— v. Saminatha, 359, 395.
Kumaraswami v. Rajamanikkam, 306, 327, 341, 429.
Kumbakonam Bank v. Shanmugam, 292.
— Mutual Benefit Fund Ltd. v. C. Ramaswami, 358.
Kundan v. Secretary of State, 111, 198, 210, 232.
— Lal v. Beni Pershad, 587.
Kundanbai v. Satya Narayen, 270.
Kunhali v. Keshava, 368, 371, 372.
Kunhamina v. Kunhambi, 457.
Kunj Bihari Lal v. Laltu Singh, 218.
Kunja Behari v. Gourhari, 345, 350.
— — v. Tarapada, 631.
— Lal v. Narsamba, 633.
— Sahu v. Bhagaban, 101.
Kunjammal v. Malayappa, 250, 254.
Kunjan v. Sidda, 318.
Kunji Thomman v. Meenakshi, 908.
Kunta Devi v. Sri Ram, 507.
Kunwar Bahadur v. Madho Prasad, 108
— Basant Singh v. Kunwar Brij Raj Saran Singh, 551.
— Rajendra Bahadur Singh v. Kunwar Roshan Singh, 187.
Kuppa v. Dorasami, 496.
— v. Singaravelu, 595.
Kuppan Chettiar v. Masa Goundan, 356, 416.
Kuppanna v. Peruma, 245.
Kuppusami Pillai v. Jayalakshmi Ammal, 461.
Kuppuswami v. Alagammal, 711.
— v. Manickasari, 189.
— v. Perumal, 312, 432
Kurrutulain v. Nuzbat-ud-Dowla, 451.
Kusa Paride v. Baishnab, 959, 962, 974.
Kushi Ram v. Mehr Chand, 301.
Kusum v. Satya, 74.
— Kumari v. Satya Ranjan, 548.
— Lata v. Kamta Prasad, 697, 724, 773, 776.
Kuta v. Kuta, 431.
Kuthaperumal v. The Secretary of State for India, 639.
Kuttan Unni v. Kochunni, 860.
Kutti v. Radakrishna, 202.
Kutumba Rao v. Sesharatnammba, 817.

Labha Mal v. Malak Ram, 580.
Lacchan Puranik v. Fulkunwar, 222.
Lachhan Kunwar v. Manorath Ram, 259.

Lachhan Singh v. Jhagar Singh, 120.
Lachhia v. Ram Shankar, 908.
Lachhman Das v. Chuhra Mal, 229.
Lachho Bibi v. Gopi Narain, 444.
Lachman v. Meena, 706, 707, 708.
— v. Sanwal, 429.
— Das v. Khunnu Lal, 357.
— Prasad v. Sarnam Singh, 308.
Lachmi v. Janki, 426.
— v. Lachho, 247.
— v. Kunja Lal & anr., 318.
— v. Musammut Parbati, 529.
— Narain v. Kishan, 341.
— — v. Musaddi Lal, 279.
Lachmin Kuar v. Debi Prasad, 283.
Ladu v. Gobardhan Das, 357.
Ladhi Bai v. Thakur Shiriji, 901.
Ladhi Bai v. Thakur Singh, 905.
Ladhuram v. Rukhmabai, 422.
Lahar Puri v. Puran Nath, 493.
Lajwanti v. Safa Chand, 259.
Lakhan Lal v. Richu Mian, 93.
Lakhmi Chand v. Anandi, 161, 445.
— — v. Gatto Bai, 553.
Lakhpati v. Rambodh, 256.
Lakhu Mal v. Bishen Das, 379.
Lakshimoni v. Nittyananda, 439.
Lakshmadu v. Ramudu & Ors., 364, 369, 374.
Lakshmakka v. Boggaramanna, 457.
Lakshman v. Gopal, 330, 429.
— v. Narayan, 423.
— v. Jamnabai, 283.
— v. Radha Bai, 221.
— v. Ramchandra, 275, 321, 396, 445.
— v. Satyabhamabai, 590, 610, 611, 612.
— Bhau v. Radhabai, 567.
— Singh v. Rup Kanwar, 548, 554.
Lakshmana v. Siva, 111.
— Iyer v. Ponnu Ammal, 139.
— Nadar v. R. Ramier, 452.
— Rau v. Lakshmi, 567.
Lakshmanan Chettiar v. Srinivasa Iyengar, 280, 334, 415.
Lakshmanaswami v. Raghavacharyulu, 361, 387.
Lakshmandas v. Karunakaran, 368.
Lakshmappa v. Ramaya, 512, 549, 556, 568, 571, 648.
Lakshmeyya v. Tirupathamma, 475.
Lakshmi v. Anantharama, 118, 208, 256.
— v. Dada, 144.
— v. Kalian Singh, 513.
— v. Subramanya, 447, 562.
— Ammal v. Narayanaswamy, 599.
— — v. Ramachandra, 95.
— — v. Ramaswamy, 732.
— Chand v. Gatto Bai, 527, 642.
— — v. Anandi, 432, 604.
Lakshmi Chand v. Sukhdevi, 909.
Lakshmi Perumallu v. Krishnavenamma, 96, 97, 100, 411.
Lakshmi Reddy v. Lakshmi Reddy, 395, 572.
Lakshmibai v. Ganpat, 272, 430.
— v. Jayram, 143, 146.
— v. Rajaji, 530.
— v. Ramchandra, 555.
— v. Sarasvatibai, 536.
— v. Shridhar, 577.
Lakshmibai v. Vishnu, 536.
Lakshminarasimhachari v. Agastheswaraswamivaru, 482.
Lakshminarasimhan v. Rajeswari, 560.
Lakshminarayana v. Dasu, 217.
— v. Valliammal, 465.
Lakshminarasayya v. Papayya, 220, 354.
Lakshmindrathirtha v. Raghavendra, 492.
Lakshmishankar, v. Vaijnath, 477, 479.
Lakshnamma v. Kondayya, 99.
Lal Achal Ram v. Kazim Husein, 568.
— Bahadur v. Ambika Prasad, 341, 377.
— — v. Kamleshar, 309.
— — v. Kanhaiya Lal, 272, 274, 277, 278, 286.
— — v. Sispal, 399.
— Hari Har Pratap Baksh Singh v. Raja Bajrang Bahadur Singh, 104.
— Hukum Tej Pratap Singh v. Collector of Etah, 524.
— Ram Singh v. Deputy Commissioner of Partabgarh, 273.
— Sheo Pertab v. Allahabad Bank, 203.
— Singh v. Deo Narain Singh, 376.
— — v. Pulandar Singh, 383.
Lala Baij Nath Prasad v. Ram Gopal Lachmi Narayan, 287.
— Bunseedhur v. Bindeseree, 306.
— Duni Chand v. Mt. Anar Kali, 118.
— Lachhman Das v. Commissioner of Income Tax, 291.
— Maheshwari Prasad v. Mst. Sahdei Kunwar, 608, 609.
— Muddun Gopal v. Khikhinda Koer, 277.
— Ramjewan v. Dal Koer, 466, 473, 475.
— Rup Chand v. Jambu Prasad, 640, 643.
— Soni Ram v. Kanhaiya Lal, 207.
— Suraj v. Gulab Chand, 383.
— — Prosad v. Golab Chand, 371.
Lalchand v. Sheogovind, 318.
— v. Sushila, 902.
Laldas v. Motibai, 261, 279, 346.
Lalit Mohan v. Dayamoyi, 250, 251.
— — v. Province of West Bengal, 158.
— — v. Shyamapada Das, 509.
— Mohun v. Chukkun Lal, 453, 465, 467, 475.
Lalita Devi v. Ishar Das, 446.
— Prasad v. Sarnam Singh, 571.
Lalitha Kumari v. Raja of Vizianagram, 560.
Lalithamma v. Kannan, 754, 769, 795.
Laljeet v. Rajcoomar, 398, 426.
Lalji v. Keshowji, 316.
Lall Behary v. Thacomoney, 631.
Lalla v. Koonwur, 587.
— Gunput v. Toorun, 303.
Lallu v. Tribhuwan, 352.
— Singh v. Gur Narain, 440, 442.
Lallubhai v. Cassibai, 103, 104.
— v. Mankuvarbai, 51, 53, 79, 144, 204, 457.
Lallubhai v. Nirmalaben, 817.
Lallubhoi v. Cassibai, 142, 143, 145, 146, 204.
Lalsingh v. Vithalsingh, 82, 212.

Lalta Prasad v. Dwarka Prasad, 256.
——v. Gajadhar Shukul, 354, 355.
—Prasad v. Ganga Sahai, 976.
——v. Sri Mahadeoji, 276, 414, 445.
Laltabai v. Krishnarao, 403.
Lang v. Lang, 709, 710.
Langa v. Jiba, 74.
Latabati Palrani v. Dhubani, 113.
Latchandhora v. Chinnavadu, 293.
Latchumammal v. Gangammal, 113.
Latta v. Avadh Naresh Singh, 306.
Latika Ghosh v. Nirmal Kumar, 799.
Lauder v. Lauder, 721.
Lawson v. Lawson, 723, 754.
Laximon Row v. Muller Row, 283.
Laxman v. Babai, 570.
—v. Bayabai, 80, 396, 426, 559.
—v. Gangabai, 81, 103, 128, 192.
—v. Vinayak, 318, 352.
—Singh v. Kesharbai, 771.
Laxmanrao v. Govindrao, 503.
Laxmava v. Rachappa, 580.
Laxmi v. Krishna, 1031, 1036.
Laxmi v. Parameshwari, 859.
Laxmibai v. Keshavrao, 561.
—v. Laxmichand, 752.
—Ganpatrao v. Radhabhai Krishnaji, 602.
—v. Pushpabai, 526, 642.
—v. Wamanrao, 599.
Laxmi Debi v. Surendra Kumar, 845.
—Narasingha Swami v. Patta Sahuani, 490.
—Narayan v. Banshi Lal, 312.
—Patti Rao v. Kristarao, 388.
—Prasad Singh v. Kunai Singh, 230.
Laxmi Devi v. Babulal, 735.
Laxminarsamma v. Ranganayakkamma, 322, 323.
Laxminarayan v. Dinker, 297.
Laxmipatirao v. Venkatesh, 552.
L. C. in G. v. M., 738.
Leadon v. Leadon, 768.
Leake v. Robinson, 463.
L. H. Sugar Factories v. Moti, 667.
Lee-Barber v. Reynolds, 938.
Leela v. R. A. Singh, 795.
Leela Devi v. Manoharlal, 812.
Lekh Ram v. Kishno, 557.
Lilabati v. Guruprosad, 314.
Lilavatibai v. Takappa, 303.
Limba v. Rama, 494.
Limbaji v. Rabi, 588.
Lindsay v. Lindsay, 812.
Lingangowda v. Basangowda, 314, 318.
—v. Tulsawa, 144.
Lingappa v. Esudasan, 75, 108, 595.
—Rayappa v. Kadappa Bapurao, 547, 628.
Lingayya v. Chengalammal, 550.
—v. Kanakamma, 602.
—Chetty v. Chengalammal, 648.
Lingbhat v. Parappa, 387.
Lingraj v. Ananta, 419.
Lissack v. Lissack, 725.
Llewellyn v. Llewellyn, 796.
Lloyd v. Webb, 467.
Lochun Singh v. Nemdharee Singh, 269.
Lord Advocate v. Stewart, 668.
Loganathan v. Naicker, 388.
Lovedon v. Lovedon, 728.
Lowji v. Mithabai, 125.
Lowendes v. Lowendes, 793.
Luchmeedhar Singh v. Ekbal Ali, 234.
Luchman v. Kalli Churn, 183.
—Dass v. Giridhar, 369, 379, 381, 382, 383.
Luhar Amritlal v. Doshi Jayantilal, 361, 376.
Lukai v. Niranjan, 900.
Lunkurn v. Birji, 556.
Lutchmanen v. Siva, 289, 316.

M. v. M., 736.
M. B. Fund Ltd. v. Devarajulu, 307.
M. N. Aryamurthi v. Subbaraya, 238, 445.
Ma Yait v. Mahomed, 207.
——v. Maung Chit, 75, 82.
Macdonald v. Lalla Shib, 349.
Macduff In re, 479.
Mackenzie v. Mackenzie, 717.
Madan Gopal v. Sati Prasad, 338.
—Lal v. Chiddu, 337, 338, 342.
——v. Gajendrapal, 337, 342.
——v. Kishan Singh, 313.
Madan Mohan v. Sarla Kohli, 699.
—Mohan Dhur v. Thakur Sree Sree Natai Gour Jew, 254.
——v. Rakhal Chandra, 219.
Madana Mohana v. Purushothama, 540, 542, 543.
Madanmohan v. Saha, 394.
Madanvali v. Padmanna, 599.
Madari v. Malki, 256.
Madavarayya v. Tirtha, 473.
Madhab Mohapatra v. Bhikari Panda, 235.
Madhavrao v. Raghavendrarao, 515.
—v. Balabhai 461, 467.
Madhavsang Haribhai v. Dipsang Jijibhai, 547.
Madhavram v. Dave, 143, 148, 204, 205.
Madhavrau v. Gangabai, 608.
Madhgouda Babaji v. Halappa Balappa, 314.
Madho Das v. Kanta Das, 493.
—Parshad v. Mehrban Singh, 321, 337, 338, 339, 352, 384, 425.
Madho Prasad v. Shakuntala, 830.
—Tewari v. Mata Din Tewari, 286.
Madhusudan v. Bhagwan, 313, 377.
—v. Iswari Dayi, 365.
—v. Ramji, 275.
Madhusudhan v. Gobind, 167, 475.
Madhwa v. Venkatramanjulu, 633.
Madivalappa Irappa v. Subbappa Shankreappa, 89, 251.
Maganlal v. Bai Dahi, 728, 741, 744, 774.
Maguni Padhano v. Lokananidhi, 267, 295.
Maha Deo v. Rambir Singh, 364, 369.
Maha Maya Dasee v. Abdur Rahim, 632.
Mahabalaya v. Timaya, 324, 325.
Mahabeer Persad v. Ramyad, 319.
Mahabir v. Siri Narayan, 386.
—v. Sukh Ram, 380.
—Pershad v. Moheshwar Nath, 370, 372.

Mahabir Prasad v. Amla Prasad, 290, 304, 310.
——v. Basdeo Singh, 368, 369, 387.
——v. Raj Bahadur Singh, 79, 80, 108.
——Paddar v. Ram Tahal Mandar, 335.
Mahabir Singh In re., 939.
Mahableshwar v. Durgabai, 82, 539.
—v. Ramchandra, 585.
—v. Subramanya, 557.
Mahadei v. Baldeo, 250.
Mahadeo v. Bensraji, 908.
—v. Bissessar, 307.
—v. Chandrabhagabai, 510.
—v. Rameshwar, 560, 566.
—v. Vyankammabai, 82.
—Prasad v. Mata Prasad, 237.
——v. Musammat Dhanraj, 222.
——Singh v. Karia Bharti, 488, 491.
Mahadev v. Govind, 423.
—v. Lakshman, 398.
—Krishna, In re, 587.
Mahadeva v. Commissioner, H.R.E., 502.
Mahadevappa v. Basagawada, 113.
Mahadevappa v. Chanabasappa, 566.
Mahadoba Devasthan v. Mahadoba, 486.
Mahadu v. Bayaji, 556.
—v. Gajarabai, 95, 100.
—Kashiba v. Gajarabai, 301.
Mahalakshamma v. Machamma, 218.
Mahalakshmamma v. Venkataratnamma, 615.
—v. Surya Narayana, 189, 430.
Mahalaxmiamma v. Radhakrishna Rao, 277, 282, 816.
Mahalu Shidappa v. Shankar Dadu, 229.
Mahanath Ramji v. Lachhu, 493.
Maha Nirvani v. Bindeshri Prasad, 358.
Mahani Dasi v. Pareshnath Thakur, 481.
Mahant Basant v. Hem Singh, 75.
—Ram Charan Das v. Naurangi Lal, 491.
——Sarup Das v. Lakshmi Ojha, 491.
Mahanth Kesho Das v. Amar Dasji, 488.
—Ramdhan Puri v. Mst. Parbati Kuer, 491.
—Jai Krishna v. Bhukhal, 489.
Maharaj Singh v. Balwant Singh, 363, 368, 369.
Maharaja Jagadindra Nath Roy v. Hemanta Kumari Debi, 486.
—Kesho Prasad v. Chandrika, 231.
—Of Benares v. Ramkumar, 386.
——Bobbili v. Venkataramanjulu, 322, 325, 327.
————v. Zamindar of Chundi, 298.
——Kolhapur v. Sundaram, 71, 109, 110, 549, 645, 647, 648.
Maharajadhiraj Kameshwar Singh Bahadur v. Beni Madho Singh, 251.
Maharajah Pertab Narain v. Subhao Kooer, 448.
Maharana Shri Ranmalsingji v. Vadilal, 581.
Maharana Shri Ranmalsangji v. Kundan Kunwar, 609.
Maharani Hemantha Kumari v. Gauri Shankar Tewari, 482.
Mahashoya v. Srimati Krishna, 647.
Mahatabsingh v. Badansingh, 621.
Mahendra Nanavaty v. Susila Nanavaty, 730, 740, 741, 782, 783.
Mahendra Singh v. Attar Singh, 320.
Mahendrasinghji v. Ishwarsinghji, 622.
Mahdo v. Mehrban, 416.
Mahesh v. Dirgpal, 609.
Maheshar v. Ratan Singh, 225.
Maheshwar v. Kishun, 384.
Mahibub Usman v. Vithal, 231.
Mahila Gumano v. Ram Dayal, 518.
Mahim Chandra v. Hara Kumari, 470, 482.
Mahipat Misir v. Ganpat Sah, 101.
Mahna Singh v. Thaman Singh, 183.
Mahomed Buksh v. Hooseini Bibi, 439.
—Haji Abu v. Khatubai, 619.
—Jusab v. Haji Adam, 619.
—Mozuffer v. Kishori Mohun, 637.
—Shumsool v. Shewukram, 235, 447, 454, 473, 476.
—Sidick v. Haji Ahmed, 617, 618.
—Yusuf v. Hargovandas, 451.
Mailathi v. Subbaraya, 81.
Majumdar Hiralal v. Narsilal, 631.
Makhan v. Gayan, 219, 222, 223.
—Lall v. Sushama Rani, 157, 346.
Makhana Katani v. Thaneshwar, 513.
Makhanlal v. Harnarain, 289, 337.
Makundi v. Sarabsukh, 303.
Malak Chand v. Hira Lal, 284, 293, 337, 386.
Malgauda v. Babaji, 536.
Mali Bewa v. Dadhi Das, 907.
Malik Md. Ibrahim v. Harakh, 303.
—Saheb v. Malik Arjunappa, 228.
Malkan Rani v. Krishna Kumar, 773.
Malla v. Muhammad Sharif, 582.
—Reddi v. Padmamma, 573.
—Reddy v. Subbama, 507, 599.
Mallakarjuniah v. Kanniah, 286.
Mallappa v. Anant Balkrishna, 579.
—v. Gangava, 550.
—v. Hanmappa, 539.
—v. Mallava, 818.
—v. Neelawwa, 698, 711.
—v. Shivappa, 915.
—Girimallapa v. R. Yellappagouda, 286.
Mallawa v. Shiddappa, 598.
Mallesam v. Jugala, 362.
Mallesappa v. Mallappa, 277.
—Bandeppa v. Desai Mallappa, 215.
Mallikarjungowda-Rudragowda v. Venkawa Ramachandrappa, 251.
Malojirao v. Tarabai, 526.
Mami v. Subbarayar, 534.
Manabai v. Chandanbai, 97, 605.
Man Bhari v. Naunidh, 439.
—Singh v. Gaini, 163.
——v. Nowlakhbati, 249.
Manathunainatha v. Sundaralingam, 488, 494.
Manathunainatha Desikar v. Gopala Chettiyar & Ors., 498.
Manbhari v. Bishun, 98.
Mancharam v. Pranshankar, 494, 495, 497.
Mancharji v. Kongseoo, 637.
Manchharam v. Dattu, 405.
Manda v. Pandurang, 103.

Mandliprasad v. Ramcharanlal, 399, 413, 414.
Manek Chand v. Jagat Settani, 642.
Mangal Singh v. Harkesh, 282.
Mangala v. Dinanath, 613.
Mangaldas v. Abdul, 617, 618, 619.
— v. Krishnabai, 449.
— v. Tribhuvan Das, 463.
Mangamma v. Doraiyya, 474.
Mangat v. Bharto, 605.
Mangibai v. Suganchand, 526.
Mangilal v. Barkatulla, 231.
— v. I.T. Commissioner, 291.
Mangla Balmukund v. Nathiya, 904.
Manglabai v. Deorao, 714.
Mango v. Premchand, 699.
Manharanlal v. Jagjivanlal, 297.
Mani Sahoo v. Lokanath, 318.
Mania v. Dep-Director. consolidation, 312.
Manibhai v. Shankerlal, 272.
Manick Chand v. Jagat Settani, 122, 137.
Manickchand v. Bhagwandas, 109.
Manicka v. Arunachala, 95.
— Mudaliar v. Thangavelu, 282.
Manickam v. Ramalinga, 207.
Manigavri v. Narondas, 443.
Manika v. Ellappa, 613.
Manikbai v. Gokuldas, 557.
Manikka v. Balagopalakrishna, 492.
Maniklal v. Kisni, 223.
— v. Mancherji, 451.
Manikrao v. Deorao, 297.
Manikayala v. Narasimhaswami, 327.
Manikyamala v. Nanda Kumar, 456, 457, 541, 542.
Manilal v. Bai Rewa, 179, 191, 192, 204.
— v. Bai Tara, 614.
— v. Hurgovan, in re., 587.
— v. Kikabhai, 319.
— v. Sushila, 603.
Maniruddin v. Aminuddin, 218.
Manishankar v. Bai Muli, 580.
Manjamma v. Padmanabhayya, 463.
— v. Seshagirirao, 553.
Manjanatha v. Narayana, 407.
Manjapa v. Lakshmi, 82.
Manjaya v. Sheshgiri, 243.
— v. Shanmuga, 322, 325, 326.
Manki v. Kundan, 113.
Manmohini v. Balak Chandra, 593.
Manna Lal v. Karu Singh, 305, 321, 337.
Mannalal v. Ishwariprasad, 116.
Manni Lal v. Shiama, 513.
Manning v. Manning, 787.
Manohar v. Lakhmiram, 480, 486, 499, 500.
— Lal v. Banarsi Das, 527, 642, 643.
— Mukherji v. Bhupendranath Mukherji, 449, 457, 498.
Manoharlal v. Bhuri Bai, 98.
Manorama Bai v. Rama Bai, 431.
— v. Kali Charan, 470, 477, 479.
Mansaram Das v. Ahmad, 586.
Mansha v. Jiwan, 600.
Manu Biswal v. Lata Biswalani, 312.
Mantorabai v. Paretanbai, 871, 944.
Marappa v. Rangasami, 336.
Maya Ram v. Satnam Singh, 274.
Mareyya v. Ramalakshmi, 551.
Marjoram v. Marjoram, 709.
Martand v. Radhabai, 420, 421.
— Rao v. Malhar Rao, 622.
Martindale, in re., 777.
Maru v. Hanso, 244.
Marudakkal v. Arumugha, 900, 904.
Marudamuthu v. Srinivasa, 228.
Marudanayagam v. Sola Pillai, 294.
Marudhappan v. Niraikulathan, 389.
Marudayi v. Doraisami, 87, 89, 108, 430.
Marutamuthu v. Kadir Badsha, 299.
Maruthappan v. Niraikulathan, 354.
Maruti v. Babaji, 372, 373.
— v. Ganu, 541.
— v. Rama, 429.
Masit Ullah v. Damodar Prasad, 308, 310, 357, 358, 385.
Maslin v. Maslin, 790.
Mata Badal v. Bijay Bahadur, 163.
— Din v. Gaya Din, 370, 371.
— — v. Ram Lakhan, 386.
— Prasad v. Nageshar Sahai, 242, 251, 252, 256, 257.
Matangini v. Jogendra, 598.
Mathukumalli Ramayya v. Uppalapati Lakshmayya, 240, 241, 243.
Mathura v. Esu, 553.
— v. Rajkumar, 337, 358, 379.
— Das v. Bhikhan Mal, 447.
— Nath v. Lakhi Narain, 449.
Matru Mal v. Mehri Kunwar, 188, 203, 256, 476.
Matungini v. Ram Rutton, 112.
Mauji Lal v. Jagnandan Ram, 229.
Maya Debi v. Rajlakshmi, 355.
Mayfair Property Co., In re., 668.
Mayna Bai v. Uttaram, 199.
Mayor of Lyons v. Adv. Gen. of Bengal, 498.
McDowell & Co., v. Ragava, 387.
McLaughlin v. Westgarth, 820.
McPherson v. McPherson, 777, 778.
Md. Abdul Samad v. Girdhari Lal, 605.
— Sadik v. Khedan Lall, 314.
Meacher v. Meacher, 717, 724.
Medai Dalavoi v. Nainar Tevan, 234, 310.
Medikenduri v. Venkatayya, 305.
Medni Prasad v. Nand Keshwar, 323.
Meenakshi v. Appakutti. 109.
— v. Muniandi, 199, 200.
— v. Rama Aiyar, 606.
— v. Ranga, 581.
— v. Somasundaram, 494.
— Ammal v. Murugayya Mooppanar, 199.
— — v. Muthukrishna P.S., 616, 808.
Meganatha v. Susheela, 756, 758.
Megh Raj v. Relu, 273.
Meguh Raj v. Ram Khelawan, 256.
Mehtab Singh v. Anrik Singh, 476.
Mela Mal v. Gori, 298, 318.
Melagiriappa v. Lalithamma, 261.
Melappa v. Guramma, 538, 559.
Menokabala v. Panchanan, 1033.
Merla Ramanna v. Chelikani Jagannadha Rao, 416.
Mesraw v. Girjanundan, 255.
Metharam v. Rewachand, 283.
Meyyappa v. I.T. Commissioner, 410.

Mian Karim Bakhsh v. Dargah Pir, 380.
Milapchand v. Gulabchand, 641.
Miller v. Minister of Pensions, 728.
—v. Runga Nath, 301, 303.
Millward v. Millward & Andrews, 776.
Milne v. Milne & Fowler, 776.
Minakshi v. Chinnappa, 610.
—v. Ramananda, 549.
—v. Virappa, 446.
Minakshi v. Immudi, 368, 370, 372.
Minarani v. Dasarath, 806, 808.
Mir Sarwarjan v. Fakhruddin, 582.
Mirabivi v. Vellayanna, 83.
Mirzo Mal v. Rameshar, 291.
Missir R.A. v. Raghunath, 900.
Mitar Sen Singh v. Maqbul Hasan Khan, 161.
Mithibai v. Meherbai, 476.
Mitra v. Mt. Gurubari, 208.
Mitta v. Neerunjun, 494.
—Kunth v. Neerunjun, 394.
Modhoo Dyal Singh v. Golbur Singh, 338.
Modhu Sudan v. Rooke, 231, 232.
Mogalappa v. Vithoba, 399.
Mohan Lal v. Bala Prasad, 365.
——v. Niranjan Das, 476.
——v. Mohan Bai, 786.
——v. Mst. Bhudevi, 605.
——v. Ram Dayal, 419.
Mohan Rani v. Mohan Lal, 818.
Mohan Rao v. Satyanarayana, 277.
——v. Shanti Devi, 698.
—Lalji v. Gordhan Lalji, 494.
——v. Madhusudan, 494, 497.
Mohandas v. Krishnabai, 133.
Mohani Dasi v. Pareshnath Thakur, 481.
Mohanlal v. Jagjiwan, 231.
Mohan Singh v. Pasupatinath, 547.
Mohanmurari v. Kusumkumari, 760.
Mohant Gadadhar v. Ghana Shyam Das, 388.
Mohanund v. Nafur, 587.
Mohar Singh v. Het Singh, 484.
Mohari v. Chukli, 93, 899, 903.
Mohari Mahto v. Mokaram Mahto, 75.
Mohendra Nath v. Kali Proshad, 639.
——v. Shamsunnessa, 240, 251.
Mohendrololl v. Rookiney Dabee, 530.
Mohesh v. Taruck, 525.
—Chunder v. Chunder Mohun, 162.
——v. Koylash Chunder, 498.
——v. Satrughan, 628.
Mohib Ali Khan v. Baldeo Prasad, 305.
Mohieshwara v. Durgamba, 609.
Mohim Chunder v. Kashi Kant, 182.
Mohima Chunder v. Durga Monee, 185.
Mohindar Kaur v. Major Singh, 684.
——v. Narindar Singh, 728.
Mohinder Singh v. Balbir Kaur, 475.
Mohinee Mohan Basu v. Rashbihari Ghos, 178, 210.
Mohun Pershad v. Kishen, 195.
Moithiyan v. Ayissa, 439.
Mokhada v. Nundo Lall, 593.
Mokka Kone v. Ammakutti Ammal, 71.
Mokoond v. Nobodip, 578.
Mokoondo Lall v. Gonesh Chunder, 406, 467, 469.
Mondakini v. Adinath, 538, 542.
—Dasi v. Adinath Dey, 529.
Moni Dei v. Hadibandhu, 93.
Monika Das Gupta v. Promode Kumar, 770.
Moniram v. Keri Kolitani, 48, 58, 111, 161, 207, 208, 604.
Monmohan Haldev v. Dibhendra, 486.
Monomohini Dasi v. Hari Prasad, 576.
Moolchand v. Chahta Devi, 165.
Moolji v. Gokuldas, 285.
Moonshee Buzloor Ruheem v. Shumsoonissa Begum, 696.
Moosa v. Haji Abdul, 619.
Moosabhai v. Yacoobbhai, 440.
Mootia v. Uppon, 557.
Morarji v. Administrator-General, 73.
—v. Nenbai, 479.
Moreno v. Moreno, 791, 795.
Morgan v. Morgan & Porter, 784.
Morice v. The Bishop of Durham, 479.
Moro Narayan v. Balaji, 567.
—Vishvanath v. Ganesh, 264, 265, 284, 429.
Morrison v. Verschayle, 288.
Moss v. Moss, 740.
Mothey Anja Ratna v. Narayana Rao, 108, 594.
Mothoormohun v. Soorendro, 574.
Moti v. Lachman, 559.
—v. Lalldas, 227, 243.
—Das v. S. P. Sahi, 478, 487.
Motilal v. Advocate-General of Bombay, 474, 476.
—v. Bai Chanchal, 521.
Motiram v. Lalchand, 313, 315.
Motivahu v. Mamubai, 448, 466, 467, 470.
—v. Purshotum, 635.
Mouji Lal v. Chandrabai, 507, 518.
Moulvi Sayyued v. Mussumat Bebee, 635.
Mst. Anuragi Kuer v. Parmanand Pathak, 494, 497.
—Bhagwani v. Mohan Singh, 283, 419.
—Bhagwati v. Jagadam, 240.
—Bhikuo Koer v. Chamela Koer, 575.
—Bholi Bai v. Dwarka Das, 394, 395, 396.
—Bhoobun Moyee v. Ram Kishore, 540, 542.
—Brij Kunwar v. Rai Bahadur Pandit Sankata Prasad, 273, 285.
—Cheetha v. Miheen Lall, 283.
—Draupadi v. Vikram, 545, 566.
—Ganga v. Ghasita, 184.
—Gigi v. Mst. Panna, 642.
—Golab Koonwur v. Collector of Benares, 592.
—Gulab v. Devilal, 642, 644.
—Haidri v. Narindra, 596.
—Hardev v. Bhagwan Singh, 237, 238.
—Indi v. Ghania, 511, 577.
—Jind Kaur v. Indar Singh, 163.
—Jio v. Mst. Rukman, 471.
—Jiwani v. Mula Ram, 511.
—Kesarbai v. Indarsingh, 83, 527.
—Lakhpati v. Bisram, 236.
——v. Parmeshwar, 279.
—Mauli v. Brij Lal & Ors., 298.
—Menda Kuar v. Mirtunjai Bakhsh, 421.
—Muluka v. Pateshar, 259.

—Nanomi Babuasin v. Modhun Mohun, 368, 370-373, 384.
Mst. Nozi v. Mohanlal, 439.
—Parbati Kunwar v. Chandrapal Kunwar, 627.
—Phool Kuer v. Mst. Pem Kuer, 240.
—Ram Dei v. Mst. Gyarse, 108, 271.
——Kaur v. Atma Singh, 467, 476.
—Rupa v. Mst. Srivabati, 591.
—Satwati v. Kali Shanker, 610.
—Seethabai v. Hari, 258.
—Sirthaji v. Algu Upada, 267, 270.
—Sujan Devi v. Jagiri Mal, 143.
Mst. Sundar v. Parbati, 112.
—Suraj v. Attar, 74.
—Tara v. Sarup, 611.
—Tejo v. Chhape Ram, 465.
—Thakro v. Ganga Pershad, 635.
—Thakur Deyhee v. Rai Baluk Ram, 174, 202, 509.
—Tulsha v. Lachhman Prasad, 218.
—Uttam v. Dina Nath, 451.
—Viranwali v. Kundal Lal, 256.
Mt. Barro v. Narain Prasad, 208.
—Champa v. Official Receiver Karachi, 288, 335, 611, 613.
—Charjo v. Dina Nath, 189.
—Dan Kuer v. Mt. Sarla Devi, 611.
—Daulat Kaur v. Bishundeo Singh, 109.
—Dilraj Kuari v. Rikheswar Ram Dube, 165.
—Gaya Devi v. Mt. Tulsha Devi, 112.
—Gigi v. Mt. Panna, 551.
—Lado v. Banarsi Das, 641.
—Mallan v. Paramatma Das, 219.
—Munnibibi v. Radhay Shiam, 610.
—Nandan v. Wazira, 257.
—Prabhavati Kuer v. Ram Saran Lal, 612.
—Ram Dei v. Gyorsi, 343.
——Labhai v. Durga Das, 577.
—Ramjhari Kuer v. Sheonarain Singh, 251.
—Rajendra Bati v. Mungalal, 96.
—Rameshwar Kuer v. Sheo Lal Upadheya, 465.
—Rajpali Kunwar v. Surju Rai, 118, 241.
—Sahodra v. Ram Babu, 118.
—Sattan v. Janki, 118.
—Sham Devi v. Mohan Lal, 602.
—Shibbi v. Jodh Singh, 616.
—Thakoor Deyhee v. Baluk Ram, 50.
—Titli v. Alfred Jones, 738.
—Widyavati v. Mt. Rahmat Bi, 257.
Muchoo v. Arzoon, 578.
Mudaliar v. Nataraja, 303.
Muddun Gopal v. Ram Buksh, 269, 270, 273.
—Lal v. Komul Bibee, 480.
——v. Sreemutty Komul Bibee, 483.
—Thakoor v. Kantoo Lal, 306, 368, 371.
Mudge v. Mudge, 787.
Mudigowda v. Ramchandra, 285, 411.
Mudit v. Ranglal, 296, 301, 303.
Muhammad v. Brij Bihari, 226, 228.
—Allahdad v. Muhammad Ismail, 523.
—v. Commissioner of Income-tax, 667.
—Husain Khan v. Babu Kishva Nandan Sahai, 89, 267, 271.
—Ibrahim v. Shaikh Ibrahim, 84.
Muhammad Khan v. Ramratan, 286.
—v. Mithu Lal, 342, 343.
—v. Radhe Ram, 296.
—Mumtaz v. Zubaida Jain, 439.
—Said v. Kunwar Darshan, 227, 229.
Mukabasappa v. Hamantappa, 226.
Mukan Kunwar v. Ajeet Chand, 800.
——v. Ajit Singh, 800.
Mukhtiar Kaur v. Kartar Kaur, 900, 903.
Mukta Bai v. Kamalakshi, 1023, 1026.
Mukti Prokash v. Sm. Iswari, 273.
Mukund v. Balkrishna, 331, 415.
—Singh v. Wazirruddin, 341.
Mukundji Maharaj v. Persotam Lalji, 489.
Mulam Chand v. Kanchhendillal, 277, 410, 411.
Mulbai in the goods of, 618.
Mulchand v. Bhudhai, 512.
Mulgund Co-operative Credit Society v. Shidlingappa Iswarappa, 318.
Mulji v. Bai Ujam, 603.
—v. Cursandas, 144.
Mulla v. Partab, 605.
Mulraz v. Chalekany, 446.
Mulukh Raj v. Dhanabanta, 586.
Mummareddi v. Pitti Durairaja, 230, 234, 244, 257.
Mummery v. Mummery, 712, 790.
Muneswari v. Jugal Mohini, 352, 413.
Munga Kuer v. Domari, 227, 228, 236, 237.
Munia v. Puran, 185.
Muniratnam Naidu v. Shantamma, 799.
Munishwar Datt v. Indra Kumari, 747.
Muniswamappa v. Eramma, 818.
Muniswami v. Kutti, 355.
Muniswamy v. Ramamurti, 362.
Muniyandia v. Muthusami, 387.
Munnalal v. Rajkumar, 84, 640, 841, 899, 902, 905, 917.
Munneswari v. Jugal Mohini, 352.
Munni Lal v. Phula, 179.
Munni Lal v. Shiama, 648.
Munshi Lal v. Shiv Devi, 219.
Muragappa v. Nagappa, 556.
Murari v. Mukund, 419.
Murari v. Tayana, 578, 583.
Murari Lal v. Kundan Lal, 568.
Murarji v. Parvatibai, 162.
Murarrao v. Sitaram, 325.
Murgeppa v. Kalawa, 538.
Murli v. Ghammar, 308.
Murphy v. Murphy, 769.
Murtaza Khan v. Muhomed Yasin, 622.
Muruga, In re, 576.
Murugayi v. Viramakali, 605.
Murugesam v. Manickavasaka, 307, 491.
Musadee Mahomed v. Meerza Ally, 635.
Musammat Har Naraini Kunwar v. Sajjan Pal Singh & Ors., 207.
—Bhagwati v. Jagadam, 207, 240.
—Lorandi v. Mst. Nihal Devi, 88.
—Surai v. Attar, 112.
Mussadi v. Mst. Chando, 111.
Mussammutta Doorga Bibee v. Janki, 121.

Musst. Budha Kuer v. Musst. Sohodra Kuer, 164.
Mutasaddi Lal v. Kundal Lal, 529, 530, 531, 541.
Muteeram v. Gopal, 218.
Muthala v. Sankarappa, 572, 573.
Muthalammal v. Veeraraghavalu, 615.
Muthammal v. Subramaniaswamy Devasthanam, 162.
Muthappudayan v. Ammani, 56, 172, 194.
Muthia v. Appala, 330.
Muthu v. Narayanan, 508.
— Ramakrishna v. Marimuthu, 182.
Muthukaruppa v. Sellathammal, 185.
Muthukumara v. Anthony, 443.
— Sathapathiar v. Sivanarayana Pillai, 327.
Muthusami v. Masilamani, 513, 647, 649, 672.
— v. Meenammal, 162, 165.
— v. Muthukumarasami, 128, 129, 137.
— v. Nallakulantha, 420.
— v. Pulavaratal, 532, 535.
— v. Simambedu, 121, 122, 129.
Muthusamier v. Sreemethanithi, 489.
Muthuswami Thevar v. Chidambara Thevar, 550.
Muthuvayyangar v. Tiruvengadammal 555.
Muthuveeru v. Vythilinga, 207, 228.
Muthyalareddy v. Venkatareddy, 417.
Mutsaddi Lal v. Sakhir Chand, 298, 299.
Muttayan v. Zamindar of Sivagri, 354.
— Chettiar v. Sangili, 368.
Muttia v. Virammal, 610.
Muttu v. Dorasinga, 114, 115, 202.
Muttukannu v. Paramasami, 553.
Muttusami v. Muttukumarasami, 137.
Muttuswamy Jagavera v. Vencataswara, 595.
Muttuvaduganadha v. Periasami, 115, 626, 627.
Myna Boyee v. Ootaram, 74, 199.

Nabakishore v. Upendra Kishore, 212.
Nabakumar v. Bhabasundari, 224.
Nabi Shirazi v. Province of Bengal, 501.
Nabisha Begum v. Alumiya Thaver, 398.
Nachiappa v. Muthukaruppan, 287.
— v. Rangasami, 120.
Nachimuthu Goundan v. Balasubramania Goundan, 375.
Nadiammai Achi v. Mariappa, 420.
Nafar Chandra v. Ratan, 469.
Nagabhushanam v. Sheshammagaru, 525.
Nagalinga v. Subbiramaniya, 398.
— Konar v. Madathi, 579.
Nagalingam v. Ramchandra, 269, 273.
Nagalutchmee v. Gopoo, 91, 438, 445.
Nagamma v. Virabhadra, 604.
Nagammal v. Sankarappa, 525.
Naganna v. Lachmi Bai, 753.
Nagappa v. Mukumbe, 96, 97, 100, 102.
— v. Subramanian, 398, 514.
Nagarajamma v. State Bank of India, 518, 635.
Nagarathinathachi v. Karapagathachi, 113.
Nagaratnamba v. Kunuku Ramayya, 276.
Nagarmal v. Bajranglal, 312.
Nagayasami v. Kochadai, 286, 569.
Nagayya v. Chenganna, 307.
Nagendra v. Amar Chandra, 298.
— v. Pyari Mohan, 330.
Nagendra Prasad v. Kempananjamma, 103.
Nagendrabala Dasee v. Panchanan Mourie, 252.
Nagendramma v. Ramakotayya, 599, 607.
Nagendranath v. Hemanta Kumari, 304.
Nagesh v. Gururao, 198.
Nageshar v. Ganesha, 419.
— Bakhsh Singh v. Ganesha, 284.
Nagi v. Rajkunwar, 71, 75.
Nagindas v. Bachoo, 556.
— v. Bhimrao, 581.
— v. Mahomed, 304, 305.
Nago v. Sukya, 548, 553.
Nahalchand v. Hemchand, 143, 145, 148.
Naim Singh v. Tikam Singh, 286, 291.
Najju Khan v. Imtiaz-ud-din, 293.
Nakchhed Singh v. Bijai Bahadur, 163.
Nakshetramali Dei v. Brajasunder Das, 448.
Nalinaksha v. Rajanikant, 75, 152, 513.
Nallakaruppan v. Commissioner, H.R. & C. Endowments, 501.
Nallathangal v. Nainan Ambalam, 520.
Nallaya v. Angaiyammal, 243.
Nallayappa v. Ambalayana, 489.
Nalluri v. Kamepalli, 526.
Naman Lal v. Har Bhagvan, 234, 235.
Namdeo v. Mumtaz Begum, 327.
Nammalwar v. Thayarammal, 186.
Nana v. Appa, 324.
— v. Ramchandra, 108, 141, 400.
— Narian v. Huree Punth, 269.
Nanabhai v. Achratbai, 271, 273, 285.
— v. Janardhan, 511, 512, 575.
— v. Nathabhai, 426.
Nanak Chand v. Banarsi Das, 311.
Nanak Chand v. Chandra Kishori, 994.
Nanalal v. Harlochand, 479.
Nanchand v. Bapusaheb, 631.
Nand Kishore v. Ahmad Atra, 639.
— — v. Madan Lal, 359.
— Kumar Dutt v. Ganesh Das, 499.
— Lal v. Umrai, 367, 380.
— Ram v. Mangal, 275.
— — v. Bhupal Singh, 307.
— Rani v. Krishna Sahai, 217, 394.
Nanda Krishna v. Bhupendra, 560.
Nanda Lal v. Dhirendra Nath, 631.
Nandan Prasad v. Abdul Aziz, 583.
Nandappa v. Shidgouda, 566.
Nandi v. Sarup Lal, 113.
Nandkishore v. Brijbehari, 569.
Nandlal v. Hari Prasad, 217.
Nani Bai v. Gita Bai, 417.
Nanigopal v. Renubala, 814.
Nanja v. Sivabagyathachi, 189, 194.
Nanjappa v. Vimla Devi, 798.
Nanjegowda v. Channamma, 550, 648.
Nanjundaswami v. Kanagaraju, 321.

Nanuram v. Radhabai, 410, 430.
Nar Hari Shastri v. Badrinath Temple, Committee, 503.
Naraganti v. Nayanivaru, 627.
— v. Venkatachalapati, 283, 623.
Naragunty v. Vengama, 283.
Narain v. Lokenath, 345.
— v. Mohan Singh, 605.
— v. Rakhal, 109.
— v. Trilok, 519.
— Das v. Brij Lal, 438.
— — v. Har Dayal, 340.
— — v. Trilok, 199.
— Prasad v. Sarnam Singh, 337, 338, 339, 375.
— Sarup v. Daya Shankar, 316.
Narain Singh v. Sapurna Kuer, 963.
Narainbati v. Ramdhari, 222.
Naraini v. Chandi, 106.
Naranbhai v. Ranchod, 293, 324.
Narasamma v. Satyanarayana, 576.
— v. Venkata Narasi, 410, 430.
Narasayya v. Ramachandrayya, 83, 572.
Narasi v. Balamma, 482.
Narasimha v. Parthasarthy, 453, 471, 529.
— v. Veerabhadra, 87.
— v. Venkatadri, 216.
— v. Venkatalingam, 480, 486.
Narasimhaiah v. Chikkathimmaiah, 326.
Narasimham v. Venkata Narasimha Rao, 533.
— v. Venkatasubbamma, 602.
Narasimhan v. Narasimhan, 108.
Narasimma v. Mangammal, 139.
Narayan v. Bhuban Mohini, 498.
— v. Chintaman, 489.
— v. Gopal, 501.
— v. Gopalrao, 556.
— v. Kanak Prova Devi, 580.
— v. Laving, 520.
— v. Laxman, 199.
— v. Namdeo, 321, 341.
— v. Nana, 524, 526.
— v. Nathaji, 297, 328, 396.
— v. Padmanabh, 560.
— v. Pandurang, 426.
— v. Ramchandra, 588.
— v. Sagunabai, 374.
— v. Satvaji, 631, 632.
— v. Tara, 909.
— v. Vasudeo, 621.
— v. Venkatacharya, 386.
— v. Waman, 205.
— Ayyangar v. Vengu Ammal, 531.
— Iyer v. Moorthi Kenden, 74.
— Prasad v. Prabhadevi, 709.
— Prasad v. Mutuni Kohain, 855.
— Singh v. Raj Kumar, 240.
Narayana v. Krishna, 184.
— v. Ramalinga, 395.
— v. Ranga, 497.
— v. Shankar, 407.
— v. State of Andhra, 478.
— v. Suppiah, 212.
Narayana Raju v. Chamaraju, 276, 291.
Narayana Rao v. Purushothama Rao, 411.
Narayanacharya v. Narso Krishna, 370.
Narayanan v. Kannan, 443.
— v. Krishna, 277.
— v. Muthiah, 310.
— v. Ravunni, 588.
Narayanan v. Veerappa, 355, 361.
— Namboodri v. K. Ravi Varma, 74.
Narayanasami v. Kuppusami, 548.
— v. Mangammal, 534.
— v. Samidas, 352, 390.
Narayanaswami v. Padmanabham, 804.
— v. Ramakrishna, 285, 297, 396.
— Ayyar v. Rama Ayyar, 229, 234.
Narayani Amma v. Sankara Pillai, 83.
Narayanlal v. Controller of Estate Duty, 281.
Narayanrao v. Ramabai, 603, 608, 616.
Narbadabai v. Mahadeo, 591, 597, 600, 612, 615.
Narendra v. Dina Nath, 524.
Narendranath v. W.T. Commissioner, 262.
Narendra Nath v. Sudarshan Sekhar, 771.
Narhar v. Balwant, 542.
— v. Bhau, 79.
— v. Narayan, 548.
Naro v. Paragowda, 336.
— Gopal v. Paragauda, 326, 327, 329.
Narottam v. Nanka, 200.
— v. Narsandas, 445, 446.
Narasappa v. Bharmappa, 90.
— v. Sakharam, 204.
Narsingh v. Lalji, 363, 381.
— Rao v. Maha Lakshmi Bai, 465, 474.
Naru v. Tai, 245, 249.
Nasir v. Mata, 443.
Nataraja v. Kailasam, 493.
— Pillai v. Subbaraya Chettiar, 81.
Natrajan v. Perumal, 96.
Natasayyan v. Ponnusami, 369, 376, 388.
Natchiarammal v. Gopalakrishna, 611.
Natha v. Mehta Chhotalal, 111, 513, 649.
Nathaji v. Hari, 648.
Nathoo Lal v. Durga Prasad, 475.
Nathu v. Balwantrao, 583, 584.
— v. Dindayal, 303.
— v. Ganpat, 580.
— v. Kundan Lal, 375.
— Lal v. Babu Ram, 182.
— v. Phool Chand, 367.
Nathubhai v. Bai Hansgavri, 394.
— v. Chhotubhai, 290, 354, 356, 358.
— v. Javher, 200.
— v. Mulchand, 632, 633.
Nathulal v. Mana Devi, 805, 806, 812.
— v. Rangoba, 81, 252.
Nathuni Mishra v. Mahesh Misra, 302.
— Missir v. Ratna Kuer, 863.
— v. Ratna Kuer, 256, 904.
Nathuni Prasad v. Kachnar Kuer, 218, 903, 995.
Nathuram v. Shoma Chhagan, 303, 587.
Nathusingh v. Anandrao, 413.
Natisha Begum v. Alumuga Thaver. 424.
Natvarlal v. Dadubhai, 209, 244, 247, 248, 567.
Naulakhi v. Jai Kishan, 476.
Navalchand v. Manekchand, 465.
Navaneethammal v. Kamalammal, 551.
Navanitha Krishna v. Collector of Tinnevelly, 116.

Navanitlal v. Purshotam, 521.
Nawab Azimut v. Hurdwaree Mul, 636.
—Singh v. Daljit Singh, 637.
Nawal Singh v. Bhagwan Singh, 108, 400.
Nawaneetdas v. Gordhandas, 290, 630.
Naya v. Motilal, 81.
Nazir Begam v. Rao Raghunath Singh, 307.
Neelambal v. Rajarathnam, 222.
Neelamma v. Perumal, 56.
Neelangouda v. Ujjangouda, 543.
Neelayya v. Ramaswami, 851, 855.
Neelawwa v. Kallappa, 540.
Neelewa v. Gurshiddappa, 554.
Neelkisto Deb v. Beerchunder, 61, 283, 626
Nek Ram v. Emperor, 510.
Nekram Singh v. Sriniwas, 641.
Nellaikumaru v. Marakathammal, 179, 183.
Nelliappa v. Punnaivanam, 500.
Nene v. Mahadeo, 512.
Nepaldas v. Probhas Chandra, 157.
Nepra v. Sayer, 667.
Nepur Kuer v. Sheochand, 297.
Nhance v. Hureeram, 386.
Niamat Rai v. Din Dayal, 224, 308, 310, 385.
Nibaran Chandra Shaha v. Lalit Mohan Brindaban Shaha, 287.
Niblett v. Niblett, 724.
Nidhoomoni v. Saroda, 568.
Nihal Chand Gopal Das v. Mohan Lal, 355.
Niladri Sahu v. Mahant Chaturbhuj Das, 490, 491, 492.
Nilcomul v. Jotendro, 87.
Nilmoney Singh v. Baneshur, 594, 595.
Nimony v. Hingoo Lall, 625.
Ningappa v. Vithappa, 356.
Ningareddi v. Lakshmana, 320.
—v. Lakshmawa, 596.
Nirad v. Shibadas, 497.
Nirmal Chunder v. Mahommed, 636.
—Kumar Banerji v. Jyoti Prasad Banerji, 486, 496, 499.
—Singh v. Satnam, 305.
Nirmala v. Deva Narayan, 212, 213.
—Bala v. Balai Chand, 482.
Nirmala Devi v. Ram Dass, 799.
Nirman v. Fateh, 410.
—Bahadur v. Fateh Bahadur, 251.
Nirvanaya v. Nirvanaya, 577, 584.
Nirmoo v. Nikka Ram, 754, 795.
Nishit Kumar v. Anjali, 741.
Nittokissoree v. Jogendro Nauth, 607.
Nitye v. Soondaree, 598.
Nobin Chunder v. Romesh Chunder, 631.
Nobodeep Chunder, in re, 335.
Nobokishore v. Hari Nath, 229.
Nogendra v. Benoy, 161, 184.
Noorbanu v. Dep. Cust. General, 618.
Norendra Nath v. Kamalbasini Dasi, 466, 665, 669.
Nori Ramasastrulu v. Teluguntla Balakrishna Rao, 331, 332.
Noronha v. Noronha, 776.
Nugender v. Kaminee, 250.
Nund Kishore v. Kanee Ram, 207.
Nunna v. Chidaraboyina, 289, 296, 331, 334, 335.
Nunnu Meah v. Krishnaswami, 473, 474.
Nusserwanjee v. Laxman, 630.
Nuttley v. Nuttley, 706.

Obala Kondama v. Kandasami, 225, 240, 257.
Official Assignee v. Neelambal, 286.
——v. Palaniappa, 288, 289.
——v. Ramachandra, 334.
——of Madras v. Ramchandra, 332.
Official Assignee, Madras v. Venkayya, 328, 394.
—Liquidator, U.P. Oil Mills Ltd. v. Jamna Prasad, 354.
—Receiver of Ramnad v. Devarayan, 333.
Om Prakash Goela v. Mt. Chandar Kala, 528, 529.
Onnamalai v. Seethapathi, 99.
Over v. Over, 729.

P. v. P. 708, 722, 736.
P.(D) v. P.(G), 723.
P. Govinda Reddy v. Golla Obulamma, 855.
P. Lakshmi Reddy v. L. Lakshmi Reddy, 108.
P. Mudaliar v. Nataraja, 303.
P. Venkateswarlu v. D. Chinna Raghavulu, 202, 203.
P. A. Maha Nirvani v. Bindeshri Prasad, 382.
P. C. Pai v. Agricultural I.T.O., 420.
P. L. Singh v. M. M Singh, 820
P. L. Sayal v. Sarla Rani, 717.
Pachamuthu Nader v. T.P.T. Charities, 484.
Packiriswamy v. Doraswamy, 111, 401.
Padajirav v. Ramrav, 512, 537, 571.
Padam Kumari v. Suraj Kumari, 514.
—Lal v. Tek Singh, 473, 474.
—Singh v. Reoti Saram, 307.
Padamlochan v. Sulochana, 599.
Padma Kumari v. Court of Wards, 122, 158, 540, 542, 558.
Padma Rao v. Swarajya Lakshmi, 747, 757.
Padmanabha Pillai v. Abraham, 326.
Padmavati v. Ramchandra, 596.
Padmavatibai v. Manilal, 356.
Pahaladh v. Luchmunbutty, 425.
Pahalwan Singh v. Jiwan Das, 242, 243.
Pahar Singh v. Shamsher Jang, 203, 641.
Paigi v. Sheonarain, 521.
Paikabai v. Anyabai, 475.
Pakkiam v. Chelliah Pillai, 519.
Pakula Majhi v. Subhdra, 81.
Palani v. Bangayya, 383.
—v. Masakonan, 325.
—Ammal v. Muthuvenkatacharia, 412, 416, 419, 421-433.
—Goundan v. Vanjiakkal, 587, 588.
Palaniammal v. Kothandaramna Goundan, 579.

Palaniappa v. Alayyan, 404, 424.
— v. Deivasikamony, 305, 489, 490, 491.
— Chetiar v. Alagan Chetti, 73.
Palanippa v. A. & F. Harvey Ltd., 310, 580.
Palaniswami v. Devanai Ammal, 599.
Palaniyandi v. Velayudam, 215.
Pallayya v. Ramavadhanulu, 480.
Palmer v. Palmer, 724.
Palwana Nadar v. Annamalai Ammal, 276.
Panalal v. Sitabai, 641.
Panchaksharamma v. Chinnabbayi, 568.
Panchanana v. Balursingh, 407.
Panachand v. Manoharlal, 218.
Panchanan Dalai v. Lakshmidhar, 482.
Panchapagesa v. Kalyanasundaram, 414, 417.
Panchappa v. Sanganbasawa, 538, 548, 577.
Pancho v. Ram Prasad, 599.
Panchu Gopal v. Bata Mall, 126.
Pande Har Narain v. Surja Kunwari, 482, 483.
Pandharinath v. Govind, 216.
— v. Ramchandra, 579.
Pandit Adya Shankar Tewari v. Mt. Chandrawati, 182, 260, 474.
— Mohan Lal v. Pandit Ram Dayal, 261, 272, 284.
Pandu v. Goma, 321, 324.
— Lote v. Shripati, 245, 567.
Pandurang v. Administrator-General of Bombay, 114.
— v. Bhagwandas, 321.
— v. Bhaskar, 324, 326.
— v. Narmadabai Ramkrishna, 561.
— v. Pandurang, 295.
— v. Sonabai, 596.
— v. Sindhu, 111, 903.
Pangudaya v. Uthandiya, 299, 312.
Pannalal v. Chiman Parkas, 554.
— v. Harna Bai, 111, 116, 231.
— v. Naraini, 355, 356, 358, 360, 379.
— v. Sitabai, 92, 93.
Panthaky v. Panthaky, 769.
Panton v. Administrator-General, 635.
Panyam v. Ramalakshmamma, 535.
Papayamma v. Gopalakrishnamurty, 95, 323.
Paramanand Doss Chota Doss & Sons v. Nannulal Kanji & Ors. 311.
Parameswaram v. Parameswaram, 166.
Parami v. Mahadevi, 600, 605.
Parappa v. Mallappa, 337, 403.
— v. Nagamma, 93, 95, 96, 97, 98, 101, 103.
Parashuram v. Hirabai, 407, 431.
Paras Ram v. Janki Bai, 819.
Parbati v. Chandarpal, 115.
— v. Jagdis, 61, 81.
— v. Naunihal Singh, 416, 419, 433.
— v. Ram Prasad, 259.
— Kuer v. Sarangdhar, 281.
— Kunwar v. Chandarpal Kunwar, 625.
Parbatidevi v. Bansidhar, 404.
Pardhasaradhi v. Srinivasa, 544.
Pardy v. Pardy, 708.
Pareman Dass v. Bhattu, 387.
Parikshita v. Sita Dei, 291.
Parisa Mudaliar v. Nataraja, 218.
Parkinson v. Parkinson, 749.
Parma Nand v. Shiv Charan, 446, 551, 561.
Parmanand v. Nihal Chand, 503.
— Misir v. Gur Prasad, 390.
Parmanandas v. Parbhudas, 122.
Parmappa v. Shiddappa, 190.
Parmeshwar v. Gobind, 297, 396.
— v. Raj Kishore, 307.
Parmod Banabihari v. Atkins, 481.
Parot Bapalal v. Mehta Harilal, 103, 120, 122, 150.
Parshadi Lal v. Brij Mohan Lal, 482, 483.
Parshotam Bechardas v. Keshavlal Dalpatram, 205.
Parshottam v. Keshavlal, 182, 205, 206.
— v. Venichand, 74, 83, 551, 643.
Parsotam v. Janki Bai, 273.
Parsotam Das v. Jagan Nath, 423.
— Gir v. Dat Gir, 489.
Partab Narain v. Trilokinath, 250.
Partap v. Bai Suraj, 538.
— Chand v. Mt. Makhani, 467.
— Singh v. Dalip Singh, 403.
Parthasarathi v. I.T. Commissioner, 273.
Parthasarathy v. Thiruvengada, 479.
Parul Bala v. Bangshidhar, 1036.
Parvatava v. Fakirnaik, 538.
Parvathamma v. Subhadramma, 95.
Parvathi v. Thirumalai, 402.
Parvati v. Ganpatrao, 596.
Parvati v. Janabai 99.
— v. Ram Barun, 479.
Parvatibai v. Bhagwant, 446.
— v. Chatru, 616.
Paryag v. Kasi, 387.
Paryanibai v. Bajirao, 538.
Pashupat Pratap Singh v. Lalat Bahadur Singh, 389.
Pashupathinath Seal v. Pradyumnakumar Malik, 489, 491.
Patala Atchamma v. Patala Mahalakshmi, 744.
Patan Dei v. Santoo Prasad, 235, 236.
Patel v. Lakkireddigari, 303.
— Vandravan v. Patel Manilal, 525, 527.
Pateshri v. Rudra Narain, 317.
Patha Pedda Elliah v. Palagiri Gangamma, 225.
Pathumma Beebi v. Krishna Asari, 114, 903, 909.
Pathuri Venkateswarlu v. D. Chinna Raghavulu, 572.
Patil Hari v. Hakamchand, 322, 324.
Patipal Singh v. Rampal Singh, 259.
Patnaloo Appalswamy v. E. Moosalaya, 533.
Patra Chariar v. Srinivasa, 446.
Patrik v. Jhulon, 345.
Patru Lal v. Parbhawati Kuar, 412.
Pattabiraman v. Parijatham Ammal, 906, 909.
Pattachi Chettiar v. Sangili Vira, 377.
Pattaravy v. Audimula, 426.
Pattayee Ammal v. Manickam, 727, 744.
Patto Padhanuni v. Bhikari Padhano, 254.
Pattu Achi v. Rajagopala Pillai, 567.
Pauliem v. Pauliem, 283.

Pawadewa v. Venkatesh, 165, 166.
Payapa v. Appanna, 565.
Peary Lal v. Chandi Charan, 388.
—Mohan v. Manohar, 487, 499.
Peda Venkanna v. Sreenivasa, 355.
Pedasubhayya v. Akkamma, 398.
Pedda Ramappa v. Bengari Seshamma, 58.
Peddayya v. Ramalingam, 330.
Peerumal Chetty v. Province of Madras, 387.
Peesapati v. Kanduri, 501.
Pem Singh v. Partab Singh, 366, 371, 372, 373, 377.
Pemraj v. Chand Kunwar, 640, 641, 642.
Penukka v. Kelukutty, 273.
Peramanayakam v. Sivaraman, 63, 320, 321, 324-326, 328, 337.
Peria Ammani v. Krishnasami, 527, 642.
Periakaruppan v. Arunachelam, 278.
Periambal v. Sundarammal, 598.
Periasami v. Periasami, 628.
—v. Seetharama, 362, 381.
Perianayakam v. Pottukanni, 520.
Perireddi v. Venkatraju, 240.
Permanand v. Laxminarain, 554, 569.
Perrazu v. Subbarayadu, 296, 559, 648.
Perry v. Perry, 707, 712, 715, 789, 793.
Perumal v. Ponnuswami, 73.
Perumalakkal v. Kumaresan, 276.
Petambur v. Hurish Chunder, 420.
Petherpermal v. Muniandi, 637.
Pethu Reddiar v. Kandaswami, 306.
Pettachi Chettiar v. Sangili Vira, 372, 373.
Phankari v. State, 766.
Pheku v. Harishchandra, 302.
Phool Chand v. Gopal Lal, 641.
—Chand v. Lalit Kishore, 299.
Phoolchand v. Rughoobuns, 224.
Phool Coomari Dasi v. Debondra Nath Sil, 607.
—Kuer v. Pem Kuer, 244.
—Kunwar v. Rikhi Ram, 209.
Phukar Singh v. Ranjit Singh, 202.
Phulchand v. Hukumchand, 630.
—v. Lakkhu, 440.
Phuttibai v. Shri Dev Mandir, 499.
Phundal Lal v. Arya Prithi, 484.
Piara Lal v. Hirdey Nath, 404.
Piare v. Ram, 321.
Piari Lal v. Sundar Singh, 226.
Pichai v. Commissioner, H.R. and C. Endowments, 480.
Pichandi v. E. Ramaswami, 103, 111, 116, 133.
Pichappa Chettiar v. Chockalingam Pillai, 290.
Pichuvayyan v. Subbayyan, 550.
Pike v. Pike, 710, 714.
Pilu v. Babaji, 227, 228, 229, 231, 243, 247, 248, 567.
Pindiprolu v. Pindiprolu, 207.
Pirthi Pal v. Jowahir Singh, 396.
—Singh v. Man Chand, 365, 389.
Pirthipal v. Rameshwar, 313. 318.
Pitam Singh v. Ujagar Singh, 311.
Pitra Kueri v. Ujagir Raj, 49, 52, 116.
Pohlo Mal v. Basant Ram, 335.
Pokhan Dusadh v. Must. Manoa, 118.
Pokhar Singh v. Dulari, 238.
Polavarapu, Lingayya & Ors. v. Vupputuri Punnayya & Ors., 337, 381.
Ponnambala v. Sundarappayyar, 340.
Ponnusami v. Thatha, 320.
Ponnuswami, In re, 509.
Poorendra Nath v. Hemangini, 406, 435.
Poornanandachi v. Gopalasami, 418.
Popat Namdeo v. Jagu, 583.
Pothu Raju v. Rodha, 698.
Powell v. Kepton Park Race Course Co., 667.
Pr. N. Sm. Chockalingam Chettiar v. Official Assignee of Madras, 334.
Prabhakar v. Sarubhai, 212, 213.
Prafulla v. Bhabani, 247.
—v. Jogendra Nath, 477, 480, 484.
Prakash Chandra v. Nandrani Debi, 197.
—Chandra Nag v. Subodh Chandra Nag, 497.
Pralhad v. Damodhar, 81.
—v. Seth Gendalal, 560, 566.
—v. Shantabai, 568.
Pramatha v. Bhuban, 258.
—Nath v. Bhuban Mohan, 250.
——v. Pradyumna Kumar, 394, 486, 494.
Pramod Kumar v. Damodar Sahu, 292, 298, 421.
Pran Nath v. Bal Kishan, 580.
——v. Surrut Chundra, 156, 158.
Pranjivan v. Bai Bhikhi, 145.
Pranjivandas v. Devkuverbai, 204.
—v. Ichharam, 407.
Prankishen v. Mothooramohun, 286, 431.
Prasaddas Pal v. Jagannath Pai, 501.
Prasana Kumar v. Sureswari, 800.
Prasad Nath v. Ambica Prasad, 232.
Pratap v. Shiam Lal, 301.
—Kishore v. Gyanendranath, 277.
—Mull v. Iswar Gopal Jiew, 492.
Pratapmull Agarwalla v. Dhanabati Bibi, 403.
Pratapsingh v. Agarsingji, 453, 547, 556.
Pratt v. Pratt, 704, 707.
Prayag Dass v. Tirumala, 500.
Prem Devi v. Shambhu Nath, 569.
—Kaur v. Banarsi Das, 577.
—Jagat Kuer v. Harihar, 541.
—Mahton v. Bandu Mahto, 101.
—Narain v. Hansraj, 244.
—Nath v. Hari Ram, 480.
—Pratap Singh Jagat v. Pratap Kunwari, 597.
—Raja v. Mulchand Karwar, 526.
Prema v. Ananda Shetty, 821.
Premanand Bharaty v. Yogendra Bharaty 493.
Premanbai v. Channoolal, 520.
Premchand v. Bai Galal, 772, 791.
—v. Hulashchand, 592.
Premo v. Sheo Nath Pandit, 503.
Premukhdas v. Rambhujawan, 307.
Preston Jones v. Preston Jones, 728, 741, 781, 783.
Price v. Price, 710, 713.
Prichard v. Prichard, 807.
Prince Suleiman v. Nawab Mehndi, 636.
Priday v. Priday, 725.

Prit Koer v. Mahadeo Pershad, 284.
Prithi Pal v. The Sikh Educational Society for Women, 219.
Prithvirajsinghji v. Shivprabhakumari, 818.
Priya Bala v. Suresh Chandra, 686, 692, 766.
Priya Nath v. Indumati, 549, 646.
Priya Shankar v. Radhey Shiam, 356.
Promotha Nath v. Nagendrabala, 445.
Promotho v. Radhika, 481.
Prosanno Kumar v. Sarat, 197.
Prosonno v. Barbosa, 610, 611.
Prosunno v. Tarrucknath, 446.
— Kumar v. Saroda, 489.
— — v. Golab Chand, 486, 489, 490, 492.
Protab Chandra v. Brojnath, 503.
— — v. Jagadish Chandra, 624.
Provash v. Provash, 593.
— Chandra v. Prokash Chandra, 103.
Provashini v. Jogeswar, 197.
Pudiava v. Pavanasa, 162.
Pujari Lakshmana v. Subramania, 501.
Pulford v. Pulford, 703.
Pulin Chandra v. Bolai Mandal, 228.
Pullaiah v. Narasimhan, 238, 312.
Pullaiah v. Rushingamma, 711.
— Chetti v. Varadarajulu, 237.
Pullayya v. Appanna, 240.
Puncha v. Bindeswari, 499.
Punchanun v. Shib Chunder, 426.
Punjabai v. Shamrao, 536, 537.
Punjabrao v. Sheshrao, 531, 561.
Punithavelli Ammal v. Ramalingam, 841, 897, 905.
Punna Bibee v. Radha Kisen, 267, 403.
Punnayyah v. Viranna, 580.
Punyabrata Das v. Monmohan Ray, 75.
Purabi v. Basudeb. 739.
Puran Dai v. Jai Narain. 219.
Puraviya v. Poonachi, 503.
Purna Chandra v. Chandramani Debya, 404.
— — v. Gouri Pada, 255.
— — v. Nimei Charan, 902, 907.
— — v. Sarojini, 437.
— Sashi v. Kalidhan, 457, 465.
Purnachandrarao v. Mallikharjuna Rao, 292.
Purnananda v. Purnanadam, 562.
Purushotam v. Devki, 806.
Purshotam v. Vasudev, 269, 560.
Purshotamdas v. Purshotamdas, 507, 518.
Purshottam v. Rakhmabai, 562.
Purton v. Purton & George, 795.
Purushottam v. Atmaram, 426, 429.
Purushottamdas Harijivandas v. Bai Ruxmani, 608, 609.
Pushpadevi v. Radhey Shyam, 770.
Pushpavathi Vijayaram v. Pushpavathi Visweswar, 83, 84, 622, 623, 624.
Putlabai v. Mahadu, 547, 548, 577.
Puttappa v. Basappa, 561.
Puttoo Lal v. Ragubir Prasad, 319, 321.
Puttrangamma v. Rangamma, 410, 411.
Putul Devi v. Gopi Mandal, 717.
Puttu Lal v. Parbati Kunwar, 49, 80, 551, 569.

Quebec Railway Co. v. Vandry, 666.
Queen v. Marimuttu, 607.
— v. Nesbitt, 578.

R. A. Missir v. Raghunath, 900.
R. V. Reddiar v. Krishnaswamy, 480.
Rabidat v. Mst. Jawali, 218.
Rabindra Kumar v. Prativa, 766.
Rabindra Nath Dutt v. State, 693, 766.
Rabindra Nath v. Sushil Chandra, 463.
Rabutty v. Sibchunder, 473.
Rachava v. Kalingapa, 143, 145.
Rachawa v. Shivayogapa, 611.
Radha v. Rajah Ram, 157.
— Ammal v. The Commissioner of Income Tax, Madras, 95.
— Gobinda Roy v. Durgarani Dassi, 636.
— Kishun v. Jag Sahu, 307.
— Krishan v. Bhushan Lal, 305.
— Madhab Jiu v. Rajendra Prasad Bose, 528.
— Mohan v. Hardai Bibi, 80.
— Nath Mukerji v. Shaktipada Mukerji, 496, 498, 514.
— Prasad v. Gajadhar Singh, 819.
— — v. Ranee Mani (35 Cal. 896), 454, 473, 474, 558. (33 Cal. 947).
— — v. Ranimoni Dasi (38 Cal. 188), 449.
— Ram v. Amar Chand, 306.
— Rani v. Hanuman Prasad, 255, 256, 900, 904.
— Shyam v. Hari Pada, 229, 244.
— — v. Joy Ram, 228.
Radhabai v. Anantrao, 621.
— v. Ganesh, 447.
— v. Pandharinath, 403.
Radhabai v. S. K. Mudaliar, 964.
Radhakant Lal v. Nazma Begum, 277.
Radhakrishandas v. Kaluram, 301, 308.
Radhakrishna v. Satya Narayan, 413.
Radhakrishnan v. Union of India, 389.
Radharam v. Jang Bahadur, 267.
Radha Ammal v. I.T. Commissioner, 295.
Radheyshyam v. Kiran Bala, 968.
Radhi, In re the Petition of, 200.
Radhika v. Amrita, 498.
Radhoba v. Aburao, 294.
Rafail Uraon v. Baiha Uraon, 75.
Ragavendra v. Jayaram, 515, 550.
Raghavalu v. Adinarayana, 637.
Raghava Reddy in re, 766.
Raghavamma v. Chenchamma, 410, 411, 569.
Raghavan Nair v. Lakshmi Kutty Amma, 962.
Raghavendra v. Bhima, 451.
— Swami Mutt v. Board of Commissioners, H.R.E. Madras, 485.
Ragho v. Zaga, 304, 305, 578, 580.
— Sambhaji v. Shantabai, 89.
Raghoappa v. Balappa, 243.
Raghojirao v. Lakshmanrao, 621.
Raghubanchmani v. Ambica Prasad. 301
Raghubanund Doss v. Sadhu Churn. 560.
Raghubans v. Indarjit, 578, 580.
Raghubardayal v. Ramdulare, 284.

Raghubir v. Moti Kunwar, 416.
—Singh v. Jethu, 232, 255.
Raghumull v. Official Assignee of Calcutta, 669.
Raghunanda v. Brozokishoro, 546.
Raghunandan v. Motiram, 356, 359.
—v. Parmeshwar, 313.
—v. Rambalak, 942.
—Sahu v. Badri Teli, 389.
—Sing v. Tulshi Singh, 229, 233.
Raghunath v. Gobind, 276.
—v. Munnan Misr, 121.
—Prasad v. Deputy Commissioner, 467.
—Shankar v. Lakshmibai, 112, 143, 149, 150.
Raghunathji v. The Bank of Bombay, 288, 298.
Raghuraj v. Babu, 247, 248.
Raghunath v. Bhimsen, 902, 908.
Ragunath v. Sri Narain, 298.
Raghunath v. Vijaya, 740, 741.
Raghuvir Kumar v. Shanmughavadinu, 694.
Rahi v. Govind, 109, 401, 595.
Rahimbai, in the goods of, 617, 618.
Rahimbatbai v. Hirbai, 618.
Rai Bajrang Bahadur Singh v Rameshar Bux Singh, 227.
—Bishen Chand v. Amaida Koer, 397.
—Bishenchand v. Asmaida Koer, 79.
——v. Mussamat Asmaida Koer, 443, 463.
—Rajeshwar v. Har Kishan, 182, 224, 226.
—Shadi Lal v. Lal Bahadur, 284.
Raikishori v. Debendranath, 406, 462, 464, 467.
—Dassi v. Official Trustee, 460, 462, 498.
Raj Bachan Singh v. Bhanwar, 115.
—Chunder v. Sheeshoo, 217.
—Coomar v. Bissesur, 71, 549, 552, 645, 648.
—Fateh Singh v. Baldeo Singh, 110.
—Kali Kuer v. Ram Rattan Pandey, 493, 494, 496.
—Kishore v. Madan Gopal, 272, 276, 337, 376.
—Kumar v. Mohan Lal, 310.
—Kumar v. Prem Prakash Kaur, 907.
—Lukhee Dabea v. Gokool Chunder, 218, 228.
—Nandini v. Aswini Kumar, 71.
—Rani v. Harbans Singh, 797.
Raja v. Subbaraya, 560.
—Bakhsh Singh v. Ram Swarup, 374.
—Dei v. Umed Singh, 256.
Raja Gopalan v. Rajamma, 807.
—Jogendra v. Nityanand, 89, 110, 401, 402, 626.
—Madhusudan v. Kheshtabasi, 624.
—Makund Deb v. Sri Jagannath, 539, 548, 549, 553.
——Vizianagaram v. Vishweshwar, 622.
—Parichat v. Zalim Singh, 595.
—Pirthee Singh v. Rani Rajkooer, 603, 604, 615.
—Raghunandan v. Kumar, 366.
—Rai Bhagwat v. Ram Ratan, 233.
—Ram v. Luchmun, 341.
——v. Raja Bakhsh Singh, 374.
——Narain v. Pertum Singh, 270.
—Rama Rao v. Raja of Pittapur, 624, 625.
——v. Joti Prasad, 529.
—Rao v. Chiranjeevulu, 220.
—Rup Singh v. Rani Baisini, 61.
—Seetla Baksh Singh v. Babu Surrendra Bikram Singh, 256.
—Setrucherla v. Raja Setrucherla, 297, 416.
—Velugoti Sarvagna Kumara Krishna Yachendra Bahadur Varu v. Raja Rajeswara Rao & Ors., 524.
—Venkata v. Sree Rajan Suraneni, 401.
—Yarlagadda v. Raja Yarlagadda, 616, 624.
Rajagopalachariar v. Sami Reddi, 222.
Rajah Chattar Singh v. Diwan Roshan Singh, 75.
—Muttu v. Perianayagum, 494.
—Nilmoney Singh v. Kally Churn, 255.
—Of Ramnad v. Sundara, 449.
—Suraneni v. Venkama Row, 415.
—Venkata v. Rajah Surenani, 139.
—Venkatappa v. Benga Rao, 535.
—Vurmah v. Ravi Vurmah, 494, 496.
—Yenumula v. Chitrapu Buchi Venkayya Pantulu, 576.
Rajalakshmi v. Ramachandran, 577, 961, 974.
Rajalingam v. Lingayya, 775.
Rajamma v. Krishnamma, 770.
—v. Padmavatamma, 114, 193.
—v. Ramakrishnayya, 282.
—v. Varadarajulu, 185, 604.
Rajammal v. Sabapathi, 228.
—v. Mariyammal, 649.
Rajangam v. Rajangam, 417.
Rajani v. Prabhakar, 744.
—Kant Pal v. Jaga Mohan Pal, 277.
—Nath Das v. Nitai Chandra Dei, 109, 401.
Rajanikanta Pal v. Sajanisundaree Dasee, 592, 607.
Rajanikanth v. Ram Nath, 349.
Rajanna v. Dhondusa, 321.
Rajagopala v. Venkataraman, 395, 396.
Rajappa v. Gangappa, 131.
Rajarajeswari v. Sankaranarayana, 584.
Rajaram v. Ganesh, 439, 443, 497.
Rajasekaran Pillai v. Phillipose, 223.
Rajecoomaree v. Gopal, 394.
Raje v. Jayavantrav, 541.
Rajender v. Putto, 609.
—v. Shan Chund, 406, 443, 466.
Rajendra v. Gopal, 646.
—v. Sham Chund, 482.
—Lall v. Raj Coomari, 469, 471.
Rajendra Nath v. Shiv Nath, 267, 901.
—Prasad v. Gopal Prasad (7 Pat. 245), 528.
——v. Gopal Prasad (10 Pat. 187, 57 I.A. 296), 453, 530, 551.
Rajendro Narain v. Saroda, 525.
Rajeshwar v. Gopeshwar, 495.
Rajgopalachari v. Venkat Chudamma, 530.
Rajindra v. Raghubans, 621.
Rajkishen v. Ramjoy, 84.
Rajkristo v. Kishore, 231.
Rajkumari v. Trilok Singh, 798.

Rajlakshmi v. Katyayani, 250.
Raj Lukhee Dabia v. Gokool Chunder, 226.
Rajlukhy v. Bhootnath, 598.
Rajmal v. Harnam Singh, 669.
— Mishrimal v. Rajmal Khemchand, 286.
Rajpati v. Jagmohan, 115.
Rajrani v. Gomati, 50, 113.
Rajrup v. Gopi, 233.
— Rai v. Sheo Shankar Rai, 402, 424.
Raju v. Ammani, 54, 172, 189, 194, 203.
— v. Lakshmi, 544.
— v. Nagammal, 562.
Rajula v. Suka, 732.
Rakappa v. Chokalingam, 517.
Rakhalraj v. Debendra, 556, 557.
Rakhmabai v. Gangaram, 96.
— v. Keshav, 257.
— v. Radhabai, 536, 537, 542.
— v. Sitabai, 295, 576.
— v. Tukaram, 148.
Ralla Ram v. Atma Ram, 321.
Rallia Ram v. Balmokand, 376.
Ram Adhar v. Ram Manohar, 244.
— Bahadur v. Jagar Nath, 466.
— Baran v. Kamla Prasad, 106, 120.
— Bharose v. Bhagwan Din, 235, 236.
— Bharosey v. Ram Bahadur, 89.
— Bilas v. Ramchander, 225.
— — v. Ramyad, 305, 337.
— Bujhawan Prasad v. Nathu Ram, 307.
— Bunsee v. Soobh Koonwaree, 511.
— Chandar v. Muhammad, 369.
— Chandra v. Jang Bahadur, 320.
Ram Chandra v. Man Singh, 140.
— — v. Ram Krishna, 489.
— Charan v. Ajudhia, 326.
— — v. Bhagwan Das, 308.
— — v. Girjanandini Devi, 218, 244.
— — v. Gobinda, 493.
Ram Charan Das v. Girija, 238, 312.
— — Lal v. Rahim Baksh, 131.
— Chunder v. Brojonath, 580.
— Coomar v. Chunder Canto, 62.
— — v. Jogender Nath, 482.
— Das v. Chandra, 80.
— — v. Shri Ram Lakshman Janki, 487.
— Dayal v. Ajudhia Prasad, 379.
— — v. Amin Uddin, 307.
— — v. Durga Singh, 318.
— Debul v. Mitterjeet, 349.
— Dei v. Abu Jafer, 235, 257, 309.
— Devi v. Raja Ram, 507.
Ram Dhan v. Prayag, 481.
— Ghulam Singh v. Palakdhari Singhi, 903.
— Gopal v. Gurbux Singh, 208.
— — v. Narain, 174, 175, 191, 197.
— — v. Nand Lal, 475, 476.
— — Ghose v. Bullodeb Bose, 234, 310.
— Huree v. Trihee Ram, 431.
— Jag v. Director of Consolidation, 908.
— Jash Agarwala v. Chand Mandal, 579.
— Kali v. Gopal Das, 752.
— Kali v. Gopal Dei, 174, 188, 190.
— — v. Jamma, 109.
— — v. Khamman Lal, 414.
Ram Kali v. Sohan Lal, 917, 927.
— Karan v. Baidka Singh, 244, 247.
— Kawal v. Ramkishore, 218, 219.
— Khelawan v. Lakshmi, 50.
— — v. Ram Naresh, 307.
— Khelawan v. Lakshmi, 203.
— Kishan v. Chhedi, 352, 390.
— — v. Ganga Ram, 313, 318.
— — v. Tunda Mal, 285.
— Kishore v. Baijnath, 342.
— — Das Mohanta v. Ganga Gobinda Pati, 504.
— Krishna v. Kausalya, 247.
— — v. Ratan Chand, 288, 289, 292, 298, 310.
— Kristo v. Dhankisto, 252.
— Kunwar v. Amar Nath, 611.
— Kumar Dube v. Bhagwanta, 604.
— Kumari in the matter of, 74, 514, 519.
— Kunwar v. Ochha Dhanpal, 605.
— — v. Ram Dai, 610.
— Lal v. Akhoy Charan, 648.
— — v. Musammat Jwala, 605.
— — Sett v. Kanai Lal Sett, 463, 471.
— Mohan v. Mul Chand, 325.
— Narain v. Har Narinjan Kaur, 83.
— — v. Muhammad, 635.
— — v. Nandrani, 226.
— — Pearay, 473.
— — Chaudhury v. Pan Kuer, 430.
— Narayan v. Ramoon, 498.
— — Singh v. Ram Saran Lal, 453.
— Naresh v. Mst. Ganga Dei, 282.
— Nath v. Chiranji Lal, 285, 288, 289, 290, 291, 298, 310.
— — v. Sunderbai, 342.
— Nirunjun v. Prayag Singh, 406.
— Pal v. Ajit Kaur, 770.
— Parkash v. Radhe Shvam, 273.
— — v. Savitri Devi, 599, 1020.
— — Das v. Anand Das, 487, 493, 499.
— Parshad v. Idu Mal, 124.
— Pergash v. Musammat Dahan Bibi, 74, 161, 427.
— Pershad v. Lakhpati, 409, 416, 419.
— — Singh v. Lakhpati Koer, 421, 423.
— Piari v. Krishna Piari, 472.
— Piyari v. Piara Lal, 806.
— Prasad v. Sital Prasad, 245.
— Prasad v. State of Uttar Pradesh, 684, 687.
— Raghubar v. Dip Narain, 303.
— Rakhan v. Raja Lal, 362.
— Ratan v. Lachman Das, 358.
— Ratan Lal v. Kashinath, 480, 482, 483.
— Rattan v. Basant Rai, 365, 372, 390.
— Rekha Singh v. Ganga Prasad, 375.
— Sahai v. Parbhu Dayal, 337, 338.
— Sahye v. Lalla Lalljee, 165, 166.
— Saran v. Bhagwat Prasad, 669.
— — v. Tek Chand, 109.
— Saran Singh v. Mahabir Sewak Singh, 111.
— — — v. Prithipal, 336.
— Saroop Dasji v. S. P. Sahi, 501.
— Sarup v. Bela, 468.
— — v. Bharat Singh, 379.
— — v. Ram Dei, 250.

Ram Shankar v. Lal Bahadur, 214.
—Sia v. Bua, 122, 124.
—Singh v. Bhani, 162.
——v. Chet Ram, 358.
——v. Fakira, 413, 414, 424.
—Singh v. Sushila Bai, 766.
——v. Ugur Singh, 40, 50.
—Soondar v. Surbanee Dossee, 542.
—Soonder v. Ram Sahye, 165, 166.
—Sumran v. Govind Das, 222.
—Sundar v. Collector of Gorakhpur, 628.
—Sunder v. Lachmi, 308.
—Surat v. Hitanandan, 217, 219.
Rama v. Daji, 251.
—v. Ranga, 218.
Rama Ananda v. Bhima, 917.
—Appa Patil v. Sakhu Dattu Gharal. 605.
—Asra v. The Official Receiver of South Canara, 353.
Rama Iyer v. Nataraja Iyer, 589.
—Nana v. Dhondi, 244, 245, 247.
—Nand v. Surgiani, 116.
—Raja v. Papammal, 596.
—Rao v. Hanumantha, 375.
——v. Venkata, 399.
——v. Raja of Pittapur, 84, 254.
—Row v. Kuttiya, 106, 208.
Ramabadra v. Gopalaswami, 416.
Ramabai v. Ambadas, 994.
Ramabai v. Dattatraya, 220.
—v. Harnabai, 163.
Ramabai v. Narayan Rao, 1028.
—v. Trimbak, 597, 609.
Ramachandra v. Anasuyabai, 560, 561.
—v. Annapurni Ammal, 961, 962.
—v. Ramachandra, 473. 474.
—Balaji v. Shankar Apparao, 566.
—v. Kashinath, 489.
—Rao v. Kowsalya, 773.
Ramachandran v. Ramachandra, 356.
Ramacharya v. Anantacharya. 427.
Ramadin v. Gokulprasad, 414, 431.
Ramaiyya v. Motayya, 93, 97, 111.
Ramaji v. Manohar, 45.
Ramajogayya v. Jagannadhan, 581.
Ramakottayya v. Viraraghavayya, 236.
Ramakrishna v. Sitaram, 299.
—v. Subbakka, 573.
—v. Subbamma, 515.
—v. Suppayya, 326.
—v. Vishnumoorthi, 285.
—Pillai v. Thirunarayana Pillai, 569.
—Rao v. Srinivasa Rao. 167.
—Transports v. C.I.T., 290.
Ramakrishnayya v. Narasayya, 544, 558.
Ramalakshmi v. Sivanatha, 83, 393, 626.
Ramalaxmi v. Svanantho, 58.
Ramalinga v. Babanambal. 583.
—v. Narayana, 275, 395. 412. 420.
—v. Sivachidambara, 276, 480.
—v. Srinivasalu, 581.
Ramalingam v. Muthayyan, 303.
—v. Vythilingam, 493.
—v. Ramalaxmi, 95, 320.
Ramamani v. Kulanthai, 512, 649.
Ramamirtha v. Gopala. 440.
Ramamma v. Lakshminarasimham, 539.
Ramamohan Das v. Basudeb, 488.
Ramamoorty v. Sitharamamma, 596, 597, 994.
Ramamurthi v. Kuppaswami, 389.
Ramamurthy v. Bhimasankararao, 227.
—v. Venkatasubbarayudu, 412.
Raman Nadar v. S. Rasalamma, 440, 442, 448.
Ramanadan v. Rangammal, 600, 611, 612, 613.
Ramanand Lal v. Damodardas, 224, 235.
Ramananda v. Rajkishori, 157, 161.
Ramanarsamam v. Com. of H.R. & C.E. 479.
Ramanarsu v. Buchamma, 596.
Ramanathan v. Murugappa, 487, 494.
—Chettiar v. Muthuraman Naidu & Ors. 299.
—v. Narayanan, 297.
—v. Palaniappa, 973.
—v. S.R.M.Ct.M. Firm, 298, 313.
—v. Veerappa, 425.
Ramanna v. Sambamoorthy, 544.
—v. Venkata, 274, 320, 340.
Ramanayya v. Angappayya, 352.
Ramanuja v. Sadagopa, 639.
Ramappa v. Bojjappa, 773.
—v. Gourwwa, 1036.
—v. Sithammal, 429.
—v. Yellappa, 233, 336, 337.
Ramaprapanna v. Sudarsan, 493.
Ramaprasada Rao v. Subbarameiah, 428.
Ramarao v. K. Bhaskarrao, 569.
Ramasamayyan v. Virasami, 361, 368, 369, 371, 383.
Ramasami Chetti v. Mangaikarsu, 219, 250.
—v. Narasamma. 116.
—v. Papayya, 473.
—v. Sellattammal, 242.
—v. Sundaralingasami, 626.
—v. Ulaganatha, 355, 361, 381.
—v. Vengidusami, 222.
—v. Venkatarama, 323, 328, 337.
—v. Venkatesan, 141.
—v. Venkataramaiyan, 562.
Ramasamy v. Subramania, 428. 397.
Ramaswami v. Lakshmamma, 96.
—v. Murugayyan. 93.
—v. Shrinivasa, 292.
Ramaswamy v. Arumanayagam, 208.
—v. Baghvammal. 1034. 1036.
—v. E. Thevar. 111, 116.
—v. Kasinath, 584.
—v. Kuppa Chetti, 412.
Ramaswamy Chettiar v. Adaikammal, 638.
Ramawati v. Manjhari, 602.
Ramayya v. Bapanamma, 244, 247.
—v. Venkamraju, 356.
—v. Venkataratnam. 313.
Ramayya Goundan v. Kolanda Goundan, & Ors, 293.
Rambhat v. Lakshman, 342.
—v. Timmayya. 518.
Rambhau v. Bala. 405.
—v. Rajaram, 588.
Ramchand v. Thakur Janki Ballabhji Maharaj, 495, 502.
Ramchandar v. Kallu, 207.

Ramchandarji Maharaj v. Lalji Singh, 489.
— v. Bhagwant, 365.
— v. Bhimrav, 231.
— v. Damodar, 293.
— v. Gopal, 549.
Ramchandra v. Keshav, 419.
— v. Kondayya, 356.
— v. Krishnarao, 576, 577.
— v. Mulji, 539.
— v. Nanji, 548.
— v. Ramabai, 45.
— v. Ramgopal, 100.
— v. Ramkrishna, 543, 545.
— v. Sagunabai, 603.
— v. Sadashiva Rao, 109.
— v. Sakaram, 592, 900.
— v. Seemathal, 254, 395.
— v. Shree Mahadeoji, 477, 480.
— v. Shripatrao, 313.
— v. Tukaram, 421, 423.
— v. Venkatrao, 621.
— v. Vinayak, 40, 104, 105, 122, 125, 515, 517.
— Balaji v. Shankar Apparao, 547, 566.
— Doddappa v. Hanamnaik Dodnaik, 109.
Ram Charan v. Mihin Lal, 303.
Ramconnoy v. Johur Lall, 629.
Ramcoomar v. Ichamoyi, 218, 222, 243.
— Koondoo v. Macqueen, 637.
Ramdas v. Baldevdasji, 140.
Ramdhan v. Dalmir, 167.
Ramesh Chandra v. Mohammed, 81.
— — v. Hemendra, 350.
— Chander v. Sh. Bibi Ved Kaur, 616.
Rameshar v. Rukmini, 273.
Rameshra v. Kalpu Rai, 381.
Rameshwar v. Mst. Ganpati Devi, 142, 253.
Rameshwar v. Hardas, 900.
— v. Lachmi, 397.
— v. Lachmi Prosad, 467.
— Nath v. Kanta Devi, 798.
Rameswar v. Provabati, 221.
Ramgouda v. Bhausaheb, 231, 235, 236, 237.
Rami Reddi v. Rosamma, 245.
— Reddi v. Gangi Reddi, 131, 138.
Ramiah v. Venkatasubbamma, 451.
Ramjee Rai v. Gopal Ahir, 224, 337.
Ramji v. Ghamau, 536, 537.
— Das v. Mangal Sen, 554.
Ramjugeshwar v. Gajadhar, 420.
Ramkaran Thakur v. Baldeo Thakur, 305, 375.
Ramkishore v. Bhoobunmoyee, 345.
— v. Jainarayan, 325, 326, 342, 551.
Ramkishorelal v. Kamalnarayan, 482.
Ramkrishna v. Chimnaji, 549, 550.
— v. Narayan, 388.
— v. Shamrao, 540, 541, 543.
— v. Tripurabai 227, 231, 567.
— v. Vinayak, 313, 383.
Ramkrishun Lal v. Ugramohan Dass, 358.
Ramlal v. Lakhmichand, 287, 288, 290, 291, 310.
Ramlal R. & Co. v. B. C. Patel & Sons, 580.
Ramlali v. Bhagwanti Bai, 842, 843.
Ramlinga v. Virupakshi, 406.
Ramlochun v. Rughoobur, 426.
Ramlu v. Vithal, 82, 405.
Rammakkal v. Ramasami, 113.
Ramnagina v. Harihar, 417.
Ramnath v. Deoraj, 579.
— v. Durga, 157, 161.
— v. Goturam, 297.
— v. Ramgopal, 102, 529.
— v. Ramrao, 313.
Rampal v. Bhagwandas, 557.
Rampali Devi v. Chando Bibi, 909.
Rampartab v. Foolibai, 288, 289.
Rampershad v. Sheochurn, 277, 279.
Ramphal v. Pan Mati, 121.
— Rai v. Tula, 227.
Ramphul Singh v. Deg Narain, 361, 369, 372.
Rampiyar v. Deva Rama, 517, 522.
Ramprasad v. Pannalal, 554.
Ramprasad Firm v. Bai Reva, 354.
Rampyari Kuer v. Bachuraj Kuer, 475.
Ramrao v. Suganchandra, 302.
— v. Yeshvantrao, 621.
Ramrichpal v. Bikaner Stores, 305.
Ramsaran v. Bhagwat, 95, 96.
— Singh v. Mahabir Sewak Singh, 509.
Ramsaroop v. Hiralal, 900.
Ramsay v. Boyle, 774.
— v. Ramsey, 807.
Ramsebuk v. Ramlall, 314, 317.
Ramsubramania v. Sivakami, 388.
Ramsumran Prasad v. Shyam Kumari, 221, 227, 240, 242, 251.
Ramu v. Kashi, 456.
Ramulu v. Narayana, 904.
Ramyad v. Rambhilhara, 256.
Ramzan v. Ram Daiya, 611, 614.
Ran Bijai v. Jagatpal, 162.
Ranchhod v. Manubai, 221, 231.
Ranchhoddas v. Mahalaxmi Vahuji 501, 502.
Rangaiah v. Chirinaiyah, 602.
Rangarao v. State of Madras, 621.
Rangamma v. Annapurnamma, 923, 926.
— v. Chinnabbayi, 602.
— v. Venkatarajulu, 1033.
Rangammal v. Echamal, 592, 607.
Ranganadha v. Bhagirathi, 440, 443, 463, 466.
Ranganaiki v. Ramanuja, 303, 511, 519.
Ranganatha v. Kumaraswami, 89.
— v. Narayanasami, 420.
Ranganathan v. Annamalai Chettiar, 849.
— v. Periakaruppan, 538.
Ranganayakamma v. Alwar, 554, 555, 556.
Ranganayakamma v. Rajeshwaramma, 902.
Rangappa v. Kamti, 243, 245.
Rangappayya v. Shiva, 604.
Rangasami v. Sunderajulu, 420.
— v. Nachiappa, 207, 215, 227, 230, 235, 236, 237, 243, 244, 248.
Rangaswami v. Chinnammal, 901.
— v. Marappa, 579, 580.
— Ayyangar v. Sivaprakasam Pillai & Ors., 312.
Rangarsayi v. Nagaratnamma, 414.
Rangayya v. Thanikachalla, 163.

Rangubai v. Bhagirthibai, 528.
—v. Gopal, 575.
Rangubai v. Laxman, 851.
—v. Subaji, 608.
Ranee Annapurni v. Swaminatha, 615.
Rani v. Shanta Bala, 221, 226, 307.
Rani Anand Kunwar v. The Court of Wards, 256.
—Bhagwan Koer v. Bose, 74, 75.
—Lachhmi Kunwar v. Shiam Singh, 97.
—Mewa Kwar v. Rani Hulas Kwar, 241.
—Moni v. Radha Prasad, 463.
—Purnima v. Kumar Khagendra, 444.
—Srimuty Dibeah v. Koond Luta, 158.
—Raghubans v. Raghuraj Singh, 446.
Ranjit Lal v. Bijoy Krishna, 529.
—Singh v. Jagannath, 496.
Ranmalsangji v. Kundankuwar, 604.
Ranodip Singh v. Parmeshwar Prasad, 341, 344.
Ranoji v. Kandoji, 109, 401, 402.
Ranu Thaku v. Santu Goga, 103.
Rao Balwant Singh v. Rani Kishori, 269, 272.
—Bhimsingh v. Fakirchand, 439, 624, 627, 628.
——v. Gangaram, 628.
Rao Bhimsingh v. Shersingh, 628.
—Kishore Singh v. Gahenabai, 61.
—Kurun Singh v. Nawab Mahomed, 256.
Raoji v. Anant, 424.
—Rupa v. Kunjalal Hiralal, 240.
Rash Mohini v. Umesh Chunder, 444.
Rashid v. Sherbanoo, 618.
Rashik Lal v. Radha Dulaiya, 258, 260
Rasiklal v. Singheswar, 386.
Raspin v. Raspin, 728.
Rasul v. Ram Surum, 605.
Ratan-chand v. Kalawati, 599.
—Kumari v. Sunder Lal, 92, 93, 96.
—Moni Debi v. Nagendra Narain, 735, 736.
Ratanchand v. Javherchand, 217, 608.
Ratanlal v. Ramanujdas, 428.
Ratansi v. Administrator-General, 672.
Rathinasabapathi v. Gopala, 595.
Rathinasabapathy v. Saraswathi, 93, 95, 96, 101, 276.
—v. Yellawa, 95.
Rathna v. Aiyanachariar, 377.
Rathnam v. Sivasubramania, 276.
Raghubans v. Bhagvant, 604.
Rati Ram v. Naidar, 311.
Ratilal v. Indravadan, 215, 221.
—v. State of Bombay, 478.
Ratnam v. Govindarajulu, 305.
Ratnamala v. State of Mysore, 859.
Ratnaprabhabai v. Sheshrao, 698.
Ratnasubbu v. Ponnappa, 122.
Ratneshwari Nandan v. Bhagawati, 165, 166, 507, 738.
Rattan Devi v. Jagadhar Mal, 219.
—Lal v. Baij Nath, 528.
Ravaneshwar v. Chandi Prasad, 221, 226.
Ravanna K. Karuppannan v. V.P. Tirumalai, 479.
Ravji v. Lakshmibai, 562.
—v. Mahadev, 638, 639.
Rawat v. Beni Bahadur, 529.
Rayakkal v. Subbanna, 276, 320.
Reade v. Krishna, 574, 578.
Rebarani v. Ashit, 698.
Regella v. Nimushakavi, 242.
Renka v. Bhola Nath, 254.
Renuka Bala v. Aswini Kumar, 863, 912.
Renulu Bose v. Manmatha Nath, 668.
Restall v. Restall, 812.
Revanna v. Suseelamma, 699, 754.
Rewa v. Galharisingh, 514.
Rewun Persad v. Radha Beeby, 283, 416, 419, 420.
Riasat Ali v. Iqbal Rai, 276.
Richardson v. Richardson, 792.
Richmond v. Richmond, 787.
Rikhdeo v. Sukhdeo, 259.
Riland, In re, 479.
Rindabai v. Anacharya, 144, 204, 205.
Risal Singh v. Balwant Singh, 250.
Rivett-Carnac v. Jivibai, 213.
Rm. L.M.L.U. Alagammal Ashi & Ors. v. Vr. P.L.M. Palaniappa Chettiar & Ors., 288.
Robert Watson & Co. v. Ramchund, 350.
Robey v. Robey, 769.
Robins v. National Trust Co., 287.
Robinson v. Robinson, 746.
Rohini Kumari v. Narendra Singh, 706, 711.
Romanath v. Rajonimoni, 604.
Ronalds v. Ronalds, 801.
Roopchand v. Poolchand, 143.
Rosa Marie v. Commissioner of Wealth Tax, 672, 837, 846.
Rose v. Rose, 800.
Roshan Singh v. Balwant Singh, 108, 401, 594, 595.
—Lal v. Samar Nath, 551, 569.
Ross & Co. v. Scriven, 772.
Rottala v. Pulicat, 320, 337.
Rudranarain v. Rup Kuar, 473.
Rudrapa v. Irava, 144.
Ruka Bai v. Ganda Bai, 609.
Rukhab v. Chunilal, 644.
Rukhmabai v. Laxminarayan, 411.
—v. Ramratan, 81, 92, 399.
Rukhmanibai v. Kishanlal, 817.
Rukhminibai v. Laxmibai, 443.
Rumbelow v. Rumbelow and Hadden, 787.
Runchordas v. Parvatibai, 252, 257, 478, 479.
Rungama v. Atchama, 525, 648.
Runjeet Singh v. Gujrat Singh, 419.
Rup Chand v. Jambu Parshad, 74, 83, 84.
—Narain v. Gopal Devi, 234, 236, 568.
—Ram v. Rewati, 246.
—Raut v. Basudeo Raut, 96.
—Singh v. Bhubhuti, 406.
Rupa v. Sardar Mirza, 162.
Russell v. Russell, 715, 782, 783, 803.
Russoobai v. Zoolekhabai, 116, 148.
Rustom Singh v. Moti Singh, 222.
Rutherford v. Richardson, 730.
Ruve Bhudr v. Roopshunkur, 550, 556.

S. v. S., 736.
S. v. R., 737.

S. K. Buti v. Shriram, 302.
S. N. P. Nadar v. T.P.T. Charity, 480.
S. Rajagopal v. C. M. Armugam, 72, 74.
Sabapathi v. Somasundaram, 340.
—v. Thandavaroya, 326.
Sabitri v. Savi, 50.
Sabodra v. Shri Behariji Mahraji, 133.
Sabujpari v. Satrughan, 96.
Sachindra v. Hem Chandra, 394.
Sachindra Nath v. Banamala, 808.
Sachindranath v. Nilima, 780, 782, 783.
Sachitananda v. Baloram, 639.
Sadabart Prasad v. Foolbash, 321, 337.
Sadagopa v. Bhakthavatsalam, 513.
Sadananda v. Harinam, 140.
Sadashiv v. Dhakubai, 221.
—Waman v. Reshma, 537.
Sadavarthy v. Commissioner of Hindu Religious & Charitable Endowment, 478.
Sadashiv v. Bala, 109.
—v. Rattain, 277.
Sadhu Laxmi v. Sadhu Suryanarayana, 519.
Sadhu Singh v. Jagdish Kaur, 699.
—Saran v. Brahmdeo, 300, 312.
Sadik Husain Khan v. Hashim Ali Khan, 440.
Sadu v. Baiza. 109, 110, 401, 402.
—v. Ram, 425.
—Ganaji v. Shankerrao, 104, 139, 199.
Saguna v. Sadashiv, 120, 130, 150.
Sahdeo Narain Deo v. Kusum Kumari, 73, 84, 645.
Sahab Rai v. Shafiq Ahmad, 179, 404.
Sahebgouda v. Basangouda, 627.
—v. Shiddangouda, 559, 626.
Sahebrao v. Rangarao, 539.
Sahib Singh v. Girdhari Lal, 376.
Sahu Madho Das v. Mukund Ram, 238, 240.
—Ram v. Bhup Singh. 300. 301. 302, 337.
——Kishen v. State of U.P., 421.
Said Ahmed v. Raja Barkhandi Mahesh Pratap Narain Singh, 303.
Saila Bala Dasi v. Saila Bala, 903.
Saithri, In the Matter of, 577, 578.
Sajjanbai v. Prabhulal. 599.
Sakaram v. Govind, 352.
Sakarbai v. Maganlal, 243, 288.
Sakarchand v. Narayan, 327.
Sakharam v. Balakrishna, 133.
—v. Devji, 318.
—v. Sitabai, 79, 144, 151.
—v. Thama, 567.
—Satu v. Shamrao, 401.
—Shet v. Sitaram, 372, 373.
Sakhu v. Puttamma, 164.
Sakina Bibee v. Mahomed Ishak, 452.
Salah Mohmed v. Gulab, 231.
Salamat Khan v. Bhagwat. 301.
Salemma v. Lutchmana, 170-172, 178, 182. 186, 194.
Sallay Mahomed v. Lady Janbai, 618.
Saloman v. Saloman & Co. 667.
Salvalingam v. Lingamurthy, 320.
Samalbhai v. Someshwar, 279, 287, 288.
Samat v. Amra, 120.
Sambasiva v. Venkataswara, 177, 182.
—v. Secretary of State for India, 140.
Sambireddy v. Jayamma, 731, 765.
Sami v. Ponnammal, 361.
—Ayyangar v. Ponnammal, 381, 382.
Saminatha v. Angammal; 121.
—v. Vageesan, 555.
Sammantha v. Sellappa, 485.
Sampat v. Surajmal, 259.
Sampathkumari v. Lakshmi Ammal, 843, 863, 901, 906, 907.
Samraj Nadar v. Abraham, 710.
Samu Bai v. Magan Lal, 1023, 1024.
Samudrala v. Samudrala, 141.
Sangameswara v. Krishna, 637.
Sangannagouda v. Kalkangouda, 646.
Sankaralingam Pillai v. Veluchami Pillai, 428.
Sanka v. The Bank of Burmah, 288.
Sankar v. Nathu, 581.
—Nath v. Bijoy Gopal, 232.
Sankara Dome v. Kalidasi Dasi, 157. 197.
Sankara Rao v. Rajyalakshamma, 95, 902.
Sankaralinga v. Official Receiver, 353.
—v. Rajeswara, 503.
—v. Ratnaswami, 302.
Sankaralingam v. Subban, 519, 520.
Sankaramurthy v. Subbamma, 607.
Sankaranarayana v. Lakshmi Ammal, 609.
—Ayyar v. Sri Poovanatha Swami Temple, 487.
Sanmukh v. Jagarnath, 235, 385.
Sansir Patelin v. Satyabati Naikani, 900.
Sant Bhushan Lal v. Brij Bhushan Lal, 312, 584.
Sant Prasad v. Charitar Singh, 232.
—Kumar v. Deo Saran, 115.
—Ram v. The Crown, 511.
——Das v. Gurdev Singh, 845.
Santala v. Badaswari, 605.
Santappayya v. Rangappayya, 555.
Santha v. Cherukutty, 968.
Santhanam v. Subramania, 909.
Santu Ram v. Mst. Dodan Bai, 219.
Sanwal Das v. Kure Mal, 279, 285.
Sanyasi Charan v. Asutosh, 288, 335.
——Mandal v. Krishnadhan Banerji, 288, 289, 291, 336.
Sanyasi Rao, v. Suryanarayanamma, 610.
Sapsford v. Sapsford, 727.
Sarab Sukh v. Ram Prasad, 484.
Sarabjit v. Indarjit, 84.
Sarada Prosad v. Rama Pati, 529.
Sarada v. Mahananda, 350.
—v. Umakanta, 416.
—Prasanna v. Umakanta, 81.
Saradambal v. Subbaram, 96, 102.
Sarajubala v. Jyotirmoyee, 465, 466, 467, 475.
Sarala Bala v. Banamali, 113, 188.
Sarala Sundari v. Hazari Dasi, 585.
Saran Bai v. Abdul Rashid, 592.
Sarasuti v. Mannu, 401.
Saraswathi v. Anantha, 404, 902, 908, 909.
—Ammal v. Jagadambal, 83, 114, 220.
—Ammal v. Krishna Iyer, 902.
——v. Rajagopal Ammal, 477, 479.
—v. Debendra. 81, 550.
—v. Mannu, 110.

—v. Rupa, 609.
Sarat Chandra v. Bhupendra Nath, 451.
——v. Charusila, 210, 214, 216.
——v. Forman, 578.
——v. Pratab Chandra, 479.
——v. Rabindra Nath, 501.
—Chunder v. Gopal Chunder, 570.
Sarbo Gopain v. Anta Lal, 599.
Sardarmal v. Aranvayal, 331.
Sardar Bahadur Sardar Indra Singh v. The Commissioner of Income Tax, Bihar & Orissa, 284.
—Singh v. Kunj Behari Lal, 217, 218, 219.
Sardari Lal v. Bharat National Bank, 365.
—Lal v. Vishano, 808.
Sarju Parshad v. Bir Bhaddar, 637.
—Prasad v. Mangal, 251, 343.
——v. Nand Gopal, 421.
Sarjubai, In re, 486.
Sarla v. Shakuntala, 774.
Sarla Devi v. Balwan Singh, 817.
Sarnam v. Raja Bisheshwar, 214.
Sarna Moyee v. Secretary of State, 199.
Saroja v. Emannual, 769.
Sarolah v. Bhoobun, 435, 436.
Saroda v. Kristo, 474.
Sarojini Devi v. Sri Krishna, 98, 101, 102.
——v. Subrahmanyam, 97, 602.
Sarju Singh v. Ramsaroop, 102.
Sartaj v. Deoraj, 438, 439, 445, 446.
—Kuari v. Deoraj Kuari, 397, 592, 624.
Sartaji v. Ramjas, 246.
Sarubhai Balakdas v. Narayandas Bairagi, 186.
Sarwan v. Kunji Lal, 386.
Sarwan Singh v. Dhan Kaur, 935.
Sarwarjan Mir v. Fakhruddin, 582.
Sasadhar v. Tara Sundari, 906.
Sasanka Bhusan v. Gopi Ballav, 453, 454.
Sashi Kumari Debi v. Dhirendra Kishore Ray, 495.
Sashimukhi v. Brundaban Das, 599.
Sasiman v. Shib Narayan, 475.
Sat Narain v. Behari Lal, 331, 361, 368, 371.
——v. Sri Kishen Das, 331, 332, 333, 335, 374.
Satgur Prashad v. Kishore Lal, 260.
Sathappayyar v. Periasami, 503.
Sathi v. Ramandi, 589.
Sathinama v. Saravanabagi, 482.
Sathuvayyan v. Muthusami, 318.
Satish Chandra v. Binapani, 298.
Satyabhama v. Kesavacharya, 604.
Satrughan v. Sabujpari, 97, 103.
Satruhan Prasad v. Sudip Narain, 108.
Sattiraju v. Venkataswami, 525, 538, 556.
Satya Devi v. Ajaib Singh, 691.
Satya Charan v. Satpir, 387.
—v. Urmila, 882, 886.
Satyanarayana v. H.R.E. Board, 167.
—v. Lakshminarayana, 327.
—v. Mallayya, 581.
Satyanarayana v. Seethamma, 863, 902, 904
—v. Seetharamamma, 599.
Satyanarayana v. Veerraju, 259.
Satyanarayanamurthi v. Jaggamma, 1020.
Satyanarayanamurthi v. Satyanarayanamurthi, 337, 338.
Satyanarayanamurthy v. Ram Subbamma, 593.
Saudagar Singh v. Pradip Singh, 254, 255.
Savlaram v. Yeshodabai, 741.
Savita Devi v. Pran Nath, 755.
Savitribai v. Bhaubat, 162.
—v. Luximibai, 590, 592, 606, 608.
—v. Radhakishan, 602, 609.
—v. Sidu, 113.
Sawan Ram v. Kalawanti, 1010.
Sayal P.L. v. Sarla Rani, 717.
Sayamalal v. Saudamini, 538.
Sayed Kasam v. Jorwar Singh, 424.
Schwebo v. Subbiah alias Shanmugham Chettiar, 361.
Scott v. Scott, 777.
—v. Sebright, 739.
Secretary of State v. Bombay Municipality, 669.
———for India v. Ahalyabai Narayan, 597, 602.
Seelam Nagamma v. Reddam, 126.
Seeta Ram v. Phooli, 806.
Seetha Bai v. Narasimha, 267, 576.
Seethai v. Nachiar, 116.
Seethamma v. Veerana, 95, 267, 421.
Seetharamamma v. Suryanarayana, 555.
Seetharamaiah v. Ramakrishnaiah, 946.
Seetharamanna v. Appiah, 587, 588.
Seetharamayya v. Peraiah, 907.
Seeyali Achari v. Doraiswami, 273.
Sellam v. Chinnammal, 111, 161.
Sellamuthu Servai, In re, 332.
Sellappa v. Masa, 323.
—v. Suppan, 303, 305, 623.
Senat v. Senat, 780.
Sengoda v. Muthu, 421.
—v. Muthuvellappa, 305.
Seri Ram v. Chandramma, 89, 271.
Sesha Ayyar v. Krishna Ayyar, 387.
Seshacharyulu v. Venkatacharyulu, 484, 497.
Seshadri v. Jayalakshmi, 808, 812, 814, 817, 994.
Seshamma v. Narasimharao, 532.
—v. Padmanabha Rao, 525.
—v. Subbarayadu, 616.
—v. Padmanabha Rao, 746.
—v. Ramakoteswara, 98.
—v. Venkayya 341, 344.
Seshan v. Veera, 313, 317.
Seshayya v. Narasamma, 474.
—v. Padalamma, 475.
Seshi Ammal v. Thaiyu Ammal, 1033.
Sespuri v. Dwarka Prasad, 648.
Setabi Dei v. Ramdhani, 111.
Seth Mulchand v. Bai Mancha, 448.
Sethu Ramalinga v. Veeraswami, 326, 327.
Sethurama v. Ponnammal, 122.
Sethuramaswamiar v. Meruswamiar (45 I.A.I., 41 Mad. 296), 488, 493.
—v. Meruswamiar (34 Mad. 470), 494.
Setty v. Gyanachandrappa, 939.
Shadi v. Anup Singh, 293.
Shagun Chand v. Data Ram, 412.
Shah Khanam v. Kalandhar Khan, 163.

Shahebzada v. Hills, 330.
Shaikh Jan v. Bikoo, 305, 375.
Shakuntalabai v. The Court of Wards, 187, 189.
Shalig Ram v. Charanjit Lal, 474.
Sham v. Court, 141.
— Bihari Lal v. Ram Kali, 188, 203.
Sham Das v. Umer Din, 580.
— Devi v. Birbhadra Prasad, 121, 131, 219
— Koer v. Dah Koer, 182, 260.
— Kuar v. Mohanunda, 576.
— Lal v. Amarendro, 210.
— — v. Banna, 611.
— — v. Bindo, 589.
— Narain v. Rughooburdyal, 283.
— Rathi v. Jaiccha, 243.
— Shivendar v. Janki Koer, 185.
— Singh v. Kishun Sahai, 120.
— — v. Lal Singh, 407.
— Sunder v. Achhan Kunwar, 207, 221. 225, 228, 242, 300, 301, 310.
Shama Charn v. Khettromoni Dasi, 444.
Shamavahoo v. Dwarkadas, 531.
Shambhu Dayal v. Basdeo, 216.
Shambo Chandra v. Kartick Chunder, 152, 159.
Shambu Prasad v. Mahadeo Prasad, 252.
Shambhunath Shivpuri v. Pushkaranath, 635.
Shamlal v. Amar Nath, 189.
Shamlal v. Jiyabal, 84.
— v. Yesaram, 302.
Shamrao v. Bhimrao, 541, 542.
— v. Kashibai, 424.
— v. Krishnarao, 116.
— v. Mannabai, 402.
— v. Raghunandan, 187, 189.
— v. Rajaram, 299.
— v. Saraswatibai, 288.
Shamrathi v. Kishan, 313.
Shamsing v. Santabai, 548, 554, 578.
Shamu v. Babu Aba, 111.
Shangara v. Krishnan, 638.
Shankar v. Bechu, 304, 305.
— v. Gangaram, 95, 96, 102.
— v. Hardeo, 396.
— v. Venkapa, 492.
— v. Raghoba, 256.
— Baji v. Kashinath, 120.
— Bakhsh v. Hardeo Bakhsh, 277.
— Rao v. Kanta Prasad, 376.
— — v. Vinayak, 299, 315.
Shankaran v. Kesavan, 555.
Shankersingh v. Gulapchand, 412.
Shanmugam Pillai v. K. Shanmugam Pillai 236, 238, 312, 482.
Shanta Bai v. Tarachand 737.
Shantabai v. Ramchandra, 186.
Shantanand v. Basudevanand, 669.
Shantaram v. Hirabai, 806.
— v. Keru Krishna, 247.
— v. Krishna, 82.
— v. Mahabaleshwar, 82, 550.
— v. Malti, 806.
— v. Waman, 394.
Shanti Devi v. Balbir Singh, 699.
— — v. Ramesh Chandra, 699, 796.
Shantikumar Pal v. Mukand Lal Mandal, 235, 244.
Shantilal v. Munshilal, 311.
— Mewaram v. Munshilal Kewalram, 414.
Sharat Chandra v. Shanta Bai, 557.
Sharbati Devi v. Hiralal, 908.
Sharifa v. Munechan, 589.
Sharm Singh v. Hakim, 227.
Shashankabhooshan Chaudhuri v. Brajendranarayan Mandal, 540.
Shashi Bhusan v. Hari Narain, 179.
— Bhushan v. Rajendra Nath, 196.
Shyama Charan v. Sarup Chandra, 479.
Sheik Ibrahim v. Rama Iyer, 313.
Sheikh Abdul v. Shib Lal, 313.
— Ghasit Mian v. Thakur Punchanan Singh, 243, 251.
— Karoo v. Rameshwar Rao, 352, 374.
Sheikriyammada Koya v. Administrator, 83.
Sheldon v. Sheldon, 723.
Sheo Das Pandey v. Mst. Ram Kali, 254.
— Dayal v. Judoonath, 424.
— Gopal v. Firm Ganesh Das Ramgopal, 279, 374.
— Govind v. Ram Adhin, 588.
— Maheep Bikram Singh v. Mahant Thakur Das, 352.
— Narain v. Janki Prasad, 405.
— — v. Khurgo, 250.
— — v. Mata Prasad, 638.
— — v. Mokshoda Das, 384.
— Pershad v. Saheb Lal, 318, 319.
— Pertab v. The Allahabad Bank, 174.
— Prasad v. Aya Ram, 494, 497, 498.
— Ram v. Durga, 357, 375.
— — v. Sheo Ratan, 220.
— Shankar v. Debi Sahai, 174, 203.
— — v. Jaddo Kunwar, 313, 318.
— — v. Ram Shewak, 489.
— — Dayal v. Kamalabati, 246.
— Singh v. Dakho, 74, 203.
— — Rai v. Mussumut Dakho, 640, 641, 642, 643.
Sheobarat v. Bhagwati, 121.
Sheodan v. Balkaran, 409.
Sheodhar v. Sitaram, 389.
Sheodutta v. Akali Bhumijani, 157, 232, 256.
Sheogulam v. Kishun Chaudhuri, 295.
Sheoji v. Prema Kuer, 908.
Sheokaransingh v. Daulatram, 629, 631.
Sheokuarbai v. Jeoraj, 74, 643.
Sheokumar v. Shiv Rani, 964.
Sheolochun Singh v. Saheb Singh, 212.
Sheolotan v. Bhirgun, 553.
Sheonandan v. Ugrah Sao, 413, 415.
Sheoparsan v. Ramnandan, 253.
Sheopersad v. Leela Singh, 293, 295.
Sheoprasad Sahu v. Deocharan Sahu, 320.
Sheopujan v. Ramsewak, 900.
Sheoraj Singh v. Munia, 863.
Sheoratan v. Ram Pargash, 494, 498.
Sher Muhammad Khan v. Ramratan, 286.
Sher Singh v. Basdeo Singh, 117.
Sherwood v. Sherwood, 811.
Shesgiri v. Girewa, 109.
Sheshacharyulu v. Venkatacharyulu, 497.

Shesh Narain v. Savitri, 819.
Shewanti v. Bhawrao, 735.
Shib Charan Das, In the goods of, 451.
Shib Dai v. Ghauri Lal, 902.
—Dayee v. Doorga Pershad, 608.
—Deo v. Ram Prasad, 251, 549.
—Sahai v. Saraswati, 124.
—Sakti v. Piaraylal, 453.
Shibaprasad Singh v. Prayagkumari Debee, 622, 623, 627.
Sibbosoondery v. Bussoomutty, 436, 437.
Shibessouree v. Mothoornath, 232, 487, 489, 499.
Shibu v. Pandu, 109.
Shiddappa v. Pandurang, 233.
Shidramappa v. Neelavabai, 118.
Shimbhu Nath v. Gayan Chand, 203, 641.
Shinappaya v. Rajamma, 598.
Shirambai v. Kalagoda, 851.
Shiv Bhagwan v. Onkarmal, 288.
Shiv Charan v. Ram Saran, 667.
——Das v. Hari Ram, 288.
—Golam v. Baran, 285.
—Shanker v. Bhola, 301.
Shiva Nath v. Tulshi Ram, 384.
Shivaji v. Murlidhar, 341.
Shivajirao v. Vasantrao, 331, 400.
Shiva Kumari v. Uday Pratap, 596, 635.
Shivalingiah v. Chowdamma, 518, 520.
Shivappa v. Yellawa, 93, 95, 96, 100.
—Rudrappa v. Rudrava Chanbasappa, 411, 475, 529.
Shivamurthi v. Vijayasingh, 967.
Shivashankar v. Raghubansh, 306.
Shivji v. Datu, 574, 617, 618.
Shivlal v. Bai Sankli, 604.
Shivmurteppa v. Virappa, 325.
Shivprasad v. Jankibai, 114.
—v. Natwarlal, 548.
Shivrajsingh v. Gaurishankar, 102.
Shivram v. Sakharam, 374.
Shivramsa v. Gurunathsa, 292.
Shome Shankar v. Rajesar, 110.
Shookmov Chandra v. Monoharri Dassi, 462, 469.
Shoshinath v. Krishnasunderi, 553, 554, 555.
Shrawan v. Jangalya, 357.
Shree Shree Gopal Shreedhar Mahadeb v. Shasheebhushan Sarkar, 489.
Shri Ganesh v. Keshavrao, 482.
—Beharilalji v. Bai Rajbai, 610.
—Sitaram v. Harihar, 539.
——v. Shri Harihar, 556.
Shridhar v. Martand, 396.
—v. Hiralal, 512.
—Bhagwanji Teli v. Mst, Sitabai, 601, 604, 607.
Shrinivas v. Narayan, 87, 284, 285, 286, 564.
Shripad v. Vithal, 551.
Shripati Raoji v. Vishwanath, 219.
Shripatrao v. Parvatibai, 547.
Shuganchand v. Prakash Chand, 642.
Shyam Behari Singh v. Rameshwar Prasad Sahu, 89, 271, 338.
—Lal v. Badri Prasad, 308.
——v. Ranbir Singh, 419.
—Sunder v. Jagarnath, 326.
Shyamacharan v. Sricharan, 556.
Shyamsundar v. Shankar Deo, 74.
—v. Shantamani, 599.
Shyamu v. Vishwanath, 93, 101, 102.
Siddagangiah v. Lakshamma, 724.
Siddaiah v. Penchalamma, 776, 817.
Siddappa v. Ningangavda, 565.
Siddegowda v. Parvathamma, 711, 1020.
Siddessury v. Janardan, 603, 606, 607.
Sidheshwar Mukherjee v. Bhubneshwar Prasad, 328, 354, 355, 358, 364.
Sidlingapa v. Sidava, 598, 605.
Sidney re: 479.
Sidramappa v. Babajappa, 273.
Sidramappa v. Mahadevi, 616.
Sifton v. Sifton, 707.
Sikher Chund v. Dulputty, 586.
Simbhunath v. Golap Singh, 372, 373, 377.
Sime Darby & Co. v. Official Assignee, 287.
Simhachalam v. Papasmma, 799.
Simhadari v. Satyanarayana, 551.
Simmani Ammal v. Muttammal, 55, 56.
Simpson v. Simpson, 730, 757, 819.
Sinaya v. Munisami, 580.
Singam v. Draupadi, 224.
Singamma v. Venkatacharlu, 555.
Singh P.L. v. Singh M.M., 820.
Sir Mahomed Yusuf v. Hargovandas, 451.
Siri Thakur v. Atkins, 481.
Sirkant Lal v. Sidheswari Prasad, 296, 299.
Siromani v. Hemkumar, 83, 407.
Sisir Kumar v. Sabita Rani, 806.
Sita Ram v. Dulam, 213.
——v. Zalim Singh, 376.
—Saran v. Jagat, 256.
——v. Chandrabhan, 476.
Sitabai v. Bapu, 530, 531.
——v. Govindrao, 536.
—v. Parvatibai, 550.
—v. Ramchandra, 262, 707, 821, 822.
—v. Ramchandrarao, 598.
—v. Tuljabai, 81.
—v. Vithabai, 517, 518.
Sitaji v. Bijendra, 212.
Sital v. Madho, 269, 270.
—v. Ajablal Mander, 305.
—Das v. Sant Ram, 140, 493.
—Prasad v. Sri Ram, 179, 267.
—Proshad v. Kaifuc Sheikh, 451.
Sitalakshmi v. Venkata Subrahmanian, 819.
Sitalprasad v. Ram Prasad, 279, 294.
Sitamahalaxmi v. Ramachandra, 326, 327.
Sitamma v. Sitapathirao, 636.
Sitanath v. Haimabutty, 597.
Sitanna v. Viranna, 245, 246.
Sitaram v. Aheeree, 521.
—v. Ganpat, 108, 595.
—v. Harihar, 387, 524.
—v. Khandu, 231.
—v. Radhabai, 386.
—v. Tarachand, 388.
—Singh v. Bhikhni Devi, 257.
Sitaramayya v. Venkataramanna, 386.
Siva Kanta v. Rajaniram, 481.

Sivada Balarami v. Sivada Pera Reddi, 573.
Sivagami Achi v. Somasundaram, 558.
Sivagnana v. Udayar, 276.
— Tevar v. Periasami, 91, 331, 394.
Sivaiah v. Tekchand, 901.
Sivanancha v. Thirunamakarsu, 112, 231.
Sivanandy v. Bhagavathyamma, 512, 697, 701.
Sivarama v. Subramonia, 307.
Sivaramakrishnan v. Kaveri Ammal, 274, 282.
Sivaramamurthi v. Venkayya, 328.
Sivashankara v. Vadagiri, 500.
Sivasuryanarayana v. Audinarayana, 534.
Siveshwar v. Har Narain, 96, 102.
Skinner v. Orde, 578.
Slon v. Slon, 706.
Slowson v. Slowson, 713.
Sm. Ratan Moni Debi v. Nagendra Narain Singh, 507.
Sm. Shakuntala Devi v. Kaushalya Devi, 87, 118, 208.
Smith v. Massey, 479.
— v. Smith, 801.
Smyth v. R. 820.
Snehalata v. Jagadish, 817.
Snook v. Watts, 746.
Sobadra v. Shri Thakur Behariji Maharaji 129, 131.
Sobhaddi v. Gobind, 140.
Sobhag Singh v. Pirthe Singh, 406.
Sobhana Sen v. Amar Kanta Sen, 801, 817.
Sobhanadramma v. Narasimhaswami, 598.
Sohan Lal v. Atal Nath, 582, 583.
— — v. Chhagan Lal, 226.
Sohan Singh v. Gurtej Singh, 573.
— Singh v. Kabla Singh, 512.
Soiru Padmanabh v. Narayanrao, 298.
Sokkanadha v. Sokkanadha, 291.
Solukhna v. Ramdolal, 530.
Soma v. Brij Lal, 203.
Somanatha v. Luxman, 256.
Somasekhara v. Mahadeva, 80, 646, 648.
— v. Subhadramaji, 556.
Somasekharappa v. Basappa, 544.
Somasundara v. Ganga, 269, 282.
Somasundaram v. Unnamalai, 602, 610, 611,
— v. Vaithilinga, 140, 167, 647.
Someshwar v. Someshwar, 233.
Someshwar v. Swami Nath, 908.
Someswara v. Leelawathi, 752.
Someshwari Prasad v. Maheshwari Prasad, 622, 625.
Somiah v. Rattamma, 533.
— v. Rattamma, 904.
Somnath v. Ambica Prasad, 226.
Sonatun v. Juggutsoondree, 445, 470, 472, 482.
Soniram v. Dwarkabai, 98.
Soni Ram v. Kanhaiya Lal, 243.
Soobah Pirthee Lal v. Soobah Doorgah Lal, 585.
Soobramiah v. Nataraja, 119.
Soonder Narain v. Bennud Ram, 578.
Sooniram Ramniranjandass v. Alagu Nachiyar Koil, 480.
Sooramma v. Venkataratnam, 87.
Sooratha v. Kanaka, 551.
Soorendranath v. Heeramonee, 81.
Soorendro v. Nundan, 300, 302, 306.
Soorja Koer v. Nath Buksh, 610.
Soorjeemoney Dossey v. Denobundoo Mullick (1857 —6 M.I.A. 526), 452, 453.
— — v. Denobundoo Mullick (1862—9, M.I.A. 123), 444, 458, 465, 466.
Sorolah v. Bhoobun, 179, 610.
Soshi v. Ganesh, 294.
Soshil Chand v. Mangat Ram, 87, 88, 144.
Sotam Ram v. Parduman Ram, 298.
Soudaminey Dossee v. Jogesh Chunder, 464,
Soundara Rajan v. Natarajan, 464.
Soundararajan v. Arunachalam, 109, 401, 412.
Sourendra Mohan v. Hari Prasad, 50, 354.
Souri v. Pachia, 326.
Sovabati Dassi v. Kashi Nath, 495.
Sowdaminee Dossee v. Administrator General of Bengal, 182.
Sowntharapandian Ayyangar v. Periaveru Thevan, 558.
Spencer v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 668.
Squire v. Squire, 720.
Sri Radhakrishna Asthapit Thakurdwara v. Mst. Maharaj Kunwar, 488.
Sree Kalimata Thakurani v. Jibandhan, 485.
— Krishna Jana v. Seetha Nath Bera, 639.
— Rajah Vasi Reddi Balachandrasekhara Varaprasad Bahadur Manne Sultan Garu v. Lakshminarasimham & Ors. 330.
Sree Sree Ishwar v. Sushila Bala, 483, 487.
— — Gopal v. Baldeo Narain, 486.
— — Iswar Gopal Jieu v. Pratapmal, 492.
Sreemanchunder v. Gopalchunder, 636.
Sreemathi Rajlakshmi Dasee v. Bhola Nath Sen, 251.
Sreemutty Puddo v. Dwarka Nath Biswas, 213.
— Soorjeemoney Dossee v. Denobundoo, 211, 267, 348, 350.
Sreenarain v. Kishen, 577.
— v. Sreemutty, 554.
Sreenath v. Surbo, 197.
Sreenivasan v. Rangachari, 299, 358.
Sreepadachar v. Visantha Bai, 717.
Sree Raja Yanumula v. Yanumula, 286.
Sreeramaraju v. Pullam Raju, 290.
Sreeramulu v. Kristamma, 567.
Sri Balusu Gurulingaswami v. Balusu Ramalakshmamma, 535, 551.
— Gajapathi v. Gajapathi, 75.
— Gajapati v. Pusapati, 113.
Sri Gajapathi Nilamani v. Radhamani, 112.
— Gopal Thakur v. Pravasini, 481.
— Hari Rao v. Venkaiah, 531.
— Jagannath v. State of Orissa, 478.
— Kishan v. Jagannathji, 495.
— Mahant Govind v. Sitaram, 281.
— Narain v. Lala Raghubans, 376.

Sri Nath v. Jagannath, 308.
—Raghunada v. Brozo Kishor, 261, 296, 534, 546.
—Raja Rao Venkata Surya v. The Court of Wards, 446, 560, 624.
——Viravara v. Sri Raja Viravara, 416.
—Rajah Venkata v. Sri Rajah Rangayya, 556, 557.
——Yenumula v. Sri Rajah Yenumula, 627.
—Raja Lakshmi Devi v. Sri Raja Surya, 627.
—Raja Venkata v. Sri Rajah Surameni, 440.
—Ram v. Chandeshwar Prasad, 218.
——v. Jagdamba, 183.
—Ram v. Prabhu Dayal, 501.
—Rama Rao v. Raja of Pittapur, 624.
—Raman v. Sri Gopal, 495.
—Ranga v. Srinivasa, 297, 413.
—Sankareswar v. Bhagbati, 494.
——Sridhar Jiu v. Manindra Kumar Mitra, 443.
—Thakur Krishna v. Kanhaylal, 482.
—Thakurji v. Nanda, 276.
—— v. Sukhdeo Singh, 481.
Srimath Daivasikamani v. Noor Mahomed, 492.
——v. Periyanan Chetti, 490.
Srimathi Sabitri v. Mrs. F. A. Savi, 267.
——Thakurain v. Mrs. F. A. Savi, 497, 608.
Srimati Widyawanti v. Jai Dayal, 387.
—Hemangini v. Kedarnath, 435.
—Krishna v. Bhaiya Rajendra, 142, 188, 214.
—Wooma Daee v. Gokoolanund, 188, 552.
—Parbati v. Jagadis Chunder, 622.
—Pramila v. Chandra Shekhar, 157.
Srimohan v. Brijbehary, 217, 218, 221.
—v. Macgregor, 406.
Srimutty Manokarani Debi v. Haripada, 207.
Srinath Tewary v. Ramsurat Devi, 273.
Srinibas v. Hariram, 291.
Srinivas v. Narayan, 544, 546.
—v. Dandayudapani, 115.
Srinivasa v. Ammani, 602.
—v. Evalappa, 499.
—Iyer v. Saraswathi Ammal, 510.
—v. Kuppuswami, 337, 338.
—v. Rangasami, 535.
—v. Thiruvengadathaiyangar, 519.
—Chariar v. Evalappa Mudaliar, 488.
—Rao v. Annadhanam Seshacharulu, 222.
—Rao & Ors. v. Annadhanam Seshacharlu & Ors., 87.
Srinivasagam v. Chinnammal, 446.
Srinivasan v. Srinivasan, 518.
Sripat Singh v. Tagore, 368, 369, 370, 372.
Sriram v. Haricharan, 405.
Sriramamurthi v. Official Receiver, 356.
Sriramulu v. Anasuyamma, 615.
—v. Ramayya, 550.
Stalkarti v. Gopal, 350.
Stanwick v. Stanwick, 723.
State v. Narsu Appa, 510.
State Bank of India v. Ghamandi Ram, 266, 269.
—Of Bihar v. Bhabapritananda, 478.
———v. Charusila Dasi, 478, 501.
——Bombay v. Pandurang, 764, 850, 1008, 1014.
——Madras v. Ramanatha Rao, 139, 140.
—of U.P. v. Rukmini Raman, 623.
—of Travancore Cochin v. Shanmugha Vilas Cashew Nut Factory, 851.
Statham v. Statham, 723, 754.
Ste Croix v. Ste Croix, 789, 793.
Stibbe v. Stibbe, 809, 811.
Stick v. Stick, 724.
Stroud v. Stroud, 756.
Stuart v. Stuart, 720, 774.
Studdy v. Studdy, 772.
Suba Singh v. Sarafraz, 103, 120.
Subarna v. Arjuno, 518.
Subba v. Ganasa, 397.
—v. Krishnamachari, 323, 328.
—v. Rama, 426.
—v. Venkatrami, 321.
—Goundan v. Krishnamachari, 301.
—Naicker v. Nallammal, 98.
—Narayana v. Ramaswami, 639.
—Rao v. Anasuyamma, 800.
——v. Krishna Prasadam, 102.
——v. Satyanarayana, 533.
——v. Venkata Satyanarayana, 533.
—Reddi v. Chengalamma, 250.
——v. Daraisami, 560.
——v. Govinda Reddi, 236.
——v. Venkataramayya, 312.
Subbaiya v. Mustapha, 505.
Subbakhal v. Subba Gounder, 579.
Subbalakshmi v. Narayana Ayyar, 246.
—v. Ramalakshmi, 902.
Subbamma v. Krishna Murty, 236.
—v. Subramanyam, 247.
Subbammal v. Avudaiyammal, 113, 251.
Subbanna v. Balasubba Reddi, 331.
—v. Subbanna, 610.
Subbarama v. Saraswathi, 728.
Subbaramayya v. Venkatasubbamma, 28.
Subbarami v. Ramamma, 275, 445, 446.
—Reddi v. Chenchuraghava Reddi, 410, 575.
Subbarao v. Mahalakshmamma, 572.
Subbaraya v. Kylasa, 121.
—v. Manika, 423.
Subbaraya v. Ramasami, 161, 199, 519.
—v. Sadashiva, 414.
Subbarayalu v. Kamala Vallithayaramma, 616.
Subbarayana v. Subbakka, 593.
Subbarayar v. Subbammal, 555, 568.
Subbarayudu v. Venkatiah, 766.
Subbarazu v. Venkataratnam, 427.
Subbareddi v. Cenchalamma, 906.
—v. Govindareddi, 208.
Subbaroya v. Aiyaswami, 214.
Subbayya v. Ananta, 395.
—v. Ramakoteswara Rao, 533.
—v. Sitaramamma, 264.
—v. Surayya, 269, 446.
—Thevar v. Marudappa Pandian, 624.

Subbu Chetty's Family Charities v. Raghava Mudaliar, 240.
Subhani v. Nawab, 83.
Subhash Misir v. Thagi Misir, 1010.
Subbu Naidu v. Varadarajulu, 417.
Subha Bibi v. Hara Lal, 636.
Subheti v. Nokhesingh, 330.
Subramania v. Commissioner of Income Tax, 277.
— v. Gopala, 390.
— v. Rathnavelu, 109. 110, 139.
— v. Sabapathy, 356, 360.
— v. Valu, 595.
— Ayyar v. Ratnavelu Chetty, 62, 63.
— Pillai v. Padmanabha, 282.
Subramaniam v. Chelikani, 226.
— v. Krishnaswami, 967.
Subramanian v. Arunachelam, 170, 172, 174, 179, 183, 188, 194, 203, 214, 403.
— v. Kalyanaram, 99.
— v. Kumarappa, 83, 397.
— v. Muthiak Chettiar, 563.
— Chettiar v. Velayudam Chettiar, 562.
Subramanya v. Padmanabha, 326.
— v. Sadasiva, 376.
— v. Siva Subramanya, 103, 625, 626.
Subramanyam v. Saraswathi, 812.
— v. Subba Rao, 582.
Subrao v. Mahadevi, 352.
— v. Radha, 71, 549, 645, 646, 647, 648.
Subraya v. Nagappa, 377.
Suchit v. Harnanden, 581.
Sudanand v. Soorjoomonee, 342.
Sudarsan v. Ram Kripal, 504, 505.
Sudarsanam v. Narsimhulu, 263, 266, 279, 330, 420, 423.
Sudarshan v. Suresh, 199.
Sudehaiya v. Ram Dass, 256.
Sudhakar v. Gobardhan, 372.
Sudhansu v. Mt. Ramjhari, 387.
Sudhanya Kumar v. Haripada, 580.
Sudhindra Thirtha Swamiar v. Commissioner for Hindu Religious & Charitable Endowments Mysore, 478.
Sudhir Chandra v. Jagadish Chandra, 219.
Suganchand v. Mangibai, 74, 81, 84.
— Bhikamchand v. Mangibai Gulabchand 642.
Sudha v. Sankappa Rai, 520.
Suhagwanti v. Sodhan, 908.
Suhas Pande v. Manohar Pande, 773, 817.
Sukalal v. Bapu, 630.
Sukdeo v. Kapil Deo, 549.
Sukh Dei v. Kedar Nath, 444.
Sukh Lal v. Murari Lal, 307.
— Ram v. Gori Shankar, 902.
Sukhadakanta Bhattacharjya v. Joginee-kanta Bhattacharjya, 349.
Sukhbir v. Mangeisar, 551.
Sukhbir Singh v. Mangeisar Rao, 81.
Sukhdeo v. Basdeo, 297.
— v. Madhusudan, 355.
— v. Ram Chandar, 576.
Sukhribai v. Pohkalsing, 599.
Sukumari v. Ananta, 647.
Sulbi v. Ramkrishnabhatta, 250.
Sumantrabai v. Battibai, 235.
— v. Rishabhkumar, 212, 226, 246, 529, 569.
Sumer Chand v. State of Rajasthan, 863.
— Singh v. Liladhar, 388.
Sumi Devi v. Prannkrushna, 415.
Sumrun v. Chunder Mun, 403.
Sunanda v. Gundopant, 773.
Sunanda v. V. Subba Rao, 773, 817.
Sundar Lal v. Baldeo Singh, 642.
— — v. Chhittar Mal, 262.
— Sahu v. Chamra Sahu, 237.
Sundara v. Girija, 859, 950.
Sundarabai v. Jayavant, 632.
Sundaram v. Ramasamia, 187.
— Pillai v. Ramasamia Pillai, 54.
Sundaranbal v. Suppiah, 1032.
Sundaramma v. Venkatasubba, 558.
Sundaramayya v. Sitamma, 276.
Sundarasiva v. Viyamma, 114, 247.
Sundarasivudu v. Adinarayana, 530.
Sundaresan v. Viswananda, 492.
Sundari v. Bhimraj, 553.
— v. Pitambari, 157, 161.
— Ammal v. Subramania Ayyar, 519.
Sundarji v. Dahibai, 608, 640.
Sundaralingasami v. Ramasami, 626
Sunder Devi v. Jhaboo Lal, 73, 199.
— Lal v. Raghunandan, 352, 389.
— Mull v. Satya Kinker Sahana, 307.
— Singh v. Manna Sunder Singh, 817.
— — v. Ram Nath, 611.
Sunderabai v. Devaji, 571.
Sundrabai v. Hanmant Gurnath, 551.
— v. Shivnarayana, 303, 507, 519, 648.
Sundramani Devi v. Rupei Dei, 223, 305.
Sundrammal v. Rangasami, 130, 133.
Sunil Kumar v. Satirani, 964, 976.
Sunkur v. Goury Pershad, 298.
Supdu v. Sakharam, 311.
Suppammal v. Collector of Tanjore, 481.
Sura Bala Debi v. Sudhir Kumar Mukerji, 549.
— Lakshmiah Chetty v. Kothandarama Pillai, 636.
— Prasad v. Makhna Devi, 223.
Suraj v. Attar, 605.
— Bakhsh Singh v. Kedar Nath, 306, 307.
— Balli v. Tilakdhari, 259.
— Bhan Singh v. Sah Chain Sukh, 234, 308.
— Bunsi Koer v. Sheo Persad, 295, 321, 322, 323, 325, 329, 352, 354, 365, 368, 369, 371, 376, 393, 398.
— Mal v. Nathwa, 256.
— Narain v. Iqbal Narain, 412, 419.
— — v. Ratan Lal, 277.
— Prasad v. Makhan Lal, 340.
— — v. Makhna, 242.
Surajbai v. Sadashiv, 569.
Surajmani v. Rabi Nath. 453. 473. 474. 475.
Surampalli v. Surampalli. 598, 601, 608.
Surareddy v. Venkata Subbareddi. 471.
Suraya v. Lakshminarasamma, 117.
Surayya v. Subbamma, 255.
Surbomungola v. Mohendronath, 479.
Surendrakrishna Ray v. Shree Shree Ishwar Bhubaneshwari Thakurani, 483, 487.
Surendra Nandan v. Sailaja, 528, 545.

Surendra Narayan Sarbhadhikari v. Bhola Nath Ray Chaudhari, 493, 494, 497, 549.
—Nath v. Kala Chand, 560.
——v. Sambhunath, 313, 318.
——v. Saralia, Hindi Mahajani School, 364.
—Keshab v. Doorgasoondery, 530, 552, 560, 568, 570.
Surendranath Basu v. Radha Rani Debi, 114, 214.
Sureshwar v. Maheshrani, 243, 244, 245, 249.
Suriyanarayana v. Balasubramania, 614.
Suriya Rau v. Raja of Pittapur, 457.
Surjit Kumar v. Raj Kumari, 740.
Surjyamoni v. Kali Kanta, 521, 522.
Surti v. Narain Das, 162, 738.
Suryanarayana v. Ganesulu, 368, 424.
—v. Sugunavathi, 100, 101.
—v. Venkataramana, 528, 539, 540.
Suryanarayanarao v. Rajeshwari, 479.
Suryaprakasam v. Gangaraju, 583.
Sushama Roy v. Atul Krishna, 486.
Susheela v. Jagannadham, 806.
Susheelasundaree v. Bishnupada De, 207.
Sushila Devi v. Dhani Ram, 800, 818.
Suvarnabahen v. Rashmikant, 736.
Swaminatha v. Krishnaswami, 368.
Swaminathan v. Angayarkanni Ammal, 962.
Swan v. Swan, 724.
Swaroop Narain v. Bhanwar Kunwar, 112.
Swayampakula Subbaramayya v. Swayampakula Venkatasubbamma, 514.
Syal v. Syal, 697, 752.
Sydulu v. Venkateshwarlu, 356, 372, 376.
Syed Abdul Wajid v. Vishwanathan, 273, 286.
—Kasam v. Jorawar Singh, 321, 414, 415.
Szechter v. Szechter, 739.

T.(H). v. T.(E)., 741.
T. Sarojini Devi v. Sri Krishna, 98, 101, 102.
Tadavarti v. Myneni, 581.
Tagore v. Tagore, 87, 152, 321, 440, 443, 446, 448, 453, 455-457, 464, 466, 467, 608, 609.
Tahaldai v. Gaya Pershad, 116.
Tahsil Naidu v. Kulla Naidu, 532, 533, 535.
Talari Erappa v. Muthyalappa, 968.
Taluk Raj v. Bacha, 189.
Talemand v. Rukmina, 613.
Tamijannessa v. Purna Chandra, 669.
Tammireddi v. Gangireddi, 290, 297, 396.
Tara v. Krishna, 114, 161.
—Chand v. Nobin Chunder, 447.
——v. Reeb Ram, 273, 296.
—Sahuani v. Raghunath, 276.
Tarachurn v. Sureshchunder, 540.
Tarini Gupta v. Gouri Gupta, 1018.
Tarinicharan Chakrabarti v. Debendrala De, 325.
Tarit Bhusan Ray v. Sree Ishwar, Sridhar Salgramsila Thakur, 486.
Tarlochan Singh v. Mohinder Kaur, 773, 817.
Taro v. Darshan Singh, 842, 904.
Tarokessur Roy v. Soshi, 453, 456, 457, 458, 465.
Tatayya v. Garimilla, 219.
Tatayya v. Nakaraju, 109, 519, 550.
Tatoba v. Tarabai, 276, 320.
Tatya Mohyaji v. Rabha Dadaji, 588.
—Shantappa v. Ratnabai, 543.
Tayammaul v. Sashachalla, 525, 569.
Tayawwa v. Chinnappa, 771.
Taylor v. Bleach, 809.
Teale v. Burt, 794.
Teeluck v. Shama, 167.
Teertaruppa v. Soonderaikijien, 498.
Tegh Indar v. Harnam, 404.
Tej Protap v. Champa, 416.
Teja Singh v. Sarjit Kaur, 699, 796.
Tejpal v. Ganga, 580.
Tejraj v. Mohanlal, 417, 420.
Tejrani v. Sarupchand, 547.
Tejumal v. Mulchand, 133.
Tekait v. Basanta, 521, 696, 700.
Tekchand v. Soman Singh, 256.
Tellis v. Saldanha, 76.
Thackersey v. Hurbhum, 74, 500.
Thadi Murali Mohana Reddi v. Medapati Gangaraju, 355.
Thailambal Ammal v. Kesavan Nair, 259.
Thakardwara Pheru Mal v. Ishar Das, 486.
Thakar Singh v. Mst. Uttam, 226, 258.
—Jai Indira v. Lala Khairati Lal, 309.
Thakoor Deyhee v. Rai Baluk Ram, 216.
Thakur Das v. Mst. Putli, 312, 313.
Thakur Hari Singh v. I.T. Commissioner, 622.
—Indraj Bux v. Thakur Sheo Naresh, 218, 219.
—Ishri Singh v. Baldeo Singh, 447.
—Jagmohan v. Musammat Sheoraj, 476.
—Mani v. Dai Rani, 317.
—Prasad v. Mussammat Dipa Kuer, 207, 218, 219, 228, 231, 236, 242, 244, 249.
—Rab Prasad Singh v. Chhotay Munwan, 596.
—Ram Janki v. Jago Singh, 901.
—Satrohan Singh v. Uma Dutt, 386.
—Seo Mangal Singh v. Thakurain, Bodhi Kuar, 609.
—Singh v. Mst. Uttam, 258.
—Sree Sree Annapurna Devi v. Shiba Sundari Dasi, 486.
Thakurain Jaipal v. Bhaiya Indar, 255.
Thakurani Tara Kumari v. Chaturbhuj, 627.
Thakurji v. Parmeshwar Dayal, 218, 527.
Thandavaroya v. Shunmugam, 296, 495.
Thandayuthapani v. Raghunatha, 423.
Thangam v. Suppa, 398, 402.
Thangathammal v. Arunachalam, 386.
Thangathanni v. Ramu, 647.
Thangavelu v. The Court of Wards, Madras, 626.
—Asari v. Lakshmi Ammal, 112.
Thani Chettiar v. Dakshinamurthy, 323, 326, 327.
Thankamma v. Narayana, 83.
Thapita v. Thapita, 520.
Thayammal v. Annamala, 144.
—v. Kuppanna, 575.

Thayammal v. Rangaswami, 235.
— v. Salammal, 909.
— v. Venkatarama, 540, 542.
Thenappa Chettiar v. Keruppan Chettiar, 497, 502.
Thenku Veeriah v. Tamisetti Nagiah, 701, 753.
Thimmappa v. Themmavva, 796.
Thimmegowda v. Dyavamma, 355, 375.
Thimmi Ammal v. Venkatarama, 101, 102.
Thirumal v. Koppiah, 569.
Thirumal v. Rajammal, 700.
Thirumaleshwara v. Ganapayya, 559.
Thirupatiraju v. Venkayya, 250.
Thiruvathammal v. Vagunathan, 519.
Thiruvenkidaswamy v. Pallani Ammal, 245.
Thomas v. Thomas, 750.
Thompson v. Thompson, 792.
Thota Appanna v. Nakkava, 580.
Thripurasundara Rao v. Kotayya, 247.
Thukrain v. Government, 634.
Thukru Bai v. Attavar, 75.
Thulashi Ammal v. Gouri Ammal, 763.
Thunthi v. Dhant Ram, 518.
Thyagsundardoss v. Sevuga Pandia, 446, 453, 623, 624.
Thyamma v. Giriyamma, 111, 116.
Tickler v. Tickler, 708.
Tilakdhari Rai v. Parma Raj, 259.
Tilkayat Shri Govindlalji v. State of Rajasthan, 478, 502.
Timmappa v. Narsinha, 372, 373.
Timmins v. Timmins, 710.
Tin Couri v. Krishna, 603.
Tirath Kaur v. Kirpal Singh, 698.
Tirath Ram v. Mst. Kahan Devi, 122, 143, 216.
Tirbeni Sahai v. Ramsingh, 235, 476.
Tirkangauda Mallangauda v. Shivappa Patil, 74, 548, 570, 571.
Tirukappa v. Kamalamma, 773.
Tirumalachariar v. Andal Ammal, 121, 131.
Tirumamagal v. Ramaswami, 162.
Tirupatiraju v. Venkayya, 226.
Tiruvengadam v. Butchayya, 63.
Tiruvengadath v. Srinivasa, 500.
Tiruvengala v. Butchayya, 529.
Tiruvenkatachariar v. Andalamma, 140.
Tod Singh v. Begam Bai, 215.
Tolaram v. Beenjraj, 376.
Toolsee Dass v. Luckhymoney, 152.
Toolseydas v. Premji, 285.
Topha v. Samman, 842.
Toshanpal v. District Judge of Agra, 388.
Totawa v. Basawa, 113, 188.
Tottenpudi v. Tottempudi, 277, 282.
Trayamkeshar v. Babu Basant, 334.
Tribeni v. Ramasray, 371.
Tribeni Mishra v. Rampujan, 286.
Tribhovandas v. Yorke Smith, 277.
Tribhuvan Das v. Gangadas, 463.
Trikam v. Natha, 144.
Trikangauda Mallangauda v. Shivappa Patil, 548, 570, 571.
Trikumdas v. Haridas, 479.
Trilok Singh v. Savitri Devi, 797.
Trimbak v. Bhagu Bai, 609.
— v. Lakshman, 494.
— v. Narayan, 371, 424.
— v. Narayan Damodar, 361, 369, 372, 373.
— v. Pandurang, 327.
— Balkrishna v. Narayan Damodar, 368.
Trimbakpuri v. Gangabai, 493.
Tripuramba v. Venkataratnam, 540.
Trisul v. Daman, 98.
Trutia v. Basudev Singh, 295, 579.
Tukaram v. Dinkar, 109.
— v. Gunaji, 186.
Tukarambhat v. Gangaram, 386.
— v. Gangi, 100, 247, 567.
— v. Narayan, 187.
— v. Ramchandra, 321, 559.
— v. Yesu, 229.
Tukino v. Aotea Dist. M. L. Board, 667.
Tula Ram v. Shyam, 82.
— — v. Tulshi Ram, 304, 306.
— — v. Shyam Lal, 120.
Tulasiram v. Ramprasanna, 83, 488.
Tuljaram v. Mathurdas, 204.
Tulsa v. Pannalal, 699.
Tulsan v. Sahib Ram, 475.
Tulsha v. Gopal Rai, 593.
Tulshi Prasad v. Jugmohanlal, 219.
— — v. Bishnath Prasad, 376.
— Ram v. Behari Lal, 71.
— — v. Babu, 341, 342.
Tulsi Ahir v. Sonia, 904.
Tulsi Ram v. Annibai, 291.
Tulsidas v. Vaghela Raisingji, 588.
Turner v. Turner, 758, 759.
Turquand v. Board of Trade, 668.
Tustu Charan v. Kali Kumar, 212
Udai Chunder v. Ashutosh, 219.
— Dat v. Ambika Prasad, 222.
— Pratap v. Narotam, 259.
Udainath v. Chhaya, 701.
Udaram v. Ranu, 320, 325, 326, 328, 352, 353.
Udaynath v. Ratnakar, 419.
Udayanath v. Shivapriya, 598.
Ude Chand v. Rajo, 908.
Ude Singh v. Mst. Daulat Kaur, 522, 598.
Udebhan v. Vikram, 45, 81.
Uderam v. Thaggu, 109, 402.
Udhao v. Bhaskar, 560.
Udhav Shankar v. Tarabai, 902, 907.
Uddoy v. Jadublal, 345.
Udmiram v. Balramdas, 364, 376.
Ujagar Singh v. Jeo, 118.
Ujambai v. Harakchand Govindji, 451
Ukoor Doss v. Chunder, 497.
Ulagalum Perumal Sethurayar v. Rani Subbalakshmi Nachair, 628.
Ulfat Rai v. Tej Narain, 376.
Uma Charan v. Kajal, 759, 822.
Umakanta Bhattacharjee v. Bedbati Debi, 157.
— v. Biswambhar, 447.
— v. Jitendra, 374.
— v. Satya Charan, 221.
Umaraparvathy v. Bhagwathy Amma, 404.
Umashankar v. Mst. Nageshwari, 131, 138.

Umashankar v. Radha Devi, 766, 767.
Uma Sundari v. Sourobinee, 531.
Umabai v. Bhavu, 162.
—v. Nani, 566.
Umaid Bahadur v. Udai Chand, 121, 125.
Uman Prasad v. Gandharp, 636.
—Shankar v. Musammat Aisha, 260.
Umayal Achi v. Lakshmi Achi, 92, 93, 98, 100.
Umed v. Goman Bhaiji, 374.
Umesh Bhagat v. Ram Kumari Devi, 571.
Umiyaben v. Ambalal, 814, 818.
Umri Bai v. Chittar, 717, 724.
Umrao Kunwar v. Badri, 255.
—Singh v. Baldeo Singh, 467.
Umrithnath v. Goureenath, 274, 278, 286.
Union of India v. Shree Ram, 295, 314.
United Provinces through Deputy Commissioner, Hardoi v. Kanhaiyalal & Ors. 133, 140.
Upendra v. Gopee Nath, 420.
—Kishore v. Nobo Kishore, 232.
—Lal v. Hem Chundra, 470.
—Nath v. Bindesri Prosad, 232, 239.
——Das v. Chintamani Devi, 942.
Upoma v. Bholaram, 512, 649.
Urbasi v. Chandra Dharua, 251.
Utma Kuar v. Bhagwanta Kuar, 589.

V. v. V., 756.
V.R.C.T.V.R. Chettiar v. C.A.P.C. Chettiar, 288
V. S. Reddi v. Tulasamma, 909.
V. V. Narasaiah v. C. P. Raju, 964.
Vacuum Oil Co. v. Secretary of State, 668.
Vadali v. Kotipalli, 113.
Vadilal v. Shah Khushal, 291.
Vadivelu Mudaliar v. N. S. Rajabada Mudaliar, 482.
Vaidyanatha v. Savithri, 567.
—v. Swaminatha, 479, 550.
—v. Aiyasamy, 394, 395, 423.
Vaijnath v. Dagdudas, 112.
Vaikuntam v. Kallapiram (23 Mad. 512), 303, 394, 519, 591.
—v. Kallapiram (26 Mad. 497), 519.
Vaitheswara v. Srinivasa, 638.
Vaithialinga v. Srirangath, 253.
Vaithilinga v. Ayyathorai, 162.
Vaithilingam v. Murugajan, 570.
—v. Natesa, 551, 568.
Vallabhdas v. Sakarbai, 143.
Vallabhalalji v. Mahalaxmi Bahuji, 80, 523, 526.
Vallabhram v. Bai Hariganga, 162.
Valliammai Achi v. Nagappa Chettiar, 270, 445.
Valliammal v. Priaswamy, 818.
Vallura v. Sasapu, 223.
Valu v. Ganga, 604.
Valubai v. Govind, 554.
Vaman v. Venkaji, 565, 568.
Vangala v. Vangala, 214.
Vanka Lakshminarayana v. Mangalappalli, 531, 539.
Vannia Kone v. Vannichi Ammal, 82, 83, 84,
Varada v. Sriramulu, 341.
—Bhaktavatsaludu & Ors. v. Damojipurapu Venkata Narasimha Rao & Ors. 296, 311.
—Pillai v. Jeevarathnammal, 259.
Varadamma K. v. Kanchi Shankara Reddi, 535.
Varadammal v. Ambalal, 356, 413.
Varadarajulu v. Baby Ammal, 727.
Varahalamma v. Ammathalli, 101.
Varahalu v. Sithamma, 602, 608.
Varamma v. Gopaladasayya, 257.
Varjivan v. Ghelji, 228.
Vasant Atmaram v. Dattoba, 81.
—Rao v. Beharilal, 243, 251.
Vasantam Venkayya v. Vasantam Baghavammur, 616.
Vasant Kumar Basu v. Ramshankar Roy, 453.
Vasappan v. Sarada, 683, 821.
Vasireddi Venkayya v. Gopu Sreeramulu, 534.
Vasonji v. Chanda Bibi, 226.
Vasudeo v. Kankochand, 327.
—v. Ramchandra, 565.
Vasudev v. Narayan, 439.
Vasudeo v. Venkatesh, 321.
Vasudeva v. Maguni, 278.
Vathsala v. Manoharan, 760.
Vayidinada v. Appu, 551.
Vedachela v. Subramana, 49, 103, 104, 120, 122.
Vedammal v. Vedanayaga, 114, 116, 161, 163.
Vedanayaga v. Vedammal, 163.
Vedathanni v. The Commissioner of Income Tax, 603.
Vedavalli v. Ramaswamy, 727.
Vedavelli v. Mangamma, 554.
Vedavyas Rao v. Narayana Rao, 166, 948.
Veera v. Balasurya, 533.
Veerabadra v. Marudaga, 250.
Veerabhadrappa v. Lingappa, 407, 429.
Veeraju v. Venkayya, 248, 258.
Veerraju v. Narayanamma, 608.
Veeranna v. Sayamma, 561, 566.
Veeranna v. Seethamma, 1033.
Veerapa Naidu v. Venkaiah, 264.
Veérappa v. Michael, 508, 509, 518.
Veerayya v. Chellamma, 604, 609.
Veeriah v. Nagiah, 698.
Velayudhan v. Commissioner of Income Tax, Madras, 273.
Vella Venkatasubbayya v. Yella Venkatramayya, 320, 364, 427.
Vellaiyappa v. Natarajan (50 Mad. 340), 595, 596.
—Chetty v. Natarajan, 110, 402, 595.
Vellanki v. Venkata Rama, 530, 533, 539, 542.
Vellinayagi v. Subramaniam, 741.
Veluswami v. Dandapani, 479, 484.
Venayeck v. Luxemeebaee, 144, 204.
Vendravandas v. Yamunabai, 320.
Venilal v. Parjaram, 119.
Venkaji v. Vishnu, 224, 249.
Venkalakshmi Ammal v. Jagannathan, 539, 540, 565.

Venkamma v. Savitramma, 577.
—v. Subrahmaniam, 533, 535.
—v. Venkatareddi, 909.
Venkanna v. Aitamma, 616.
—v. Narasimham, 254.
—v. Narayanamma, 199.
—Narasinha v. Laxmi, 82.
Venkappa v. Fakirgowda, 562.
—v. Jivaji, 540.
Venkaraddi v. Hanmantgowda, 185.
Venkareddi v. Venku Reddi, 394.
Venkata v. Chellayammi, 457.
—v. Narayya, 396.
—v. Purushottam, 162.
—v. Subbayya Srirangam, 327.
—v. Subhadra, 555.
—v. Suraneni, 448.
—v. Surenani, 212.
—v. The Court of Wards, 396.
—v. Veerabhadrayya, 214.
—v. Venkata, 177, 178, 183, 185, 186.
—Challamma v. Cheekati, 83, 553.
—Chenchayya, v. Ramalingam, 286, 306, 340, 376, 431.
— Kristnayya v. Venkatachalam, 509.
—Narsimha v. Rangayya, 557.
—Rama v. Bhaskarrao, 569.
—Reddi v. Lakshmama, 276, 398.
——v. Sidda Reddi, 400.
—Row v. Tuljaram Row, 311.
—Seetharama Chandra Row v. Kanchumarthi Raju, 569.
Subbarao v. Lakshminarasamma, 281.
—Surya v. The Court of Wards, 439.
Venkatadri v. Parthasarathi, 214.
Venkatachala v. Thimmajamma, 441.
Venkatacharyulu v. Mohona, 388.
—v. Rangacharyulu, 507, 511, 512.
Venkatachella v. Chinnaiya, 322, 326.
—v. Thathamaml, 439.
Venkatagiri v. Chandru, 120, 122.
Venkatakrishna Rao v. Satyavathi, 453.
—Rao v. Sub. Collector, Ongole, 500.
Venkatakrishnamma v. Annapurnamma, 532, 534.
Venkatamma v. Venkataswamy Reddy, 698.
Venkatammal v. Andyappa, 405, 613.
Venkatanarayana v. Somaraju, 313, 315, 319, 362.
—v. Subbammal (42 I.A. 125) 207, 208, 252, 253, 256.
—v. Subbammal (43 I.A. 20) 446, 532, 561.
Venkatanarasimha v. Subba Rao, 479, 480, 560.
Venkatappayya v. Raghavayya, 273, 320.
Venkataraju v. Yedukondalu, 277.
Venkatarama Krishna v. Bhujanga, 203.
—v. Meera, 325, 326.
—v. Rajyalakshmi, 475.
Venkataramana v. Nookalamma, 599.
—Devaru v. State of Mysore, 478.
Venkataramanayya v. Venkataramana, 379, 381, 382.
Venkataramanna v. Venkayya, 451.
Venkataramaswami v. Imperial Bank of India, 380.
Venkataramayya v. Krishna Rao, 274, 341.
—v. Seshamma, 285.
—v. Venkataramappa, 286.
Venkatarao v. Venkateswararao, 445, 562.
Venkatarayudu v. Sivaramakrishnayya, 334, 395.
Venkatasami v. Palaniappa, 290, 389.
—v. Viranna, 586.
Venkatasomaraju v. Varahalaraju, 319.
Venkatasubba Rao v. Ananda Rao, 218, 221.
—Reddi v. Pitchamma, 264.
Venkatasubbamma v. Ramayya, 451.
Venkatasubramania v. Easwara Iyer, 99, 277, 282, 285, 410.
Venkatasubramaniam v. Thayarammah, 138.
Venkateratnam v. Venkatanarasayamma, 569.
Venkateshwara Rao v. Adinarayana, 119.
—Rao v. Ammayya, 389.
Venkateswara v. Luis, 851, 855.
—v. Mankayammal, 165.
——v. Venkatasiva Rao, 226, 248.
—Temple v. B. Radhakrishna, 388.
Venkateswaran v. Saradambal, 575, 585.
Venkateswararao v. Nagamani, 735.
Venkateswarlu v. Challaiya, 245, 246, 247.
Venkateswarlu v. Venkatanarayana, 729.
—v. Venkata Narasimhan, 376.
—P. v. Raghavulu. 202, 203.
Venkatram v. Chokkier, 334.
Venkatraman v. Janardhan, 585.
Venkatramanna v. Viramma, 638.
Venkayamma v. Veerayya, 257, 900.
Venkayya v. Satyanarayana, 572.
—v. Venkata, 584.
Venkayyamma v. Venkataramanayyamma, 89, 115, 202, 295, 448.
Venkitaswami v. Muthusamy, 581.
Venku v. Mahalinga, 553.
Venkureddi v. Venku Reddi, 328.
Venneti Sundara Rama Rao v. Satyanarayanamurthi, 533, 535.
Venugopala v. Krishnaswamy, 494.
—v. Ramanadhan, 388.
—Ravi Varma Raja v. Union of India, 858.
—Reddiar v. Krishnaswamy, 559.
Venugopalaswamy v. Visveswara, 344.
Venugopal Naidu v. Lakshmi Ammal, 522.
Verabhai v. Bai Hiraba, 523, 539, 540.
Vibhudapriya v. Lakshmindra, 491, 492.
Vidya Varuthi v. Balusami, 489.
Vidyagavri v. Narandas, 75.
Vidyapurna v. Vidyanidhi, 485, 493.
Vigneswara v. Bapayya, 344.
Vijaya v. Sripathi, 609.
—Ramraj v. Vijaya Ananda. 303.
Vijayananda Gajpatiraj v. Commissioner of Income Tax, 625.
Vijayaratnam v. Sudarsana, 530.
Vijayasangji v. Shivasangji, 537, 546.
Vijiarangam v. Lakshuman, 150, 191. 192, 204.

Vinayak v. Dattoo, 287.
— v. Govind, 227, 228, 231, 236, 237.
— v. Govindrav, 560.
— v. Lakshmibai, 204.
— v. Md. Hanif, 219.
Vinay Kumar v. Purnima, 799.
Vinayakrao v. Mankunwarbai, 365.
Viney v. Viney, 790.
Virabadra v. Guruvenkata, 336.
Virangauda Lingangauda v. Yelappa Shidappa, 133.
Virappa Chettiar v. Periakaruppan, 819.
Viraragava v. Ramalinga, 550.
Viraragavamma v. Samudrala, 318.
Viraraju v. Venkataratnam, 210.
Viraramuthi v. Singaravelu, 595.
Vira Reddi v. Kistamma, 728, 741, 745, 780, 783, 818.
Virasangappa v. Rudrappa, 203.
Virasami v. Appasami, 510, 598.
Viravan v. Srinivasachariar, 108, 451.
Virayya v. Bapayya, 235.
— v. Hanumanta, 550.
— v. Pardhasarathi Appa Rao, 354.
Virbhadrappa v. Babu Virbhadrappa, 118.
Virdhachalam Pillai v. Chaldean Bank, 356, 360, 379.
Virupaksha Reddi v Chanalal Siva Reddi, 326, 332.
Virupakshappa v. Nilgangava, 576.
Visalakshi v. Sivaramien, 562.
Visalamma v. Jagannadha Rao, 99.
Visalatchi v. Annasamy, 272, 283.
Visalatchmi v. Subbu, 443.
Vishnu v. Akkamma, 74.
— v. Ganesh, 395.
— v. Manjamma, 604, 605.
— v. Ramchandra, 305.
— Namboodiri v. Kuttiparu Amma. 518.
— Pandu v. Mahadu, 247, 543.
Vishvanath v. Krishnaji, 430.
Vishwapathi v. Venkata Krishna, 903.
Vishwasrao v. Sahebrao, 550.
Vishweshwarlal v. Bhuramal, 108.
Visvanatha v. Doraiswami, 139, 200.
Viswasundara v. Somasundara, 532, 551.
— Row v. Somasundara Rao, 50.
Visweswara Rao v. Surya Rao, 341.
Vithappa v. Savitri, 89, 147, 204, 205.
Vithagouda v. Secretary of State, 536.
Vithal v. Daud, 632.
— v. Prahlad, 405.
— v. Shivappa, 289, 298.
— Tukaram v. Balu Bapu, 192.
Vithalbai v. Shivabai, 560.
Vithaldas v. Jeshubai, 144, 145.
Vithalrao v. Ramrao, 120, 151.
— v. Vithalrao, 299.
Vithoba v. Bapu, 536.
— v. Hariba, 278, 293.
Vithu v. Govinda, 605.
Vitla Butten v. Yamenamma, 321, 322, 323, 445, 446, 561.
Vitta v. Chatakondu, 112.
Vrandavandas v. Yamunabai, 596.
Vrijbhukandas v. Bai Parvati, 116, 204, 395.
— v. Dayaram, 233.
Vullabhdas v. Gordhandas, 457, 462.
Vuppuluri Tatayya v. Garimilla, 218.
Vyankapacharya v. Yamanasami, 637.
Vyas v. Vyas, 551.
Vyasacharya v. Venkubai, 563.
Vydinada v. Nagammal, 471.
Vyithilinga v. Vijayathammal, 550.
Vythianatha v. Varadaraja, 277, 285.
Vythinatha Ayyar v. Yeggia Narayana, 271.
— v. Yeggia, 115.

W. v. W. 734, 756.
W. v. Official Solicitor, 729.
Wadia v. Wadia, 769.
Waghela v. Sheikh Masludin, 581, 583.
— Rajsanji v. Sheikh Masludin, 62.
Wahid Ali v. Tori Rama, 212.
Walbai v. Heerbai, 550.
Wali Ram v. Mukhtiar Kaur, 1024.
Waller v. Waller, 800, 801.
Walsh v. Walsh, 768, 769, 783.
Walsham v. Walsham, 722.
Walter v. Walter, 700.
Wamanrao v. Shantabai, 219.
Wandsworth Board of Works v. United Telephone Co., 668.
Warburton v. Warburton, 721.
Warter v. Warter, 758.
Wasantrao v. Anandrao, 331.
Watkins v. Administrator-General of Bengal, 469.
Wasudeo v. Devidas, 332.
Watson & Co. v. Ramchund, 481.
— — v. Sham Lal, 583.
Wazir Devi v. Ram Chand, 476.
Weatherley v. Weatherley, 706, 722.
Webb v. Webb, 815.
Weinburg v. Weinburg, 730.
Wells v. Wells, 790.
Welton v. Welton, 801.
White v. White, 725, 819.
— v. White and Jerome, 730.
Whitney v. Whitney, 712.
Whysall v. Whysall, 746.
William v. William, 780.
— Hudson v. Webster, 687.
Williams v. Williams, 704, 721, 724, 725.
Womesh Chander v. Digumbure, 226.
Woollard v. Woollard, 721.
Wooma v. Sreebarinath, 631.
Wooma Daee v. Gokoolanund, 512.
— Pershad v. Grish Chunder, 162.
Wright v, Wright, 813.
W. Y. v. A. Y., 736.

Yad Ram v. Umrao Singh, 639.
Yadao v. Namdeo, 530, 536, 539.
Yadeorao v. Vithal, 475.
Yagnapurushdasji v. Muldas, 71, 75.
Yagnanarayana v. Lakshminarayana, 257.
Yamashetti Bhaushetti v. Ashok Bhomshetti, 642.
Yamunabai v. Harihar Pandit, 842.
— v. Manubai, 269, 606, 607.
— v. Narayan, 521.

Yankappa v. Shavappa, 701.
Yashvantrav v. Kashibai, 596, 600.
Yasobadra Nainar v. Somanthabadran, 397.
Yekeyamian v. Agniswarian, 399.
Yellappa v. Tippanna, 284, 287.
Yellawa v. Bhimangavda, 611.
Yelumalai Chetty v. Natesachari, 114, 223.
Yelumalai v. Srinivasa, 323.
Yenumula v. Yenumula, 264.
Yeshwanta v. Antu, 247.
Yethirajulu v. Mukunthu, 472.

Zipru v. Bomtya, 110.
Zuli v. Gapalia, 600.

TABLE OF CASES TO THE ADDENDA

A. Kunjipokkarukutty v. A. Revunny, lxx.
Ambujam v. T. S. Ramaswamy, lxxiv.
Annapurna v. Kalpana Debi, lxxvii.

B. C. Gope v. Manjura, lxix.
B. Subba Reddy v. B. Nagireddy, lxx.
Badri Nath v. Punam, lxxiii, lxxvii.
Baikuntha Nath v. Sashi Bhusan, lxx.
Bijoy Kumar v. Lahori Ram, lxxi.
Budhia v. Raghu, lxx, lxxii.

Champa v. Chandrakanta, lxxviii.
Chanamma v. Lingamma, lxxviii.
Chanchal Kumari v. Kewal Krishan, lxxv.
Chandradatta v. Sanatkumar, lxxvii.

D. J. Prasad v. D. V. Subbaiah, lxx.
D. Udayar v. Rajarani, lxxix.
Dhanuben v. Zaverbhai, lxxii.
Dina Nath v. Mansa Ram, lxxi.
Dugginallakshmana v. D. Lakshmi Katamma, lxxiii, lxxiv.

Gurdit Singh v. Darshan Singh, lxxvii.
Gyarsibai v. J. Moolchand, lxx.

Jagannadham v. Savithramma, lxxiv, lxxvi.
Jagdish Mahton v. Mohammad Elahi, lxxvii.
Jamuna Das v. Board of Revenue, lxxviii.

K. Kunhikannan v. Malu, lxxvi.
Kalmath v. Vishnu Deo, lxxii.
Kaliamma v. Janardhanam, lxix.
Kanchangauri v. Chandulal, lxxiv.
Kandan Soren v. Jitan, lxxiii.
Khanta Moni v. Shyam Chand, lxxiii.
Kartik Chandra v. Manjurani, lxxv.
Kempanna v. Shantarajiah, lxxviii.
Kishan Chandar v. Board of Revenue, lxxii.
Kondamma v. Sethamma, lxxix.

M. Gomathi v. S. Natarajan, lxxv.
M.S.B.Y. Board v. Subramania, lxxviii.
M. V. Narayudu v. T. Subba Rao, lxxi.
M. V. Shivaji Rao v. Rukhminiyamma, lxxvii.
Madhai Kumhar v. Sabi Bewa, lxix.
Madhukar v. Malti, lxxvi.
Madhukar v. Saral, lxxv.
Meyappa Chettiar v. Shanmugham Chettiar, lxx.
Mira Bose v. Santosh Kumar, lxxvi.
Modan Singh v. Sham Kaur, lxxix.
Mool Chand v. Renuka Devi, lxxi.

Narayanan v. M. Parakutty, lxxv.
Nijhawan v. Nijhawan, lxxiv, lxxv, lxxvi.
Nirmala Devi v. Ram Dass, lxxvi.

P. A. Machiah v. M. B. Ponnava, lxxviii.
P. R. Nallathambi v. V. Raghavan, lxx.
P. S. Ramarao v. P. R. Krishnamani, lxxiv.
Pakkiriswamy v. Krishnaswamy, lxix.
Piara Singh v. Shri Guru Granth Sahib Madnipur, lxxii.
Prem Singh v. Dulari Bai, lxxiv.
Prithvirajsinji v. Shivprabhakumari, lxxvi.

Radhey Krishna v. Shiv Shankar, lxix.
Raghavachari v. Narayana Iyengar, lxxii.
Raghbir Singh v. Satpal Singh, lxxv.
Raghunath v. Urmila Devi, lxxvi.
Raj Kumar v. Prem Prakash, lxxviii.
Raja Gopalan v. Rajamma, lxxvi.
Ram Sarup v. Toti, lxxviii.
Ramchandra Keshav v. Gavalaksha Gangadhar Swami, lxxiii.
Ramdayal v. Bhanwarlal, lxx.
Ramdayal v. Manaklal, lxxi.
Ramlal v. Kanhaiyalal, lxxi.
Rangaswamy v. Nagamma, lxxv.
Rulia v. Jagdish, lxx.

S. Narayanamma v. K. Venkatasubbaiah, lxxi.
S.G.P. Committee, Amritsar v. Sewa Singh, lxxii.
Sankarappa Gounder v. Gopalan, lxxvii.
Satish Chandra v. Bagram, lxxvi.
Seeta Ram v. Phooli, lxxvi.
Sham Kaur v. Hari Singh, lxix.
Shamsher Singh v. Dy. Custodian General, lxxviii.
Shanmughasundarathammal v. N. Konar, lxxviii.
Shri Guru Granth Sahib Khoje Majra v. Nagar Panchayat, lxxii.
Sonekali v. Bahuria Akashi, lxxviii.
Sundaramurthi v. Kesava, lxxi.
Supriya v. Vasudeo, lxxvi.
Suresh Prasad v. Manorama, lxxvi.
Surrinder Kaur v. Gurdeep Singh, lxxiv.

T. Naicker v. Kuppamal, lxxvii.
T. Rattamma v. T. V. Subbamma, lxxi.
Thiagarajan v. Ganesan, lxxiii.
Tirupurasundari v. Kalyanaraman, lxix.
Tukaram v. Mathurabai, lxix.
Tuklya v. Tgya, lxxii.
Tulsan Devi v. Krishna Devi, lxxv.

Vaijoba Shamrao v. Vasant Abaji, lxxiii.
Veerbasavaradhya v. Devotees of Lingadagudi Mutt, lxxii, lxxiii.

ADDENDA

Cases reported upto November 1972 have been incorporated in the main text-book. Cases reported after the manuscript of the main text-book went to the press have been noted in this Addenda. Cases included in this Addenda are from December 1972 to December 1973.

Reference to Pages and Articles is to the Pages and Articles of this Edition. Reference to Section is to the Section of the respective Act.

CHAPTER I

(1) Page 81, Art. 14: In foot-note (d) add:

Madhai Kumhar v. Sabi Bewa, (1973) A. Pat. 160;

B. C. Gope v. Manjura, (1973) A. Pat. 208.

(2) Page 83, Art. 17(3):

Even in the case of a very small community found in a small local area, where many cases are not likely to reach the Court, the principle that before a custom can be held as having been proved merely on the basis of earlier decisions, those decisions should have been based on evidence adduced in respect of the cases cannot be ignored. Kaliamma v. Janardhanam, (1973) A. S.C. 1134.

CHAPTER IV

(3) Page 93, Art. 35: Add after (h):

As Coorg was not a Governor's province but a Commissioner's province at the relevant time, a Centrally Administered Area, the Act would apply to and regulate the succession to agricultural lands in the territory of Coorg. P. A. Machiah v. M. B. Ponnava, (1973) A. Mys. 1.

(4) Page 96, Art. 35: In foot-note (x) add:

Also see Tukaram v. Mathurabai, (1973) A. Bom. 37.

CHAPTER IX

(5) Page 166, Art. 107(2): In foot-note (o1) add:

Pakkiriswamy v. Krishnaswamy, (1973) A. Mad. 36.

CHAPTER XI

(6) Page 255, Art. 205: In foot-note (r1) add:

Also see Radhey Krishna v. Shiv Shankar, (1973) A. S.C. 2405.

CHAPTER XII

(7) Page 270, Art. 223:

As to the meaning of "ancestral property" under the Punjab custom and proof thereof, see the undermentioned case. Sham Kaur v. Hari Singh, (1973) A. Punj. 71.

(8) Page 276, Art. 226: In foot-note (s1) add:

Tirupurasundari v. Kalyanaraman, (1973) A. Mad. 99 (case of a son executing a settlement deed in favour of his mother, held invalid).

(9) Page 276, Art. 227: In foot-note (y) add:

B. Subba Reddy v. B. Nagireddy, (1973) A.A.P. 184.

(10) Page 278, Art. 227: In foot-note (g) add:

Gyarsibai v. J. Moolchand, (1973) A.M.P. 75.

(11) Page 285, Art. 233(2):

When a joint family is found to be in possession of nucleus sufficient to make the impugned acquisitions, then a presumption arises that the acquisitions standing in the names of the persons who were in the management of the family property are family acquisitions. Baikuntha Nath v. Sashi Bhusan, (1972) A.S.C. 2531.

(12) Page 285, Art. 233(2):

If a fairly reasonable portion of the amount has been found to come out of the joint family property, it will not be open to split up the property purchased into two parts in proportion to the amounts representing the two funds and holding that one part is joint family property and the other self-acquisition. B. Subba Reddy v. B. Nagireddy, (1973) A.A.P. 184.

(13) Page 286, Art. 233(2): In foot-note (h1) add:

Budhia v. Raghu, (1973) A. Or. 85.

(14) Page 296, Art. 236: In foot-note (r) add:

A. Kunjipokkarukutty v. A. Revunny, (1973) A. Ker. 192.

(15) Page 298, Art. 239:

Even in case of a Mitakshara family once division in status has taken place, the erstwhile coparceners are in the position of joint owners of property or are tenants-in-common and a person entitled to a share can file suit for rendition of account only. Meyappa Chettiar v. Shanmugham Chettiar, (1973) A. Mad. 260.

(16) Page 300, Art. 242(2): In foot-note (h) add:

Ramdayal v. Bhanwarlal, (1973) A. Raj. 173.

(17) Page 305, Art. 243A:

Where sale is effected for the purpose of migrating to another village and purchasing lands there which are more productive, it is not enough for the purchaser to make bona fide enquiries about the sale of the property for migration and purchase lands which are more productive, but he should further be satisfied that the proceeds have been applied for purchasing properties in the other village. D. J. Prasad v. D. V. Subbaiah, (1973) A.A.P. 214.

(18) Page 306, Art. 244: In foot-note (k) add:

Ramdayal v. Bhanwarlal, (1973) A. Raj. 173.

(19) Page 306, Art. 244: In foot-note (o) add:

Rulia v. Jagdish, (1973) A. Punj. 335.

(20) Page 308, Art. 245: In foot-note (b) add:

Rulia v. Jagdish, (1973) A. Punj. 335.

(21) Page 311, Art. 248: After (b) add:

Both the conditions must be satisfied, i.e. the managing member must act with bona fides and, at the same time, the compromise must secure some demonstrable benefit and advantage to the family. P. R. Nallathambi v. V. Raghavan, (1973) A. Mad. 25.

(22) Page 312, Art. 248B: In foot-note (f1) add:

Also see S. Narayanamma v. K. Venkatasubbaiah, (1973) A.S.C. 2114 (case of construction of document relating to family arrangement).

(23) Page 316, Art. 252(9):

When a promissory note is executed in favour of Karta and his two minor sons, Karta can sue for the recovery of the debt alone. Bijoy Kumar v. Lahori Ram, (1973) A. Cal. 465.

(24) Page 321, Art. 258: Add after (t):

The consent may be express or implied. T. Rattamma v. T. V. Subbamma, (1973) A.A.P. 226.

(25) Page 323, Art. 261: In foot-note (h) add:

Sundaramurthi v. Kesava, (1973) A. Mad. 96.

(26) Page 323, Art. 261:

A direction of staying the execution proceedings for a certain period, in respect of a decree of possession obtained by another coparcener, to enable the purchaser from a coparcener to file a partition suit and if such a suit is filed within that period, to stay the execution till the decree in the partition suit, can be legally given where the property in possession of the purchaser from a coparcener is not in excess of the share of the coparcener. Ramdayal v. Manaklal, (1973) A. M.P. 222, F.B.

(27) Page 328, Art. 261(8): In foot-note (c) add:

See also Ramlal v. Kanhaiyalal, (1973) A. M.P. 97.

(28) Page 333, Art. 265 (2)(c):

The father's power to sell the son's share for his personal debts ceases when his son's share is attached by the creditor either for antecedent debts not tainted by illegality or immorality or the son's debts or both and that being the case, the Official Receiver, whose powers are only co-extensive with that of the father under sec. 28-A of the Provincial Insolvency Act, will have no more powers than the father to deal with the son's share for distributing it among the creditors. M. V. Narayudu v. T. Subba Rao, (1973) A.A.P. 113

CHAPTER XIII

(29) Page 348, Art. 279:

The fact that two of the brothers of the deceased are living separately and a third brother is living jointly with him is immaterial for the purpose of succession to him under the Dayabhaga law; all the three brothers will succeed equally, the one living jointly with the deceased cannot claim to be the sole heir by survivorship. Mool Chand v. Renuka Devi, (1973) A. Raj. 63.

CHAPTER XVI

(30) Page 394, Art. 303: In foot-note (a) add:

See also Dina Nath v. Mansa Ram, (1973) A. Punj. 253 (a case of common court-yard and staircase).

(31) Page 395, Art. 304:

If a member of a joint Hindu family has volunteered to pay funeral expenses for the performance of obsequial ceremonies of his deceased father or mother, he cannot claim any contribution from the other members of the joint family. To saddle the joint family estate or other members with liability it must be proved that there was an agreement amongst the members to share such expenses or the member who made such expenses did so under circumstances which could bind the joint family estate or the members of the joint family. Dhanuben v. Zaverbhai, (1973) A. Guj. 194.

(32) Page 396, Art. 305(3): In foot-note(z) add:

Budhia v. Raghu, (1973) A. Or. 85.

(33) Page 397, Art. 307: In foot-note (j) add:

Tuklya v. Tgya, (1973) A. Mys. 4.

(34) Page 423, Art. 328(6): In foot-note (n) add:

See also, Kishan Chandar v. Board of Revenue, (1973) A. Raj. 171.

CHAPTER XXI

(35) Page 482, Art. 408:

Dedication may be proved by the existence of the idol, architecture and situation of the temple, visit to and offer of worship by the members of the public where the deity is installed and regular performance of puja. Earlier statements and admissions by the parties are also relevant. Veerbasavaradhya v. Devotees of Lingadagudi Mutt, (1973) A. Mys. 280.

(36) Page 484, Art. 410:

Where the Moolavar (deity) of an old temple that was in existence could not be traced, but the Utsavar (who comes out) was available and was installed in a new temple, it was held that the old temple could be renovated because the Moolavar was apparently embedded in the site of the old temple and that was enough to justify the renovation of the old temple. Raghavachari v. Narayana Iyengar, (1973) A. Mad. 323.

(37) Page 486, Art. 413:

Gurdwara.—A Gurdwara is a juristic person which can own property and can bring a suit in its name to protect the property owned by it through its manager. Shri Guru Granth Sahib Khoje Majra v. Nagar Panchayat, 71 Punj. L.R. 844; Piara Singh v. Shri Guru Granth Sahib Madnipur, (1973) A. Punj. 470.

(38) Page 487, Art. 414:

An archak or poojary in a temple is not a shebait as the said expression is understood in Northern India or a dharmadarshi as it is understood in Southern India. A poojary is always appointed by the shebait or dharmadarshi or dharmadhikari for the purpose of conducting worship. Veerbasavaradhya v. Devotees of the Lingadagudi Mutt, (1973) A. Mys. 280.

(39) Page 489, Art. 415: In foot-note (a) add:

Kalmath v. Vishnu Deo, (1973) A. Mys. 207.

(40) Page 490, Art. 415(2):

A lease of land belonging to a Gurdwara granted to the relatives of the mohunt for 20 years to clear the antecedent debts of the Guardwara is not as such invalid when the lease is for sufficient consideration and the mohunt is not a drunkard, profligate or spendthrift. S.G.P. Committee, Amritsar v. Sewa Singh, (1973) A. Punj. 414.

(41) Page 498, Art. 421:

To a family arrangement entered into between the daughter-in-law of the founder of a trust for charities, after the death of her husband issueless, with the lineal descendants of the founder's brother, which secured the due performance of the charities and preserved the charity properties, principles of family settlement in general would equally apply. If such a family arrangement embodied in a compromise decree has been acted upon by the parties for a long time, it would become binding on the representatives of the various branches and they should not be allowed to go behind the arrangement or challenge its validity. Thiagarajan v. Ganesan, (1973) A. Mad. 411.

(42) Page 499, Art. 422: In foot-note (d) add:

Badri Nath v. Punam, (1973) A. J. & K. 7 (F.B.).

(43) Page 503, Art. 425:

Generally suits by the worshippers of an idol, not based on any right to the property in the idol or to an office, against its custodian to locate it in a particular temple instead of another or to adorn it at certain seasons or a suit to establish a right to recite sacred texts in a temple without a claim to any office or emoluments are all suits relating merely to religious rights and ceremonies and are not cognizable by civil Courts. Article 25(1) of the Constitution of India guarantees only right to freedom of conscience and the right freely to profess, practise and propagate religion which, as interpreted by the Supreme Court, includes not merely religious beliefs but also religious ceremonies. This, however, does not mean that a person who wants to practise his religion according to his ideas can prevent other people from practising that very religion according to their ritual in that religion. Ramchandra Keshav v. Gavalaksha Gangadhar Swami, 75 Bom. L.R. 668.

(44) Page 505, Art. 426:

Where the manager transfers a part of the property belonging to an endowment on the basis that it belongs to him, it is not void ab initio and a suit for possession will come under art. 134-A and not under art. 144 of the Limitation Act, 1908. Veerbasavaradhya v. Devotees of Lingadagudi Mutt, (1963) A. Mys. 280.

CHAPTER XXIII

(45) Page 540, Art. 471(2)(a):

One A a Hindu died leaving a son T and his widow G. T had two sons, B and R. T, B and R died leaving M, the widow of R. M re-married and thereafter G adopted the plaintiff to her deceased husband. On the question, whether in such circumstances G's power to adopt has been extinguished, the Bombay High Court held that as when G adopted the plaintiff, there was no one to continue the line of A, her husband, the adoption of the plaintiff was valid. Vaijoba Shamrao v. Vasant Abaji, 75 Bom. L.R. 633.

(46) Page 551, Art. 480, Custom:

According to the tribal custom amongst Santhals of Santhal Paraganas it is permissible for a man with daughters and no son to take a son-in-law into his house as a ghar-jamai and to give him thereby all the rights of a son. The adoption of the ghar-jamai should leave no room for doubt as to the father-in-law's intention and resulting in ghar-jamai's cutting off all connection with his family so far as his rights to property is concerned and becoming to all intents and purposes the son of the father-in-law. Such ghar-jamai inherits the property of his father-in-law even when his wife dies during the life-time of his father-in-law and he will not be divested by his subsequent remarriage during the life-time of his father-in-law. Kandan Soren v. Jitan, (1973) A. Pat. 206.

(47) Page 562, Art. 500: In foot-note (o) add:

Dugginallakshmana v. D. Lakshmi Katamma, (1973) A. A.P. 302.

CHAPTER XXV

(48) Page 593, Art. 546: In foot-note (e) add:

Khanta Moni v. Shyam Chand, (1973) A. Cal. 112.

(49) Page 602, Art. 559: In foot-note (b1) add:

Dugginallakshmana v. D. Lakshmi Katamma, (1973) A.A.P. 302.

HINDU MARRIAGE ACT

(50) Page 672, Sec. 2:

Section 1 read with sec. 2(1)(a) and 2(1)(b) makes it clear that as regards the intra-territorial operation of the Act it applies to all Hindus, Buddhists, Jains or Sikhs irrespective of the question whether they are domiciled in India or not. Section 2(c) contemplates extra territorial operation in this sense that persons domiciled in other territory to which the Act may extend if governed by Hindu law even though residing outside the territory would come under the purview of the Act. Gorkhas of Nepal are normally regarded as Hindus. Prem Singh v. Dulari Bai, (1973) A. Cal. 425.

(51) Page 698, Sec. 9:

Cruelty which preceded the withdrawal of one spouse from the society of the other is of importance; cruelty subsequent to such withdrawal may at the most be relevant evidence to indicate intention or may be taken into consideration for appreciation of the evidence. Surrinder Kaur v. Gurdeep Singh, 75 Punj. L.R. 63, (1973) A. Punj. 134.

(52) Page 698, Sec. 9: In foot-note (ee) add:

Surrinder Kaur v. Gurdeep Singh, 75 Punj. L.R. 63, (1973) A. Punj. 134.

(53) Page 698, Sec. 9: In foot-note (e4) add:

P. S. Ramarao v. P. R. Krishnamani, (1973) A. Mad. 279.

(54) Page 698, Sec. 9: In foot-note (e6) add:

Kanchangauri v. Chandulal, (1973) A. Guj. 275.

(55) Page 699, Sec. 9: In foot-note (g3) add:

See, however, Surrinder Kaur v. Gurdeep Singh, 75 Punj. L.R. 63, (1973) A. Punj. 134 (delay occasioned in endeavour to secure society of the wife).

(56) Page 710, Sec. 10(a):

Where the appellant was pleading to the respondent to have her back on any terms and at any cost and the respondent completely neglected her, it was held that he was guilty of constructive desertion. Ambujam v. T. S. Ramaswamy, (1973) A. Del. 46.

(57) Page 722, Sec. 10(b):

A wife may even put up with beating but after a long course of ill-treatment if the wife is beaten then that may create a reasonable apprehension that it would be injurious or harmful for her to live with her husband. Jagannadham v. Savithramma, (1972) A.A.P. 377.

(58) Page 723, Sec. 10(b):

If interruptus coitus can be cruelty then complete denial will be more so. Ambujam v. T. S. Ramaswamy, (1973) A. Del. 46.

(59) Page 723, Sec. 10(b):

Marriage without sex is an anathema. If either party to a marriage refuses to have sexual intercourse it would amount to cruelty entitling the other party to a decree. It would not make any difference in law whether the denial of sexual intercourse is the result of sexual weakness or wilful refusal, because in either case the result is the same, namely frustration and misery of the other party. Nijhawan v. Nijhawan, (1973) A. Del. 200.

(60) Page 732, Sec. 11:

A petition under sec. 11 can be filed by one spouse after the death of the other. Tulsan Devi v. Krishna Devi, 75 Punj. L.R. 346, (1973) A. Punj. 442.

(61) Page 735, Sec. 12(1)(a):

Having regard to the meaning of the expression "consummation" it is proper to conclude that potency in the case of males would mean the power of erection of the male organ and its full penetration: the discharge of the semen in the wife's body is not necessary for a complete coitus. Chanchal Kumari v. Kewal Krishan, (1972) A. Punj. 474.

(62) Page 735, Sec. 12(1)(a):

It has to be positively proved that the husband-respondent was impotent at all material times, i.e. right from the time of marriage and it continued to be so until the institution of the proceedings. Even if it could be shown that the marriage was consummated just once during this period a decree of nullity cannot be granted. The burden of proving that the respondent was impotent at all material times is on the appellant. Nijhawan v. Nijhawan, (1973) A. Del. 200.

(63) Page 738, Sec. 12(b):

Burden to prove the lunacy lies on the petitioner. Medical evidence may not always be given in all cases or may not be in all circumstances a determining factor but nonetheless it is one of the most important elements of evidence. Kartik Chandra v. Manjurani, (1973) A. Cal. 545.

(64) Page 741, Sec. 12(2)(b)(ii): In foot-note (g) add:

Rangaswamy v. Nagamma, (1973) A. Mys. 179.

(65) Page 744, Sec. 13(i): In foot-note (j1) add:

See also Narayanan v. M. Parakutty, (1973) A. Ker. 171.

(66) Page 749, Sec. 13(1A):

In the absence of any indication in the provision of the section to the effect that it shall apply whether decrees for judicial separation have been passed before or after the amendment, it cannot be held that it applies to decrees obtained prior to its amendment. In such cases the prior law should apply, that is to say, only the decree-holder can maintain a petition under the section. Raghbir Singh v. Satpal Singh, 75 Punj. L.R. 70, (1973) A. Punj. 117.

(67) Page 750, Sec. 13(1A):

Section 13(1A) refers to an existing state of affairs, that is to say, in a case for judicial separation there has been no resumption of cohabitation for a period of two years or upwards and in case of a decree for restitution of conjugal rights, there has not been restitution for a similar period. The provision does not refer to a matrimonial offence or wrong. Though in granting relief under this sub-section the Court must take into consideration sec. 23(1) and consider the conduct of the petitioner subsequent to the passing of the decree for judicial separation or restitution of conjugal rights and deny relief to a party who is taking advantage of his own wrong, it has got no reference to the wrong which led to the decree for judicial separation or restitution of conjugal rights. Madhukar v. Saral, (1973) A. Bom. 55, 74 Bom. L.R. 496.

(68) Page 768, Sec. 19:

Sections 19 and 21 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, do not bar conferment of an extended jurisdiction by the application of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908. M. Gomathi v. S. Natarajan, (1973) A. Mad. 247.

(69) Page 769, Sec. 19:

A casual visit or a temporary visit with an intention other than to reside does not confer jurisdiction on the Court under this section. Supriya v. Vasudeo, (1973) A. All. 94.

(70) Page 795, Sec. 23(d): In foot-note (b1) add:

Nijhawan v. Nijhawan, (1973) A. Del. 200.

(71) Page 797, Sec. 23(2): In foot-note (e1) add:

Raghunath v. Urmila Devi, (1973) A. All. 203.

(72) Page 807, Sec. 25:

The Kerala High Court overruling its previous decision in Raja Gopalan v. Rajamma, (1967) A. Ker. 181, has now held that the Court has jurisdiction to grant maintenance in cases of judicial separation because of an act of adultery. The conduct of the parties can be taken into consideration in fixing the quantum of maintenance. K. Kunhikannan v. Malu, (1973) A. Ker. 273.

(73) Page 807, Sec. 25:

The discretion vested in a Court under this section is very wide and is not controlled by the provisions of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, though in dealing with an application under this section the Court should bear in mind the principles governing the award of maintenance in s. 23 of the latter Act. Seeta Ram v. Phooli, (1972) A. Raj. 313.

(74) Page 812, Sec. 25:

Where in the written statement and in the reply notice, unfounded allegation of unchastity is made by the husband against the wife, the Court can take that into consideration even though the wife herself did not base her claim on that ground. The Court is entitled to take into consideration the subsequent events in moulding the relief. Jagannadham v. Savithramma, (1972) A.A.P. 377.

(75) Page 817, Sec. 28: In foot-note (r6) add:

Nirmala Devi v. Ram Dass, (1973) A. Punj. 48.

(76) Page 818, Sec. 28:

The High Court of Bombay, disapproving of its prior decision in Prithvirajsinji v. Shivprabhakumari, 62 Bom. L.R. 47, (1960) A. Bom. 315, (1960) Bom. 164, has now held that an order passed under sec. 24 granting maintenance and expenses of proceedings is appealable. It has held that the words "under any law for the time being in force" only regulate the forum as to where an appeal has to be filed and do not restrict or qualify the right of appeal. Madhukar v. Malti, 74 Bom. L.R. 311, (1973) A. Bom. 141.

(77) Page 818, Sec. 28: In foot-note (r13) add:

Mira Bose v. Santosh Kumar, (1973) A. Cal. 483.

(78) Page 818, Sec. 28:

The Act is a self-contained enactment. Section 28 itself is the source for appealability of all decrees and orders made under the Act. The words "any other law for the time being in force" refer only to procedure relating to appeal. Suresh Prasad v. Manorama, (1973) A. Pat. 321.

HINDU SUCCESSION ACT

(79) Page 837, Sec. 2(2):

The Act is not applicable to members of a Scheduled Tribe, namely Boro Borokachari in Assam. Satish Chandra v. Bagram, (1973) A. Gau. 76.

(80) Page 845, Sec. 5: Add after (k1):

The section does not expressly exclude from the operation of the Act the right of a Hindu to share in the offerings made at a religious place. Badri Nath v. Punam, (1973) A. J. & K. 7 (F.B.).

(81) Page 851, Sec. 6, Expln. I:

The legal fiction which brings about such notional partition does not lead to the disruption of the coparcenary. It is only the interest of the deceased coparcener which is separated. The coparcenary minus the interest of the deceased continues with its own incidents. Chandradatta v. Sanatkumar, (1973) A. M.P. 169.

(82) Page 855, Sec. 6: In foot-note (n2) add:

See also Chandradatta v. Sanatkumar, (1973) A. M.P. 169.

(83) Page 855, Sec. 6, Expln. II:

This Explanation should be confined only to those cases where a coparcener has gone out of the family on account of his voluntary act. It should not be extended to a case where by operation of law certain persons (such as, for example, the widowed daughter-in-law) become entitled to a share of the joint family property of a deceased person. Thus the claim of a widowed daughter-in-law who has filed a suit for partition against her father-in-law before his death cannot be defeated; her claim arises by operation of law. M. V. Shivaji Rao v. Rukhminiyamma, (1973) A. Mys. 113.

(84) Page 860, Sec. 7(3):

The sub-section applies to cases where among the members of a family either the male or female member has got exclusive right to become sthanees.

The words "held by him" do not indicate that the sthanee should have actual control over the sthanam properties at the time when devolution opens. The sub-section does not validate unauthorised alienations and imprudent transactions in relation to sthanam properties by a sthanee. Therefore, it cannot be said that if property is alienated or leased by a sthanee in excess of his powers, such property is not sthanam property "held" by the sthanamdar and that property falls outside the scope and ambit of the sub-section.

Normally, a lease executed by a sthanee in office should terminate with his life; it cannot be binding on a successor sthanee. Sankarappa Gounder v. Gopalan, (1973) A. Ker. 149 (F.B.).

(85) Page 869, Sec. 8: In foot-note (w1) add:

Annapurna v. Kalpana Debi, (1972) A. Gau. 107.

(86) Page 871, Sec. 8, Mother:

The fact that the mother has married many years before the death of her son does not make her lose the right to succeed to her son and what she gets is an absolute estate. Gurdit Singh v. Darshan Singh, (1973) A. Punj. 362.

(87) Page 887, Sec. 13: In foot-note (t5) add:

T. Naicker v. Kuppamal, (1973) A. Mad. 274.

(88) Page 897, Sec. 14:

Once a widow succeeds to the property of her husband and acquires absolute right over the same under this section, she would not be divested of that absolute right on her re-marriage and sec. 2 of the Hindu Widows' Remarriage Act, 1856, will not be attracted on account of the overriding effect given to the provisions of this Act under sec. 4. Jagdish Mahton v. Mohammad Elahi, (1973) A. Pat. 170.

(89) Page 901, Sec. 14(1):

Even if a widow inherits property prior to the coming into effect of the Hindu Women's Right to Property Act, 1937, from her husband, she will still become absolute owner thereof after the coming into force of the Hindu Succession Act. Champa v. Chandrakanta, (1973) A. Guj. 227.

(90) Page 902, Sec. 14: In foot-note (k4) add:

P. A. Machiah v. M. B. Ponnava, (1973) A. Mys. 1.

(91) Page 902, Sec. 14: In foot-note (k7) add:

Sonekali v. Bahuria Akashi, (1973) A. Pat. 477.

(92) Page 904, Sec. 14:

If a Hindu male dies intestate prior to the coming into operation of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, and is succeeded by a female heir who dies after its coming into force, the succession will be governed by the Act. The reversioner most nearly related to the last male holder at the time of the death of the female holder will become entitled to the property. Shanmughasundarathammal v. N. Konar, (1973) A. Mad. 335.

(93) Page 907, Sec. 14(2):

Where in a will the testator bequeathed all the property to his son with a direction that "my son will provide residential accommodation to . . . (her mother, that is, testator's wife) either at Ludhiana, or Narangwal or wherever he might like" it was held that as the son could make the mother reside anywhere he liked, the right to reside became subject to the son's licence or permission and after the coming into force of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, that estate of the mother did not enlarge into an absolute estate but was governed by sub-sec. (2) of the section. Raj Kumar v. Prem Prakash, (1972) A. Punj. 458.

(94) Page 908, Sec. 14: In foot-note (n) add:

Ram Sarup v. Toti, (1973) A. Punj. 329;

Kempanna v. Shantarajiah, (1973) A. Mys. 66.

(95) Page 908, Sec. 14(2):

An estate allotted to a Hindu female in recognition of her earlier right to maintenance does not fall under this sub-section. Chanamma v. Lingamma, (1972) A. Mys. 333.

(96) Page 946, Sec. 24:

The provisions of secs. 25 and 27 of the Act apply only to succession under the Hindu Succession Act and not to succession under other enactments, such as the U.P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, I of 1951. Law of succession laid down therein cannot be altered or changed by any rule of principle not contained in the statute itself. Jamuna Das v. Board of Revenue, (1973) A. All. 397.

(97) Page 950, Sec. 30:

The power conferred by this section upon a member of a joint family to make a will in respect of his interest in the joint family property cannot be extended to a case of gift. M.S.B.Y. Board v. Subramania, (1973) A. Mad. 277.

HINDU ADOPTIONS AND MAINTENANCE ACT

(98) Page 1016, Sec. 16:

A presumption under this section can be raised if the adoption is made under the Act. Shamsher Singh v. Dy. Custodian General, (1973) A. J. & K. 89 (F.B.).

(99) Page 1016, Sec. 16:

The words "unless and until it is disproved" appearing at the end of the section clearly make out that the presumption which may be made under this section is a rebuttable presumption. Modan Singh v. Sham Kaur, (1973) A. Punj. 122.

(100) Page 1018, Sec. 18:

The power to make an interim order is implicit, ancillary and a necessary corollary of the power to entertain a suit and pass final orders therein. The mere fact that sec. 18 does not make a provision for granting interim maintenance cannot negaive the claim for interim maintenance. D. Udayar v. Rajarani, (1973) A. Mad. 369.

(101) Page 1033, Sec. 25:

Where the right to maintenance itself is relinquished by the maintenance holder before the coming into force of the Act, an enhanced amount on the ground that the income from the family properties has increased cannot be entertained under sec. 25. There is a difference between an agreement fixing the right of maintenance and an agreement extinguishing such right; the section applies to cases where the right of maintenance is subsisting on the day of the Act. Kondamma v. Sethamma, (1973) A.A.P. 319 (F.B.).

Title [redacted]

Author

Accession No. [redacted]

Call No. [redacted]

| BORROWER'S NO. | ISSUE DATE | BORROWER'S NO. | ISSUE DATE |
|---|---|---|---|
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |

INTRODUCTION

Wherever the laws of India admit the operation of a personal law the rights and obligations of a Hindu are determined by Hindu Law that is his traditional law, sometimes called the law of his religion, subject to the exception that any part of that law may be modified or abrogated by statute. Hindu Law, it is now generally agreed, has the most ancient pedigree of any known system of jurisprudence. The study of any developed legal system requires a critical and analytical examination of its fundamental elements and conceptions as also the practical and concrete details which go to make the contents or body of that law. It also requires consideration of the line of development it has pursued. The abstraction and exposition of the principles or distinctions necessarily involved in Hindu Law and the consideration of the line of development which it has pursued are the appropriate matters of jurisprudence and legal history. The concrete legal system which deals with the contents or body of Hindu Law is a matter of positive law and the questions that arise for consideration at the outset are: What is Hindu Law? What are the sources from which knowledge of that law must be derived?

Dharma.

Law as understood by the Hindu is a branch of Dharma. Its ancient framework is the law of the Smritis. The Smritis are Institutes which enounce rules of Dharma and the traditional definition of Dharma is: "What is followed by those learned in the Vedas and what is approved by the conscience of the virtuous who are exempt from hatred and inordinate affection" (a). Dharma is an expression of wide import and means the aggregate of duties and obligations religious, moral, social and legal (b). In Sanskrit, there is no term strictissimi juris for positive or municipal law dissociated from the ethical and religious sense. In a system of law necessarily influenced by the theological tenets of the Vedic Aryans and the philosophical theories which the genius of the race produced, and founded on the social and sociological concepts of a pastoral people, the admixture of religion and ethics with legal precepts was naturally congruent. It was not possible, indeed, always to draw any hard line of logical demarcation between matters secular and religious because certain questions such for instance as marriage and adoption had the aspects of both. Any attempt, therefore, to isolate completely any secular matter from its religious adjuncts would fail to give a comprehensive idea or proper perspective of the true juridical concepts of Hindu Law.

Secular Law and Religious Ordinances.

---

(a) Manusmriti II. 1. Medhatithi one of the earliest commentators on Manusmriti explains the term 'Dharma' as duty: Dharmashabdah kartavyata vachanah VII. 1.

(b) Cf. Ulpian's statement of the Commandments of the law, containing a broad summary of a lawful man's duties, preserved in the introductory chapter of Justinian's Institutes: "Juris precepta sunt haec: Honeste vivere, alterum non laedere, suum cuique tribuere."

Smritis: the basic structure.

Where not modified or abrogated by legislation Hindu Law may be described to be the ancient law of the Hindu rooted in the Vedas and enounced in the Smritis as explained and enlarged in recognised Commentaries and Digests and as supplemented and varied by approved usage. Its basic structure was the law of the Smritis and it was from time to time supplemented and varied by usage. That was its early character. Then it made remarkable progress during the Post-Smriti period (commencing with about the seventh century after Christ) when a number of explanatory and critical Commentaries and Digests (nibandhas) were written on it and which had the effect of enlarging and consolidating the law. A body of law so developed it bears upon it many marks of its origins. Unfortunately many ancient works on law are not available in their integrity and a number of them are probably irretrievably lost. But historical research by orientalists both European and Indian during last more than hundred years has brought to light a wealth of variegated material that had contributed to the growth of this ancient system of law.

Legal literature.

Smritis in part based on immemorial customs.

The ancient law promulgated in the Smritis was essentially traditional and the injunction was that time-honoured institutions and immemorial customs should be preserved intact. The law was not to be found merely in the texts of the Smritis but also in the practices and usages which had prevailed under it. The traditional law was itself grounded on immemorial custom (c) and provided for inclusion of approved custom that is practices and usages that from time to time might come to be followed and accepted by the people (d). The importance attached to the law-creating efficacy of custom in Hindu jurisprudence was so great that the exponents of law were unanimous in accepting custom as itself a constituent part of the law.

Era of Legislation.

It would be pertinent here to note one or two matters of more practical importance. The last century and a half of judicial decisions has, though not in theory but in effect, remodelled on many points both textual and customary law. Many of the important points of Hindu law are now to be found in the law reports.

Moreover, material and substantial changes and modifications in the law have recently been brought about by a number of enactments, which aim to ensure a uniform civil code of personal law for Hindus in the whole country. The changes, no doubt radical, proceed on the principle of equality stressed in the Constitution for the purpose of evolving a just social order after taking due note of existing conditions and ideas. Of those enactments it

---

(c) Manusmriti states: 'Here the sacred law has been fully stated . . . and also the traditional practices and usages of the four varnas' I, 107. A popular verse from the Mahabharata is: "Dharma has its origin in good practices and the Vedas are established in Dharma": Acharra sambhavo dharmo dharme vedah pratishthitah; Vana Parva 150 Ch. 27. Vasishtha observes: "Manu has declared that the (peculiar) practices and usages of countries, castes and families may be followed in the absence of rules of revealed texts" 1, 17 (S.B.E. Vol. XVI).

(d) Athatah samayacharikan dharman vyakhyasyamah: We shall now propound the acts productive of merit (obligations) which are sanctioned by tradition and current usage —Apasthamba Dharmasutra, I, 1. 1. 1. Haradatta explains this by stating, samayacharikah pau risheyi vyavastha—current practices and conventions of the people.

will suffice here to draw attention to the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, and the Hindu Succession Act, 1956. The outstanding feature of the changes effected in the law of marriage is that monogamy is now the rule and dissolution of marriage is permissible in certain cases. The outstanding feature of the alterations made in the law by the latter enactment is that in effect it eliminates all disparity in the rights of men and women in matters of succession and inheritance. These most recent enactments from their very nature cannot be and are not (except on few matters expressly so stated) retroactive in their operation and even in matters where they apply retrospectively it will become necessary to know the law as it previously existed. Besides even now a part of Hindu law and usage, as has hitherto been applicable, remains unabrogated by statute and the importance and necessity of a study of the entire system cannot be minimised. Of this more hereafter (e).

Sources of Hindu law.

The sources from which knowledge of Hindu law is to be derived or the indices of Dharma have been stated by Hindu jurisprudentes. The Veda, the Smriti, the approved usage, and what is agreeable to good conscience are according to Manu (f), the highest authority on this law, the quadruple direct evidence (sources) of Dharma. Law did not derive its sanction from any temporal power; the sanction was contained in itself. The Smritikars and those who preceded them declared and emphasized the divine origin and sanction of the rules of Dharma. "Since law is the king of kings, far more powerful and rigid than they, nothing can be mightier than the law by whose aid, as by that of the highest monarch, even the weak may prevail over the strong . . ." (g). The minutest rules were laid down for the guidance of the king. It was his duty to uphold the law and he was as much subject to law as any other person. He did not claim to be the lawmaker; he only enforced law. One of his chief duties was described to be the administration of justice according to the local usage and to written Codes (h). It was obligatory on him not only to enforce the sacred law of the texts but to make authoritative the customary laws of the subjects as they were stated to be. These included customs of countries, districts, castes and families: So also of traders, guilds, herdsmen, moneylenders and artisans, for their respective classes (i).

Shruti.

It was an article of belief with the ancient Hindu that his law was Revelation, immutable and eternal. Shruti which strictly means the Vedas was in theory the root and original source of Dharma (j). It was the fountain-head of his law. Shruti means, literally, that which was heard. It was supreme to the early Hindu like the de-

---

(e) See pp. 68-70 infra. Also see Introductory Notes to the two enactments post.

(f) Manusmriti II, 12. The variant text of Yajnavalkya adds one more source "desire sprung from due deliberation." See p. 23 infra.

(g) Shatapatha Brahmana. XIV, 4.2.26—Tadetat Kshatrasya Kshatram yaddharmah tasmat dharmatparannasti athovaleeyannavaleeyan samashante dharmena.

(h) Gautama XI, 19, 20 (S.B.E. Vol. II); Manusmriti VIII, 41, 46.

(i) Brihaspati II, 26-31 (S.B.E. Vol. XXXIII); Manusmriti VII, 203; VIII, 41.

(j) Shrutistu vedo vijneyo dharmashastram tu vai smritih: Manusmriti II, 10.

calogue to the later Christian. The Vedas (k), however, do not contain much that alludes to positive or municipal law. The few statements of law that are to be found in the Vedas are mostly incidental. Smriti means, literally, recollection. The Shruti was accepted as the original utterings of the Great Power. The Smritis though accepted as precepts emanating from that source were couched in the words of the Rishis or sages of antiquity who saw or received the revelations and proclaimed their recollections (l). The authority of these two primordial sources is described by Manu: "By Shruti, or what was heard from above, is meant the Veda. By Smriti, or what was remembered from the beginning, the body of law —from these two proceeds the whole system of duties" (m). Theoretically if a text of the Smriti conflicted with any Vedic text it had to be disregarded: "Where there is a conflict between the Vedas and the Smriti—the Veda should prevail" (n). But as there was not much of positive law in the Vedas an equation was established whereby the Smritis were understood as having been based on lost or forgotten Shrutis. By an inflexible rule of Hindu jurisprudence, the Smritis were in practice never understood as in discord with the Vedas. For all practical purposes, therefore, the Smritis were accepted as the effective source of Hindu law (o).

Smriti.

Three stages of the legal literature.

Considered chronologically, and having regard to the stages of its legal literature, Hindu law falls under three epochs:

(i) The Vedic epoch. This is also referred to as the Pre-Sutra period.

(ii) The era of the Dharmashastras. This is often sub-divided into—

  (a) The Sutra period.

  (b) The Smriti period.

(iii) The Post-Smriti period.

The fixation of the chronology of the Vedic period is a matter of which it is indeed difficult to say anything definitely. The authentic history of this period of Hindu civilization and Hindu law has not been preserved. The philosophic doctrines of the ancient Hindus did not encourage any desire to leave historical records for posterity and the Aryans or Indo-Aryans did not preserve any (k) The Vedas comprise (1) Rig-veda, the veda of the verses; (2) Sama-veda, the veda of chant consisting of prayers composed in metre; (3) Yajur-veda, the veda of sacrificial formulae; and (4) Atharva-veda consisting inter alia of incantations, imprecatory formulae and prayers for averting calamities. The Vedas are of composite origin and include hymns by many generations of the early Aryans. Originally they were transmitted orally by preceptor to disciple. The Vedic language was related to the classic Sanskrit as Attic was to Homeric Greek.

---

(l) According to Blackstone all human laws rested on the twin foundation of the law of revelation and the law of nature. The theory of Canonical law, which affected all European systems of law, was that the fundamental rules of law had been derived from a divine source. The Muslims believe a part of the Quoranic law to contain the ipsissima verba of the divine revelation and the rest to be inspired by God but expressed in the Prophet's own words.

(m) Manusmriti II, 10. See f.n. (f) above.

(n) Vyasa 1, 4. Also see Manusmriti II, 13, 14.

(o) The formula affirming this equivalence was critically discussed by the leading mimansakars and particularly by Kumarila. The practical summation of Kumarila in his Tantra-Vartika is—Tena sarvasmritinam prayojanavatee pramanyasiddhih.

Vedic or Pre-Sutra Period.

evidence comparable to the Tablets of the Babylonians or the Papyrii of the Egyptians; nor have we anything comparable to the Annals of Livy. There has been considerable diversity of opinion amongst the Western and many Indian scholars on the question of the chronology of the Vedic or Pre-Sutra period. The former have given later dates while the latter have accepted much earlier dates. After the archæological discoveries at Mohenjo-daro and Harappa and the most recent discoveries at Lothal and Rangpur and in the southern Narmada Valley some added support has been lent to the opinion of scholars who had assigned a hoary antiquity to the Rig-Veda age. It is not difficult now to accept the view expressed by many Indian jurists and scholars that the age of the Vedic Samhitas and other works of the Pre-Sutra period was approximately 4000-1000 B.C. "It is possible that some Vedic hymns may have been composed at a period earlier than 4000 B.C. (p).

Vedas.

The Vedas were the outpourings of the Aryans as they streamed into the rich lands of the Punjab and the Doab from their ancient home beyond the Hindu Kush mountains (q). Totalitarian claims apart, it is now established history that those early Aryans were a vigorous and unsophisticated people full of the joy of life and though not given to much intellectual broodings —the era of the Yoga system of philosophy of cordial harmony between God and man was yet to come—had behind them ages of civilized existence and thought. The dedication in Rig-Veda appropriately states: "To the Seers, our Ancestors, the first path-finders". Those early Aryans primarily invoked the law of Divine wisdom, by which according to their theological conceptions all things in heaven and earth are governed. Their appeal was to the Divine Law and the universal order (r) to judge of their rectitude or obliquity. This was Natural law or the law of Reason; the unwritten law. Then came to be stressed the conventional and customary law which was a body of rules dealing with right and wrong and rights and duties and obligations as established and accepted by the people for themselves but with greater stress on duties and obligations. There is intrinsic evidence in the Shrutis that those Aryans of the Vedic age had robust concepts of a lawful man's duties. The emphasis was on the practice of Dharma an expression which came to signify "the privileges, duties and obligations of a man, his standard of conduct as a member of the

---

(p) Mahamahopadhyaya Kane, History of Dharmashastra—Vol. II, Pt. I, p. XI. In the opinion of Sri B. G. Tilak, "the traditions recorded in the Rig-Veda unmistakably point to a period not later than 4000 B.C. when the vernal equinox was in Orion". The same view was expressed by Jacobi.

(q) In a conglomeration of what may seem stereotyped bucolic hymnology there are to be found some natural outpourings of the heart in language which is sheer lyric poetry: Ritasya jihva pavate madhuh, Rig. IX 75: 2. One prayer is: 'Lord, be near us, hearken to us and make our speech truthful', Rig. I, 82: 1. 'O Faith, endow us with belief'.

(r) The expression chosen for the universal order and law was 'Rita'. "The dawn follows the path of Rita, the right path; as if she knew that before. She never oversteps the regions. The sun follows the path of Rita" Cf. "He gave to the sea his decree, that the water should not pass his commandment": Proverbs 8.29. The expression Rita also came to mean the fountain of justice and the path of morality to be followed by men. One prayer was: "O Indra, lead us on the path of Rita, on the right path. . . ." Rig-Veda X 133: 6.

Aryan community, as a member of one of the castes and as a person in a particular stage of life" (s).

Vedas, primordial source.

Although the Hindus appeal to the Shrutis as the primary source of their law and religion, the Shrutis do not contain much that can be regarded as positive or lawyers' law. The references in these to secular law are mingled with matters ethical and religious and direct statements of law are rather few. A number of rules of law to be found there are incidental and at times metaphorical. The extant Dharmashastras belong to the second period. But we find references in the Dharmashastras to previously existing laws and customs. It is obvious that for many centuries there existed Gathas which are mentioned in the Manusmriti and the Sutras of Gautama, Vasishtha and others but of the original form of those Gathas we know very little. The Smritikars are agreed and common traditions have always accepted that the earliest exponent of law was Manu. The Smritis purport to embody one traditional law, namely the pronouncements of Manu (t). The Rig-Veda enjoins observance of the ancient rules of Manu: "Do not take us far away from the path (rules of Dharma) prescribed by Manu and come down to us from our forefathers" (u). The material of that period available to this day does not render much assistance in collating an authenticated account of that body of original law, traditionally accepted as Manu's law, which indubitably existed. It was the unsophisticated age during which were composed a catena of Sutras simple and naive yet adequate for the purposes of a pastoral people and their corporate life. Those early Sutras, composed at a time when knowledge was imparted catechetically, are so far matters of legendary history and what we know of them is only from references to some of them in the extant Dharmashastras. Jurisprudence in the Vedic age was nascent and creative. There is ancient literature reflecting the continued cultural existence of many centuries during the Vedic period but we do not have that abundant data requisite for the purposes of the history of that epoch and we know much less of its legal history. The initial difficulty has been the lack of any genuine works of hystoriography and no historical survey of that first epoch of legal literature has so far been accomplished. There is, however, reliable data of a long period of transition between the first epoch and the era of the Dharmashastras. The Brahmanas (v) which form the second part of the Vedas and deal with rituals and sacrificial rites belong to this period during which were formed numerous Shakhas or Schools of the Vedas and greater emphasis was placed on the supremacy of the Vedas and observance of castes and stages of life. All these and the rise in power and Early Gathas.

Early Sutras.

---

(s) Even when later on rights were naturally the topic of forensic discussion the accent was on obligation rather than on rights. Curiously enough there is no equivalent expression in Sanskrit for the word rights as used by modern writers on jurisprudence.

(t) See p. 19 infra.

(u) Ma nah pathah pitrayan manavadadht dooram naishta parvatah: Rig-Veda, VIII 40 : 3.

(v) The Brahmanas are theological treatises in prose attached to the Vedas. The principal Brahmanas are Aitareya, Shatapatha, Panchavimsa and Gopatha. They mainly deal with rituals and efficacy of sacrifices.

dominance of the priestly caste are the features of this period of transition. In the ancient Brahminical society had been formed several groups called Charanas. Each of these Charanas had its own Shakha (branch) of the Veda and had its own ritualistic and legal codes. Every Charana had also Kalpa Sutras which included the Shrauta, the Grihya and the Dharmasutras (w). The Charanas of the Vedic period were called the Sanhita Charanas. There were similar Charanas also in the Brahmana period that followed. After that came the period of the Sutra Charanas. The Charanavyuha, the writings of the early mimansakars and the available Kalpasutras are full of references to those early works and draw attention to that mass of early literature in the form of Grihya Sutras in which were stated the duties and obligations of the Aryan as an individual and as a householder. During this period of priestly dominance a good deal that was written was full of elaborate sacrificial technique and religion assumed a stereotyped form verging on syncretism. But it was also the age of protest against that rigid formalism and the time when the older Upanishads (x) were composed. The bold philosophical speculations embedded in the Brihadaranyaka and other early Upanishads are a reminder of the long journey from naturalistic polytheism to almost cabalistic ritualism and ultimately to monism. The emphasis now was on self-realisation (y). In the field of law also there was progress. A number of Sutra-works written during the later part of the Vedic epoch dealt with legal injunctions and customs. There are quoted in Yaska's Nirukta a series of legal maxims in Sutra style (z). There is also data which shows that towards the end of the Vedic epoch philosophical and at times legal disputations were carried on in learned assemblies or parishads. These debates were responsible for the rise and development of Schools of philosophers, principles of reasoning (dialectics) and the practice of the art of discussion. A parallel to this may be noticed in the use of the art of debate by Socrates for the purpose of eliciting the truth and in the logical treatises of Aristotle. But of those legal disputations in the Parishads of the learned no record has been preserved just as no record exists of those early Sutra-works from which only a few quotations are to be traced. All that is known today is that there existed in the Vedic epoch rules of Dharma traditionally regarded as promulgated by Manu and Sutra-works containing aphorisms on law. It would be a misnomer, therefore, to call this as even a bare outline of the legal literature of that first epoch of Hindu Law.

Period of transition.

---

(w) See p. 12 infra.

(x) The Upanishads are philosophical discourses described as "ancient rhapsodies of truth" and denominated as the Vedanta or the concluding treatises of the Vedas. Schopenhauer made it clear that his philosophy was shaped by the fundamental ultimates of the Upanishads. He stated: "From every sentence, deep, original and sublime thoughts arise. . . . It has been the solace of my life, it will be the solace of my death"

(y) One supplication was for the removal of the veil or obstacle that hides the Real. The obstacle was described in one of the most quoted of the Upanishads as "The golden lid that covers the face of Truth"

(z) Yaska who is very ancient himself quotes earlier grammarians and etymological exegetes. Manu emphasized the importance of Nirukta, XII, III.

Era of Dharma-shastras.

The golden age.

In the three periods stated above are discernible successive strata of legal thought, progressive evolution and expansion and growth of a system of traditional law claiming its foundation in the law of Revelation and having the Smritis as its ancient frame-work. The era of the Dharmashastras was the golden age of Hindu law. No doubt the more critical period was the Post-Smriti period when the system became more refined and ampler, but this second was the productive period of Hindu Law. It was synchronous with the age of some of the leading Upanishads which are instinct with a spirit of inquiry and a passion for the search of truth about the hidden meaning of things. "Truth wins ever; not falsehood" was the favourite axiom (a). And the famous invocation was: "Lead me from the the unreal to the real: Lead me from darkness to light: Lead me from death to immortality" (b). The spirit of the time was naturally reflected in the aphorisms of law then promulgated and the influence on secular matters of the philosophical impulses and tendencies is easily discernible. But care was taken, in laying down the minimal standards of conduct appropriate to the society that was being governed, to see that ethical judgment should not be allowed to control the operation of every rule of universal application. Even modern jurisprudence according to which the functions of law and ethics must be different does not require that laws must be ethically neutral.

Nature of Smritis.

The Hindu jurisprudence regards the Smritis, which are often designated as Dharmashastras, as constituting the foundation and an important source of law. The term 'sources of law' used in many legal treatises on Hindu Law and in decisions of the Privy Council is somewhat ambiguous. Possibly it was borrowed from that department of Roman Law entitled 'De juris fontibus'. It has in any case been found convenient and useful because in one acceptation of the term, sources of law are the earliest extant monuments or documents by which existence and purport of the body of law may be known (c). The Smritis or Dharmashastras are the earliest extant treatises from which our knowledge of the line of development which Hindu law had pursued during the second epoch of its history is derived. Mostly in metrical redactions and in some cases both in prose and metre the Smritis are collections of precepts handed down by Rishis or sages of antiquity. Composite in their character the principal Smritis blend religious, moral, social and legal duties. They contain some metaphysical speculations, matters sacramental and also ordain rules of legal rights and obligations. Ethico-religious obligations were regarded by these exponents of Dharma as of more importance than legal obligations. The Smritikars were not always punctilious about stressing a clear distinction between the positive or lawyers' law and moral law, but this is not to suggest that they were unmindful of this distinc-

---

(a) Satyameva jayate nanrutam.

(b) Asato mam sadgamaya; tamaso mam jyotirgamaya: mrityor mamritamgamaya.

(c) The expression used by many Smritikars is Dharmamoola which is also used by Manu. Dharmasya Lakshanam is another expression used by Manu which means direct evidence of Dharma.

tion. When necessary they took care to define this distinction as for instance in the case of the pious and legal obligation of a son to pay the debt of the father when the debt was not for an immoral or illegal purpose. The charge levelled by some Western scholars against the authors of the Smritis of a want of precision and discrimination between moral and legal maxims is unreasonable and unfounded but it is unnecessary now to take any serious notice of the same. The Smritis are Dharmashastras enouncing rules and precepts of Dharma, an expression understood in a broad and comprehensive sense. A clear perspective of Hindu law is not possible unless it is properly appreciated that the blending of religion and ethics with law by these juris-theologians was in a large measure the natural results of a philosophy of life which laid emphasis on the supremacy of inward life over things external. The acceptance by a corporate society of the connotation of duty (Dharma) which associated religious and ethical concepts with secular matters was bound to be projected into its codes of positive law. There are to be found, however, numerous texts in the Smritis illustrative of the distinction between law and morality applicable to questions where it was felt necessary to emphasize any such point of distinction. The distinction when not observed was because the best rule was regarded as that which advanced Dharma (d). Religious injunctions and legal precepts were at times apt to be mingled up unless the rules of logic and certain accepted canons of construction were brought in aid of the ascertainment of the distinction which nevertheless obtained (e). It may also be observed that Yajnavalkya and some other Smritikars divide their treatment of subjects into three sections, Achara, Vyavahara and Prayashchitta. The first and the last relate to rules of religious observances and expiation. The early writers laid greater stress on these rules than on rules of Vyavahara, that is of civil law. The later Smritikars mentioned above have treated of Vyavahara in separate sections (Prakaranas) and exhaustively considered rules of positive law and Narada and some Smritikars have compiled rules only of Vyavahara (f). The shrewd practical insight of the Hindu Rishis who were both sages and virtually lawmakers left very little that was undefined. At a very remote period they treated of law under eighteen heads and one hundred and thirty-two sub-divisions and laid down rules of law both substantive and adjectival. Founders of their own jurisprudence these philosophical jurists enunciated and expounded a system of law which does not suffer in comparison with Roman law which inspired the continental codes and much of English case-law.

Vyavahara: Positive law.

By the Austinian principles of jurisprudence or theories of Bentham much of the traditional law of ancient India would be termed as 'morality' because that law was not "a direct or circuitous command of a monarch or sovereign number to persons in a state of subjection to its author". The Smritis some of which deal

---

(d) Cf. Summa ratio est quae pro religione facit.

(e) See pp. 40-41 infra.

(f) Vyavahara embraces forensic law and practice as well as rules for private acts and disputes.

exhaustively with various topics of law and are generally referred to as Institutes or Codes were not codes in the strict sense in which a code is now understood, that is a single comprehensive legislative document on any particular topic or branch of law. The extant Smritis were compiled at different times and in different parts of the country but they all purported to record one traditional law. The Smriti was not autonomic law which is the result of a true form of legislation or is promulgated by the State in its own person. It was not imposed by any superior authority in invitos. There was no dogmatic insistence upon any fundamental notions of command of a sovereign and habit of obedience to a determinate person. What was accepted was the rule-dependent notion of what ought to be done as agreeable to good conscience and in conformity with the cherished Article of belief that the fundamental rules of law had been derived from a Divine Author. A legal system is a system of rules within rules; and to say that a legal system exists entails not that there is a general habit of obedience to determinate persons but that there is a general acceptance of a constituent rule, simple or complex, defining the manner in which the ordinary rules of the system are to be identified. One should think not of the sovereign and independent persons habitually obeyed but of a rule providing a sovereign or ultimate test in accordance with which the laws to be obeyed are identified. The acceptance of such fundamental constituent rules cannot be equated with habits of obedience of subjects to determinate persons, though it is of course evidenced by obedience to the laws (g). The general effective motive, according to these Smritikars, was observance of Dharma and the sanctions recognised by the people themselves. Enforcement of law (Danda) in the nature of things proceeded from the sovereign but one view of the genesis of legal institutes was that the king and the law were created by the people. Medhatithi and Vijnaneshvara as also the Mahabharata and the Arthashastra of Kautilya maintain the view that law as enjoined in the Vedas and the Smritis was of popular origin. It was law by acceptance—jus receptum—and constituted in part of recollections of precepts claimed as of divine origin and in part of conventional and customary law. The law rested on the quadruple sources already mentioned and the sanction behind that law was not the will of any supreme temporal power but that which was inherent in the law itself and the nature of and sanctity attached to its sources.

Law by acceptance: jus receptum.

Smritikars.

The Rishis who compiled the Smritis did not exercise temporal powers nor did they owe their authority to any sovereign power. The authority or imperative character of their legal injunctions was partly derived from the reverence in which they were held and the accepted principle that what they laid down was agreeable to good conscience. What the Smritikars said was regarded as the principal direct evidence of Dharma. The Smritikars did not arrogate to themselves the position of law-makers but only claimed to be exponents of the divine precepts of law and compilers of traditions handed down to them and clung to that position even when introducing changes and reforms. Changes in the law were primarily effected by the process of recognition of particular usages (unless they were repugnant to law) as of binding efficacy. Brihaspati ruled that "immemorial usage legalises any practice" and that "a decision must not be made solely by having recourse to the letter of written codes; since if no decision were made according to the reason of the law, or according to immemorial usage, there might be a failure of justice" (h). Acting on these principles the Rishis abrogated practices which had come to be condemned by the people and ordained and prescribed rules based on practices and customs which had come to be recognised and followed by the people.

(g) See Professor Hart's Introduction to Austin's Province of Jurisprudecne Determined, pp. xi-xiii. Prof. Hart also refers to the general criticism of Austin's Doctrine of Sovereignty by Bryce, Kelsen and Salmond.

Smritikars were great jurists.

The Smriti texts evince profound and acute thinking of the sages and jurisconsults responsible for them. A remarkable instance of this is furnished by their treatment of 'ownership' and its comprehensive signification. Salmond in defining ownership states that 'ownership' in its wide sense "extends to all classes of rights, whether proprietary or personal, in rem or in personam, in re propria or in re aliena. . . ." There are a number of texts in the Smritis on the subject of ownership which show that the jurisprudential concepts reflected through them remarkably accord with the views of the most modern writers on jurisprudence. The basis of what we know as Holland's theory of 'ownership' as "plenary control over an object" and the necessary qualification to the same that the right of ownership must be enjoyed without interfering with the rights of others has been logically considered by the Smritikars and those who followed them (i) with due regard to the refinements implicit in this theory. Another remarkable instance was the recognition of 'prescriptions'. Although the Roman Law accepted extinctive and acquisitive prescriptions as sanctioned by jurisprudence, modern western lawyers, as pointed out by Sir Henry Maine, viewed them "first with repugnance, afterwards with reluctant approval". Law, it was said by these Smritikars, should help those who were vigilant in asserting, their rights and not those who slumbered over them. In their treatment of the law of prescription, these law-makers evinced practical insight and legal acumen of a high order. Yajnavalkya laid down a period of twenty years for the recovery by the lawful owner of land and ten years for the recovery of a chattel enjoyed by a stranger (j). And Brihaspati ruled that in case of continuous and uninterrupted possession of land for the prescriptive period there would even as against the original owner be created possessory title in favour of the person in actual possession (k). Thus lapse

---

(h) Brihaspati II, 26, 28 (S.B.E. Vol. XXXIII). See f.n. (h) on p. 62.

(i) There is an instructive dissertation by Vijnaneshvara on the juridical concept of 'ownership' in Ch. II of the Mitakshara.

(j) Grounds of legal disability were recognised. Thus for instance there was exemption from operation of limitation in case of minors, property of the king and deposits involving the element of trust.

(k) Brihaspati IX, 6, 7 (S.B.E. Vol. XXXIII).

of time was recognised both as destructive and creative of title. A further instance is equally remarkable. "A fact", it was said in an apophthegm, "cannot be altered by a hundred texts" (l). An act done and finally completed, though it may be in contravention of a hundred directory texts (as distinguished from any mandatory text), will stand and the act will be deemed to be legal and binding. This maxim of Hindu law has been recognised and applied by the Courts in cases of certain questions relating to the validity of marriage and adoption. The doctrine of Roman Law corresponding to this maxim was factum valet quod fieri non debuit. Also notable was the logical acumen of the Smritikars and those who followed them to harmonise rules not easily reconcilable. The fallacy of rigid literal construction was not overlooked. Synthesis was as far as possible achieved by in effect rejecting that meaning which was apt to introduce uncertainty, confusion or friction (m). In their desire to adapt the more ancient law to progressive conditions, they sometimes resorted to the favoured contrivance of the jurist by evolving a number of beneficent and elegant fictions. To mention only one, they announced the identity of the husband and wife and on that assumption rested the rule that in case of a person who died sonless his widow could succeed in preference to all other heirs recognised by law (n). A maxim that found favour was that reason and justice are more to be regarded than mere texts. Some of the ancient rules of law propounded by these lawmakers surprise us by their strikingly modern character and remarkable insight into jurisprudential concepts, for insight does not depend on modernity.

Smritis sometimes divided into Dharmasutras and Metrical Smritis.

The Smritis or Dharmashastras are divisible into two classes. The first of these are the Sutras. Complete Sutra works contain aphorisms on sacrifices (Shrauta); aphorisms on ceremonies requiring domestic fire (Grihya); and aphorisms on law and custom treating of temporal duties of men in their various relations (Samayacharika). The last only of these three kinds of Sutras are referred to as Dharmasutras (o). Some of them were written in prose and some both in prose and verse (p). The extant Dharmasutras though part of the Smritis or Dharmashastras, being more ancient, are sometimes differentiated from the metrical versions more specifically referred to as the Smritis. The principal extant Dharmasutras are those of Gautama, Baudhayana, Apastamba, Harita, Vasishtha and Vishnu. The Smritis more specifically so called, namely, the Institutes of Manu, of Yajnavalkya and of

---

(l) There has been some conflict of opinion among Indian Jurists on the question of the correct meaning of the maxim as stated by Jimutavahana: Vachanashatenapi vastunonyathakaranashaktch. Also see Ch. XXII § 434 infra.

(m) See pp. 40-41 infra.

(n) Yo bharta sa smritangana, Manusmriti IX, 45. Jeevatyardhashareerertham katham anyah samapnuyat . . . Asutasya prameetasyo patnee tadbhagaharenee: Brihaspati cited in Smritichandrika, Mysore Series No. 48, p. 673 The provisions of the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, adapted this fictio juris.

(o) The expression means strings or threads of rules of Dharma.

(p) The objective of the Sutras or aphorisms was to give in a compressed style of composition principles and rules with the utmost brevity. The aphorismic style helped to avoid overburdening the memory. A trite saying was "an author rejoiceth in the economising of half a vowel as much as in the birth of a son".

Narada and the Smritis of Parashara, Brihaspati, Katyayana and others belong to the second category of Dharmashastras and are later in age than the Dharmasutras. The Dharmasutras are sometimes divided into Purva and Apara Sutras, the former being the more ancient of them, but no list is intended to be exhaustive. The sutras generally bear the names of their authors and in some cases the names of the Shakha or School to which the authors belonged. It will suffice to refer only to some of them in the present context. The Gautama Dharmasutra belonged to the Samavedins. The Vasishtha Dharmasutra belonged to the Vasishtha group of Rigvedins and the Apastamba and the Baudhayana to the Taittiriyas. The rituals of the groups differed in details. The Dharmasutras, however, dealt mainly with duties of men in their various relations and in course of time began to be accepted as of authority by members of all the groups.

Dharmasutras.

The Dharmasutras of Gautama, Baudhayana, Apastamba, Harita and Vasishtha are now considered and accepted to be the most ancient of the extant recorded aphorisms on law and custom treating the duties of men in their various relations. "Though the texts of the Dharmasutras have not always been preserved with perfect purity, they have evidently retained their original character. They do not pretend to be anything more than the compositions of ordinary mortals, based on the teachings of the Vedas, on the decisions of those who are acquainted with the law, and on the customs of virtuous Aryans. . . . It is further still possible to recognise, even on a superficial examination, for what purpose the Dharmasutras were originally composed. Nobody can doubt for a moment that they are manuals written by the teachers of the Vedic schools for the guidance of their pupils, that at first they were held to be authoritative in restricted circles, and that they were later only acknowledged as sources of the sacred law" (q). The Dharmasutras were fascicular rules which came to be accepted as records of the one traditional law. They were not bodies of law struggling with each other for recognition. Composed in different parts of the country and at different times they did not present any anomaly but tended to slide into each other. In common with most of the Dharmashastras, they mingled religious and moral precepts with secular law. Some of them are remarkable for the manner and vigour of their expression and the multifariousness of the subjects of living interest covered by them. Some of these teachers give the impression that they were free willed, creative, ideal-harbouring human beings who did not feel bound by everlasting orthodoxies. In their texts there are no urgings to docile and sedulous conformity to every authoritarian mandate of the ritualists. If anything, they suggest that confining and endless conformity is bad for the human spirit. The authors of these Dharma-

---

(q) Dr. Buhler: Introduction to 'The Laws of Manu', Sacred Books of the East Series, Vol. 25, p. XI. The Smritis of Manu and some others were largely based on law which had partly been systematised by the Sutrakars. The Dharmasutras supplied the ground-plan for those works.

sutras took the law from earlier Gathas and Sutras and customs which had grown up bit by bit and reduced them to some sort of order and symmetry. Some of these Sutrakars have evolved idioms of expression and contributed a significant quota to the language of law.

Apastamba.

The Apastamba Sutra is probably the best preserved of these Sutras. In a distinguished manner not free from archaic phraseology, Apastamba treats certain aspects of the law of marriage and of inheritance and criminal law. A notable feature of this Sutra is the clarity and forcefulness of its language. Untampered with by later redactors, it is one of the most quoted of the Sutras and accepted as high authority. Apastamba hailed from the South and it is believed that in his work were embodied the customs of his part of the country. Haradatta has written a commentary on this work. It is entitled Ujjvala. Apastamba emphasizes the traditional view that the Vedas were the source (pramana) and nucleus of all knowledge. He takes care, however, at the end of his work, to impress his pupils with the statement: "Some declare that the remaining duties (which have not been taught here) must be learnt from women and men of all castes" (r). He also states: "The knowledge which . . . women possess is the completion of all study" (s). Haradatta explains this as in part referable to the science of useful arts and other branches of arthashastra which latter expression he uses as embracing all general knowledge. The classical Sanskrit writers including Kalidasa endorse this pithy maxim in some choice phrases. The expressions 'knowledge' and 'completion of all study' were presumably used by Apastamba bearing in mind the rule that wide and comprehensive meaning must be attributed to words if they are fairly susceptible of it.

Gautama.

The Gautama Dharmasutra is probably the oldest of the extant works on law and as already pointed out belonged to the Samavedins. The injunction that it was the duty of the king to preserve intact the time-honoured institutions of each country and make authoritative the customs of the inhabitants of different parts of the country just as they are stated to be, favoured by Manu, Brihaspati, Devala (t) and other writers of the metrical smritis, does not appear to have been quite established at the time of Gautama (u). It would seem, however, that by the time of Baudhayana the rule was firmly established (v). Gautama Dharmasutra is in prose and treats extensively of matters legal and religious. These include questions of inheritance, partition and Stridhan. Gautama attaches adequate importance to tradition and practices and usages of cultivators, traders, herdsmen, moneylenders and artisans (w). Haradatta has written a commentary also on the work of Gautama.

---

(r) II, 11, 29, 15.
(s) II, 11, 29, 11.
(t) Yasmin deshe pure grame traividye nagarepiva: yo yatra vihito dharmastam dharman na vichalayet.
(u) Gautama, however, does say that the laws of countries, castes and families should be recognised in administering justice XI, 20.
(v) See Baudhayana I, 1, 2, 1-8.
(w) Gautama, XI, 21.

Baudhayana. Baudhayana Sutra is not available in its integrate form. What we have is a dismembered work which according to the researches of Dr. Burnell consists of four Prashnas of which the last would seem from intrinsic evidence to be an interpolation. There is evidence both internal and external to suggest that Baudhayana Sutra is older than Apastamba. Dr. Buhler has examined various arguments which go to establish the high antiquity of this work (x). Budhayana is rather elaborate in his treatment and discursive. He himself says: "This teacher is not particularly anxious to make his book short." Baudhayana treats of a variety of subjects including inheritance, sonship, adoption and marriage. He mentions a number of usages and practices of the people and refers to certain customs prevalent only in the South one of them being marriage with the daughter of a maternal uncle. He also mentions some customs which were peculiar to the people living in the North, two of them being trading in arms and going to sea (y). He also speaks of the levy of sea-customs ad valorem (z) and of imposition of excise duty on traders by the king (a).

Harita. Harita is another Sutrakar whose work deserves special notice. One of the most quoted of the early exponents of law, he is mentioned as an authority by Apastamba and some other compilers of Dharmasutras and possibly his work is one of the oldest Dharmasutras so far known to be in existence. His treatment follows the same pattern that is adopted by the early Sutrakars. Harita is freely quoted also by the Commentators. A verse ascribed to Harita is reminiscent of the stage of progress that Hindu law had made even during the first period of the era of the Dharmashastras: When the defendant avers that the matter in controversy was the subject of a former litigation between him and the plaintiff when the latter was defeated the plea is a plea of former judgment—prag nyaya. This is similar to the doctrine of res judicata and the exceptio rei judicatae of Roman Law.

Vasishtha. Of the Dharmasutra of Vasishtha, not much is extant. He deals inter alia with sources and jurisdiction of law and rules of inheritance, marriage, adoption and sonship. Vasishtha stresses the importance of usage and describes it as a supplement to law. A number of manuscripts of this Sutra have been translated and published and opinion is divided on the question of the authenticity of certain chapters. Vasishtha gives an interesting description of Aryavarta (the country of Aryas). He adds that, according to many writers, its northern and southern boundaries were respectively the Himalayas and the Vindhya range (b) and goes on to state that customs which are approved in any country must be everywhere acknowledged as authoritative (c).

---

(x) S.B.E. Vol. XIV, p. xxxvii.
(y) I, 1, 11, 1-4.
(z) I, 10, 18, 14.
(a) I, 10, 18, 15.
(b) I, 8, 9, 12, 13.
(c) I, 10, 11: Provided they are not contrary to the policy of law.

Vishnu.

Vishnu is another sutrakar whose collection of aphorisms is entitled to consideration among the ancient works of this class which have come down to our time. Vishnu is one of the smritikars mentioned in the enumeration of Yajnavalkya (d) but an examination of the extant work clearly shows that its author has copiously borrowed from Manusmriti and other standard works and must have adopted as the basis of his work an ancient collection of aphorisms intituled Vishnusutra. The bulk of the extant work consists of rules in prose composed in the laconic style of the early sutrakars but most of the chapters conclude with metrical verse. It deals with rules of criminal and civil law, inheritance, marriage, debt, interest, treasure trove and various other subjects. Nandapandita, himself an erudite writer on law, has written a commentary on Vishnusutra known as the Vaijayanti (e).

Some other authors of Dharmasutras.

Of the other ancient authors of Dharmasutras very little is known although the aphorisms of some of them, mostly remnants, are to be found mentioned in the works of later compilers of the Dharmashastras. Of those, mention must be made of the brothers Shankha and Likhita the co-authors of a Dharmasutra bearing their names. In an oft-quoted verse from Parasharasmriti, the Dharmasutra of Shankha-Likhita is given considerable prominence. The Dharmasutra of Ushanas is mentioned by Yajnavalkya in his enumeration. The author appears to have ascribed his work to Ushanas (f) who is probably Shukra the mythological preceptor and the regent of the planet Venus. An oft-quoted text of Ushanas is that the son is under no pious obligation to pay a fine or the balance of a fine or a tax (or toll) due by the father; nor is he bound to pay a debt due by the father which is not proper (g).

Importance of the Dharmasutras.

The great importance of these works today is not so much in their texts as in the concepts of jurisprudence reflected through their medium and the historical value of their contents and the reference that is traceable in them to previously unrecorded custom, and crystallization in the form of precepts of usages and practices and the transformation of these into constituent law. Gautama in enumerating the sources of the sacred law speaks of the Vedas and the tradition and practices of those who know (the Vedas). Gautama in the Chapter on duties of a king also states that his administration of justice shall be regulated by the Veda, the Institutes of the sacred law and the laws of countries, castes and families provided they are not repugnant to the sacred records (h). There are similar express texts recognising custom as a source of law (dharmamoolam) and also references both direct and implied to various customs in the Dharmasutras mentioned above showing that the law was traditional and that custom

---

(d) See p. 18 infra.

(e) See p. 49 infra. A translation of Vishnusutra by Dr. Jolly was published in the S.B.E. Series (Vol. VII).

(f) Ushanas is mentioned as an ancient seer in the Bhagavad Gita, Discourse X, 37.

(g) Na vyavaharika.

(h) I, 1, 2; XI, 19-21 (S.B.E. Vol. II).

was a constituent part of it (i). It may be of interest to underline some of the liberal rules relating to the status and rights of women which found favour with these early exponents of law. Remarriage of widows and divorce are recognised in some of the old texts (j). In Vishnusutra it is stated that on partition between brothers after the father's death not only are the mothers entitled to share equally with their sons but unmarried sisters also are entitled to their aliquot shares (k). These teachers of the Vedic Schools brought a virile mind to the deposits of the legal thought and traditions of the past. Acclaimed propounders of the early Smriti law these Sutrakars primarily sought to express the communis sententia of the Indo-Aryans and were unanimous in their appeal to customary law. This adherence to the doctrine of accepted usage and the enjoined duty of the interpreter of law to see that customs, practices and family usages prevailed and were preserved is one of the outstanding features of Hindu jurisprudence.

Chronology of Dharmasutras.

Of the Dharmasutras we have some reliable history though the task of the historian in fixing the chronology of these works has been indeed hard. But the problem of determining the dates of the leading Dharmasutras and Smritis was so fascinating and opened up such a vast field for reconstruction that during the last hundred years some jurists and scholars both European and Indian have critically and with meticulous care examined the available data and relevant criteria and assigned the approximate dates of the compilation of these works. There have been many handicaps to the task of fixation of the dates of the various Dharmashastras. A number of early Dharmasutras are not available. Nor are available the complete texts of all the extant Smritis. Then again some texts attributed to some of the ancient exponents of law are to be gathered only from later works which quote them as authority. Of the available Dharmashastras some quote with approval previous works but do not throw any light on the question of their age. In case of some of these Dharmashastras, it is not possible to rule out the existence of interpolations and in case of one or two of them there are manifest indications of subsequent remodelling of the texts. In these circumstances the conclusions reached must often of necessity rest with the fixation of the approximate century during which the particular Dharmashastra must have been compiled. There was a sharp controversy amongst some earlier Western and Indian scholars on the question of the chronology of the Dharmashastras. There is even now some difference of opinion amongst the Indian jurists and scholars themselves as to the time when some of the Dharmashastras were first reduced to writing in the form in which they are extant. According to some of the earlier Western writers, the Smritis were reduced to

---

(i) According to Roman jurisprudence 'customary law' obtains as positive law by virtue of the consensus utentium. Justinian states: Nam quid interest, populus suffragio voluntatem suam declaret, an rebus ipsis et factis? Digest 1, 3, 32.

(j) Vasishtha XVII, 72-74 (S.B.E. Vol. XIV). This was in consonance with Rigveda 10M, 18, 7.

(k) Matarah putrabhaganusarena bhagaharinyah anudhhashcha duhitarah: Vishnu 18, 35.

writing some centuries later than the dates assigned to them by Indian jurists and scholars. It has been the opinion of the Indian critics that on this point those Western scholars often indulged in a priori reasoning and based their conclusions on unsound analogy. An analysis of the reasons in support of their conclusions given by some eminent jurists and scholars both European and Indian would suggest that the Dharmasutras of Gautama, Baudhayana, Apastamba and Vasishtha must have been recorded between about 800 B.C. and 300 B.C. Dr. Jolly has tried to prove that the Apastamba Sutra is the oldest of these. Mahamahopadhyaya Kane puts the time of Gautama Dharmasutra before the spread of Buddhism and his opinion is that this Sutra cannot be placed later than the period between 600-400 B.C. (l). The age of Chandragupta Maurya which is reliably fixed as 321 B.C. to 297 B.C. is the sheet-anchor of Indian chronology. Almost equally useful is the date of Panini who lived "probably soon after 500 B.C." (m). Some Sanskritists on the other hand have made claims of greater antiquity for some of the extant Dharmashastras. They also rely on certain data. But it seems unnecessary to join in the desire to go as far back as possible for the purpose of enhancing the importance of these ancient authorities on law.

Yajnavalkya's enumeration of Smritis.

In a verse of Yajnavalkya are enumerated twenty of the Smritis all bearing the names of the Rishis to whom their authorship was ascribed. Manu, Atri, Vishnu, Harita, Yajnavalkya, Ushanas, Angiras, Yama, Apastamba, Samvarta, Katyayana, Brihaspati, Parashara, Vyasa, Shankha, Likhita, Daksha, Gautama, Shatatapa, and Vasishtha are mentioned as founders of Dharmashastras (n). The verse obviously was penned by a later redactor and the list is illustrative and not exhaustive. Narada, Baudhayana and other Smritikars not mentioned here are among the recognised compilers of law (o).

Smritis supplementary to each other.

Of the numerous Smritis the first and foremost in rank of authority is Manusmriti or the Institutes of Manu. There is a striking resemblance and agreement among the Smritis on many questions and they purport to embody one traditional law. All the Smritis in course of time came to be regarded as of universal application. No greater authority was attached to one than to another Smriti, except in case of Manusmriti which was received as of the highest authority. It was not as if any one Smriti was taken as in substitution for another on any particular aspect or branch of law or as of greater authority in any part of the country but they were all treated as supplementary to each other.

---

(l) Vol. I, p. 19.

(m) Macdonell India's Past, p. 136. Panini is the author of a work on grammar described as "a monument of thoroughness and algebraic brevity". Panini gives some data of considerable importance to the historian (Dr. R. K. Mookerji, Hindu Civilization, Ch. VI).

(n) Dharmashastraprayojakah I, 4, 5. In his Nirnayasindhu, Kamalakara refers to over 100 Smritis. Many of those mentioned by him have not been found.

(o) The Padmapurana lists thirty-six compilers of law. The name of Atri mentioned in Yajnavalkyasmriti is not mentioned. To the other nineteen are added Marichi, Pulastya, Prachetas, Bhrigu, Narada, Kashyapa, Vishvamitra, Devala, Rishyashringa, Gargya, Baudhayana, Paithinashi, Javali, Samantu, Paraskara, Lokakshi and Kuthumi.

Manusmriti.

Manusmriti or Institutes of Manu is by common tradition entitled to place of precedence among all the Smritis. The other Smritikars themselves subscribe to this view. Opinion, however, is divided on the question of the identity of Manu. It seems impossible to offer any strong data one way or the other on the somewhat fascinating riddle as to the identity of the original law-giver or to point out the specific rules of law promulgated by him and preserved as part of the extant Code. There is a striking resemblance and agreement among the Smritis and they purport to embody one traditional law often stated to be the pronouncements of Manu who was accepted as the first expositor of law and often reverently referred to by the Smritikars in the pluralis majestatits. The ancient law existed before writing was invented and human memory had to be its sole repository. It was not static but a growing system and was handed down for centuries from preceptor to disciple in succession. In course of time had come the Gathas and Sutras of the Brahmana period. And after that came the Dharmasutras. All these were supplementing, altering and gradually moulding the ancient traditional law into system. This evolution was going on for many centuries and so also was going on the process of lawmaking with a body of customs taking shape and receiving recognition from time to time and itself forming a constituent part of the traditional law. The rules of law attributed to Manu the first Patriarch were bound to come up continuously for consideration and application and the exponent or interpreter of law had to take account of the law at the time extant and also attach adequate importance to growing usages and customs. The accretions were naturally accepted as part of the same law and having the same obligatory force as the original rules. The fixation of these rules was obtained when the Code itself was compiled and bore the name of Manu the original exponent of law. The Code is not in the language of Vedic times and it is obvious that it was reduced to writing at a later period. The date of this compilation in its extant form can now fairly reliably be fixed as about 200 B.C. but there is little historical data about its actual author. The Code contains interesting parallels with other works and the author, whatever his real identity was, appears to have compiled an exhaustive code binding on all and identified it with the most familiar and venerated name of Manu, the primeval legislator. The Dharmashastras right down from the Rig-Vedic age copiously refer to the opinions of Manu and of Manu Svayambhuva. Then again there are references made to Prachetasa Manu and Vriddha Manu. References are also made to Manavadharmasutra. Evidence about Manu traditionally accepted as the first exponent of law cannot altogether be said to be scanty, nor is there any conclusive data to establish his identity. There is not much reason, however, for the student of Hindu Law to make himself uneasy over the paucity or uncertainty of evidence regarding the identity of the real author of the extant Manusmriti or of the original Manu whose name it

Manu the first Patriarch.

Identity of the actual compiler of the Code is not known.

bears. What is of importance and consequence is the paramount authority of Manu. It has been repeatedly asserted and affirmed that the authority of the precepts contained in the Manusmriti was beyond dispute.

Corpus Juris of ancient India.

The extant Code of Manu compiled in about 200 B.C. was obviously an answer to a long-felt desideratum because the legal literature of the Dharmasutra period had not produced any work which could meet the requirements of a compendium of law in all its branches. The unique position acquired by it as the leading Smriti and effectually of the most authoritative reservoir of law was due both to its traditional history and the systematic and cogent collection of rules of existing law that it gave to the people with clarity and in language simple and easy of comprehension. Analogy, though imperfect, of the Codex Theodosianus, a compilation promulgated in A.D. 429 and the Codex Justinianus compiled in A.D. 528 may serve to give an idea of the purpose achieved by the institutes of Manu (p). Virtually amounting to a recasting in a convenient and easily accessible form of the whole of the traditional law it appears to have in practice replaced on matters covered by it the use of the rules of law stated in earlier Gathas and Sutras and the Chapters on Vyavahara in the Dharmasutras most of which it had practically embodied. The Code is divided into twelve chapters. In the eighth chapter are stated rules on eighteen subjects of law—intituled titles of law—which include both civil and criminal law (q). In later treatises other Smritikars have mostly followed this division and the nomenclature adopted in the Code except that the ninth division of Manu was dropped and the title of Prakirnaka (miscellaneous) was supplemented (r). The author of the extant smriti may not have been the originator of the famous division but it appears to have been a traditional classification accepted and popularised by him. The rules of law laid down in Manusmriti and its most characteristic doctrines have today their practical importance in this that the Code is a landmark in the history of Hindu Law and a reservoir to which reference may at times become necessary for the proper appreciation of any fundamental concept or any question involving first principles. Law of inheritance, property, contracts, partnership, master and servant are some of the branches of law comprising the Code. The Code records many genuine observances of the Ancient Hindu and gives a vivid idea of the customs of the society then extant. The ordi-

Eighteen titles of law.

(p) An examination of the departments of law dealt with in Manusmriti will show that it was a complete code embracing all branches of law and was suitable to conditions then prevalent and the exigencies of the time. The Colonial expansion of India at one time embraced almost the whole of South-East Asia. And it may be of some interest to notice that the name of Manu was authoritatively associated with the laws of many countries in that vast region. On the facade of the legislature building in Manila, the capital of the Philippines, are four figures representing the culture of that country. One of the figures is of Manu.

(q) Manusmriti VIII 4-7. The eighteen titles are I. Recovery of Debts. II. Deposit and pledge. III. Sale without ownership. IV. Concerns among partners. V. Resumption of gifts. VI. Non-payment of wages or hire. VII. Non-performance of agreements. VIII. Rescission of sale and purchase. IX. Disputes between master and servant. X. Disputes regarding boundaries. XI. Assault. XII. Defamation. XIII. Theft. XIV. Robbery and violence. XV. Adultery. XVI. Duties of man and wife. XVII. Partition (of inheritance). XVIII. Gambling and betting.

(r) For instance, see Naradasmriti XVIII.

KASHMIR UNIVERSITY
Iqbal Library
Acc. No ..... 128945

nances of Manu are based on ancient usages. Predominance was to be given to approved usage in all matters: "Let every man, therefore . . . who has a due reverence for the supreme spirit which dwells in him, diligently and constantly observe immemorial custom." "Thus have the holy sages, well knowing that law is grounded on immemorial custom, embraced, as the root of all piety good usages long established." "A king. . . . must inquire into the law of castes (jati), of districts (Ganapada), of guilds (Shreni), and of families (kula), and settle the peculiar law of each" (s). In his survey of the duties of the king, Manu stresses the importance of danda which connotes the sanction behind the power of the king to restrain transgressions of law and to inflict punishment on offenders. The danda "alone governs all protected beings, alone protects them, watches over them while they sleep; the wise declare it (to be identical with) the law" (t). Other leading Smritikars echo this punitive element of the theory of kingship. Of the numerous English translations of the Code, the one that has often been referred to is that by Dr. Buhler which was published in the Sacred Books of the East Series in 1886 (u). A number of commentaries were written on Manu's Code during the Post-Smriti period by Medhatithi, Govindaraja, Kulluka and others. Kulluka's text has been referred to for centuries in India and Dr. Buhler's translation was made from a recension of Manu given by Kulluka. Mahamahopadhyaya Sir Ganganath Jha has published volumes on the Manusmriti with Medhatithi's commentary.

Commentari on Manusmr

Of the commentaries on Manusmriti, the most notable is Manvarthamuktavali of Kulluka. In the preface to his translation of Manusmriti, Sir William Jones observed: "It may perhaps be said very truly that it is the shortest yet the most luminous, the least ostentatious yet the most learned, deepest yet the most agreeable, commentary ever composed on any author, ancient or modern." Obviously this was superlative praise. Kulluka freely quotes Medhatithi and Govindaraja and attacks some of their explanations and comments in a trenchant manner. He directed the shafts of his sarcasm against them and his remarks when he derides them are spiced with malice and made in poor taste. He refers to some of the observations of Govindaraja with sarcastic mockery and in a manner reminiscent of some of the neatest and most pointed of the eighteenth century English Satirists. There was no limitation to Kulluka's egoism as might be seen from his own assessment of his exposition and ability as a commentator (v) but it cannot be gainsaid that he was a legist of the first rank. His forte was an ability to reduce difficult rules to the simplest language and logic. There is no obscurity about his style. Master

Kulluka.

---

(s) Manusmriti VIII, 41, 46.
(t) VII. 18.
(u) Mention may here be made of the translation of Manusmriti by Sir William Jones which came out in 1794. In his preface he observed: "The style of it (Manusmriti) has a certain austere majesty, that sounds like the language of legislation and exhorts a respectful awe; the sentiments of independence on all beings but God, and the harsh admonitions even to kings, are truly noble. . . ."
(v) Vyakhyatarah na jagurapareepyanyato durlabham vah.

of his subject, he is not altogether free from sophistry in his reasoning. There can, however, be no doubt that the merits of Kulluka's work and of his original technique as a critic are outstanding. His elucidations and amplifications of some laconic expressions and curious terms used by Manu and the occasional obscurity of Manu's texts have for centuries been of great assistance and his Manavarthamuktavali is a very valuable production.

Medhatithi.

Of further commentaries on Manusmriti, which are many, reference may only be made to those of Medhatithi and Govindaraja. Medhatithi although he shows great veneration for Manu states that the Prajapati Manu of the Smriti was "a particular individual perfect in the study of many branches of the Veda, in the knowledge of its meaning and in the performance of its precepts, and known through the sacred tradition which has been handed down in regular succession" (w). Medhatithi sometimes resorts to general propositions which expose him to the attack that he is begging the question. In matters of law, general statements, unless they weld a formidable mass of particulars, can rarely be convincing. They merely convey 'nothing but a benevolent yearning'. Kulluka does not fail to criticise Medhatithi for this tendency of his. As a rule Medhatithi's interpretations and comments are instructive and dependable although sometimes he indulges in casuistic subtlety as for instance when he explains away the oft-quoted verse of Manu permitting remarriage of a widow. This is not to disparage the merit of his work which is copiously informative and a landmark in the legal history of Hindu law. And it seems only right to add that most of his broad propositions are the result of reflective generalisations. Medhatithi shows perfect mastery of the Mimansa rules and admirable legal acumen. In his Manubhashya he cites freely from earlier Dharmasutras. His citations are apposite and selected only for the purpose of elucidation and at times for extracting principles. The Govindaraja.

Manutika of Govindaraja despite some lapses gives a faithful explanation of the texts of the Smriti and is a reliable commentary. There is not much subtlety. But there is depth. Govindaraja sometimes illustrates the obvious and is rather elaborate in his treatment. He is patiently analytic and pedestrian but sound in his exposition.

Yajnavalkya Smriti.

Yajnavalkyasmriti or the Institutes of Yajnavalkya, it would seem from relative criteria, must have been compiled in about the first century after Christ. According to one tradition Rishi Yajnavalkya was the grandson of the redoubtable royal sage Vishvamitra. In the introduction to the Code it is mentioned that it was in an assembly of sages that this Dharmashastra was pronounced by Yajnavalkya. It is also stated in this Smriti that the compiler was the same person who was the author of the Brihadaranyaka Upanishad (x). The more acceptable view seems to be that the Code was not authored by the sage of that Upanishad but was the (w) I, 58.

(x) Yajnavalkyasmriti III, 110.

work of a follower of Yajnavalkya who hid his identity behind the name of the venerated rishi. Support is to be derived for this view from a statement in the Mitakshara of Vijnaneshvara, the celebrated expository treatise on this Smriti. The Code contains many parallels with other smritis and draws upon and quotes from a number of them. Yajnavalkya states that the ordained foundations of Dharma are: "The Shruti, the Smriti, the approved usage, what is agreeable to one's self (good conscience) and desire sprung from due deliberation" (y). The last part of this text would seem to add one more source of law to those enumerated by Manu (z). The oft-quoted words of Manu: "Yet Karma Kurvatosya syat paritoshantaratmanah . . ." (a) which emphasize satisfaction of the inner self as one of the indices of Dharma and the expression "desire sprung from due deliberation" have no bearing on positive law and must be read as having reference to Dharma in its ethical sense. The "self-satisfaction" mentioned in this context is not any one's self-satisfaction but of those good persons who were learned in the Vedas (b). The words "desire sprung from due deliberation" do not incorporate any doctrine of private judgment in law.

Yajnavalkya is more liberal than Manu.

The Code of Yajnavalkya is in the main founded on Manusmriti but the treatment here is more logical and synthesized. On a number of matters and particularly on the question of status of shudras, of women's right of inheritance and to hold property, and of criminal penalty, Yajnavalkya although a follower of conventional conservatism is decidedly more liberal than Manu. The influence, though not direct, of Buddha "the enlightened" and Buddhism on the Vyavahara part of Dharma of this Smriti and the Smriti of Narada cannot be minimised. Buddha's teachings and particularly his message of universal compassion naturally had effect on certain invidious and rigorous aspects of the law and this is reflected in the Smriti of Yajnavalkya. Punishments prescribed in this Code are comparatively less severe in case of a number of offences. There is greater recognition of the rights of women and of the status of shudras. Yajnavalkya deals with a number of subjects and deals exhaustively with the law of mortgages and hypothecation. He also deals with partnership and associations of persons interested in joint business ventures: "A number of traders, carrying on a trade for making profit, shall share profit and loss according to their respective shares, or according to the compact made between themselves. If any member of a company does an act, forbidden by the general body, or without their permission or negligently, and thereby causes a loss, he shall have to indemnify the others for the same" (c).

---

(y) I, 7. Yajnavalkya enumerates in a well known verse fourteen sources of knowledge and Dharma: The four Vedas; their six Angas or subsidiary sciences; the Dharmashastras, the Mimansa containing rules of exegesis; the Nyaya or dialectic philosophy; and the Puranas or records of antiquity (I, 3).

(z) Manusmriti II, 12.

(a) Manusmriti IV, 161. Also see p. 3, supra.

(b) Madhatithi II, 6.

(c) II, 262, 263. Cf. Voet: "Societas est contractus jurisgentium, bonoe fidei consensu constans, semper re honesta, de lucri et damni communione."

Development of law of procedure.

Adequate importance has not been given in Mànusmriti to rules of procedure. There are quite a number of verses in Yajnavalkyasmriti which show that the law of procedure and evidence to be followed in civil disputes had made considerable progress by the time of Yajnavalkya. There are no arid technicalities but it is clear that by that time some elements of strict procedure had been found necessary and desirable. Yajnavalkya endorses the rule of pleading which insists upon all material facts on which a party relies being set out in his statement of claim or defence. "That which is not alleged does not in the eye of law exist even though as a matter of fact it might so exist" (d). Yajnavalkya does not confine justiciable matters to the eighteen titles popularised by the author of Manusmriti. Vyavaharapada—a cause for judicial proceeding—arises if any right of a person is infringed or any wrong is done to him by another in contravention of the Smritis or customary law (e). There are some remarkable verses in Yajnavalkyasmriti which challenge any possible assertion of Divine Right of Kings. He exhorts the king to be modest, even-minded and righteous, to give himself in service of his subjects and to daily look after the administration of justice. The injunction is: "Whether a brother, a son, a preceptor . . . none can escape from the punishment of the king, if he deviates from the performance of his own duties" (f).

Vyavaharapada.

Yajnavalkya on the whole is scientific and constructive. Although he is at times unduly elaborate there is in his work on most of the matters rigorous exclusion of inessentials. Most of his legal precepts though succinctly stated are full of juridical meaning and import (g). Sometimes he introduces in his language an audacious trick of phrase. He has enriched the vocabulary of law with some expressions remarkable for their precision and significance (h). It is true that the authority of Yajnavalkyasmriti was greatly enhanced by the edifice of Mitakshara raised upon it by Vijnaneshvara and which commentary is today of pre-eminent importance in the greater part of India (i). That does not, however, detract from the merits of the work which has always been accepted as one of the three principal Codes among the Dharmashastras and referred to as high authority by commentators of repute and in decisions of the Privy Council.

Naradasmriti.

Naradasmriti, also known as Naradiya Dharmashastra, was compiled in about A.D. 200. Narada purports to accord with the ancient writ when he professes merely to be a compiler of the tradi-

---

(d) Mitakshara II, 19.

(e) I, 5 Smrityachara vyapetena margena-dharshitah paraih: Avedayati chedragne vyavaharapadam hi tat.

(f) I, 358.

(g) For instance, the verses relating to partition and the texts about partition per stirpes between the members of different branches of a joint family. Division of property rebus sic stantibus is implicit in those rules. Also the rule about priority of the title in case of successive hypothecations of sales II, 23. And the rule about ascertainment of shares of partners II, 259.

(h) In stating the familiar examples of Act of State and Act of God resulting in frustration of a contract he uses only one word namely, the compound expression Rajn-Daivika. For 'sources of law' he used the significant expression gnapakahetun.

(i) For other important commentaries on Yajnavalkya see pp. 48-49 infra. For Mitakshara see pp. 44-48 infra.

tional law handed down from the times of Manu (j). In the introduction to his Code, Narada states that it is an abridgment of the larger work of Manu said to have originally been in one hundred thousand verses. The Code of Narada has come down to us in its integrity. It begins with an introduction and the treatment of the subject is divided into two parts. The first deals with judicature and the second enumerates and discusses with remarkable clarity the eighteen titles of law contained in the Manusmriti. Clarity and fidelity to the texts of Manu are not, however, the only merits of the Code. Although there is a faithful similitude with certain texts of Manu, Narada differs from him on a number of interesting and important points. He is categorical and emphatic in his statement that custom is powerful and overrides any text of the sacred law (k). His work is systematised and he is exhaustive in his treatment. He does not show any servile adherence to the views of his illustrious predecessors; nor does he shrink from stepping in and declaring rules in conformity with the changes that had taken place in social, economic and political conditions. One great merit of this smriti is that it states the law in a straightforward manner in a logical sequence which is readily assimilated and in a style which is both clear and attractive. There is euphony in a number of verses of Narada but he never sacrifices precision to euphony. Narada is renowned for the advanced and progressive views expressed by him on a number of matters. A feature of his Smriti is that it deals solely with law (Vyavahara) and does not contain sections on Achara or Prayaschitta. Some of the topics of law dealt with by Narada are inheritance, ownership, property, gifts and partnership. He also treats inter alia of the age of majority (l), shares of widow and unmarried sisters on partition between sons, and recognises separation and remarriage by a woman in certain circumstances (m). Narada gives some detailed rules relating to payment of interest. After stating the general rules relating to interest, he adds that there can be special rules recognised by usage. There are some rules founded on principles which are recognised as sound under the modern law on the subject of interest. In certain cases of loans where no interest is stipulated interest can begin to run from the date of demand (n). Narada condemns usury (o).

Advanced and progressive views of Narada.

An outstanding feature of this Smriti is that it lays down a series of rules relating to pleading, evidence of witnesses and procedure. These rules make interesting reading and reference may be made to some of them. Narada speaks of the plaint as of the essence of a law-suit and stresses the rule that it must disclose

Rules of pleadings.

---

(j) The colophon in one manuscript in Nepalese character examined by Prof. Jolly "Iti Manavadharmashastre Naradaproktayam Samhitayam".

(k) See f.n. (g) on p. 39. Justinian's compilations are collectively referred to in modern legal literature as the Corpus juris civilis. In the Digest, which is a part of the same, sometimes called the Pandects is stated: Quare rectissime illud receptum est, ut leges non solum suffragio legislatoris, sed etiam tactito consensu ominium per desuetudinem abrogatur—

(l) Narada uses the expression Vyavaharajnah to denote one who is sui juris.

(m) XII. 96-101.

(n) I, 105, 108, 109.

(o) I, 110, 111.

a proper cause of action (p). In dealing with the defendant's reply he states: "The defendant immediately after having become acquainted with the tenor of the plaint, shall submit in writing his answer, which must correspond to the tenor of the plaint" (q). "An answer is fourfold: a denial; a confession; a special plea; and that which is based on a plea of former judgment" (r). Reverting to the pleading of the plaintiff he adds: "Before the answer to the plaint has been tendered by the defendant, the plaintiff may amend his own statements as much as he desire" (s). "These are called the defects of a plaint: if it relates to a different subject; if it is unmeaning; if the amount (relief) has not been properly stated; if it is wanting in propriety; if the writing is deficient or redundant . . ." (t). "He who forsakes his original claim and produces a new one, loses his suit, because he confounds two plaints with one another" (u). As to burden of proof he rules: "What the claimant has declared in the plaint that he must substantiate by adducing evidence at the trial" (v). "Where the defendant has answered the plaint by means of a special plea, it becomes incumbent on him to prove his assertion, and he is placed in the position of a claimant" (w). Referring to the decree of the court Narada says: "The victorious party shall receive a document recording his success, and couched in appropriate language (x).

Asahaya's commentary on Naradasmriti.

Asahaya, who is himself quoted with esteem in a number of treatises and digests, has written the Naradabhashya which is a very useful commentary on Naradasmriti. Asahaya lived in about the beginning of the seventh century and is probably the earliest of the leading commentators. A translation by Dr. Jolly of the larger of two versions of Naradasmriti, now generally accepted as the authentic text of the Code of Narada, was published in the Bibliotheca Indica in 1876. In his edition of Naradasmriti published in the Sacred Books of the East Series, Dr. Jolly has used Asahaya's commentary. Asahaya shares with other early commentators the peculiarity of giving illustrations taken from everyday life of his period, which help to throw light on the practical working of the law in those times. The available commentary of Asahaya has not been preserved in its original shape and is not complete (y).

King-made laws.

A striking feature of Naradasmriti is that it is the first of the Dharmashastras to accept and record the principle that king-made laws could override any rule of law laid down in the Smritis. The most glorious chapter in the history of ancient India had commenced with the reign of the Maurya dynasty (founded by Chandragupta in 321 B.C.). Ashoka, devanampriya as he is described in his Edicts, was another Mauryan Emperor who ruled an empire the

---

(p) Intro. I, 6: Sarastu vyavaharanam pratijna samudahruta.
(q) Intro. II, 2.
(r) Intro. II, 4.
(s) Intro. II, 7.
(t) Intro. II, 8.
(u) Intro. II, 24.
(v) Intro. II, 27.
(w) Intro. II, 31.
(x) Intro. II, 43.
(y) S.B.E. Vol. XXXIII, pp. XIXXX.

boundaries of which extended from the Himalayas to the Vindhyas and the eastern ocean to the western ocean (z). Other emperors and powerful kings succeeded the Mauryas. Those Mauryan and other emperors and kings, while theoretically subscribing to the tradition that law (Dharma) was mightier than the king, promulgated many laws and edicts and from the nature of things the king-made laws were bound to be enforced (a). The monarchs who flourished in that age might well have said like their Roman contemporaries 'Regia voluntas suprema lex' but as a rule they took care not to say it aloud. Narada concedes the high authority and sanction of king-made laws (b). He also adds: "As the king has obtained lordship he has to be obeyed. Polity depends on him" (c).

A leading Code.

Naradasmriti affords great help in deriving reliable knowledge of the line of evolution which Hindu law and jurisprudence had pursued during the remarkable era of the Dharmashastras, it being in point of time the last of the three leading Codes. Bryce has observed: "The law of every country is the outcome and result of the economic and social conditions of that country as well as expression of its intellectual capacity for dealing with these conditions." There is intrinsic as well as other evidence to show that the work was compiled after there had been remarkable political, economic and social progress in the country, when the highest intellectual capacity of the people had already produced the philosophy of the Upanishads out of which had been developed the doctrine of Karmayoga, and when considerable advancement had been made in Hindu jurisprudence.

Identity of this and other smritikars not known.

The compiler of Naradasmriti, according to Dr. Jolly, probably lived in Nepal (d). This smritikar seems to have attributed the authorship of his compendium to Devarshi Narada, one of the great Rishis of antiquity. That the authors of this and other important smritis should not express their real identity has baffled some writers and the question has at times been posed as to whether some of them were not dilettanti. One reason suggested for this anonymity, a reason not very complimentary, was that by fathering their smritis on ancient rishis in the opening stanzas of their works, they tried to get meretricious authority and age which would not otherwise have been their portion. The more acceptable reason for these jurist-theologians ascribing their works to others seems to be that they were unconcerned about personal fame and the fruits of their efforts and yet anxious to give the people standard works on Dharma when they fathered their Institutes on the time-honoured sages of the past some of whom were regarded as the "first path-finders". The names of many great thinkers of the Upanishads remain similarly undisclosed.

---

(z) The country was often called Aryavarta and sometimes a part of it was mentioned as Brahmavatra: Manusmriti II, 17.

(a) Naradasmriti XVIII, 25. Also see pp. 34-35.

(b) Intro. I, 11-11.

(c) "It is for the establishment of order that various laws have been proclaimed by kings. A royal order is declared to overrule such laws even": gariyo rajashasanam XVIII 24. Also see XVIII, 25.

(d) There is no reliable data for this opinion.

Parashara.

Parashara Smriti is mentioned in the enumeration of Yajnavalkya. Parashara also gives a list of the law-givers. Most of the names in Parashara's list are to be found in the enumeration of Yajnavalkya. He does not mention Yama, Brihaspati and Vyasa but includes instead Kashyapa, Gargya and Prachetas. The author of this Smriti appears to have adopted the name of a revered sage of antiquity who is referred to in the work as the father of Vyasa. Parasharasmriti deals only with the subjects of Achara and Prayashchitta and omits discussion of Vyavahara. Adverting to civil law, Parashara says that certain questions are to be determined by the decisions of a parishad or an assembly of the learned. This statement is interpreted by Mr. Mandlik to mean that Parashara found the civil law of the smritis so considerably modified by usage that he felt it unsafe to refer his readers to those works, and therefore invested the verdicts of the parishads or conclaves of the learned versed in the current usages of the country with great authority (e). Whatever be the reason for the omission by Parashara to treat specifically of Vyavahara in his work, it does appear that Parashara recognised current usages and customs of the people as transcendent law.

Madhaviya.

Madhavacharya's commentary on this smriti is known as Parashara Madhaviya and is often mentioned as the Madhaviya (f). Being a great scholar and also a prime minister of the great Vijayanagar kingdom, his work is accepted as one of the leading authorities in the South (g). Madhavacharya in his commentary deals with Vyavaharapada as well as the religious matters treated in the smriti of Parashara.

Brihaspati.

The smriti of Brihaspati is unfortunately not available in its integrity. Brihaspati like Narada who preceded him is comparatively very unorthodox. A comparison of his work with Naradasmriti and other relative criteria would suggest that it must have been compiled one or two centuries after Narada and at a time when in many branches of it the law had made further strides in its line of development. There are verses on the subject of "concerns of a partnership" which illustrate this, though it is clear from the available texts that a number of Brihaspati's rules on the subject have not been traced. The element of mutual agency in partnership which is a product of the same commercial necessities as ordinary agency, requires that the business must be carried on by the partners or some of them acting for all. Brihaspati rules that every partner is in contemplation of law the general and accredited agent of the partnership: "Whatever property one partner may give (or lend) authorized by many, or whatever contract he may execute, all that is considered as having been done by all" (h). He also deals with the right of a partner to be

---

(e) Hindu Law, p. 310.

(f) An English translation of the law of inheritance and succession from this treatise was published by Mr. A. C. Burnell. Other translations of the same are to be found in the publications of Ghosh, Vol. II, and Sethur.

(g) Subbaramayya v. Venkatasubbamma, I.L.R. (1941) Mad. 989, 1000. Collector of Madura v. Mootoo Ramalinga (1868) 12 M.I.A. 397, 437.

(h) Brihaspati XIV, 5 (S.B.E. Vol. XXXIII).

indemnified by the firm in respect of acts done by him in an emergency for the preservation of the common stock and the obligation of a partner in his turn to indemnify his partners for any loss caused to them by his negligence (i). Brihaspati distinguishes civil wrongs and crimes from other titles of law: Dvipado vyavaharashcha dhanahinsa samudbhavah. The content of the incomplete and somewhat scattered rules of this smriti available to us is abundant proof of the reason for the lasting influence of this illustrious authority on Hindu law. Brihaspati gives a number of general principles on a variety of subjects. He is in full accord with the salutary rule that the meaning of words should be such as has been received by common acceptation (j) and the preferable exposition of any rule of law should be that which is approved by constant and continual use and experience; optima enim est legis interpres consuetudo.

Rules of adjectival law.

The rules of procedure and particularly those relating to pleadings laid down by Brihaspati are a great advance on the adjectival law in operation before his time and which had to be gathered from the sporadic rules of Manu on matters of procedure, the Yajnavalkyasmriti and the more elaborate rules in the texts of Narada. Brihaspati speaks of four stages of a judicial proceeding: The filing of the Plaint; the filing of the Reply; trial of the suit having regard to burden of proof and passing of the decree (k). The requirements of a plaint stressed by Brihaspati are that the pleading must be precise in words; reasonable; brief; rich in content; unambiguous; free from confusion; and devoid of improper arguments (l). Of a written statement he says: One should not cause to be written an answer which wanders from the subject; or which is not to the point, too confined or too extensive, or not in conformity with the plaint, or not adequate or absurd or ambiguous (m). Disposal of a suit ex parte was discouraged and if possible the defendant was by processual law to be compelled to make his reply (n). One of the processes adopted has its analogue in the writ of early English law Capias ad respondendum under which an absconding defendant in a civil action was arrested or obliged to give special bail. Brihaspati laid down that it should be only in case of the failure of the process of law that the decision should go against the defendant and give to the plaintiff the relief sought by him (o). He gives a set of rules regarding witnesses and documentary evidence and also treats of estoppel (p) and adverse possession (q).

Insistence on precision.

The author of this Smriti appears to have adopted not inappropriately the name of Guru Brihaspati the venerated Rishi who

---

(i) Brihaspati XIV, 9, 10 (S.B.E. Vol. XXXIII).
(j) "The sense attached by current usage is to prevail", Budhiyogamapaharati.
(k) Brihaspati III, 12 (S.B.E. Vol. XXXIII).
(l) Brihaspati III, 5, 6 (S.B.E. Vol. XXXIII).
(m) Brihaspati IV, 8 (S.B.E. Vol. XXXIII).
(n) Brihaspati IV, 2, 3 (S.B.E. Vol. XXXIII). There are some texts on procedural law which are ascribed both to Brihaspati and Katyayana.
(o) Brihaspati IV, 4 (S.B.E. Vol. XXXIII).
(p) Brihaspati IX, 9.
(q) Brihaspati Ch. IX.

according to Hindu mythology was the preceptor of the Gods and whose name was immortalized by associating it with Guru the largest planet on the solar system. That planet, it may not altogether be amiss to observe, is believed to be concerned with law. Brihaspati does not state masses of verses to be learnt by rote. He does not revel in the use of words but prefers exactitude and his definitions are verily definitive. His rules are coherent and consistent and he does not give any undifferentiated details. Many of his original pronouncements are vested with concrete significance and he takes a spinozistic view of the whole system of law. Though available in parts which are incomplete and in some cases broken off it is one of the most readable of the smritis and is written in an arresting style. There is remarkably skilful use of assonance in some of the verses of Brihaspati but nothing is given up to the exigencies of metre. In a verse of fundamental importance he perfected the doctrine about invoking the aid of equity and enjoined that a decision must not be made solely by having recourse to the letter of the written codes (r). M. Kane has observed that the complete Smriti "will be, when discovered, a very precious monument of ancient India, exhibiting the high watermark of Indian acumen in strictly legal principles and definitions" (s). Dr. Jolly undertook the arduous task of reconstruction of this smriti from the available sources and collected and arranged the legal texts (verses) attributed to Brihaspati from the works in which they were quoted. An English translation of those verses is published in the Sacred Books of the East Series. Dr. Jolly has observed: "The fragments of Brihaspati are among the most precious relics of the early legal literature of India" (t).

Katyayana.

The Smriti of Katyayana also is unfortunately not available in its integrity. Texts from this smriti are copiously quoted in all the principal commentaries. A noteworthy feature of this smriti is the variety of subjects dealt with in it and the rules of adjectival law there stated and which go to show the progress made in that branch of the law by the time of Katyayana (fourth or fifth century after Christ). The topics dealt with by Katyayana have a wide range. In procedural law they range from judicature and pleadings to means of proof and probative value of different types of evidence. Another notable feature of this smriti is that the king despite his lordship over the land is not accepted as the owner of the soil. Ownership in land is declared to belong to the subject and the king is not entitled to claim anything more than one-sixth of the produce by way of land revenue (u). Katyayana is emphatic when he says that the king should resort to the dictates of the Dharmashastra and exhorts him not to be guided by considerations of policy favoured by the Arthashastra (v). The most striking feature of this smriti, however, is its treatment of the law of Stridhan. The

---

(r) See f.n. (h) on p. 62.
(s) Vol. I, p. 207.
(t) S.B.E. Vol. XXXIII, p. 211.
(u) Bhootanam Swamitwam.
(v) S.B.E. Vol. XXXIII, p. 271.

whole law relating to the rights of a woman over her stridhan has been evolved from a text of Narada and certain texts of Katyayana (w). The available verses of Katyayana relating to woman's property and her power of disposal over the same became the subject-matter of elaborate critical study by later commentators as he was probably the first of the Smritiwriters to discuss the subject in some details. There is discernible here a blend of empiricism and rationalism.

Rules of adjectival law.

There are many interesting verses of Katyayana dealing with adjectival law. Rules of the law of pleadings from Katyayana-Smriti quoted by the commentators clearly go to show that this Smriti marks an advanced stage of development in adjectival law. In a verse in the Mitakshara, Katyayana is quoted as enumerating the form and nature of a Reply (written statement): "a confession, a denial, a special exception and a plea of former judgment (res judicata) are the four sorts of answers" (x). Katyayana is more liberal than his predecessors in the matter of allowing amendments in pleadings. In considering probative value of evidence Katyayana states that positive oral testimony should carry more weight than a mere inference and documentary evidence speaks louder than oral testimony (y). He treats of judicature at some length and lays down the requisite qualifications of a Judge (z) and jurors who it seems assisted the judge in certain types of cases both civil and criminal. In dealing with adverse possession and limitation he draws the necessary distinction between possession de facto and mere ostensible possession by any person amounting really to custody (a).

Wide appeal of this Smriti.

There are numerous verses of Katyayana which bear the impress of the rules laid down by Narada and Brihaspati and it is clear that he has rephrased, clarified and expanded a number of texts from their smritis. Katyayana maintains unimpaired the distinctive qualities of the smriti of Brihaspati to which he freely refers. His exposition is authoritative and remarkable for its freshness of style and vigorous approach. There can be little doubt that this smriti must have been brought into line with current law. It must have commanded a wide appeal as may readily be gathered from the profuse manner in which it has been quoted in all the leading commentaries (b). The Smriti Chandrika (c) alone, it has been reckoned, quotes nearly six hundred verses of Katyayana. The arduous task of collecting all the available texts of Katyayana from numerous commentaries and digests was accomplished by Mahamahopadhyaya Kane who collated and published in 1933 about

---

(w) See § 113 post.

(x) Katyayana describes these four answers in detail. Also see Narada I, 4.

(y) Anumanad guruh sakshi: Sakshibhyo likhitam guruh.

(z) Some of these are that he should be well-equipped in law, impartial, balanced and firm, temperate, industrious, free from anger, merciful and intelligent.

(a) Enjoyment by any such person does not create any title in him. Bhogat tatra na siddhi syat.

(b) There are some texts which are ascribed both to Brihaspati and Katyayana.

(c) See pp. 54-55 infra.

one thousand verses of the smriti on Vyavahara with an English translation.

Other metrical smritis.

There are a number of other smritis none of which can be said to have come down to us in a complete form. Praiseworthy efforts and research by Western and Indian jurists and scholars during the last hundred years have resulted in the collection of a number of old manuscripts. Unfortunately only fragments of some of these Smritis have been traced and in case of some others all that we have are isolated references to and stray quotations from them in the Commentaries and Digests (d). The authentic existence of most of these is not in doubt in view of the fact that they are mentioned in other Dharmashastras and referred to as recognised authorities by the Commentators. Of these mention may be made of the smritis of Vyasa, Samvarta and Devala. Vyasa and Samvarta are included in the enumeration of Yajnavalkya (e). Vyasa and Devala appear to have adopted the names of very ancient and venerable seers mentioned in Hindu scriptures (f). The Smriti Chandrika is plentiful in citations from their works (g). Apararka also quotes freely from these smritis in his massive treatise (h). According to Vyasa all wealth given to a wife by her husband was her absolute property (i). As to the contents of judgment and decree of a Court, he states that it should give an abstract of the pleadings, of the evidence on record, discussion of the questions that arise for determination and the law applicable to the same. Devala (j) is one of those progressive and liberal smritikars who recognised remarriage of a woman in certain events (k). Texts from his smriti and particularly those relating to partition of heritage and succession have been quoted in a large number of works and in numerous decisions of Courts. Texts from the smriti of Samvarta are cited in many works. This Smritikar laid down some equitable rules relating to the law of interest.

Arthashastra of Kautilya.

No conspectus howsoever brief of the sources from which knowledge of Hindu law may be derived and of the stages of its legal literature can omit to notice the Arthashastra of Kautilya who according to the most firmly established tradition was the celebrated Chanakya whose praenomen was Vishnugupta. The work is not a Dharmashastra but a masterly treatise on ancient Indian polity and a veritable reservoir of rules inter alia relating to the duties of a king, his administration including administration of justice, laws, courts of law, legal procedure, taxation, rights of women, marriage, divorce and numerous other matters which (d) It may be of some interest to the reader to mention that in the seventh century after Christ, Hsuan-tsang, the most famous of the Chinese travellers who came to India, and qualified as a Master of Laws at the Nalanda University, wrote in a letter to an Indian friend "Among the Sutras and Shastras, that I, Hsuan-tsang, had brought with me I have already translated—in all 30 volumes"—India and China by Dr. P. C. Bagchi. Hsuan-tsang spoke highly of the administration of justice in India. A number of works taken by him were lost on the way.

(e) See p. 18 supra.

(f) Bhagavad Gita Discourse X, 13.

(g) See p. 54 infra.

(h) See p. 49 infra.

(i) Yachcha bhartra dhanam dattam sa yathakamaam apnuyat.

(j) He is mentioned in the list of smritikars given in the Padmapurana: See f.n. (o) at p. 18 supra.

(k) See Introductory Note to the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, post.

would form the subject-matter of philosophy (l), sociology, economics and hygiene. In discussing the duties of a king, Kautilya says: "In the happiness of his subjects lies his happiness; in their welfare his welfare; whatever pleases himself he shall not consider as good, but whatever pleases his subjects he shall consider as good" (m). Arthashastra means the science of polity (*m*1). The word "Artha" is at times understood in a mundane and derogatory sense but the connotation of Arthashastra is of dandaniti or the science of Government. The compendium deals with matters wordly as distinguished from religious and principally with the State and its governance. Kautilya stresses the importance of dandaniti and observes that according to the school of Ushanas, "there is only one science and that is the science of Government; for they say, it is in that science that all other sciences have their origin and end". A number of Kautilya's precepts and maxims having bearing on the welfare of the State and the king are founded solely on considerations of policy. With scientific application of principles of utilitarianism, he builds up his theory and science of governance. Some of his tenets proceed on the assumption that human nature consisted not of social benevolence but of self-love, the instinct of self-preservation and of self-seeking activity. Like Hobbes the English political philosopher, he would have the State supreme in all matters affecting the mutual relations of men and like the Leviathan encompass all living beings. He endorses empiricism in philosophy and utilitarianism in politics and law. In some matters of politics he endorses unscrupulous statecraft like the Florentine author of del Principe. It is not necessary, however, to refer here to any of his machiavellian propositions on the subject of policy.

Monumental work.

The authentic text of the Arthashastra of Kautilya—although it was mentioned and extracts from it were quoted in numerous ancient works and historical monographs—was not available until its discovery in 1909 when it was translated and published by Dr. Shamasastri. Dr. Jolly and Dr. Schmidt alsc brought out an edition of Kautilya's Arthashastra. This monumental work has since its first publication started controversies about the work itself, its date and the identity of its author. Most historians are agreed that it was Vishnugupta Chanakya the author of Kautiliya-Arthashastra who successfully helped and guided Chandragupta Maurya in establishing a mighty empire in the fourth century before Christ. Megasthenes the Greek ambassador at the Court of Chandragupta, Justin the Greek writer and some others refer to Chandragupta as Sandrocottos. When Alexander conquered the Punjab a large part of Northern India remained under the sway of the last of the Emperors. The Nandas were exterminated by Chandragupta,

---

(l) Kautilya speaks of philosophy as "the lamp of all the sciences, the means of performing all the works, and the support of all the duties."

(m) Bk. I, Ch. XIX, para 39.

(*m*1) For a conspectus of the relation between Arthashastra and Dharmashastra see the Article by Justice Gajendragadkar in A.I.R. (1963) Journal pp. 24-26.

who also defeated Seleukos, the general of Alexander, who on the death of Alexander had inherited the eastern countries conquered by the latter. Justin and many historians are agreed that India shook off the yoke of servitude soon after the death of Alexander in 323 B.C. and that the author of this liberation was Chandragupta. In his work Kautilya points out how a foreign ruler drains the country of its wealth (apavahayati) and squeezes out of it as much as possible by exaction and taxation (karshayati). At the end of his work Kautilya claims that he had liberated the country from misrule and further states: "Having seen discrepancies in many ways on the part of the writers on the Shastras, Vishnugupta himself has made (this) Sutra and commentary." His approach being always practical, he is averse to theoretical speculations. He does not offer his homage to a number of earlier doctrines in matters of law and carries his legal propositions to their logical consequences.

Edicts of kings and Dharma-shastras.

One of the controversies that arose after the discovery of the Arthashastra was whether at any time king-made law had higher authority than the law promulgated in the Dharmashastras. Some scholars were emphatic in their view that such was the case. The relevant text in the Arthashastra is: "Sacred law (dharma), evidence (Vyavahara), History (Charitra), and edicts of kings (Rajashasana) are the four legs of law. Of these four, in order, the later is superior to the one previously named" (n). The question really falls within the purview of legal history. It may not be amiss, however, to observe that the Arthashastra was written at a period in the history of India during which law and politics were not accepted as wholly and strictly controlled by ancient rules of dharma but as matters to be dealt with severally and freed from religious domination. In actual practice the edicts and ordinances of the powerful Mauryan emperors like Chandragupta and Ashoka (o) and the kings who succeeded them, were from their very nature and by reason of the sanction behind them, bound to be accepted and enforced without any challenge even when they did not accord with the Smriti law. Administration of justice (Danda) vested in the King and those emperors and kings laid down numerous laws according to their own judgment and to suit the felt necessities of the people over whom they ruled at a time of remarkable political, economic and social progress. Yajnavalkya, although he does not recognise the authority of king-made law does refer to the same: Dharmo rajakritaschayah meaning, "the law that is promulgated by the sovereign" (p). Similarly Narada, as has already been pointed out (q), concedes the high authority and sanction of king-made laws. Kautilya himself subscribes to the view that the king and the laws were created by the people and that laws were of popular origin. According to him, the King at the time of his coronation affirmed that his prerogatives and powers emanated from the people and his oath was really an

---

(n) III, Ch. I, para 150.
(o) See p. 26 supra.
(p) II, 186.
(q) p. 27 supra.

oath of service to the people: "May I be deprived of heaven, of life, and of progeny, if I oppress you." Narada, after stating that the king had been appointed to administer justice and decide law-suits, adds "Avoiding carefully the violation of either the sacred law or the Arthashastra, he should conduct the trial attentively and skilfully" (r). This and other relevant data would seem to indicate that as far as possible the edicts and ordinances of the kings so operated as not to disturb any fundamental concepts or rules of law embodied in the Dharmashastras. And it would seem from the Arthashastra itself that theoretically at least Kautilya regarded king-made law and rescripts as a set of rules and announcements operating within the matrix and framework of the traditional law embodied in the Dharmashastras.

Not a source of law.

The work is not a Dharmashastra and is not to be understood as a source of Hindu law. Its very great importance, however, is that it throws a flood of light on a number of matters including law and its administration before the time of the metrical smritis. It gives invaluable information on a variety of subjects such as social stratification and organisation of matters of administration internal and foreign, civil, military, commercial, fiscal and judicial. The work is divided into 15 Books (adhikaranas) and 150 chapters which are admirably arranged. Book III deals with dharmasthiya that is with matters "concerning law". In Book IV are discussed numerous matters affecting administration of justice including "measures to suppress disturbance to peace", crimes and punishment in case of various offences. It may be of interest to note that some of the matters treated in this masterly compendium relate to municipal administration; co-operative undertaking; juvenile delinquency; investigation in case of sudden death; vagrancy; and superintendence of slaughter-houses, liquor shops, passports, etc. Punishments prescribed for certain offences relating to morality and social hygiene were severe and in some cases gruesome and unspeakable. Caste entered in a conspicuous manner and privileges and disabilities of caste are reflected in the nature of offences mentioned in the Arthashastra and the punishments to be meted out to offenders. Kautilya, however, adds "Whoever imposes severe punishment becomes repulsive to the people; while he who awards mild punishment becomes contemptible; but whoever imposes punishment as deserved becomes respectable; . . . punishment when ill awarded under the influence of greed or anger or owing to ignorance, excites fury even among hermits and ascetics dwelling in forests, not to speak of householders."

Style of a Precisist.

The work is in the Sutra style. Kautilya prefers prose to verse and comparatively the number of verses in the Arthashastra is not large. There is economy of language which is easily perceptible. There are some expressions which the author admits to have been coined by him and some expressions which are antiquated. The work bears on its face the evidence of skilful and masterly treatment and clearly shows that it is by an authority second to none on the subject. The style is singularly lucid and at the same time felicitously forceful. Kautilya's generalizations are as precise as possible and many of his observations are of absorbing interest.

(r) I, 37.

Judicature.

Judicature was a head to which some importance was attached by the authors of the metrical smritis though it is from the Arthashastra of Kautilya that it is possible to get more vivid and detailed information on the subject. Constituted judiciary as now understood did not exist in the Vedic era and there is hardly any data available on the subject of judicature from the literature of the Pre-Sutra period. In ancient India the bulk if not the whole administration of justice was carried on in popular assemblies known as the Sabha or samiti. These were deliberative bodies assembled for discussing public business and also served as the forum for the purpose of judging the cases which were brought before them (s). The king mentioned in the very ancient works is not a ruler of a large State but the head of any autonomous clan. There is no reliable history of the territorial kingdoms which flourished before the establishment of the empire of the Mauryas with its strong central government and duly constituted courts of law. Nor do we find any exposition of the subject of judicature in the Dharmasutras. Gautama, the earliest among the authors of the extant Dharmasutras, speaks only of the exercise of danda and of administration of justice by the king in conformity with the Institutes of the sacred law (t). Vasishtha enjoins the king to punish those who transgress the law and inflict punishment in accordance with the precepts of the sacred records and with precedents (u). There is no reference to any centralised judicial system and there seems to have been little interference by the kings with the traditional local tribunals which functioned in matters of local importance including dispensation of justice.

Sabha and Samiti.

Administration of justice in the time of Kautilya.

The Arthashastra of Kautilya was written when India was politically and administratively unified and there was consolidation of power in the hands of the emperors (v) whose writ ran in the whole country. Here we have a comprehensive account of administration which shows that no a priori limitation was set on any State activity. Kautilya gives a vivid description of the king's courts of justice. There was the court for the sangraha which was for a group of ten villages; there was the court for the dronamukha which was for a group of four hundred villages; and there was the court for the sthaniya which was for a group of eight hundred villages; and there was above them all the court presided over by the king's judges. A remarkable feature of the treatment of the subject by Kautilya is that he does not attach any importance to the local jurisdictions which had been functioning for many

---

(s) A very exalted position was ascribed to the Sabha and Samiti in the Vedas: Sabha cha ma samitischavatam prajapaterduhitarau samvidane (Atharvaveda VIII, 12).

(t) XI, 28; XI, 19.
(u) XIX, 8, 10.
(v) See p. 34 supra.

centuries. He does not expressly mention any supplementary jurisdictions and only speaks of the establishment of the king's courts. The traditional local authority (village community) represented a national system of local self-government and local jurisdiction. It would seem that though a net-work of king's courts was established the local jurisdictions had not disappeared. There was a certain amount of institutional continuity although the king's courts were naturally superior in their universal extent and stability and the sanction behind them.

Hierarchy of Courts mentioned in the smritis.

During the Smriti period there was remarkable progress in and unification of law both substantive and adjectival. This is noticeable in many texts of Manu and Yajnavalkya but we get a much better idea of the adjectival law including judicature from the smritis of Narada, Brihaspati and Katyayana. Manu speaks of the royal court (Sabha) staffed by experienced councillors and directs the king to administer justice in the Sabha and to decide cases which fall under the eighteen titles of law according to principles drawn from local usages and from the Institutes of the sacred law (w). Manu also speaks of administrative units consisting of one, ten, twenty, hundred and thousand villages (x) and from this and other texts of these smritikars we get some information about the hierarchy of courts with the king as the final arbiter. The tribunals set forth by Yajnavalkya (y) and other later smritikars as kula, shreni and puga were not forums of private arbitrament but they functioned as tribunals noticed and approved of by the leading smritikars and accepted as part of the judicial machinery both by the king and the people. Broadly speaking Kula means an assemblage of persons of the same family or community or tribe or caste or race. The meaning of the expression in the present context is a family council. But the word 'family' is to be understood as one of wide import and as inclusive of members of a caste or tribe. Shreni means a corporation or company of artisans following the same business: It also means a guild or association of traders in any branch of commerce. It may be observed en passant that by the time of Yajnavalkya there was unprecedented progress in trade and industry and we read of Indian merchantmen sailing the seven seas. Puga in its broad sense means an association or a union or an assembly. The expression in the present context has the element of habitance and means persons living in a village or town or city. Narada uses the parallel expression gana instead of puga. The leader of the local assembly was designated ganapati. Narada says: "Gatherings (kula), corporations (shreni), assemblies (gana), one appointed (by the king) and the king himself, are invested with the power to decide lawsuits; and of these, each succeeding one is superior to the one preceding in order" (z). Brihaspati also refers to this network of courts. He speaks inter

---

(w) Manusmriti VIII, 1, 3-8: Also see VIII, 9-11.
(x) Manusmriti VII, 115.
(y) Yajnavalkya II, 30.
(z) Naradasmriti: Introduction, 7.

alia of courts of itinerant judges functioning from place to place and describes the court headed by the King's Chief Justice as mudrita (a). The last mentioned court had the privilege of using the king's seal. He states: Let the king or a member of a twice-born caste officiating as Chief Judge try causes, acting on principles of equity, and abiding by the opinion of the judges, and by the doctrine of the sacred law. "When a cause has not been duly investigated by kula, it should be decided after due deliberation by shreni; when it has not been duly examined by shreni it should be decided by puga; and when it has not been sufficiently made out by puga, it should be determined by appointed judges. Judges are superior in authority to kula and the rest; the chief judge is placed above them; and the king is superior to all" (b). The king's court was the ultimate court and in theory presided over by the king though in practice it must have mostly been headed by the Chief Justice (Pradvivaka or Dharmadhyaksha) (c). These different component parts of the judicial machinery show that even under centralized strong government considerable autonomy was left in matters of local and village administration and in matters solely affecting traders, guilds, bankers, and artisans. The stubborn vitality of these functional jurisdictions of the village community and the guilds of merchants withstood strong central government and anarchy alike because they were deeprooted in tradition. It is of some significance to note that modern legislative theory encourages arbitrament by domestic forum in case of members of commercial bodies and associations of merchants and recent legislation in India confers jurisdiction on village panchayats to try certain causes. What at first sight may appear to have been parallel or competing jurisdictions were really functional organizations rooted in autonomy and so dovetailed as to remain homologous with the supreme authority of the king's courts in the administration of justice. It is not possible to say from the texts of the extant smritis or from the expositions of the leading commentators that we have a complete picture of the subject; and it is true that none of the extant treatises gives complete rules of adjectival law. But it would be inaccurate to say that they give nothing more than haphazard collections of precepts and precedents as it would be inaccurate to suggest that they give an adequate and exhaustive code of co-ordinated rules affecting judicature and procedure.

Adjectival law scanty on some topics.

However ponderous or exhaustive a code might be, it cannot provide for all varieties of matters and all situations that might crop up for consideration and this is particularly so of rules of procedure. Attention has already been invited to some important and significant rules of procedure and to the development made in this branch of the law by the time of Narada, Brihaspati and Katyayana. For all

---

(a) Brihaspati I, 2, 3 (S.B.E. Vol. XXXIII).

(b) Brihaspati I, 24, 30, 31 (S.B.E. Vol. XXXIII).

(c) Naradasmriti: Introduction, 35.

that it must be conceded that while the leading smritikars gave elaborate rules on matters of substantive law the rules of procedure which may be gathered from the extant works do not embrace all the heads of procedural law and are indeed wanting in fulness and even scanty on some topics. One reason for this paucity of rules seems to be that some of the topics were regarded as matters to be governed by practice of the court rather than by inflexible and mandatory rules of procedure. There are some texts of the smritikars which go to suggest that the court ought not to be bound and tied by too many rules of procedure and that every court is the master of its own practice. Cursus curiae est lex curiae. The provisions contained in these ancient treatises do not give any comprehensive code of procedure and there are a number of rules which must seem defective when judged by modern concepts. A critical summation of the true position has been given by Sir S. Varadachariar the eminent jurist (d): "Whenever, wherever and so far as circumstances permitted, attempts were all along being made . . . to administer justice broadly on the lines indicated in the law books. The defects and deficiencies, sometimes serious, must have been the result of the geographical features and the political history of the country."

Conflicting texts, how dealt with.

There were bound to be some variations and even conflicts between the texts of one smriti and another or even between some texts in the same smriti. The smritikars themselves were conscious of this and tried to deal with the problem in the first place by declaring: "That smriti (or text of law) which is opposed to the tenor of Manu is not approved" (e). In actual practice this maxim was not strictly followed and effect was at times given to texts of later smritikars on the ground that they were more in accordance with approved usage or by availing of some principle of exegesis. Another rule of preference stated by Narada was that: "in case of conflict between smritis decision should be based on reason" (f). Narada supplemented this rule of his by stating that: "Custom is powerful and overrides the sacred law" (g). As far as possible attempts were made to reconcile the texts by taking the view that the conflict was not real but only apparent (h). At times an apparent conflict was resolved by taking the view, not without some difficulty, that the less favoured text properly understood was of the nature of a statement of fact and not any rule (i). Where, however, the contradictions were patent and irreconcilable there was the option to prefer one of the contradictory matters (j). But the most salutary rule of them all was stated by Yajnavalkya who with his intrepidity and powerful sense of justice ordained that: "Where two Smritis disagree, that which follows equity guided by

---

(d) Hindu Judicial System, p. 258.

(e) Manvarthavipareeta ya sa smritirna prashasyate—Brihaspati XXVII, 3 (S.B.E. Vol. XXXIII).

(f) Dharmashastra virodhe tu yuktiyukto vidhih Smritah—IV, 40.

(g) Vyavahara hi balavan dharmastenavahiyate—IV, 40.

(h) One of the leading aphorisms of Jaimini is: "Contradictions should not be too easily assumed". He asserts that apparent inconsistencies are at times not actually so; they merely consist in difference of application. Prayoge hi virodhah syat—II, i. 9.

(i) Apastamba II, 6. 14, 13.

(j) This was referred to as Vikalparupatadhikaranam—Jaimini X, viii.

the people of old should prevail" (k). Nyaya which in the context of this rule means natural equity and reason (l) was, therefore, to prevail in cases of conflicting rules of law (m).

Mimansakas.

But even apart from cases of conflicting texts, the fixed and authoritative formulae of which the Smriti texts were embodiments suffered from the same defects to which any litera legis is subject. The Mimansakas gave rules of exegesis which, though primarily intended as aids for the interpretation of rules contained in the Vedas and other Dharmashastras relating to ceremonial observances and sacrifices, were applied, though not with uniformity, in construction of texts also of Vyavahara or municipal law. Assistance was derived in the task of interpretation from the rules of Mimansa of which Jaimini was the greatest exponent. Aid was also sought from the Nirukta of Yaska who is the earliest of the known exegetes. The Mimansakas were not merely exegetes but also logicians (n).

Mimansa of Jaimini.

Some basic rules of exegesis.

When the language of a text was not only clear and unequivocal but admitted of only one meaning such language was regarded as best declaring the intention of the lawgiver and accepted as decisive (o). Where, however, the meaning was not self-evident the sense could be gathered by availing of the principle of necessary implication (p). Although the foremost rule and one repeatedly stressed by the Mimansakas embodied the cardinal principle of literal construction (q), words of sufficient flexibility and words of doubtful import could be construed in the sense, which if apparently less correct grammatically, was more in harmony with the intent of the lawgiver. That intention where possible was to be gathered by recourse to the principles of syntactical (r) or contextual (s) construction. The Mimansakas have laid down some clear, logical and distinctive rules which permit departure from the rule of literal construction and have also indicated the order in which those rules are to be applied. Those rules do not compare unfavourably with the rules stated in modern treatises on the subject of interpretation of statutes. Where not fettered by any mandatory rule, the judicial

Departure from rules of literal construction.

---

(k) Smrityorvirodhe nyayastu balavan vyavaharatah—IV, 20.

(l) In case of early statutes English jurists and lawyers often appealed to the "reason of the law"; see Bacon's Abridgment of the law; title Statutes. This way of interpretation though not encouraged by rules of construction applicable to modern statutes is not, however, altogether unknown.

(m) See pp. 61, 62 infra.

(n) In Ramchandra v. Vinayak (1914) 41 I.A. 290 the Privy Council observed: "The Hindu Law contains its own principles of exposition, and questions arising under it cannot be determined on abstract reasoning or analogies borrowed from other systems of law, but must depend for their decision on the rules and doctrines enunciated by its own law-givers and recognised expounders". An observation to the same effect was made in Ram Singh v. Ugar Singh (1870) 13 M.I.A. 373.

(o) This rule of literal construction was referred to as the Shruti principle: Nirapekshah ravah shrutih.

(p) Apadeva, author of a number of treatises on Mimansa, deals freely with this subject (kalpya) which is covered by the principle of interpretation called Linga. Inference could be employed in settling the sense either of a word or sentence: Shabdsamarthyam lingam. The meaning derived by necessary implication is by adopting the principle of lakshanartha.

(q) Where this primary rule governed a case no other rule of construction could be brought in aid: Shruti linga, vakya prakaranasthana samakhyanam samavaye paradaurbalyamartha viprakarshat—Jaimini III, iii. 14.

(r) Syntactical connection is referred to as the use of Vakya principle: Samabhivyaharo vakyam.

(s) Construction by emphasising interdependence between passages is called prakarana—Ubhayakanksha prakaranam. The Mimansakas also laid stress on the importance to be attached to sequence: Sandigdheshu vakyasheshat—Jaimini I, iv. 29.

interpreter was free to accept that meaning of the text which was supportable solely by the reason of the law. Then again resort was had to suppositions of law by inquiring into what was implied by the text and giving it a more rational interpretation. This was akin to what the later Roman Jurists called fictio juris. Study of Mimansa was regarded as an integral and essential part of the study of the Shastras. Of Jaimini's Mimansa Colebrooke observed: "The Logic of the Mimansa is the logic of the law—the rules of interpretation of Civil and religious ordinances. Each case is examined and determined upon general principles; and from the cases decided, the principles may be collected. A well-ordered arrangement of them would constitute the philosophy of the law, and this is, in truth, what has been attempted in the Mimansa" (t). Mention must here be made of the Mimansa treatise, Tantra-Vartika, the commentary of the versatile writer Kumarila Bhatta. This celebrated work of Kumarila is a commentary on certain important parts of the Mimansa-Bhashya of Shabara Swami. Shabara's work treats of the Purvamimansa sutras of Jaimini. The commentary of Kumarila is an encyclopaedic treatise and a veritable mine of information on Dharmashastra. Mahamahopadhyaya Sir Ganganath Jha's translation of Kumarila's work was published in 1924 in the Bibliotheca Indica.

Construction agreeable to justice and reason.

Tantra-Vartika of Kumarila.

In the history of Hindu law creative and critical periods succeed each other and it was the Post-Smriti period during which Hindu Law and jurisprudence reached a remarkable stage of progress and assimilation. If the productive era of the Dharmashastras was the golden age of Hindu Law, this was the period of critical inquiry, expansion and consolidation. The ancient aphorisms of the Sutrakars and the earlier Smritis were compiled when the spiritual motive dominated life. The Smritis though accepted as 'revelations remembered' were themselves partially based on usages and practices and did not profess to comprehend every aspect of Vyavahara. Questions of law were not decided by reference merely to the rules propounded by the early Smritikars. The salutary rule that in course of time had come to be accepted and emphasized by the Smritikars themselves was that cases were also to be decided agreeably to such usages and customs as were approved by the conscience of the virtuous and followed by the people. This from its very nature contributed to the growth of Hindu law by introducing innovations and modifications in what was in theory attributed to divine precepts otherwise unalterable owing to their emanation from the Deity. Usage when established outweighed the writted text of law. The Smriti law had a rational synthesis and went on gathering into itself modified and revised concepts of jural relations and things.

Post-Smriti period.

Era of remarkable progress.

An auxiliary to this process of development was the contribution of the Commentators who did not hesitate to interpret and Commentaries.

(t) Miscellaneous Essays, p. 342.

mould the ancient texts so as to suit the needs of a progressive society. Without claiming any delegated authority or claiming paramount power, they of their own initiative helped in the process of development that was going on. Questions grew up round situations, round matters of frequent occurrences and also round the problems of interpretation and application that derive from every text of law. A comprehensive and homologous view of the contents of the Smritis required synthesizing of what was at times presented in an unsystematic form and the bringing out of the mutual co-ordination or subordination of single texts and detached passages. The aphorisms of the Sutrakars though not intrinsically obscure were often concise to excess and at times elliptical. Some of the rules of Smriti law expressed general principles without the necessary qualifications and exceptions and were therefore of the nature of propositions much too absolute. A number of rules again were of the nature of maxims of the law, and had the merits and defects common to such maxims. Being brief and pithy statements expressed in form of metrical redactions, they often constituted a species of legal shorthand requiring interpretation and exposition in the light of expert knowledge. Moreover, the fixed and authoritative formulae of which the Smriti texts were embodiments suffered from the same defects to which any litera legis is subject. Then again with so many recognised authors of the Dharmashastras differences and even some conflicts of opinion on points of law were naturally to be expected. Reference has already been made to some of the principles of exegesis relied upon by the smritikars themselves who realised the various difficulties in the way of evolving one system of law out of the numerous Smritis (u). Besides, the Smritis were not exhaustive. Points of law apparently not covered by the textual-law were naturally cropping up from time to time and many lacunae in the texts were clearly discernible. The commentaries being dissertations on law had in the nature of things to take notice of all this. Under the guise of critical interpretations of the Shastras, the commentators resorted to construction by implication and inferences, or supplied such omissions, or did both. It was in this and in their task of reconciling some of the inconsistencies and occasional conflicts found in the Smriti texts and in their treatment of vague and ambiguous texts that the commentators really excelled. The import of some of the terms employed by the Smritikars was complex and the intimate and indissoluble connection which existed between some of them demanded dissertations, long, intricate and coherent. When dealing with the eighteen titles of law which they felt bound to recognise the commentators did not consider them as watertight compartments. They looked upon them as matters of classification and not necessarily legal treatment. In the task of interpretation the rules of Mimansa were availed of by these commentators, but not invariably. What the commentators had recourse to were the principles of exegesis to be found in the Smritis themselves and the Mimansa; rules of logic (Tarka); dialectic philosophy (Nyaya); rules of grammar (Panini) and approved methods of construction. The cardinal rule of literal construction (v) and many of the crystallised exceptions to this rule discussed by modern English authors, with which exceptions lawyers in India are so familiar, were borne in mind by these commentators and many doubtful points were solved by suggesting the key to the true intent and meaning of the lawgiver. Nonetheless difficulties did arise in the interpretation of texts not readily admitting of extended or restricted import and in getting over express texts the application of which had become obsolete. There can be no doubt that the commentators at times stretched points, took precepts out of their context and on occasions gave strained interpretations to rules. As far as possible, they tried to bring out the true import of the ancient texts but at times they made logic yield to convenience and clearness. Sometimes the reason given in support of an accepted construction would seem to be a sophism of sophisms but their ingenuity was at times taxed to the utmost.

Arduous task of the commentators.

(u) See pp. 40-41 supra.

Development of law by the Commentators and Nibandhakars.

This process of interpretation of law and through that process the declaration and exposition of law went on for a long time and naturally helped the rational development of law. There were established courts but there was no system under the Hindu law of reference to authoritative or persuasive judicial precedents. Instead a very large number of commentaries and Digests (Nibandhas) were from time to time written during this Post-Smriti period. The commentators did not at any time arrogate to themselves the position of law-makers. Many of the commentators with refined amenity of style disavowed all intention to make innovations. Their sole claim was that their works gave critical interpretations of the textual law of the Smritis and collated and declared the established textual and customary law (w). Nevertheless their thought was to fashion the law into as perfect an instrument of justice as they could devise albeit within certain absolute formulae of the smriti law and as far as possible by analogy to what was already settled and on lines parallel with usages and customs which were springing unconsciously from the habits and life of the people in their part of the country. Although in form merely commentaries on the ancient Smritis and complimentary to the same these treatises were independent works which embodied the law current at the time. Some of the commentaries were written under the patronage of kings or at their instance and must have assumed importance also on that score. In case of one or two works ascribed to kings, it would seem that the real author stood in the same position as Tribonian did to Justinian.

---

(v) Where a proposition laying down a mandatory rule was stated in clear terms resort to extrinsic aid was not permissible. In such a case "considerations of reasons are of no avail": Vachane hi hetvasamarthye —Jaimini IV, i. 41. The popular saying is yavat vachanam hi vachanikam.

(w) For instance in treating of 'inheritance' Vijnaneshvara states: "In this section the texts are mostly narrations of well-recognised usages." Mitakshara II, 118, 119.

Systematic building up of the law.

In course of time the commentaries appear to have acted with ever increasing force to give an impulse to the systematic building up of the law. The commentators amplified narrow provisions of law, rounded off their angles and added a mass of relevant matter thereby materially contributing to the process of self-development of the law. The veneration in which they were held and the acknowledgment of their scholarship was indeed so remarkable that their opinions and conclusions became law by acceptance. The commentators, although they rested their opinions on the Smritis, were explaining, modifying, enlarging and even at times departing from the letter of the lex-scripta in order to keep the law in harmony with their environments and the prevailing notions of justice and to suit the felt necessities of the times. The law was basically and essentially traditional law and rooted in custom with the result that the process of development and assimilation continued and the law had to be gathered not merely from the ancient texts, nor solely from the commentaries but mainly from the latter and always having regard to rules of conduct and practices reflected in approved usage.

Ex cathedra character of the Commentaries and Digests.

So in course of time the law came to be ascertained and accepted in the main from the Commentaries and Digests of which the leading ones acquired almost ex cathedra character. Composed in different parts of India a number of these gained ascendancy in those parts of the country where the authors were accepted as of pre-eminent authority. Facts of geography were massive and in different parts of the country different commentaries came to be referred to as the chief guides on law. The result was that two principal schools of Hindu law the Mitakshara and the Dayabhaga sprang into existence and furthermore where the Mitakshara prevailed there came to be recognised a number of sub-schools of the parental authority.

Two principal schools of Hindu law.

An account of the origin and development of the schools of Hindu law was given by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in Collector of Madura v. Moottoo Ramalinga (x): "The remoter sources of the Hindu law are common to all the different schools. The process by which those schools have been developed seems to have been of this kind. Works universally or very generally received became the subject of subsequent commentaries. The Commentator put his own gloss on the ancient text, and his authority having been received in one and rejected in another part of India, schools with conflicting doctrine arose. Thus the Mitakshara which is universally accepted by all the schools except Mitakshara.

that of Bengal as of the highest authority, and which in Bengal is received also as of highest authority, yielding only to the Dayabhaga in those points where they differ, was a commentary on Institutions of Yajnavalkya; and the Dayabhaga, which wherever it differs from the Mitakshara, prevails in Bengal, and is the foundation of the principal divergencies between that and the other schools, equally admits and relies on the authority of Yajnavalkya. In like manner there are glosses and commentaries upon the Mitakshara, which are received by some of the schools that acknowledge the supreme authority of that treatise, but are not received by all." The Dayabhaga school prevails in Bengal; the Mitakshara school prevails in the rest of India. These schools born of diversity of doctrines mark a new stage in the evolution of Hindu law. One of the main differences between these two principal schools of Hindu law relates, as has been pointed out later on in some detail (y), to the law of inheritance. The meaning of the doctrine of sapinda relationship in the law of inheritance insisted upon by Vijnanesvara whereby community of blood (propinquity) is to be preferred to community in the offering of religious oblations is the governing factor whereby under the Mitakshara law the right to inherit arises. Under the Dayabhaga the right arises from spiritual efficacy, that is, the capacity for conferring spiritual benefit on the manes of paternal and maternal ancestors. Another distinguishing feature relates to certain incidents of the joint family. According to the Mitakshara law, each son acquires at his birth an equal interest with his father, and on the death of the father the son takes the property, not as his heir, but by survivorship. The position of the son or grandson in the Mitakshara is somewhat similar to that of sui hcredes who under the Roman law are regarded as having a sort of dormant ownership in the estate of their father even during his lifetime. Their succession was not so much a succession as coming into the enjoyment of what in a sense had already partly belonged to them (z). According to the Dayabhaga school, the son does not acquire any interest by birth in ancestral property. His rights arise for the first time on the father's death. On the death of the father he takes such of the property as is left by the father, whether separate or ancestral, as heir and not by survivorship (a). Partition is another branch of law on which there is some radical difference between the two principal schools (b). Dayabhaga.

(x) (1868) 12 M.I.A. 397. Also see Jagmohan v. Official Liquidator ('56) A.A. 145.

The Mitakshara is sub-divided into four minor schools:

Benares school;
Mithila school;
Maharashtra or Bombay school (Western India); and Dravida or Madras school (Southern India).

Sub-divisions of the Mitakshara school.

Banares, Mithila, Maharashtra and Dravida are old names of the territories in which these schools gained mastery. The Benares school covers practically the whole of Northern India (c) with the exception of the Punjab where the Mitakshara law has on certain

---

(y) Ch. IV post.
(z) Digest 28, 2, 11, Paulus.
(a) Ch. XVII post.
(b) See § 347 post.
(c) The Benares school prevails in Orissa: Basanta Kumar v. Jogendra Nath (1906) 33 Cal. 371, 374, 375. The Benares school also prevails in the Central Provinces: Ramchandra v. Ramabai ('30) A.N. 267, Bhaskar v. Laxmibai ('53) A.N. 326, Udebhan v. Vikram ('57) A. Madh. Pra. 175. Also see Ramaji v. Manohar ('61) A.B. 169.

points been considerably modified by custom. The Mithila school prevails in Tirhoot and certain districts in the northern part of Bihar. The Bombay school covers Western India including the whole of the old Presidency of Bombay as also the Berar (d). The Dravida or Madras school covers Southern India including the whole of the old Presidency of Madras. These schools differ between themselves in some matters of detail relating particularly to adoption and inheritance. All these schools acknowledge the supreme authority of the Mitakshara, but they give preference to certain treatises and to commentaries which control certain passages of the Mitakshara. This mainly accounts for the differences between them.

Mitakshara of Vijnaneshwara.

Mitakshara—a very modest title meaning a brief compendium —is a running commentary on the Code of Yajnavalkya and a veritable digest of Smriti law. It was written in the latter part of the eleventh century by Vijnaneshwara an ascetic also mentioned as bearing the name Vijnana Yogin. In the Mitakshara which is more of a digest than a mere commentary on a particular smriti, we find the quintessence of the smriti law and its precepts and injunctions. The chief merit of the work consists in its comprehensive treatment of almost all important topics of the law and the synthesizing of various smriti texts. It is of supreme authority throughout India except in Bengal where the Dayabhaga of Jimutavahana is given paramount importance. In Bengal the Mitakshara is more revered than followed but its authority is not questioned on points on which there is no conflict between it and the works prevalent there. The Mitakshara is given general predominance in all the four minor schools which are no more than sub-divisions of the Mitakshara school but, as will be pointed out later on, in Gujarat, the island of Bombay and North Konkan, the Mayukha a more modern treatise is allowed to compete with it and even regarded as an overruling authority on certain points; and in the Mithila there are some deflexions from the parental authority. Vijnaneshwara analyses and discusses the texts of Yajnavalkya sometimes at considerable length. As the Privy Council has observed, he "explains the meaning of recondite passages, supplies omissions and reconciles discrepancies by frequent reference to other old expounders of the law" (e).

Institutional treatise.

Mitakshara has for more than nine centuries occupied a place of ascendancy and authority unique and unrivalled in the annals of legal literature. Vijnaneshwara was one of the greatest of the juristheologians who contributed to the making of Hindu Law. The subjects he dealt with were reasonably well classified and he had no call to do what the canon lawyers were always doing. He did not take upon himself the task of endlessly arranging and rearranging particular instances in an endeavour to deduce principles. He rather emulated the example of Confucius, who had a thread

---

(d) Bajirao v. Atmaram ('30) A.N. 265. 42 I.A. 208, 214, 220; (1915) 37 All. 604, (e) Buddha Singh v. Laltu Singh (1915) 611.

along which his experiences slid. Even though his treatment of certain matters is exhaustive and sometimes elaborate, he is mostly concise and precise and true to the brevity designated in the title of the work. But on some points which are indeed few his expressions are so brief that they do not afford adequate guidance and it may be said of them that they suffer by "obscurity from too much precision" as Dumont phrased it in complaining of some of Bentham's expressions. He is imbued with the generalia of law and there is no ipse dixitism in his treatment of any point. Nor is there any antiquarian trifling or wild philosophy about his discussions. In his Mitakshara he produced a juridical work which is an institutional treatise. There can be little doubt that his treatise had from a very early time a large degree of practical influence on many branches of Hindu Law. The very wide range of its authority was only due to its intrinsic worth. A number of commentaries were written on the Mitakshara itself of which mention may be made of the Subodhini (f) of Visvesvara Bhatta, and the controversial treatise of Balambhatta (g). Nandapandita, an esteemed writer of the Benares school and the author of the Vaijayanti (h) and a noted work on the law of adoption the Dattaka Mimamsa, had written a commentary also on the Mitakshara. Mention was made of this work by the Privy Council in the undermentioned case (i) but the work has not been published nor has it been found in its integral form.

Mitakshara is the paramount authority of all the sub-schools.

It is of consequence to notice over again that the Mitakshara holds sovereign sway in the whole of India except Bengal. The sectioning of the Mitakshara school into the four minor schools nominated Benares, Mithila, Bombay and Madras schools, is no doubt of some importance and consequence but it is apt to create confusion and even lead to error if it is not fully appreciated that essentially there are only the two schools of Hindu law, the Mitakshara and the Dayabhaga. These minor schools are not born of any diversity of doctrines such as exists in case of the Mitakshara and the Dayabhaga. There is no disagreement on any fundamental or constitutive principle and the differences that are to be found are mainly the result of variant interpretations given by different commentators to some texts of the smritis and particularly to certain texts in the Mitakshara and at times the result of conflict of opinion between different High Courts. It is also of importance to notice that, from some exceptions to be pointed out later, the commentaries and digests, to be immediately referred to as the leading authorities of these minor schools, were only intended to supplement the Mitakshara and not to replace or abrogate the same. Speaking broadly, therefore, the first thing is to inquire what the Mitakshara has laid down on the question under inquiry when it is not concluded by judicial decision and then to turn to (f) See p. 51 infra.

---

(g) See p. 52 infra.
(h) See p. 49 infra.
(i) Buddha Singh v. Lallu Singh (1915) 37 All. 604, 618 (P.C.).

the other authorities. Error is almost sure to arise if this order of priority be changed. The first thing to be considered is what the Mitakshara states When reference is made to texts from any of the recognised authorities, it is always unsafe to examine a single paragraph or a single verse. It is necessary to see for what purpose the reference is to be made and with that view to turn to the verses immediately preceding the same and to study the whole chapter and in some cases several chapters of the same treatise.

Viramitrodaya of Mitramishra.

The Viramitrodaya of Mitramishra (j) composed in the earlier part of the seventeenth century is a commentary on Yajnavalkya smriti and accepted as an authority in many parts of India where the Mitakshara school prevails and ranks as especial authority in the Benares school (k). In Girdhari Lall's case the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council observed: "Adhering to the principles which this Board lately laid down in the case of Collector of Madura v. Moottoo Ramalinga (l), their Lordships have no doubt that the Viramitrodaya . . . is properly receivable as an exposition of what may have been left doubtful by the Mitakshara, and declaratory of the law of the Benares school" (m). Where, however, the Mitakshara is clear on a point, it must not be overlooked that the Mitakshara is the guiding authority of the Benares School and indeed of every other sub-school (n). The Vyavahara part of the treatise is sub-divided into four parts. The first treats of judicature and procedural law. The second treats mainly of the law of evidence. The third division relates to the eighteen topics of litigation and the last gives some rules of criminal law. Mitramishra expresses profound respect for Yajnavalkya of whom he always speaks of as the lord of the sages (Yogeeshwara).

Last of the outstanding commentaries.

Mitramishra is a voluminous writer and a master of analysis though on certain points which are indeed few his analysis is half-illuminating and half-obscuring. He was determined to use hard and empirical terms in his disputations with the writers of the Dayabhaga school and in his criticism of the reasoning of those with whom he was at loggerhead. A controversialist of no mean order he does give the impression that he sometimes deliberately chose to indulge in barren logomachy. This pugnacity disregarded, there can be no doubt that in his very notable commentary there is reliable discussion of the law on every useful subject and thorough exposition of every point taken up by him. The work is documented with references to most of the earlier writers. Of the utility of the work there seems no end because for each dipping

---

(j) An English translation of the law of succession from Viramitrodaya called 'partition of heritage' was published by Gopalchandra Sarkar Shastri in 1879. Other translations of parts of the treatise have also been published.

(k) Collector of Madura v. Moottoo Ramalinga (1868) 12 M.I.A. 397, 438; Jagannath Prasad v. Ranjit Singh (1898) 25 Cal. 354, 367-368.

(l) (1868) 12 M.I.A. 448, 466. Its value and importance has been repeatedly recognised by the Privy Council. Girjabai v. Sadashiv (1916) 43 I.A. 151, 159.

(m) Jagannath Prasad v. Ranjit Singh supra.

(n) In Moniram v. Keri Kolitani (1880) 5 Cal. 776, 788, 789, the Privy Council observed that the Viramitrodaya may be referred to in Bengal in cases where the Dayabhaga is silent. In practice, in Bengal, this work is rarely relied upon: See pp. 56-58 infra for the authorities of the Dayabhaga School.

one finds some useful discussion on the point under inquiry. Mitramishra does full justice to his themes and his work saves much research because the enormous task of research is performed by Mitramishra himself. The Viramitrodaya has been cited in innumerable decisions of Courts in India wherever the Mitakshara prevails. The Privy Council has observed: "It supplements many gaps and omissions in the earlier commentaries and illustrates and elucidates with logical preciseness the meaning of doubtful prescriptions" (o). This authoritative work of the Mitakshara school is a classic because of its direct approach to some of the most involved and difficult questions. Mitramishra is the last of the outstanding commentators who give reliable and authoritative guidance on Hindu law.

A classical treatise.

The Apararka — Yajnavalkya — Dharmashastra — Nibandha although it purports to be a commentary on Yajnavalkya Smriti is more of the nature of a digest than a commentary (p). In this digest we find extracts from a number of Smritikars whose works are not available to us in their integral form. Apararka, a Silhara king, flourished about a century later than Vijnaneshwara and references to his massive treatise are to be found in the works of many later writers and in some decisions of Courts (q). Apararka's work is received as of great authority in Kashmir. Its authority is also acknowledged by the expositors of the Benares School. Apararka is rather sprawling though not untidy. The usefulness and importance of his work cannot, however, be minimised and may be gauged from the circumstance that Vishweshwara Bhatta, the author of the Madanaparijata and of the Subodhini which is the leading commentary on the Mitakshara, has used Apararka's work.

Apararka.

The Vaijayanti, written by Nandapandita, an esteemed writer of the Benares School, is as already mentioned a commentary on the Vishnusutra. Nandapandita is the author of the Dattaka Mimamsa which is a standard treatise and a noted work on the law of adoption (r). The Vaijayanti has been cited with approval in numerous decisions of Courts in India and also by the Privy Council (s). It is also known as Kesava Vaijayanti. Dr. Jolly has given many passages from the same in his publication of the Dharmasutra of Vishnu (t).

Vaijayanti.

The Benares school as already mentioned prevails in the whole of North India with the exception of the Punjab and the Viramitrodaya, to which reference has already been made above (u), ranks there as especial authority. Of the other authorities to which great weight is attached there reference must be made to the Benares school.

Viramitrodaya.

---

(o) Vedachela v. Subramania (1921) 48 I.A. 349, 362.

(p) For a translation of a part of the work entitled 'partition of heritage' see Ghosh Vol. II.

(q) Buddha Singh v. Laltu Singh (1912) 34 All. 663, 673; (1915) 37 All. 604, 617, 618 (P.C.): Chinnasami Pillai v. Kunju Pillai (1912) 35 Mad. 147, 159.

(r) See § 13 post.

(s) Buddha Singh v. Laltu Singh (1915) 37 All. 604, 608 (P.C.). But see Puttu Lal v. Parbati Kunwar (1915) 42 I.A. 155; Pitra Kueri v. Ujagir Raj ('38) A.A. 101.

(t) This commentary was composed by Nandapandita in the first quarter of the seventeenth century at the instance of his patron King Kesavanayaka.

(u) See pp. 48-49 supra.

Nirnayasindhu of Kamalakara.

Nirnayasindhu and the Vivadatandava of Kamalakara. Kamalakara is a versatile and an eminent writer of the seventeenth century two of whose numerous works have acquired great authority. His Nirnayasindhu which is the better known of his works though not a work on civil law is accepted as of authoritative guidance in a number of decisions of various High Courts on questions involving ceremonies and on matters affecting devolution of property and heirship (v). His Vivadatandava is a treatise on the law of inheritance. In most emphatic words he deprecated the assertion of heritable rights of women other than those expressly enumerated by certain earlier lawgivers (w). Kamalakara, comparatively, a modern author, is of the same time as Nilkantha Bhatta (who is said to be his cousin), one of the great Hindu jurisprudentes (x) and Mitramishra, the author of the Viramitrodaya. Both his works Nirnayasindhu and Vivadatandava are entitled to weight wherever the Mitakshara prevail; but they are accepted as of particularly great authority in the Benares school when not in conflict with any higher authority (y). The Benares School is sometimes called the most orthodox of the different schools of Hindu law (z).

Vivadatandava.

Mithila school.

The Mithila School has at times followed almost implicitly the Vivada Chintamani and the Vivada Ratnakara (a). Though the Vivada Chintamani (b), the Vivada Ratnakara and the Madana Parijata are the favoured Mithila authorities it is of importance to notice that the law of the Mithila School is the law of the Mitakshara except in a few matters in respect of which the law of the Mithila School has departed from the law of the Mitakshara (c). Neither incidental dicta in any of those works nor any solitary interpretation nor statements in them founded on any ambiguous texts from the smritis can control the plain meaning of any rules laid down in the Mitakshara (d). Of these Mithila authorities the Vivada Chintamani is given the first place (e) being a work of unquestioned merit written by Vachaspatimisra a celebrated nibandhakar of the fifteenth century. Vachaspatimisra is also the author of Vyavahara Chintamani another work of allowed excel-

Vivadachintamani of Vachaspatimisra.

---

(v) Khushalchand v. Bai Mani (1887) 11 Bom. 247, 254 (marriage ceremonies): Viswasundara Row v. Somasundara Rao (1920) 43 Mad. 876, 882 (Upanayana ceremony); Dwarka Nath v. Sarat Chandra (1912) 39 Cal. 319, 331-333 (succession to Stridhan); Dattatraya v. Gangabai (1922) 46 Bom. 541, 556, 557 (Right to perform Shradhha).

(w) Ananda Bibee v. Nownit Lal (1883) 9 Cal. 316, 324.

(x) See pp. 52-54 infra.

(y) Dwarka Nath v. Sarat Chandra (1912) 39 Cal. 319, 335, 336. "The governing authority of the Benares School is the Mitakshara". Ram Singh v. Ugur Singh (1870) 13 M.I.A. 373, 390. Of the commentaries on the Mitakshara the Vaijayanti of Nanda Pandita is greatly respected in the Benares school; see p. 49 supra.

(z) Ram Singh v. Ugur Singh (1870) 13 M.I.A. 373, 390.

(a) Bhugwandeen v. Myna Baee (1867) 11 M.I.A. 487, 507, 508; Birajun Koer v. Luchmi Narayan (1884) 10 Cal. 392, 399; Balwant Singh v. Rani Kishori (1898) 20 All. 267, 290.

(b) The Vivadachintamani has been translated by Setlur in his Collection of Hindu Law Books. Mahamahopadhyaya Sir Ganganath Jha, a distinguished jurist of recent times, has among various works to his credit translated this treatise. In the translation by Tagore there are inaccuracies as noticed in several decided cases: Rajrani v. Gomati (1928) 7 Pat. 820; Sabitri v. Savi (1933) 12 Pat. 359, 413; also see ibid. at pp. 428, 429; (33) A.P. 306, 342.

(c) Bhairab v. Birendra, I.L.R. (1949) 28 Pat. 123, 127. Sourendra Mohan v. Hari Prasad (1926) 5 Pat. 135, 155 (P.C.); Kamla Prasad v. Murli (1934) 13 Pat. 550.

(d) Ram Khelawan v. Lakshmi, I.L.R. (1949) 28 Pat. 1008; Bhairab v. Birendra, supra; Bacha Jha v. Jagmohan Jha (1885) 12 Cal. 348; Kamla Prasad v. Murli, supra.

(e) Mt. Thakoor Deyhee v. Baluk Ram (1886) 11 M.I.A. 139, 174, 175. Also see f.n. (a) above.

lence. These two works of his are not commentaries on any code but digests and are most probably parts of one and the same treatise. Weight is also attached in Mithila to Vivadachandra by Lakshmi Devi, the Smritisara by Shrikaracharya, the Smritisara by Harinathopadhyaya and the Dwoita-parishishta by Keshava Mishra (f). The Kalpataru by Lakshmidhara is a work which is freely cited by the exponents of the Mithila School.

Vyavahara Chintamani.

The Vivada Ratnakara mentioned above is a digest which has been referred to in numerous decisions. Its author was Chandeshwara, a minister of Harasinha, who was a Mithila king (g). Vachaspatimisra has stated that he had considered the Ratnakara and it would seem that this work was written in the first quarter of the fourteenth century. Chandeshwara has given the year in which he had performed Tula Purusha in which he distributed his own weight of gold amongst Brahmins.

Vivada Ratnakara.

The Madana Parijata to which reference is made above is a work on civil and religious duties, by Vishveshwara Bhatta. It contains a chapter on inheritance and is treated as an authority in the Mithila School (h). It is a digest which quotes a number of works and was written at the latest a little before the fourteenth century. It was composed at the instance of Madanapala, a king of the Jath race, who ruled Kashtha on the banks of the Jamuna. This work has been referred to by a number of later commentators and in numerous decisions. It is written in language comparatively easy to understand. The tenuity of its style is one of its important features. Vishveshwara Bhatta is also the author of the Subodhini (i) which is "the most celebrated commentary on the Mitakshara" (j). It is not a running and exhaustive commentary but gives a very useful exposition of the difficult and obscure texts in the Mitakshara in a remarkably facile manner. The Subodhini has been referred to in a number of decisions of various High Courts.

Madana Parijata of Vishveshwara Bhatta.

Subodhini of Vishveshwara Bhatta.

The Maharashtra or Bombay School, also known as the School of Western India, claims in respect of certain matters to be the most liberal of the different schools of Hindu law. In Western India, sometimes mentioned as the Bombay Presidency, the pre-eminence of the Mitakshara is generally admitted. The relative position of the Mitakshara and the Vyavahara Mayukha which are proximate authorities as well as of the other works accepted as authorities in the old Bombay Presidency and in other parts of Western India is discussed in several cases decided by the Bombay Maharashtra or Bombay School.

The proximate authorities.

---

(f) Kamani Devi v. Sir Kameshwar Singh (1946) 25 Pat. 58, 63.

(g) This work has been translated by Mr. Gopalchandra Sarkar Shastri and Mr. Justice Digambar Chatterjee. Of the other translations reference is often made to the one given by Ghosh in his Hindu Law, Vol. II.

(h) This work has been translated by Ghosh (Vol. II) and Setlur. The earliest translation was made by S. Sitarama Sastri and appeared in the Madras Law Journal. It was published in book form in 1899. A translation by the same author of Vivada Ratnakara originally published in the Madras Law Journal appeared in book form in 1898.

(i) The complete text and English translation of the Vyavaharadhyaya from this work have been published by Mr. Gharpure in his Hindu Law Texts Series (Vols. III and IV).

(j) Lallubhai v. Mankuvarbai (1876) 2 Bom. 388, 416 (F.B.).

High Court. Such works as the Samskara Kaustubha (k) and the Subodhini (l) are consulted and reference is made to the Viramitrodaya, Nirnayasindhu and other works of the Mitakshara School (m). Reference has also been made by that Court to the Balambhatti (n) and to the interpretations given there to certain expressions in the Mitakshara. In the last mentioned work it is stated that it was written by a lady named Lakshmidevi and at one time considerable importance was attached to the opinions of this author by the High Court of Bombay till it was felt that some of those opinions were rather of the nature of what in case of judicial decisions would amount to no more than mere obiters. On certain points the author has expressed very liberal views and given interpretations in furtherance of the rights of women and done so with cute reasoning and in an impressive style. Those interpretations though welcome in themselves do not derive support from any authoritative texts or opinions of other commentators and must be regarded as beautiful but ineffective flutter of wings. Valuable as is the commentary of Balamabhatti (o), now generally regarded to have been written by the husband or son of Lakshmidevi, it is not treated in later decisions in Bombay as an authority to be accepted without question (p).

Vyavahara Mayukha and the Bombay School.

While the parental authority of the Mitakshara is never questioned, some of the rules there stated have not been accepted and preference has been given to those put forward in the Vyavahara Mayukha in certain parts of Western India. The Mitakshara ranks first and paramount in the Maharashtra, Northern Kanara and the Ratnagiri District. But in Gujarat, the Island of Bombay and the North Konkan, the Mayukha is considered as the overruling authority where there is a difference of opinion between it and the Mitakshara (q). The principle, however, adopted by the High Court of Bombay, and sanctioned by the Privy Council, is to construe the two works so as to harmonize them with each other wherever and so far as that is reasonably possible (r). In Poona, Ahmednagar and Khandesh, the Mayukha is considered to be of equal authority with the Mitakshara, but not capable of overruling it as in Gujerat, the Island of Bombay and the North Konkan (s).

Vyavahara Mayukha of Nilakantha Bhatta.

The Vyavahara Mayukha of Nilakantha Bhatta, written in the beginning of the seventeenth century is, as indicated above, an authority that strikes a dominating note in some parts of Western India. From the special and almost paramount authority which

---

(k) Bhagirathibai v. Kahnujirao (1887) 11 Bom. 285, 293 (F.B.): Collector of Madura v. Moottoo Ramalinga (1868) 12 M.I.A. 397, 436. An edition of this work was published in 1914 in the Gaikwad Sanskrit Series.

(l) See p. 51 supra.

(m) For instance see Gojabai v. Shahajirao (1893) 17 Bom. 114. Also see f.n. (v) at p. 50 supra.

(n) The text of Balamabhatti dealing with Achara, Vyavahara and Prayaschitta was published in separate volumes by Mr. Gharpure.

(o) Buddha Singh v. Laltu Singh (1915) 37 All. 604, 613 (P.C.). And see Pitra Kueri v. Ujagir Rai ('58) A. All. 101, 103, for some of the cases where its authority was not accepted.

(p) Bhagwan v. Warubai (1908) 32 Bom. 300; Dattatraya v. Gangabai (1922) 46 Bom. 541, 558, "cannot be accepted without due caution and examination". Reference may also be made to Pitra Kueri v. Ujagir Rai ('58) A. All. 101.

(q) See f.n. under § 12(2).

(r) See f.n. under § 12(2).

(s) See f.n. under § 12(2).

the Vyavahara Mayukha gained in Gujerat and in the island and city of Bombay, it must not be supposed that the Vyavahara Mayukha presents a development of the Hindu law connected in any peculiar way with the religious or social system of Gujerat. Before the Maratha conquest of Gujerat it had long been under Mahommedan rule. The customary law had almost dwindled away into mere caste usages and the brahminical influence had almost perished. The Vyavahara Mayukha was one of the latest products of the Bombay school, and had gained the eminent position which it has retained in the Deccan.The Brahmins, following the Maratha chiefs into the newly conquered country, naturally took their law books with them. And of these, the Vyavahara Mayukha was the most comprehensive and characteristic. In Gujerat it had virtually no rival; and, as a Hindu polity was revived there, it took a place analogous to that of the Roman law in mediæval Europe (t), with the Maharashtrian Brahmins as its expositors. Hence arose the somewhat strange consequence that the doctrines of the Mayukha gained a more undivided sway over Gujerat than amongst the Marathas themselves, who had men of wide learning and copious sources of information at hand (u). Predominance was given by the High Court of Bombay and particularly by the older British Courts established in Bombay to the Mayukha partly perhaps because they found it more frequently quoted to them than the Mitakshara and partly because the Mayukha was very much praised and followed in Gujerat and partly because the Mayukha was the more modern treatise and embodied to a considerable extent such variations in usage as had occurred during the long period which intervened between its composition and that of the Mitakshara (v). Both in Gujerat and in the Maharashtra, the doctrines of the Vyavahara Mayukha and the Mitakshara are largely tempered by customs amongst the backward castes as may be seen from the collections of Steele and Borradaile to which reference is made in a number of decisions.

Nilakantha Bhatta: One of the great juris-theologians.

In form the Vyavahara Mayukha is a digest and follows the usual pattern of discussion of the eighteen titles of law. This treatise on Vyavahara is really one of the twelve parts of his encyclopædic work entitled Bhagvanta Bhaskara each part called a Mayukha (ray of the sun). The dissertations wholly justify the claim made by the author that he was firmly grounded in the Smritis and had no equal in the mastery of the Purva Mimamsa of Jaimini (Jaiminiye advitiyah). He is more than a scholiast or glossator and is accepted as the founder of a liberal school of law. In his discussions we see the work of one of the greatest of the Hindu Jurisprudentes. His technique is valuable because he gives precision to words. In examining points where the law derives from usage or usage draws inspiration from law, he effectually

---

(t) Sav. Gesenichte des R.R., Ch. XXVI.

(u) Bhagirthibai v. Kahnujirav (1887) 11 Bom. 285, 294, 295 (F.B.). Also see Ambabai v. Keshav (1941) 43 Bom. L.R. 114, 117-119.

(v) Lallubhai v. Mankuvarbai (1876) 2 Bom. 388, 418 (F.B.).

brings out the important point that the law is the more exact in the choice of words whether it be the source or the recipient of the ideas involved.

Founder of the liberal School of Western India.

Nilakantha Bhatta was a Maharashtrian Brahmin born at Benares. In general he follows the Mitakshara but there are a number of matters on which he differs from Vijnaneshwara. In matters of succession and stridhan, the Bombay School is more liberal in giving recognition to the rights of women and for this credit must in a large measure go to this great legist whose work is notable for his originality and openminded views. Nilakantha Bhatta does not merely present traditional solutions in the traditional way but seems to suggest that he evaluates them in the light of what must have been the then current thought and current needs of the society. A translation of Vyavahara Mayukha was published by Mr. Mandlik in 1880. Thereafter Mr. Gharpure and M. Kane have also published their translations (w). An interesting account of the life of Nilakantha Bhatta, his works and his family which produced some very learned authors, is given by M. Kane in the introduction to his publication of Vyavahara Mayukha.

Dravida or Madras school.

The Dravida or Madras school, also known as the school of Southern India, leans heavily on the Smriti Chandrika which is intended to supplement and not replace or abrogate the Mitakshara.

Smriti Chandrika of Devanna Bhatta.

The Smriti Chandrika of Devanna Bhatta (x) who flourished in the close of the twelfth century has all along had commanding influence in the South. It is an exposition on the law of inheritance and was considered by Colebrooke to be a work of uncommon excellence, equal, if not superior, to Parashara Madhaveeya which also is a leading authority in the South (y). Little, if anything, is known of Devanna Bhatta but there is adequate data that the work was compiled sometime in the beginning of the great Vijayanagar Empire. Devanna Bhatta cites copiously from Katyayana and Brihaspati which shows the great eminence and authoritative status which had been achieved by the authors of those leading smritis. But for the Smriti Chandrika, some texts of Brihaspati and a number of texts of Katyayana would have probably been lost to us. The work also refers to a commentator spoken of as Sangrahakara to whom was attributed the authorship of an abridged edition of Manu's Institutes. The Smriti Chandrika is not a commentary but a Nibandha (Digest) and a work of especial authority of the Dravida or Madras school, in which it has originated. But it is to be noted that it is there accepted in point of authority as next to the Mitakshara (z). Therefore, in the (w) M. Kane's translation has often been relied on by Courts in recent cases. It is very useful both from the scholastic and the practical legal point of view as the meaning of some abstruse texts has been brought out after referring to technical Mimamsa rules.

---

(x) The first English translation of the law of succession and inheritance from this treatise was published by T. Krishnaswamy Ayyar in 1867. Other translations of the same are to be found in the publications of Ghose. Vol. II, and Setlur. The work has been published in the Hindu Law Texts Series of Mr. Gharpure.

(y) See p. 28 supra.

(z) Reference may be made to Kamalammal v. Venkatalakshmi ('65) A.S.C. 1349, 1356 where the importance of this work was emphasised. Sundaram Pillai v. Ramasamia Pillai (1920) 43 Mad. 32, 34; Raju v. Ammani (1906) 29 Mad. 358.

absence of any evidence of usage, indicating a consciousness of the people governed by that school that any opinion expressed in the Smriti Chandrika is living law, the Court would not be justified in departing from any doctrine of the Mitakshara (a) and prefer any text of the Smriti Chandrika. In Buddha Singh v. Laltu Singh the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council observed that the author of the Smriti Chandrika "differs from the author of the Mitakshara in several essential rules of law. It seems, to say the least, doubtful whether any enunciation in the Smriti Chandrika can be safely applied, except perhaps by way of analogy, to explain a dubious or interminate phrase or term in the Mitakshara" (b).

A very valuable source of law.

It is true that on some points Devanna Bhatta differs from the Mitakshara and there is occasionally about him the mere ipse dixit of the law-giver. Most probably those interpretations and opinions were tinged by established usages or views which found general favour in the South and this accounted for the very high authority there wielded by this work. Though not held in equal estimation by the other schools, it must be noted that the Smriti Chandrika is a treatise most freely quoted as a high authority in the works of almost all writers who flourished after the twelfth century and is approached by all the High Courts as a valuable source of Hindu law. There are in the Smriti Chandrika very full and detailed discussions on a number of questions often running to several pages. Devanna Bhatta seems to be of the view that mere exposition of a word or phrase would often be barren and unsatisfactory and on that account takes particular care to see that his treatment of the important texts of the Smritikars is exceptionally complete. But his notations are selective and his propositions are stated in a straightforward manner with a logical sequence. His style is impeccable.

Parashara Madhaviya.

Among the other works which are regarded as authoritative in the South are the Parashara Madhaviya, to which reference has already been made (c), the Sarasvati Vilasa, the Nirnayasindhu and the Subodhini (d).

Sarasvati Vilasa.

The Sarasvati Vilasa (e) ranks high in this school. It has been referred to in a number of decisions of the Privy Council. Undoubtedly, as pointed out by the Supreme Court, the foremost is the Mitakshara. That is followed by the Smriti Chandrika and next by Sarasvati Vilasa. Where there is no text of the Mitakshara which directly contradicts the law as expounded in the Sarasvati Vilasa it cannot be discarded on the ground of any alleged defects in its reasoning (*e*1). Prataprudadeva, a king of a principality near modern Cuttack who is the reputed author of this work, flourished some centuries after Devanna Bhatta, the author of the Smriti Chandrika, to which

---

(a) Simmani Ammal v. Muttammal (1880) 3 Mad. 265, 269.

(b) (1915) 37 All. 604, 619 (P.C.).

(c) See p. 28 supra. Also see Chinnasami Pillai v. Kunju Pillai (1912) 35 Mad. 153, 156.

(d) See pp. 50 and 51, supra.

(e) A translation of this work was published by the Rev. Mr. Thomas Foulkes. Other translations of it are to be found in the publications of Ghosh, Vol. II, and Setlur.

(*e*1) Kamalammal v. Venkatalakshmi ('65) A.S.C. 1349, 1356, 1357.

latter work frequent references are made in his work. The Sarasvati Vilasa presents a picture of the actual working of the law and not merely a series of abstract statements of old rules. It has been referred to in decisions of various Courts (f). But it is not regarded as a work of any particular authority in certain districts of Travancore-Cochin (g). Of commentaries which rank high in the Madras school mention must also be made of the Vyavaharanirnaya of Varadaraja and Smritimuktaphala which have been referred to in a number of decisions (h). It has been repeatedly pointed out in decisions of the Madras High Court that none of these and other authorities respected by the Madras School can outweigh the Mitakshara.

Vyavahara-nirnaya.

Bengal or Dayabhaga School.

The Bengal or Dayabhaga School, as it is generally denominated, prevails in the Bengali speaking States of Bengal and Assam and the Dayabhaga, the celebrated treatise of Jimutavahana, is most respected and is of ascendent authority in those States. The Dayabhaga is a valuable dissertation on the law of inheritance and partition and is believed to be a part of a larger work known as Dharmaratna. Two other works of Jimutavahana entitled Kalaviveka and Vyavaharmatrika were also part of this larger work. Whether the larger work was wholly written or intended to be written has remained a matter of uncertainty. The Dayabhaga is not a commentary on any particular Code but purports to be a digest of all the Codes. Jimutavahana, the founder of the Bengal School, flourished in or about the beginning of the twelfth century. His doctrines on the law of inheritance and the joint family system controverted some basic rules stated in the Mitakshara of Vijnaneshwara (i). It is difficult to say as to when the protestant and advanced views of Jimutavahana were accepted as of binding authority in Bengal, but it seems that this treatise soon commanded recognition and acceptance as the fountain-head for a number of commentators on the same, the earliest of whom probably was Srinath Acharya Chudamani (j). Not much is known about Jimutavahana but there is reliable material which goes to show that this eminent juris-consult was a Judge and a minister of a king of Bengal. His massive character must have run along bold lines and appears to have found its full and direct expression in his work.

Jimutavahana, author of Dayabhaga.

Progressive juris-consult: Builder of a great school.

Jimutavahana, although he does not break away from or gloss over any authoritative texts of the leading Smritikars, as will be seen from a comparison of the points of difference in the law of inheritance between the Mitakshara and the Dayabhaga, does break in upon the Mitakshara system which favours a particular mode of devolution of joint family property in case of death of a coparcener.

---

(f) Muthappundayan v. Ammani Ammal (1898) 21 Mad. 58, 60.

(g) Neelamma v. Perumal ('53) A. Tra-Co. 518, 521 (F.B.). Also see Krishna Kumar v. Sheo Prasad ('47) A.N. 205, 207.

(h) Simmani Ammal v. Muttammal (1880) 3 Mad. 265, 267, 269. Also see Buddha Singh v. Lattu Singh (1915) 37 All. 604, 618 (P.C.). The Smritimuktaphala of Vaidyanatha Dikshitar has been published by Mr. Gharpure. The Vyavaharakanda, however, remains to be published.

(i) See p. 46.

(j) See p. 57.

He introduces innovations in a number of incidents of the joint family and the rights of the members of such family. He purports to found himself on certain precepts of Manu, the meaning of which according to him had not been properly comprehended by some previous commentators. He is not averse to and in fact is successful in the creation of adroit devices and the use of fictions based on legal subtilities to relieve the pressure of traditional law. This he does by expressing his disagreement with other commentators. Although he does not expressly mention the name of the commentator with whom he really joins issue and is in particular disagreement, it is obvious that he is controverting some of the doctrines of Vijnaneshwara. He does not accept any set of propositions laid down by the other commentators on questions of inheritance as crystallized law and deals with his subject as an objective science. His appeal is more to reason and stern logic than to precepts or precedents and his approach to some of the controversial questions raised by him is forthright and direct. He plunges in medias res and is at the heart of the subject. Much can be learnt from this builder of a great edifice whose radical turn of mind made him hunt back constantly to dig up a variety of standpoints and examine their roots. The criticism made by Mitramisra and others that Jimutavahana relies at times merely on postulations does not appear to do justice to this progressive juris-consult some of whose interpretations were in all probability tinged by established usages and must naturally have found favour with the Hindus of Bengal.

Dayatatva of Raghunandana.

Of other authorities of the Bengal School, formerly at times mentioned as the Gauriya school, the most notable is the Dayatatva written by Raghunandana Siromani of Nadia. It is a treatise on the law of inheritance and is generally accepted as giving the most reliable exposition of the doctrines of the Dayabhaga and has become almost a textbook on law (k). The authority of Raghunandana is acknowledged and respected universally in the Bengal school as only next to that of Jimutavahana and statements from his work, some of which have become locus classicus, are cited and relied upon in numerous decisions of the Calcutta High Court (l).

Srikrishna Tarkalankar and other authors of Bengal School.

Srinath Acharya Chudamani and Srikrishna Tarkalankar are other exponents of the Dayabhaga law. The latter is the author of Dayakrama Sangraha which is an excellent compendium of the law of inheritance. His elucidations have been of great assistance and guidance to the Court in a number of cases. Achyuta and Maheshwara followed Srinath. All of them are expounders of stature of dignity and wide prestige. The Vivada Bhangarnava of Jagannatha Tarkapanchanana, a work commonly known as Colebrooke's Digest, is one of the authorities consulted in Bengal. With the exception of the three leading writers of the Bengal school, namely Jimutavahana, Raghunandana and Srikrishna Tarkalankar, the authority of Jagannatha is, so far as that school is concerned, higher than that of any other writer (m). Mention may also be made of the Dipakalika of Shulapani (n) which is one of the older authorities accepted in Bengal. It is a commentary on the Yajnavalkya Smriti. It has the merit of brevity and is remarkable for its neatness of style. Where the authorities of the Bengal School are silent or where there is no conflict between them and the leading authorities of the Mitakshara School, reference may be made to the latter in cases in Bengal (o).

---

(k) The Dayatatva was translated by Golapchandra Sarkar Sastri.

(l) For instance see, Hiralal v. Tripura Charan (1913) 40 Cal. 650, 668, 669 (F.B.).

Special works on adoption.

Reference must be made in passing to two special works on adoption—the Dattaka Mimamsa and the Dattaka Chandrika. Generally speaking they are equally respected throughout India, but where they differ, the Dattaka Mimamsa is preferred in Mithila and Benares, and the Dattaka Chandrika in Bengal. Both works have had a high place in the estimation of the Courts in all parts of India, and having had the advantage of being translated into English at a comparatively early period, their authority was increased during the British rule. The law of adoption built up in decisions of the Privy Council has been in the main founded on these two treatises which furnished almost exclusively the basis for the same (p).

Practical importance of the commentaries.

So the lex scripta of the Smritis, though in theory it continued to remain the infallible guide and one of the effective sources of law, gave way on most points to the authority of the commentators whose interpretations were received as authentic by the particular school. This evolution of Hindu law was at times apt to be overlooked by the Courts owing to the fact that the Smritis were the axis of the law and the desire to turn immediately to the same was quite natural. Nearly a century ago the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council observed (q) that the early versions of the Laws of Manu were very ancient and it might be doing great mischief to construe the words of the original texts literally, unaided by the gloss that had been put upon them by writers and commentators of authority. A number of the precepts of Manu have been undoubtedly altered and modified by modern law and usage. The duty, therefore, of the Court is not so much to inquire whether a disputed doctrine is fairly deducible from the earliest authorities, as to ascertain whether it has been received by the particular school which governs the district with which it has to deal, and has there been sanctioned by usage (r). The tenacity with which people in different parts of the country clung to their age-long traditions and family and local usages are often reflected in the works of the commentators. Though the commentators professed to interpret the

---

(m) Kery Kolitany v. Moneeram (1874) 13 Beng. L.R. 1, 49-51.

(n) A translation of the portion on partition is to be found in the publication of Ghose, Vol. II.

(o) Moniram v. Keri Kolitani (1880) 5 Cal. 776, 778, 789 (P.C.): Collector of Madura v. Moottoo Ramalinga (1868) 12 M.I.A. 397, 435 (P.C.).

(p) The leading decisions on the subject were referred to by the Privy Council in Arumilli Perrazu v. Subbarayudu (1921) 44 Mad. 656, 665-668. Also see § 13 post.

(q) Pedda Ramappa v. Bengari Seshamma (1880) 8 I.A. 1; Ramalaxmi v. Sivanantho (1872) 14 M.I.A. 570.

(r) Collector of Madura v. Moottoo Ramalinga (1868) 12 M.I.A. 397; Atmaram v. Bajirao (1985) 62 I.A. 139.

law laid down in the smritis, their conclusions were in a large measure permeated by the customs and usages which they found in vogue around them. In the case of The Collector of Madura v. Moottoo Ramalinga referred to immediately above, the Privy Council ruled that it is the duty of the Courts to recognise the rules of law enunciated in the commentaries, even if they appear to proceed on a wrong interpretation of the smritis, "the reason being that under the Hindu system of law, clear proof of usage will outweigh the written text of the law." Indeed, the Mitakshara, the Dayabhaga and the other works of especial authority subordinate in so many places the language of the Smriti texts to custom and approved usage and evolve rules which draw inspiration from custom.

Commentators were virtually law-makers.

The leading commentators and nibandhakars although they purported to confine their task within the structure of the Smriti law accomplished the work of keeping the law abreast of the felt necessities and demands of the time through a long series of centuries during the Post-Smriti Period commencing from about the beginning of the seventh century when Asahaya wrote his Naradabhashya and ending with the seventeenth century when Viramitrodaya, the last of the leading commentaries, was written by Mitramishra. They originated and accomplished their task without permitting themselves to be fettered with orthodox prejudices and yet with disciplined sagacity. They combined intimate knowledge and mastery of the law and their awareness of its conservatism with gravitas and a liberal readiness to move with the times. Even when they were expounding a particular smriti, they constantly kept before their mind a map of the Smriti law as a whole. They have been adverted to in some decisions as mere glossators, or compilers of congeries of customs. It must have been seen from the foregoing observations that the leading commentators and nibandhakars were more than glossators or compilers of customs. At times they have been referred to not inappropriately as scholiasts obviously in analogy of the commentators of the Greek and Latin classics and the European philosophers of the middle age whose great aim was to reduce the doctrine of the Christian Church to a scientific system. During a long series of centuries when legislation in the modern sense was not originated and judicial precedents as now understood had no established authority, these juris-theologians were virtually law-makers who systematized the personal law of the Hindus and accomplished legal innovations and in doing so combined all that legal pholosophy could yield and substantially enriched Hindu Law and jurisprudence.

Custom a source and constituent part of law.

Pursuing the order in which the indices of law are stated by the Hindu jurisprudents, reference must next be made to approved usage or custom. Ancient custom is generally regarded as a just foundation of many laws in every system of jurisprudence and for reasons grounded on principle and justice. Cicero speaking of the generation of custom observes in a classical passage: "Justitiae initium est a natura perfectum. Diende quaedam in consuetudinem ex utilitatis ratione venerunt. Postea res, et a natura profectas, et a consuetudine probatas, legum metus et religio sanxit." "Justice has emanated from nature. Therefore, certain matters have passed into custom by reason of their utility. Finally, the fear of law, even religion, gives sanction to those rules which have both emanated from nature and have been approved by custom." In Hindu law immemorial custom has proprio vigore the efficacy of law. It is not merely an adjunct of ordinary law but as has already been pointed out a constituent part of it.

Its importance stressed by the Smritikars.

During the earliest stages of the development of Hindu Law, custom was acknowledged and accepted as being the embodiment of principles and rules prescribed by sacred tradition. During the Sutra period also the influence of custom upon law bore the same characteristic. Gautama, the most ancient of the Sutrakars whose aphorisms on law are extant, states at the very outset of his work: "The Veda is the source of the sacred law, and the tradition and practice of those who know the Veda" (s). Gautama states in another aphorism relating to administration of justice by the king: "The customs of countries, castes and families, which are not opposed to the sacred records have also authority" (t). Manu, as has already been pointed out, regards approved usage as direct evidence of law (u). He stresses the importance of custom. The expressions generally used by the Smritikars for 'custom' are achara, sadachara and shishtachara. Broadly interpreted they mean practices of good men, a concept which necessarily involves the element of reasonableness. In the context of civil law sadachara, which is the most commonly used of these three expressions, requires that there must be no element of moral turpitude or anything opposed to public policy about the custom. The Mahabharata in one place uses the expression 'Lokasangraha' meaning usages of the people and in another place states that usage is superior to all the shastras taken together. Without retracing covered ground (v), the importance and efficacy attached to custom by the Hindu juris-theologians may be summarised by reference to the oft-quoted verse of Narada: "Custom is powerful and overrides the sacred law" (w). There are in the Smritis numerous texts relating to the origin and binding nature of custom and the commentators and nibandhkars have critically discussed, considered and applied those texts (x). Of those the texts of Manu and Narada cited above and a quotative verse of Brihaspati exhorting recognition of local, tribal and family usages (y) are particularly notable.

Sadachara.

---

(s) I, 1, 2 (S.B.E. Vol. II). Also see Apastamba I, 1, 1-2—Athatah samayacharikan dharman vyakhyasyamah: Dharmagnasamyah pramanam vedashcha.

(t) XI, 20 (S.B.E. Vol. II). Also see pp. 15-18 supra.

(u) II, 12.

(v) See pp. 16 and 39. Also see f.n. (c) on p. 2 supra.

(w) I, 40. Asahaya states that this verse accepts the rule that custom is superior to written law. The Romans took the view that an existing statute might even be replaced by adverse usage 'ea vers (i.e. jura) quaæ ipsa sibi quæque civitas constituit, saepe mutari solent vel tacito consensu populi vel alia postea lege lata'.

(x) Reference has already been made to some of them. Asahaya cites: Deshe deshe ya acharah paramparyakramagatah: Sa shastrarthabalannaiva langhaniyah kadachana.

(y) Desha jati kulanam cha ye dharmah prak pravartitah: Tathaiva te palaneeyah prajah prakshubhyatenyatha: II, 28 (S.B.E XXIII).

Custom can outweigh written text of the law.

In a long series of cases decided by the Privy Council and Courts in India, the rule has been accepted that custom can override any text of smriti law. In Collector of Madura v. Moottoo Ramalinga, the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council observed: "Under the Hindu system of law, clear proof of usage will outweigh the written text of the law" (z). It has been repeatedly stated that a custom may be in derogation of smriti law and where proved to exist may supersede that law (a). The tenacity of family customs even under the strain of migration has been repeatedly recognised in decisions of the Courts (b). It may, however, be observed that though local and family custom, if proved to exist, will supersede the general law, the general law will in other respect govern the relations of the parties outside that custom (c). The essential attributes of a custom are that it must be ancient; reasonable; must have continued or been observed without interruption; and must be certain in respect of its nature generally, as well as in respect of the locality where it is alleged to obtain and the persons whom it is alleged to affect. It must be uniform and obligatory. It must not be immoral or opposed to public policy and cannot derogate from any statute unless the statute saves any such custom or generally makes exception in favour of rules of custom. In a catena of cases the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council has observed that it is of the essence of special usages modifying ordinary law that they should be ancient and invariable; and it is further essential that they should be established to be so by clear and unambiguous evidence. It is only by means of such evidence that the courts can be assured of their existence and that they possess the conditions of antiquity and certainty on which alone their legal title to recognition depends (d). Custom as a source of law is considered in some detail in Chapter II post.

Essential attributes of custom.

Nyaya or Yukti: An auxiliary indice of Dharma.

A subsidiary or auxiliary indice of dharma was nyaya or yukti, expressions the juridical connotation of which included principles of equity. The smriti texts, howsoever widely interpreted and usages of people though fully recognised, could not obviously provide for every conceivable question of law. Analogies drawn from established rules and fictions of law were therefore resorted to in order to cover such cases. One of the rules laid down by Jaimini in his Mimamsa was atidesha whereby any principle laid down with reference to one case was applied to other analogous cases (e). It is well understood that the spirit of equity underlies many legal fictions (f) and rules propounded by analogy. It was recognised by the Smritikars that the traditional law from its very nature could not be exhaustive and principles of justice had to be invoked

---

(z) (1868) 12 M.I.A. 397, 436.

(a) Neelkisto Deb v. Beerchunder (1869) 12 M.I.A. 523, 542.

(b) Parbati v. Jagdis (1902) 29 I.A. 82.

(c) Kali Pershad v. Anund Roy (1887) 15 I.A. 18. Also see Rao Kishore Singh v. Gahenabai (1920) 22 Bom. L.R. 507 (P.C.).

(d) Raja Rup Singh v. Rani Baisini (1884) 11 I.A. 149, 162.

(e) Books VII and VIII. Atidesha is a relation in which one thing contains the indication of another thing and deriving its force from that other becomes (by derivation) an incident of it: Yasya lingamarthasanyogad abhidhanavat VIII, i. 2. Remote analogy, however, was not permissible.

(f) In fictione juris semper æquitas existit.

in cases not expressly provided for by the litera legis or conventional law. Yajnavalkya enjoined that nyaya, meaning natural equity and reason, should prevail in case of conflicting rules of law (g). Brihaspati gave a rule of fundamental importance when he recommended yukti in the well-known versus memorialis that decision must not be made solely by having recourse to the letter of the written codes; since if no decisions were made according to the reason of the law, or according to immemorial usage, there might be a failure of justice (h). Narada also, although he does not in this context use the expression nyaya, favours an appeal to yukti (i). And even apart from any special or technical significance of these expressions, it does appear that the unified legal system aimed at by the smritikars did envisage a department or aspect of law which would permit, within limits, interpretation of the sacred texts by resorting to something akin to what the modern lawyer at times does when he appeals to the "equity of the statute" (j). The expression nyaya and yukti are certainly broad enough to allow the two sorts of equity described by Cowell: "for the one doth abridge and take from the letter of the law, the other doth enlarge and add thereto". The smritikars dealt with the perennial conflict between law and justice by emphasizing the importance of right reason, good sense and equable justice by which alone any law can justify its existence.

Natural equity.

Principles of Justice, equity and good conscience.

Several Charters directed Courts in India to proceed when the law was silent in accordance with justice, equity and good conscience, an expression which was generally interpreted to mean rules of English law if found applicable in Indian society and circumstances (k). These principles were invoked only in cases for which no specific rules existed (l). Accordingly it was laid down by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in the case of a will that because the case was new the court would not take the view that it was not provided for at all Where new combinations of circumstances arose it was incumbent on the Court to apply rules of law which could be derived from general principles. Nor would the Court abandon all analogy to such principles and similar cases but would keep them steadily in view not merely for the determination of the particular cases but for the interests of law as a science (m). Applying this rule of jurisprudence the Privy Council held in another case that a murderer was disqualified from succeeding to the property of the murdered person in case of intestacy. This rule of English law founded on public policy was applied to the case of

---

(g) See p. 39 supra.

(h) Kevalam shastramashritya na kartanyo hi nirnayah: yuktiheene vichare tu dharmahanih prajayate.

(i) I. 40. See f.n. (f) on p. 39, supra.

(j) They recognised that the rigour of the law often required to be moderated and that there was at times possibility of litigants successfully evading operation of rules of law by recourse to subtleties and technicalities. A text of Yajnavalkya enjoined the king to do justice according to the pith and substance of the rule of law and disregard technical flaws and deceptive subtleties: Chhalam nirasya bhootena vyavaharannayennrupah; II, 19.

(k) Waghela Rajsanji v. Sheikh Masludin (1887) 14 I.A. 89.

(l) Ram Coomar v. Chunder Canto (1876) 4 I.A. 23, 50-51.

(m) Juttendromohun Tagore v. Ganendromohun Tagore (1872) Sup. I.A. 47. Also see Subramania Ayyar v. Rathnavelu Chetty (1918) 41 Mad. 44, 74 (F.B.).

a Hindu on grounds of justice, equity and good conscience (n). But care was taken to see that no refined distinctions essentially characteristic of English law and no technical rules of equity were introduced into Hindu law (o). Though there are no texts in the smritis expressly recognising the right of an adopted son to inherit to his adoptive mother's relations, this right has been enforced on general principles of equity and good conscience and analogy deduced from texts applicable to similar cases (p). In a recent case the Supreme Court observed that it is now well known that in the absence of any clear Shastric text the Courts have authority to decide cases on principles of justice, equity and good conscience unless it is shown that the decision would be repugnant to or inconsistent with any doctrine or theory of Hindu Law (q).

Appeal to the genius of Hindu Law.

Where there is absence of any express rule of law and any authority affording any real guidance and no rule of custom, appeal to the spirit of the law is not unknown. Some modern decisions of the highest tribunal in England go to show that, while judges do not legislate at large, they do subscribe to the view that only in the absence of authority, and when the spirit of the law suggests the affirmation of previously unknown or undertermined duties, the Courts do commit themselves to novelty, though of course, very cautiously. Instances do occur from time to time, though they are not frequent, where the Courts in examining any new situation or a new jural relationship have regard to the genius of the Hindu Law (r) and the consciousness of the community at large and also found the conclusions reached by them on the grounds that they were more in accordance with the reason of the thing and general principles.

Judicial decisions as a source of law.

Since the reduction of India under British rule another element was added to the effective sources of Hindu Law. The courts had to ascertain and administer the personal law of the Hindus in matters relating to succession, inheritance, marriage, adoption and religious usages and institutions except in so far as such law was altered by legislative enactment. The decisions of Courts, founded on interpretation of the texts of the Smritis and principally on the views expressed by the commentators accepted as leading authorities in the different Schools, although they immediately affected only the parties, necessarily operated as binding on the entire community. Judicial precedents became necessary and useful for in them the Courts found reasons to guide them and the authority of those who made them had to be regarded. Unfortunately, however, the importance of custom was at times not fully appreciated and decisions given on some points had the effect of disturbing (n) Kenchava v. Girimalappa (1924) 51 I.A. 368. S. 25 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, now inflicts this disqualification on the murderer.

---

(o) Juttendromohun Tagore v. Ganendromohun Tagore supra.

(p) Subramania Ayyar v. Rathnavelu Chetty supra.

(q) Gurunath v. Kamalabai (1951) 1 S.C.R. 1135, 1147, 1148. Also see Peramanayakam v. Sivaraman, ('52) A.M. 419, 472, 473 (F.B.). Reference may be made to Kamalakshy v. Narayani ('68) A.Ker. 123.

(r) For instance see Tiruvengadam v. Butchayya (1929) 52 Mad. 373, 379.

what had been accepted by the community as established law. The cursus curiae was bound to be strong in these matters and there was little chance of retracing the steps already taken because obviously the preferable course was to follow the doctrine of stare decisis and to uphold a decision already given rather than overturn it after it had stood unreversed and acquired increased strength by lapse of time. This, as will be presently pointed out, tended to impart a measure of rigidity to the law. With numerous Superior Courts administering law in different parts of the country there grew up a mass of case-law and most of the important points of Hindu law are now to be found in the law reports and to this extent it may be said that the decisions on Hindu law, though not in theory yet in effect, have in part superseded the commentaries and limited and supplemented the rules of Hindu law. Modern jurisprudence endorses the importance of authoritative precedents and accepts them as legal sources of law being entitled to unquestioning obedience. The pronouncements of the Privy Council and now of the Supreme Court are final and in practice recourse to them is of the utmost importance and necessity: The decisions of the Privy Council and the Supreme Court are binding on all the other Courts of India including the High Courts; but the decisions of any one High Court are not binding on any other High Court, though they are binding on the courts subordinate to it.

Hindu law not static but empiric and progressive and a living system.

It must have been seen from the foregoing observations that Hindu law was not static or staid but was empiric and progressive. Sir Henry Maine, author of Ancient Law, and some of his contemporaries propounded the speculative theory that the Manusmriti and other Smriti Codes did not at any time constitute a set of rules of positive law actually administered in India. In their opinion, expressed with smug uncharitableness, the Smriti law, in great part, was merely the ideal picture of that which in the view of the Brahmins, ought to be the law. It was suggested by an eminent English author that Hindu law was "a mere phantom of the brain imagined by Sanskritists without law and lawyers without Sanskrit". All this naturally disturbed many Indian jurists and scholars who felt compelled to refute the charge. It is no more necessary to discuss that theory since it has now been securely interred and its perturbed spirit has ceased to wax the law. Some writers on Hindu law made observations of a like nature with lofty disdain or condescension and some captious critics could see in the Dharmashastras only primitive rules of rude simplicity. Dr. Sen has observed that the critic who pretended to see nothing in the Hindu law but a stagnant mass of archaic rules knew not what he said and only showed that he himself had a stagnant mind. This eminent jurist has, however, justly pointed out that for this attitude of those writers we ourselves are partly responsible. While foreign jurists, in spite of their many disadvantages have, out of a spirit of research, directed their attention to Hindu law, no matter with what success, we ourselves have simply looked on (s). It must also be acknowledged that translations of many Dharmashastras by eminent orientalists of Europe in the Sacred Books of the East Series and in other publications and the monographs written by them are the result of untiring research and evince critical power of a high degree. Mostly based on leading commentaries, those translations of some of the Smritis have been of great help to the Courts and generations of lawyers and students of Hindu law.

The slow and steady process of development of Hindu law was the result of innovations often imperceptible as happens when old and obsolete rules become gradually displaced by growing usages and customs. In a large measure impetus was given to that progress by the standard works of those leading commentators and nibandhakars who did not permit themselves to be fettered by orthodox prejudices and showed liberal readiness to move with the times. But as the Hindu Law Committee very appropriately observed, we have no longer Smritikars and commentators of the old type; we have the Legislature and the Courts of Law. The Courts of Law, however, do not exercise the same freedom of interpretation in moulding the law as did the ancient commentators even when the interpretation was not fairly deducible from the earliest authorities. This practically meant that Hindu law, excepting in so far as the Legislature intervened, had to remain arrested in its growth at the point at which it was left by Vijnaneshvara, Jimutavahana and other recognised commentators, the latest of whom flourished in the 18th century (t). For more than two thousand years after the Code of Manu was compiled, Hindu law pursued the even tenor of its way without any real break in its continuity and was altered, improved and refined from time to time. But the spontaneous growth of Hindu law was retarded if not wholly stopped with the reduction of India under British rule. The difficulties of English Judges, who did not know the language of the Dharmashastras, when called upon to administer a system of law which required understanding and appreciation of argumentative works, religious traditions, ancient usage and more modern habits of the Hindus with which they were unfamiliar, were indeed great. No system of law makes the province of legal obligation co-extensive with that of religious or moral obligation. The ancient works and commentaries dealt with and discussed texts which were mandatory as well as those which were directory and did not always draw a clear line of demarcation between matters religious and secular (u). Texts which did not contain positive law were at times not distinguished from rules intended for positive laws and in a number of cases the Privy Council sounded a note of caution while correcting such errors. In difficult cases some of those judges were not unnaturally inclined to rely on their own concepts of what the law should be and on praesumptiones hominis and at times reached

Its growth arrested.

---

(s) Sen's Hindu Jurisprudence, p. 110.
(t) Report of the Hindu Law Committee, 1941, paras 15-16.
(u) See pp. 1, 8, 9, supra.

conclusions at variance with the spirit and substance of Hindu law. In some cases, doctrines of English law of doubtful applicability were pitchforked into Sanskrit texts and Roman law was laid under contribution. The Privy Council, not being unmindful of all this, observed in a very early case (v): "At the same time it is quite impossible for us to feel any confidence in our opinion, upon a subject like this, when that opinion is founded upon authorities to which we have access only through translations, and when the doctrines themselves, and the reasons by which they are supported, or impugned, are drawn from the religious traditions, ancient usages, and more modern habits of the Hindoos, with which we cannot be familiar."

Decisions of the Privy Council.

With their mastery of jurisprudential concepts and their unmatched forensic ability to expound and elucidate even the most complicated matters of unfamiliar laws affecting the personal status of parties, their Lordships of the Privy Council evolved principles and laid down rules on varied and complex subjects in their own unique style and generations of lawyers and judges in this country have acknowledged their indebtedness to that august Tribunal for the lead and guidance given by it. The principle was established that the duty of a judge, who is under the obligation to administer Hindu law is not so much to inquire whether a disputed doctrine is fairly deducible from the earliest authorities (Smritis), as to ascertain whether it has been received by the particular school which governs the district with which he has to deal and has there been sanctioned by usage. For, under the Hindu system of law, clear proof of usage will outweigh the written text of the law (w).

Difficulty of establishing custom.

But 'clear proof of usage' of necessity required establishment of the usage by showing that it was ancient, certain and reasonable and where the attempt was to support any usage in derogation of the general rules of Hindu law it had to be construed strictly. The lawyer familiar with rules of procedure and evidence knows the practical difficulties in the way of a party who undertakes the heavy burden of adducing satisfactory proof of usage, so long and invariably acted upon in practice, as to show that it has by common consent, been submitted to by a class or a district or local area. The course of practice upon which the custom is said to rest must not be left in doubt but be proved with certainty. Moreover custom in matters of personal law readily applies closure and does not permit of extension by analogy nor of any deductivity by a priori methods. Custom should occur substantially under conditions 'substantially similar and instances must indicate the probable general habit of persons under similar circumstances. The principles are indubitably sound but the difficulties of proving modifica-

---

(v) 4 M.I.A. 1, 97, 98.

(w) Collector of Madura v. Mottoo Ramalinga (1868) 12 M.I.A. 397, 435, 436. In Chapter X post Sir Dinshah Mulla while discussing Stridhana according to the Smritis, the Commentaries and Judicial Decisions has pointed out how the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, notwithstanding repeated warnings given by it that the Courts of India should take the law not from the Smritis but from the commentaries, brushed aside a text in the Mitakshara which maintained the doctrine that property inherited by a woman became her Stridhan (§ 112).

tions and variations in the old rules of law introduced by custom were at times almost insurmountable and the task often beyond the means of an average litigant. The effect of some of the pronouncements of the highest tribunal was to treat certain commentaries as having laid down the last word on every rule collocated and dealt with in them centuries ago and the task of the courts as no more than application of those self-same rules to a fast changing society. Referring to the arrest of progress suffered by Hindu law, Mr. Mayne wrote that "no voices were heard unless they came from the tombs." Some ancient texts and injunctions favoured by the commentators which had not been accepted as part of current law and virtually abandoned in practice were in some cases received as binding law and given inflexible interpretation. All this tended in a large measure to unprecedented rigidly and to the creation of judge-made law which from the inherent limitations on its scope could not be expected to respond adequately to all changing needs and circumstances. The only remedy was comprehensive legislation in the form of a uniform code.

Codification.

Codification is a well-known subject. Its chief apostle was Bentham and its greatest antagonist was Savigny. It has been said that they were both giants to each of whom half his prayers were granted, whilst the other half was scattered to the winds. According to Savigny, "law should be gradually developed by the silent internal forces of national consciousness with the least possible interference by the legislature." Modern jurisprudence recognises the advantages of the transformation of well-developed and long established traditional and customary law into statutory form. It accepts innovations on the substance of existing law and even extirpation and substitution of any part of that law to ensure that it accords with the actual circumstances in which the people of a country are placed. Idealists and totalitarians had most of them to agree that there existed a large number of anomalies and inequitable rules in the complicated structure of Hindu law which could be dealt with only by legislation. It could no longer be denied that the fast moving conditions and the social, economic and political transformation in the country had rendered imperative substantial and radical changes in that law. It has to be admitted that far-reaching and fundamental changes had become inevitable for they alone could furnish fair and equable solutions to some of the most controversial questions relating to the law of marriage and succession.

Some relevant considerations.

The question of codification of Hindu law has been debated for nearly a century both by law reformers who like Bentham were staunch advocates of the theory of the utility of a Code of laws and by others who like Savigny exaggerated the defects of a Code and declined to accept its practical utility. Bentham wrote that the great utility of a code of laws is to cause the debates of lawyers and the bad laws of former times to be forgotten and that its style should be characterised by force and harmony. The code of his dreams, one that would not require schools for its explanation or casuists to unravel its subtleties and be a complete self-sufficing enactment, was indubitably an ideal to be pursued but he pushed his theory too far when in his aim at finality he minimised all practical difficulties in the way of such legislation. Codification has all along been opposed by those who deprecated legislation in any shape or form in Hindu law on religious grounds and by some others on the ground that it would be impossible to give legislative form to the spacious and complicated structure that was Hindu law. Much of the opposition was grounded in sentiment and not in reason. Some objection belonged to the class of uninformed and orthodox element though it must be said that there was considerable sentiment born of reverence for an institution which had its roots in hoary antiquity. It was not realised by some dry traditionalists that the venerated authors of the Dharmashastras had themselves been progressive and tried to keep the law in harmony with their environments and in general responded to changing ideas, changing customs and the march of time.

Recent enactments.

The Hindu Law Committee appointed in 1941 to examine Hindu law recommended that it should be codified in gradual stages beginning with the law of intestate succession and marriage. The Committee ceased to function after making considerable progress and was revived in 1944. The Committee presided over by Sir Benegal Narsing Rau—known as the Rau Committee—made its report and presented a draft code. One of the objects of the Committee was to evolve a uniform code of Hindu law which would apply to all Hindus by blending the most progressive elements in the various schools of law which prevailed in different parts of the country. The draft of the Code presented by the Committee was to be regarded as an integral whole so that no part of it would be judged as if it stood by itself. The Hindu Law Bill remained on the anvil for a long time and ultimately those in charge of it decided to split it into certain parts and to move the Parliament after placing each part separately before it. The advantages of this were probably practical but one disadvantage was that it meant legislation by instalments. Such codification, however carefully done, cannot derive the full benefit of a pre-conceived plan of the whole system to be wrought upon. Instalments of a law intended to be uniform and to operate as an organic whole have come into operation at intervals during 1955 and 1956 and this must raise some problems and create some anomalous situations and this apart from the fact that the enactments which have so far found place on the statute-book leave an undetermined residue. The Hindu Marriage Act was enacted in May 1955, the Hindu Succession Act in June 1956, the Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act in August 1956 and the Hindu Adoptions as Maintenance Act in December 1956.

Fundamental Changes.

The changes brought about by the two principal enactments the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, and the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, are pointed out in the Introductory Notes to the commentaries to those Acts. It will suffice here to state that the alternative conditions which had arisen in matters social, economic and political made it imperative that polygamy should not be permitted and rules of succession should be equitable. The outstanding feature of the new Hindu Marriage Act is that monogamy is now enforced as a rule of law and bigamy is rendered punishable as a crime. The conditions and requirements of a ceremonial Hindu marriage are considerably simplified and any two Hindus, which expression includes not merely Hindus by religion but Buddhists, Jains and Sikhs as well, can solemnize the ceremonial marriage recognised by the Act. Relief by way of judicial separation, declaration of nullity of marriage and divorce are permissible under the Act. There is considerable force in the remark belonging to times long past that rules of succession to property being in their nature arbitrary, are in all systems of law mostly conventional and that even deeply rooted traditions may have to change with the march of time. The new Hindu Succession Act may seem to break violently with the past but it has to be conceded that it is characteristic of the age which is one of great ideals and fast changing theories. One outstanding feature of this Act is that it lays down a uniform system of inheritance for the whole country and lays down some simple rules relating to succession to the property of a Hindu male and female. The property of a male Hindu dying intestate after the commencement of the Act devolves in equal shares between his son, daughter, widow and mother. Male and female heirs are now treated as equal without any distinction. Another notable feature of the new Act is that any property possessed by a female Hindu is now held by her as her absolute property and she has full power to deal with it and can even dispose of it by will as she likes. The restraints and limitations on her power have ceased to exist even in respect of existing property, so that any property possessed by a female Hindu whether acquired by her before or after the commencement of the Act, is now held by her as full owner and not as limited owner.

Right of woman to be in equali jura.

The objects achieved by the new legislation are substantial unification of Hindu law by blending much that was progressive in the various schools of law which prevailed in different parts of the country and removal of many anomalies and incongruous injunctions. One aim of this legislation was to act, it is submitted rightly, on the principle that where the reason of the rule had ceased to exist there was little justification for insistence upon its preservance. Cessante ratione legis cessa ipsa lex. Renascent India of the post-independence era appreciated the value of a fresh and broadened outlook in matters affecting the rights social, economic and political of the citizen regardless of sex. Adult suffrage and political parity were fore-runners to the recognition of all that was implicit in the constitutional directives and fundamental guarantees of equality of status and equality before the law enounced in the Constitution. The underscoring of the rights of women to be in equali jura finds concrete shape in the new legislation.

PRINCIPLES OF HINDU LAW

CHAPTER I

OPERATION OF THE HINDU LAW

1. Personal Law.—(1) Wherever the laws of India admit the operation of personal law, the right and obligations of a Hindu are determined by Hindu law, that is, his traditional law subject to the exception that any part of that law may be modified or abrogated by statute.

(2) The Hindus are divided into four castes (a), namely—

(1) the Brahmans, or priestly caste;
(2) the Kshatriyas, or warrior caste;
(3) the Vaisyas, or agricultural caste; and
(4) the Sudras.

The members of the first three castes are called twice-born or regenerate. The second birth or regeneration consists in the study of the Vedas or sacred literature and in the performance of samskaras or sacraments. All these are denied to Sudras except the samskara of marriage (b).

The above classification was of considerable importance prior to the recent enactments. The classification, however, continues to be relevant in certain matters to be decided in accordance with the earlier law. In cases of adoption the adopted son had to belong to the same caste as the adoptive father. In cases of marriage, according to one view, the parties to the marriage had both to belong to the same caste.

In the undermentioned case (*b*1) the Supreme Court explained who are Hindus and stated the broad features of Hindu religion.

Kayasthas.—It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that Kayasthas as a general rule are Sudras (c). On the other hand, it has been held by the High Courts of Allahabad (d) and Patna (e), that they are not Sudras, but belong to one of the three regenerate classes, probably Kshatriyas.

Marathas.—There are three classes of Marathas in the Bombay State, namely (1) the five families, (2) the ninety-six families, and (3) the rest. Of these, the first two classes are Kshatriyas, and the last Sudras (f).

Vaidyas.—The Vaidyas of Bengal are Sudras (g). The Tanjore branch of the Marathas descended from Shivaji belongs to the Sudra and not to the Kshatriya caste (h). The Madura Ramayana Chavadi Thousand Yadavas residing chiefly in Madura and adjoining villages are Sudras (i).

Sadgopes.—The Sadgopes of Bengal are not Vaisyas but Sudras (j).

Komatis.—The Komatis of Madhya Pradesh are a Telugu caste of Vaisyas (k).

---

(a) Chuoturya v. Sahub (1857) 7 M.I.A. 18, 4 W.R. 132.

(b) See Banerjee on Marriage and Stridhana, 5th ed., pp. 31, 37.

(*b*1) Yagnapurushdasji v. Muldas ('66) A.S.C. 1119.

(c) Raj Coomar Lall v. Bissessur Dyal (1884) 10 Cal. 688; Asita Mohon v. Nerode Mohan (1916) 20 C.W.N. 901, 35 I.C. 127, ('17) A.C. 292, on appeal (1920) 47 I.A. 140, 145, 24 C.W.N. 794, 798, ('20) A.P.C. 129; Bhola Nath v. Emperor (1924) 51 Cal. 488, 81 I.C. 709 ('24) A.C. 616; Raj Nandini v. Aswini Kumar (1941) 1 Cal. 457, ('41) A.C. 20.

(d) Tulshi Ram v. Behari Lal (1890) 12 All 328, 334.

(e) Ishwari Prashad v. Rai Hari Prasad (1927) 6 Pat. 506, 106 I.C. 620 ('27) A.P. 145.

(f) Subrao v. Radha (1928) 52 Bom. 497, 113 I.C. 497, ('28) A.B. 295.

(g) (1941) 1 Cal. 457 noted under n. (c) supra.

(h) Maharaja of Kolhapur v. Sundaram (1925) 48 Mad. 1, 93 I.C. 705, ('25) A.M. 497.

(i) Mokka Kone v. Ammakutti Ammal (1928) 51 Mad. 1 (F.B.), ('28) A.M. 299.

(j) Durga Das Pan v. Santosh Kumar Pan (1945) 1 Cal. 17.

(k) Nagi v. Rajkunwar ('56) A.N. 138,

Christian: Reconversion to Hinduism: Caste.—In S. Rajagopal v. C. M. Armugam (*k*1) the Supreme Court pointed out that the tenets of Christianity militate against persons professing it from being divided or discriminated on the basis of caste and that a Adi Dravida Hindu who gets converted ceases to belong to the Adi Dravida caste. The Court referred to a number of decisions where it was held that on reconversion to Hinduism, a person can become a member of the same caste in which he was born and to which he belonged before his conversion to another religion. The main basis of those decisions (*k*2) is that, if the members of the caste accept the reconversion of the person as a member, it should be held that he does become a member of that caste, even though he may have lost membership of the caste on conversion to another religion. This question was left open by the Supreme Court. On merits of the case arising out of clection disputes it was held that the appellant had failed to establish that he became a member of the Adi Dravida Hindu caste (Scheduled Caste) after he started professing the Hindu religion.

2. Application of Hindu Law.—The power of the Courts of India to apply the Hindu law to Hindus is derived from and regulated by certain statutes of the British Parliament and by imperial and provincial legislation passed during the period of British rule, which unless altered or repealed are to continue in force under the express provisions of Art. 372 of the Indian Constitution.

3. Extent of application of Hindu Law.—(1) The Hindu law as administered by the Courts of India is applied to Hindus in some matters only.

(2) Throughout India, questions regarding succession, inheritance, marriage, and religious usages and institutions, are decided according to Hindu law, except in so far as such law has been altered by legislative enactment.

(3) Besides the matters above referred to, there are certain additional matters in which the Hindu law is applied to Hindus, in some cases by virtue of express legislation, and in others on the principle of justice, equity and good conscience. These matters are adoption, guardianship, family relations, wills, gifts and partitions. As to these matters also, the Hindu law is to be applied subject to such alterations as have been made by legislative enactment.

4. Acts modifying and abrogating rules of Hindu Law.—Fundamental and radical changes have been made recently by the following Acts:—

(1) Hindu Marriage Act, 25 of 1955;

(2) Hindu Succession Act, 30 of 1956;

(3) Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 32 of 1956; and

(4) Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 78 of 1956.

The Hindu law had, prior to 1955, been modified and supplemented in certain respects by the following Acts:—

(i) The Caste Disabilities Removal Act, 1850.—According to the Hindu law and usage, if a Hindu renounces his religion, or is excluded from the communion of that religion, or is deprived of caste, such renunciation, exclusion or deprivation entails a forfeiture of his rights and property, and deprives him of his right of inheritance. The effect of the above-mentioned Act was that these consequences ceased to be enforced as law in the Courts of British India (l). The Act is also known as the Freedom of Religion Act.

---

(*k*1) ('69) A.S.C. 101.

(*k*2) These cases are collected at pp. 108, 109 of the above decision in ('69) A.S.C. 101.

(l) Khunni Lal v. Gobind Krishna (1911) 33 All. 356, 38 I.A. 87, 10 I.C. 477. See also Chidambaram v. Ma Nyein Me (1928) 6 Rang. 243, 111 I.C. 2, ('28) A.R. 179.

(ii) The Hindu Widows' Remarriage Act, 1856.—This Act legalizes the remarriage of Hindu widows in certain cases.

(iii) The Indian Succession Act, 1925, ss. 57, 214, and Schedule III to the Act.—These sections are dealt with in the chapter on Wills.

(iv) The Native Converts' Marriage Dissolution Act, 1866.—This Act enables a Hindu convert to Christianity to obtain a dissolution of marriage under certain circumstances.

(v) The Special Marriage Act XLIII of 1954.

(vi) The Transfer of Property Act IV of 1882.—This Act supersedes the whole of the Hindu law as to transfer of property.

(vii) The Indian Majority Act, 1875.—This Act, which fixes the age of majority on completion of the eighteenth year, applies to Hindus, except in matters of marriage, divorce and adoption.

(viii) The Guardians and Wards Act, 1890.—This Act applies to Hindus in cases where a guardian has to be, or has been, appointed by the Court.

(ix) The Hindu Inheritance (Removal of Disabilities) Act, 1928.—This Act limits the disabilities which excluded a Hindu from inheritance and from a share on partition.

(x) The Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act, 1929.—This Act admits the son's daughter, the daughter's daughter, the sister, and the sister's son, as heirs, next after the father's father and before the father's brother. This Act is now repealed by s. I of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956.

(xi) The Child Marriage Restraint Act XIX of 1929.

(xii) The Hindu Gains of Learning Act, 1930.—This Act makes all acquisitions by means of learning the separate property of the acquirer.

(xiii) The Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act XVIII of 1937.—This Act, which came into force on the 14th April 1937, gives new rights of inheritance to widows, and strikes at the root of a Mitakshara coparcenary. This Act is now repealed by s. 31 of the Hindu Succession Act 30 of 1956.

(xiv) The Hindu Married Women's Right to separate Residence and Maintenance Act, 1946.—This Act is now repealed by s. 29 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, LXXVIII of 1956.

5. Enactments referred to in § 2.—For a statement in a tabular form of the enactments referred to in § 2 above, the Courts to which they apply, and the extent to which the Hindu law is to be administered by those Courts, reference may be made to § 5 of the earlier editions of this work.

6. Persons governed by Hindu Law.—The four New Enactments of 1955 and 1956 stated in § 4 above expressly mention the persons to whom they are applicable. §§ 6 and 7 are based on decisions of Courts, relating to old uncodified Hindu law, determining persons governed by Hindu law and stating persons to whom Hindu law has been held not to be applicable. The Hindu law applies—

(i) not only to Hindus by birth, but also to Hindus by religion, i.e. converts to Hinduism (o);

In a very recent decision the Supreme Court (*o*1) pointed out that a person may be a Hindu by birth or by conversion. A mere theorctical allegiance to the Hindu faith

---

(o) Abraham v. Abraham (1863) 9 M.I.A. 195, 243; Jowala v. Dharum (1866) 10 M.I.A. 511, 537; Dagree v. Pacotti (1875) 19 Bom. 783, 788; In re Joseph Vadiar of Nazareth (1872) 7 Mad. H.C. 121; Morarji v. Administrator-General (1929) 52 Mad. 160, 111 I.C. 364 ('28) A.M. 1279; Sahdeo Narain v. Kusum Kumari (1922) 50 I.A. 58, 2 Pat. 230, 71 I.C. 769 ('23) A.P.C. 21; Palaniappa Chettiar v. Alagan Chetti (1921) 48 I.A. 539, 44 Mad. 740, 64 I.C. 439, ('22) A.P.C. 228; Ganesh Mahto v. Shib Charan Mahata (1932) 11 Patna 139, 133 I.C. 165. ('31) A.P. 305 following (1928) 51 Mad. 1 (F.B.), 108 I.C. 760, ('28) A.M. 299; Sunder Devi v. Jhaboo Lal ('57) A.A. 215 (inheritance to property of a Muslim woman converted to Hinduism).

(*o*1) Perumal v. Ponnuswami ('71) A.S.C. 2352. In Bhaiya Sher Bahadur v. Ganga Baksh (1913) 36 All. 101, 115-116, 41 I.A. 1, 14, the Privy Council had left this question open.

by a person born in another faith does not convert him into a Hindu, nor is a bare declaration that he is a Hindu sufficient to convert him to Hinduism. But a bona fide intention to be converted to the Hindu faith accompanied by conduct unequivocally expressing that intention may be sufficient evidence of conversion. No formal ceremony of purification is necessary to effectuate conversion.

In a case decided by the Privy Council, Lord Shaw, in delivering the judgment of the Board, said in effect that the expression "Hindu" in the Indian Succession Act included a convert to Hinduism (q).

See § 7(4).

(ii) to illegitimate children where both parents are Hindus (r);

(iii) to illegitimate children where the father is a Christian and the mother a Hindu, and the children are brought up as Hindus. But the Hindu law of coparcenary, which contemplates the father as the head of the family and the sons as coparceners by birth with rights of survivorship, cannot from the very nature of the case apply to such children (s);

(iv) to Jains (t), Buddhists in India, Sikhs (u), and Nambudri Brahmins (v) except so far as such law is varied by custom and to Lingayats who are considered Sudras (w);

(v) to a Hindu by birth who, having renounced Hinduism, has reverted to it after performing the religious rites of expiation and repentance (x). Or even without a formal ritual of reconversion when he was recognised as a Hindu by his community (y);

(vi) to sons of Hindu dancing girls of the Naik caste converted to Mahomedanism, where the sons are taken into the family of the Hindu grandparents and are brought up as Hindus (z);

(vii) to Brahmos (a); to Arya Samajists (b); and to Santhals of Chota Nagpur (c); and also to Santhals of Manbhum (d) except so far as it is not varied by custom; and

---

(q) Kamawati v. Digbijai (1921) 43 All. 525, 533, 48 I.A. 381, 385, 64 I.C. 559, ('22) A. PC. 14.

(r) See Ram Kumari, in the matter of (1891) 18 Cal. 264; Dattatraya Tatya v. Matha Bala (1934) 58 Bom. 119, 149 I.C. 821, ('34) A.B. 36.

(s) Myna Boyee v. Oataram (1861) 8 M.I.A. 400.

(t) Sheo Singh v. Dakho (1878) 1 All. 688, 5 I.A. 87 (adoption); Chotay Lall v. Chunnoo Lall (1878) 4 Cal. 744, 6 I.A. 15 (inheritance): Sheokuarbai v. Jeoraj (1920) 25 C.W.N. 273, 275, 61 I.C. 481 [P.C.]; Rup Chand v. Jambu Parshad (1910) 37 I.A. 93, 6 I.C. 272 (adoption): Bhagvandas v. Rajmal (1873) 10 Bom. H.C. 241, p. 247 (adoption): Thackersey v. Hurbhum (1884) 8 Bom. 432, p. 453 (Jain temple): Parshotam v. Venichand (1921) 45 Bom. 754, 757, 61 I.C. 492, ('21) A.B. 147 (adoption); Gateppa v. Eramma (1927) 50 Mad. 228, 99 I.C. 503, ('27) A.M. 228 [adoption]: Bhikabai v. Manilal (1930) 54 Bom. 780, 128 I.C. 628 ('30) A.B. 517 [alienation by Jain widow]: Jaiwanti v. Anandi Devi (1938) 59 All. 196, 173 I.C. 356, ('38) A.A. 62; Suganchand v. Mangibai (1942) Bom. 467, 44 Bom. L.R. 358, 20 I.C. 759, ('42) A.B. 185.

(u) Rani Bhagwan Koer v. Bose (1903) 31 Cal. 11, 30 I.A. 249; Inder Singh v. Sadhu Singh (1944) 1 Cal. 233. See Bahadursingh v. Dalipsingh ('50) A.M.B. 1.

(v) Vishnu v. Akkamma (1911) 34 Mad. 496, 6 I.C. 583; Narayan Iyer v. Moorthi Kenden (1938) Mad. 897, ('38) A.M. 643; Narayanan Namboori v. K. Ravi Varma ('56) A. Trav.-Co. 74 (Nambudri Malayalam Brahmins in Travancore-Cochin).

(w) Tirkangauda v. Shivappa (1943) Bom. 706, 45 Bom. L.R. 992, ('44) A.B. 40. Also see § 627 post.

(x) Kusum v. Satya (1903) 30 Cal. 999.

(y) Durga Parasada Rao v. Sudarsanaswami ('40) A.M. 513. Also see Rajagopal v. Armugam ('69) A.S.C. 101.

(z) Ram Pergash v. Mussammat Dahan Bibi (1924) 3 Pat. 152, 78 I.C. 749, ('24) A.P. 420.

(a) In the goods of Jnanendra Nath Roy, (1922) 49 Cal. 1069.

(b) Mst. Suraj v. Attar (1922) 1 Pat. 706, 713-714, 67 I.C. 550, ('22) A.P. 378; Iswar Radhakanta v. Khetra ('49) A.C. 253; Shyamsunder v. Shankar Deo ('60) A. Mys. 27.

(c) Chunka v. Bhabani (1945) 24 Pat. 727. Also see Langa v. Jiba cited in the f.n. below.

(d) Budhu v. Dukhan ('56) A.P. 123; Langa v. Jiba ('71) A. Pat. 185 (Aboriginal Santhals of village Kutchai are Hindus).

(viii) to Hindus who made a declaration that they were not Hindus for the purpose of the Special Marriage Act, 1872 (e). Also see § 7 (4) infra.

Many persons of aboriginal tribes and origins have been absorbed in the Hindu faith and have come under the sway of Hindu law. Naiks in Madhya Pradesh who were originally of Gond origin are governed by Hindu law (f). Rajgonds are not Hindus but the presumption is that they are governed by Hindu law unless the contrary is shown (g). That presumption was applied by the Nagpur High Court in the undermentioned case (h).

As to Kurmi Mahtons of Chota Nagpur see Mohari Mahto v. Mokaram Mahto ('63) A.A.P. 466 and decisions cited there.

A person who is born a Hindu and has not renounced the Hindu religion, does not cease to be a Hindu merely because he departs from the standard of orthodoxy in matters of diet and ceremonial observances (i). The acceptance of the "Granth Sahib" by the Udassis (a Schismatic sect of Sikhs who remained within the fold of Hinduism) is in no way inconsistent with their continuing as Hindus (j). A Hindu does not by becoming a Jati Vaishnava (a sect in Bengal not recognising the caste system) cease to be a Hindu (k).

In the undermentioned case (*k*1) the Supreme Court explained who are Hindus and stated the broad features of Hindu religion (Swaminarayan Sect).

7. Persons to whom Hindu Law does not apply.—The Hindu law does not apply—

(1) to the illegitimate children of a Hindu father by a Christian mother who are brought up as Christians (l), or to illegitimate children of a Hindu father by a Mahomedan mother (m);

These are not Hindus either by birth or by religion.

In § 6, cls. (ii) and (iii), the mother is a Hindu, but not so here.

(2) to the Hindu converts to Christianity. Succession to the estate of a Hindu convert to Christianity who dies a Christian and intestate is governed by the Indian Succession Act, 1865, now the Indian Succession Act, 1925. A person ceasing to be a Hindu in religion cannot since the passing of the Act of 1865 elect to continue to be bound by the Hindu law in the matter of succession (n);

Native Christians.—In cases before the Indian Succession Act, 1865, it was held by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council that a Hindu convert to Christianity may, if he thinks fit, continue to be bound by Hindu law, although he has renounced the Hindu religion (o), but these decisions are no longer good law. See the Indian Succession Act, 1925, s. 58.

It is not settled whether the Hindu rule of survivorship is applicable to the families of Native Christians who continue to be joint even after conversion. According to the

---

(e) Vidyagavri v. Narandas ('28) A.B. 74; Punyabrata Das v. Monmohan Ray ('34) A.P. 427; Thukru Bai v. Attavar (1935) 58 Mad. 1004, ('35) A.M. 653.

(f) Nagi v. Rajkunwar ('56) A.N. 138. Also see Rafail Uraon v. Baiha Uraon ('57) A.P. 70.

(g) Dashrath Prasad v. Lallosingh ('51) A.N. 343, (1951) Nag. 873.

(h) Raja Chattar Singh v. Diwan Roshan Singh (1946) Nag. 159, ('46) A.N. 277.

(i) Rani Bhagwan Koer v. Bose (1903) 31 Cal. 11, 30 I.A. 249; Ma Yait v. Maung Chit (1921) 49 Cal. 310, 321, 48 I.A. 553, 562, 66 I.C. 609, ('22) A. PC. 197; Ishwari Prashad v. Rai Hari Prashad (1927) 6 Pat. 506, 106 I.C. 620, ('27) A.P. 145 (Kayasthas of Bihar).

(f) Mahant Basant v. Hem Singh (1926) 7 Lah. 275, 94 I.C. 695 ('26) A.L. 100.

(k) Nalinaksha v. Rajanikanta (1931) 58 Cal. 1392, 134 I.C. 1272, ('31) A.C. 741.

(*k*1) Yagnapurushdasji v. Muldas ('66) A.S.C. 1119.

(l) Lingappa v. Esudasan (1904) 27 Mad. 13 (maintenance).

(m) Charanjit Singh v. Amir Ali Khan (1921) 2 Lah. 243, 248, 64 I.C. 892, ('21) A.L. 121.

(n) Kamawati v. Digbijai Singh (1921) 43 All. 525, 48 I.A. 381, 64 I.C. 559, ('22) A. PC. 14; Dagree v. Pacotti (1895) 19 Bom. 783.

(o) Abraham v. Abraham (1963) 9 M.I.A. 195, 241; Sri Gajapathi v. Gajapathi (1870) 14 W.R. (P.C.) 33.

Madras High Court, it is not applicable to such families (q), according to the Bombay High Court, it is (r). Two Hindu brothers A and B constituting a joint Hindu family, become converts to Christianity and continue to be joint after their conversion. B dies leaving a widow. According to the Madras High Court, B's one-half share in the property should go to his heirs under the Indian Succession Act, 1925. According to the Bombay High Court, B's one-half share should go to A by survivorship. The decision of the latter Court proceeds on the ground that the Indian Succession Act, 1925, deals with inheritance and does not affect rights of coparcenership as between those to whom it applies.

Custom: Tamil Vanniya Christians.—The Tamil Vanniya Christians of Chittur Taluk are by custom governed by the rules of Hindu law in matters of inheritance and succession. The Mitakshara School of Hindu law applies to them in these matters and a son of a member of this community gets by birth an interest in ancestral property, owned by the father. In a recent decision (*r*1) the Supreme Court held that the doctrine of pious obligation applies to this community and the son is bound to discharge his father's debts not tainted by illegality or immorality. The doctrine it was observed is not opposed to any principle of Christianity.

(3) to converts from the Hindu to the Mahomedan faith.

The succession to the estate of a convert from the Hindu to the Mahomedan faith is governed by the Mahomedan, and not by the Hindu law. Khojas and Cutchi Memons, who are converts from Hinduism to Mahomedanism, and who, in accordance with their customs have hitherto been governed by the Hindu law of inheritance and succession will hereafter be governed by the Muslim personal law except where the questions relate to agricultural lands [vide Act XXVI of 1937 and Mulla's Mahomedan Law, 15th Edition, p. 20].

(4) The Hindu law of succession does not apply to the property of any person professing the Hindu, Sikh, or Jain, religion who married under the Special Marriage Act III of 1872 or the property of the issue of such marriage. These are governed by secs. 32 to 48 of the Indian Succession Act. Also see s. 21 of the Special Marriage Act, 1954 and s. 5(1) of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956.

(q) Tellis v. Saldanha (1887) 10 Mad. 69. See also Jogi Reddi v. Chinnabbi Reddi (1929) 56 I.A. 6, 9-11, 52 Mad. 83, 87-90, 114 I.C. 5, ('29) A. PC. 13.

(r) Francis Ghosal v. Gabri Ghosal (1907) 31 Bom. 25. See Kulada v. Haripada (1913) 40 Cal. 407, 417-418, 17 I.C. 257.

(*r*1) Anthonyswamy v. Chinaswamy ('70) A.S.C. 223.

CHAPTER II

SOURCES OF HINDU LAW

Texts.—1. "The Veda, the Smriti, the approved usage, and what is agreeable to one's soul [or good conscience] the wise have declared to be the quadruple direct evidence of Dharma [law]."—Manu, ii, 12.

2. "The Sruti, the Smriti, the approved usage, what is agreeable to one's soul [or good conscience] and desire sprung from due deliberation, are ordained the foundation of Dharma [law]."—Yajnavalkya, i. 7.

3. "Whatever customs, practices and family usages prevail in a country shall be preserved intact, when it comes under subjection by (conquest)."—Yajnavalkya, i. 343.

4. "If any usage required by utility is established in a locality [which is contrary to the written text of law] it should be practised therein only, but not in any other district. Whatever customary law is prevalent in a district, in a city, in a town or in a village, or among the learned, the said law [though contrary to the Smritis] must not be disturbed." Devala, cited in the Parashara Madhaviya.

8. Sources of Hindu Law.—The three main sources of Hindu dharma or law are (1) the Sruti, (2) the Smriti, and (3) Custom.

A practical division of the sources of Hindu law would be (1) Original texts of the Dharmashastras: (2) Commentaries and Digests and (3) Custom. Hindu law at the present day is the result of many ingredients. To these main sources must be added for all practical purposes the auxiliary indice, justice, equity and good conscience: Judicial decisions: and legislative enactments modifying or abrogating previously existing law. The sources of Hindu law have been considered in the Introduction added to this work.

(1) "Sruti" means, literally, that which was heard. The Srutis are believed to contain the very words of the deity, and they include the four Vedas, but they contain very little of law.

(2) "Smriti" means, literally, that which was remembered. It is the recollection handed down by the Rishis, or sages of antiquity, of the precepts of God. The Smritis constitute the principal source of law. The term Dharmashastra, literally, teacher of law, comprehends both Srutis and Smritis, but it is often used to designate the Smritis alone.

The three principal Smritis are—

(i) The Code or Institutes of Manu, compiled in about 200 B.C.(s).

(ii) The Code or Institutes of Yajnavalkya, compiled in about A.D. 100 (t). Mitakshara is the leading commentary upon this Code (u).

(iii) The Code or Institutes of Narada, compiled in about A.D. 200 (v).

(3) Custom. In Hindu law custom has proprio vigore the efficacy of law. It is not merely an adjunct of ordinary law but a constituent part of it (w).

9. Commentaries as a source of law.—The law of the Smritis was empiric and progressive and in course of time several Commentaries and Digests (Nibandhas) were written on it (x). The authority of the several commentators varied in different districts, and thus arose the schools of law which are operative in different parts of India.

---

(s) See p. 20, supra.
(t) See pp. 22-23, supra.
(u) see p. 46, supra.
(v) See p. 24, supra.
(w) See Introduction pp. 60-61, supra.
(x) See Introduction p. 43, supra.

Though the commentators professed to interpret the law laid down in the Smritis, in fact, they recited the customs and usages which they found in vogue around them (a) and on this ground their interpretations have been accepted as authoritative. It is therefore the duty of Indian Courts to recognize the rules of law enunciated in the commentaries, even if they appear to proceed on a wrong interpretation of the Smritis, the reason being that under the Hindu system of law, "clear proof of usage will outweigh the written text of the law (b)."

10. Judicial decisions as a source of law.—Judicial decisions on Hindu law are sometimes spoken of as a source of law (c). Almost all the important points of Hindu law are now to be found in the law reports, and to this extent it may be said that the decisions on Hindu law have superseded the commentaries. The decisions of the Privy Council and the Supreme Court are binding on all the Courts of India including the High Courts; but the decisions of any one High Court are not binding on any other High Court, though they are binding on the Courts subordinate thereto (d).

The Hindu law was at first administered by the English Judges with the assistance of Hindu Pundits. The institution of Pundits, as official referees of the Courts was abolished in the year 1868.

11. Mitakshara and Dayabhaga school.—(1) "The remoter sources of the Hindu law [that is, Smritis] are common to all the different schools. The process by which those schools have been developed seems to have been of this kind. Works universally or very generally received became the subject of subsequent commentaries. The commentator put his own gloss on the ancient text; and his authority having been received in one and rejected in another part of India, schools with conflicting doctrines arose" (e).

(2) Properly speaking, there are only two schools of law, namely, the Mitakshara school and the Dayabhaga school. The Dayabhaga school prevails in Bengal; the Mitakshara school prevails in other parts of India.

(3) The Mitakshara is a running commentary on the Code of Yajnavalkya. It was written by Vijnaneswara in the latter part of the eleventh century (f). The Dayabhaga is not a commentary on any particular Code, but purports to be a digest of all the Codes. It was written by Jimutavahana who flourished in about the beginning of the twelfth century (g). Attention has been drawn in the Introduction to the other works which are accepted as authoritative in Bengal (h).

(4) The Mitakshara is of supreme authority throughout India except in Bengal. The Dayabhaga is of supreme authority in Bengal. But even in Bengal the Mitakshara is still regarded as a very high authority on all questions in respect of which there is no express conflict between it and the Dayabhaga and the other works prevalent there (i). The Dayabhaga may also be

---

(a) Keshao Rao v. Sadasheorao (1938) Nag. 469, ('38) A.N. 163.
(b) See p. 59, supra.
(c) See pp. 63, 64, supra.
(d) Korban Ally v. Sharoda (1884) 10 Cal. 82; Balaji v. Sakharam (1893) 17 Bom. 555. Also see Amritlal v. Jayantilal ('60) A.S.C. 964; Dudh Nath v. Sat Narain ('66) A.A. 315 (F.B.).
(e) Collector of Madura v. Moottoo Ramalinga (1868) 12 M.I.A. 397, 435. See p. 47, supra.
(f) See p. 46, supra.
(g) See p. 56, supra.
(h) See pp. 57-58, supra.
(i) Bhagwandeen v. Myna Bace (1867) 11 M.I.A. 487, 507-508; Collector of Madura v. Moottoo Ramalinga (1868) 12 M.I.A. 397, 435; Akshay v. Hari Das (1908) 35 Cal. 721.

referred to in a Mitakshara case on points on which the latter treatise is silent (j).

(5) It is said that the Mitakshara school is the orthodox school, and the Dayabhaga school is the reformed school, of Hindu law. The Dayabhaga school is also called the Bengal school of Hindu law.

(6) The Bengal school differs from the Mitakshara school in two main particulars, namely, the law of inheritance and the joint family system.

12. Sub-divisions of Mitakshara school.—(1) The Mitakshara school is sub-divided into four minor schools; these differ between themselves in some matters of detail relating particularly to adoption and inheritance. All these schools acknowledge the supreme authority of the Mitakshara, but they give preference to certain treatises and to commentaries which control certain passages of the Mitakshara. This accounts for the differences between those schools (k).

The sub-schools and the principal works which supplement the Mitakshara in each sub-school are mentioned below:—

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Benares school | .. | Viramitrodaya (l).Nirnayasindhu (m). |
| Mithila school | .. | Vivada Chintamani (n).Vivada Ratnakara (o).Madanaparijata (p). |
| Maharashtra or Bombay school [Western India] | | Vyavahara Mayukha (q).Viramitrodaya.Nirnayasindhu. |
| Dravida or Madras school [Southern India] | .. | Smriti Chandrika (r).Parashara Madhaviya (s).Saraswati Vilasa (t).Vyavahara Nirnaya (u). |

(2) As regards authorities in Western India the Mitakshara ranks first and paramount in the Maharashtra, Northern Kanara and the Ratnagiri District. In Gujerat, the Island of Bombay and the North Konkan, the Mayukha is considered as the overruling authority where there is a difference of opinion between it and the Mitakshara (v).

The principle, however, adopted by the High Court of Bombay, and sanctioned by the Privy Council, is to construe the two works so as to harmonize them with each other

---

(f) Rai Bishenchand v. Asmaida Koer (1884) 6 All. 560, 11 I.A. 164, 179; Mahabir Prasad v. Raj Bahadur Singh (1943) 18 Luck. 585, 203 I.C. 244, ('43) A.O. 27.

(k) (1867) 11 M.I.A. 487, 507-508, supra.

(l) See p. 48, supra.

(m) See p. 50, supra.

(n) See p. 50, supra.

(o) See p. 51, supra.

(p) See p. 51, supra.

(q) See p. 52, supra.

(r) See p. 54, supra.

(s) See p. 55, supra.

(t) See p. 55, supra.

(u) See p. 56, supra.

(v) Krishnaji v. Pandurang (1875) 12 Bom. H.C. 65; Lallubhai v. Mankuvarbai (1878) 2 Bom. 388, 418; Sakharam v. Sitabai (1879) 3 Bom. 353, 365; Balkrishna v. Lakshman (1890) 14 Bom. 605; Jankibai v. Sundra (1890) 14 Bom. 612 [Mahad is not within the Northern Konkan]; Narhar v. Bhau (1916) 40 Bom. 621, 36 I.C. 539, ('16) A.B. 206.

wherever and so far as that is reasonably possible (w). In Poona, Ahmednagar, and Khandesh the Mayukha is considered to be of equal authority with the Mitakshara, but not capable of overruling it as in Gujerat, the Island of Bombay and the North Konkan (x).

13. Works on adoption.—The two special works on adoption are the Dattaka Mimansa and the Dattaka Chandrika. Generally speaking they are equally respected throughout India, but where they differ the Dattaka Mimansa is preferred in Mithila and Benares, and the Dattaka Chandrika in Bengal (y).

As to these two works their Lordships of the Privy Council said in Balusu v. Balusu (z): "Both works have had a high place in the estimation of Hindu lawyers in all parts of India, and having had the advantage of being translated into English at a comparatively early period, have increased their authority during the British rule. Their Lordships cannot concur with Mr. Knox, J., in saying that their authority is open to examination, explanation, criticism, adoption, or rejection like any scientific treatises on European jurisprudence. Such treatment would not allow for this effect, which long acceptance of written opinions has upon social customs, and it would probably disturb recognised law and settled arrangements. But, so far as saying that caution is required in accepting their glosses where they deviate from or add to the Smritis, their Lordships are prepared to concur with the learned Judge."

In Abhiraj Kuer v. Debendra Singh (*z*1) the Supreme Court examined the text of Nandapandita in Dattaka Mimansa "Viruddha sambandho putro varjaneeyah" and held that it was merely recommendatory. Reference may be made to § 480(3).

As to the Dattaka Chandrika it may be said that in Bengal there is a tradition that it is a literary forgery by Raghumani Vidayabhushana who was the Pundit of Colebrooke, the celebrated English translator of numerous Sanskrit works on Hindu law. It is said that it was written to help a claim set up by an adopted son to a Raj in Bengal.

13A. Personal law: Rule of presumption.—A Hindu family residing in a particular state of India is presumed to be governed by the law of the place in which it resides (a). The mere transfer, however, of a district to another presidency or state for administrative purposes is not sufficient to affect the personal law of the residents in that district, unless and until it is shown in the case of any resident there that he had intended to change and has in fact changed his personal law (b).

The rule that a Hindu family residing in a particular state is prima facie governed by the law of that place is not founded on any doctrine affecting lex loci. The rule rests on personal law and status. In general it may be

---

(w) Per Telang, J., in Gojabai v. Shrimant Shahjirao (1893) 17 Bom. 114, 118, approved in Bai Kesserbai v. Hunsraj (1906) 30 Bom. 431, 442, 33 I.A. 176; Bhagwan v. Warubai (1908) 32 Bom. 300, 312; Mahabir Prasad v. Raj Bahadur Singh (1943) 18 Luck. 585, 203 I.C. 244, ('43) A.O. 27.

(x) Bhagirthibai v. Kahnujirao (1887) 11 Bom. 285, 294 [F.B.]; Bhaskar v. Laxmibai ('53) A.N. 326 (Kunbis from Maharashtra); Kanaiyalal v. Dhanji ('52) A. Kutch 18 (Kutch was regarded as part of Bombay); Kammathi v. Padmavathi ('52) A. Trav.-Co. 501 (Gowda Saraswatha Brahmins of Travancore).

(y) Balusu v. Balusu (1899) 22 Mad. 398. 411-412, 26 I.A. 113, 131, 132; Radha Mohan v. Hardai Bibi (1898) 21 All. 460, 465-466; Bhagwan Singh v. Bhagwan Singh (1898) 21 All. 412, 419, 26 I.A. 153, 161; Puttu Lal v. Parbati Kunwar (1915) 37 All, 359, 367, 42 I.A. 155, 161, 29 I.C. 617, ('15) A. PC. 15; Collector of Madura v. Moottoo Ramalinga (1868) 12 M.I.A. 397, 437; Laxman v. Bayabai (1953) Nag. 656, ('55) A.N. 241; Anandi Lal v. Onkar ('60) A. Raj. 251, 10 Raj. 160; Bodo v. Dondo ('52) A. Orissa 307 (Oriyas from Madras area).

(z) (1899) 22 Mad. 398, 411-412, 26 I.A. 113, 131-132.

(*z*1) ('62) A. S.C. 351. Also see Vallabhalalji v. Mahalaxmi Bahuji ('62) A. S.C. 356, 64 Bom. L.R. 433.

(a) Ram Das v. Chandra (1893) 20 Cal. 409; Chandrakanto v. Ram Mohini ('56) A.C. 577.

(b) Somasekhara v. Mahadeva ('36) A.P.C. 18, 38 Bom. L.R. 317, 159 I.C. 1079. In appeal from (1930) 53 Mad. 297, ('30) A.M. 496; Chennamma v. Srinivas ('71) A. Mys. 28.

said that in matters of status there is no lex loci in India and every person is governed by the law of his personal status (c).

14. Migration and school of law.—(1) Where a Hindu family migrates from one state to another, the presumption is that it carries with it its personal law, that is, the laws and customs as to succession and family relations prevailing in the state from which it came. But this presumption may be rebutted by showing that the family has adopted the law and usages of the province to which it has migrated (d).

(2) It is the law existing at the time of migration which continues to govern the migrated members until it is renounced. It is the law in force in the state at the time of their leaving it which continues to govern persons who have migrated to another state. Thus they are affected by decisions of the Courts of their state of origin which declare the correct law of the state up to the time of their leaving it, but not by customs incorporated in its law after they have left it (e).

Illustrations

(1) A Hindu family migrates from the North-Western Provinces where the Mitakshara law prevails to Bengal where the Dayabhaga law prevails. The presumption is that it continues to be governed by the Mitakshara law, and this presumption may be supported by previous instances of succession in the family according to the Mitakshara law after its migration and by evidence relating to ceremonies performed in the family at marriages, births and sradhas, showing that the family continued to be governed by the Mitakshara law after its migration: Parbati v. Jagadis (1902) 29 Cal. 433, 452, 29 I.A. 82. If the migration is proved, and it is also proved that the family followed the customs of the Mitakshara school, it is not necessary to prove also that the family immigrated to Bengal after the establishment of the Dayabhaga system of law (f).

(2) A joint Hindu family, consisting of two brothers A and B, migrates from the N.W.P. to Bengal. A dies leaving a widow C. The presumption being that this family continues to be governed by the Mitakshara law, the joint property will, on A's death, pass to his surviving brother B; C will be entitled to maintenance only. But if the family had renounced the Mitakshara law, and adopted the Dayabhaga law, A's share would pass to his widow C: Parbati v. Jagadis (1902) 29 Cal. 433, 29 I.A. 82.

---

(c) Nataraja Pillai v. Subbaraya Chettiar, 77 I.A. 33, (1950) Mad. 862, ('50) P.C. 34, (1950) 52 Bom. L.R. 474; Vasant Atmaram v. Dattoba (1955) 57 Bom. L.R. 1026, I.L.R. (1955) Bom. 1021 (1956) A.B. 49; Udebhan v. Vikram ('57) A. Madh. Pra. 175; Chandrakanto v. Ram Mohini, supra; Duggamma v. Ganeshayya ('65) A. Mys. 97.

(d) Srimati Parbati v. Jagadis (1902) 29 Cal. 433, 29 I.A. 82; Soorendranath v. Heeramonee (1869) 12 M.I.A. 81; Arjun Singh v. Virendra ('71) A.A. 29; Govind v. Radha (1909) 31 All. 477, 3 I.C. 563; Jagannath v. Narayan (1910) 34 Bom. 553, 7 I.C. 459; Sarada Prasanna v. Umakanta (1923) 50 Cal. 370, 77 I.C. 450, ('23) A.C. 485; Jagadamba v. Satyanarayana (1961) Mad. 841, (1961) 2 Mad. L.J. 297. See also Mailathi v. Subbaraya (1901) 24 Mad. 650 (migration by a Hindu widow from French India to British India); Kulada v. Haripada (1913) 40 Cal. 407, 17 I.C. 257; Sukhbir Singh v. Mangeisar Rao (1927) 49 All. 302, 100 I.C. 778 ('27) A.A. 252; Babu Motising v. Durgabai (1929) 53 Bom. 242, 114 I.C. 379, ('29) A.B. 57; Basant Kumar Basu v. Ramshanker Ray (1932) 59 Cal. 859, 138 I.C. 882; Bijay Lal v. Bhubaneswar ('63) A. Cal. 18; Suganchand v. Mangibai (1942) Bom. 467, 201 I.C. 759, ('42) A.B. 185; Kachrulal v. Nandlal I.L.R. (1955) Nag. 618; Naya v. Motilal ('59) A. Bom. 282; (1959) Bom. 727; 60 Bom. L.R. 1154; Udebhan v. Vikram ('57) A. Madh. Pra. 175 (Maharashtrian Telis in Madhya Pradesh, held governed by Mayukha); Anjubai v. Hemchandrarao ('60) A. Madh. Pra. 382 (Marathas settled in Chattisgath in M.P. held governed by Bombay School). Sitabai v. Tuljabai ('63) A.M.P. 322 (Leva Patidar Kulmees from Gujerat); Gigi v. Panna ('56) A. Assam 100 (custom regarding matters of adoption among Marwalis); Laxman v. Gangabai ('55) A. Madh. Bha. 138 (Maharashtrian Brahmins resident in Malwa); Brindaban v. Chandubala, I.L.R. (1951) 2 Cal. 225; Nathulal v. Rangoba, I.L.R. (1952) Nag. 597; Pralhad v. Damodhar ('38) A.B. 79 (Agarwals in Berar). Hirabai v. Bhagirathibai ('69) A.M.P. 241 (Maharashtrian Mahars living in Nagpur and Berar).

(e) Balwant Rao v. Baji Rao (1920) 47 I.A. 213, 48 Cal. 30, 57 I.C. 545, ('21) A.PC. 59; Saraswati v. Debendra ('56) A.P. 340 (migration before development of law in the State of origin); Rukhmabai v. Ramratan (1951) Nag. 367, ('51) A.N. 350; Pakula Majhi v. Subhdra ('69) A. Orissa 3.

(f) Ramesh Chandra v. Mohammed (1923) 50 Cal. 898, 79 I.C. 309, ('24) A.C. 383.

A Maharashtrian family residing in Chhatisgarh, in Central Provinces, is presumed to have come as immigrant and if it retains its individuality as Maharashtrian, is governed by the Bombay interpretation of the Mitakshara: Keshao Rao v. Sadasheorao (1938) Nag. 469, ('38) A.N. 163. Similarly, a Rajput family which had migrated to Berar, and were proved to have retained its old manners and customs were held to be governed by the Benares and not the Bombay School of Hindu law (g).

In Abdurahim v. Halimabai (h), their Lordships of the Privy Council said: "Where a Hindu family migrates from one part of India to another prima facie they carry with them their personal law, and, if they are alleged to have become subject to a new local custom, this new custom must be affirmatively proved to have been adopted, but when such a family emigrate [from India] to another country [East Africa], and, being themselves Mahomedans [e.g., Memons], settle among Mahomedans, the presumption that they have accepted the law of the people whom they have joined seems to their Lordships to be one that should be much more readily made. ... The analogy is that of a change of domicile on settling in a new country rather than the analogy of a change of custom on migration within India." "Of course, if nothing is known about a man except that he lived in a certain place, it will be assumed that his personal law is the law which prevails in that place. In that sense only is domicile of importance" (i).

Clause (2).—"The law must be the family law as it was when they left. A judgment declaratory of law as having always been would bind: but it would be a different thing if subsequent customs became incorporated in the law" (j).

Raghuvamshis of Nandurbar.—These migrated from Oudh and settled in Khandesh and they are governed by the Benares school of Hindu law (k).

Hindus of North Canara.—They are governed by the Bombay and not the Madras School of Hindu law (l). Komtis of Chanda District are governed by the Mitakshara and not the Madras school of law (m).

Yelmis of Berar are governed by the Madras school of law (n).

15. Custom as a source of law.—Custom is one of the three sources of Hindu law. When there is a conflict between a custom and a text of the Smritis, the custom overrides the text: "Under the Hindu system of law, clear proof of usage will outweigh the written text of the law" (o).

Reference may be made to the Introduction pp. 59-61 supra.

16. Three kinds of customs.—The Hindu customs recognized by the Courts of British India are—(1) local, (2) class, and (3) family customs.

17. Essentials of a valid custom.—(1) A custom is a rule which in a particular family or a particular class or community or in a particular district, has from long usage obtained the force of law. It must be ancient, certain, and reasonable, and being in derogation of the general rules of law, must be construed strictly (p). It is further essential that it should be established to be so by clear and unambiguous evidence, for it is only by means of such evi-

---

(g) Lalsingh v. Vithal Singh (1950) Nag. 62 ('50) A.N. 62. See f.n. (d) above.

(h) (1916) 43 I.A. 35, 41, 18 Bom. L.R. 635, 32 I.C. 413, ('15) A.PC. 86. See also Ma Yait v. Maung Chit Maung (1921) 49 Cal. 310, 48 I.A. 553, 564, 66 I.C. 609, ('22) A.PC. 197.

(i) Balwant Rao v. Baji Rao (1920) 47 I.A. 213, 219, 48 Cal. 30, 39, 57 I.C. 545, ('21) A.PC. 59; Tula Ram v. Shyam (1927) 49 All. 848, 86 I.C. 729, ('25) A.A. 648. See f.n. (e) above.

(j) (1920) 47 I.A. 213, 222, 48 Cal. 30, 43, 57 I.C. 545, ('21) A.PC. 59, supra.

(k) Babu Motising v. Durgabai (1929) 53 Bom. 242, 114 I.C. 379, ('29) A.B. 57.

(l) Venkanna Narasinha v. Laxmi ('51) A.B. 57; Manjapa v. Lakshmi (1890) 15 Bom. 234; Mahableshwar v. Durgabai (1896) 22 Bom. 199; Shantaram v. Krishna (1947) Bom. 798, Contra Dattatraya v. Laxman (1941) 44 Bom. L.R. 527; Shantaram v. Mahabaleswar (1947) 49 Bom. L.R. 764.

(m) Ramlu v. Vithal (1947) Nag. 267.

(n) Mahadeo v. Vyankammabai (1947) Nag. 781.

(o) Collector of Madura v. Moottoo Ramalinga (1868) 12 M.I.A. 397, 436; Vannia Kone v. Vennichi Ammal (1928) 51 Mad. 1, 108 I.C. 760, ('28) A.M. 299.

(p) Hurpurshad v. Sheo Dyal (1876) 3 I.A. 259, 285.

dence that the Courts can be assured of its existence and of the fact that it possesses the conditions of antiquity and certainty on which alone its legal title to recognition depends (q). It must not be opposed to morality or public policy and it must not be expressly forbidden by the legislature (r). It must not be in derogation of the fundamental rights of a citizen to hold and dispose of property by absolutely prohibiting alienation of property even after actual division (*r*1). Where the evidence shows that the custom alleged was not followed in numerous instances, the custom could not be held to be proved (s). A custom derives its force from the fact that it has, from long usage, obtained the force of law. It must be ancient; but it is not of the essence of this rule that its antiquity must in every case be carried back to a period beyond the memory of man. All that is necessary to prove is that the usage has been acted upon in practice for such a long period and with such invariability as to show that it has, by common consent, been submitted to as the established governing rule of a particular locality (t).

(2) It is incumbent on a party setting up a custom to allege and prove the custom on which he relies. Custom cannot be extended by analogy. It must be established inductively and not by a priori methods. Custom cannot be a matter of mere theory but must always be a matter of fact and one custom cannot be deduced from another (u). It is well established law that custom cannot be enlarged by parity of reasoning since it is the usage that makes the law and not the reason of the thing (v).

(3) Where the proof of a custom rests upon a limited number of instances of a comparatively recent date, the Court may hold the custom proved so as to bind the parties to the suit and those claiming through and under them; but the decision would not in that case be a satisfactory precedent if in any future suit between other parties fuller evidence with regard to the alleged custom should be forthcoming (w). A judgment relating to the existence of a custom is admissible to corroborate the evidence adduced to prove such custom in another case (x). Where, however, a custom is repeatedly brought to the notice of the Courts, the Courts, may hold that the custom was

---

(q) Ramalakshmi v. Sivanantha (1872) 14 M.I.A. 570, 585-586; Siromani v. Hemkumar ('68) A.S.C. 1299; Pushpavathi v. Visweswar ('54) A.S.C. 118. See as to evidence of custom, Gopalayyan v. Raghupatiayyan (1873) 7 Mad. H.C. 250; Mirabivi v. Vellayanna (1885) 8 Mad. 464; Harnabah v. Mandil (1900) 27 Cal. 379; Rup Chand v. Jambu Parsad (1910) 32 All. 247, 252, 37 I.A. 93, 6 I.C. 272; Abdul Hussein Khan v. Bibi Sona Dero (1918) 45 Cal. 450, 45 I.A. 10, 43 I.C. 306, ('17) A.PC. 181; Ram Narain v. Har Narinjan Kaur (1923) 4 Lah. 297, 76 I.C. 535, ('24) A.L. 116; Vannia Kone v. Vannichi Ammal (1928) 51 Mad. 1, 108 I.C. 760, ('28) A.M. 299; Bhikabai v. Manilal (1930) 54 Bom. 780, 128 I.C. 628, ('30) A.B. 517; Gulam Chand v. Manni Lal (1941) 16 Luck. 302, 192 I.C. 643, ('41) A.O. 230; Tulasiram v. Ramprasanna ('56) A. Orissa 41; Subramanian v. Kumarappa ('55) A.M. 144, (1955) 1 M.L.J. 355. Narayani Amma v. Sankara Pillai ('61) A. Kerala 149 (F.B.), (1960) Ker. 1366.

(r) Vannia Kone v. Vannichi Ammal, supra; Balusami v. Balakrishna ('57) A.M. 97.

(*r*1) Sheikriyammada Koya v. Administrator ('67) A. Ker. 259 (custom prohibiting alienation even after actual division among tavazhis of a tarwad).

(s) Ishwarbai v. Bhagwandas ('50) A.S. 26.

(t) Gokal Chand v. Parvin Kumari, A.I.R. (1952) S.C. 231, 234, (1952) S.C.R. 825; Subhani v. Nawab (1941) 68 I.A. 1, (1941) Lah. 154, 193 I.C. 436, ('41) A.PC. 21, 32.

(u) Saraswathi v. Jagadambal (1953) S.C.R. 939, Thankamma v. Narayana Pillai ('58) A. Kerala 35 (F.B.); (1958) Ker. 108.

(v) Venkata Challamma v. Cheekati, A.I.R. (1953) Mad. 571; Deivanai v. Chidambaram Chettiar, A.I.R. (1954) Mad. 657; Narasayya v. Ramachandrayya ('56) A. Andhra 209; Thankamma v. Narayana ('58) A. Kerala 35 (F.B.).

(w) Chiman Lal v. Hari Chand (1913) 40 I.A. 156, 160, 40 Cal. 879, 890, 19 I.C. 669; Rup Chand v. Jambu Parshad (1910) 37 I.A. 93, 104, 32 All. 247, 252, 6 I.C. 272; Parshottam v. Venichand (1921) 45 Bom. 754, 760, 761, 61 I.C. 492, ('21) A.B. 147; Kasiviswanatham v. Somasundaram (1946) 51 C.W.N. 374 (P.C.).

(x) Mst. Kesarbai v. Indarsingh (1945) Nag. 1, 71 I.A. 190.

introduced into the law without the necessity of proof in each individual case (y).

Family Custom.—In respect of family custom, the same principles are applicable, though, of course, in the case of a family custom instances in support of the custom may not be as many or as frequent as in case of customs pertaining to a territory or to the community or to the character of any estate. In dealing with family customs the consensus of opinion among members of the family, the traditional belief entertained by them and acted upon by them, their statements and their conduct would all be relevant and it is only where the relevant evidence of such a character appears to the Court to be sufficient that a specific family custom pleaded in a particular case can be held to be proved (z). Custom binding inheritance in a particular family has long been recognised in India (*z*1).

18. Discontinuance of custom.—A family usage, like a local custom, must be certain, invariable and continuous but it may be discontinued so as to let in the ordinary law. Well established discontinuance of a family usage, whether it has arisen from accidental causes, or has been intentionally brought about by the concurrent will of the family, has the effect of destroying the custom; it is different however, in the case of a local custom which is the lex loci binding on all persons within the local limits in which it prevails (a).

19. Burden of proof of custom.—Where members of a family admittedly governed by the Hindu law set up a custom derogatory to that law, the burden lies upon them to prove the custom (b). In the case of a tribe or family which were not originally Hindus, and have only adopted Hindu usages in part, if it is alleged by any member that a particular Hindu usage has been adopted by the tribe or family, the burden lies upon him to prove the usage (c).

The Kurmi Mahtons of Chota Nagpur, though aboriginals in origin, have accepted the Hindu religion and Hindu social usages. The presumption in law will, therefore, be that they are governed by the Hindu Law of Succession and the party who alleges a special custom tc the contrary has to prove the same (d).

20. Invalid custom.—No custom is valid if it is opposed to morality or public policy or to any express enactment of the Legislature (e).

---

(y) Munnalal v. Rajkumar ('62) A.S.C. 1493, 1498; Rama Rao v. Rajah of Pittapur (1918) 45 I.A. 18, 41 Mad. 778, 47 I.C. 354, ('18) A.PC. 81; Hemendra Nath Roy v. Jnanendra ('35) A.C. 702, 62 Cal. L.J. 49; Banarsi Das v. Sumat Prasad (1936) 58 All. 1019, 164 I.C. 1047, (36) A.A. 641; Suganchand v. Mangibai (1942) Bom. 467, 201 I.C. 759, ('42) A.B. 185.

(z) Pushpavathi Vijayaram v. P. Visweswar ('64) A.S.C. 118, 125, 126.

(*z*1) Abdul Hussein Khan v. Bibi Sona Dero (1917) 45 Cal. 450, 460, 45 I.A. 10, 14, 43 I.C. 306, ('17) A.P.C. 181.

(a) Rajkishen v. Ramjoy (1876) 1 Cal. 186, 196 [P.C.]; Sarabjit v. Indarjit (1905) 27 All. 203; Vannia Kone v. Vannichi Ammal, supra.

(b) Bhagwan Singh v. Bhugwan Singh (1890) 21 All. 412, 423; Chandrika Bakhsh v. Muna Kuar (1902) 24 All. 273, 29 I.A. 70; Rup Chand v. Jambu Parshad (1910) 37 I.A. 93, 32 All. 247, 6 I.C. 272; Sahdeo Narain Deo v. Kusum Kumari (1923) 50 I.A. 59, 62-64, 2 Pat. 230, 71 I.C. 769, ('23) A.PC. 21; Shamlal v. Jiyabal (1943) Nag. 678, ('44) A.N. 62; Indramani Devi v. Raghunath Bhanja ('61) A. Orissa 9.

(c) Fanindra Deb v. Rajeswar (1885) 11 Cal. 463, 476, 12 I.A. 72, 88; Muhammad Ibrahim v. Shaikh Ibrahim (1922) 49 I.A. 119, 45 Mad. 308, 67 I.C. 115, ('22) A.PC. 59. Ramrudharsingh v. Dileshwar Singh ('65) A.P. 117 (F.B.).

(d) Ganesh Mahto v. Shib Charan Mahata (1932) 11 Pat. 139, 133 I.C. 165, ('31) A.P. 305.

(e) Balusami v. Balakrishna ('57) A.M. 97. See f.n. (r) above.

2.24.

CHAPTER III

GENERAL PRINCIPLES OF INHERITANCE

LAW PRIOR TO HINDU SUCCESSION ACT, 1956

Note.—The Hindu Succession Act, 1956, which came into force on 17th June 1956, has now codified the law of intestate succession among Hindus. It has brought about fundamental and radical changes in the law of succession as will be seen from the Introductory Note to the commentary on that Act. Overriding application has been given to that Act and in effect it repeals all previous law relating to intestate succession whether textual, customary or statutory. That Act, however, subject to a few exceptions, is not retroactive in its operation and succession to the property of a male or female Hindu who died intestate before 17th June 1956 is governed by the previous law discussed in Chapters III to XI.

21. Law of inheritance.—The joint and undivided family is the normal condition of Hindu Society. An undivided Hindu family is ordinarily joint, not only in estate, but in food and worship.

The joint family system comes first in historical order. The law of inheritance is of later growth and, in general, applies only to property held in absolute severalty by the last owner, as distinguished from property held by a Mitakshara joint family. But, after the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act XVIII of 1937 came into operation, the interest which a Hindu, governed by any school of law other than the Dayabhaga or by customary law, had in joint family property, devolved upon his death on his widow. And after the coming into force of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, the position is governed by s. 6 of that Act.

22. Two systems of inheritance.—There are two systems of inheritance amongst the Hindus in India namely, the Mitakshara system and the Dayabhaga system. The Dayabhaga system prevails in Bengal; the Mitakshara system in other parts of India. The difference between the two systems arises from the fact that, while the doctrine of religious efficacy is the guiding principle under the Dayabhaga school (§ 79), there is no such definite guiding principle under the Mitakshara school. Sometimes, consanguinity has been regarded as the guiding principle and at other times, religious efficacy (§ 36 et seq).

23. Inheritance to males and females.—(1) Succession to stridhana, that is, property held absolutely by a female, is governed by rules different from those which govern inheritance to the property of a male.

(2) Inheritance to males according to the Mitakshara school is dealt with in Chapter IV and that according to the Dayabhaga school is dealt with in Chapter VII. Succession to stridhana is dealt with in Chapter X.

24. Modes of devolution of property.—(1) The Mitakshara recognizes two modes of devolution of property, namely, survivorship and succession.

The rule of survivorship applies to joint family property; the rules of succession apply to property held in absolute severalty by the last owner.

(2) The Dayabhaga recognizes only one mode of devolution, namely, succession. It does not recognize the rule of survivorship even in the case of joint family property. The reason is that while every member of a Mitakshara joint family has only an undivided interest in the joint property, a member of a Dayabhaga joint family holds his share in quasi-severalty, so that it passes on his death to his heirs as if he was absolutely seized thereof, and not to the surviving coparceners as under the Mitakshara law.

Illustrations

(1) A and B, two Hindu brothers, governed by the Mitakshara school of Hindu law, are members of a joint and undivided family. A dies leaving his brother B and a daughter. A's share in the joint family property will pass to his brother, the surviving coparcener, and not to his daughter. But if A and B were separate, A's property would on his death pass to his daughter as his heir.

(2) A and B, two Hindu brothers, governed by the Dayabhaga school, are members of a joint and undivided family. A dies leaving his brother B and a widow. A's share in the joint family property will pass to his widow as his heir, exactly as if A and B were separate.

25. Female heirs.—According to the Bengal, Benares and Mithila schools, there are only five females who can succeed as heirs to a male, namely, (1) the widow, (2) daughter, (3) mother, (4) father's mother, and (5) father's father's mother. To this list three more were added by the Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act, 1929, namely, the son's daughter, daughter's daughter, and sister. The Madras school recognizes a large number of female heirs including the three mentioned in the Act of 1929, and the Bombay school a still larger number. Under Act XVIII of 1937, the widow of a predeceased son and the widow of a predeceased son of a predeceased son are among the heirs to a Hindu's separate property in all the schools.

26. Limited estate of females.—(1) Males succeeding as heirs, whether to a male or to a female, take absolutely.

(2) Females succeeding as heirs, whether to a male or to a female, take a limited estate in the property inherited by them, except in certain cases in the Bombay State.

If a separated Hindu under the Mitakshara, or any Hindu under the Dayabhaga, dies leaving a widow and a brother, the widow succeeds to the property as his heir. But the widow, being a female, does not take the property absolutely. She is entitled only to the income of the property. She cannot make a gift of the property nor can she sell it unless there is a legal necessity either for the gift or for the sale. On her death, the property will pass not to her heirs, but to the next heir of her husband, that, is his brother.

(3) Section 14 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, subject to certain qualifications, confers full heritable capacity on a female heir in respect of all property acquired by her whether before or after the commencement of that enactment.

27. 'Last full owner' and 'fresh stock of descent.'—The last 'full' owner of property is one who held the property absolutely at the time of his death.

Except in the case of stridhana and in certain cases in the Bombay Presidency, the last full owner is always a male.

It is only a 'full' owner that can become a fresh stock of descent. Since a female cannot (except as aforesaid) be a full owner of property, she cannot become a fresh stock of descent.

Illustrations

A dies leaving a widow, a mother, a brother B, and a paternal uncle C. On A's death, the widow succeeds to his property as his heir. She takes only a limited estate in the property. She is not the full owner of the property, and she cannot, therefore, become a fresh stock of descent. On her death, the property will revert to the next heir of the last full owner (A), that is, the mother. The mother, again, does not take absolutely. She too, therefore, cannot become a fresh stock of descent, and on her death the property will go not to her heirs, but to the next heir of the last owner (A), that is to B, A's brother. But, B, being a male, takes the property absolutely. He becomes full owner of the property and he can, therefore, become a fresh stock of descent. On his death, the property will pass to his own heirs. Thus if he leaves a widow, the property will pass to her, and not to C. But since she takes a limited estate only, the property will, on her death, revert to the next heir of B, the last full owner. If that heir is C, the property will pass to him. C, being a male, will take the property absolutely and on his death it will again pass to his heirs.

A woman's stridhana descends to her own heirs. See Chapter X below.

28. Inheritance never in abeyance.—(1) On the death of a Hindu, the person who is then his nearest heir becomes entitled at once to the property left by him. The right of succession vests in him immediately on the death of the owner of the property. It cannot under any circumstance remain in abeyance (f) in expectation of the birth of a preferable heir, where such heir was not conceived at the time of the owner's death (g).

(2) Where the estate of a Hindu has vested in a person who is his nearest heir at the time of his death, it cannot be divested except either by the birth of a preferable heir such as a son or a daughter (h), who was conceived at the time of his death, or by adoption in certain cases of a son to the deceased (i).

29. Doctrine of representation.—A son, a grandson whose father is dead, and a great-grandson whose father and grandfather are both dead, all succeed simultaneously as one heir to the separate and self-acquired property of their paternal ancestor. The reason is that the grandson represents the rights of his father to a share and the great-grandson represents the rights both of his father and grandfather. This is the only case to which the doctrine of representation applies; it does not apply to any other case (j), e.g., the case

---

(f) Sm. Shakuntala Devi v. Kaushalya Devi (1936) 17 Lah. 356, ('36) A.L. 124, 162 I.C. 718; Srinivasa Rao & Ors. v. Annadhanam Seshacharlu & Ors. (1942) Mad. 42, 198 I.C. 169, ('42) A.M. 106, (1941) 2 M.L.J. 406.

(g) The statement of the law in § 28 was cited with approval by the Supreme Court in Shrinivas v. Narayan (1955) S.C.R. 1, 16, 57 Bom. L.R. 678, ('54) A.S.C. 379.

(h) Bayaya v. Parvateya (1933) 35 Bom. L.R. 118, 144 I.C. 442, ('33) A.B. 126.

(i) Nilcomul v. Jotendro (1881) 7 Cal. 178, 188; Kalidas v. Krishan (1869) 2 Beng. L.R. F.B. 103; Tagore v. Tagore (1872) 9 Beng. L.R. 377, 397; Bamundoss v. Tarinee (1858) 7 M.I.A. 169, 184, 206; Narasimha v. Veerabhadra (1894) 17 Mad. 287; Gordhandas v. Bai Ramcoover (1902) 26 Bom. 449, 467; Hira v. Buta (1919) 1 Lah. L.J. 36, 56 I.C. 256 ('20) A.L. 160; Sooramma v. Venkataratnam (1951) 2 M.L.J. 664, ('52) A.M. 166 (A stillborn son is not regarded as a posthumous son).

(j) See Marudayi v. Doraiswami (1907) 30 Mad. 348; Soshil Chand v. Mangat Ram, I.L.R. (1954) Punj. 449.

of daughter (k). Sons, grandsons, and great-grandsons inheriting together as aforesaid succeed to the estate of the deceased as coparceners [§ 31, ill. (a)]. On a partition among them they take per stirpes and not per capita.

Illustrations

(a) A, a male Hindu, dies leaving a son B, a grandson C, a great grandson D, and a great-great-grandson E, as shown in the following diagram:—

On A's death, his estate will pass to B, C and D as coparceners. If they continue joint, and if any one of them dies without leaving male issue, his share will pass to the survivors (§ 229). If they want to divide the estate, it will be divided into three equal parts, B, C and D, each taking one part. B alone is not entitled to inherit the whole property. C will take the share of his father X, and D, the share of his grandfather $X_1$, E is not entitled to any share at all, for he is more than four degrees removed from A, and the right of representation does not extend beyond four degrees.

(b) A, a male Hindu, dies leaving a son, B, two grandsons C and $C_1$, and three great-grandsons D, $D_1$ and $D_2$ as shown in the following diagram:—

A's property will be divided, if the heirs choose to divide it, into three equal parts of which B will take one, C and $C_1$ will together take one, and D, $D_1$ and $D_2$ will together take one. This is a division of the estate per stirpes. To divide it per capita would be to divide it into 6 parts, and give one part to each of the 6 heirs.

Note.—If B had a son $B_1$, B would take the one-third for himself and $B_1$, and it would become ancestral property in the hands of B, to which $B_1$'s right would attach by birth.

(c) A, a separated male Hindu, dies leaving a brother B, and a nephew C, being the son of a predeceased brother D. On A's death C claims half the estate alleging that had his father D been alive he would have taken one-half and that he (C) is entitled to that half as representing his father. C's claim must be rejected, for the right of representation is confined to the lineal male descendants of the deceased owner as stated in the section, and C is not such a descendant. B therefore is entitled to the whole estate as the nearest heir of A.

30. Spes successionis.—The right of a person to succeed as heir on the death of a Hindu is a mere spes successionis, that is, a bare chance of succession. It is not a vested interest; he cannot, therefore, make a valid transfer of it (l). For the same reason, any agreement entered into by him in respect of the inheritance cannot bind persons who actually inherit when the succession opens (m).

---

(k) Mussammat Lorandi v. Mst. Nihal Devi (1925) 6 Lah. 124, 95 I.C. 701, ('25) A.L. 403: Soshil Chand v. Mangat (1954) Punj. 449, ('54) A. Punj. 26 (widow). The doctrine does not apply to stridhan succession, Krishnaswami v. S. S. Chettiar ('55) A.M. 702, (1955) 2 M.L.J. 541. Nor does it extend to the case of a predeceased legitimate son of a Sudra, Govindarajulu v. Balu Ammal ('52) A.M. 1, (1951) 2 M.L.J. 209.

Illustration

A has a brother B and an uncle C. B has a wife D. It is true that if A died, B would succeed as his nearest heir if he was then alive, but in the lifetime of A, B does not take any interest in A's property. All that he is entitled to is a bare chance of succession. If he predeceases A, the heir on A's death will be C, and not his widow D [see ill. (c) to § 29.] B does not take any interest in A's property in A's lifetime and he cannot transmit to his heir D an interest which had not accrued to himself. For the same reason, a sale or a mortgage by B of the spes successionis is a nullity. And, further, if he makes any contract with respect to the inheritance in A's lifetime, and predeceases A, and C succeeds as A's heir, the agreement is not binding on C.

31. Co-heirs.—(1) According to the Mitakshara school two or more persons inheriting jointly take as tenants-in-common (n) except the following four classes of heirs who take as joint tenants with rights of survivorship:

(a) Two or more sons, grandsons, and great-grandsons, who are living as members of a joint family (o), succeeding as heirs to the separate or self-acquired property of their paternal ancestor (p). [Also see § 222 and Notes thereunder.]

(b) Two or more grandsons by a daughter, who are living as members of a jointly family, succeeding as heirs to their maternal grandfather (q). The Madras High Court has held that in property inherited by two or more daughter's sons from their maternal grandmother there can be no right of survivorship and the daughter's sons take as tenants in common (r). The decision in Venkayyamma v. Venkataramanayyamma (q) has been held to be no longer a binding authority on nature and incidents of property inherited by daughter's sons from their maternal grandfather. [Also see § 223(2) and Notes thereunder.]

(c) Two or more widows succeeding as heirs to their husband (s).

(d) Two or more daughters succeeding as heirs to their father (t), except in the Bombay State where they take an absolute estate in severalty (u).

---

(l) See Transfer of Property Act, 1882, s. 6.

(m) Brojo v. Gouree (1870) 15 W.R. 70. See Bahadur Singh v. Mohar Singh (1902) 24 All. 94, 29 I.A. 1.

(n) Karuppai v. Sankaranarayanam (1904) 27 Mad. 300; Ram Bharosey v. Ram Bahadur (1948) 23 Luck. 58.

(o) The statement of the law on the point has been altered by adding the words "who are living as members of a joint family."

(p) Raja Jogendra v. Nityanand (1890) 18 Cal. 151, 17 I.A. 128; Madivalappa Irappa v. Subbappa Shankreppa (1937) Bom. 906. 39 Bom. L.R. 895, ('37) A.B. 438, 172 I.C. 184; Shyam Behari Singh v. Rameshwar Prasad Sahu (1941) 20 Pat. 904, 198 I.C. 208 ('42) A.P. 213; Gangadhar v. Ibrahim (1927) 25 Bom. L.R. 197 and by the Madras High Court in Marudayi v. Doraisamy (1907) 30 Mad. 348. In Hari Kishan v. Rajeshwar (1952) Punj. 134, ('52) A. Punj. 165, the Punjab High Court expressed the view that the rule applies only if the sons, grandsons and great-grandsons had not separated from the deceased. In a very recent case, Ragho Sambhaji v. Shantabai (1957) 59 Bom. L.R. 999, the Bombay High Court has followed the Punjab decision. Reference may be made to Ranganatha v. Kumaraswami ('59) A. Mad. 253; (1959) Mad. 298. Also see Girdharilal v. Fatehchand ('55) A.MB. 148 and § 222 and Notes thereunder.

(q) Venkayyamma v. Venkataramanayyamma (1902) 25 Mad. 678, 29 I.A. 156; Muhammad Husain Khan v. Babu Kishva Nandan Sahai (1937) 64 I.A. 250, (1937) All. 655, 39 Bom. L.R. 979, 169 I.C. 9, ('37) A.PC. 233; Seri Ram v. Chandramma ('52) Hyd. 45.

(r) Godavari Lakshminarasamma v. Godavari Rama Brahman (1950) 63 M.L.W. 258, ('50) A.M. 680.

(s) Bhugwandeen v. Myna Baee (1860) 11 M.I.A. 487.

(t) Chotay Lall v. Chunnoo Lall (1879) 4 Cal. 744, 6 I.A. 15; Aumirtolall v. Rajoneekant (1875) 2 I.A. 113, 126, 15 Beng. L.R. 10, 24; Venkayyamma v. Venkataramanayyamma (1902) 25 Mad. 678, 29 I.A. 156; Chhattar Singh v. Hukum Kunwar (1936) 58 All. 391.

(u) Vithappa v. Savitri (1910) 34 Bom. 510, 7 I.C. 445.

(2) According to the Dayabhaga school two or more persons inheriting jointly take as tenants-in-common, except only (1) widows, and (2) daughters who take as joint tenants with rights of survivorship.

Illustrations

(a) A Hindu, who is possessed of separate property, dies leaving two sons, A and B. A then dies leaving a daughter C.

According to the Bengal school, A and B inherit as tenants-in-common, and, therefore, on A's death, his share in the property goes to his heir C by succession.

According to the Mitakshara school, A and B inherit as joint owners who are living as members of a joint family. Therefore if A dies without having partitioned the property, his undivided interest in the property will pass to his brother B by survivorship to the exclusion of his daughter C. But if the property was partitioned between A and B, the share which came to A on partition would go to his heir C by succession. Assuming that A and B did not divide the property, and that A died leaving a son, grandson, or great-grandson, the undivided interest of A would pass to his son, grandson or great-grandson by survivorship, in preference to his undivided brother B. The reason is that the right of survivorship of male issue always prevails over that of a collateral with whom the deceased was joint.

(b) A Hindu dies leaving two widows A and B. According to both the schools, the widows succeed as joint tenants. On A's death, therefore, her interest in the property will pass to B by survivorship [§ 43, n. 4].

(c) A Hindu dies leaving two daughters A and B. According to both the schools they succeed as joint tenants. On A's death, therefore, her undivided interest in the property will pass to B by survivorship. It is different, however, in the Bombay State. In that State A and B take an absolute estate in severalty, and not as joint tenants. Therefore, on A's death, her one-half share will pass to her own heirs by succession. Thus if A dies leaving a daughter, her share will go to her daughter, and not to her sister B [§ 43 no. 5].

(d) A Hindu dies leaving two brothers. The brothers take as tenants-in-common and on the death of either of them, his one-half share will pass to his heirs by succession. The same rule applies to uncles, nephews, etc.

32. Successions per stirpes and per capita.—Except in the two cases hereinafter mentioned persons of the same relationship to the deceased take per capita, that is, the estate of the deceased is divided into as many shares as the number of heirs, each heir taking one share.

Exception I.—On a partition among them, the sons, grandsons and great-grandsons of a deceased male Hindu take per stirpes [§ 29].

Exception II.—Sons' sons, daughters' sons, and daughters' daughters, succeeding to stridhan take per stirpes (v) [§ 160].

Brother's sons, uncle's sons, etc., take per capita. Thus if a Hindu dies leaving 2 sons by one brother and 3 sons by another brother, the property will be divided into 5 equal parts, each heir taking one-fifth. This is division of the estate per capita. To divide it per stirpes would be to divide it into 2 equal parts, giving one part to the 2 sons of one brother, and the other part to the 3 sons of the other brother. The reason why they take per capita is that the brothers' sons do not inherit as representing their father but in their own right as the nephews of the deceased (see § 29). Similarly, if a Hindu dies leaving one son by a paternal uncle and two sons by another paternal uncle, the estate will be divided into three parts, each son taking one-third (w).

Exception I and Exception II both rest on special texts. For an illustration of Exception I, see § 29, ill. (b). For an illustration of Exception II, see the illustration to § 160.

---

(v) Vide authorities cited under § 160.

(w) Narsappa v. Bharmappa (1921) 45 Bom. 296, 59 I.C. 251, ('21) A.B. 408.

CHAPTER IV

ORDER OF INHERITANCE TO MALES ACCORDING TO THE MITAKSHARA LAW

LAW PRIOR TO HINDU SUCCESSION ACT, 1956

33. Mitakshara law of inheritance.—The rules of inheritance laid down in the Mitakshara are followed by the Bombay, Madras, Benares and Mithila schools, all the schools being sub-divisions of the Mitakshara school. But the rules of inheritance in force in the several States represented by these schools are not entirely the same. They differ in certain respects, namely,

(1) The order of inheritance as laid down in the Mitakshara is not strictly followed in the island of Bombay, Gujarat and the North Konkan. The reason is, that in those places preference is given to the Vyavahara Mayukha of Nilkantha Bhatta in the few points on which it differs from the Mitakshara.

(2) As regards females, there are many who are recognized as heirs in the Bombay and Madras schools but are not recognized as such in the Benares and Mithila schools [§§ 61-70].

34. Devolution of property according to the Mitakshara law.—In determining the mode in which the property of a Hindu male governed by the Mitakshara law devolves on his death, the following propositions are to be noted:—

(1) Where the deceased was, at the time of his death, a member of a joint and undivided family, technically called coparcenary, his undivided interest in the coparcenary property devolves on his coparceners by survivorship (But see Act XVIII of 1937 and § 35.)

(2) (i) Even if the deceased was joint at the time of his death, he might have left self-acquired or separate property. Such property goes to his heirs by succession according to the order given in § 43, and not to his coparceners (x).

(ii) If the deceased was at the time of his death the sole surviving member of a coparcenary, the whole of his property, including the coparcenary property, will pass to his heirs by succession according to the order given in § 43 (y).

(iii) If the deceased was separate at the time of his death from his coparceners, the whole of his property, however acquired, will pass to his heirs by succession according to the order given in § 43 (z).

(3) If the deceased was re-united at the time of his death, his property will pass to his heirs by succession according to the rule laid down in § 60 below.

---

(x) Katama Natchiar v. The Rajah of Shivagunga (1863) 9 M.I.A. 539; Sivagnana Tevar v. Periasami (1878) 1 Mad. 312, 5 I.A. 61.

(y) Naqalutchmee v. Gopoo Nadaraja (1856) 6 M.I.A. 309.

(z) Doorga Persad v. Doorga Konwari (1878) 4 Cal. 190, 202, 5 I.A. 149, 160.

Illustration

A. B. and his brother constitute a coparcenary. A. B. dies leaving a daughter. He leaves self-acquired property. He also leaves property inherited by him from his maternal uncle, which, according to law, is his separate property. The undivided interest of A. B. in the coparcenary property will pass to his brother as surviving coparcener, but his self-acquired and separate property will pass to his daughter as his heir.

35. Act XVIII of 1937.—The Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act (XVIII of 1937 amended by XI of 1938) introduced important changes in the law of succession. This short enactment which came into force on 14th April 1937 is as under:

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Hindu Law to give better right to women in respect of property:—

It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title and extent.

1. This Act may be called The Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937.

(2) It extends to the whole of India (a) except Part B States (b).

Application.

2. Notwithstanding any rule of Hindu law or custom to the contrary, the provisions of section 3 shall apply where a Hindu dies intestate.

Devolution of property.

3. (1) When a Hindu governed by the Dayabhaga School of Hindu law dies intestate leaving any property, and when a Hindu governed by any other school of Hindu law or by customary law dies intestate leaving separate property, his widow (c), or if there is more than one widow all his widows together, shall, subject to the provisions of sub-section (3), be entitled in respect of property in respect of which he dies intestate to the same share as a son:

Provided that the widow of a predeceased son (*c*1) shall inherit in like manner as a son if there is no son surviving of such predeceased son, and shall inherit in like manner as a son's son if there is surviving a son or son's son of such predeceased son;

Provided further that the same provision shall apply mutatis mutandis to the widow of a predeceased son of a predeceased son.

(2) When a Hindu governed by any school of Hindu law other than the Dayabhaga school or by customary law dies having at the time of his death an interest in a Hindu joint family property, his widow shall, subject to the provisions of sub-section (3), have in the property the same interest as he himself had.

(3) Any interest devolving on a Hindu widow under the provisions of this section shall be the limited interest known as a Hindu Woman's estate, provided however that she shall have the same right of claiming partition as a male owner.

(4) The provisions of this section shall not apply to an estate which by a customary or other rule of succession or by the terms of the grant applicable thereto descends on a single heir or to any property to which the Indian Succession Act, 1925, applies.

Savings.

4. Nothing in this Act shall apply to the property of any Hindu dying intestate before the commencement of this Act.

Meaning of the expression "die intestate."

5. For the purposes of this Act, a person shall be deemed to die intestate in respect of all property of which he has not made a testamentary disposition which is capable of taking effect.

The Act was repealed by s. 31 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956. Rights acquired and liabilities incurred under the Act are, however, not affected.

---

(a) Unless expressly adopted the Act cannot be applied to territories which were outside British India when the Act was passed. Bhanbai v. Devji ('50) A. Kutch 43.

(b) Hindus who had migrated from Part B States (formerly outside British India) and settled in Part A States (in former British India) were governed by the provisions of the Act even if they had retained their personal law. Rukhmabai v. Ramratan (1951) Nag. 367, ('51) A.N. 350; Pannalal v. Sitabai (1954) Nag. 30, ('53) A.N. 70; Ratan Kumari v. Sunder Lal ('59) A. Cal. 787.

(c) The expression 'widow' in the Act, though used in the singular includes all the widows left by the deceased if there are more than one, Bhiwra v. Renuka (1949) Nag. 400; Umayal Achi v. Lakshmi Achi ('45) A.F.C. 25, (1945) F.C.R. I, (1945) I M.L.J. 108.

(*c*1) Asarfa Kuer v. Bhuneshwar Rai ('59) A. Pat. 210, 37 Pat. 206.

This is by reason of s. 6 of the General Clauses Act X of 1897 (d). In this context it is essential to note the provisions contained in s. 14 of the Act of 1956 which lay down a rule having some retroactive operation.

The Act came into force from 14th April 1937. As some difficulties were felt in the interpretation of the Act it was amended on 8th April 1938 by Act 11 of 1938. The amending Act was made retroactive and operated from the date of the main enactment. The main enactment, as in terms stated in s. 4, is not retrospective in operation and does not apply to the property of any Hindu who died intestate before the commencement of the Act (e). Nor does it apply to the widow of any coparcener who died before the Act came into force (f).

The validity of the Act was questioned in some cases and it was held by the Federal Court that the Act did not operate to regulate succession to agricultural lands in the Governor's Provinces, or to a mortgagee's interest or a lessee's interest in such lands (g) but was not ultra vires as to other lands (h). The validity of the Act was again upheld by the Federal Court in another case (i). After the decision of the Federal Court relating to agricultural lands, some of the provinces extended the operation of the Central Act to succession to agricultural lands by passing suitable legislation (j).

The measure was intended to redress disabilities and "to give better rights to women." It was ameliorative in character and enacted to carry out important social reform (k). It introduced far-reaching changes in the law of succession and was obviously intended to give better rights to women by recognising their claim to fair and equitable treatment in certain matters of succession but unfortunately the rules of devolution set out in the Act are so penned that there have arisen anomalies and a number of conundrums and an attempt to resolve one difficulty has often caused misconception and equally great if not greater difficulties in other cases (l). The Act, in its consequence, touched many branches of Hindu law such as joint family and partition, adoption, maintenance and disqualification from inheritance and illustrates how piecemeal legislation can result in contradictions and unexpected situations. It has raised problems which do not admit of logically consistent answers (m) and the difficulties found in interpreting the enactment have been pointed out in numerous decisions (n). The Act was not a codifying enactment nor even in general amendment of the law of inheritance. Its proper construction requires that it must be fitted into the context of the law existing at the time it was enacted (o) and read in the light of its ameliorative character and expressed intention to give better rights to women (p). In Umayal Achi v.

---

(d) See Sections 4(b), 14 and 31 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, and Notes thereunder.

(e) Umayal Achi v. Lakshmi Achi ('45) A.F.C. 25, (1945) F.C.R. 1, (1945) 1 M.L.J. 108. Lakhan Lal v. Richu Mian ('60) A. Pat. 181; Jasoda Kuer v. Phul Kuer ('58) A. Cal. 600; Mohari v. Chukli ('60) A. Raj. 82; Ratan Kumari v. Sunder Lal, ('59) A. Cal. 787.

(f) Moni Dei v. Hadibandhu ('55) A. Orissa 73 (F.B.).

(g) Kotayya v. Annapurnamma (1945) Mad. 777, Ramaswami v. Murugayyan (1945) Mad. 781, ('45) A.M. 191.

(h) In re the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act of 1937 and the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Amendment Act of 1938 and In re a special reference under sec. 213 of the Government of India Act, 1935 (1941) F.C.R. 72; Anant Lal v. Ram Adhar, 17 Luck. 720, 198 I.C. 443, ('42) A.O. 216.

(i) Umayal Achi v. Lakshmi Achi (1945) F.C.R. 1, ('45) A.F.C. 25.

(j) See f.n. (o) on p. 98.

(k) Dagdu v. Namdeo (1954) Bom. 1069, 56 Bom. L.R. 513, ('55) A.B. 152.

(l) Shivappa v. Yellawa (1953) Bom. 958, 55 Bom. L.R. 658, ('54) A.B. 47; Shyamu v. Vishwanath (1955) 57 Bom. L.R. 807 (co-widows prejudicially affected); Jana Gadi v. Parvati Santosh (1958) 60 Bom. L.R. 553.

(m) Shivappa v. Yellawa (1953) Bom. 958, 55 Bom. L.R. 658, ('54) A.B. 47.

(n) See f.n. (l) above. Also see Pannalal v. Sitabai (1954) Nag. 30, ('53) A.N. 70 (position of a Jain widow); Parappa v. Nagamma (different modes of devolution); Rathinasabapathy v. Saraswathi ('54) A.M. 307, (1953) M.L.J. 459.

(o) Ramaiya v. Mottayya ('51) A.M. 954; Chinniah Chettiar v. Sivagami Achi ('45) A.M. 21; Parappa v. Nagamma ('54) A.M. 576 (F.B.). The effect of the Act was not to confer larger rights on the widow than those enjoyed by her deceased husband as a coparcener.

(p) Dagdu v. Namdeo (1954) Bom. 1069, 56 Bom. L.R. 513, ('55) A.B. 152.

Lakshmi Achi (q) the Federal Court observed: "Its proper construction and operation must be determined with reference to conditions and contingencies likely to arise after its commencement."

The main features of the Act are:

(1) In the case of separate property,

(a) the widow along with the sons is entitled to the same share as the son,

(b) A pre-deceased son's widow inherits in like manner as the son, if there is no son surviving of such predeceased son; and in like manner as a son's son if there is surviving a son or son's son of such pre-deceased son.

(c) The same provision applies mutatis mutandis to the widow of a pre-deceased son of a pre-deceased son.

(2) In the case of a Mitakshara joint family the widow takes the place of her husband.

General effect of the Act.—The Act confers new rights on widows in modification of previous law as laid down by the texts and interpreted by judicial decisions. The general effect of the Act is to put the three female heirs mentioned in sub-section (1) of section 3 on the same level as the male issue of the last owner along with the male issue or in default of them. That sub-section deals with property over which a Hindu has a power of disposition by a testament. Such property, in the case of a Hindu governed by the Dayabhaga School, is his separate property as well as ancestral property in his hands and his share in joint family property. And in case of a Hindu governed by the Mitakshara, it means his separate property. Sub-section (2) of section 3 applies to his 'interest in joint family property' which, as pointed out later, would mean all other property in which he had under Mitakshara law interest at the time of his death. The Act puts the widow of a member of the joint family in the place of her deceased husband and the husband's interest in the joint family property under the Mitakshara, though undefined, vests immediately upon his death in the widow and does not devolve by survivorship. Section 2 provides that, notwithstanding any rule of Hindu law or custom to the contrary, the provisions of section 3 shall apply where a Hindu dies intestate. Therefore, wherever the provisions of s. 3 apply any other rule or custom of Hindu law which would otherwise have applied ceased to govern the parties and such rule or custom must be ignored as being superseded by the Act. Sub-section (4) of s. 3 confers on the widow the same right of claiming partition of the joint family property in the same way as any other coparcener entitled to do so under the general law.

The acquisition by the widow of the same interest as her deceased husband in the joint family property does not of itself disrupt the Mitakshara joint family and the widow continues as before to be a member of the joint family. Her rights are augmented but there is no immediate severance of the joint family (r). Though her position in the joint family may in many respects be analogous to that of any undivided male coparcener in the joint family it would be a misnomer to call her a coparcener. All the High Courts are agreed that she does not by operation of the Act become a coparcener (s). But it would not be correct to describe her interest as inchoate or imperfect till she claims partition (*s*1). She becomes entitled to the undivided interest of her deceased husband and takes "the same interest as her husband" and not "the same right as her husband" (t). And when the deceased has left a son she becomes entitled to be in the same position as the son. She may or may not choose to demand partition. Therefore, where she does not enforce partition and the joint family continues as before without any severance of the joint status the incidents of the coparcenary continue to apply to all the members including the widow with this reservation that her existence suspends the rule of survivorship. And even then the rule of survivorship continues to operate quod the other coparceners; and their interest as also the interest of the widow is liable to fluctuation by births and deaths in the joint family which continues as before but subject to her statutory right (u). And founded on the same principle is the view expressed by a Full Bench of the High Court of Madhya Pradesh that the widow who has under sub-section (2) of section 3 obtained interest in her husband's estate and holds the estate with her minor (unmarried) son, takes upon the death of the son the whole estate by survivorship (*u*1).

---

(q) ('45) A.F.C. 25, (1945) F.C.R. 1, (1945) 1 M.L.J. 108.

On the same principle the rights and powers of the Karta of the joint family to deal with and alienate for legal necessity the coparcenary property including the widow's interest and represent all the members of the joint family to the outside world continue as before (v). The position of the Karta remains unaffected as long as there is no partition and the position of the widow is somewhat analogous to that of a male coparcener in the family. The Karta, though he is entitled to exercise his ordinary powers under the ordinary law, is not competent to make a gift of the property belonging to the family and the widow is entitled to challenge any unjustified alienation if her interest is sought to be defeated (w). And even where the joint family after

---

(r) Parappa v. Nagamma (1954) Mad. 183, ('54) A.M 576; Kamal Kishore v. Harihar (1951) 30 Pat. 357, ('51) A.P. 645; Gangadhar v. Subhashini ('55) A. Orissa 135. Also see f.n. (s) below.

(s) Parappa v. Nagamma (1954) Mad. 183, ('54) A.M. 576; Radha Ammal v. I.T. Commissioner, Madras (1950) 1 M.L.J. 399, ('50) A.M. 538; Rathnasabapathy v. Yellawa (1953) 2 M.L.J. 459, ('54) A.M. 307; Lakshmi Ammal v. Ramachandra ('60) A. Mad. 568; (1960) Mad. 991; Gangadhar v. Sbhashini ('55) A. Orissa 135; Shankar v. Gangram (1952) Bom. 485, (1952) 54 Bom. L.R. 75; Umsaran v. Bhagwat ('54) A.P. 318. Manicka v. Arnachala ('65) A.M. 1 (F.B.).

(*s*1) Sankara Rao v. Rajyalakshamma ('61) A.A.P. 241.

(t) Jagdu v. Namdeo (1954) Bom. 1069, 56 Bom. L.R. 513, ('55) A.B. 152. The Madras and Bomby High Courts have held that the widow not being a coparcener is not entitled to become the Krta of the family, Radha Ammal v. C.I.T. Madra ('50) A.M. 538; Contra C.I.T. v. Laxminaraya (1948) Nag. 775, ('49) A.N. 128. In Comnssioner of I.T. v. G. S. Mills the Supreme Court held that a widow cannot become the Karta of the family: See ('66) A.S.C. 24.

(u) See cases cited in footnotes (s) and (t) above. Also see Seethamma v. Veerana (1950) Mad. 1076, ('50) A.M. 785; Kamalabala v. Jiban Krishna (1941) 2 Cal. 32, 227 I.C. 291, ('46) A.C. 461.

(*u*1) Bhondu v. Ramdayal ('60) A.M.P. 51 (F.B.).

(v) Ahuja v. Rameshwarlal ('71) A. Raj. 269; Seethamma v. Veerana ('50) A.M. 785; Radha Ammal v. I.T. Commissioner, Madras (1950) 1 M.L.J. 399, ('50) A.M. 538 (she cannot ask for accounts); Shivappa v. Yellawa (1953) Bom. 958, 55 Bom. L.R. 659 ('54) A.B. 47; Mahadu v. Gajarabai ('54) A.B. 442, (1954) Bom. 885, 56 Bom. L.R. 387; Parvathamma v. Subhadramma ('63) A.A.P. 236; Fateh Chand v. Bhushan Prakash ('57) A.All 801.

(w) Shivappa v. Yellawa ('54) A.B. 47, (1953) Bom. 958, 55 Bom. L.R. 659; Ramalingam v. Ramalakshmi ('58) A.M. 228; (1958) Mad. 7; (1957) 2 Mad. L.J. 382. Lakshmi Ammal v. Ramachandra ('60) A.M. 568; (1960) Mad. 991, (dissenting from Rathinasabapathi v. Saraswathi ('54) A.M. 307). Papayamma v. Gopalakrishnamurthy ('69) A.A. Pra. 341.

the death of her husband consists of herself and a sole surviving coparcener, the latter cannot make a gift of the entire property because the widow's existence would prevent the vesting of all the coparcenary interest in him (x). The widow has during her lifetime all the powers which her husband had save that her interest is limited to a widow's estate. She can alienate her widow's interest in her husband's share; she can even convey her interest in the same for necessity or other binding purposes. She can ask for partition and separate possession of her husband's share. In case she asks for partition her husband's interest would be worked out having regard to the circumstances obtaining in the family on the date of partition. If she divided herself from the other members of the family during her lifetime, on her demise the succession would be traced to her husband on the basis that the property was his separate property. If there was no severance, it would devolve by survivorship to other members of the joint Hindu family (y).

Where property devolves on a widow and the property was the separate property of her husband, she takes in it the same share as a son. This is by inheritance under s. 3(1). The interest that she acquires in a case where the husband was a member of a joint family does not devolve on her by survivorship. All the High Courts are agreed on this but there was some difference of opinion on the question whether she can be said to have acquired her interest in such property by inheritance till the conflict was set at rest by the Supreme Court in Lakshmi Perumallu v. Krishnavenamma (z). According to the Nagpur (a), earlier decisions of Patna (b) and Madhya Pradesh (c) High Courts such interest devolved on her by inheritance as the only modes of devolution known to Hindu law are survivorship and inheritance. The High Courts of Madras (d), Bombay (e), Andhra Pradesh (f), Calcuta (*f*1), Rajasthan (*f*2) and Orissa (g) had taken the view that such interest is neither by survivorship nor by inheritance but a special type of interest which is the creation of statute. The Supreme Court has now approved of the latter view (*g*1). According to this latter view, it is not necessary for the widow to take out a succession certificate for enforcing any claim or right of the husband which devolves on her under the Act (h).

The Act seeks to make fundamental changes in the concept of a coparcenery and the rights of the members of the family in coparcenery property. In investing the widow of a member of a coparcenery with the interest which the member had at the tine of (x) Shivappa v. Yellawa (1953) Bom. 958, 55 Bom. L.R. 659, ('54) A.B. 47; Harekrishna v. Jujesthi ('56) A. Orissa 73. Also see Ramsaran v. Bhagwat ('54) A.P. 318.

---

(y) Parappa v. Nagamma (1954) Mad. 183, ('54) A.M. 576 (F.B.); Ramaswami v. Lakshmamma ('63) A.A.P. 199. Also see Rup Raut v. Basudeo Raut ('62) A.P. 436.

(z) ('65) A.S.C. 825.

(a) Jadaobai v. Puranmal (1944) Nag. 832, 219 I.C. 158, ('44) A.N. 243. Also see Jugalkishore v. Wardhasa (1955) Nag. 446, ('55) A.N. 166.

(b) Mt. Rajendra Bati v. Mungalal ('53) A.P. 129; Siveshwar v. Har Narain (1944) 23 Pat. 760, ('45) A.P. 116; Kedar Nath v. Radha Shyam, ('53) A.P. 81; Sahujpari v. Satrughan ('58) A.P. 405.

(c) Bhagobai v. Bhaiyalal ('57) A.M. Pra. 29.

(d) Saradambal v. Subbaram (1942) Mad. 630, 201 I.C. 152, ('42) A.M. 212; Rathinasabapathy v. Saraswati ('54) A.M. 307; Natarajan v. Perumal ('43) A.M. 246, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 668, 206 I.C. 356.

(e) Shankar v. Gangaram (1952) 54 Bom. L.R. 75; Nagappa v. Mukumbe (1951) Bom. 442 ('51) A.B. 309, 53 Bom. L.R. 177.

(f) I.L.T. Development v. Kotayya ('55) A. Andhra 135.

(*f*1) Ratan Kumari v. Sunder Lal ('59) A.C. 787.

(*f*2) Chhotki v. Chandra Prakash ('64) A. Raj. 32.

(g) Harekrishna v. Jujesthi ('56) A. Orisa 73; Gangadhar v. Subhashini ('55) A. Orissa 135; Keluni Dei v. Jagabandhu Naik ('58) A. Orisa 47.

(*g*1) See f.n. (z) above.

(h) Natarajan v. Perumal (1942) 2 M.L.J. 668, 206 I.C. 356, ('43) A.M. 246; Gangadhar v. Subhashini supra; Rakhmabai v. Gangaram supra; I.L.T. Development v. Kotayya, supra; Chhotki v. Chandra Prakash ('64) A. Raj. 32. Also see f.n. (d) above. The contrary view was taken in Jadaobai v. Puranmal (1944) Nag. 832, ('44) A.N. 243 and in the cases cited in f.n. (b) above.

his death, the Act has introduced changes which are alien to the structure of a coparcenery. The interest of the widow arises not by inheritance, nor by survivorship, but by statutory substitution. Her interest in the property is the limited interest known as a Hindu woman's estate, but the Act gives her the same power to claim partition as a male owner has. A widow of a coparcener is invested by the Act with the same interest which her husband had at the time of his death in the property of the coparcenery. She is thereby introduced into the coparcenery, and between the surviving coparceners of the husband and the widow so introduced, there arises community of interest and unity of possession. But the widow does not on that account become a coparcener. Because of statutory substitution of her interest in the coparcenery property in place of her husband, the right which the other coparceners had under the Hindu law of the Mitakshara school of taking that interest by the rule of survivorship remains suspended so long as that estate enures. If the widow after being introduced into the family to which her husband belonged does not seek partition, on the termination of her estate her interest will merge into the coparcenery property. But if she claims partition, she is severed from the other members and her interest becomes a defined interest in the coparcenery property, and the right of the other coparceners to take that interest by survivorship will stand extinguished. If she dies after partition or her estate is otherwise determined, the interest in coparcenery property which has vested in her will devolve upon the heirs of her husband. To effect such partition it is not necessary that there should have been actual division of interest by metes and bounds. Mere severence of status is enough (*h*1).

There is nothing in the Act to show that the widow takes in the joint family property a defined and divided share as if the husband had separated from the joint family at the time of his death. The Act vests in the widow immediately upon his death the undefined and fluctuating interest in the joint family property which he himself had till the moment of his death. She will therefore get a share of the joint family property as at the date of demand by her for partition or at the date of partition at the instance of any coparcener as the case may be and not a share of the property as at the date of the death of her husband (*h*2).

Under the law prior to the Act, the widow of a person governed by the Mitakshara had only a right of maintenance in respect of coparcenary property in which the husband had interest. In respect of separate property left by her husband, she had only the right of maintenance when the husband had left a son, grandson or a great-grandson. She could inherit his separate property only in the absence of these immediate heirs. All this was changed and her rights were augmented as pointed out above. As to the effect of adoption by her see the undermentioned case (i).

The Bombay High Court has taken the view that unchastity (j) of the widow would not operate as a bar to her right to inherit or acquire any interest in her husband's property under the Act. The Madras, Calcutta and Mysore High Courts hold the contrary view (k). As under prior law, so under the Act, a widow on remarriage forfeits her right to her deceased husband's property (l).

Agricultural property.—As already pointed out it was held by the Federal Court (m) that the word property in s. 3 does not include agricultural lands (n). Legislation was thereafter passed in many provinces extending the operation of the Central Act to succes-

---

(*h*1) Satrughan v. Sabujpari ('67) A.S.C. 272; Lakshmi Perumallu v. Krishnavenamma ('65) A.S.C. 825.

(*h*2) Nagappa v. Mukumbe ('51) A.B. 309; Parappa v. Nagamma (1954) Mad. 183 (F.B.), ('54) A.M. 576; Bhondu v. Ramdayal ('60) A.M.P. 51 (F.B.). Reference may also be made to the cases on the point collected in abovementioned cases. Also see the decision of the Supreme Court cited in f.n. (z) above.

(i) Rani Lachhmi Kunwar v. Shiam Singh (1949) All. 786.

(j) Akoba Laxman v. Sai Genu Laxman ('41) A.B. 204.

(k) Ramaiyya v. Motayya (1952) Mad. 187, ('51) A.M. 954 (F.B.); Kanailal v. Pannasashi ('54) A.C. 588; Appa Saheb v. Gurubasawwa ('60) A. Mys. 79.

(l) Manabai v. Chandanbai (1954) Nag. 727, ('54) A.N. 284.

(m) See f.n. (h) at p. 93, supra.

(n) Agricultural land has been held to include a mango grove, Sarojini Devi v. Subrahmanyam (1945) Mad. 61, ('44) A.M. 401.

sion to agricultural lands with the result that the three female heirs mentioned in the Act could claim rights under the Act also in case of such lands (o).

S. 3(1) : "When a Hindu governed by the Dayabhaga . . . dies intestate leaving any property."—Sub-section (1) of section 3 speaks of "any property". The expression prima facie includes all forms or types of interest answering the description of "property" in law. The property must be heritable property in respect of which question of succession may ligitimately arise. It has been held by the Supreme Court that shebaitship is property within the meaning of the Act (p).

S. 3(1): "When a Hindu governed by any other school . . . dies intestate leaving separate property".—Speaking generally the effect of the Act, so far as it relates to a person governed by the Mitakshara, is to put the three female heirs—his widow, the widow of a predeceased son and the widow of a predeceased son of a predeceased son—mentioned in section 3 on the same level as the male issue of the last owner along with the male issue or in default of them. The effect of the Act by what is enacted in sub-section (2) of section 3 is to put the widow of a member of a joint family in the place of the deceased husband, and the husband's interest in the joint family property under the Mitakshara vests in her immediately upon his death and does not devolve by survivorship.

The expression separate property in section 3(1) was interpreted by the Federal Court in Umayal Achi v. Lakshmi Achi (q) and it was held that it has been used in a narrow and limited sense so as to exclude not merely the interest that the last owner may have had in joint family property but also to exclude from the operation of the sub-section property acquired by him on partition and property which devolved on him as a sole surviving coparcener. That decision was quoted with approval by the Supreme Court in the decision referred to above. In a more recent decision also the Supreme Court expressed the view that property held by a sole surviving coparcener in a family does not become his "separate property" so long as there is a woman in the family who can bring to existence a new coparcener by adoption (*q*1). There has been some divergence of judicial opinion as to the effect of the Federal Court decision. Following that decision it was held in the undermentioned cases by the High Courts of Nagpur (r), Patna (s) and Allahabad (t) that the share received by a father on partition between him and his son

(o) Bombay Act 17 of 1942: See Soniram v. Dwarkabai (1951) 53 Bom. L.R. 325, (1951) Bom. 679, ('51) A.B. 34; C.P. and Berar Act 6 of 1942: Orissa Act 5 of 1944: Assam Act 13 of 1943; U.P. Act 11 of 1942; This enactment was made retrospective in its operation, Kailash Chandra v. Shri Devi ('51) A.A. 636. As to the application of the Madras Hindu Women's Rights to Property (Extension to Agricultural Lands) Act. 26 of 1947 see Bappu Ayyar v. Renganayaki (1955) 2 M.L.J. 302, ('55) A.M. 394. Reference may be made to the following cases which were governed by the Federal Court decision and did not fall within the purview of the Madras Hindu Women's Rights to Property (Extension to Agricultural Lands) Act, 26 of 1947; Parappa v. Nagamma (1954) Mad. 183, ('54) A.M. 576 F.B. T. Sarojini Devi v. Sri Krishna (1945) Mad. 61, ('44) A.M. 401; Dhanam v. Varadarajan ('53) A.M. 176. Debt secured by mortgage of agricultural lands is 'property' under the Act and the widow is entitled to a share therein, Subba Naicker v. Nallammal ('50) A.M. 192. Reference may also be made to Hari Dass v. Hukmi ('65) A. Punj. 254; Kashi Nath v. Umapada ('68) A.C. 83.

(p) Angurbala v. Debabrata (1951) S.C.R. 1125, (1952) 2 Cal. 209, ('51) A.SC. 293. Also see observations at p. 1135 of (1951) S.C.R.

(q) ('45) A F.C. 25, (1945) 1 M.L.J. 108.

(*q*1) Manoharlal v. Bhuri Bai ('72) A.S.C. 1369.

(r) Bhaoorao v. Chandrabhagabai (1948) Nag. 465, ('49) A.N. 108. Reference may also be made to the decisions of the High Court of Andhra Pradesh cited in the f.n. (t) and (*t*2) below.

(s) Trisul v. Daman ('57) A.P. 441; Khatrani v. Tapeshwari ('64) A.P. 261 (F.B.).

(t) Manbhari v. Bishun ('58) A. All. 769. Also see Seshamma v. Ramakoteswara ('58) A.A.P. 280.

or sons was not his 'separate property' and on his death it passed to the son or sons in preference to his widow. On the other hand it has been held by the High Court of Orissa (u) that in case of a share obtained by a father on such partition his widow is entitled to inherit the entire interest to the exclusion of the divided son. The view was taken that in such a case the property which fell to the share of the father was not his separate property for the purpose of s. 3(1) but was joint family property within the meaning of s. 3(2) and after the death of the father, his widow became entitled to that entire share to the exclusion of the divided son. In Subramanian v. Kalyanaram, a case decided by the High Court of Madras (v), the view was taken that if the property which a coparcener obtains at a family partition with his son or sons is not separate property within the meaning of s. 3(1), it must be deemed to be an "interest in Hindu joint family property" within the meaning of sub-section (2) of the section. In another decision the same High Court (*v*1) has expressed its agreement with the view taken by the High Court of Orissa. The High Court of Andhra Pradesh (*v*2) has held that property received by a coparcener by virtue of a deed of settlement is not separate property.

There seems little doubt that the expressions "separate property" and "interest in Hindu joint family property" are used in juxtaposition in sub-sections (1) and (2) which sub-sections between them deal with all property left by such owner. The same conclusion was reached on the vexed question in a decision of a single Judge of the Bombay High Court (w). A Division Bench of that High Court has expressed agreement with that view and held that the property left by a Hindu male obtained at a partition between such male person and other members of the family where the partition was between a father and a son or between a father and the other members of the family is covered by sub-section (2) (*w*1). The question whether in such a case the widow is entitled exclusively to the property left by the husband or must share it equally with his divided son or sons was not decided in the Madras and Bombay cases referred to immediately above (x). The Madhya Pradesh High Court (xx) and the Madras High Court (*x*1) have now expressed their agreement with the view taken by the High Court of Orissa (*x*2)

S. 3(2): "When a Hindu governed by the Mitakshara dies having at the time of his death an interest in a Hindu joint family property."—As already mentioned the preferable view would seem to be that the expressions "separate property" used in sub-section (1) and "interest in a Hindu joint family property" used in this sub-secton must be read in juxtaposition and that between them the two sub-sections deal with all property left by such owner. All cases, therefore, where the last owner died leaving property other than his self-

---

(u) Visalamma v. Jagannadha Rao ('55) A. Orissa 160.

(v) ('57) A.M. 456.

(*v*1) Onnamalai v. Seethapathi ('61) A.M. 90. Also see Commissioner of Income Tax v. Thiagarajan ('64) A.M. 58. Reference may be made to Venkatasubramania v. Easwara Iyer ('66) A.M. 266.

(*v*2) Lakshmamma v. Kondayya ('61) A.A.P. 505.

(w) Jana Gadi v. Parvati Santosh (1958) 60 Bom. L.R. 553.

(*w*1) Parvati v. Janabai ('69) A.B. 77.

(x) See f.n. (v) and (w) above.

(xx) Jhangalu Shivcharan v. Pancho Bai ('68) A.M.P. 172.

(*x*1) Onnamalai Ammal v. Seethapathi ('61) A.M. 90; Commissioner of Income Tax v. Thiagarajan ('64) A.M. 58. Also see f.n. (*v*1) above.

(*x*2) Visalamma v. Jagannadha Rao ('55) A. Orissa 160.

acquired property must in view of the decision of the Federal Court (y), it is submitted, fall under this section. In this context it may be noted that the sub-section has adopted the Hindu conception that a widow is the surviving half of the deceased husband and introduced the fictio juris that she continues the legal persona of her husband. Of course, this does not mean that the husband is for all purposes to be deemed to live till the widow claims partition or files a suit for working out her rights. No difficulty arises where the husband was at the time of his death a member of a joint family and died leaving him surviving his widow and undivided coparceners. In any such case if there was no son the widow would become immediately entitled to the same interest in the property which the husband himself had and on partition take the share that he would have taken. And if there was a son who was a member of the joint family the widow would be entitled to the same share as the son. Difficulty, however, arises where the husband held property which was ancestral and was survived by the widow and a son or sons who had separated from him. Question arises whether in any such case the widow is entitled exclusively to the property left by the husband or must share it equally with his divided son or sons. The High Courts of Orissa (*y*1) and Madras (*y*2), as already mentioned, have taken the view that in such a case the widow is entitled to inherit the entire interest to the exclusion of the divided son or sons and the High Court of Bombay has left the question open. Serious difficulties have already arisen and, even though the law has been altered after the passing of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, will continue to arise particularly when rights of third parties who are alienees of any such property are involved and questions of title have to be decided. These are some of the problems which have arisen because of the extreme difficulty of fitting in any piecemeal legislation howsoever beneficial in the integrated and complicated structure of Hindu law. Reference may be made to Notes under s. 14 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956 for the effect of that section on the interest taken by a Hindu widow in joint family property under this section.

Quantum of share on partition.—The quantum of interest to which a widow is entitled under this sub-section is to be determined as on the date on which she seeks to enforce partition under sub-section (3) (z). The share which devolves on a widow of a deceased coparcener is not a fixed and determinate share but what she takes is the "same interest as he himself had." Therefore, until there is partition, she cannot predicate the particular fraction of her share for it is likely to increase or decrease by birth or death of other coparceners (b). Her share would include a share in accretions to the joint family property till partition is effected (c).

Prior to the Act, a widow was entitled to a share on partition among her sons in her capacity as a mother (except in Madras.) It has been held in a number of cases, that after the Act, the widow cannot claim a double share on partition between the

---

(y) Umayal Achi v. Lakshmi Achi (1945) F.C.R. 1. ('45) A.F.C. 25.

(*y*1) See f.n. (u) above.

(*y*2) See f.n. (*x*1) above.

(z) Lakshmi Perumallu v. Krishnavenamma ('65) A.S.C. 825.

(b) Nagappa v. Mukumbe (1951) Bom. 442, ('51) A.B. 309, 53 Bom. L.R. 177; Mahadu v. Gajarabai ('54) A.B. 422; Shivappa v. Yellawa (1953) Bom. 958, ('54) A.B. 47; Gangadhar v. Subhashini ('55) A. Orissa 135; Tukaram v. Gangi ('57) A.N. 28; Ramchandra v. Ramgopal ('56) A.N. 228 [crucial date for determining interest is when right to partition is exercised.]. Suryanarayana v. Sugunavathi ('61) A.A.P. 939.

(c) Gangadhar v. Subhashini ('55) A. Orissa 135.

sons, one in her capacity as a widow and another as a mother (d). Under the prior law, stridhan acquired by a female from her husband or father-in-law was taken into account when a share was allotted to her on partition amongst the sons. The share she gets under section 3(2) is not affected by any rule of Hindu law to the contrary and it has been held in a Nagpur case that such stridhan received by her would not be deducted from her share on partition (e).

S. 3(3): "Limited interest known as a Hindu Woman's estate . . . shall have the right of claiming partition."—Sub-section (3) expressly declares that the interest devolving upon a widow under sec. 3 is a limited interest known as "Hindu Woman's Estate". This expression has been interpreted to mean Hindu widow's estate (f). On a plain reading of sub-sections (2) and (3) it is clear that the widow on her husband's death in a joint family gets the same interest that her husband had with the limitation that the interest is not absolute but is limited in the manner of a Hindu widow's estate. It would not be correct to equate the interest which she gets with the share a widow used to get under the orthodox law at a partition between her sons (*f*1). It is also clear that having confined the interest devolving upon her to a widow's limited estate, the Legislature was at pains to stress that nonetheless she was to have the same right of partition as a male coparcener would have. It follows that all the incidents of a widow's estate should attach to the interest which devolves on her by virtue of the express statutory estate created in her favour with the added right to claim partition as its outstanding feature. It has accordingly been held that she can alienate her interest in the coparcenary property for legal necessity (g); and her interest is liable to be attached and sold in execution of a decree obtained against her (*g*1). And though she cannot alienate the property without legal necessity, she can alienate her own restricted interest to enjoy the property during her lifetime. The alienee in such a case can enjoy the property during her lifetime and is also by virtue of that right entitled to claim partition (h).

Prior to the enactment a widow-mother could not herself claim partition unless the sons chose to effect severance of the joint status. In Madras no female heirs got a share on such partition and in Bengal a sonless step-mother did not have the right to claim a share on a partition among the sons of her deceased husband. This sub-section has the effect of putting the widow in the same position as a son in the matter of claiming partition.

The right to claim partition given to a widow under this sub-section does not negative her right to claim maintenance. It is only an enabling right and she may ask for maintenance instead of partition (i). But she cannot enforce both the rights simultaneously (j). The share she gets on partition, it has been held, is in lieu of maintenance and if she can get a share in all the coparcenary property including agricultural lands, her right to maintenance would

---

(d) Shyamu v. Vishwanath (1955) Bom. 890, 57 Bom. L.R. 807, ('55) A.B. 410; T. Sarojini Devi v. Sri Krishna ('44) A.M. 401. (1945) Mad. 61; Indu Bhusan v. Mrityunjoy (1946) 1 Cal. 128.

(e) Hanuman v. Tulsabai ('56) A.N. 63.

(f) Dagadu v. Namdeo (1954) Bom. 1069, 56 Bom. L.R. 513, ('55) A.B. 152.

(*f*1) Bepin Behary v. Lakshsona, A.I.R. (1959) Cal. 27, 30.

(g) Harekrishna v. Jujesthi ('56) A. Orissa 73; Pem Mahton v. Bandhu Mahto ('58) A.P. 20.

(*g*1) Thimmi Ammal v. Venkatarama ('60) A.M. 347.

(h) Dagadu v. Namdeo (1954) Bom. 1069, 56 Bom. L.R. 513, (55) A.B. 152; Pem Mahton v. Bandhu Mahto supra. Also see Suryanarayana v. Sugunavathi ('61) A.A.P. 393; Mahipat Missir v. Ganpat Sah ('63) A.P. 277; Kunja Sahu v. Bhagaban ('51) A. Orissa 35.

(i) Rathinasabapathy v. Saraswathi ('54) A.M. 307, (1953) 2 Mad. L.J. 459; Gajavalli Ammal v. Narayanaswami ('62) A.M. 187; Varahalamma v. Ammathalli ('59) A.A.P. 590.

(j) The position was different when she could not get a share of agricultural lands: Parappa v. Nagamma (1954) Mad. 183, ('54) A.M. 576.

cease (k). The right of claiming partition conferred upon a widow under the Act is personal to her. The right being personal would come to an end on her death if no partition had taken place (*k*1). It has been held in a number of cases that, if she died pending a suit for partition, her undivided interest would devolve by survivorship and would not go to her husband's heirs as reversioners (l). The reason generally adopted is that she got her interest in lieu of maintenance and the right conferred upon her being personal would not be crystallised until actual partition by metes and bounds. An alienee of the widow's interest for legal necessity can, however, claim the right to partition the joint family property even after her death.

Husband's death pendente lite.—In view of the peculiar status created for the widow under the Act entitling her to claim partition in her own right, the sons cannot represent her interest. So where a husband dies pending a suit or appeal, his widow must be substituted as a party in his place. Otherwise the suit or appeal would abate (m). Where a coparcener dies pending a suit brought against the individual members of the joint family and not in a representative capacity, the interest of the deceased coparcener cannot be represented by the other members and his widow must be brought on record (n). Where a coparcener brings a suit for partition and dies pendente lite his widow can continue the suit as representing her husband (o).

Interest liable to attachment and sale in execution.—The interest devolving on a widow under section 3(2) is liable to attachment and sale in execution of a decree obtained against her (*o*1). Where a creditor has obtained a decree against a coparcener, in his lifetime, he can execute it against the interest devolving on the widow. The rule of survivorship, which operates in case of the death of a widow who dies before there is any partition of the joint family property, does not have the effect of defeating the rights of any creditor of the deceased coparcener. The creditor can proceed against the interest which devolved on the widow for satisfaction of such liability (p).

Devolution of interest on the death of the widow.—The Act is silent as to what is to be the devolution of the interest of the widow upon her death. The separate property of her husband inherited by her would, it is clear, devolve upon her husband's heirs as reversioners. And in case of joint family property it would seem, having regard to the provisions of s. 3 and the scheme and object of the Act, that if she dies without any partition having taken place her interest in the property would pass by survivorship to the coparceners though the decisions on the subject cannot be said to be quite uniform. It

---

(k) Shyamu v. Vishwanath (1955) Bom. 890, ('55) A.B 410; T. Sarojini Devi v. Sri Krishna (1945) Mad. 61, ('44) A.M. 401.

(*k*1) Alamelu Ammal v. Chellammal ('59) A.M. 100 (F.B.), (1959) Mad. 106.

(l) Shyamu v. Vishwanath, supra; Subba Rao v. Krishna Prasadam (1954) Mad. 227, ('54) A.M. 227; Kachra Khan v. Khant Ram ('53) A. Sau. 175. Also see Shankar v. Gangaram (1952) Bom. L.R. 75; Nagappa v. Mukambe (1951) Bom. 442, 53 Bom. L.R. 177, ('51) A.B. 309.

(m) Dhanukha v. Saudagar (1955) 32 Pat. 1003, ('55) A.P. 240; Sariu Singh v. Ramsaroop ('55) A.P. 155; Jugal Kishore v. Wardhasa ('55) A.N. 166; Ramnath v. Ramgopal ('51) A.N. 434; Shivrajsingh v. Gaurishankar ('61) A.M.P. 147.

(n) Awadh Behari v. Jhaman Mahton ('53) A.P. 324.

(o) Shankar v. Gangaram (1952) Bom. 485, 54 Bom. L.R. 75, ('52) A.B. 127.

(*o*1) Thimmi Ammal v. Venkatarama ('60) A.M. 347.

(p) Saradambal v. Subbarama Ayyar (1941) 2 M.L.J. 287, 201 I.C. 301, ('42) A.M. 272; Siveshwar v. Har Narain (1944) 23 Pat. 760, 219 I.C. 405, ('45) A.P. 116; Co-operative Society of Patur v. Vasant ('46) A.N. 317; Shankar v. Gangaram (1952) Bom. 485, 54 Bom. L.R. 75, ('52) A.B. 127.

would also seem that if she sought partition and divided herself from the joint family, the property taken by her would on her death pass to her husband's heirs as reversioners. The High Court of Madhya Bharat has taken the view that the interest taken by the widow is like the interest of her husband, an undivided interest in the joint family property, and even though she is entitled to file a suit for partition, the interest does not get separated, at any rate until the suit for partition is filed by her (q). The High Court of Orissa has held that the interest of the widow succeeding to her husband's interest in coparcenary property goes to the heirs of her husband after her, in the absence of any coparcener living at the time of her death (r). A Full Bench of the Madras High Court (s) has held that if the widow divided herself from the other members of the family during her lifetime, on her demise the succession would be traced to her husband on the basis that the property was his separate property. If there was no severance, it would devolve by survivorship to other members of the joint family. A Full Bench of the Patna High Court has taken the same view (*s*1). A Full Bench of the Bombay High Court also took the same view in the undermentioned case (*s*2). This view was dissented from in a recent decision of the Madhya Pradesh High Court, where it was held that on the death of a widow who has taken on partition her husband's share, there is a reverter of the property back to the coparcenary (t). The Supreme Court has finally held that if the widow in such a case died after partition or her estate is otherwise determined, the interest in coparcenary property which has vested in her will devolve upon the heirs of the husband (u). Upon the death of a widow governed by Dayabhaga law, the share which she inherited from her husband under sec. 3 of the Act devolves on the husband's heirs under the Hindu law as modified by the Act, as if he died simultaneously with her. Similarly the share which the widow of a predeceased son gets under the Act, devolves after her death upon the heirs of her father-in-law (v).

Reference may be made to Notes under s. 14 of the Hindu Succession Act 1956 for the effect of that section on the interest taken by a Hindu widow under this section.

35A. Hindu Law Women's Rights Act (Mysore Act 10 of 1933).— Reference may be made to the undermentioned case (*v*1).

36. Propinquity the governing factor.—Under the Mitakshara, the right to inherit arises from propinquity, that is, proximity of relationship (w).

---

(q) Laxman v. Gangabai ('55) A.M.B. 138.

(r) Harekrishna v. Jujesthi ('56) A. Orissa 73: Keluni Devi v. Jagadambhu Naik ('56) A. Orissa 47.

(s) Parappa v. Nagamma (1954) Mad. 183 ('54) A.M. 576 (F.B.).

(*s*1) Khatrani v. Tapeshwari ('64) A.P. 261 (F.B.).

(*s*2) Ranu Thaku v. Santu Goga ('68) A.B. 1 (F.B.). Also see Manda v. Pandurang ('68) A.B. 340. Remarriage of widow after partition.

(t) Bhagobai v. Bhaiyalal ('57) A.M. Pra. 29.

(u) Satrughan v. Sabujpari ('67) A.S.C. 272.

(v) Kamalabala v. Jiban (1946) 2 Cal. 32, ('46) A.C. 461; Provash Chandra v. Prokash Chandra (1946) 2 Cal. 164.

(*v*1) Nagendra Prasad v. Kempananjamma ('68) A.S.C. 209.

(w) Lallubhai v. Cassibai (1881) 5 Bom. 110, 121, 7 I.A. 212, 234; Adit Narayan v. Mahabir Prasad (1921) 48 I.A. 86, 95, 6 Pat. L.J. 140, 60 I.C. 251, ('21) A.PC. 53; Vedachela v. Subramania (1921) 48 I.A. 349, 354, 44 Mad. 753, 64 I.C. 402, ('22) A.PC. 33; Parot Bapalal v. Mehta Harilal (1895) 19 Bom. 631; Babu Lal v. Nanku Ram (1895) 22 Cal. 339; Suba Singh v. Sarafraz (1897) 19 All. 215 [F.B.]; Subramanya v. Siva Subramanya (1894) 17 Mad. 316; Appandai v. Bagubai (1910) 33 Mad. 439, 444, 5 I.C. 280; Chinnasami v. Kunju Pillai (1923) 35 Mad. 152. Pichandi v. E. Ramaswami ('71) A.M. 206. Father's father's son's son's daughter's son and second husband's son of mother of the propositus—latter preferred.

Under the Dayabhaga, it arises from spiritual efficacy, that is, the capacity for conferring spiritual benefit on the manes of paternal and maternal ancestors [s. 79].

But though under the Mitakshara the right to inherit does not arise from the right to offer oblations, the test to be applied, when a question of preference arises is, in the case of sagotra sapindas, the capacity to offer oblation (x), but, in the case of bhinnagotra sapindas, the "primary test" is "propinquity in blood" (y) and, "when the degree of blood relationship furnishes no certain guide," the test is the capacity for conferring spiritual benefit (z).

Different meanings of "sapinda" in the Mitakshara and the Dayabhaga.—In Buddhu Singh v. Laltu Singh (a), their Lordships of the Privy Council said: "It is now well settled by the decisions of this Board, Lallubhai Bappoobhoy v. Cassibai (b) and Ramchandra's case (c), that under the Mitakshara the sapinda-relationship arises 'between two people through their being connected by particles of one body', namely, that of the common ancestor, in other words, from community of blood in contra-distinction to the Dayabhaga notion of 'community in the offering of religious oblation'." (d)

The doctrine of spiritual benefit is explained in § § 79 to 87.

Illegitimate offspring.—The general principle of Hindu law is to limit heirship to a legitimate issue. The rules of inheritance relating to sapindas, samanodakas and bandhus are based upon marriage and a legitimate descent. They can only be departed from in favour of an illegitimate offspring on the basis of some well-established principles. One principle is that such departure can be made where there is a text or any statutory provision. In a case decided by the High Court of Nagpur, Sadu Ganaji v. Shankerrao (e), it was observed that there is no text or statutory provision to cover a case of succession to stridhan of a shudra woman where the question is whether an illegitimate son of a predeceased daughter of the woman succeeds in preference to the husband of the woman. There is a text in favour of an illegitimate son of a shudra. There is no text dealing with the share of an illegitimate daughter or an illegitimate grandson or any other illegitimate relation. It was held that the illegitimate son of the daughter was not entitled to succeed in preference to her husband.

37. Gotraja sapindas and bhinna-gotra sapindas.—(1) The Mitakshara divides sapindas or blood relations into two classes, namely:—

(a) gotraja sapindas, that is, sapindas belonging to the same gotra or family as the deceased; and

(b) bhinna-gotra sapindas, that is, sapindas belonging to a different gotra or family from the deceased.

Gotraja sapindas are all agnates, that is, persons connected with the deceased by an unbroken line of male descent, as for instance, a son's son, a son's son's son, or a brother's son. If challenged, the identity of gotra (f) and the continuity of the lineage, not broken by an adoption into another gotra (g) must be established. Bhinna-gotra sapindas are all cognates, that is, persons related to the deceased through a female such as a sister's son, a brother's daughter's son, etc. Bhinna-gotra sapindas are called bandhus in the Mitakshara, and are commonly known by that name.

---

(x) Bhyah Ram Singh v. Bhyah Ugur Singh (1872) 13 M.I.A. 373, 392; Buddha Singh v. Laltu Singh (1915) 42 I.A. 208, 217, 227, 228, 37 All. 604, 613, 623, 624, 30 I.C. 5, ('15) A.PC. 70.

(y) Balasubrahmanya Pandea Thalaivar v. Subbayya Tevar (1938) 65 I.A. 93 (1938) Mad. 551, 40 Bom. L.R. 704, 172 I.C. 724, ('38) A.PC. 34.

(z) Vedachela v. Subramana (1921) 48 I.A. 349, 41 Mad. 753, 64 I.C. 402, ('22) A.PC. 33; Jatindranath Ray v. Nagendranath Ray (1931) 58 I.A. 72, 59 Cal. 576, 135 I.C. 637, ('31) A.PC. 268; Ademma v. Hanuma Reddi (1938) Mad. 260, ('37) A.M. 967.

(a) (1915) 42 I.A. 208, 217, 37 All. 604, 613 30 I.C. 529, ('15) A.PC. 70.

(b) (1880) 5 Bom. 110, 121, 7 I.A. 212, 234.

(c) Ramchandra v. Vinayak (1914) 41 I.A. 290, 298, 42 Cal. 384, 404, 25 I.C. 290, ('14) A.PC. 1.

(d) Ibid.

(e) (1955) Nag. 467, ('55) A.N. 84.

(f) Jadunath Kuar v. Bisheshar Bakhsh Singh (1932) 59 I.A. 173, 36 C.W.N. 1073, 136 I.C. 747, ('32) A.PC. 142.

(g) Lal Hari Har Partap Baksh Singh v. Raja Bajrang Bahadur Singh (1938) 9 Luck. 121, 144 I.C. 529, (33) A.O. 197.

(2) Gotraja sapindas are sub-divided into two classes, namely, (1) sapindas technically so called, and (2) samanodakas.

It will be seen from the above that the word "sapinda" is used in the Mitakshara in two senses. In its larger sense it means a person having the same pinda or community of particles of the same body with the deceased, that is, a blood relation. In its narrower sense, the sapindaship ceases with the fifth degree on the mother's side and the seventh degree on the father's side. That is, a person is said to be the sapinda of another if, when he is related through his father, he is not more than seven degrees from the common ancestor, and when related through the mother not more than five degrees from the common ancestor (h). In this sense, as there are no females in the pedigree of a gotraja sapinda, the sapindas include blood relations to the seventh degree only reckoned from and inclusive of the deceased as defined in sec. 39.

In the following sections of this chapter the word "sapinda" is used in its narrower sense.

38. The three classes of heirs.—(1) There are three classes of heirs recognized by the Mitakshara, namely:—

(a) Gotraja sapindas;

(b) Samanodakas; and

(c) Bandhus.

(2) The first class succeeds before the second, the second succeeds before the third.

39. Gotraja Sapindas.—The gotraja Sapindas of a person, according to the Mitakshara (i), are—

(i) his 6 male descendants in the male line;

that is, his son, son's son, son's son's son, etc. being $S_1$ to $S_6$ in the table given on p. 107 below.

(ii) his 6 male ascendants in the male line, the wives of the first three of them, and probably also of the next three;

that is his father, father's father, father's father's father, etc., being $F_1$ to $F_6$ in the table and their wives, that is $M_1$ to $M_6$ being the mother, father's mother, father's father's mother, etc.

(iii) the 6 male descendants in the collateral male line of each of his male ascendants;

(1) that is, $x_1$ to $x_6$ in the line of $F_1$, being his brother, brother's son, brother's son's son, etc.

(2) $x_1$ to $x_6$ in the line of $F_2$, being his paternal uncle, paternal uncle's son, etc.;

(3) $x_1$ to $x_6$ in the line of $F_3$, being his paternal grand-uncle, paternal grand-uncle's son, etc.;

(4) $x_1$ to $x_6$ in the line of $F_4$;

(5) $x_1$ to $x_6$ in the line of $F_5$; and

(6) $x_1$ to $x_6$ in the line of $F_6$.

(iv) his wife, daughter, and daughter's son.

---

(h) Mitakshara chap. III, v. 53, quoted in Ramchandra v. Vinayak (1914) 41 I.A. 290, 42 Cal. 384, 408, 25 I.C. 290, ('14) A.PC. 1.

(i) Sarkar's Hindu Law, 7th ed., p. 97; Sarvadhikari's "Principles of Hindu Law of Inheritance" 2nd ed., p. 530; Bhyah Ram v. Bhyah Ugur (1870) 13 M.I.A. 373, 394.

The sapindas are 57 in number as shown below:—

| | |
|---|---|
| $S_1$ to $S_6$ .. .. .. .. .. | 6 |
| $F_1$ to $F_6$ and their wives $M_1$ to $M_6$ .. .. .. | 12 |
| $x_1$ to $x_6$ in each of the six lines from $F_1$ to $F_6$ .. .. | 36 |
| Wife, daughter and daughter's son .. .. .. | 3 |
| | 57 |

It will be seen that the sapinda relationship extends to seven degrees reckoned from and inclusive of the deceased, this being the Hindu mode of counting degrees. It is six degrees, if you exclude the deceased. The wife becomes a sapinda of the husband on marriage. The daughter's son is not a gotraja sapinda: he is a bandhu for he is related to the deceased through a female. For the purposes of succession, however, he is ranked with gotraja sapindas.

A sapinda, according to the Mitakshara, means a person connected with the same pinda or body. See § 36 above.

In the case of the sons of a prostitute, there can be no gotraja sapinda relationship between them or their agnate male descendants as the father is unknown (j).

40. Samanodakas.—The sapinda relationship, as stated above, extends to seven degrees reckoned from and inclusive of the deceased. The samanodakas of a person include all his agnates from the 8th to the 14th degree (k).

The samanodakas are shown in the table given on p. 107 in thick black type. They are 147 in number counting up to the 14th degree only; they are:—

| | |
|---|---|
| $S_7$ to $S_{13}$ in the descending line .. .. .. | 7 |
| $F_7$ to $F_{13}$ in the ascending line .. .. .. | 7 |
| $x_7$ to $x_{13}$ in each of six collateral lines from $F_1$ to $F_6$ | $7 \times 6 = 42$ |
| $x_1$ to $x_{13}$ in each of the 7 collateral lines $F_7$ to $F_{13}$ | $13 \times 7 = 91$ |
| | 147 |

Samanodakas are those male relations of a Hindu to whom he offers oblations of water while performing the Sradha ceremony. See sec. 80.

41. Table of Gotraja sapindas and samanodakas.—The table given on p. 107 is a table of Gotraja sapindas and samanodakas (l).

The thick black lines show where the sapinda relationship ends, and the samanodaka relationship begins.

The samanodakas are shown in thick black type; the rest are sapindas.

W is the widow of the deceased owner, d is his daughter and d's son is his daughter's son.

$S_1$ to $S_{13}$ are the son, the son's son, the son's son's son, etc., of the deceased.

$F_1$ to $F_{13}$ are his father, father's father, father's father's father, etc.

$M_1$ to $M_6$ are his mother, father's mother, father's father's mother, etc.

$x_1$ to $x_{13}$ in the line of $F_1$ are his brother, brother's son, brother's son's son, etc.

$x_1$ to $x_{13}$ in the line of $F_2$ are his paternal uncle, paternal uncle's son, paternal uncle's son's son, etc.

---

(j) Krishna Mudaliar v. Marimuthu Mudaliar & Ors. (1940) Mad. 109, ('39) A.M. 862, (1939) 2 M.L.J. 423.

(k) Atmaram v. Baitrao (1935) 62 I.A. 139, 155 I.C. 330, ('35) A.PC. 57, approving Naraini v. Chandi (1887) 9 All. 467; Rama Row v. Kuttiya (1917) 40 Mad. 654, 659, 34 I.C. 294, ('17) A.M. 872 and disapproving Devkore v. Amritram (1885) 10 Bom. 372; Ram Baran v. Kamla Prasad (1910) 32 All. 594, 6 I.C. 698.

(l) This table is an enlargement of the table given in Saravadhikari's "Principles of the Hindu Law of Inheritance", 2nd ed., p. 527.

$x_1$ to $x_{13}$ in the line of $F_3$ are his paternal grand-uncle, paternal grand-uncle's son, etc. and so on in the remaining lines from $F_4$ to $F_{13}$.

The table does not include female heirs recognised in the Bombay State.

$F_1$ to $F_{13}$ is the ascending line; $S_1$ to $S_{13}$ is the descending line; $x_1$ to $x_{13}$ are the thirteen collateral lines.

42. Succession in the Bombay State.—The rules of inheritance in force in the Bombay State differ in some respects from those in force in the Benares, Mithila and Madras schools. Again in those parts of the Bombay State where the Mayukha is the prevailing authority, that is, the island of Bombay, Gujarat and the North Konkan, the rules of inheritance are in some respects different from those prevailing in other parts of that State. The order of succession in the Bombay State is given separately in Chapter VI (§§ 71-77).

Table of Sapindas and Samanodakas according to the Mitakshara Law.

Note :—For explanation of the table, see § 41.

43. Order of succession among sapindas.—The sapindas succeed in the following order:—

1-3. Son, grandson (son's son) and great-grandson (son's son's son), and (after 14th April 1937) widow, predeceased son's widow, and predeceased son's predeceased son's widow.—A son, a grandson whose father is dead, and a great-grandson whose father and grandfather are both dead, succeed simultaneously as a single heir to the separate or self-acquired property of the deceased with rights of survivorship (m). See § 31, ill. (a) and § 32.

After 14th April 1937, a widow takes the same share as a son. The widow of a predeceased son inherits in like manner as a son if there is no son surviving of such predeceased son: and in like manner as a son's son, if there is surviving a son or son's son of such predeceased son. The same rule applies mutatis mutandis to the widow of a predeceased son of a predeceased son.

(i) Take per stirpes.—The son, grandson and great-grandson take per stirpes and not per capita. See § 29 and illustration thereto.

(ii) Son born after partition.—Where there has been a partition between a father and his sons, and a son is subsequently born to him, such son takes not only the share of the father in the joint property obtained by him on partition, but the whole of the property acquired by the father before or after partition to the exclusion of the divided son (n). A and his two sons, B and C, constitute together a joint family. B and C separate from A. After the division a son D is born to A. A and D remain joint. A then dies leaving D. D is entitled not only to A's separated share of the joint property, but to the whole of A's self-acquired property. See § 310.

(iii) Divided and undivided.—Where there are sons by different wives, it often happens that the sons by one wife take their share of the joint property from the father and separate from him, and the father continues joint with the sons by his other wife. Suppose now that the father dies leaving self-acquired property, some acquired before and some after partition. Who is entitled to the property? According to a Full Bench decision of the Allahabad High Court (o) and rulings of other High Courts (p) the undivided sons and their branches succeed to the whole of such property to the exclusion of the divided sons and their branches.

(iv) Adopted son.—Adoption confers upon the adoptee the same rights and privileges in the family of the adopter as the legitimate son, subject to certain qualifications. See § 494. Also see § 497. In Andhra an illatom son-in-law is a boy incorporated in the family with a view to give the daughter in marriage and is customarily recognised as an heir in the absence of a natural born son (s).

(v) Illegitimate sons.—The illegitimate sons of a Brahman, Kshatriya, or Vaisya are entitled to maintenance, and not to any share of the inheritance (t). See Mitakshara, ch. I, s. 12, v. 3.

The illegitimate son of a Sudra, however, is entitled to a share of the inheritance provided (1) he is the son (putra) of a dasi, that is, a Hindu (u) concubine in the continuous and exclusive keeping of his father at the time of his birth and (2)

---

(m) Marudayi v. Doraisami (1907) 30 Mad. 348; Gangadhar v. Ibrahim (1923) 47 Bom. 556, 72 I.C. 307, ('23) A.B. 265.

(n) Nawal Singh v. Bhagwan Singh (1882) 4 All. 427, 429.

(o) Mst. Ram Dei v. Mst. Gyarsi (1949) All. 160 (F.B.)

(p) Fakirappa v. Yellappa (1898) 22 Bom. 101; Nana v. Ramchandra (1909) 32 Mad. 377, 2 I.C. 510; Viravan v. Srinivasachariar (1921) 44 Mad. 499, 503-504, 62 I.C. 944, ('21) A.M. 168 [F.B.]; Narasimham v. Narasimham (1932) 55 Mad. 577, 137 I.C. 765, ('32) A.M. 361; Badri Nath v. Hardeo (1930) 5 Luck. 649, 123 I.C. 861, ('30) A.O. 77 [The case of Kunwar Bahadur v. Madho Prasad (1918) 17 All. L.J. 151, 49 I.C. 620, ('19) A.A. 223, relied upon in Badri Nath's case does not support the decision in that case]; Ambika v. Jamuna Prasad (1942) 17 Luck. 72; Satruhan Prasad v. Sudip Narain ('55) A.P. 408, I.L.R. (1955) Pat. 298. Vishweshwarlal v. Bhuramal ('68) A. Raj. 277; Inder Narayan v. Rup Narayan ('65) A.M.P. 107; Girdharilal v. Fatehchand ('55) A. Madh. Bha. 148.

(s) P. Lakshmi Reddy v. L. Lakshmi Reddy ('57) A.SC. 314; P. Venkateswarlu v. Raghavulu ('57) A. Andh. Pra. 604.

(t) Roshan Singh v. Balwant Singh (1902) 22 All. 191, 27 I.A. 51; Chuoturya v. Sahub Purhulad (1857) 7 M.I.A. 18; Hiralal Laxmandas v. Meghraj Bhickchand (1938) Bom. 779, ('58) A.B. 433. Also see Mothey Anja Ratna v. Narayana Rao (1952) S.C.J. 507, (1952) 2 M.L.J. 342, ('53) S.C. 433 (factors to be considered in fixing maintenance).

(u) Lingappa v. Esudasan (1904) 27 Mad. 13 [a Christian woman is not a dasi]; Sitaram v. Ganpat (1923) 25 Bom. L.R. 429, 73 I.C. 412, ('23) A.B. 384 [a Mahomedan woman is not a dasi]; Mahabir Prasad v. Raj Bahadur Singh (1943) 18 Luck. 585 (Thakur woman).

he is not the fruit of an adulterous or incestuous intercourse (v). It is not necessary that his mother should remain a permanent concubine till the day of his father's death (w). A Brahmin mistress of a Sudra does not become a Sudra herself and their son is not a Dasiputra (x). It is not necessary to constitute a woman a dasi that she should not have been a married woman (y). She may be a widow when the illicit connection begins (z), or she may even be a married woman when such connection begins, provided that in the latter case the connection has ceased to be adulterous when the son is conceived, as where the husband dies before conception (a). The condition that the connection should not be adulterous or incestuous is not to be found in the texts; it seems to have been imposed on grounds of general morality (b). Nor is it necessary that a marriage could have taken place between the boy's father and his mother (c). He is not, however, entitled to full rights of inheritance. The text of the Mitakshara bearing on the subject is as follows:—

> "The son begotten by a Sudra on a female slave obtains a share by the father's choice or at his pleasure. But after [the demise of] the father, if there be sons of a wedded wife, let these brothers allow the son of the female slave to participate for half a share; that is, let them give him half [as much as is the amount of one brother's] allotment": Mitakshara, chap. I, sec. 12, verse 2.

The above text refers to the property of a separated householder (d).

In Ajit Kumar v. Ujayar Singh (*d*1) the Supreme Court summarised the law pertaining to the rights of inheritance of an illegitimate son to his putative father's self-acquired property.

In Kamulammal v. Visvanathaswami (e), the above text was interpreted by the Privy Council to mean that an illegitimate son takes one-half of what he would have taken if he was legitimate, that is to to say, the illegitimate son takes one-fourth ($\frac{1}{2} \times \frac{1}{2}$), and the legitimate son takes three-fourth. If a Sudra die leaving one legitimate son and 6 illegitimate sons, then if the 6 illegitimate sons were legitimate, they would each take 1/7; being illegitimate, each of them will take 1/2 of 1/7, that is, 1/14 and the six together will take 3/7, and the remaining 4/7 will go to the legitimate son (f). This interpretation placed on the relevant text by the Privy Council has been accepted by the Supreme Court (g).

Where there is no legitimate son, the illegitimate son is entitled to a moiety only of his father's estate when there is a widow, daughter or daughter's son (*d*1). Where there is no legitimate son, but a daughter or daughter's son, the illegitimate son takes one-half of the whole estate, and the other half goes to the daughter, or to the daughter's son, as the case may be (h). According to the

---

(v) Rahi v. Govind (1876) 1 Bom. 97; Sadu v. Baiza (1880) 4 Bom. 37; Gangabai v. Bandu (1916) 40 Bom. 369, 32 I.C. 986 ('16) A.B. 283; Ram Kali v. Jamma (1908) 30 All. 508; Rajani Nath Das v. Nitai Chandra Dei (1921) 48 Cal. 643, 63 I.C. 50, ('21) A.C. 820 [F.B.] overruling Narain v. Rakhal (1876) 1 Cal. 1; Kirpal v. Sukurmoni (1882) 19 Cal. 91, and Ram Saran v. Tek Chand (1901) 28 Cal. 194 See Bai Nagubai v. Bai Monghibai (1926) 52 I.A. 153, 50 Bom. 604, 96 I.C. 20, ('26) A.PC. 73 [on appeal from (1923) 47 Bom. 401, 69 I.C. 291, ('23) A.B. 190]. Manickchand v. Bhagwandas ('64) A.P. 353; Shibu v. Pandu ('67) A.J.&K. 81. The illegitimate son of a Sudra who is the offspring of an adulterous or incestuous intercourse is entitled to maintenance only [§ 551]. Reference may also be made to Gopala Rao v. Sitharamamma ('65) A.S.C. 1970.

(w) Uderam v. Thagga (1949) Nag. 248.

(x) Ramchandra Doddappa v. Hanamnaik Dodnaik (1936) 60 Bom. 75, 37 Bom. L.R. 920, 160 I.C. 99, ('36) A.B. 1; Bachubhai v. Dhanlaxmi ('61) A. Guj. 141.

(y) (1876) 1 Bom. 97, supra: Subramania v. Rathnavelu (1918) 41 Mad. 44, 47, 42 I.C. 556, ('18) A.M. 1346. Ramchandra v. Sadashiva Rao ('68) A. Mys. 85.

(z) (1916) 40 Bom. 369, 32 I.C. 986, ('16) A.B. 283, supra.

(a) Tukaram v. Dinkar (1931) 33 Bom. L.R. 289, 131 I.C. 883, ('31) A.B. 221; Mt. Daulat Kuar v. Bishundeo Singh (1940) 19 Pat. 382, 189 I.C. 883, ('40) A.P. 310. Reference may also be made to Tatayya v. Nakaraju ('58) A.A.P. 611.

(b) Soundararajan v. Arunachalam (1916) 39 Mad. 136, 151, 33 I.C. 858, ('16) A.M. 1170 [F.B.].

(c) (1916) 39 Mad. 136, 33 I.C. 858, ('16) A.M. 1170 [F.B.], supra; Rajani Nath Das v. Nitai Chandra Dei (1921) 48 Cal. 643, 63 I.C. 50, ('21) A.C. 820 [F.B.].

(d) Ranoji v. Kandoji (1885) 8 Mad. 557, 561 Cf. Deivanai Achi v. Chidambaram Chettiar ('54) A.M. 657, 671, (1955) 1 M.L.J. 120.

(*d*1) ('61) A.S.C. 1334, 1337. Also see Sadashiv v. Bala ('72) A.B. 164.

(e) (1923) 50 I.A. 32, 46 Mad. 167, 71 I.C. 643, ('23) A.PC. 8 disapproving: Kesarce v. Samardhan (1873) 5 N.W.P. 9: Chellammal v. Ranganatham (1911) 34 Mad. 277, 12 I.C. 247, (1916) 40 Bom. 369, 32 I.C. 986, ('16) A.B. 283, supra.

(f) Maharaja of Kolhapur v. Sundaram (1925) 48 Mad. 1, 93 I.C. 705, ('25) A.M. 497.

(g) Gur Narain Das v. Gur Tahal Das (1952) S.C.R. 869, 875, (1952) 2 M.L.J. 251, ('52) A.SC. 225.

(h) Shesgiri v. Girewa (1890) 14 Bom. 282; Meenakshi v. Appakutti (1910) 33 Mad. 226, 4 I.C. 299; Annayyan v. Chinnan (1910) 33 Mad. 366, 5 I.C. 84.

Privy Council decision in Kamulammal's case referred to above, the half share which an illegitimate son takes is a half of that which he would have taken had he been legitimate. Applying that test, it is clear that had the illegitimate son been legitimate, he would have taken the whole estate to the exclusion of the daughter: being illegitimate, he takes one-half of the whole, and the daughter or daughter's son, as the case may be, takes the other half (i). If there be no widow, daughter, or daughter's son, the illegitimate son takes the whole estate (j). An adopted son stand on the same footing as a legitimate son (k).

Where an illegitimate son and a widow of the deceased Sudra inherit his property in equal shares and the widow thereafter dies, the illegitimate son, by operation of the doctrine of reverter, becomes entitled to the other half share taken by the widow (*k*1).

The share allotted to the illegitimate son under the Mitakshara is not in lieu of maintenance: it is in recognition of his status as a son (l).

The legitimate son and the illegitimate son inherit their father's property as coparceners with a right of survivorship and necessarily the right to claim partition of the self-acquired as well as ancestral property left by the father belongs to them (*l*1). Thus if a Sudra dies leaving a legitimate son A, and an illegitimate son B, and A dies before partition without leaving male issue, B will take A's share by survivorship to the exclusion of A's daughter, mother or other heir (m). See § 312.

The right of an illegitimate son of a Sudra to inherit to his father is not merely a personal right: it passes on his death to his legitimate issue. Thus if a Sudra A has a legitimate son B and an illegitimate son C and C predeceases A, leaving a legitimate son D, then on A's death, D will take a moiety of the share of B, that is, B will take 3/4, and D will take 1/4, that being the share of his father C. But it would seem that an illegitimate son of a predeceased legitimate son of a Sudra is not entitled to succeed on the ground of representation (n).

Where, on partition between a legitimate son and an illegitimate son, property is allotted to the widow, the illegitimate son can claim, on the widow's death, a share in the property allotted to her, as it stands on the same footing as property inherited from her husband (o).

The illegitimate son of a Sudra inherits only to his father, he has no claim to inherit to collaterals. Thus if a Sudra dies leaving a legitimate son A and an illegitimate son B, they will both inherit their father's property as coparceners. If they divide the property, A will take 3/4 and B will take 1/4. If A dies after partition, his share will pass to his own heirs, but in no case to B, B not being amongst his heirs. B can inherit to his father alone, and not to his father's legitimate sons, nor his father's brothers nor any other collaterals (p). If A dies while he is joint with B without leaving male issue his share would go to B by survivorship. But A's separate property would pass to his own heirs, and not in any case to B. On the same principle, if a Sudra dies leaving an illegitimate son of his father and a half-brother, the half-brother is entitled to succeed, the illegitimate son being excluded from all collateral succession (q). And just as an illegitimate son is not entitled to inherit to collaterals, so a collateral is not entitled to inherit to him. Thus if a Sudra dies leaving a legitimate son A and an illegitimate son B, and A dies leaving a legitimate son C, and B dies without leaving any relations, C, who is a collateral, is not entitled to succeed to B's property (r).

The son of a Zamindar born of the katar form of marriage among the Tanwars or Kanwars (Sudra) is illegitimate and is not entitled to the Zamindary in prefer-

---

(i) Karuppayee v. Ramaswami (1932) 55 Mad. 856, 137 I.C. 645, ('32) A.M. 440.

(j) Sarasvati v. Mannu (1879) 2 All. 134, Mitakshara, chap. 1, sec. 12, para 1.

(k) Maharaja of Kolhapur v. Sundaram (1925) 48 Mad. 1, 93 I.C. 705, ('25) A.M. 497.

(*k*1) Ajit Kumar v. Ujayar ('61) A.S.C. 1334. Also see Karuppayee v. Ramaswami cited in f.n. (i) above.

(l) Vellaiyappa Chetty v. Natarajan (1931) 55 Mad. 1, 58 I.A. 402, 134 I.C. 1084, ('31) A.PC. 294.

(*l*1) See cases noted in Apparao v. Narasimha Rao ('62) A.A.P. 515.

(m) Raja Jogendra v. Nityanund (1891) 18 Cal. 151, 17 I.A. 128, [on app. from (1885) 11 Cal. 702], approving Sadu v. Baiza (1884) 4 Bom. 37; Gur Narain Das v. Gur Tahal Das, supra.

(n) Govindarajulu v. Balu Ammal (1951) 2 M.L.J. 209, ('52) A.M. 1 (case-law considered).

(o) Bhagwantrao v. Punjaram (1938) Nag. 255, 174 I.C. 201, ('38) A.N. 1.

(p) Shome Shankar v. Rajesar (1899) 21 All. 99; Subramania v. Rathnavelu (1918) 41 Mad. 44, 42 I.C. 556, ('18) A.M. 1346 [F.B.]: Ayiswaryanandaji v. Sivaji (1926) 49 Mad. 116, 92 I.C. 928, ('26) A.M. 84; Raj Fateh Singh v. Baldeo Singh (1928) 3 Luck. 416, 109 I.C. 310 ('28) A.O. 233.

(q) Dharma v. Sakharam (1920) 44 Bom. 185, 55 I.C. 306, ('20) A.B. 205.

(r) Zipru v. Bomtya (1922) 46 Bom. 424, 64 I.C. 975, ('22) A.B. 175.

ence to the Zamindar's cousin (s). The only question raised before the Judicial Committee was as to the validity of the marriage. The other point was conceded obviously because the Zamindari was impartible and the cousin took by survivorship. (See § 587).

The illegitimate son is not entitled to succeed to the stridhan of his father's wife (t).

There can be no coparcenary between a Sudra father and his illegitimate sons. But it has been held by the High Court of Bombay that on the father's death they hold the property inherited by them from him as coparceners and none of them can dispose of his interest in it by will (u).

(iv) Son born of anuloma marriage.—Under the Hindu law as administered in the Bombay State, the marriage of a Brahman male with a Sudra woman is an anuloma marriage and is valid. A son born of such a marriage is legitimate, but he is entitled only to a one-tenth share in the estate of his father. As regards the estate of his uncle also, he is entitled not to the whole of it, but only to a one-tenth share in it (v).

4. Widow:

(i) Widow's estate.—The widow takes only a limited interest called the widow's estate in the estate of her husband [§ 176]. On her death the estate goes not to her heirs, but to the next heirs of her husband, technically called reversioners (w) [§§ 168, 170]. She is entitled only to the income of the property inherited by her. She has no power to dispose of the corpus of the property except in certain cases [§§ 178-180]. She may, however, alienate her life interest in the estate. Sec. 14 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, subject to certain qualifications, confers full heritable capacity on a female heir in respect of all property acquired by her whether before or after the commencement of that enactment.

(ii) Unchastity.—An unchaste widow was not entitled, under Hindu law to inherit to her husband. But once the husband's estate had vested in her (which could only happen if she was chaste at the time of her husband's death), it was not divested by unchastity subsequent to her husband's death (x). It has been held in a decision of the Bombay High Court (y) that the effect of the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, was to remove the bar of unchastity because the Act applied notwithstanding any rule of Hindu law or custom to the contrary. The Calcutta High Court (z) and the Madras High Court (a) have taken the contrary view.

(iii) Re-marriage.—The re-marriage of a widow, though now legalized by the Hindu Widow's Re-marriage Act, 1856, divests the estate inherited by her from her deceased husband. By her second marriage she forfeits the interest taken by her in her husband's estate, and it passes to the next heirs of her husband as if she were dead (s. 2 of the Act) (b). In a recent decision the High Court of Bombay explained the effect of section 2 of that Act read with S. 14(1) of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956 (*b*1). The reason for the rule laid down in section 2 is that a widow succeeds as the surviving half of her husband, and she ceases to be so on re-marriage. But a widow does not by re-marriage lose her right to succeed to the estate of her son (c) or her daughter (d), by her first

---

(s) Ram Saran Singh v. Mahabir Sewak Singh (1934) 61 I.A. 106, 147 I.C. 667, ('34) A.PC. 74.

(t) Ayiswaryanandaji v. Sivaji (1926) 49 Mad. 116, 92 I.C. 928 ('26) A.M. 84.

(u) Shamu v. Babu Aba (1928) 52 Bom. 300, 100 I.C. 116, ('28) A.B. 153. See Packiriswamy v. Doraswamy (1931) 9 Rang. 266, 271, 272, 132 I.C. 817, ('31) A.R. 216.

(v) Natha v. Mehta Chhotalal (1931) 55 Bom. 1, 130 I.C. 17, ('31) A.B. 89.

(w) Bhagwandeen v. Myna Baee (1867) 11 M.I.A. 487.

(x) Moniram v. Keri Kolitani (1880) 5 Cal. 776, 7 I.A. 115; Sellam v. Chinnammal (1901) 24 Mad. 441; Gangadhar v. Yellu (1912) 36 Bom. 138, 12 I.C. 714; Jadho Nagu v. Jadho Gangu ('58) Andh. Pra. 19.

(y) Akoba v. Sai Genu (1941) Bom. 438, ('41) A.B. 204, (1941) 43 Bom. L.R. 338.

(z) Kanailal v. Pannasashi Mitra (1953) 58 C.W.N. 743, ('54) A.C. 588.

(a) Ramaiyya v. Motayya (1952) Mad. 187, ('51) A.M. 954 (F.B.).

(b) Mussadi v. Mst. Chando ('56) A. Him. Pra. 45; Setabi Dei v. Ramdhani ('66) A.C. 60.

(*b*1) Pandurang v. Sindhu ('71) A.B. 413.

(c) Akora Suth v. Boreani (1869) 2 Beng. L.R. A.C. 199; Chamar Haru v. Kashi (1902) 26 Bom. 388; Basappa v. Rayava (1905) 29 Bom. 91 [F.B.]; Ramaswamy v. E. Thevar ('72) A.M. 314. In Pichandi v. E. Ramaswami ('71) A.M. 204 the competing heirs were father's father's son's son's daughter's son and the second husband's son of the mother of the propositus. The latter was preferred. Also see § 54: Atma bandhus: Entry No. 27. Also see § 43-7(iv)—Mother. Lakshmana v. Siva (1905) 28 Mad. 425; Kundan v. Secretary of State (1926) 7 Lah. 543, 96 I.C. 865, ('26) A.L. 673; Pannalal v. Harna Bai ('50) A. Hyd. 37; Fagunswami v. Dhum Lal ('51) A.C. 269; Fagunswani Das v. Dhum Lal (1951) 2 Cal. 76 (third marriage); Thyamma v. Giryamma ('60) A. Mys. 176.

(d) Bhiku v. Keshav (1924) 26 Bom. L.R. 235, 80 I.C. 512 ('24) A.B. 360.

husband. In a recent case a Full Bench of the High Court of Madhya Pradesh has held that a widow is upon her re-marriage divested of her husband's property which she has already obtained by inheritance to her son. She does not, however, forfeit self-acquired property of the son which she has inherited (*d*1).

Section 2 of the Hindu Widow's Re-marriage Act, 1856, does not apply to estate legally and wholly acquired by the widow, e.g. where under the husband's will she is permitted to re-marry or where an absolute estate is conferred on her. The question would be one of construction in any such case (e).

Does a Hindu widow who has ceased to be a Hindu before her re-marriage e.g. by conversion to Mahomedanism, forfeit her rights to her husband's property? Yes, according to the Calcutta (f), Madras (g), Bombay (h), and Patna (i) decisions. No, according to the Allahabad decisions (j).

There is a conflict of opinion as to whether a widow who is entitled to re-marry by the custom of the caste to which she belongs, forfeits her interest in her husband's estate by re-marriage. It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad and the Chief Court of Oudh, that she does not; by the other High Courts, that she does (k). The Allahabad view is that if the marriage of a Hindu widow takes place under an ancient custom existing from before 1856 when the Hindu Widow's Re-marriage Act was passed, the question whether or not she is divested of her interest in the estate of her previous husband depends upon that custom and that custom alone. In other words she would be divested of her interest only if such forfeiture is proved to be an incident of the custom itself and not otherwise (l). See the cases cited in § 563 below. The mere fact that there is a practice of re-marriage after 1856, would not necessarily be indicative of any ancient custom existing before the Act; such a custom has to be proved by the party relying on it (m).

(iv) Two or more widows.—Two or more widows succeeding as co-heirs to the estate of their deceased husband take as joint tenants with rights of survivorship and equal beneficial enjoyment. Thus if a Hindu dies leaving two widows A and B, they are entitled as between themselves to an equal share of the income, and on the death of either of them, the other is entitled to the whole of the income by survivorship. Though co-widows take as joint tenants, no one of them has a right to enforce an absolute partition of the estate against the others so as to destroy their right of survivorship. But they are entitled to obtain a partition of separate portions of the property so that each may enjoy her equal share of the income accruing therefrom, and the Court may, at suit of any one of them, pass a decree for separate possession and enjoyment. Each can deal as she pleases with her own life-interest, but she cannot alienate any part of the corpus of the estate by gift or will so as to prejudice the rights of the survivor or a future reversioner. If they act together they can burden the reversion with any debts contracted owing to legal necessity but one of them acting without the authority of the other, cannot prejudice the right of survivorship by burdening or alienating any part of the estate. The mere fact of partition between the two, while it gives each a right to the fruits of the separate estate assigned to her, does not imply a right to prejudice the claim of the survivor to enjoy the full fruits of the property during her lifetime (n). But the right

---

(*d*1) Bhondu v. Ramdayal ('60) A.M.P. 51.

(e) Thangavelu Asari v. Lakshmi Ammal ('57) A.M. 534.

(f) Matungini v. Ram Rutton (1892) 19 Cal. 289 [F.B.].

(g) Vitta v. Chatakondu (1918) 41 Mad. 1078, 48 I.C. 50, ('19) A.M. 854 (F.B.).

(h) Raghunath Shankar v. Lakshmibai (1935) 59 Bom. 417, 37 Bom. L.R. 150, 157 I.C. 658 ('35) A.B. 298.

(i) Mussammat Suraj v. Attar (1922) 1 Pat. 706, 67 I.C. 550, ('22) A.P. 378.

(j) Abdul Aziz v. Nirma (1913) 35 All. 466, 20 I.C. 335.

(k) See cases cited in § 563 below.

(l) Bhola Umar v. Mt. Kausilla (1933) 55 All. 24, 140 I.C. 631, ('32) A.A. 617, Jileba v. Parmesra ('50) A.A. 700.

(m) Bhola Umar v. Kausilla (1936) 58 All. 1034, 169 I.C. 504, ('37) A.A. 230.

(n) Bhugwandeen v. Myna Baee (1867) 11 M.I.A 487; Karpagathachi v. Nagarathinathachi ('65) S.C. 1752; Comm. of I.T. v. Indira ('60) A.S.C. 1172; Sri Gajapathi Nilamani v. Radhamani (1877) 1 Mad. 290, 4 I.A. 212, followed in Chhittar v. Gaura (1912) 34 All. 189, 13 I.C. 320; Mst. Sundar v. Parbati (1889) 12 All. 51, 16 I.A. 186; Gauri Nath Kakaji v. Gaya Kaur (1928) 55 I.A. 399, 111 I.C. 485, ('28) A.PC. 251; Appalasuri v. Kannamma (1926) 90 I.C. 881, ('26) A.M. 6; Mt. Gaya Dei v. Mt. Tulsha Deci (1935) 10 Luck. 567, 154 I.C. 125 ('35) A.O. 296. See also Jainarayan v. Hira (1933) 12 Pat. 778, 146 I.C. 322, ('33) A.P. 464; Dulhin Parbati Kuer v. Baijnath Prasad (1935) 14 Pat. 518; Sivanancha v. Thirunamakarsu ('51) A. Tra.-Cochin 26; Chanderjit Das v. Debi Das (1953) I All. 437, ('51) A.A. 522; Vaijnath v. Dagdudas ('54) A. Hyd. 65. Swaroop Narain v Bhanwar Kunwar ('67) A.M.P. 152 (no adverse possession).

of survivorship may be relinquished by agreement between the widows. Such an agreement may be effected orally and without a registered instrument (o). See § 181(C).

Co-widows being entitled to estate of their husband jointly with the incident of survivorship as mentioned above, it follows that if one of them re-marries her interest would pass to the other (*o*1).

Where a Hindu dies leaving only one widow, she can alienate her life-interest in the property inherited by her from her husband, but she cannot alienate the corpus of the property except for legal necessity. An alienation of the corpus except for legal necessity does not bind the next heirs of her husband who succeed to his estate after the widow's death. Thus if a Hindu dies, leaving a widow and a brother, and the widow sells or mortgages the corpus of the estate without legal necessity, the sale or mortgage binds only her life-interest. On her death, her husband's brother would succeed to the estate as his heir, and he would not be bound by the sale or mortgage, the same having been made without legal necessity (§§ 181-181B, 185).

Where a Hindu dies leaving two or more widows, and they are in joint possession of the estate, any one of them may alienate her undivided interest in her husband's property. If any one of the widows is in possession of a separate portion of the property whether it be by mutual agreement between them or under a decree of the Court, she may alienate her share of the income which is derived from that portion. But in either case the alienation cannot take effect or have validity beyond her lifetime. It is good only for her life, and on her death her interest in the property goes to the co-widow by survivorship. She cannot alienate her interest so as to defeat the right of survivorship of the co-widow. That can only be done with the consent of the co-widow (p). Thus it is possible for two co-widows, by an agreement among themselves to make an absolute partition of their joint estate so as to extinguish the right of survivorship-inter se. But any alienation on the strength of such arrangement will not affect the rights of the reversioners in anyway (q).

Two or more widows cannot by any agreement between them affect the rights of the ultimate reversioners (r).

4A. Predeceased son's widow, widow of predeceased son of predeceased son— (See § 35, supra.)

5. Daughter.—

(i) Priority among daughters.—Daughters do not inherit until all the widows are dead. As between daughters, the inheritance goes, first, to the unmarried daughters (s), next, to daughters who are married and "unprovided for", that is indigent, and lastly, to daughters who are married and are "enriched," that is, possessed of means (t). A married daughter may be a widow (u). No member of the second class can inherit while any member of the first class is in existence, and no member of the third class can inherit while any member of the first or the second class is in existence. The rule about one married daughter excluding the other married daughter from inheritance comes into

---

(o) Latchumammal v. Gangammal (1911) 34 Mad. 72, 7 I.C. 858.

(*o*1) Baratilal v. Bindabai ('63) A.M.P. 122.

(p) Bhugwandeen v. Myna Baee (1867) 11 M.I.A. 487; Hari Narayan v. Vitai (1907) 31 Bom. 560; Rammakkal v. Ramasami (1899) 22 Mad. 522; Nagarathinathachi v. Karpagathachi ('62) A.M. 482; Janoki Nath v. Mothuranath (1883) 9 Cal. 580; Durga Dat v. Gita (1911) 33 All. 443, 449, 9 I.C. 498; Nandi v. Sarap Lal (1917) 39 All. 463, 40 I.C. 71, ('17) A.A. 179.

(q) Hazarilal v. Halkulal (1948) Nag. 662.

(r) Sri Gajapati v. Pusapati (1893) 16 Mad. 1, 19 I.A. 184; Mahadevappa v. Basagawada (1904) 29 Bom. 346; Vadali v. Kotipalli (1903) 26 Mad. 334. See also Subbammal v. Avudaiyammal (1907) 30 Mad. 3.

(s) Jamnabai v. Khimji (1890) 14 Bom. 1, 13; Gobind v. Ram Adhin (1933) 8 Luck. 182, 140 I.C. 556, ('33) A.O. 31; Bayava v. Parvateva (1933) 35 Bom. L.R. 118, 144 I.C. 442, ('33) A.B. 126.

(t) Manki v. Kundan (1925) 47 All. 403, 87 I.C. 121, ('25) A.A. 375; Totawa v. Basawa (1899) 23 Bom. 229, Audh Kumari v. Chandra Dai (1879) 2 All. 561; Danno v. Darbo (1882) 4 All. 243; Savitribai v. Sidu (1945) Nag. 871. Reference may also be made to Dewala v. Rupsir ('60) A.M.P. 35. Latabati Palrani v. Dhubani ('66) A. Orissa 73 (each case may depend on its own facts); Sarala Bala v. Banamali ('64) A. Orissa 140.

(u) Rajrani v. Gomati (1928) 7 Pat. 820, 111 I.C. 673, ('28) A.P. 466.

operation only if one daughter is indigent while the other one is possessed of wealth. It does not apply where both the daughters are financially well off and well placed in life (v). The rules of preference are those stated above and there is no rule of preference that a daughter who is without issue is to be preferred to one with issue (w). Nor is there any rule that a daughter who is married to an idol and leads a life of prostitution is to be preferred to her married sisters (x). Reference may also be made to § 147 post.

(ii) Survivorship.—Two or more daughters of a class take the estate jointly as in the case of widows, with rights of survivorship (y). Any one daughter may alienate her life-interest in the property, but not so as to affect the rights of survivorship of the other daughters (z). And, like widows, daughters may enter into any agreement regarding their respective rights in their father's estate, provided such agreement does not prejudice the rights of reversioners (a). They may divide the estate merely with a view to convenient enjoyment, retaining the right of the survivor to take the whole on the death of one of them, or they may agree that the right of survivorship should be extinguished as between themselves (b). The agreement may be effected orally and without a registered writing (c). As to Bombay State, see note (iv) below.

(iii) Limited estate.—The daughter takes a limited interest in the estate of her father corresponding to the widow's estate. On her death, the estate passes not to her heirs, but to the next heirs of her father (d) [see § 169]. The next heirs of the father are called reversioners. As to Bombay State, see note (iv) below.

Section 14 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, subject to certain qualifications, confers full heritable capacity on a female heir in respect of all property acquired by her whether before or after the commencement of that enactment.

(iv) In the Bombay State.—Rules (ii) and (iii) do not apply in the Bombay State [see § 72, No. 7]. A has two daughters B and C. B has a daughter D. On A's death, his estate will go to B and C. In places other than the Bombay State, they each take a "woman's estate" with rights of survivorship. Therefore, on B's death, her interest in the estate will go, not to her daughter D, but to her sister C by survivorship. In the Bombay State, however, it is different. There on A's death B and C will each take an absolute interest in a moiety of the estate so that on B's death, her moiety will go to her heir D, and on C's death, her moiety will go to her own heirs.

(v) Unchastity.—Unchastity of a daughter is no ground for exclusion from inheritance (e), except that in Bombay, where there is an unmarried daughter who is a prostitute and a married daughter who is chaste, the latter succeeds in preference to the former (f). It may here be observed that under the Mitakshara law, a widow is the only female who is excluded from inheritance by reason of unchastity (g).

(vi) Illegitimate daughter.—The illegitimate daughter, even of a Sudra, has no rights of inheritance to her father (h). But she is entitled to inherit to her mother (i). An illegitimate daughter is not, however, entitled to succeed to the collaterals of her mother (j). See § § 163 and 164.

---

(v) Shivprasad v. Jankibai (1953) Bom. 219, (1952) 54 Bom. L.R. 940, ('53) A.B. 321.

(w) Rajamma v. Padmavatamma (1952) Mad. 668, ('51) A.M. 1047.

(x) Saraswathi Ammal v. Jagadambal (1953) S.C.R. 939, (1953) 1 M.L.J. 697, ('53) A.S.C. 201.

(y) Aumirtolall v. Rajoneekant (1875) 2 I.A. 113, 126, 15 Beng. L.R. 10, 24; Karpagathachi v. Nagarathinathachi ('65) A.S.C. 1752; Chhattar Singh v. Hukum Kunvar (1936) 58 All. 391; Surendranath Basu v. Radha Rani Debi (1940) 2 Cal. 41.

(z) Kanni v. Ammakannu (1900) 23 Mad. 504; Yelumalal Chetty v. Natesachari (1945) Mad. 35; Pathumma Beebi v. Krishna Asari ('61) A. Kerala 247.

(a) Kailash v. Kashi (1897) 24 Cal. 339; Alamelu v. Balu (1920) 43 Mad. 849, 26 I.C. 455, ('15) A.M 103.

(b) Sundarasiva v. Viyamma (1925) 48 Mad. 933, 91 I.C. 40, ('25) A.M. 1267.

(c) (1920) 43 Mad. 849, 853, 26 I.C. 455, ('15) A.M. 103, supra.

(d) Chotay Lall v. Chunnoo Lall (1879) 4 Cal. 744, 6 I.A. 15; Muttu v. Dorasinga (1881) 3 Mad. 290, 8 I.A. 99.

(e) Adoyapa v. Rudrava (1880) 4 Bom. 104; Kojiyadu v. Lakshmi (1882) 5 Mad. 149, 156.

(f) Tara v. Krishna (1907) 31 Bom. 495; Govind Bhawshet v. Bhike Mahadeoshet (1945) 5 F.C.R. 1.

(g) Vedammal v. Vedanayaga (1908) 31 Mad. 100.

(h) Bhikya v. Babu (1908) 32 Bom. 562.

(i) Arunagiri v. Ranganayaki (1898) 21 Mad. 40.

(j) Pandurang v. Administrator-General of Bombay (1953) Bom. 435, ('53) A.B. 127, (1952) 54 Bom. L.R. 892.

(vii) Exclusion by custom.—A daughter may be excluded from inheritance by special family or local custom (k).

In the Makkathayee Ezhava community of the erstwhile State of Cochin there is no custom entitling a daughter to any share along with the son in property left by the deceased father (*k*1).

6. Daughter's son—

(i) When entitled to succeed.—The daughter's son is not entitled to succeed if there be any daughter living and capable of inheriting (l). A daughter's son is strictly a bandhu or bhinna-gotra sapinda, being related to the deceased through a female, but he inherits with gotraja sapindas by virtue of express texts (m); see note (v). He succeeds not as an heir to his mother, but as an heir to his own maternal grandfather.

(ii) Takes as full owner.—The daughter's son takes the estate as full owner like any other male heir, and on his death the succession passes to his heirs and not to the heirs of his maternal grandfather (n).

(iii) Take per capita.—Daughters' sons take per capita, not per stirpes. A has two daughters B and C. B has two sons, and C has three. B and C die in A's life-time. A then dies leaving the five grandsons. The estate will be divided into five shares, each grandson taking one share.

(iv) Where daughter's sons are joint.—It was held by the Judicial Committee in 1902 that two or more sons by a daughter, living as members of a joint family, take the estate inherited by them from their maternal grandfather as joint tenants with rights of survivorship (o). It is doubtful how far this remains good law [See § 31(1)(b) and § 223(2)]. But sons by different daughters would take as tenants-in-common, for there can be no coparcenary between sons by different daughters (p). A dies leaving two grandsons C and D by different predeceased daughters, C dies leaving a widow. C's interest in the estate will pass to her as his heir, and not to D by survivorship.

(v) The daughter's son occupies a peculiar position in the Hindu law. He is a bhinna-gotra sapinda or bandhu, but he comes in before parents and other more remote gotraja sapindas. The reason is that according to the old practice it was competent to a Hindu who had no son to appoint a daughter to raise up issue to him. Such a daughter, no doubt, was the lawful wife of her husband, but her son, called putrika putra, became the son of her father. Such a son was equal to an aurosa or legitimate son, and took his rank, according to several authorities, as the highest among the secondary sons. Although the practice of appointing a daughter to raise up issue for her father became obsolete, the daughter's son continued to occupy the place that was assigned to him in the order of inheritance and even now he takes a place practically next after the male issue, the widow and the daughters being simply interposed during their respective lives (q). The difference in his position under the old law and the present law is, that under the former he became by a fiction of law a member of his maternal grandfather's family while under the present law he is a member of his own father's family, but is also regarded as a son's son to his maternal grandfather for purposes of inheritance (r). "In regard to the obsequies of ancestors," says the Mitakshara, "daughter's sons are considered as son's sons": Mit. ch. ii, sec. 2, v. 6.

---

(k) Bajrangi v. Monokarnika (1908) 30 All. 1, 35 I.A 1; Parbati v. Chandarpal (1909) 31 All. 457, 36 I.A. 125, 4 I.C. 25; Balgobind v. Badri Prasad (1923) 50 I.A. 196, 45 All. 413, 74 I.C. 449, ('23) A.PC. 70; Raj Bachan Singh v. Bhanwar (1929) 4 Luck. 690, 118 I.C. 760, ('29) A.O. 296. In Rajpati v. Jagmohan ('52) A.A. 309 the anomaly that can arise by operation of S. 3(a) of the Act II[2] of 1929 was pointed out.

(*k*1) Kamalakshy v. Narayani ('68) A. Kerala 123.

(l) Bajinath v. Mahabir (1878) 1 All. 608; Sant Kumar v. Deo Saran (1886) 8 All. 365.

(m) Srinivas v. Dandayudapani (1889) 12 Mad. 411.

(n) Muttu v. Dorasinga (1881) 3 Mad. 290, 8 I.A. 99; Muttuvaduganadha v. Periasami (1896) 19 Mad. 451, 23 I.A. 128.

(o) Venkayyamma v. Venkataramanayyamma (1902) 25 Mad. 678, 29 I.A. 156.

(p) Vythinatha v. Yeggia (1904) 27 Mad. 382, 385.

(q) In Bombay, the daughter takes not for life but absolutely.

(r) Karuppai v. Sankaranarayanan (1904) 27 Mad. 300, 311-312. See also Babui Rita v. Mal Puran (1916) 1 Pat. L.J. 581, 38 I.C. 44, ('16) A.P. 8; Ghanta China v. Moparthi (1947) 51 C.W.N. 875, 883 (P.C.).

7. Mother (t).—

(i) Mayukha Law.—In cases governed by the Mayukha, the father is preferred to the mother (u).

(ii) Limited interest.—The mother takes a limited interest in the estate of her son corresponding to the widow's estate. On her death, the estate passes not to her heirs, but to her son's heirs (v).
Section 14 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, subject to certain qualifications, confers full heritable capacity on a female heir in respect of all property acquired by her whether before or after the commencement of that enactment.

(iii) Unchastity and remarriage.—Unchastity of a mother is no bar to her succeeding as heir to her son, nor does remarriage constitute any such bar (w).

(iv) Step-mother.—A step-mother is not entitled to inherit to her step-son (x). In the Bombay State, however, she is an heir for she is there regarded as a sagotra sapinda but she comes after the female heirs recognised in Bombay are exhausted (y). See § 68 below (z).

(v) Adoptive mother.—Mother includes adoptive mother, so that an adoptive mother, according to the Mitakshara law, succeeds before the adoptive father (z). On the death of a son adopted in dwyamushyayana form, the adoptive mother and natural mother both inherit equally as co-heiresses (a).

8. Father.—

Mayukha Law.—In cases governed by the Mayukha, the father succeeds before the mother. See above, "mother," note No. 7.

9. Brother.—

(a) of the whole blood.

(b) of the half-blood.

(i) Whole before half-blood.—Brothers of the whole blood succeed before those of the half-blood (b). The half-brothers referred to here are sons of the same father by a different mother. Sons of the same mother by a different father are not entitled to succeed as "brothers" (c).

(ii) Takes before brother's son.—The brother succeeds before the brother's son (d).

(iii) Mayukha Law.—In cases governed by the Mayukha, brothers of the half-blood share with the father's father (e).

(iv) To the separate property of a person all his brothers succeed though some are joint with him as to other property and others are completely divided from him (f).

---

(t) Anandi v. Hari (1909) 33 Bom. 404, 3 I.C. 745.

(u) Khodabhai v. Bahadhar (1882) 6 Bom. 541.

(v) Vrijbhukandas v. Bai Parvati (1908) 32 Bom. 26; Jullessur v. Uggar (1883) 9 Cal. 725.

(w) Kojiyadu v. Lakshmi (1882) 5 Mad. 149; Vedammal v. Vedanayaga (1908) 31 Mad. 100; Dal Singh v. Dini (1910) 32 All. 155, 5 I.C. 521; Baldeo v. Mathura (1911) 33 All. 702, 11 I.C. 43 [unchastity]; Basappa v. Rayava (1905) 29 Bom. 91 (F.B.) [remarriage]; Bhondu v. Ramdayal ('60) A.M.P. 51 (F.B.); Thayamma v. Giriyamma ('60) A. Mys. 176. Ramaswamy v. E. Thevar ('72) A.M. 314. Also see Pichandi v. E. Ramaswami ('71) A.M. 204. Also see § 43-4(iii)—Widow and § 54; Atma Bandhu: Entry 27.

(x) Pitra Kueri v. Ujagir Rai ('58) A.A. 101; Rama Nand v. Surgiani (1894) 16 All. 221; Ramasami v. Narasamma (1885) 8 Mad. 133; Tahaldai v. Gaya Pershad (1910) 37 Cal. 214, 5 I.C. 135; Seethai v. Nachiyar (1914) 37 Mad. 286, 22 I.C. 18, ('14) A.M. 30; Navanitha Krishna v. Collector of Tinnevelly (1935) M.W.N. 1001; Chattar Singh v. Roshan Singh ('46) A.N. 277 (case from Central Province, where the lex loci is Benares law). Gorulal v. Gopichand ('63) A. Raj. 149.

(y) Kesserbai v. Vallab (1880) 4 Bom. 188; Russoobai v. Zoolekhabai (1895) 19 Bom. 707; Pannalal v. Harna Bai ('50) A. Hy. 57.

(z) Anandi v. Hari (1909) 33 Bom. 404, 3 I.C. 745.

(a) Basappa v. Gurlingawa (1933) 57 Bom. 74, 142 I.C. 634, ('33) A.B. 137; Kantawa v. Sangangowda (1942) Bom. 303, 201 I.C. 633, ('42) A.B. 143.

(b) Anant Singh v. Durga Singh (1910) 37 I.A. 191, 32 All. 363, 6 I.C. 787; Mannalal v. Ishwariprasad ('66) Cal. 447.

(c) Ekoba v. Kashiram (1922) 46 Bom. 716, 60 I.C. 341, ('22) A.B. 27; Chhinu v. Kata ('72) A. Orissa 153.

(d) Chinnaswami v. Ponginanna Goundar ('57) A.M. 40.

(e) Chap. v. s. 8, para. 20.

(f) Shamrao v. Krishnarao (1941) Nag. 598, ('41) A.N. 297; Deivanayagam v. Subbiah (1954) Mad. 741, ('54) A.M. 727; Karhiley v. Hira ('52) A.A. 229 (F.B.).

10. Brother's son.—

(a) of the whole blood.

(b) of the half-blood.

(i) Takes before brother's son's son.—The brother's son succeeds before the brother's son's son (g).

(ii) Whole blood before half-blood.—Sons of brothers of the whole blood succeed before sons of brothers of the half-blood [see § 44].

(iii) Take per capita.—Brother's sons take per capita [§ 32].

Note.—The Mitakshara, in discussing the place of the father's mother in the order of succession, says: "No place, however, is found for her in the compact series of heirs from the father to the nephew. . . . . She must, therefore, of course succeed immediately after the nephew": Mit., ch. II. s. 5, v. 2. According to this text, as literally interpreted "the compact series of heirs", that is the series of heirs first entitled to inherit, ends with the brother's son. But it has been held by the Privy Council in Buddha Singh v. Laltu Singh (h), that the expression "brother's son" in the above text includes "brother's son's son," so that the compact series ends not with the brother's son, but with the brother's son's son [No. 11], and the father's mother [No. 12], takes not after the brother's son, but after the brother's son's son.

11. Brother's son's son.—

(i) See notes to No. 10 above.

(ii) Whole blood before half-blood.—Grandsons of the whole brother take before the grandsons of the half-brother [see § 44].

(iii) Brother's son's son take per capita [§ 32].

(iv) The compact series of heirs under the Mitakshara as interpreted by the Privy Council ends with the brother's son's son. See No. 10 above.

12. Father's mother.

13. Father's father.

13A. Son's daughter.—

(i) This is the place assigned to the son's daughter by the Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act 2 of 1929. Before that Act she was recognized as an heir only in the Bombay [§ 55(1)] and Madras [§ 56(1)] States, where she ranked as a bandhu. Under the Act she inherits as an heir in all places where the Mitakshara law applies, and succeeds immediately after the father's father. See note to No. 13D below, "Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act 2 of 1929."

(ii) Estate.—The son's daughter takes an absolute estate in Bombay [§ 170(2)]. In Madras, she takes a limited estate [§ 168]. She would also take a limited estate elsewhere.

Section 14 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, subject to certain qualifications, confers full heritable capacity on a female heir in respect of all property acquired by her whether before or after the commencement of that enactment.

13B. Daughter's daughter.—

(i) This is the place assigned to the daughter's daughter by the Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act 2 of 1929 and she comes before the sister (i). Before this Act, she was recognized as an heir only in the Bombay [§ 55(1)] and Madras [§ 56(1)] States, where she ranked as a bandhu. Under the Act she inherits as an heir in all places where the Mitakshara law applies, even in States where before the Act she was not an heir (j). and succeeds next after the son's daughter. See note to No. 13D below, "Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act 2 of 1929."

---

(g) Sher Singh v. Basdeo Singh (1928) 50 All. 904, 110 I.C. 712, ('28) A.A. 612.

(h) (1915) 42 I.A. 208, 37 All. 604, 30 I.C. 529, ('15) A.PC. 70 approving Kalian Rai v. Ram Chandra (1902) 24 All. 128 and disapproving Suraya v. Lakshminarasamma (1882) 5 Mad. 291.

(i) Ben Madhu v. Kalidas (1949) Bom. 722.

(j) Dalsingar Singh v. Jainath Kuar (1940) 15 Luck. 229, 136 I.C. 753, ('40) A.O. 138.

(ii) Estate.—The daughter's daughter takes an absolute estate in Bombay (§ 170 (2)]. In Madras, she takes a limited estate [§ 168]. She would also take a limited estate elsewhere. See also 13A above.

13C. Sister.

(i) This is the place assigned to the sister by the Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act 2 of 1929. Before that Act, she was recognized as an heir only in the Bombay [§ 64] and Madras States [§ 56]. But the Act is applicable even where the sister had not been previously recognized as an heir (k).

As regards the Bombay State, she is expressly mentioned as an heir in the Mayukha. She is not, however, expressly mentioned as such in the Mitakshara, but her right as an heir has long since been recognized [§ 64(1)]. Her place also in the order of succession has long since been established: she succeeds immediately after the father's mother, and before the father's father [§ 65(1), § 72(12), § 77(12)]. Her place in the order of succession is not affected by the Act, for the Act contemplates succession after the father's father, while her place as determined by a series of decisions since 1865 is immediately after the father's mother whether under the Mitakshara or the Mayukha (l). A different view has however been taken in a later Bombay case and it has been held that the position of the sister under Mayukha law has been adversely affected by the Hindu Law of Inheritance Act (m).

In the Madras State, the sister ranked as a bandhu before the Act [§ 56(1)]. Under the Act she succeeds next after the daughter's daughter.

In the Punjab, as recently held by the Supreme Court the Sikh Jats of Amritsar District are governed by Hindu law and under the Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act, 1929 the sister is an heir in preference to collaterals (*m*1).

(ii) Half-sister.—The question whether a half-sister gets the benefit of the Act has given rise to difference of opinion. The Privy Council have held (thus settling the difference between the various High Courts) that the term 'sister' includes a half-sister; but a full sister and a half-sister do not take together. The latter takes only in default of the full sister (n).

(iii) Estate.—The sister takes an absolute estate in Bombay [§ 170(2)]. In Madras, she takes a limited estate [§ 168]. She would also take limited estate elsewhere. Section 14 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, subject to certain qualifications, confers full heritable capacity on a female heir in respect of all property acquired by her whether before or after the commencement of that enactment.

(iv) In Lala Duni Chand v. Anarkali the Judicial Committee (o) held and it has also now been held by the Supreme Court (*o*1) that the Act applies not only to the case of a Hindu male dying intestate on or after February 21, 1929 when it came into force but also to the case of such a male dying intestate before that date if he was succeeded by a female heir who died after that date. In such a case succession to the estate of the last male who died intestate does not open until the death of the life-estate holder. In consequence the questions as to who is the nearest reversionary heir, or what is the class of reversionary heirs, falls to be settled at the date of the expiry of the ownership for life or lives and the one most nearly related at that time to the last full owner becomes entitled to the estate. But the Act obviously does not apply where succession opened before the Act (p).

---

(k) Bindeshwari Singh v. Baij Nath Singh (1938) 13 Luck. 380, 168 I.C. 733, ('37) A.O. 402; Mt. Rajpali Kunwar v. Surju Rai (1936) 58 All. 1041 (F.B.), 163 I.C. 756, ('36) A.A. 507.

(l) Shidramappa v. Neelavabai (1933) 57 Bom. 377, 144 I.C. 925, ('33) A.B. 272; Virbhadrappa v. Babu Virbhadrappa (1946) Bom. 1003.

(m) Ben Madhu v. Kalidas (1949) Bom. 722.

(*m*1) Ujagar Singh v. Jeo ('59) A.S.C. 1041.

(n) Mt. Sahodra v. Ram Babu (1943) 69 I.A. 145, 45 Bom. L.R. 350, 206 I.C. 396, ('43) A.PC. 10.

(o) Lala Duni Chand v. Mt. Anar Kali (1946) 73 I.A. 187, 51 C.W.N. 223 (1946) All. 748; Sm. Shakuntala Devi v. Kaushalya Devi (1936) 17 Lah. 356, 162 I.C. 718, ('36) A.L. 124; Mt. Sattan v. Janki ('36) A.L. 139, 163 I.C. 480; Bindeshwari Singh v. Baij Nath Singh (1938) 13 Luck. 380, 168 I.C. 733, ('37) A.O. 402; Pokhan Dusadh v. Must. Manoa (1937) 16 Pat. 215 (F.B.), 167 I.C. 17, ('37) A.P. 117; Jitendra Pratap v. Bhagwati Prasad ('56) A.P. 457; Mt. Rajpali Kunwar v. Surju Rai (1936) 58 All. 1041 (F.B.), 163 I.C. 756, ('36) A.A. 507; Lakshmi v. Anantharama (1937) Mad. 948 (F.B.), 171 I.C. 7, ('37) A.M. 699.

(*o*1) Fateh Bibi v. Charan Das ('71) A.S.C. 789 (sister's son).

(p) Kanhaiya Lal v. Mt. Champa Devi (1935) 153 I.C. 545, ('35) A.A. 203.

13D. Sister's son.—

(i) This is the place assigned to the sister's son by the Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act 2 of 1929. Before that Act, he ranked as a bandhu [§ 64, No. 3]. Under the Act, he succeeds next after the sister.

(ii) Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act 2 of 1929.—This Act applies only to cases "subject to the Law of Mitakshara." The expression "law of Mitakshara" includes all sub-divisions of the Mitakshara law including Mayukha and excludes the law of Dayabhaga (q). The material section is section 2 which is as follows:—"A son's daughter, daughter's daughter, sister, and sister's son shall, in the order so specified, be entitled to rank in the order of succession next after a father's father [No. 13] and before a father's brother [No. 14]: Provided that a sister's son shall not include a son adopted after the sister's death."

The Act came into force on 21st February 1929. See 13C (iv) above.

The Act applies to Jains in Gujarat governed by Mayukha, the sister's son is therefore preferred to father's sister (r).

In ascertaining the heirs of a maiden's father—they being her heirs in respect of her stridhana when she dies leaving neither brother, mother nor father—Act II of 1929 is not applicable. But see further under § 147 below.

13E. Half-sister's son.—

This is the place which should be given to the half-sister's son according to the Act (See note under Half-sister, supra.).

14. Paternal uncle.

15. Paternal uncle's son [see § 32].

16. Paternal uncle's son's son.

He succeeds before 20 (s).

Whole blood and half-blood.—See s. 44 and notes thereto.

17. Father's father's mother.

18. Father's father's father.

19. Father's paternal uncle.

20. Father's paternal uncle's son.

21. Father's paternal uncle's son's son.

22. Brother's son's son's son (t).

23. Uncle's son's son's son.

Following the reasoning of the Privy Council in Buddha Singh v. Laltu Singh (u) the Madras High Court held that the father's paternal uncle's son's son (x3 in the third line of the Table at p. 107) should be preferred to the great-great-grandson of the grandfather (x4 in the second line of that Table) (v). The decision implies that he would be also preferred to the great-great-grandson of the father (x4 in the first line of the Table at p. 107), who will also be postponed to the paternal uncle's son's son (x3, in the second line of that Table) (w).

So far as ancestors and descendants are concerned, the further continuation of the table is of no practical importance. As to collaterals beyond this stage, it is difficult to see that one claimant can be superior to another in the capacity to confer spiritual benefit. The rules of preference will then probably be:

(1) He who claims through a nearer ancestor will be preferred to one claiming through a remoter ancestor.

(2) In the line of any ancestor, the nearer excludes the more remote.

---

(q) Ben Madhu v. Bai Mahakore ('50) A.B. 66.
(r) Ambabai v. Keshav Bandochand (1941) Bom. 250, 195 I.C. 172, ('41) A.B. 233, 43 Bom. L.R. 114.
(s) Buddha Singh v. Laltu Singh (1915) 42 I.A. 208, 37 All. 604, 30 I.C. 529, ('15) A.PC. 70.
(t) Venilal v. Parjaram (1896) 20 Bom. 173.
(u) (1915) 42 I.A. 208, 37 All. 604, 30 I.C. 529, ('15) A.PC. 70.
(v) Soobramiah v. Nataraja (1930) 53 Mad. 61, 127 I.C. 113, ('30) A.M. 534.
(w) Venkateswara Rao v. Adinarayana (1935) 58 Mad. 323, 154 I.C. 923, ('35) A.M. 129.

44. Whole blood and half-blood.—(1) A sapinda of the whole blood is preferred to a sapinda of the half-blood. This preference, however, is confined to sapindas of the same degree of descent from the common ancestor; it does not apply to sapindas of different degrees (x).

In Uttar Pradesh (y), Bengal (z) and Madras (a), this rule applies not only to brothers and brothers' sons, but to remoter sapindas. It has now been held by the Privy Council that the rule applies to all the Mitakshara Schools (b) and the Bombay cases (c) holding a different view are overruled. The Punjab case (d) holding a view similar to Bombay must also be regarded as overruled.

Thus a paternal uncle of the whole blood is entitled to succeed in preference to a paternal uncle of the half-blood, they being sapindas of the same degree of descent. But a paternal uncle of the half-blood is entitled to inherit in preference to the son of a paternal uncle of the whole blood, the former being a nearer sapinda of the deceased than the latter.

According to the Customary Law of Kumaon, applicable to the Khasas, if a man dies sonless, his brothers do not inherit as brothers but as sons of the father to whom the estate reverted on the sonless man's death. When nephews or cousins succeed, they take their father's share, i.e. per stirpes and not per capita (e). But this principle does not apply to the Manrals (f).

Samanodakas

45. Order of succession among Samanodakas.—Failing all sapindas, the inheritance passes to samanodakas, the nearer line excluding a remoter kinsman in the same line (g) [§§ 40, 44].

Bandhus

46. Bandhus.—(1) On failure of sapindas and samanodakas, but not until then, the inheritance passes to bandhus (h).

(2) The gotraja sapindas and samanodakas of a Hindu are all agnates, that is, persons connected with him by an unbroken line of male descent. The bandhus or bhinna-gotra sapindas are all cognates, that is, persons connected with him through a female or females. The bandhus of a person are his blood-relations connected through females who have passed into other families or gotras (i).

(3) Every bandhu must be related to the deceased through at least one female. He may, however, be related to him through two females (j) or even more than two.

---

(x) Suba Singh v. Sarafraz (1897) 19 All. 215 [F.B.]; Ganga Sahai v. Kesri (1915) 42 I.A. 177, 37 All. 545, 30 I.C. 265, ('15) A.PC. 81.

(y) (1897) 19 All. 215 [F.B.], supra.

(z) Sham Singh v. Kishun Sahai (1907) 6 Cal. L.J. 190.

(a) Nachiappa v. Rangasami (1915) 28 Mad. L.J. 1, 26 I.C. 757, ('15) A.M. 1088 [F.B.].

(b) Garudas v. Laldas (1933) 60 I.A. 189, 142 I.C. 807, ('33) A.PC. 141; Kalagouda v. Annagouda ('62) Mys. 65.

(c) Samat v. Amra (1882) 6 Bom. 394, 397, Vithalrao v. Ramrao (1900) 24 Bom. 317; Saguna v. Sadashiv (1902) 26 Bom. 710, 715; Shankar Baji v. Kashinath (1927) 51 Bom. 194, 100 I.C. 430, ('27) A.B. 97.

(d) Hira Nand v. Maya Das (1894) Punj. Rec. No. 83.

(e) Tula Ram v. Shyam Lal (1924) 49 All. 848; Gangi Sah v. Harlal Sah (1939) All. 122.

(f) Lachhan Singh v. Jhagar Singh (1939) All. 406, ('39) A.A. 437.

(g) Sarvadhikari's Hindu Law of Inheritance, 2nd ed., p. 687.

(h) Ram Baran v. Kamla Prasad (1910) 32 All. 594, 6 I.C. 698.

(i) Vedachela v. Subramania (1921) 48 I.A. 349, 354, 44 Mad. 753, 64 I.C. 402, ('22) A.PC. 33.

(j) Krishna v. Venkatarama (1906) 29 Mad. 115; Venkatagiri v. Chandra (1900) 23 Mad. 123; Parot Bapalal v. Mehta Harilal (1895) 19 Bom. 631.

The Mitakshara [ch. 2, sec. 6, para 1] mentions three classes of bandhus, namely (1) Atma bandhus, that is, one's own bandhus, (2) Pitri bandhus, that is, the father's bandhus, and (3) Matri bandhus, that is, the mother's bandhus. and enumerates the following nine relations as bandhus:—

I. Atma bandhus:—

1. father's sister's son,
2. mother's sister's son,
3. mother's brother's son.

The word "son" is used in a generic sense and includes son's son (k).

II. Pitri bandhus:—

4. father's father's sister's son,
5. father's mother's sister's son,
6. father's mother's brother's son.

III. Matri bandhus:—

7. mother's father's sister's son,
8. mother's mother's sister's son,
9. mother's mother's brother's son.

It was at one time thought that only the nine relations expressly mentioned in the Mitakshara were bandhus. But it is now well established that the enumeration of bandhus in the Mitakshara is illustrative and not exhaustive. For it would be unreasonable to hold that the mother's brother's son is a bandhu, and his father, that is, the mother's brother, is not a bandhu (l). And likewise, it would be unreasonable to hold that the mother's brother is a bandhu and his father, that is, the maternal grandfather is not a bandhu. Thus the mother's brother, the maternal grandfather, and several other relations have been held to be bandhus.

Besides the nine relations enumerated in the Mitakshara, the following relations have been held to be bandhus, namely:—

[Sister's son(m).]. Under the Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act 2 of 1929, the sister's son inherits with gotraja sapindas, and succeeds next after the sister. See § 43, No. 13D.

Half-sister's son (n) but not a sister's step-son (o).

Brother's daughter's son (p).

Daughter's son's son (q).

Sister's son's son (r).

Daughter's daughter's son (s).

Sister's daughter's son (t).

Father's sister's son's son (u).

---

(k) Adit Narayan v. Mahabir Prasad (1921) 48 I.A. 86, 6 Pat. L.J. 140, 60 I.C. 251, ('21) A.PC. 53 where it was held that a mother's sister's son's son is an atma bandhu.

(l) Girdhari Lall v. Bengal Government (1869) 12 M.I.A. 448; Muthusami v. Simambedu (1896) 19 Mad. 405, 23 I.A. 83.

(m) Amrita Kumari v. Lakhinarayan (1868) 2 Beng. L.R. [F.B.] 28; Chelikani v. Vencata (1871) 6 Mad. H.C. 278; Raghunath v. Munnan Misr (1898) 20 All. 191.

(n) Subbaraya v. Kylasa (1892) 15 Mad. 300.

(o) Saminatha v. Angammal (1922) 45 Mad. 257, 65 I.C. 736, ('22) A.M. 46.

(p) Mussamutt Doorga Bibee v. Janki (1873) 10 Beng. L.R. 341.

(q) Krishnayya v. Pichamma (1888) 11 Mad. 287; Sheobarat v. Bhagwati (1895) 17 All. 523; Tirumalachariar v. Andal (1907) 30 Mad. 406.

(r) Balusami v. Narayana (1897) 20 Mad. 342.

(s) (1907) 30 Mad. 406, supra; Ajudhia v. Ram Sumer (1909) 31 All. 454, 2 I.C. 376; Ramphal v. Pan Mati (1910) 32 All. 640, 7 I.C. 292; Kalimuthu v. Ammamuthu (1934) 58 Mad. 238, 153 I.C. 107, ('34) A.M. 611.

(t) Umaid Bahadur v. Udoi Chand (1881) 6 Cal. 119 [F.B.]; Sham Devi v. Birbhadra Prasad (1921) 43 All. 463, 62 I.C. 432, ('21) A.A. 178.

(u) Harihar v. Ram Daur (1925) 47 All. 172, 82 I.C. 1032, ('25) A.A. 17.

Father's sister's daughter's son (v).
Mother's father (w).
Maternal uncle (x).
Grandfather's son's daughter's son (y).
Great grandfather's son's daughter's son (z).
Great great grandfather's son's son's daughter's son (a).
Father's father's father's daughter's son (b).
Father's father's sister's son's son (c).
Father's mother's brother (d).
Father's maternal grandfather's daughter's son (e).
Mother's mother's brother's son's son (f).
Mother's mother's brother's daughter's son (g).
Mother's sister's son's son (h).
Mother's father's adopted son (i).
Mother's father's grand nephew (j).
Father's sister's son's daughter's son (k).
Mother's paternal grandfather's daughter's son's son (l).
Mother's paternal grandfather's son's son's son (l).
Father's father's maternal grandfather's son's son (m).

47. Rules for determining heritable bandhus.—Are all the blood relations of a person connected through a female, heritable bandhus or bhinna-gotra sapinda?

(i) The question naturally arises whether the term 'sapinda' in this connection, is used in the general sense (§ 36) or the narrower sense (§ 37). In other words, whether all the relations connected by community of particles of the same body (whatever the degree of relationship to and from a common ancestor may be) are entitled to inherit as bandhus or only those who are connected within certain specified degrees.

In Ramchandra v. Vinayak (n) the Judicial Committee held that the term bandhus was used in the Mitakshara "in a restricted and technical sense".

---

(v) Parot Bapulal v. Mehta Harilal (1895) 19 Bom. 631; Venkatagiri v. Chandru (1900) 23 Mad. 123; Krishna v. Venkatarama (1906) 29 Mad. 115.
(w) Chinnammal v. Venkatachala (1892) 15 Mad. 421.
(x) Muthusami v. Simambedu (1896) 19 Mad. 405, 23 I.A. 83; Vedachela v. Subramania (1921) 48 I.A. 349, 44 Mad. 753, 64 I.C. 462, ('22) A.PC. 33.
(y) Tirath Ram v. Mst. Kahan Devi (1920) 1 Lah. 588, 595-6, 60 I.C. 101, ('21) A.L. 149.
(z) Ram Sia v. Bua (1925) 47 All. 10, 84 I.C. 360, ('24) A.A. 790; Parmanandas v. Parbhudas (1912) 14 Bom. L.R. 630, 16 I.C. 591.
(a) Manik Chand v. Jagat Settani (1890) 17 Cal. 518.
(b) Krishna v. Venkatarama (1906) 29 Mad. 115.
(c) Sethurama v. Ponnammal (1889) 12 Mad. 155; Chamanlal v. Ganesh (1904) 28 Bom. 453.
(d) Gridhari Lall v. Bengal Government (1869) 12 M.I.A. 448.
(e) Ananda Bibee v. Nownit Lal (1883) 9 Cal. 315, 327.
(f) Ratnasubbu v. Ponnappa (1882) 5 Mad. 69.
(g) Babu Lal v. Nanku Ram (1895) 22 Cal. 339.
(h) Adit Narayan v. Mahabir Prasad (1921) 48 I.A. 86, 6 Pat. L.J. 140, 60 I.C. 251, ('21) A.PC. 53; Bai Vijli v. Bai Prabhalakshmi (1907) 9 Bom. L.R. 1129.
(i) Padma Kumari v. Court of Wards (1881) 8 I.A. 229, 8 Cal. 302.
(j) 8 I.A. 229, 8 Cal. 302, supra.
(k) Kesar Singh v. Secretary of State (1926) 49 Mad. 652, 95 I.C. 651, ('26) A.M. 881.
(l) Chengiah v. Subbaraya (1930) 58 Mad. L.J. 562, 128 I.C. 172, ('30) A.M. 555.
(m) Kasa v. Vinayak (1947) Bom. 770.
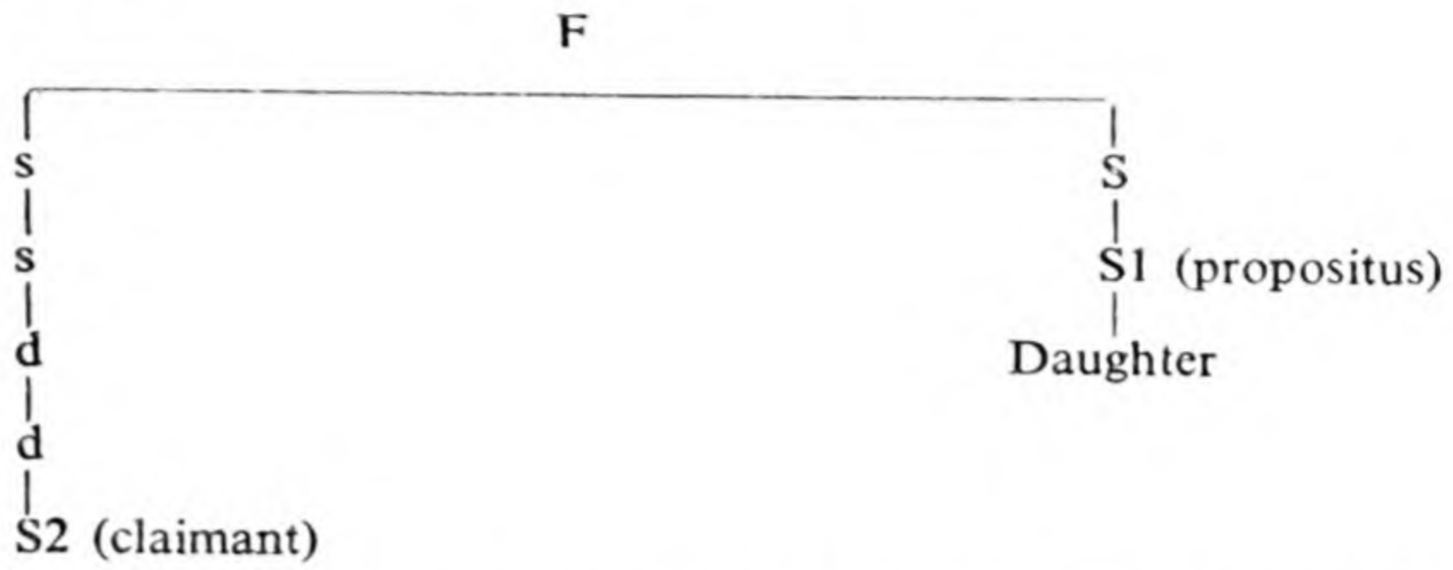
(n) Ramchandra v. Vinayak (1914) 41 I.A. 290, 312, 42 Cal. 384, 420, 25 I.C. 290, ('14) A.PC. 1.

In that case the relationship between the deceased and the claimant was as appears from the following diagram:—



After the death of the last male owner (S1), his daughter enjoyed the property. On her death without issue the claimant (S2) claimed the property. He traced his relationship to the common ancestor through his mother. If the narrower sense of the term 'sapinda' is adopted, he is beyond five degrees (Vide explanation I below) and he is not entitled to inherit. It was accordingly argued on his behalf that any person related through a female is a heritable bandhu, and there is no restriction as to degrees. It was also contended that the narrower sense of 'sapinda' in Mitakshara chap. III is confined to prohibition in respect of marriage and has nothing to do with inheritance. The Judicial Committee did not accept the contention.

When the claimant claims through a male, according to the restricted sense of the term "sapinda" he must be within seven degrees. The Allahabad and Bombay High Courts have held that, even when the claimant traces relationship through his father, heritable bandhuship ceases with the fifth degree (o). It is submitted that, in such a case, the rule of seven degrees would apply.

The general conclusion arrived at in Ramchandra v. Vinayak that "the sapinda relationship, on which the heritable right of collaterals is founded, ceases in the case of the bhinna-gotra sapinda with the fifth degree from the common ancestor" (p), is applicable only to cases where the claimant claims through his mother as in that case. This is the view of Venkatasubba Rao, J., in Kesar Singh v. Secretary of State for India (q). He said "I have said in the course of this judgment that in the case of bandhus, sapinda relationship ceases beyond the fifth from the mother and the seventh from the father. This is repeatedly referred to in the judgment of the Judicial Committee in Ramchandra v. Vinayak. The question in that case was whether the plaintiffs who claimed through their mother but who were bhinna-gotra sapinda beyond the fifth degree could inherit. It was held that he could not. I referred to this point because there are some observations in the judgment which may at first sight seem to imply that the limit of sapinda relationship in the case of bandhus ceases with the fifth degree irrespective of whether the claim is traced through the father or the mother.... There is nothing in the judgment to suggest that their Lordships intended to do away in the case of bhinna-gotra sapindas the well recognised distinction dependent upon whether the claim is traced through the father or the mother. The view which their Lordships refused to accept is that of Gopalchandra Sarkar Shastri—the view which was pressed before the Judicial Committee by Mr. De Gruyther to the effect that the word 'bandhu' includes either all cognate relations without any restriction or at any rate all cognates within seven degrees on both the father's as well as the mother's side. The distinction to which I have referred is recognised in all work of Hindu law whether the writer belongs to the school of Sarvadhikari or not."

---

(o) Brij Mohan v. Kishun Lal (1938) A.L.J. 670, ('38) A.A. 443; Hanmant Ramaji v. Vasudeo Hanmant (1943) Bom. 465, 206 I.C. 152, ('43) A.B. 89; Kasa v. Vinayak (1947) Bom. 770.

(p) (1914) 41 I.A. 290, 312, 42 Cal. 384, 420, 25 I.C. 290, ('14) A.PC. 1; Kartar Singh v. Niranjan Singh ('55) A. Pepsu 79.

(q) (1926) 49 Mad. 652, 689, 95 I.C. 651, ('26) A.M. 881.

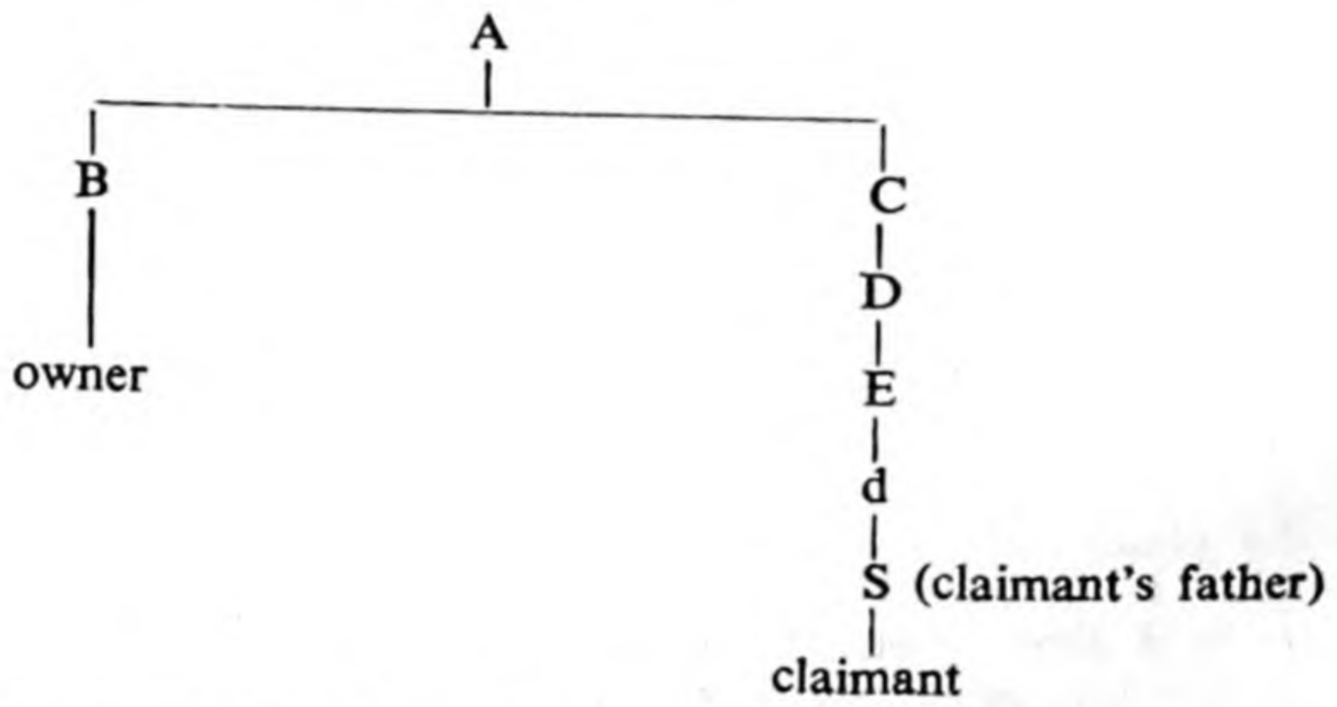
Explanation I.—The five degrees, according to the Hindu mode of computation, are to be calculated from and inclusive of the deceased in the case of ascendants and descendants of the deceased, and from and inclusive of the common ancestor in the case of descendants of the common ancestor.

The father's father's son's son's daughter's daughter's son is not a heritable bandhu for he is in the sixth degree from the common ancestor, that is, the father's father (r). For the same reason the father's father's son's son's son's daughter's son is not a heritable bandhu (s); so also the great-great-grandfather's great-grandson's daughter's son is not a heritable bandhu (t). In these cases, as the claimants trace their descent through their mothers, the sapinda relationship ceases with five degrees.

Cases of claimants claiming through the fathers being more than five degrees but not more than seven degrees have not come up for decision before the Courts. The following special cases may be noted. It is assumed that there is no difficulty as to the number of degrees on the owner's side:—

(1)

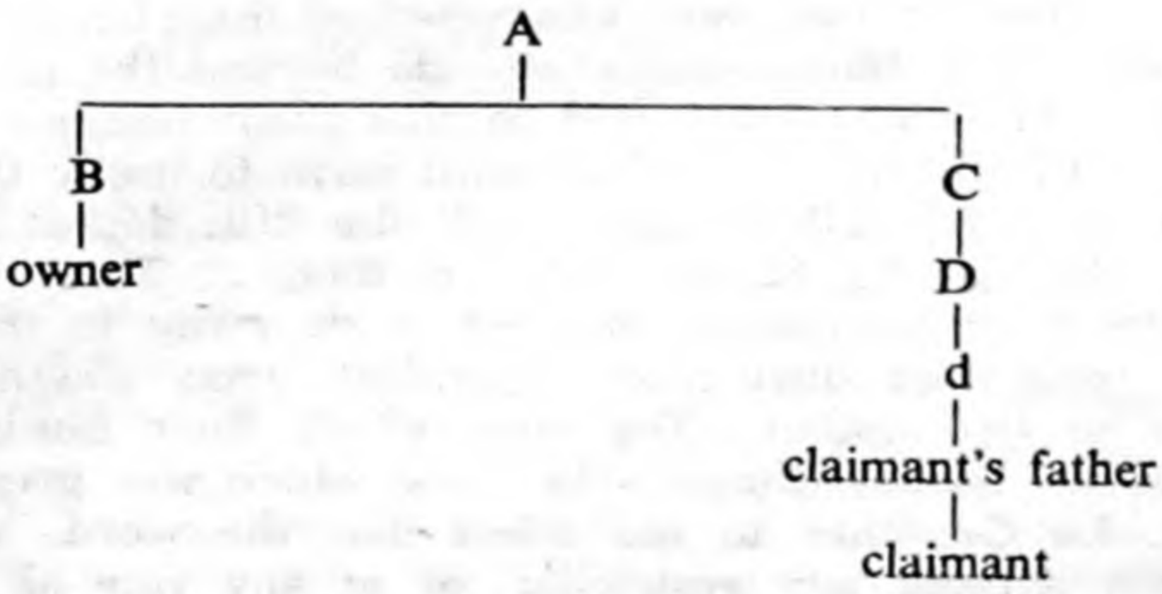
Diagram 1.



In this case the claimant (tracing his relationship through his father) is not more than seven degrees from the common ancestor; and may, at first sight, be regarded as a heritable bandhu. But S (his father) who claims through his mother is more than five degrees from A, and is not a heritable bandhu. To hold that the claimant is a bandhu and S, his father is not a heritable bandhu, is an anomaly. The sapindaship of the claimant in such a case is described as a sapindaship by frog's leap (Dr. Sarvadhikari's Principles of Hindu Law, 2nd ed., p. 592). He is not a heritable bandhu.

(2)

Diagram 2.



In this case, the claimant (claiming through his father) is within seven degrees. His father (claiming through his mother) is not beyond five degrees. Both are heritable bandhus.

---

(r) (1914) 41 I.A. 290, 42 Cal. 384, 25 I.C. 290, ('14) A.PC. 1, supra.

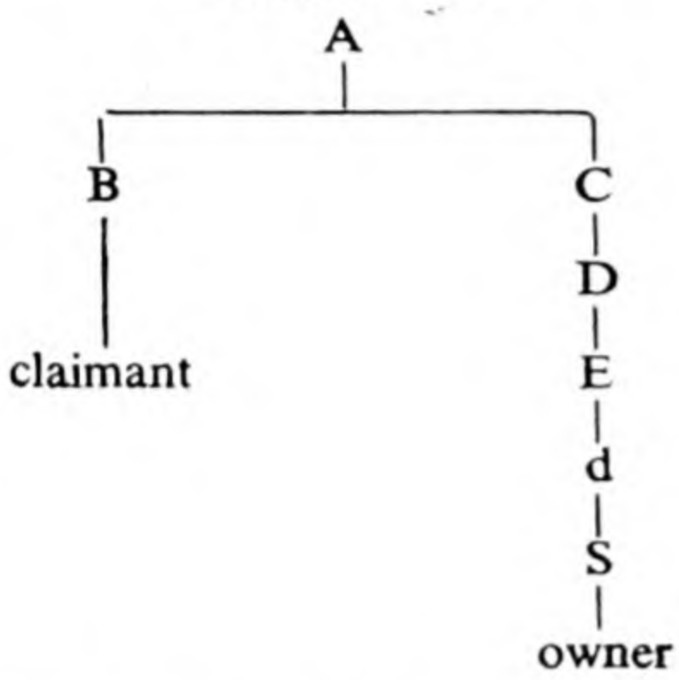
(s) Shib Sahai v. Saraswati (1915) 37 All. 583, 30 I:C. 903, ('15) A.A. 409. The decision is correct, but the mode of computation adopted in the case is, it is submitted, incorrect. This has now been recognized in Ram Sia v. Bua (1925) 47 All. 10, 84 I.C. 360, ('24) A.A. 790.

(t) Ram Parshad v. Idu Mal (1932) 13 Lah. 249, 134 I.C. 122, ('32) A.L. 394.

(ii) "In order to entitle a man to succeed to the inheritance of another he must be so related to the latter that they are sapindas of each other" (u); in other words, the right of inheritance accrues to a bandhu, if the late owner and the person claiming the inheritance were related as sapindas to each other.

By reason of the principle of mutuality, the diagrams in the preceding rule will hold good, if the owner and claimant are interchanged. Thus, the first diagram becomes the accompanying diagram, by the principle of mutuality. Just as the claimant in Diagram 1 is a sapinda by frog's leap and is not a heritable bandhu, the owner in the Diagram 3 is a sapinda by frog's leap and is not a heritable bandhu of the claimant. Therefore, by the rule mentioned in this paragraph, the claimant is not a heritable bandhu of the owner.

Diagram 3.



But if the interchange is made in Diagram 2, the result is that the owner is a heritable bandhu of the claimant. Therefore, the claimant is also a heritable bandhu of the owner.

(iii) Is there any other principle limiting heritable bandhus? There are two views on this matter.

(a) Dr. Sarvadhikari noticing the fact that the nine bandhus enumerated in the Mitakshara are descendants from common ancestors who are members of the following four families, namely,

(1) The family of the propositus and his agnate ancestors, e.g., one's father's sister's son, one's father's father's sister's son.

(2) The family of the mother's agnate ancestors, e.g., one's mother's sister's son, one's mother's brother's son, one's mother's father's sister's son.

(3) The family of the father's mother's agnate ancestors, e.g., one's father's mother's sister's son and one's father's mother's brother's son.

(4) The family of the mother's mother's agnate ancestors, e.g., one's mother's mother's sister's son and one's mother's mother's brother's son, and applying the principle of mutuality, infers that the propositus must be a descendant of a common ancestor who is a member of the following families, viz., (i) claimant's agnate family, (ii) claimant's mother's agnate family, (iii) claimant's father's mother's agnate family, (iv) claimant's mother's mother's agnate family, that is to say the claimant must be either

(a) a member of the families 2, 3, 4 or (b) a daughter's son or (c) a daughter's son's son or (d) a daughter's daughter's son

} of an agnate member of the four families 1, 2, 3 and 4.

Accordingly the following four kinds of descendants are excluded:—

(1) Daughter's daughter's son's son—Umaid Bahadur v. Udai Chand (1880) 6 Cal. 119. This is only an obiter dictum. The actual decision related to daughter's daughter's son.

(2) Daughter's son's son's son—Chinna Pichu v. Padmanabha (1921) 44 Mad. 121, 59 I.C. 690, ('21) A.M. 671. Only one judgment is based on Dr. Sarvadhikari's reasoning. The reasons given by the other judge are different. The decision cannot be regarded as of much weight: Lowji v. Mithabai (1900) 2 Bom. L.R. 842. The decision assumes that the bandhus should be found only in the above-mentioned four families.

(3) Daughter's son's daughter's son—Gajadhar Prasad v. Gauri Shankar (v).

---

(u) Ramchandra v. Vinayak (1914) 41 I.A. 290, 312, 42 Cal. 384, 25 I.C. 290, ('14) A.PC. 1; Umaid Bahadur v. Udoi Chand (1881) 6 Cal. 119 [F.B.]: Babu Lal v. Nanku Ram (1895) 22 Cal. 339.

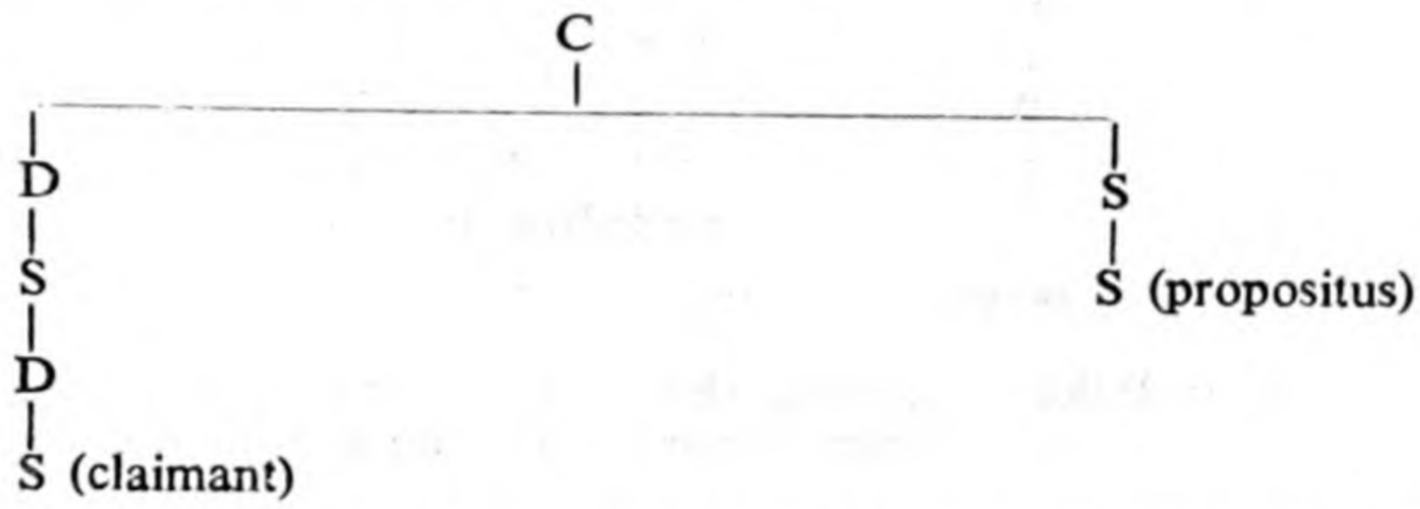
(v) (1932) 54 All. 698, 138 I.C. 561, (32) A.A. 417.

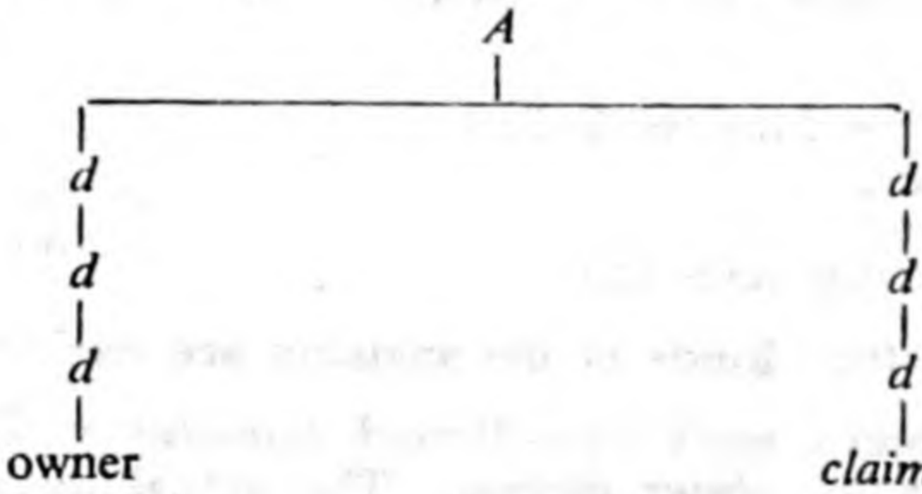
(4) Daughter's daughter's daughter's son—That is, there cannot be three females between a common ancestor and the claimant or the propositus.

(b) According to the second view, the Mitakshara merely enumerates the first cousins of the propositus, of his father and of his mother. It was not intended to limit heritable bandhuship to particular individuals or to descendants of particular families, or to certain kinds of descendants in these families. No ancient text supports such limitation. The definition of a bandhu as a bhinna-gotra sapinda even adopting the narrower meaning of the term 'sapinda' does not involve such limitation. The Judicial Committee has held (§ 46) that the enumeration of the bandhus in the Mitakshara is not exhaustive. Then why should one infer by implication that the families in which bandhus are to be found—families not mentioned as such by Vijnaneswara—are exhausted by the enumeration of the bandhus? Similarly, why should the enumeration be considered exhaustive as to the type of descendants in these families? Accordingly it was held in Kesar Singh v. Secretary of State (w) by the High Court of Madras that the father's father's daughter's son's daughter's son was a heritable bandhu. The following diagram explains the relationship of the claimant with the propositus in that case:



In the above diagram C represents the common ancestor. S represents the son and D the daughter. Here the claimant claims relationship through his mother and is fifth in descent from the common ancestor C. The propositus traces relationship through his father and is third in descent from the common ancestor, C, that is, within seven degrees from him. The test of degree is thus satisfied. Upon the same facts the test of mutuality is also satisfied. No other test or limitation is essential.

According to this view, there may be three females intervening between the common ancestor and the claimant propositus, that is, in the line of ascent or line of descent. For example, in the accompanying diagram, the owner and claimant are each within five degrees and each is sapinda of the other. Here the claimant is a heritable bandhu though there are six females intervening between him and the owner.



The 'line theory' of Dr. Sarvadhikari has been rejected by a Full Bench of the Madras High Court in Seelam Nagamma v. Reddam (x) and the decision of the Allahabad Full Bench in Gajadhar v. Gauri Shankar (y) has been expressly dissented from. The same view has been taken by the Calcutta High Court in Panchu Gopal v. Bata Mall (z) and by the Bombay High Court in Kasa v. Vinayak (a). The view propounded by Dr. Sarvadhikari thus appears to be unsupportable.

48. Who are heritable bandhus.—We are now in a position to enumerate the heritable bandhus whichever view—that of Madras or Allahabad—ulti-

---

(w) (1926) 49 Mad. 652, 95 I.C. 651, ('26) A.M. 881.
(x) (1943) Mad. 759 (F.B.).
(y) (1932) 54 All. 698, ('32) A.A. 417.
(z) ('49) A.C. 157.
(a) (1947) Bom. 770.

mately prevails. In each particular case, it is enough to see (1) whether he is a sapinda in the narrower sense, and (2) whether there is mutuality between the owner and the claimant. If the Madras view prevails, all other conditions are immaterial. If the Allahabad view is accepted, (3) he must belong to one of the four types of descendants and he must be descended from an agnate member of any of the four families (b) and must be within five degrees of the common ancestor. The last clause also represents the Bombay view (c).

In the following diagram the males (s) are all bandhus of the propositus, A being a cognate ancestor of his.

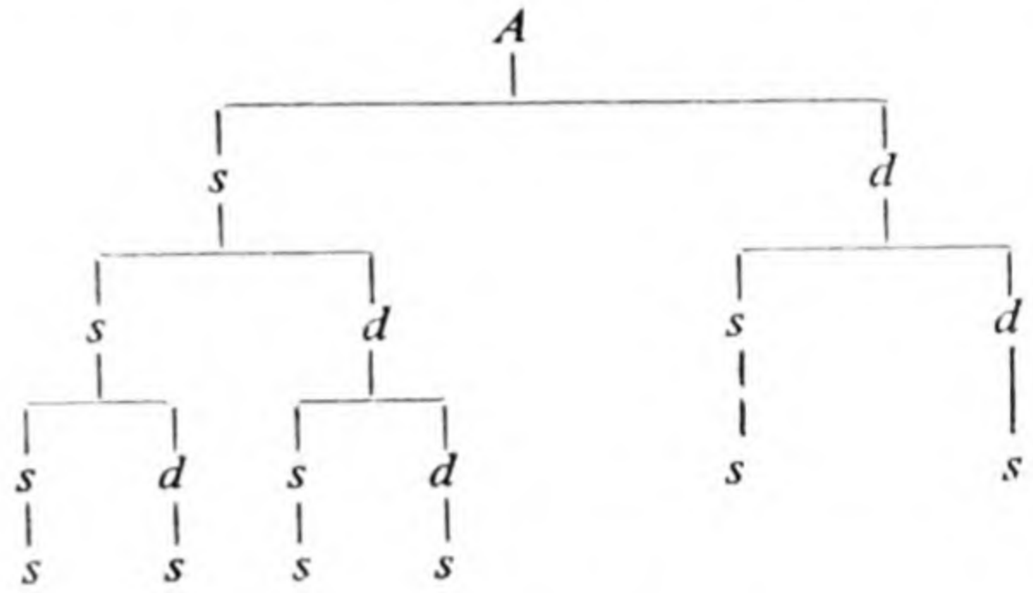
Madras.



Allahabad.

In the above diagrams sapindas by frog's leap are excluded. A's daughter's son's daughter's son shown in the Madras diagram was recognized in Kesar Singh's case (d) but not in Gajadhar v. Gauri Shankar (e). A's son's son's daughter's son's son shown in the Madras diagram is not now held to be an heir in Brij Mohan v. Kishun Lal (f).

If A is an agnate ancestor of the owner, all the s's on the extreme left are Gotraja Sapindas. The others are bandhus.

49. Three classes of bandhus.—Three classes of bandhus have already been mentioned [§ 46(4)].

Atma bandhus may be subdivided into—

(1) owner's cognate descendants,
(2) father's cognate descendants—of these the sister's son has gone higher up by legislation.
(3) cognate descendants of father's father, and mother's father and his descendants.

} an ancestor and collaterals.

Pitri bandhus may be subdivided into—

(1) father's father's father's cognate descendants,
(2) father's mother's father and his descendants.

Matri bandhus may be subdivided into—

(1) mother's father's father and his descendants.
(2) mother's mother's father and his descendants.

All the above bandhus should satisfy the limit of degrees.

---

(b) Gajadhar Prasad v. Gauri Shankar (1932) 54 All. 698, 138 I.C. 561, ('32) A.A. 417.

(c) See cases cited in footnote (o) at p. 123, supra.

(d) (1926) 49 Mad. 652, 95 I.C. 651, ('26) A.M. 881.

(e) (1932) 54 All. 698, 138 I.C. 561, ('32) A.A. 417.

(f) (1938) A.L.J. 670, ('38) A.A. 443.

50. Rules for determining order of succession among male bandhus.—First rule laid down by the Judicial Committee.—In Muthusami v. Muthukumarasami (g) the claimants were (1) mother's half brother and (2) father's father's sister's son. The Madras High Court in the course of the judgment (h) laid down four propositions. The first proposition defines bandhu. The second proposition lays down that the three classes atma bandhus, pitri bandhus, and matri bandhus succeed in the order in which they are named. Accordingly the mother's half brother who was an atma bandhu was preferred to the rival claimants who were pitri bandhus. This judgment was affirmed by the Privy Council. Thus, the first rule we get relating to the order of succession among the bandhus is (1) Atma bandhus (one's own bandhus) succeed before pitri bandhus (father's bandhus), and pitri bandhus succeed before matri bandhus (mother's bandhus).

Illustrations

(a) The mother's father's daughter's son's son (mother's sister's grandson), [§ 54, no. 25 at p. 133], being an atma bandhu, is entitled to succeed in priority to the mother's father's father's daughter's son (mother's paternal aunt's son) [p. 136, no. 6] who is a matri bandhu: Adit Narayan v. Mahabir Prasad (1921) 48 I.A. 86, 6 Pat. L.J. 140, 60 I.C. 251, ('21) A.PC. 53.

(b) Father's sister's daughter's son being an atma bandhu is entitled to succeed in priority to paternal grandfather's sister's son. who is a pitri bandhu (i).

It is important to note, as observed by the Privy Council, that rule (1) is not dependent on individual propinquity or on the efficacy of offerings to the deceased (j).

50A. Descendants preferred to those who are not descendants.—We have seen (§ 49) that atma bandhus, may be divided into (1) descendants of the propositus, (2) those who are not descendants.

No case of rival claimants, one being a descendant and the other not, has come up before the Judicial Committee. The Bombay and Madras High Courts have held that the descendants of the propositus are entitled to preference over those who are not descendants. In Dattatraya v. Gangabai (k), the rival claimants were a son's daughter's son and the father's daughter's daughter. The claim of the latter would be disallowed in Madras on the ground that all female bandhus rank after male bandhus and in any other State on the ground that no female bandhus are recognized. But this ground for rejecting the claim is not available in Bombay where female bandhus are recognised (S. 56 infra). The sister's daughter's claim was rejected on the ground that she was a collateral, her rival claimant being a descendant of the propositus. In a Madras case in which the succession opened before the passing of Act II of 1929, the rival claimants were (1) daughter's daughter's son and (2) sister's son. It was held that the former was entitled to preference (l).

51. Second and third rules laid down by the Judicial Committee.—In Vedachela v. Subramania (m), the claimants were (1) a maternal uncle (appellant) and (2) a paternal aunt's son's son (respondent). The Madras High Court held that the latter who is a bandhu ex parte paterna was entitled to succeed in preference to the former who was a bandhu ex parte materna. On appeal the Judicial Committee reversed the judgment of the High Court.

---

(g) (1896) 19 Mad. 405, 23 I.A. 83.
(h) Muttusami v. Muttukumarasami (1893) 16 Mad. 23.
(i) Krishna Ayyangar v. Venkatarama Ayyangar (1906) 29 Mad. 115.
(j) Adit Narayan v. Mahabir Prasad (1921) 48 I.A. 86, 95, 60 I.C. 251 ('21) A.PC. 53.
(k) (1922) 46 Bom. 541, 77 I.C. 17, ('22) A.B. 321.
(l) Kalimuthu v. Ammamuthu (1935) 58 Mad. 238, 153 I.C. 107, ('34) A.M. 611.
(m) (1921) 48 I.A. 349, 364, 44 Mad. 753, 767, 64 I.C. 402, ('22) A.PC. 33; Laxman v. Gangabai ('55) A. Madh. Bha. 138.

Their Lordships observed "In the absence of any express authority varying the rule, the propositions enunciated in Muttusami v. Muttukumarasami (n), which on appeal was affirmed by the Judicial Committee (o), furnish a safe guide."

Reference may also be made to the undermentioned case where a half brother of the mother was preferred to a father's brother's daughter (p).

The first two propositions have been already stated (s. 50). The next two propositions are:—

(3) That the examples given therein are intended to show the mode in which nearness of affinity is to be ascertained;

(4) That as between bandhus of the same class, the spiritual benefit they confer upon the propositus is, as stated in the Viramitrodaya, a ground of preference.

In Jatindranath Ray v. Nagendranath Ray (q), in which the parties were governed by the Benares school of the Mitakshara, the contest was between the mother's sister's son and the father's half-sister's son, both atma bandhus, and the latter was preferred to the former on the ground of the superior spiritual efficacy of the pinda offered by him. In that case there Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows:—

"No doubt, propinquity in blood is the primary test, but ... the Viramitrodaya brings in the conferring of spiritual benefits as the measure of propinquity where the degree of blood relationship furnishes no certain guide."

From the above two cases we get the following rules:—

(1) Propinquity in blood or nearness in degree gives a ground of preference (r).

(2) When it fails (and not until then), the conferring of spiritual benefit is a ground of preference (s).

It looks as if the phrases "nearness in degree", "propinquity in blood", and "degree of blood relationship" are used in the ordinary sense of the steps between the claimant and the propositus and not in the technical sense of ancient Hindu Lawyers. If so, the decision noted below is also an obvious case (t).

Spiritual efficacy as a ground of preference among bandhus.—In the last mentioned case, their Lordships observed (u) "Applying it to the parties in the present appeal, it is obvious that the respondents offer the full cake to the paternal grandfather and great-grandfather of the propositus, while the appellant offers it to his maternal grandfather, great-grandfather and great-great grandfather. Thus no doubt the appellant offers three cakes and the respondents only two. But the propositus participates only in oblations made to his three immediate paternal ancestors and not in those made to his maternal ancestors. (Dr. Sarvadhikari's Principles of Hindu Law, 1st edition, pp. 817-8) ..... Apart from this, it seems to be well established that cakes offered to the paternal ancestors are of superior efficacy to those offered to maternal ancestors. This was laid down by a Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court in Guru Gobind Shaha Mandal v. Anand Lal Ghose Mazumdar (v). Their Lordships must, therefore, hold that the offerings made by the res-

---

(n) (1893) 16 Mad. 23, 30.

(o) Muthuswami v. Sunambedu (1896) 23 I.A. 83, 19 Mad. 405. Also see Chengiah v. Subbaraya (1930) 58 Mad. L.J. 562, 128 I.C. 172, ('30) A.M. 555, where the rival claimants are both matribandhus.

(p) Gowardhan v. Dwarku ('63) A. Punj. 398.

(q) (1932) 59 Cal. 576, 58 I.A. 372, 135 I.C. 637, ('31) A.PC. 268; Kaliammal v. Muthu Pillai ('66) A.M. 118.

(r) Balasubramanya Pandya Thalaivar v. Subbayya Thevar (1938) 65 I.A. 93, (1938) Mad. 551, 40 Bom L.R. 704, 172 I.C. 724, (38) A.PC. 34; Debi Das v. Mukat Behari Lal (1943) All. 131, 207 I.C. 17, ('43) A.A. 177. (An obvious case).

(s) Ademma v. Hanuman Reddi (1938) Mad. 260, ('37) A.M. 967.

(t) Sobadra v. Shri Thakur Behariji Maharaj (1943) All. 155, 206 I.C. 81, ('43) A.A. 87.

(u) Jatindranath Ray v. Nagendranath Ray (1932) 59 Cal. 576, 584, 58 I.A. 372, 135 I.C. 637, ('31) A.PC. 268, 271.

(v) (1870) 5 Beng. L.R. 15, 39, 13 W.R. 49 (F.B.).

pondents confer a greater spiritual benefit upon the propositus than those made by the appellant, and that, taking this as a measure of propinquity, the respondents must be held to be the preferential heirs."

52. Fourth rule laid down by the Judicial Committee. Bandhus ex parte paterna and bandhus ex parte materna.—It has been held by the High Courts of Madras (w) and Bombay (x), that bandhus ex parte paterna (i.e., on the father's side), take before bandhus ex parte materna (i.e., on the mother's side). The fourth rule approved by the Judicial Committee is that bandhus ex parte paterna are preferred to bandhus ex parte materna. This rule must be applied only after the first three rules fail to furnish a guide.

In Vedachela's case (y), the Judicial Committee disapproved of the application of the rule where a different result would follow by reason of nearness in degree or superior spiritual efficacy. In the case of such a conflict, the rule in this section ought not to be applied; where there is no such conflict, or where the other rules fail to furnish a guide, this rule may be applied. This is how the decision in Balusami v. Narayana (z), was distinguished by the Judicial Committee (a). There is nothing in the judgment of the Judicial Committee in that case to suggest that the rule of preference for bandhus ex parte paterna is not to be applied in any case. On the contrary, in a later case—Jatindranath Ray v. Nagendranath Ray (b), which was governed by the Benares School of Hindu Law, their Lordships observed that that rule was supported by a considerable volume of authority, such as Mayne (c), and Golapchandra Sarkar (d) who lay down the rule that as between bandhus of the same class and equal in degree, one related on the father's side is to be preferred to one related on the mother's side, and Bhattacharya's Commentaries which seem to take the same view (e). The contest in Jatindranath Ray's case was between the father's half-sister's son and the mother's sister's son. Both were atma bandhus in equal degree of propinquity to the last owner. The father's half-sister's son was entitled to succeed in preference to the mother's sister's son, if the rule of preference of bandhus ex parte paterna were to be applied. He was also entitled to succeed if the test of spiritual efficacy were adopted. Their Lordships, however, thought that "the safer test" was that of spiritual efficacy, and decided on that ground in favour of the father's half-sister's son.

In the light of the two decisions of the Judicial Committee, the decision of the Madras High Court in Sundarammal v. Rangasami (g) is open to the comment that it did not give proper effect to the propositions enunciated in Muthusami's case referred to in §§ 50 and 51 above. But the decision in Balusami v. Narayana (h) is still good law. The actual decision was arrived at by the application of the principles (1) The nearer line excludes the more remote and (2) Bandhus ex parte paterna are preferred to the bandhus ex parte materna. Neither comparison of degrees nor of spiritual efficacy gives a different result. It is submitted that the decision is correct though different reasons might have been given.

53. Additional rules laid down by the High Courts.—Leaving the case of descendants as settled for all practical purposes (§ 50A) on the principle that the nearer line excludes the more remote, the further question arises whether it can be applied as between collaterals of different lines. The question is of great practical importance and may frequently arise, among atma bandhus.

We have already seen (§ 49) that atma bandhus who are not descendants may be divided into (1) Father's cognate descendants or father's line;

---

(w) Sundrammal v. Rangasami (1895) 18 Mad. 193; Balusami v. Narayana (1897) 20 Mad. 342.
(x) Saguna v. Sadashiv (1902) 26 Bom. 710, 715.
(y) (1922) 48 I.A. 349, 44 Mad. 753, 64 I.C. 402, ('22) A.PC. 33.
(z) (1897) 20 Mad. 342.
(a) (1922) 48 I.A. 349, 359, 44 Mad. 753, 761, 762, 64 I.C. 402, ('22) A.PC. 33, supra.
(b) (1931) 58 I.A. 372, 59 Cal. 576, 135 I.C. 637, ('31) A.PC. 268.
(c) Hindu Law, 9th ed. sec. 579.
(d) Hindu Law, 7th edition, p. 574.
(e) Hindu Law, 2nd edition, 460.
(g) (1895) 18 Mad. 193.
(h) (1897) 20 Mad. 342.

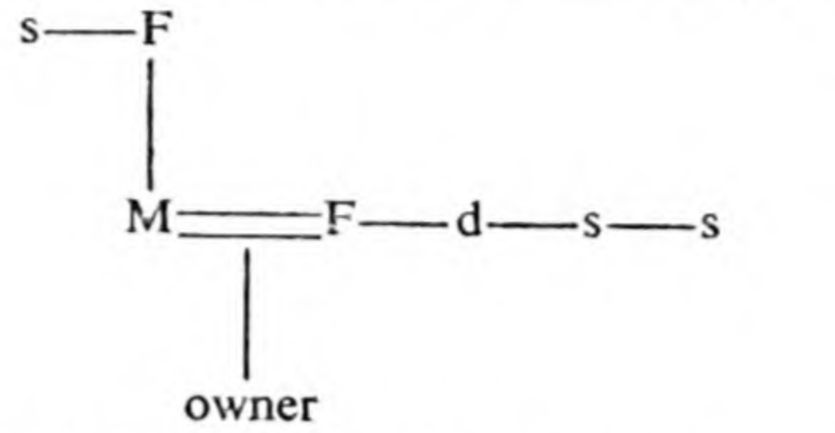
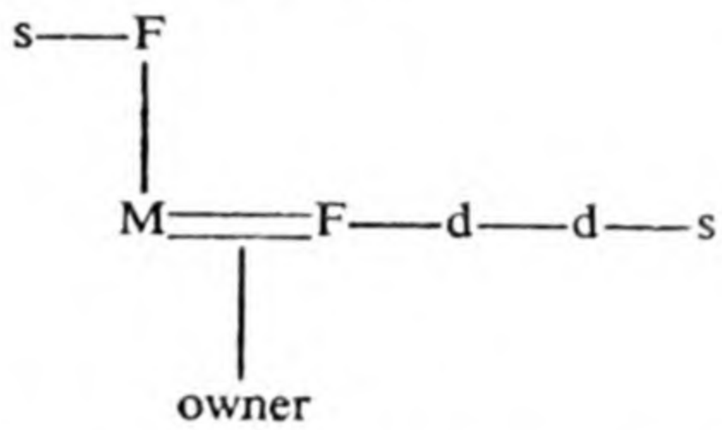
Maternal grandfather and descendants of maternal and paternal grandfathers. The lines of the grandfathers, being equal in degree, may be regarded as one line.

When the rival claimants belong to these two different lines, the question arises whether the principle that the nearer line excludes the more remote applies to them. Where the claimants are equally removed from the propositus, it is reasonable that the rule should apply. But, suppose the claimant in the nearer line is more remotely removed than the claimant in the remoter line as in the following diagram:



In such a case who is the preferable heir? Though the actual point has not arisen before the Madras High Court, the trend of the decisions is in favour of holding that the nearer line excludes the more remote (i).

A contrary decision has been arrived at in the Patna High Court, where the rival claimants are as in the following diagram:



It was held by a majority of three that the maternal uncle is entitled to succeed (j). The point has not arisen before the Judicial Committee or the other High Courts. The Allahabad High Court has touched upon it but left it open as it did not arise for decision (k).

All other considerations being equal, the claimant who is separated by only one female link is to be preferred to one who is separated by two such links (l). Another mode of expressing it is that two steps in cognateness are inferior to only one step in cognateness and one in agnateness (m).

It has thus been held that a daughter's son's son is to be preferred to a daughter's daughter's son (n). The mother's brother's son is preferred to mother's sister's son in Madras (o) and Allahabad (p). The Bombay High Court refused to follow the above rule and held that both were entitled to take equally (q). The decision seems to be of doubtful authority, and, it is submitted, requires reconsideration. If it is supported on any doctrine peculiar to Bombay, it has to be confined to Bombay. Following the same rule it has been held by the High Court of Allahabad (r), that the father's father's daughter's son's son [§ 54, no. 23, p. 133] is to be preferred to the father's daughter's daughter's son [§ 54, no. 7 at p. 133]. It is submitted that this case was erroneously decided. It was decided before the decisions of the Judicial Committee in Vedachela v. Subramania (s) and Jatindranath Ray v. Nagendranath Ray (t). The rule in this para-

---

(i) Balusami v. Narayana (1897) 20 Mad. 342: Kalimuthu v. Ammamuthu (1935) 58 Mad. 238, 246, 153 I.C. 107, ('34) A.M. 611.

(j) Umashankar v. Msst. Nageshwari (1918) 3 Pat. L.J. 663, 48 I.C. 625, ('18) A.P. 1.

(k) Sobadra v. Shri Thakur Behariji Maharaj (1942) A.L.J. 732, (1943) All. 155, 206 I.C. 81, ('43) A.A. 87.

(l) Tirumalachariar v. Andal Ammal (1907) 30 Mad. 406.

(m) Rami Reddy v. Gangireddi (1925) 48 Mad. 722, 87 I.C. 609, ('25) A.M. 807.

(n) (1907) 30 Mad. 406, supra.

(o) (1925) 48 Mad. 722, 87 I.C. 609, ('25) A.M. 807, supra; Appandai v. Bagubali (1910) 33 Mad. 439, 5 I.C. 280, must be regarded as overruled.

(p) Ram Charan Lal v. Rahim Baksh (1916) 38 All. 416, 34 I.C. 108, ('17) A.A. 486.

(q) Rajappa v. Gangappa (1923) 47 Bom. 48, 77 I.C. 219, ('22) A.B. 420.

(r) Sham Devi v. Birbhadra Prashad (1921) 43 All. 463, 62 I.C. 432, ('21) A.A. 178.

(s) (1922) 48 I.A. 349, 44 Mad. 753, 64 I.C. 402, ('22) A.PC. 33.

(t) (1931) 58 I.A. 372, 59 Cal. 576, 135 I.C. 637, ('31) A.PC. 268.

graph should not be applied before the earlier rules have been tested. Only when they fail to furnish a guide, should we proceed to this rule. If we apply the test of nearness in degree laid down by the Judicial Committee, the result would be different.

53A. A summing up of the rules as to the order of succession among the male bandhus has been attempted by the Madras High Court (u). They are to be applied in the order in which they are stated.

(1) Atma bandhus succeed in preference to pitri bandhus and matri bandhus.

(2) & (3) Among atma bandhus the nearer line excludes the more remote. This is sub-divided into—

(2) descendants are preferred to ancestors and collaterals;

(3) father's descendants take before the descendants of grandfathers.

(4) Pitri bandhus succeed before the matri bandhus.

(5) Among the bandhus of the same or equal lines the nearer excludes the more remote. If Rule 5 is to be applied before Rule 3, the decision in Uma Shankar v. Nageshvari (1918) 3 Pat. L.J. 663, 48 I.C. 625, ('18) A.P. I (vide s. 53) would be correct. But if Rule 3 is to be first applied it is incorrect.

(6) If the rule of nearness in blood fails to furnish a guide, he who confers a superior spiritual benefit is preferable to one who confers an inferior spiritual benefit or none.

(7) When all the above rules do not work, bandhus ex parte paterna are preferred to bandhus ex parte materna.

(8) All other things being equal a claimant who is related to the propositus through the intervention of two females is to be postponed to one who is related through the intervention of only one female.

53B. The last rule laid down by the Judicial Committee.—Where we come to two equal claimants after the application of the above rules, one of whom is of whole blood and the other is of half blood, the former is preferred to the latter (v).

54. Order of succession among bandhus.—The following is the order of succession among bandhus [see Table on p. 136A below], based on rules in §§ 50-53A.

I.—Atma bandhus.

Descendants.

1. Son's daughter's son.

   Preferred in Bombay to father's daughter's daughter, on the principle that both being equally removed from the deceased, the one in the direct line of descent should be preferred to the one in a collateral (§ 50A).

2. Daughter's son's son (inferior to 1 in spiritual benefit). Preferred by the Madras High Court to no. 3 [53].
3. Daughter's daughter's son.

   Preferred by the Madras High Court to sister's son in a case before the Act of 1929 (w), and therefore, preferable to no. 4.

4. Lower descendants are not of practical importance.

   Father's descendants.

5. Father's son's (= brother's) daughter's son.
6. Father's daughter's (= sister's) son's son.

---

(u) Kalimuthu v. Ammamuthu (1935) 58 Mad. 238, 246, 153 I.C. 107 ('34) A.M. 611.

(v) Jatindranath Ray v. Nagendranath Ray (1931) 58 I.A. 372, 59 Cal. 576, 135 I.C. 637, ('31) A.PC. 268.

(w) Kalimuthu v. Ammamuthu (1935) 58 Mad. 238, 153 I.C. 107, ('34) A.M. 611.

Preferred by the Madras High Court to no. 18(x) and by the Allahabad High Court to no. 27(y).

7. Father's daughter's daughter's son.
   Preferred by the Allahabad High Court to no. 20(z).
8. Father's son's son's daughter's son.
9. Father's son's daughter's son's son.
*10. Father's daughter's son's son's son.
11. Father's son's daughter's daughter's son.
*12. Father's daughter's son's daughter's son.
*13. Father's daughter's daughter's son's son.
*14. Father's daughter's daughter's daughter's son.
14-A. Lower descendants of father who are bandhus in Madras but not in Allahabad.
15. Mother's father (= maternal grandfather).

Descendants of grandfathers

16. Mother's father's son (= maternal uncle).
    He succeeds before no. 17(a) and before no. 19(b).
17. Father's father's daughter's (= father's sister's or half-sisters) son.
    He succeeds before no. 18(c) and before no. 19 (§ 51).
18. Mother's father's son's son.
    He succeeds before 19. (The decision in Bombay, holding that both take equally is either doubtful or must be limited to Bombay [§ 53].
19. Mother's father's daughter's son.
20. Father's father's son's daughter's son (d).
21. Mother's father's son's son's son.
22. Mother's father's son's daughter's son.
23. Father's father's daughter's son's son.
    It is submitted that the decision in Sham Devi v. Birbhadra Prasad (1921) 43 All. 463 is erroneous [§ 53] (e).
24. Father's father's daughter's daughter's son.
25. Mother's father's daughter's son's son.
26. Mother's father's daughter's daughter's son.
27. Father's father's son's son's daughter's son.

In the undermentioned case the competing heirs were father's father's son's son's daughter's son and the second husband's son of the mother of the propositus and the latter was preferred (*e*1).

28. Mother's father's son's son's daughter's son.
29. Father's father's son's daughter's son's son.
*30. Father's father's daughter's son's son's son.

---

(x) Balusami v. Narayana (1897) 20 Mad. 342, 348.

(y) Debi Das v. Mukat Behari Lal (1943) All. 131, 207 I.C. 17, ('43) A.A. 177.

(z) Sabodra v. Shri Behariji Mahraji (1943) All. 155, 206 I.C. 81 ('43) A.A. 87. See also the decision of the Chief Court of Karachi in Tejumal v. Mulchand (1946) Kar. 467.

(a) Balasubrahamanya Pandya Thalaivar v. Subbayya Tevar (1938) 65 I.A. 93, (1938) Mad. 551, 40 Bom. L.R. 704. 172 I C. 724, ('38) A.PC. 34; Sakharam v. Balakrishna (1925) 49 Bom. 739, 94 I.C. 817, ('25) A.B. 451 must be regarded as overruled; Virangauda Lingangauda v. Yelappa Shidappa (1943) Bom. 259, 205 I.C. 328, ('43) A.B. 56.

(b) Mohandas v. Krishnabai (1881) 5 Bom. 597.

(c) Ademma v. Hanuman Reddi (1938) Mad. 260, ('37) A.M. 967.

(d) The decision in Sundrammal v. Rangasami (1895) 18 Mad. 193, must be regarded as overruled. Reference may be made to Kaliammal v. Muthu Pillai ('66) A.M. 118 where it is pointed out that in Madras a male bandhu is entitled to preference over a female bandhu even though the female bandhu is nearer in degree [see the Entries considered in that case].

(e) United Provinces Through Deputy Commissioner Hardoi v. Kanhaiyalal & Ors. (1941) 16 Luck. 551, 192 I.C. 131, ('41) A.O. 337.

(*e*1) Pichandi v. E. Ramaswami ('71) A.M. 204 Also see § 43-4(iii) and § 43-7(iv) supra.

31. Father's father's son's daughter's daughter's son.
*32. Father's father's daughter's son's daughter's son.
*33. Father's father's daughter's daughter's son's son.
*34. Father's father's daughter's daughter's daughter's son.
*35. Mother's father's son's son's son's son.
36. Mother's father's son's daughter's son's son.
*37. Mother's father's daughter's son's son's son.
38. Mother's father's son's daughter's daughter's son.
*39. Mother's father's daughter's son's daughter's son.
*40. Mother's father's daughter's daughter's son's son.
*41. Mother's father's daughter's daughter's daughter's son.
42. Father's father's son's son's daughter's son's son.
*43. Father's father's son's daughter's son's son's son.
*44. Father's father's daughter's son's son's son's son.
*45. Father's father's son's daughter's daughter's son's son.
46. Father's father's daughter's son's daughter's son's son.
*47. Father's father's daughter's daughter's son's son's son.
*48. Father's father's daughter's daughter's daughter's son's son.
*49. Mother's father's son's son's son's son's son.
50. Mother's father's son's son's daughter's son's son.
*51. Mother's father's son's daughter's son's son's son.
*52. Mother's father's daughter's son's son's son's son.
*53. Mother's father's son's daughter's daughter's son's son.
54. Mother's father's daughter's son's daughter's son's son.
*55. Mother's father's daughter's daughter's son's son's son.
*56. Mother's father's daughter's daughter's daughter's son's son.
*56-A Seven descendants of father's father, a degree lower (sons of nos. 42-48).
*56-B. Eight descendants of mother's father, a degree lower (sons of nos. 49-56).

* These are held to be heirs in Madras but are held not to be heirs in Allahabad according to Gajadhar Prasad's case.

According to the Patna view no. 15 will come between no. 3 and no. 4; no. 16 between no. 5 and no. 6; nos. 17, 18 and 19 between no. 8 and no. 9.

No. 28 is placed above Nos. 29 to 35 on account of his spiritual efficacy. It must be admitted that the result is highly anomalous. It is futile to discuss it unless the case actually arises.

II.—Pitri bandhus.

1. Father's maternal grandfather.
2. Father's maternal grandfather's son.
3. Father's paternal grandfather's daughter's son.
4. Father's maternal grandfather's son's son.
5. Father's maternal grandfather's daughter's son.
6. Father's paternal grandfather's son's daughter's son.
7. Father's paternal grandfather's daughter's son's son.
8. Father's maternal grandfather's son's son's son.
9. Father's paternal grandfather's daughter's daughter's son.
10. Father's maternal grandfather's son's daughter's son.
11. Father's maternal grandfather's daughter's son's son.
12. Father's maternal grandfather's daughter's daughter's son.
13. Father's paternal grandfather's son's son's daughter's son.

14. Father's paternal grandfather's son's daughter's son's son.
15. Father's paternal grandfather's daughter's son's son's son.
16. Father's maternal grandfather's son's son's son's son.
17. Father's paternal grandfather's son's daughter's daughter's son.
18. Father's paternal grandfather's daughter's son's daughter's son.
19. Father's paternal grandfather's daughter's daughter's son's son.
20. Father's maternal grandfather's son's son's daughter's son.
21. Father's maternal grandfather's son's daughter's son's son.
22. Father's maternal grandfather's daughter's son's son's son.
23. Father's paternal grandfather's daughter's daughter's daughter's son.
24. Father's maternal grandfather's son's daughter's daughter's son.
25. Father's maternal grandfather's daughter's son's daughter's son.
26. Father's maternal grandfather's daughter's daughter's son's son.
27. Father's maternal grandfather's daughter's daughter's daughter's son.
28. Father's paternal grandfather's son's son's daughter's son's son.
29. Father's paternal grandfather's son's daughter's son's son's son.
30. Father's paternal grandfather's daughter's son's son's son's son.
31. Father's maternal grandfather's son's son's son's son's son.
32. Father's paternal grandfather's son's daughter's daughter's son's son.
33. Father's paternal grandfather's daughter's son's daughter's son's son.
34. Father's paternal grandfather's daughter's daughter's son's son's son.
35. Father's maternal grandfather's son's son's daughter's son's son.
36. Father's maternal grandfather's son's daughter's son's son's son.
37. Father's maternal grandfather's daughter's son's son's son's son.
38. Father's paternal grandfather's daughter's daughter's daughter's son's son.
39. Father's maternal grandfather's son's daughter's daughter's son's son.
40. Father's maternal grandfather's daughter's son's daughter's son's son.
41. Father's maternal grandfather's daughter's daughter's son's son's son.
42. Father's maternal grandfather's daughter's daughter's daughter's son's son.
43. Father's paternal grandfather's son's son's daughter's son's son's son.
44. Father's paternal grandfather's son's daughter's son's son's son's son.
45. Father's paternal grandfather's daughter's son's son's son's son's son.
46. Father's maternal grandfather's son's son's son's son's son's son.
47. Father's paternal grandfather's son's daughter's daughter's son's son's son.
48. Father's paternal grandfather's daughter's son's daughter's son's son's son.
49. Father's paternal grandfather's daughter's daughter's son's son's son's son.
50. Father's maternal grandfather's son's son's daughter's son's son's son.
51. Father's maternal grandfather's son's daughter's son's son's son's son.
52. Father's maternal grandfather's daughter's son's son's son's son's son.
53. Father's paternal grandfather's daughter's daughter's daughter's son's son's son.
54. Father's maternal grandfather's son's daughter's daughter's son's son's son.
55. Father's maternal grandfather's daughter's son's daughter's son's son's son.
56. Father's maternal grandfather's daughter's daughter's son's son's son's son.
57. Father's maternal grandfather's daughter's daughter's daughter's son's son's son.

III.—Matri bandhus.

1. Mother's paternal grandfather (f).
2. Mother's maternal grandfather.

---

f) Krishnayya v. Pichamma (1888) 11 Mad. 287.

3. Mother's paternal grandfather's son.
4. Mother's maternal grandfather's son.
5. Mother's paternal grandfather's son's son.
6. Mother's paternal grandfather's daughter's son (g).
7. Mother's maternal grandfather's son's son.
8. Mother's maternal grandfather's daughter's son.
9. Mother's paternal grandfather's son's son's son.
10. Mother's paternal grandfather's son's daughter's son.
11. Mother's paternal grandfather's daughter's son's son. He is preferred to No. 17 (h).
12. Mother's maternal grandfather's son's son's son.
13. Mother's paternal grandfather's daughter's daughter's son.
14. Mother's maternal grandfather's son's daughter's son.
15. Mother's maternal grandfather's daughter's son's son.
16. Mother's maternal grandfather's daughter's daughter's son.
17. Mother's paternal grandfather's son's son's son's son.
18. Mother's paternal grandfather's son's son's daughter's son.
19. Mother's paternal grandfather's son's daughter's son's son.
20. Mother's paternal grandfather's daughter's son's son's son.
21. Mother's maternal grandfather's son's son's son's son.
22. Mother's paternal grandfather's son's daughter's daughter's son.
23. Mother's paternal grandfather's daughter's son's daughter's son.
24. Mother's paternal grandfather's daughter's daughter's son's son.
25. Mother's maternal grandfather's son's son's daughter's son.
26. Mother's maternal grandfather's son's daughter's son's son.
27. Mother's maternal grandfather's daughter's son's son's son.
28. Mother's paternal grandfather's daughter's daughter's daughter's son.
29. Mother's maternal grandfather's son's daughter's daughter's son.
30. Mother's maternal grandfather's daughter's son's daughter's son.
31. Mother's maternal grandfather's daughter's daughter's son's son.
32. Mother's maternal grandfather's daughter's daughter's daughter's son.
33. Mother's paternal grandfather's son's son's son's son's son.
34. Mother's paternal grandfather's son's son's daughter's son's son.
35. Mother's paternal grandfather's son's daughter's son's son's son.
36. Mother's paternal grandfather's daughter's son's son's son's son.
37. Mother's maternal grandfather's son's son's son's son's son.
38. Mother's paternal grandfather's son's daughter's daughter's son's son.
39. Mother's paternal grandfather's daughter's son's daughter's son's son.
40. Mother's paternal grandfather's daughter's daughter's son's son's son.
41. Mother's maternal grandfather's son's son's daughter's son's son.
42. Mother's maternal grandfather's son's daughter's son's son's son.
43. Mother's maternal grandfather's daughter's son's son's son's son.
44. Mother's paternal grandfather's daughter's daughter's daughter's son's son.
45. Mother's maternal grandfather's son's daughter's daughter's son's son.
46. Mother's maternal grandfather's daughter's son's daughter's son's son.
47. Mother's maternal grandfather's daughter's daughter's son's son's son.
48. Mother's maternal grandfather's daughter's daughter's daughter's son's son.
49. Mother's paternal grandfather's son's son's son's son's son's son.

(g) Aait Narayan v. Mahabir Prasad (1921) 48 I.A. 86, 60 I.C. 251, ('21) A.PC. 53.

(h) Chengiah v. Subbaraya (1930) 58 Mad. L.J. 562, 128 I.C. 172, ('30) A.M. 555.

ORDER OF SUCCESSION AMONG BANDHUS:

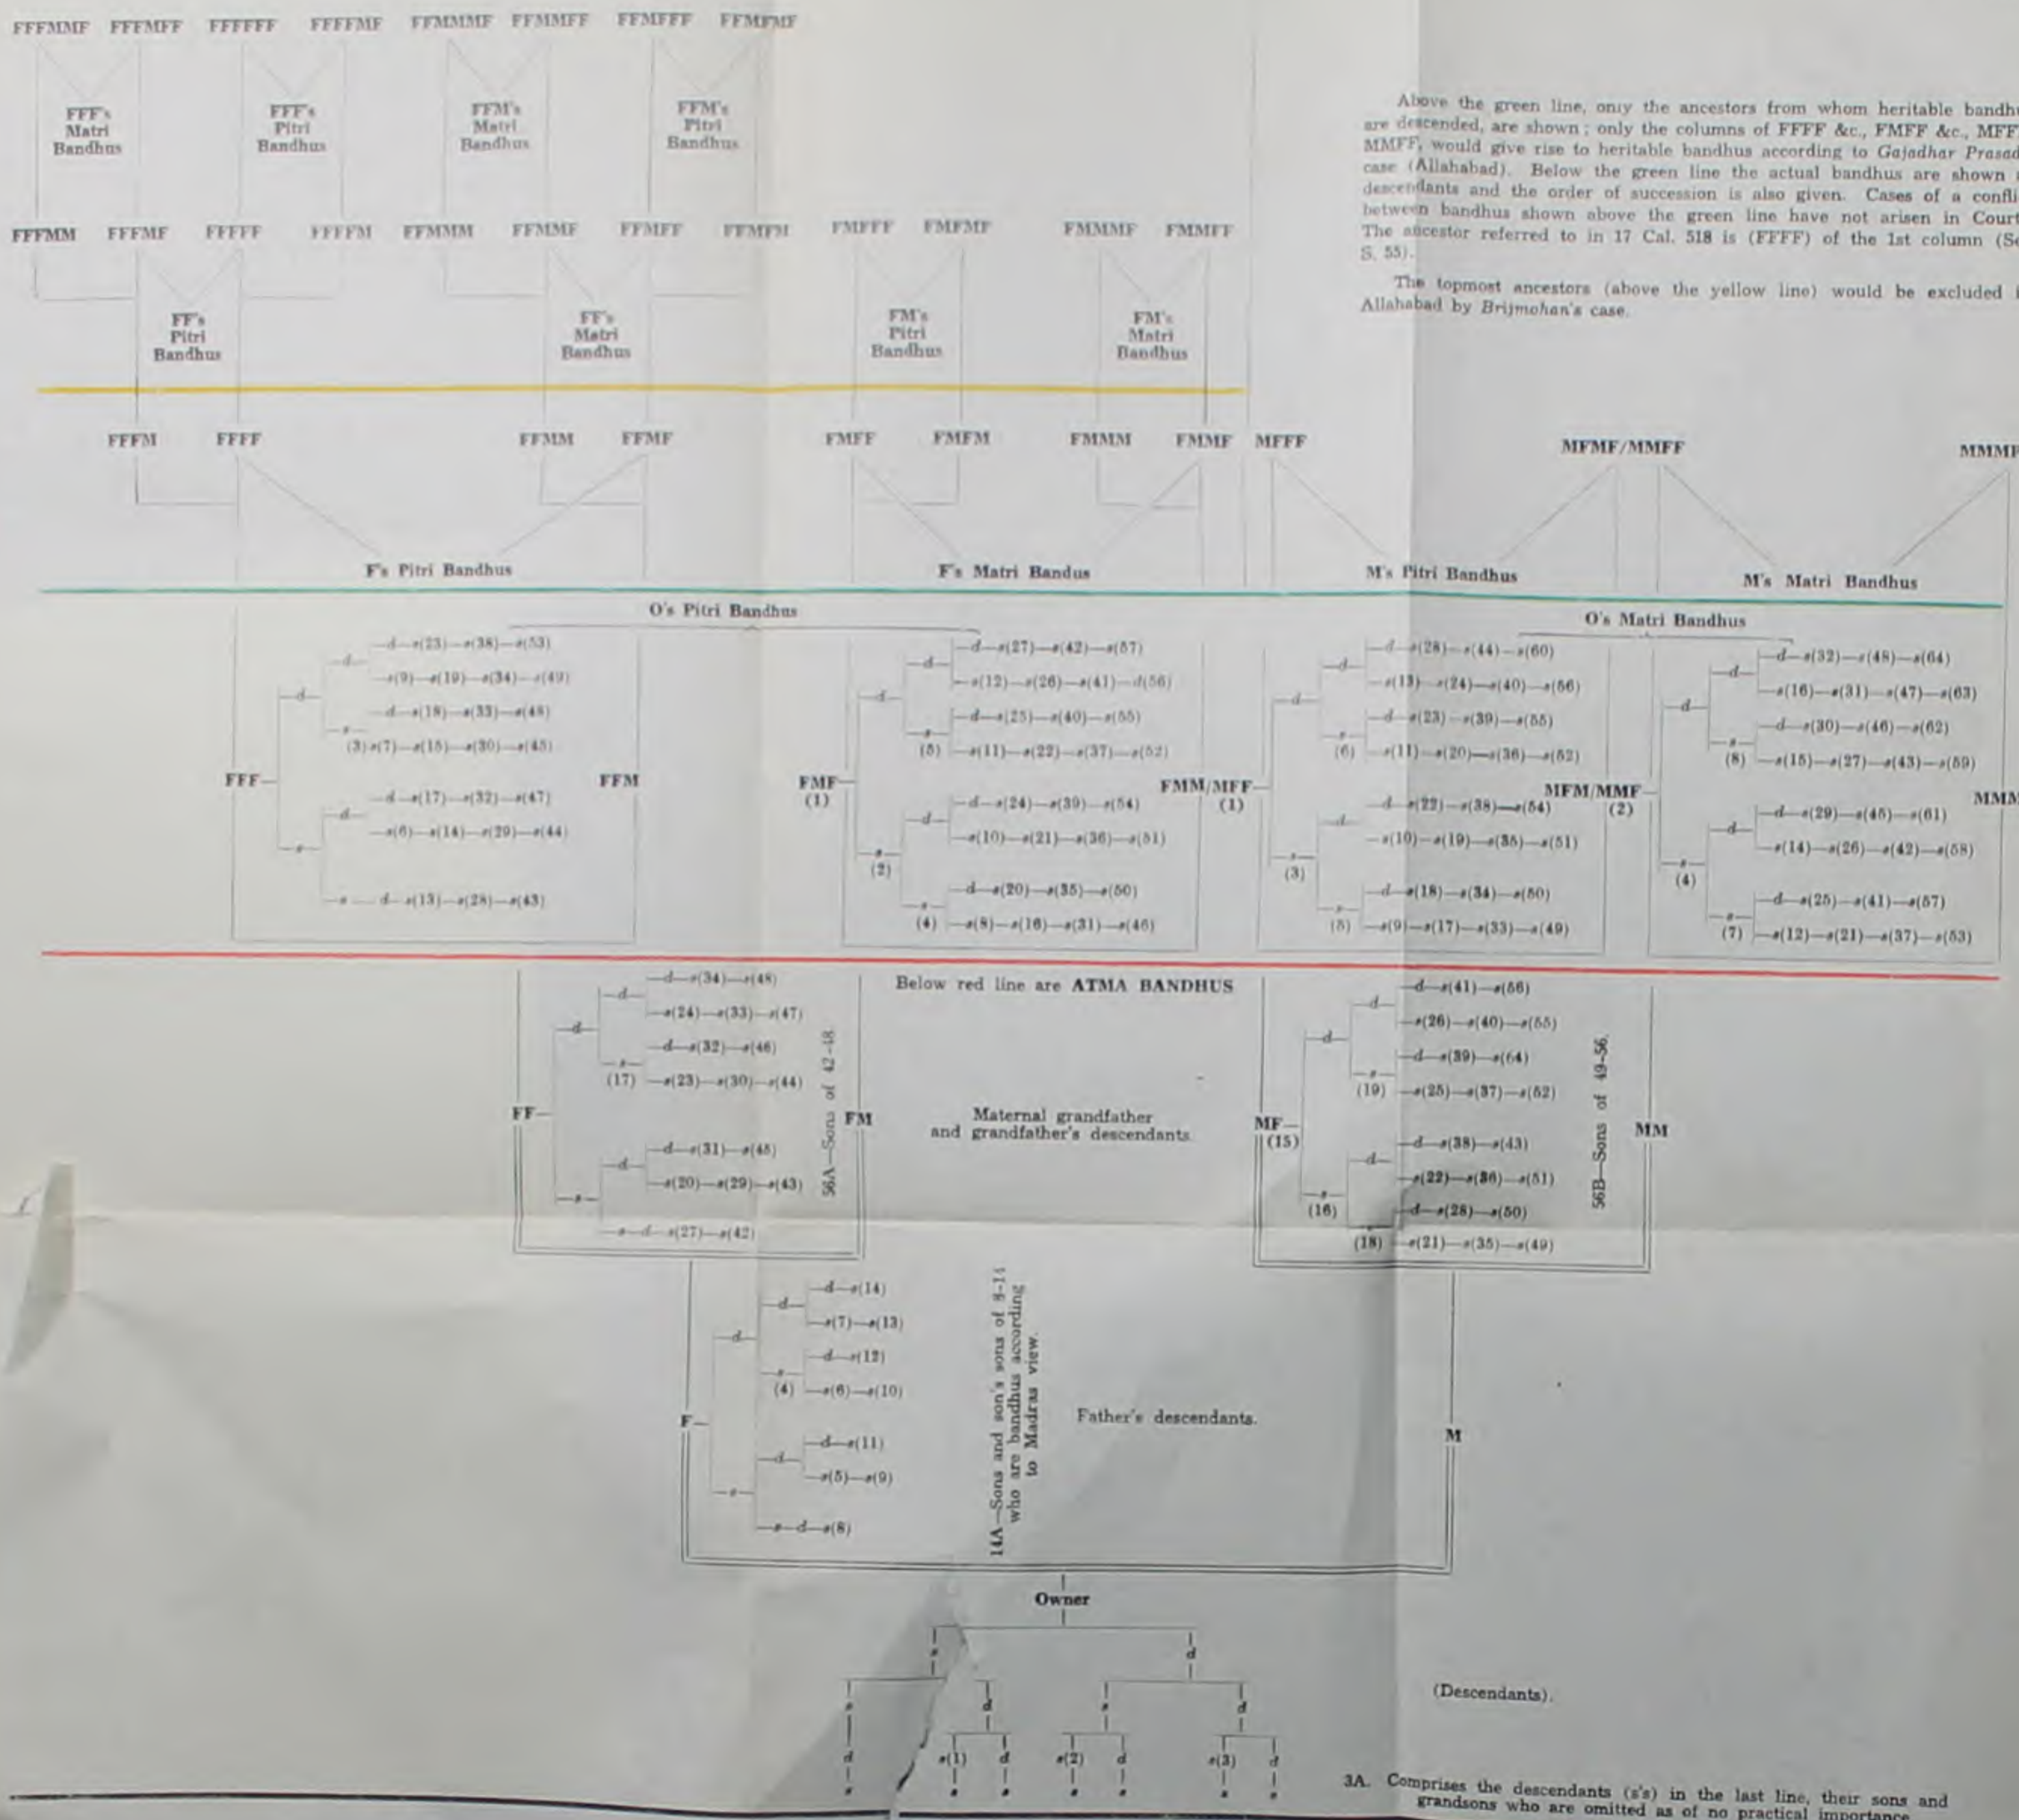
[See s. 54.]



Above the green line, only the ancestors from whom heritable bandhus are descended, are shown; only the columns of FFFF &c., FMFF &c., MFFF, MMFF, would give rise to heritable bandhus according to Gajadhar Prasad's case (Allahabad). Below the green line the actual bandhus are shown as descendants and the order of succession is also given. Cases of a conflict between bandhus shown above the green line have not arisen in Courts. The ancestor referred to in 17 Cal. 518 is (FFFF) of the 1st column (See S. 55).

The topmost ancestors (above the yellow line) would be excluded in Allahabad by Brijmohan's case.

3A. Comprises the descendants (s's) in the last line, their sons and grandsons who are omitted as of no practical importance.

Title
Author
Accession No
Call No.
BORROWER'S NO.
ISSUE DATE
BORROWER'S NO.
ISSUE DATE

50. Mother's paternal grandfather's son's son's daughter's son's son's son.
51. Mother's paternal grandfather's son's daughter's son's son's son's son.
52. Mother's paternal grandfather's daughter's son's son's son's son's son.
53. Mother's maternal grandfather's son's son's son's son's son's son.
54. Mother's paternal grandfather's son's daughter's daughter's son's son's son.
55. Mother's paternal grandfather's daughter's son's daughter's son's son's son.
56. Mother's paternal grandfather's daughter's daughter's son's son's son's son.
57. Mother's maternal grandfather's son's son's daughter's son's son's son.
58. Mother's maternal grandfather's son's daughter's son's son's son's son.
59. Mother's maternal grandfather's daughter's son's son's son's son's son.
60. Mother's paternal grandfather's daughter's daughter's daughter's son's son's son.
61. Mother's maternal grandfather's son's daughter's daughter's son's son's son.
62. Mother's maternal grandfather's daughter's son's daughter's son's son's son.
63. Mother's maternal grandfather's daughter's daughter's son's son's son's son.
64. Mother's maternal grandfather's daughter's daughter's daughter's son's son's son.

The above lists are prepared on the basis of the decision and dictum in Kesar Singh's case (i). But nos. 14A and 42-56B of the Atma bandhus, nos. 28-57 of the Pitri bandhus, nos. 33-64 of the Matri bandhus would be excluded by Brij Mohan's case (j) and a few others by Gajadhar Prasad's case (k).

55. Bandhus who are descendants of remoter ancestors.—The bandhus for whom the order of succession is given in § 54, are all descendants of the great-grandfathers, the grandfathers and father of the propositus and of the propositus himself. It may become necessary to consider the position in regard to the descendants of ancestors higher than the great-grandfathers, vide chart on page 136A.

The first question that arises in respect of such bandhus is whether they fall under the heading Pitri bandhus and Matri bandhus or have to be classified into other classes. The importance of such a question may be illustrated thus:—Suppose the two rival claimants are (1) a descendant of mother's father's father and, therefore, admittedly a matri bandhu, and (2) a cognate descendant of father's father's father's father. If the latter must be regarded as a pitri bandhu he will be preferred to the former according to the decision in Muthusami v. Muthukumarasami (l). But it will be noticed that he is descended from an ancestor higher than the ancestor through whom the first claimant traces descent and he does not appear among the pitri bandhus mentioned in § 49. If he falls under a different class which has to be given a different name such as (pitri-pitri bandhus), he, being descended from a remoter ancestor and not being a pitri bandhu, must yield to his rival.

The question has never arisen before the Courts and may never arise. An instance of such a person being regarded as a bandhu, but without any rival claimant is that of the father's father's father's son's son's daughter's son (m). Several judges in India have expressed the opinion that it is not possible to divide all bandhus into the three classes mentioned in the Mitakshara [§ 46(4)]. The Mitakshara itself does not say that all bandhus fall into three classes. Like the individual bandhus the classes mentioned in it may be regarded as illustrative and not as exhaustive. The opposite view is stated in the second proposition of the Madras High Court in Muttusami v. Muttukumarasami (n) which runs thus: "(2) That, as stated in the text of Vridha Satatapa or Baudhayana, they are of three classes ....."

It is true that the four propositions laid down in that case were generally approved in appeal and in Vedachela v. Subramania (o) by the Judicial Committee. But in none of these cases was it necessary to deal with the question and too much should not be

---

(i) (1926) 49 Mad. 652, 95 I.C. 651, ('26) A.M. 881.
(j) (1938) A.L.J. 670, ('38) A.A. 443.
(k) (1932) 54 All. 698, 138 I.C. 561, ('32) A.A. 417.
(l) (1896) 19 Mad. 405, 23 I.A. 83.
(m) Manick Chand v. Jagat Settani (1890) 17 Cal. 518.
(n) (1893) 16 Mad. 23, 30.
(o) (1922) 48 I.A. 349, 359, 44 Mad. 753, 64 I.C. 402, ('22) A.PC. 33.

attached to such general approval. It is submitted that bandhus descended from the higher ancestors should be classed into (1) pitri-pitri bandhus, (2) pitri-matri bandhus, (3) matri-pitri bandhus and (4) matri-matri bandhus and similarly for descendants of remoter ancestors (p). It is on the assumption that all bandhus fall into three classes that some of the reasoning of the Allahabad High Court in Gajadhar Prasad v. Gauri Shankar (q) is based.

56. Female bandhus in Bombay and Madras.—The bandhus mentioned in § 54 above are all males. The Mitakshara nowhere expressly mentions female bandhus. The nine instances there given are all instances of male bandhus. The Benares and Mithila schools follow the strict letter of the Mitakshara, and do not recognize females as bandhus. In Bombay and Madras, however, certain females are recognized as bandhus.

Every female other than the daughter in Madras, and other than the daughter, sister and father's sister, in Bombay who rank above bandhus, who, if she were a male would have been an heir, that is, who is related to the propcsitus by birth, within the limits of degrees for bandhus is regarded as a heritable bandhu. The following are instances:—

| IN BOMBAY. | IN MADRAS. |
|---|---|
| Brother's daughter (r). | Brother's daughter (v). |
| Sister's daughter (s). | Brother's son's daughter (w). |
| Paternal uncle's daughter (t). | Father's brother's daughter (*w*1). |
| Paternal grandfather's sister's son's daughter (u). | |

It has been held by a Full Bench of the Bombay High Court (x) overruling earlier decisions of the same Court that it is not the correct rule, that according to Mitakshara law as applied in the Bombay State, a male bandhu is to be preferred to a female bandhu even though the latter is nearer in degree. The first test to apply is to determine in which particular class a bandhu falls among the classes enumerated in Mitakshara, and preference should always be given to the class enumerated earlier over those mentioned subsequently. The next test to apply would be to find out as to which of the Bandhus is nearer in degree in a particular class. If a female bandhu is nearer in relation she should be preferred to a remote male Bandhu. If the rival claimants are equally related then only the principle of religious efficacy should be applied and in that case a male can be preferred to a female.

---

(p) Umashankar v. Mussamat Nageshwari (1918) 3 Pat. L.J. 663, 48 I.C. 625, ('18) A.P. 1; Rami Reddi v. Gangi Reddi (1925) 48 Mad. 722, 87 I.C. 609, ('25) A.M. 807, 809, 810; Kalimuthu v. Ammamuthu (1935) 58 Mad. 238, 153 I.C. 107, ('34) A.M. 611.

(q) (1932) 54 All. 698, 138 I.C. 561, ('32) A.A. 417.

(r) Balkrishna v. Ramkrishna (1921) 45 Bom. 353, 59 I.C. 771, ('21) A.B. 189.

(s) Dattatraya v Gangabai (1922) 46 Bom. 541.

(t) Kenchava v. Girimallappa (1924) 51 I.A. 368, 48 Bom. 569, 82 I.C. 966, ('24) A.PC. 209 (postponed to father's sister's son).

(u) Bai Vijli v. Bai Prabhalakshmi (1907) 9 Bom. L.R. 1129.

(v) Venkatasubramaniam v. Thayarammah (1898) 2 Mad. 263.

(w) Jagannadhan v. Adilakshmi (1940) Mad. 734, ('40) A.M. 545.

(*w*1) Fakula Majhi v. Subhdra ('69) A. Orissa 3 (case of Madras law. In Madras a father's brother's daughter succeeds as bandhu when the deceased has not left any other male heir: Jagannadhan v. Adilaxmi ('40) A.M. 545).

(x) Kisan Dhondu v. Shevantabai (1949) 52 Bom. L.R. 327 ('50) A.B. 254, overruling Balkrishna v. Ramkrishna (1920) 22 Bom. L.R. 1442; and Girimallappa v. Kenchava (1920) 45 Bom. 768.

In Madras a male bandhu is entitled to preference over a female bandhu even though the female bandhu is nearer in degree (*x*1).

Under the Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act 2 of 1929, the son's daughter, the daughter's daughter and the sister inherit with gotraja sapindas, the son's daughter succeeding immediately after the father's father, the daughter's daughter next after her, and the sister next after the daughter's daughter: see § 43, nos. 13A, 13B and 13C. In Bombay, the sister had a higher place even before the Act and retains it. As to half-sister, see § 43, 13C (2).

The female relations mentioned above are regarded as bandhus on the ground that "any relative who is also a cognate may be treated as coming within the definition of bhinna gotra sapinda, and that the term 'sapinda,' as used in chap. ii, sec. vi, of the Mitakshara, includes females" (y).

In Madras such females come after all the male bandhus (z). For the order in Bombay see § 74. Amongst themselves they succeed in the order of propinquity.

56A. Heirs of an illegitimate son.—When the illegitimate son of a woman dies leaving his mother but no nearer heirs, she is entitled to succeed as heir in accordance with the general principles of Hindu Law (a). The illegitimate sons of a prostitute, though by different fathers, are entitled to succeed to each other. Similarly, the legitimate son of one of such sons is entitled to succeed to them, and also to their legitimate sons (b). So if A and B are son and daughter of a woman living in adultery and A dies leaving B but no legitimate heirs, B is entitled to succeed to A (c).

The decisions on the subject were reviewed in a recent case by the Madras High Court (*c*1).

In the Madras case (d) on which the present section is based Devadoss, J., said: "It is a misnomer to call the son of a dancing woman, whose paternity is unknown, an illegitimate son. The illegitimate son is one born out of wedlock, i.e., no marriage was solemnized between the father and the mother. In the case of sons of prostitutes or dancing women the paternity is unknown and it is only an euphemism to call them illegitimate sons. In Roman law they are called Nullius Filius. Dancing women have their peculiar customs. Their status is recognized in Hindu society. Their customs have received the sanction of judicial decisions and the adoption of girls by them is recognized by law, and the daughters of dancing women inherit in preference to their sons."

The illegitimate son of a Sudra being an heir to his father, the father also is an heir to him provided, of course, the illegitimate son dies without leaving any issue, widow or mother (e).

57. Preceptor, disciple and fellow-student.—(1) In default of kindred, the property of a deceased Hindu, even though he be a Sudra, passes to his preceptor; if there be no preceptor, to his disciple; and if there be no disciple

---

(*x*1) Kaliammal v Muthu Pillai ('66) A.M. 118.

(y) Balamma v. Pullayya (1895) 18 Mad. 168, 170.

(z) Narasimma v. Managammal (1890) 13 Mad. 10; Rajah Venkata v. Rajah Surenani (1908) 31 Mad. 321; Lekshamana Iyer v. Ponnu Ammal ('52) A. Trav.-Co. 317.

(a) Jagarnath Gir v. Sher Bahadur Singh (1935) 57 All. 85, 153 I.C. 1078, ('35) A.A. 329; certain observations in this case were commented on in Sadu Ganaji v. Shankerrao (1955) Nag. 467, ('55) A.N. 84.

(b) Viswanatha v. Doraiswami (1925) 48 Mad. 944, 91 I.C. 193, ('26) A.M. 289.

(c) Dattatraya v. Matha Bala (1934) 58 Bom. 119, 114 I.C. 821, ('34) A.B. 36.

(*c*1) State of Madras v. Ramanatha Rao (1960) Mad. 800; ('60) A.M. 436; [Matribandhus entitled to succeed.]

(d) (1925) 48 Mad. 944, 946, 91 I.C. 193, ('26) A.M. 289, supra.

(e) Subramania v. Rathnavelu (1918) 41 Mad. 44, 42 I.C. 556, ('18) A.M. 1346 [F.B.].

to his fellow-student. In determining who is a preceptor, a disciple or a fellow-student, the Court will only consider the imparting of purely religious instruction (f).

(2) Entrance of a Hindu into a religious order generally operates as a civil death (*f*1). The man who becomes an ascetic severs his connection with the members of his natural family and being adopted by his preceptor becomes, so to say, a spiritual son of the latter. The other disciples of his Guru are regarded as his brothers, while the co-disciples of his Guru are looked upon as uncles and this way a spiritual family is established on the analogy of a natural family (g). Also see § 111 post.

Mitakshara, ch. 2 sec. 7. In the Madras case referred to above, it was held that the disciple of an ascetic Sudra, who left no kindred, was entitled to succeed to his estate so as to prevent its escheat to Government.

Under the Bengal School of law a Dikshaguru who is not the person who gives upanayan cannot be regarded as Acharya or preceptor and is not entitled to succeed to the property of his disciple in default of kindred (h).

In the undermentioned case the Andhra Pradesh High Court had to consider whether the avocation of Sishya Sancharam was an office of property and whether it was heritable and partible. It had also to consider whether earnings from this avocation constitute joint family property (*h*1).

58. Hermits and members of religious orders.—The heir to the property of a hermit (Vanaprastha) is his spiritual brother belonging to the same hermitage, to that of an ascetic (Sanyasi) a virtuous pupil, and to that of a student in theology (Bramhachari) his religious preceptor. These heirs are entitled to succeed in preference to the kindred of the deceased. This rule applies only to members of the twice-born classes. It does not apply to Sudras unless some usage or custom to that effect is proved (i).

Mitakshara, ch. 2, sec. 8; see § 111 below. The heirs mentioned in § 57 are not entitled to succeed except in default of kindred. The present section deals exclusively with succession to the property of members of religious orders who belong to the twice-born classes. Sanyasis are members of the twice-born classes (j). The heirs enumerated in this section are entitled to succeed in priority to the kindred of the deceased.

59. Escheat.—(1) On failure of all the heirs mentioned above, the Government takes by escheat (k). Where the Government claims by escheat, the onus lies on the Government to show that the last proprietor died without heirs (l).

---

(f) Sambasiva v. Secretary of State for India (1921) 44 Mad. 704, 63 I.C. 659, ('21) A.M. 537.

(*f*1) For essentials of initiation into Sanyasa ashram see § 111 post, and cases there cited.

(g) Sital Das v. Sant Ram ('54) A.S.C. 606, 613.

(h) Sadananda v. Harinam ('50) A.C. 179.

(*h*1) Tiruvenkatacharier v. Andalamma ('69) A.A.P. 303.

(i) Ramdas v. Baldevdas (1915) 39 Bom. 168. 26 I.C. 607, ('14) A.B. 116 [Sanyasi]; Dharamapuram v. Virapandiyam (1899) 22 Mad. 302 [Sudra]: Collector of Decca v. Jagat Chunder (1901) 28 Cal. 608 [claim of preceptor's preceptor allowed as proved by custom]; Harish Chandra v. Atir Mahmud (1913) 40 Cal. 545, 18 I.C. 474 [Sudra]; Somasundarum v. Vaithilinga (1917) 40 Mad. 846, 41 I.C. 546, ('18) A.M. 794 [Sudra]; Sobhaddi v. Gobind (1924) 46 All. 616, 80 I.C. 579, ('24) A.A. 742. However, see Krishna Singh v. Mathura Ahir, ('72) A. All. 273.

(j) (1915) 39 Bom. 168, 174, 26 I.C. 607, ('14) A.B. 116, supra. Also see Sital Das v. Sant Ram supra; Gulabrao v. Nagorao (1952) Nag. 591, ('52) A.N. 102 (Requirements of a person taking sanyas).

(k) Collector of Masulipatam v. Cavaly Venkata (1860) 8 M.I.A. 500. Ram Chandra v. Man Singh ('68) A.S.C. 954.

(l) Girdhari Lall v. Bengal Government (1868) 12 M.I.A. 448, 10 W.R. 31 (P.C.) Ganpat v. Secretary of State (1921) 45 Bom. 1106, 1110, 62 I.C. 109, ('21) A.B. 138; United Provinces through Deputy Commissioner Hardoi v. Kanhaiyalal & Ors. (1941) 16 Luck. 551, 192 I.C. 131, ('41) A.O. 337; State of Madras v. Ramanatha Rao ('60) A.M. 436, (1960) Mad. 800.

(2) An estate taken by escheat is subject to the trusts and charges, if any, previously affecting the estate (m), e.g., maintenance of widows (n), and mortgages created by a widow for legal necessity (o), but not to unauthorized alienations by widows (p).

Succession after Reunion

60. Order of Succession among reunited members.—In Madras, it has been held that the share of a reunited member survives to the other members of the reunited family like the share of a member of a normal joint family (q).

In Calcutta the opinion has been expressed that the principle of survivorship applies to reunited coparceners (r).

The Madras High Court has expressed the opinion that a reunited son has a preferential right of inheritance to one who remains separate (s).

The following is the order of succession according to Viramitrodaya:

(1-3) Son, grandson and great-grandson;
(4) reunited whole brother;
(5) reunited half-brother and separated full-brother (t);
(6) reunited mother;
(7) reunited father;
(8) any other reunited coparcener;
(9) half-brother not reunited;
(10) mother not reunited;
(11) father not reunited;
(12) widow;
(13) daughter;
(14) daughter's son;
(15) sister.

Subject to the above, the succession goes to the sapindas, samanodakas and bandhus in the order and according to the rules set forth in §§ 43, 45 and 50 (u).

As to reunion, see §§ 342-344.

The order of succession, according to the Smriti Chandrika, is as follows: (1) son, grandson, great-grandson, (2) reunited full-brother, (3) separated full-brother, (4) reunited half-brother, (5) reunited father or paternal uncle, (6) separated half-brother, (7) father, (8) mother, (9) virtuous widow, (10) sister, (11) sapindas, and (12) samanodakas.

According to the Mayukha, the reunited member has in every case preference over the unreunited. But when there are separated full-brothers and reunited half-brothers, uncles and the like, the separated full-brother, etc., takes equally with the reunited half-brother, etc. After the brother, the mother takes, then the father, then the widow, then the sister, then the daughter, and after her the nearest sapinda.

See Ghose's Hindu law, 3rd ed., pp. 625-626.

---

(m) (1860) 8 M.I.A. 500, 527, supra.
(n) Golab Koonwar v. Collector of Benares (1847) 4 M.I.A. 246, 258.
(o) Cavaly Vencata v. Collector of Masulipatam (1867) 11 M.I.A. 619.
(p) (1860) 8 M.I.A. 500, 527, supra.
(q) Samudrala v. Samudrala (1910) 33 Mad. 165, 3 I.C. 741.
(r) Jasoda v. Sheo (1890) 17 Cal. 33; Sham v. Court (1873) 20 W.R. 197.
(s) Nana v. Ramchandra (1909) 32 Mad. 377, 382, 383, 2 I.C. 519.
(t) Ramasami v. Venkatesam (1893) 16 Mad. 440.
(u) Sarkar's Hindu Law, 7th ed., p. 587.

CHAPTER V

FEMALE HEIRS

LAW PRIOR TO HINDU SUCCESSION ACT, 1956

61. Female heirs: Bengal school.—According to the Bengal school no female could inherit to a male unless she is expressly named as an heir in the texts. The result is that the only females recognized as heirs in that school are (1) the widow, (2) the daughter, (3) the mother, (4) the father's mother, and (5) the father's father's mother (v).

61A. Female heirs: Mitakshara school.—(1) Before the Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act, 1929, the only females recognized as heirs in the Benares (w) and Mithila schools were (1) the widow, (2) the daughter, (3) the mother, (4) the father's mother, and (5) the father's father's mother. The exclusion of other females was founded on a text of Baudhayana which says: "Women are devoid of the senses, and incompetent to inherit" (x). Accordingly it has been held in Lahore that a sister's son's daughter is not an heir (y).

Neither the Madras nor the Bombay school follow the text of Baudhayana. These schools follow the text of Manu which says: "To the nearest sapinda the inheritance next belongs," and they interpret the word "sapinda" to include females also (z). On that interpretation the Madras school has held that the brother's daughter, sister's daughter, brother's son's daughter and father's sister are also heirs in the Madras State [§ 56]. The Bombay school has gone much further, and it includes in the list of female heirs not only the heirs recognized in the Benares, Mithila and Madras schools, but also widows of gotraja sapindas [§ 68]. The recognition of widows of gotraja sapindas as heirs in Bombay has been placed by the Privy Council on the ground of usage (a). But the widows of bandhus are not recognized as heirs anywhere; for instance, a sister's son's widow (b).

(2) Under the Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act, 1929, which came into force on the 21st February 1929, the son's daughter, the daughter's daughter, and the sister (§ 43-13A to C) rank as heirs in all parts of India where the Mitakshara law prevails. Before the Act they ranked as heirs only in the Bombay [§ 56] and Madras [§ 56] States.

Before the Act, both the son's daughter and the daughter's daughter ranked as bandhus in Bombay and Madras. Under the Act, however, they both inherit as gotraja sapindas [§ 43, nos. 13A and 13B]. As regards the sister, she succeeded in Bombay immediately after the paternal grandmother, and in Madras she succeeded as a bandhu. As regards her place in the order of inheritance in Bombay, the Act effects no change, and she will succeed immediately after the paternal grandmother as she did before the Act [s. 65]. In Madras, however, she will, since the Act, succeed immediately after the daughter's daughter [§ 43, no. 13C].

62. Female heirs in Benares and Mithila.—The only females recognized as heirs in the Benares and Mithila schools before the Hindu law of Inheri-

---

(v) Guru Gobind v. Anand Lal (1870) 5 Beng. L.R. 15, 37 [F.B.].

(w) Jagan Nath v. Champa (1906) 28 All. 307; Srimati Krishna v. Bhaiya-Rajendra (1927) 2 Luck. 43, 104 I.C. 155, ('27) A.O. 240; Jang Bir v. Mst. Jamna (1931) 12 Lah. 534, 135 I.C. 593, ('32) A.L. 37 [sister not an heir].

(x) Lallubhoi v. Cassibai (1880) 5 Bom. 110, 118, 7 I.A. 212, 231.

(y) Rameshwar v. Mst. Ganpati Devi (1937) Lah. 525, 166 I.C. 753, ('36) A.L. 652.

(z) Balamma v. Pullayya (1895) 18 Mad. 168, 170.

(a) (1880) 5 Bom. 110, 7 I.A. 212, 237, supra.

(b) Rameshwar v. Mst. Ganapati Devi (1937) Lah. 525, 166 I.C. 753, ('36) A.L. 652.

tance (Amendment) Act of 1929 were (1) the widow, (2) the daughter, (3) the mother, (4) the father's mother, and (5) the father's father's mother. No other female was recognized as an heir (c). Under the Act, the son's daughter, the daughter's daughter, and the sister also rank as heirs [§ 43, nos. 13A, 13B and 13C].

63. Female heirs in Madras.—The Madras school recognizes not only the widow, daughter, mother, father's mother, and father's father's mother as heirs, but also the females mentioned in sec. 56 above. This includes the son's daughter, daughter's daughter and sister who are now expressly named as heirs in the Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act 2 of 1929, see § 61A above. The Madras school does not admit the widows of gotraja sapindas as heirs (d).

64. Female heirs in Bombay.—The Bombay school recognizes not only the widow, daughter, mother, father's mother, and father's father's mother as heirs, but also the following females:—

(1) Sister, whether of the whole or half-blood. The sister is considered a sapinda by virtue of her affinity to her brother. She is also considered a gotraja sapinda as having been born in her brother's gotra or family (e) [§ 65]. Half-sisters succeed as much as sisters of the whole blood [§ 66]. The sister is now expressly mentioned as an heir in the Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act 2 of 1929 [§ 43 (13C)].

The Mayukha expressly names the sister as an heir. The Mitakshara does not name the sister, but certain commentators of repute, such as Balambhatta and Nanda Pandita, say that in the term "brothers" whom the Mitakshara does name, sisters are included (f). She is also expressly mentioned as an heir in Nilkantha's Commentary.

The paternal uncle's daughter is not a gotraja sapinda (g), but a bandhu [§ 56].

(2) Father's sister, whether of the whole or half-blood.—See § 74.

(3) Widows of predeceased gotraja sapindas, that is, of sapindas and samanodakas (h), but not widows of bandhus or bhinna-gotraja sapindas (i). Thus the son, the father, the brother, the brother's son, the paternal uncle, the paternal uncle's son, are all gotraja sapindas of the deceased. Therefore, according to the Bombay decisions, the son's widow (j), the step-mother (father's widow) (k), the brother's widow (l), the brother's son's widow (m), the paternal uncle's widow (n), and the widow of the paternal uncle's son (o), are all sagotra sapindas and inherit necessarily before the bandhus. The above list is not exhaustive, but merely illustrative. See § 68.

---

(c) Tirath Ram v. Mst. Kahan Devi (1920) 1 Lah. 588, 593-594, 60 I.C. 101, ('21) A.L. 149; Mst. Sujan Devi v. Jagiri Mal (1920) 1 Lah. 608, 59 I.C. 124, ('20) A.L. 514.

(d) Balamma v. Pullaya (1895) 18 Mad. 168 [widow of great-grandson of great-grandfather of the deceased not an heir]; Kanakammal v. Ananthamathi (1914) 37 Mad. 293, 25 I.C. 901, ('15) A.M. 18 [brother's widow not an heir].

(e) Kesserbai v. Valab (1880) 4 Bom. 188.

(f) Kesserbai v. Valab (1880) 4 Bom. 188, 197, 204.

(g) Krishnabai v. Keshav (1920) 22 Bom. L.R. 1162, 59 I.C. 511, ('20) A.B. 237.

(h) Lallubhoi v. Cassibai (1880) 5 Bom. 110, 7 I.A. 212; Lakshmibai v. Jayram (1869) 6 Bom. H.C. 152.

(i) Vallabhdas v. Sakarbai (1901) 25 Bom. 281.

(j) Roopchand v. Poolchand (1824) 2 Bom. 670.

(k) (1880) 4 Bom. 188, 208, supra.

(l) Nahalchand v. Hemchand (1885) 9 Bom. 31.

(m) Madhavram v. Dave (1897) 21 Bom. 739.

(n) Rachava v. Kalingapa (1892) 16 Bom. 716; Raghunath Shankar v. Laxmibai (1935) 59 Bom. 417, 37 Bom. L.R. 150, 157 I.C. 658, ('35) A.B. 298.

(o) (1880) 5 Bom. 110, 7 I.A. 212, supra.

The widows of gotraja sapindas are recognized as heirs in the Bombay State only. They were not regarded as heirs elsewhere (p). Act XVIII of 1937 made the widow of a predeceased son and the widow of predeceased son's predeceased son heirs throughout India except under the Dayabhaga School.

A gotraja sapinda is one born in the gotra or family of the deceased. The expression sagotra sapinda means of the same gotra and includes females that enter the gotra of the deceased by marriage.

(4) Female bandhus mentioned in section 56 above.—These include the son's daughter and daughter's daughter, both of whom are expressly mentioned in the Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act 2 of 1929. But they inherit with gotraja sapindas [§ 43, nos. 13A and 13B].

65. Sister's place as an heir in the Bombay State.—(1) A sister is an heir in the Bombay State [s. 64(1)], and she inherits immediately after the paternal grandmother both under the Mayukha and the Mitakshara as interpreted in Bombay (q). Her place in the order of succession is not affected by the Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act 2 of 1929 [§ 43 (13C)]. See § 72(12) and § 77(12).

Both under the Mayukha and the Mitakshara as interpreted in Bombay, a sister does not take before a full-brother's son (r). In cases governed by the Mayukha, she takes even before a half-brother (s), and half-brother's son (t), but not in cases governed by the Mitakshara (u). See §§ 72 and 77 below.

The sister takes before a paternal uncle (v), a paternal uncle's son (w), a paternal uncle's son's son (x), or a more remote paternal male relative (y). She also takes before a son's widow (z), a step-mother (a), a brother's widow (b), or paternal uncle's widow (c) all of whom are widows of gotraja sapindas [§ 68]. She also succeeds in preference to a paternal step-grandmother (d).

(2) Sisters take absolute estates in severalty, and not as joint tenants in Bombay (e).

66. Half-sister as an heir in the Bombay State.—A half-sister is an heir in the Bombay State and she inherits, in cases governed by the Mitakshara, immediately after the full-sister (f) and in cases governed by the Mayukha after the half-brother (g). Her place in the order of succession is not affected by the Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act 2 of 1929 [§ 43(13C)].

---

(p) Ananda Bibee v. Nownit Lal (1883) 9 Cal. 315, 317-22; Balamma v. Pullayya (1895) 18 Mad. 168; Thayammal v. Annamalai (1896) 19 Mad. 35; Kanakammal v. Ananthamathi (1914) 37 Mad. 293, 25 I.C. 901, ('15) A.M. 18; Soshil Chand v. Mangal Ram ('54) A. Punj. 26, ('54) Punj. 449.

(q) West and Buhler, 4th ed., 109-110; Venayeck v. Luxumeebaee (1864) 9 M.I.A. 516 in App. from 1 Bom. H.C. 117 [a Mayukha case]; Lallubhai v. Mankuvarbai (1878) 2 Bom. 388, 421, 445-446; Kesserbai v. Valab (1880) 4 Bom. 188; Vithaldas v. Jeshubai (1880) 4 Bom. 219, 221; Bhagwan v. Warubai (1908) 32 Bom. 300.

(r) Mulji v. Cursandas (1900) 24 Bom. 563.

(s) Sakharam v. Sitabai (1879) 3 Bom. 353.

(t) (1908) 32 Bom. 300, supra; Hari Annaji v. Vasudev (1914) 38 Bom. 438, 441, 23 I.C. 944, ('14) A.B. 134.

(u) West and Buhler, 4th ed., 105-106; (1900) 24 Bom. 563, 573, 579, supra; (1914) 38 Bom. 438, 23 I.C. 944, ('14) A.B. 134, supra.

(v) See Trikam v. Natha (1912) 36 Bom. 120, 12 I.C. 359 [half-sister Mayukha].

(w) (1864) 9 M.I.A. 520, in App. from 1 Bom. H.C. 117, supra.

(x) Biru v. Khandu (1880) 4 Bom. 214.

(y) Dhondu v. Gangabai (1879) 3 Bom. 369.

(z) Vithaldas v. Jeshubai (1880) 4 Bom. 219, 221.

(a) Lakshmi v. Dada (1879) 4 Bom. 210.

(b) Rudrapa v. Irava (1904) 28 Bom. 82.

(c) (1880) 4 Bom. 188, supra.

(d) Lingangowda v. Tulsawa (1915) 17 Bom. L.R. 315, 28 I.C. 588, ('15) A.B. 48.

(e) Rindabai v. Anacharya (1891) 15 Bom. 206.

(f) West and Buhler, 2nd ed., p. 186; Jana v. Rakhma (1919) 43 Bom. 461, 52 I.C. 8, ('19) A.B. 12.

(g) (1880) 4 Bom. 188, 207-209, supra.

A half-sister takes before a step-mother (h), a paternal uncle (i), or a paternal uncle's widow (j).

67. Father's sister as an heir in the Bombay State.—See § 74.

68. Widows of gotraja sapindas as heirs in the Bombay State.—The succession of widows of gotraja sapindas [§ 64(3)] is governed by the following rules:—

(i) No widow of a gotraja sapinda can inherit until after "the compact series of heirs" [ending with the brother's son (k)], nor until after the sister and half-sister (l).

(ii) Subject to the above rule and provided that there is no existing male gotraja sapinda within the six degrees of the line to which her husband belonged (m), the widow of a gotraja sapinda stands in the same place as her husband, if living, would have occupied.

(iii) Where the contest lies between the widow of a gotraja sapinda representing a nearer line and a male gotraja sapinda representing a remoter line, the former inherits by preference over the latter (n).

(iv) Widows of gotraja sapindas may succeed to the estate of a male or to that of a female. In the former case, they take a widow's estate; in the latter, an absolute estate [§ 170(2), 171(2)].

(v) A widow who has remarried is not entitled to inherit as a gotraja sapinda in the family of her first husband (o). But unchastity at the time when the succession opens is not a disqualification to inherit as a gotraja sapinda (p).

The series of heirs beginning with the son and ending with the brother's son is called "the compact series of heirs." No widow of a gotraja sapinda can inherit before any of these heirs (q). Nor can she inherit before the sister or half-sister (r). A son is the nearest male gotraja sapinda of the deceased owner; therefore, the first in the series of widows of gotraja sapindas is the son's widow (s). Then comes the grandson's widow, and then the great-grandson's widow.

The male next after the great-grandson is the daughter's son. But he is not a gotraja sapinda, for he belongs to different gotra or family.

The next male is the father. The male gotraja sapindas of the deceased in his father's line are his (1), brother, (2) brother's son, (3) brother's son's son, (4) brother's son's son's son, (5) brother's son's son's son's son, and (6) brother's son's son's son's son's son. The father's line begin with the father and ends with the brother's son's son's son's son's son. The father being the first in his line, the step-mother (father's widow) is the first in the series of widows of gotraja sapindas in the father's line, and she takes before the brother's widow who is the second in the said series. But she is not entitled to inherit if there exists any lineal descendant of the father as far as the sixth degree, that is, if there be a (h) (1880) 4 Bom. 188, supra.

---

(i) (1912) 36 Bom. 120, 12 I.C. 359, supra.
(j) (1880) 4 Bom. 188, supra.
(k) Nahalchand v. Hemchand (1885) 9 Bom. 31, 34 (note).
(l) Vithaldas v. Jeshubai (1880) 4 Bom. 219, 221. Note that the son's widow is the first in the series of widows of gotraja sapindas.
(m) Lallubhoi v. Cassibai (1880) 5 Bom. 110, 7 I.A. 212, in app. from 2 Bom. 388; Rachava v. Kalingapa (1892) 16 Bom. 716, 720; Kashibai v. Moreshvar (1911) 35 Bom. 389, 11 I.C. 560; Basangavda v. Basangavda (1915) 39 Bom. 87, 127 I.C. 167, ('14) A.B. 202; Ambaidas v. Jijibhai (1912) 14 Bom. L.R. 261, 14 I.C. 979 [a Mayukha case].
(n) (1892) 16 Bom. 716, 718, supra; (1915) 39 Bom. 87, 27 I.C. 167, ('14) A.B. 202, supra.
(o) Pranjivan v. Bai Bhikhi (1921) 45 Bom. 1247, 63 I.C. 947, ('21) A.B. 57.
(p) Akoba Laxman v. Sai Genu (1941) Bom. 438, 197 I.C. 157, ('41) A.B. 204.
(q) (1885) 9 Bom. 31, 34, (note), supra.
(r) (1880) 4 Bom. 219, 221, supra.
(s) (1880) 4 Bom. 219, 221, supra.

brother, a brother's son, a brother's son's son, a brother's son's son's son, a brother's son's son's son's son, or a brother's son's son's son's son's son. See cl. (ii) of this section.

Suppose now that the contest is between a brother's widow and a paternal uncle. The husband of the brother's widow, that is, the brother, belongs to the father's line and the paternal uncle belongs to the father's father's line, that is, a remoter line. The brother's widow is therefore entitled to succeed before the paternal uncle. See cl. (iii) of this section.

Foundation of the right of widow of predeceased gotraja sapindas to inherit.—The right of these females to inherit rests mainly on the ground of positive acceptance and usage (t).

Illustration

A dies leaving a widow, a widow of a predeceased brother, and a paternal uncle. On A's death, his widow will succeed to the estate. The next heir, on the widow's death, is the widow of A's brother, and not the paternal uncle of A, the reason being that the husband of A's brother's widow (that is, A's brother) belongs to A's father's line, while A's paternal uncle belongs to A's father's father's line which is remoter line. On the death, however, of the brother's widow, the heir to A's estate will be his paternal uncle. A's widow takes a widow's estate in her husband's property. The brother's widow also takes a widow's estate [§ 170]. The paternal uncle takes the property absolutely and on his death it will pass to his own heirs.

69. Widows of samanodakas as heirs in the Bombay State.—The widows of predeceased samanodakas [§ 40] are held to be heirs in the Bombay State (u).

70. Daughters of descendants, ascendants and collaterals as heirs in the Bombay State.—The female descendants of the propositus and of his ancestors are bandhus in the Bombay State [§ 56].

---

(t) Lallubhoi v. Cassibai (1880) 7 I.A. 212, 237, 5 Bom. 110, 124.

(u) Lakshmibai v. Jayram (1869) 6 Bom. H.C.A.C. 152.

CHAPTER VI

ORDER OF SUCCESSION TO MALES IN THE BOMBAY STATE

LAW PRIOR TO HINDU SUCCESSION ACT, 1956

71. Succession in the Bombay State.—(1) The order of succession to males in the Bombay State is different from that in other parts of India where the Mitakshara law prevails. The difference arises from the fact that the Bombay school recognizes as heirs certain females who are not recognized as heirs in other parts of India [§§ 64-70].

(2) In the Bombay State itself there is a difference between the order of succession in cases governed by the Mayukha [§ 12(2)].

72. Order of succession in cases governed by the Mitakshara.—The following is the order of succession to males among sapindas in the Bomaby State in cases governed by the Mitakshara:—

1-6. Son, son's son (whose father is dead), and son's son's son (whose father and grandfather are both dead). These inherit simultaneously. Under Act XVIII of 1937 the widow, the predeceased son's widow, and the widow of a predeceased son of a predeceased son, are also recognized as heirs. (See § 43).

See notes to § 43, nos. 1-3 and 4.

7. Daughter—

See § 43, no. 5, notes (i), (iv), (v), (vi) and (vii).

In the Bombay State, daughters do not take as joint tenants with benefits of survivorship, but they take as tenants-in-common. Further, a daughter in that State does not take a limited estate in her father's property, but takes the property absolutely. Thus if a Hindu governed by the Bombay school dies leaving two daughters, each daughter takes an absolute interest in a moiety of her father's estate, and holds it as her separate property, and on her death her share will pass to her own heirs as her stridhan (v) [§ 170].

8. Daughter's son—

See notes to § 43, no. 6.

9. Mother—

See notes to § 43, no. 7.

As to a step-mother see no. 27 (post.)

10. Father.

11. Brother—

(i) of the whole blood.

(ii) of the half-blood.

---

(v) Bhagirthibai v. Kahnujirav (1887) 11 Bom. 285; Gulappa v. Tayawa (1907) 31 Bom. 453; Vithappa v. Savitri (1910) 34 Bom. 510, 7 I.C. 445.

A brother of the full blood succeeds before a brother of the half-blood. See notes to § 43, no. 9; see also § 44.

12. Brother's son—(w)

(i) of the whole blood.

(ii) of the half-blood.

Sons of brothers of the whole blood succeed before sons of brothers of the half-blood. See notes to § 43, no. 10; see also § 44.

13. Grandmother (Father's mother)—

See note to no. 14 below.

14. Full sister—

Her place in the order of succession is not affected by the Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act 2 of 1929 [§ 43 (13C)]. See § 64(1) and § 65.

15. Half-sister—

See § 43, No. 13C § 64(1) and § 66.

The three remote descendants of the deceased

16. Great-great-grandson—

It is not settled whether nos. 16, 17 and 18 succeed before or after no. 19. In Appaji v. Mohan Lal (x), the question was raised, but not decided.

17. Great-great-great-grandson.

18. Great-great-great-great-grandson.

Widows of 4 male lineal descendants of the deceased

19. Great-grandson's widow.

20. Great-great-grandson's widow.

21. Great-great-great-grandson's widow.

22. Great-great-great-great-grandson's widow.

The 4 remote descendants of the brother

23. Brother's son's son.

He does not succeed before but succeeds after the son's widow (a) [no. 17].

24. Brother's son's son's son.

25. Brother's son's son's son's son.

26. Brother's son's son's son's son's son.

The 4 remote descendants of the brother

27. Step--mother (y).

28. Brother's widow (z).

29. Brother's son's widow (a).

30. Brother's son's son's widow.

31. Brother's son's son's son's widow.

32. Brother's son's son's son's son's widow.

33. Brother's son's son's son's son's son's widow.

---

(w) Nahalchand v. Hemchand (1885) 9 Bom. 31 (takes before brother's son's widow.)

(x) (1930) 54 Bom. 564, 611, 127 I.C. 385, ('30) A.B. 273 [F.B.]

(y) Rakhmabai v. Tukaram (1887) 11 Bom. 47 takes before half brother's widow; Rusoabai v. Zoolekhabai (1895) 19 Bom. 707 (takes before paternal uncle's son).

(z) Basangavda v. Basangavda (1915) 39 Bom. 87, 27 I.C. 167, ('14) A.B. 202 (takes before pat. uncle's son).

(a) Madhavram v. Dave (1897) 21 Bom. 739.

Father's father and his 6 descendants

34. Father's father.
34A. Son's daughter.
34B. Daughter's daughter.
34C. Sister's son (b).

} See § 43, nos. 13A, 13B and 13D.

35. Paternal uncle.
(1) of the whole blood. (2) of the half-blood.
36. Paternal uncle's son.
He takes before no. 42. [Rachava v. Kalingapa (1892) 16 Bom. 716.]
37. Paternal uncle's son's son.
He takes before no. 42, [Kashibai v. Moreshwar (1911) 35 Bom. 389.]
38. Paternal uncle's son's son's son.
39. Paternal uncle's son's son's son's son.
40. Paternal uncle's son's son's son's son's son.

Widows of father's father and his 6 descendants

41. Father's step-mother.
42. Paternal uncle's widow.
She takes before father's sister (c).
43. Paternal uncle's son's widow.
44. Paternal uncle's son's son's widow.
45. Paternal uncle's son's son's son's widow.
46. Paternal uncle's son's son's son's son's widow.
47. Paternal uncle's son's son's son's son's son's widow.

The 3rd agnate female and the 3rd agnate male ancestor, and the latter's 6 descendants

48. Father's father's mother.
49. Father's father's father.
50. Father's paternal uncle.
51. Father's paternal uncle's son.
52. Father's paternal uncle's son's son.
53. Father's paternal uncle's son's son's son.
54. Father's paternal uncle's son's son's son's son.
55. Father's paternal uncle's son's son's son's son's son.

Widows of father's father's father and his 6 descendants

56. Father's father's step-mother.
57. Father's paternal uncle's widow.
58. Father's paternal uncle's son's widow.
59. Father's paternal uncle's son's son's widow.
60. Father's paternal uncle's son's son's son's widow.
61. Father's paternal uncle's son's son's son's son's widow.
62. Father's paternal uncle's son's son's son's son's son's widow.

The remaining sapindas and their widows

63-70. The 4th agnate female and the 4th agnate male ancestor and the latter's 6 descendants, one after another (d).
71-77. Widows of gotraja sapindas nos. 64 to 70, one after another (d).

---

(b) Ambabai v. Keshav Bandochand (1941) Bom. 230, 195 I.C. 172, ('41) A.B. 233.
(c) Raghunath Shankar v. Laxmibai (1935) 59 Bom. 417, 157 I.C. 658, 37 Bom. L.R. 150 ('35) A.B. 298.
(d) Ambaidas v. Jijibhai (1912) 14 Bom. L.R. 261, 14 I.C. 971.

73. Order of succession among samanodakas.—Failing sapindas and their widows (§ 72), the inheritance goes to Samanodakas according to the rules stated in § 45 above.

74. Order of succession among bandhus.—Failing samanodakas, the inheritance passes to bandhus according to the rules laid down in §§ 46 to 54 and 56 above. As regards the succession of bandhus, there is no difference between the Mitakshara and the Mayukha (e).

Father's sister.—According to § 56, the father's sister should be a bandhu, but according to the Mayukha, she is a gotraja sapinda; she comes in before bandhus, but after all the gotraja sapindas (f), for instance, a father's paternal uncle's son (g), a paternal uncle's widow (h). It is not clear whether, under the Mitakshara as interpreted in Bombay, she is a gotraja sapinda or a bandhu. But she is not more remote than a bandhu (i).

In Saguna v. Sadashiv (i) it was held that the father's half-sister, though a female, being a bandhu ex parte paterna is entitled to preference over the mother's brother, who though a male, is a bandhu ex parte materna.

This leads us to the question as to what are the principles to be applied in a contest between a male bandhu and a female bandhu. In Balkrishna v. Ramkrishna (j) it was held that a mother's sister's son should be preferred to a brother's daughter. This decision is in direct conflict with the previous decision which was not cited either in the arguments or in the judgment. In Kenchava v. Girimallappa (k) the Privy Council left the question open and held that the father's sister's son (a male bandhu ex parte paterna) is to be preferred to the father's brother's daughter (a female bandhu of the same degree).

In Bai Vijli's case (l), a mother's sister's son's son, who is an atma bandhu was preferred to a father's father's sister's son's daughter who is a pitri-bandhu.

75. Strangers as heirs.—See § § 57 and 58 above.

76. Escheat.—See § 59 above.

77. Order of succession in cases governed by the Mayukha.—The following is the order of succession to males in cases governed by the Mayukha (m):—

1-6. Same as § 72.

7. Father.

8. Mother—

See notes to § 72, no. 7, and notes to § 43, no. 7.

9. Full brothers along with sons of full brothers who are dead—

This rule does not go beyond brothers and brother's sons (n). Hence an uncle's son's son's son does not take equally with, but is postponed to, an uncle's son's son (o). As to the place of the half-brother, see no. 13 below. See Mayukha, ch. iv, sec. 8, v. 20.

---

(e) Parot Bapalal v. Mehta Harilal (1895) 19 Bom. 631.

(f) Vijiarangam v. Lakshuman (1871) 8 Bom. H.C.O.C. 244, 261, 263.

(g) Ganesh v. Waghu (1903) 27 Bom. 610.

(h) Raghunath Shankar v. Laxmi Bai (1935) 59 Bom. 417, 37 Bom. L.R. 150, 157 I.C. 658, ('35) A.B. 298.

(i) Saguna v. Sadashiv (1902) 26 Bom. 710.

(j) (1920) 45 Bom. 353, 59 I.C. 771, ('21) A.B. 189.

(k) (1924) 51 I.A. 368, 376-377, 48 Bom. 569, 82 I.C. 966, ('24) A.PC. 209.

(l) Bai Vijli v. Bai Prabhalakshmi (1907) 9 Bom. L.R. 1129.

(m) Mayukha, ch. iv. s. 8.

(n) Chandika Bakhsh v. Muna Kunwar (1902) 29 I.A. 70, 74, 24 All. 273, 280.

(o) Haribhai v. Mathur (1923) 47 Bom. 940, 77 I.C. 224, ('24) A.B. 140.

10. Full brother's son—

With the brother's son ends "the compact series of heirs." In default of brother's sons, the inheritance passes to gotraja sapindas, the first amongst them being the paternal grandmother [no. 11]. See Mayukha, ch. iv, sec. 8, v. 18.

11-12. Same as § 72.

13. Father's father and half-brother, in equal shares (p)—

This is obsolete (q). It is highly probable that the High Court of Bombay will in cases governed by the Mayukha adopt the same order of succession as that in cases governed by the Mitakshara, at least after no. 12. The order of succession after no. 12 will probably be (1) half-brother, (2) half-sister, (3) half-brother's son. The order of succession will thenceforth be the same as that in cases governed by the Mitakshara as interpreted in Bombay, that is, as in §§ 72-76. As to the father's sister, see § 74.

---

(p) Vithalrao v. Ramrao (1900) 24 Bom. 317, 338.

(q) Sakharam v. Sitabai (1879) 3 Bom. 353, at p. 363; Kesserbai v. Valab (1880) 4 Bom. 188, 207-208.

CHAPTER VII

ORDER OF INHERITANCE TO MALES ACCORDING TO DAYABHAGA OR BENGAL SCHOOL

LAW PRIOR TO HINDU SUCCESSION ACT, 1956

78. Heritable property.—The property of a deceased Hindu governed by the Dayabhaga law passes by succession, including his share in undivided property (r).

The Dayabhaga of Jimutavahana is the leading treatise of the Bengal school. [See Introduction pp. 56-57, supra]. The present Chapter deals with the order of succession according to the Dayabhaga.

According to the Mitakshara law, the interest of a deceased coparcener passes on his death to other members of the coparcenary by survivorship. The Dayabhaga law does not recognise the right of survivorship as between coparceners.

79. Spiritual benefit the governing doctrine.—Succession according to the Bengal school is governed by the capacity for conferring spiritual benefit (s). Spiritual benefit, however, is not always the guiding principle of inheritance, and in cases not contemplated by the Dayabhaga, the doctrine of propinquity as propounded in the Mitakshara may be applied.

Vaishnavas (worshippers of Vishnu) do not observe shradha and offer no oblations to their ancestors. But this does not exclude them from inheritance, for the right to inherit is based on the capacity to offer pindas, and not on the actual offering of it (t).

It may be observed that in most cases spiritual efficacy and propinquity run on the same lines. The result is that the same persons who are heirs under the Dayabhaga law are also heirs under the Mitakshara law. But all persons who are heirs under the Mitakshara law are not heirs under the Dayabhaga law. The Dayabhaga excludes many cognates recognised as heirs by the Mitakshara. Cognates are persons related to the deceased through a female.

80. Doctrine of spiritual benefit.—The foundation of the doctrine of spiritual benefit is the Parvana Sradha ceremony.

In the course of the ceremony the performer presents three different kinds of offerings to his deceased ancestors, namely—(1) pinda or an entire cake, called an undivided oblation; (2) pinda-lepas or remnants of the pinda which cling to the hand while mixing the ingredients of which the pindas are composed, called a divided oblation; and (3) libations of water.

The pinda is offered to the three immediate paternal ancestors, that is, the father, grandfather and great-grandfather, and the three immediate maternal ancestors, that is, the maternal grandfather, the maternal great-grandfather and the maternal great-great-grandfather. The pinda-lepas are offered to the three paternal ancestors next above those to whom the pinda is offered. The libations of water are offered to the seven paternal ancestors next above those to whom pinda-lepas are offered. He who offers a pinda and he to whom a pinda is offered are the sapindas of each other. He who offers pinda-lepas and he to whom they are offered are the sakulyas of each other. He who offers libations of water and he to whom they are offered are the samanodakas of each other.

---

(r) Durga Nath v. Chintamoni (1904) 31 Cal. 214.

(s) Guru Gobind v. Anand Lal (1870) 5 Beng. L.R. 15 [F.B.]; Tagore v. Tagore (1872) 9 Beng. L.R. 377, 394, I.A. Sup. Vol. 47, 64; Digumber v. Moti Lal (1883) 9 Cal. 563 [F.B.]. Also see Akshay Chandra v. Hari Das (1908) 35 Cal. 721, 726; Toolsee Dass v. Luckhymoney (1900) 4 C.W.N. 743; Shambo Chandra v. Kartick Chunder (1927) 54 Cal. 171, 174, 97 I.C. 845, ('27) A.C. 11; Nelinaksha v. Rajanikant (1931) 58 Cal. 1392, 134 I.C. 1272, ('31) A.C. 741.

(t) Akshay Chandra v. Hari Das, supra.

But this does not exhaust the list of sapindas, sakulyas and samanodakas. For a deceased Hindu does not merely benefit by oblations which are offered to him; he also participates in the benefit of oblations offered to the paternal ancestors to whom he himself was bound to offer them while he was alive (u). The result is that persons connected by oblations presented to common ancestors become the sapindas, sakulyas and samanodakas of one another according to the nature of the oblation presented to them. This accounts for a large number of other relations who are recognized as sapindas, sakulyas and samanodakas.

Pindas are of three kinds in the following order of superiority (v):—

1. Those given directly to the deceased himself.
2. Those given to his three paternal ancestors in which he participates.
3. Those which he was bound to give to his three maternal ancestors, but in which he does not participate.

In each of these three descriptions of pindas, those presented by agnate descendants of a common ancestor are preferred to those presented by cognate descendants of such ancestor.

"Although the deceased has no right of participation in the oblations presented to his maternal ancestors, still, inasmuch as the three immediate maternal ancestors received oblations from him, and the agnate and cognate descendants of each offered pindas which the deceased was bound to give, there is thus created a heritable bond between him and his maternal kinsmen" (w).

81. Three classes of heirs.—The three kinds of offerings referred to in the preceding section give rise to three classes of heirs, according to the Dayabhaga law, namely, (1) sapindas, (2) sakulyas, and (3) samanodakas.

The sapindas succeed before the sakulyas, and the sakulyas succeed before the samanodakas (x).

The reason for this preference is that pindas (undivided oblations) are considered to be of higher spiritual value than pinda-lepas (divided oblations) and pinda-lepas are considered to be of higher spiritual value than oblations of water.

82. Sapindas.—A Hindu governed by the Dayabhaga law is the sapinda--

(1) of those to whom he is bound to offer a pinda while he is alive;

In this group are included his three immediate paternal ancestors, being his father, grandfather, great-grandfather, and his three immediate maternal ancestors, being his maternal grandfather, maternal great-grandfather, and maternal great-great-grandfather—altogether 6 relations.

(2) of those who, on his death, are bound to offer a pinda to him;

In this group are included those persons to whom he stands in the relation of father, grandfather, and great-grandfather, namely, his son, grandson and great-grandson, and those persons to whom he stands in the relation of maternal grandfather, maternal great-grandfather, and maternal great-great-grandfather, namely, his daughter's son, son's daughter's son and grandson's daughter's son--altogether 6 relations.

(3) of those who are bound to offer a pinda to the ancestors to whom he is bound to offer a pinda, those ancestors being his three immediate paternal ancestors and his three immediate maternal ancestors; and all of them are his sapindas (a).

---

(u) Guru Gobind v. Anand Lal (1870) 5 Beng. L.R. 15, 37 [F.B.].
(v) Sarvadhikari, 2nd ed., pp. 701, 705.
(w) Sarvadhikari, 2nd ed., p. 704.
(x) Guru Gobind v. Anand Lal (1870) 5 Beng. L.R. 15, 38 [F.B.]; Digumber Roy v. Moti Lall (1883) 9 Cal. 563 [F.B.].
(a) Guru Gobind v. Anand Lal (1870) 5 Beng. L.R. 15, 39 [F.B.].

The 3rd set of sapindas may be divided into four groups as follows:—

Firstly, the brother, brother's son, brother's son's son; paternal uncle, paternal uncle's son, paternal uncle's grandson; paternal granduncle, paternal granduncle's son, and paternal granduncle's grandson—altogether 9 relations.

The brother is bound to offer 3 pindas, one to each of the three paternal ancestors of the deceased, they being also his paternal ancestors. The brother's son is bound to offer 2 pindas, one to his grandfather, that is, the owner's father, and the other to his great-grandfather, that is, the owner's grandfather. The uncle and uncle's son are bound each to off 2 pindas, one to each of the two paternal ancestors of the deceased, namely, his grandfather and great-grandfather, who are also their grandfather and great-grandfather. The remaining five relations are bound each to offer 1 pinda, the brother's son's son to the owner's father, the uncle's son's son to the owner's grandfather, and the granduncle, his son and grandson each 1 pinda to the owner's great-grandfather. This is a case where some or all of the three paternal ancestors of the deceased are also the paternal ancestors of the 9 relations mentioned above as will be seen from the following diagram:—

Secondly, sister's son, father's sister's son, grandfather's sister's son; brother's daughter's son, brother's son's daughter's son; paternal uncle's daughter's son, paternal granduncle's daughter's son; paternal uncle's son's daughter's son, paternal granduncle's son's daughter's son—altogether 9 relations.

Note.—The sister's son offers 3 pindas, one to each of the three paternal ancestors of the deceased, they being his own maternal ancestors. The father's sister's son and the paternal uncle's daughter's son offer each 2 pindas, one to each of the two paternal ancestors of the deceased, namely his grandfather and great-grandfather, they being their maternal ancestors. The brother's daughter's son offers 2 pindas, one to the father and the other to the grandfather of the deceased, they being his maternal ancestors. The remaining five relations each offer 1 pinda to one or other of the three paternal ancestors of the deceased that ancestor being their maternal ancestor. This is a case where some or all of the paternal ancestors of the deceased are the maternal ancestors of the 9 relations mentioned above. These are bandhus ex parte paterna of the Mitakshara school.

Thirdly, maternal uncle, maternal uncle's son, maternal uncle's grandson; maternal granduncle, maternal granduncle's son, maternal granduncle's grandson; maternal great-granduncle, maternal great-granduncle's son, maternal great-granduncle's grandson—altogether 9 relations.

Note.—The maternal uncle offers 3 pindas, one to each of the three maternal ancestors of the deceased, they being his own paternal ancestors. The maternal uncle's son, the maternal granduncle, and the maternal granduncle's son, each offer 2 pindas to two out of the three maternal ancestors of the deceased, these ancestors being their paternal ancestors. The remaining five relations each offer one pinda to one or other of the three maternal ancestors of the deceased, that ancestor being their paternal ancestor. This is a case where some or all of the maternal ancestors of the deceased are the paternal ancestors of the 9 relations mentioned above. These are bandhus ex parte materna of the Mitakshara school.

Fourthly, maternal aunt's son, maternal grandaunt's son and maternal great-grand-aunt's son; maternal uncle's daughter's son; maternal uncle's son's daughter's son; maternal granduncle's daughter's son, maternal granduncle's son's daughter's son; maternal great-granduncle's daughter's son, maternal great-granduncle's son's daughter's son—altogether 9 relations.

Note.—The maternal aunt's son offers 3 pindas, one to each of the three maternal ancestors of the deceased, they being also his maternal ancestors. The maternal grand-aunt's son, the maternal uncle's daughter's son, and the maternal granduncle's daughter's son each offer 2 pindas to two out of the three maternal ancestors of the deceased, these ancestors being also their maternal ancestors. The remaining five relations each offer one pinda to one or other of the three maternal ancestors of the deceased, that ancestor being also their maternal ancestor. This is a case where some or all of the three maternal ancestors of the deceased are also the maternal ancestors of the 9 relations mentioned above. These relations also are bandhus ex parte materna of the Mitakshara school.

It will thus be seen that there are in all 48 male sapindas. To these are to be added the 5 female sapindas mentioned in the next section. The total number of sapindas is thus 53.

Since sapindas succeed before sakulyas, and since the sapindas enumerated above comprise also several relations called bandhus in the Mitakshara, it is clear that bandhus also succeed before sakulyas. According to the Mitakshara law, bandhus do not succeed until after samanodakas. This is the main point of distinction between succession according to the Dayabhaga law and succession according to the Mitakshara law. In other respects it will be found that the order of succession according to the Dayabhaga law, though arrived at by the application of rules based upon the doctrine of spiritual benefit, is more or less the same as in the Mitakshara law. See § 95.

83. Female sapindas.—There are five female sapindas according to the Dayabhaga law, namely the widow, the daughter, the mother, the father's mother and the father's father's mother. No other female is recognized as an heir by the Bengal school.

The step-mother is not an heir. Nor is a paternal step-grandmother (b).

There are no female heirs in the class either of sakulyas or samanodakas.

The wife is the sapinda of her husband for in the absence of male issue, she performs the funeral obsequies. The mother, the father's mother, and father's father's mother are sapindas, for they share in the pindas or cakes offered to their respective husbands. The daughter is a sapinda, for though she herself does not offer any pinda, her son does so. See sec. 61 above.

84. Sakulyas.—A Hindu governed by the Dayabhaga law is the sakulya (1) of those to whom he is bound to offer pinda-lepa while he is alive, (2) of those who on his death are bound to offer pinda-lepa to him, and (3) of those who are bound to offer pinda-lepa to those whom he offers the pinda-lepa, and all of them are his sakulyas.

The sakulyas are all males. They are—

First, the 4th, 5th and 6th paternal male ancestors of the owner, being $F^4$, $F^5$ and $F^6$, in the Table at p. 107:

Secondly, his 4th, 5th and 6th male descendants in the male line, that is $S^4$, $S^5$ and $S^6$ in the said Table: and

Thirdly, the six male descendants in the male line of the 4th, 5th and 6th paternal male ancestors, and the 4th, 5th and 6th male descendants in the male line of his father, grandfather, and great-grandfather, that is, $x^1$ to $x^3$ in the line of $F^4$, $F^5$ and $F^6$ and $x^4$ to $x^6$ in the lines $F^7$ to $F^8$, in all 27 relations.

The total number of sakulyas is thus 3+3+27=33.

The Mitakshara does not recognise sakulyas as a distinct class; they are merged in the group of gotraja sapindas.

The sakulyas are all agnates, that is, persons connected with the deceased by an unbroken line of male descent. None of them is a cognate, that is, a person related to the deceased through a female. But the sapindas of the Bengal school, as we have seen, are some of them agnates and some of them cognates. The samanodakas also, as we shall presently see, are all agnates.

---

(b) Bimal Chandra v. Mahadeb ('57) A.C. 684.

According to Dr. Sarvadhikari (c), the following 9 cognate relations are also sakulyas, names:—

1—3. The daughter's son of $F^4$, his son, and his son's son.
4—6. The daughter's son of $F^5$, his son, and his son's son.
7—9. The daughter's son of $F^6$, his son, and son's son.

85. Samanodakas.—A Hindu governed by the Dayabhaga law is the samanodaka (1) of those to whom he is bound to offer libations of water, (2) of those who on his death are bound to offer libations of water to him, and (3) of those who are bound to offer libations of water to those whom he offers the libations.

and all of them are his samanodakas.

The samanodakas like sakulyas are all males. They include all agnatic relations from the 8th to the 14th degree, and are 147 in number. See notes to § 40; "Samanodakas."

86. Principles governing precedence among sapindas.—The order of succession among sapindas is governed by the following principles:—

(1) Those who offer a pinda to the deceased are preferred to those who accept it from the deceased.

Thus the son, grandson and great-grandson offer oblations to the deceased, and the father, grandfather and great-grandfather receive oblations from the deceased; therefore, the son, grandson, and great-grandson succeed before the father, grandfather, etc. The son, grandson and great-grandson all inherit as one heir, for the oblations offered by them are of equal spiritual value.

(2) Those who offer oblations to both paternal and maternal ancestors are preferred to those who offer oblations only to the paternal ancestors.

Therefore relations of the whole blood are preferred to those of the half-blood. A full-brother offers oblations both to the paternal and maternal ancestors of the deceased, they being his own paternal and maternal ancestors. But a half-brother offers oblations only to the paternal ancestors of the deceased, and not to the maternal ancestors of the deceased, his mother and the deceased's mother being different persons.

(3) Those who offer a pinda to the paternal ancestors of the deceased are preferred to those who offer it to his maternal ancestors.

(4) Those who offer a larger number of cakes of a particular description are preferred to those who offer a less number of cakes of the same description; and where the number of such cakes is equal, those who offer them to nearer ancestors are preferred to those who offer them to more distant ancestors (d).

Note that a person who offers one oblation to the father of the deceased owner is preferred to another who offers two oblations to the grandfather and great-grandfather. Hence the grandnephew ranks before the paternal uncle (e).

87. Principles governing precedence among sakulyas and Samanodakas.—The order of succession among sakulyas and samanodakas is governed by principles similar to those which apply to sapindas (f).

---

(c) 2nd ed., p. 718.
(d) Guru Gobind v. Anand Lal (1870) 5 Beng. L.R. 15 [F.B.]; Gobind v. Mohesh (1874) 15 Beng. L.R. 35; Pran Nath v. Surrut Chundra (1882) 8 Cal. 460; Huri Das v. Bama Churn (1888) 15 Cal. 780; Braja Lal v. Piban (1899) 26 Cal. 285.
(e) (1882) 8 Cal. 460, supra.
(f) (1870) 5 Beng. L.R. 15, 39 [F.B.], supra.

88. Order of succession among sapindas.—The sapindas of the Bengal school are divided into two classes, namely, (1) sapindas ex parte paterna, and (2) sapindas ex parte materna. Nos. 1 to 32, except the five females, namely, Nos. 4, 5, 8, 14 and 20, are sapindas ex parte paterna. Nos. 33 to 53 are sapindas ex parte materna. Sapindas ex parte materna do not succeed until after sapindas ex parte paterna. The five females Nos. 4, 5, 8, 14 and 20 succeed by virtue of special texts.

The sapindas succeed in the following order:—

1-3. Son, grandson and great-grandson.

See Makhan Lall v. Sushama Rani ('53) A.C. 164, 57 C.W.N. 81.
Chota Nagpur Banking Association v. Ramapati ('64) A.P. 321.

4. Widow (g).

See notes to § 43. Also see Hindu Women's Right to Property Act, 1937.

5. Daughter (*g*1).

Priority amongst daughters.—The unmarried daughter succeeds first; then the married daughter who has or is likely to have male issue. Daughters who are barren or are widows without male issue, or are mothers of daughters only are excluded from inheritance (h), though their re-marriage is permitted in the caste to which they belong and though they may be of childbearing age (i). Thus it has been held that a married daughter having a son (j), and even a daughter's son (k) exclude a childless widowed daughter. But, where, during the lifetime of the father the son-in-law was willing and competent to adopt and has actually adopted after the father's death, the daughter is entitled to inherit (l).

Unchastity.—An unchaste daughter in Bengal is not entitled to inherit to her father. But once the estate has vested in her, it cannot be divested by subsequent unchastity (m).

As to other matters, see notes to § 43, "Daughter."

6. Daughter's son.

The daughter's son's son is not an heir under the Dayabhaga school of Hindu law (n). The reason given in the Dayabhaga is that he is not the giver of a funeral oblation; the oblation ceases with the daughter's son: Dayabhaga XI, 2, 2. See notes to § 43, "Daughter's son."

7. Father.

8. mother.

An unchaste mother in Bengal is not entitled to inherit to her son. But once the estate has vested in her, it cannot be divested by subsequent unchastity (o).

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| 9. Brother | .. | (i) of the whole blood.(ii) of the half-blood. |
| 10. Brother's son | .. | (i) of the whole blood.(ii) of the half-blood. |
| 11. Brother's son's son | .. | (i) of the whole blood.(ii) of the half-blood. |

---

(g) Durga Nath v. Chintamoni (1904) 31 Cal. 214.

(*g*1) Sankar Dome v. Kalidasi Dasi ('70) A.C. 461.

(h) Benode v Purdhan (1865) 2 W.R.C.R. 176; Radha v. Rajah Ram (1866) 6 W.R. 147; Sheodutta v. Akali Bhumijani ('53) A.P. 374.

(i) Binodini v. Susthee (1921) 48 Cal. 300, 57 I.C. 740, ('21) A.C. 295; Srimati Pramila v. Chandra Shekhar (1921) 43 All. 450, 60 I.C. 777, ('21) A.A. 122.

(j) 48 Cal. 300, 57 I.C. 740, ('21) A.C. 295, supra.

(k) 43 All. 450, 60 I.C. 777, ('21) A.A. 122, supra.

(l) Umakanta Bhattacharjee v. Bedbati Debi (1942) I Cal. 299, ('42) A.C. 265.

(m) Ramananda v. Rajkishori (1895) 22 Cal. 347; Sundari v. Pitambari (1905) 32 Cal. 871.

(n) Nepaldas v. Probhas Chandra (1925) 30 C.W.N. 357, 90 I.C. 499, ('26) A.C. 460.

(o) Ramnath v. Durga (1879) 4 Cal. 550.

12. Sister's son (p).
13. Paternal grandfather.
14. Paternal grandmother.
15. Paternal uncle.
16. Paternal uncle's son.
17. Paternal uncle's son's son.
18. Father's sister's son.
19. Paternal great-grandfather.
20. Paternal great-grandmother.
21. Paternal granduncle.
22. Paternal granduncle's son.
23. Paternal granduncle's son's son.
24. Father's father's sister's son.

Then come, consistently with the opinion expressed in the undermentioned cases (q) the following 8 cognate relations, namely,—

25. Son's daughter's son.
26. Son's son's daughter's son.
27. Brother's daughter's son (r).
28. Brother's son's daughter's son (s).
29. Paternal uncle's daughter's son (t).
30. Paternal uncle's son's daughter's son.
31. Paternal granduncle's daughter's son.
32. Paternal granduncle's son's daughter's son.

Dr. Sarvadhikari (u) places Nos. 25 and 26 immediately after No. 6, Nos. 27 and 28 immediately after No. 12, Nos. 29 and 30 immediately after No. 18, and Nos. 31 and 32 immediately after No. 24.

Next come the maternal relations of the deceased.

33. Maternal grandfather.
34. Maternal uncle (v).
35. Maternal uncle's son (w).
36. Maternal uncle's son's son.
37. Mother's sister's son.
38. Maternal great-grandfather, (39) his son, (40) his grandson, (41) his great-grandson, and (42) his daughter's son.
43. Maternal great-great-grandfather, (44) his son, (45) his grandson, (46) his great-grandson, and (47) his daughter's son.

---

(p) A sister's stepson is not an heir as there is no blood relationship, Lalit Mohan v. Province of West Bengal (1955) 60 Cal. W.N. 359.

(q) Gobind Prosad v. Mohesh Chunder (1875) 15 Beng. L.R. 35. See also Hari Das v. Bama Churn (1888) 15 Cal. 780, 789-794; Pran Nath v. Surrut Chundra (1882) 8 Cal. 460, 463-464.

(r) Digumber v. Moti Lal (1883) 9 Cal. 563 [F.B.].

(s) (1882) 8 Cal. 460, supra.

(t) Guru Gobind v. Anand Lal (1870) 5 Beng. L.R. 15 [F.B.]; Braja Lal v. Jiban (1899) 26 Cal. 285.

(u) 2nd ed., page 709.

(v) Padmakumari v. Court of Wards (1882) 8 Cal. 302, 8 I.A. 229.

(w) Rani Srimuty Dibeah v. Koond Luta (1847) 4 M.I.A. 292.

The maternal great-great-grandfather's daughter's son's son is not an heir under the Dayabhaga law (x). He is an heir under the Mitakshara law: see § 54, no. 94.

48-49. Son's daughter's son and son's son's daughter's son of the maternal grandfather; (50-51) son's daughter's son and son's son's daughter's son of the maternal great-grandfather; and (52-53) son's daughter's son and son's son's daughter's son of the maternal great-great grandfather.

Dr. Sarvadhikari (y) places Nos. 48 and 49 immediately after No. 37, Nos. 50 and 51 immediately after No. 42, and Nos. 52 and 53 immediately after No. 47.

Note that Nos. 12, 18, 24, 25 to 32, and 33 to 53 are bandhus according to the Mitakshara school, and they do not succeed until after the samanodakas of that school.

89. Order of succession among Sakulyas.—Failing all sapindas the inheritance according to the Dayabhaga system passes to sakulyas, according to the order to be deduced from the rules laid down in § 86 above.

90. Order of succession among Samanodakas.—Failing all sapindas and sakulyas the inheritance passes to samanodakas, according to the order to be deduced from the rules in § 86 above.

91. Preceptor, disciple and fellow-student.—On failure of all the heirs of the deceased his preceptor, pupil and fellow student are in their order entitled to take the estate. If there be none of these the inheritance passes, according to the Dayabhaga, to person bearing the same gotra or family name.

See § 85 and notes thereto.

See § 57 and notes thereto. As to succession to hermits and members of a religious order, see § 58 above and Dayabhaga, ch. 11, sec. 6, paras. 35-36.

92. Escheat.—On failure of all these heirs, the Government takes by escheat (z).

See § 59.

93. Female heirs: Bengal school.—The only females recognised as heirs in the Bengal school are the (1) widow, (2) daughter, (3) mother, (4) father's mother, and (5) father's father's mother (a).

Succession after Reunion

94. Order of succession among reunited members.—It would seem that according to the Dayabhaga the order of succession to the estate of a reunited member is the same as that to the estate of an undivided member, with this exception that as between claimants of equal degree one who is reunited is to be preferred to one who is not reunited, so that a reunited brother would be preferred to a brother who was not reunited, and a reunited uncle would be preferred to an uncle who was not reunited. The preference arising from reunion is not confined to the reunited members themselves, but extends also to their descendants, so that even the son of a reunited brother would be preferred to the son of a separated brother (b).

The only persons who can reurite according to the Bengal school are, (1) the father and son; (2) brothers; (3) uncle and nephew.

---

(x) Shambo Chandra v. Kartick Chunder (1927) 54 Cal. 171, 97 I.C. 845, ('27) A.C. 11.

(y) 2nd ed., p. 710.

(z) Collector of Masulipatam v. Cavaly Vencata (1860) 8 M.I.A. 500.

(a) Guru Gobind v. Anand Lal (1870) 5 Beng. L.R. 15, 36-37 [F.B.].

(b) Akshay v. Hari (1908) 35 Cal. 721; Abhai Churn v. Mangal Jana (1892) 19 Cal. 634.

CHAPTER VIII

POINTS OF DIFFERENCE BETWEEN MITAKSHARA AND DAYABHAGA SUCCESSION

LAW PRIOR TO HINDU SUCCESSION ACT, 1956

95. Points of distinction between the Mitakshara and the Dayabhaga systems of inheritance.—The following are the main points of distinction between the Mitakshara and the Dayabhaga systems of inheritance:—

(1) The Bengal school divides heirs into three classes, namely, (1) sapindas, (2) sakulyas, and (3) samanodakas. The sapindas of the Bengal school are the sapindas of the Mitakshara school within 4 degrees only plus bandhus of the Mitakshara school, but not all the bandhus. The sakulyas of the Bengal school are the sapindas of the Mitakshara school from the 5th to the 7th degree. The samanodakas of the Bengal school are the same as those of the Mitakshara school, that is, agnatic relations from the 8th to the 14th degree.

(2) Generally speaking, under the Mitakshara law, no bandhu or cognate can inherit while there is any gotraja sapinda or samanodaka in existence. Under the Dayabhaga Law, cognates come in with the agnates, and they inherit before sakulyas and samanodakas.

(3) Cognatic heirs under the Dayabhaga law are limited in number compared with those under the Mitakshara law. Every person who is a cognatic heir under the Dayabhaga law is also a cognatic heir under the Mitakshara law, but there are some relations who are cognatic heirs under the Mitakshara law, but are not recognized as such under the Dayabhaga law. The doctrine of spiritual efficacy, which is the governing principles of succession under the Dayabhaga law, accounts for the exclusion of the latter.

(4) "Sapinda" according to the Mitakshara, means a person connected through the same pinda or body; according to the Dayabhaga, it means a person connected through the same pinda or funeral cake presented to the manes of ancestors at the Parvana Sraddha ceremony. See § 80 above.

CHAPTER IX

EXCLUSION FROM INHERITANCE AND PARTITION

LAW PRIOR TO HINDU SUCCESSION ACT, 1956

96. Unchastity.—A widow who is unchaste at the time of her husband's death is not entitled to inherit to him, but once the husband's estate has vested in her—which could only be if she was chaste at the time of her husband's death—it cannot be divested by her subsequent unchastity (c). Similarly where the widow of a joint owner is given a widow's estate on her husband's death under a family arrangement, such an estate is not divested by her subsequent unchastity in the absence of any provision to that effect (d). Reference may also be made to the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, and Notes at p. 111 supra.

There is a difference of opinion between the Mitakshara and Dayabhaga schools as to whether the unchastity of any other female heir excludes her from inheritance.

According to the Mitakshara law, the only female liable to exclusion from inheritance by reason of unchastity is the widow (e).

See § 43, "widow," note No. 2.

According to the Dayabhaga law, the condition of chastity applies not only to the widow, but also to other female heirs, such as daughter and mother, to the same extent as it does to a widow (f). [§ 88, notes to nos. 5 and 8.]

Unchastity excludes a female from inheriting to a male, but not to a female. It is, therefore, not a bar to inheriting stridhana, even according to the Dayabhaga law (g).

97. Change of religion and loss of caste.—Change of religion and loss of caste which at one time were grounds of forfeiture of property and of exclusion from inheritance ceased to be so after the passing of the Caste Disabilities Removal Act, 1850 (h).

The Act applies only to protect the actual person who either renounces his religion, or has been excluded from the communion of any religion, or has been deprived of caste. Consequently, where the property of a Mahomedan converted from Hinduism has passed according to Mahomedan law to his descendants, Hindu collaterals cannot claim by virtue of the Act to succeed under Hindu law (i).

---

(c) Moniram v. Keri Kolitani (1880) 5 Cal. 776, 7 I.A. 115; Sellam v. Chinnammal (1901) 24 Mad. 441; Gangadhar v. Yellu (1912) 36 Bom. 138, 12 I.C. 714; Jadho Nagu Bai v. Jadho Gangu Bai ('38) A.A.P. 19. Also see cases under No. 4 "widow"—'unchastity' at p. 111, supra.

(d) Lakhmi Chand v. Anandi (1935) 62 I.C. 250, 57 All. 672, 37 Bom. L.R. 849, 157 I.C. 869, ('35) A.P.C. 180.

(e) Adeyapa v. Rudrava (1880) 4 Bom. 104; Tara v. Krishna (1907) 31 Bom. 495, 510; Kojiyadu v. Lakshmi (1882) 5 Mad. 149; Vedammal v. Vedanayaga (1908) 31 Mad. 100; Dal Singh v. Dini (1910) 32 All. 155, 5 I.C. 320; Baldeo v. Mathura (1911) 33 All. 702, 11 I.C. 43 [mother]; Ram Pergash v. Mussammat Dahan Bibi (1924) 3 Pat. 132, 78 I.C. 749, ('24) A.P. 420 [daughter].

(f) Ramananda v. Rajkishori (1895) 22 Cal. 347 [daughter]; Sundari v. Pitambari (1905) 32 Cal. 871 [daughter]; Ramnath v. Durga (1879) 4 Cal. 550 [mother]. In Charu Priya v. Roma Kanta AIR (1964) Assam 106, the Assam High Court has held that even according to the Dayabhaga School, the condition of chastity applies only to the widow and not to any other female. This view is contrary to the view taken by the Calcutta High Court in the above mentioned cases.

(g) Nogendra v. Benoy (1903) 30 Cal. 521; Angammal v. Venkata (1903) 26 Mad. 509.

(h) Khunni Lal v. Gobind (1911) 33 All. 356, 38 I.A. 87, 10 I.C. 477, reversing s. c. in 29 All. 487; (1924) 3 Pat. 152, 78 I.C. 749, ('24) A.P. 420 supra. See also Subbaraya v. Ramasami (1900) 23 Mad. 171.

(i) Mitar Sen Singh v. Magbul Hasan Khan (1930) 57 I.A. 313, 52 Cal. L.J. 551, 128 I.C. 268, ('30)

Once a person has changed his religion and his personal law, that law will govern the rights of succession in his children (j).

Illustrations

(a) A and his son B are members of a joint Hindu family. A becomes a convert to Mahomedanism. A does not by his conversion forfeit his interest in the joint family property. The only effect of the conversion is that it operates as a separation of the family, and one-half of the property vests immediately in A, and the other half in B; Khunni Lal v. Gobind (1911) 33 All. 356, 38 I.A. 87, 10 I.C. 477; Gobind v. Abdul (1903) 25 All. 546, 573.

(b) A married Hindu becomes a convert to Mahomedanism, and marries a Mahomedan wife and has children by her. The persons entitled to his estate on his death are his Mahomedan wife and children, and not his Hindu wife: Chedambaram v. Ma Nyein Me (1928) 6 Rang. 243, 111 I.C. 2, ('28) A.R. 179.

(c) A and B are two Hindu brothers separate in estate. B becomes a convert to Mahomedanism. After B's conversion a son C is born to him who also is a Mahomedan. B dies leaving C. Afterwards A dies leaving a widow. On A's death his widow succeeds to his property. After the widow's death, C claims A's property as his nephew. C is not entitled to succeed to the property.

It may here be noted that the provisions of Bengal Regulations VII of 1832 were to the same effect as those of Act XXI of 1850.

98. Physical and mental defects: Disqualified heirs.—(1) Under the texts as interpreted by the Courts the following defects, deformities and diseases exclude an heir from inheritance:—

(a) Blindness (k), deafness, and dumbness (l), provided the defect is both congenital and incurable.

(b) Want of any limb or organ, if congenital. This includes the case of a person who is lame (m) or has no nose or tongue. It also includes the case of congenital impotence.

(c) Lunacy. This need not be congenital or incurable to exclude the heir from inheritance. It is enough if it exists at the time when the succession opens (n).

(d) Idiocy, provided it is complete and absolute (o). Idiocy is, of course, congenital.

---

A.PC. 251; affirming (1928) 3 Luck. 154, 107 I.C. 890, ('28) A.O. 138, and disapproving Bhagwant Singh v. Kallu (1889) 11 All. 100; Vaithilinga v. Ayyathorai (1917) 40 Mad. 118, 37 I.C. 753, ('18) A.M. 430 [Conversion to Christianity]; Chidambaram v. Ma Nyein Me (1928) 6 Rang. 243, 111 I.C. 2, ('28) A.R. 179; Rupa v. Sardar Mirza (1920) 1 Lah. 376, 55 I.C. 410, ('20) A.L. 276, is no longer good law.

(j) (1930) 57 I.A. 313, 52 Cal. L.J. 551, 128 I.C. 26, ('30) A.PC. 251, supra.

(k) Mohesh Chunder v. Chunder Mohun (1875) 14 Beng. L.R. 273 [Dayabhaga case]; Murarji v. Parvatibai (1876) 1 Bom. 177; Umabai v. Bhavu (1876) 1 Bom. 557; Gunesh war v. Durga Prashad (1917) 44 I.A. 229, 45 Cal. 17, 42 I.C. 849, ''17) A.PC. 146; Pudiava v. Pavanasa (1922) 45 Mad. 949, 69 I.C. 313, ('23) A.M. 215 [F.B.]; Fakirnath v. Krushnachandra Nath ('54) A. Orissa 176.

(l) Vallabhram v. Bai Hariganga (1867) 4 Bor H.Ç.A.C. 135; Savitribai v. Bhaubat (1927) 51 Bom. 50, 100 I.C. 586, ('27) A.B. 103. See also Bharmappa v. Ujjangauda (1922) 46 Bom. 455, 65 I.C. 216, ('22) A.B. 173; Anukul Chandra v. Surendra (1939) 1 Cal. 592.

(m) Venkata v. Purushottam (1903) 26 Mad. 133.

(n) Muthammal v. Subramaniaswami Devasthanam (1960) 2 S.C.R. 729; Baboo Bodhanarain v. Omrao (1870) 13 M.I.A. 520; Koer Goolab Singh v. Kurun Singh (1871) 14 M.I.A. 176; Deo Kishen v. Budh Prakash (1883) 5 All. 509 [F.B.]; Wooma Pershad v. Grish Chunder (1884) 10 Cal. 639; Ram Singh v. Bhani (1916) 38 All. 117, 32 I.C. 127, ('16) A.A. 47; Muthusami v. Meenammal (1920) 43 Mad. 464, 55 I.C. 576, ('20) A.M. 652; Bapuji v. Dattu (1923) 47 Bom. 707, 73 I.C. 279, ('23) A.B. 425.

(o) Tirumamagal v. Ramasvami (1863) 1 Mad. H.C. 214; Surti v. Narain Das (1890) 12 All. 530; Ran Bijai v. Jagatpal (1891) 18 Cal. 111 [P.C.].

(e) Leprosy, when it is of such a virulent type that it is incurable and renders him unfit for social intercourse. It need not be congenital (p).

(f) Other incurable diseases (q).

(2) Under the Hindu Inheritance (Removal of Disabilities) Act, 1928, no person, other than a person who is and has been from birth a lunatic or idiot, is excluded from inheritance or from any right or share in joint family property by reason only of any disease, deformity, or physical or mental defect. The Act came into force on the 20th September 1928. It is not retrospective.

The Act does not apply to any person governed by the Dayabhaga School of Hindu Law.

The Act is set out in Appendix II below. Under the Act the only defects which disqualify an heir from inheritance or from a share on partition are congenital lunacy and congenital idiocy.

99. Murder.—A murderer, even if not disqualified under Hindu law from succeeding to the estate of the person murdered, is so disqualified upon the principles of justice, equity and good conscience. Further, no title to the estate of the person murdered can be claimed through the murderer. He should be treated as non-existent when the succession opens on the death of his victim; he cannot be regarded as a fresh stock of descent (r).

P dies leaving his mother C, a son H and a daughter K of his father's brother, and his father's sister's son G. On P's death his mother C succeeds to his property for the ordinary Hindu widow's estate. H is the next reversioner. H murders C and is sentenced to transportation for life. Who is entitled to succeed to the estate of P? Not H, because he is the murderer. Is H's sister K entitled to succeed? No, because she could only claim through H, the murderer. H should be regarded as non-existent at the date of C's death, so that the next heir to P's estate is his father's sister's son G. G is therefore entitled to succeed to P's estate: Kenchava v. Girimallappa (s).

A murderer cannot be regarded as a fresh stock of descent. He must be regarded as non-existent qua the estate of the murdered person, that is to say no title to the estate of the murdered person can be claimed through the murderer (t). The test of disqualification is whether the title is traced through the murderer (u). The result is that not only is the murderer excluded from inheritance, but also his son or his sister (v), or any other person claiming heirship through him. In Bombay, the wife of a murderer is not disentitled from succeeding to the estate of the murdered man. The reason is that she does not derive title through her husband, but succeeds in her own right as a gotraja sapinda (w). The Bombay High Court has also held that there could be no exclusion from inheritance or right to partition if there is no question of the murderer or his son taking advantage of the murder (x).

---

(p) Ramabai v. Harnabai (1924) 51 I.A. 177, 48 Bom. 363, 80 I.C. 193, ('24) A.PC. 125; Ananta v. Ramabai (1876) 1 Bom. 554; Rangayya v. Thanikachalla (1896) 19 Mad. 74; Koyarohana v. Subbaraya (1915) 38 Mad. 250, 19 I.C. 690, ('16) A.M. 470; Karali v. Ashutosh (1923) 50 Cal. 604, 75 I.C. 474, ('23) A.C. 331. See also Man Singh v. Gaini (1918) 40 All 77, 43 I.C. 62, ('18) A.A. 377.

(q) See (1915) 38 Mad. 250, 19 I.C. 690, ('16) A.M. 470, supra.

(r) Kenchava v. Girimallappa (1924) 51 I.A. 368, 48 Bom. 569, 82 I.C. 966, ('24) A.PC. 209; affg. 45 Bom. 768, 61 I.C. 294, ('21) A.B. 270 [pat. aunt]; Vedanayaga v. Vedammal (1904) 27 Mad. 591 [mother]; Vedammal v. Vedanayaga (1908) 31 Mad. 100 [mother]; Shah Khanam v. Kalandhar Khan (1900) Punj. Rec. no. 74 [half mother]; Mst. Jind Kuar v. Indar Singh (1922) 3 Lah. 103, 67 I.C. 526, ('22) A.L. 293.

(s) (1924) 51 I.A. 368, 48 Bom. 569, 82 I.C. 966, ('24) A.PC. 209.

(t) Mata Badal v. Bijay Bahadur ('56) A.A. 707.

(u) Mata Badal v. Bijay Bahadur supra; Nakchhed Singh v. Bijai Bahadur ('53) A.A. 759, (1953) A.L.J. 609.

(v) (1924) 51 I.A. 368, 48 Bom. 569, 82 I.C. 966, ('24) A.PC. 209.

(w) Gangu v. Chandrabhagabai (1908) 32 Bom. 275.

(x) Adiveppa v. Veer Bhadrappa (1947) Bom. 518.

100. Disability as excluding females.—The disabilities which exclude a male from inheritance also exclude a female from inheritance (y).

101. Effect of disability.—Where an heir is disqualified, the next heir of the deceased succeeds as if the disqualified person were dead (z). The disqualified person transmits no interest to his heir (a).

Illustrations

(a) A dies leaving an insane son and a daughter. The daughter will take the inheritance as if the son were dead.

(b) A dies leaving two brothers B and C. C is insane and has a son D. B alone will inherit, for D is the nephew of the deceased, and a nephew cannot inherit while a brother is in existence.

102. Disqualification only personal.—The disability is purely personal, and does not extend to the legitimate issue of the disqualified heir (b). Nor does it extend, in cases governed by the Bombay school of Hindu law, to his wife or widow (c). But adopted sons of disqualified heirs are not entitled to this heritable right (d).

Illustrations

(a) A dies leaving a son B who is insane from birth, and a grandson by B. The grandson will succeed to A as A's heir. [Note that the grandson succeeds as the heir of his grandfather A. He succeeds by his own merits, in other words, in his own right and does not step into his father's place.]

(b) A dies leaving a son B who is an idiot, a grandson who is the adopted son of B, and a daughter. The daughter will inherit A's estate. A son adopted by a disqualified heir is not entitled to succession.

(c) A Hindu governed by the Bombay school of Hindu law dies leaving as his only heir a brother who is disqualified from inheriting and the brother's wife. The brother's wife inherits to the deceased, though the brother is disqualified. [See §§ 64 and 68 above.]

103. Disability arising after succession.—Property which has once vested in a person by inheritance is not divested by a subsequently supervening disability (e).

104. Removal of disability after succession has opened.—Where the disability is removed subsequent to the opening of the inheritance, the right to inheritance revives, but not so as to divest the estate already vested in another person (f).

Illustrations

(a) A dies leaving a son who is insane and a widow. On A's death the widow succeeds to the estate as his heir. The insanity is cured during the widow's life. The estate being vested in the widow, the son is not entitled to it during her lifetime. After the widow's death, however, the son as the nearest heir of A, is entitled to succeed to the estate, so that if A has left a brother also, the son, and not the brother will succeed.

---

(y) Bakubai v. Manchhabai (1864) 2 Bom. H.C. 5.

(z) Baboo Bodhnarain v. Omrao (1870) 13 M.I.A. 520.

(a) Musst. Budha Kuer v. Musst. Sohodra Kuer (1931) 11 Pat. 35, 132 I.C. 866, ('31) A.P. 367.

(b) Mit. II, 10.

(c) Gangu v. Chandrabhagabai (1908) 32 Bom. 275.

(d) Mit. II, 10, 11.

(e) Deo Kishen v. Budh Prakash (1883) 5 All. 509 [F.B.]; Sakhu v. Puttamma (1891) 14 Mad. 289, 294; Abilakh v. Bhekhi (1895) 22 Cal. 864.

(f) Mitakshara chap. ii, sec. 7; Deo Kishen v. Budh Prakash (1883) 5 All. 509 [F.B.].

(b) A dies leaving a son X who is insane and a brother B. On A's death B succeeds to the estate. The lunacy is cured during B's lifetime. X cannot recover the estate from B for it is vested in B. Also on B's death the estate will pass to B's heirs, and not to X, for B took as full owner, so that if B dies leaving a son, it will pass to his son. But if B leaves no other heir than X (his brother's son), X will succeed to the estate not as the heir of A, but as the heir of B. The result is that where the estate of the father has passed to a full owner, a son whose disability has been removed cannot claim it as his father's heir, and he loses all right to it as such. It is different, however, where the estate has passed to a widow or other limited heir who takes only a widow's interest as in ill (a).

105. After-born son of disqualified heir.—Where, after the succession has opened, a son is born to a disqualified heir, the son is not entitled to inherit so as to divest the estate already vested in another (g).

Illustration

A dies leaving a son B who is insane, a widow, and a nephew. On A's death, the widow inherits the estate. The widow then dies, and the nephew succeeds to the estate as A's heir. A son, C, is then born to B, and he claims the estate from the nephew. He is not entitled to the estate, for it became vested in the nephew on the death of the widow.

EXCLUSION FROM PARTITION

106. Disability and partition.—A disability which excludes a person from inheritance also excludes him from a share of the joint family property on partition (h). Where a member of a joint family had no congenital disqualification and therefore had acquired by birth an interest in the joint family property, a later supervening disqualification, while it might debar him from claiming a partition, would not prevent him from acquiring the whole property by survivorship (i). A full Bench in Madras has held that even when the disqualification is congenital, the same result follows (j). There may be such a severance of the joint status as would put an end to the right of succession by survivorship (k). But if the other coparceners separate their shares and disrupt the joint family the lunatic member may become separate owner of his share (l). See § 98 above.

107. Lunacy and partition.—(1) The High Court of Calcutta (m) has held that a member of a joint family who was not born a lunatic, but is a lunatic at the time of partition, is not entitled to claim his share by partition. This is also the opinion of the High Court of Allahabad (n).

The Federal Court of India examined the law on the point and held that although a person who is insane at the time when partition takes place cannot claim a share in the joint family properties, yet the texts of Hindu Law make it clear that his rights remain in abeyance and are revived on the malady being cured. A coparcener on his supervening insanity may not exercise his will to effect a severance of the status; but that does not prevent the other coparceners from disrupting the coparcenary if they so choose, and these

---

(g) Kalidas v. Krishna (1869) 2 Beng. L.R. [F.B.] 103; Deo Kishen v. Budh Prakash (1883) 5 All. 509 [F.B.]; Pawadewa v. Venkatesh (1908) 32 Bom. 455.

(h) Ram Sahye v. Lalla Lalljee (1882) 8 Cal. 149; Ram Soonder v. Ram Sahye (1882) 8 Cal. 919.

(i) Muthusami v. Meenammal (1920) 43 Mad. 464, 55 I.C. 576; Mt. Dilraj Kuari v. Rikheswar Ram Dube (1934) 13 Pat. 712, 151 I.C. 419, ('34) A.P. 373 (lunacy); Moolchand v. Chahta Devi (1937) All. 825, 170 I.C. 833, ('27) A.A. 605 [F.B.] (leprosy).

(j) Kesava v. Govindan, 1946 Mad. 452 (F.B.).

(k) Venkateswara v. Mankayammal (1935) 69 Mad. L.J. 410, ('35) A.M. 775.

(l) Bhagwati Saran Singh v. Parmeshwari Nandan Singh (1942) All. 518, 202 I.C. 227, ('42) A.A. 267, affirmed in Ratneshwari v. Bhagawati (1949) 11 F.C.R. 715.

(m) (1882) 8 Cal. 149, supra: (1882) 8 Cal. 919, supra.

(n) Bhagwati Saran Singh v. Parmeshwari, supra.

rights can be exercised even if the family consist only of one sane and one insane member (o).

(2) Under the Hindu Inheritance (Removal of Disabilities) Act, 1928, such a person, not having been a lunatic from birth, is entitled to a share. It has been held that by virtue of the operation of this Act a suit by a next friend of a coparcener of unsound mind to enforce partition is maintainable (*o*1).

108. Removal of disability reopens partition.—A coparcener who is excluded from a share on partition by reason of a disability in entitled, on removal of the disability, to the same rights as a son born after partition (p). [§ 310].

109. A disqualified coparcener having sons.—Where a son is born to a disqualified coparcener after the death of the ancestor, he is not, according to the Bombay decisions (q), entitled to take a share by divesting the coparcener in whom the ancestor's share vested on his death. The High Court of Madras has arrived at a contrary conclusion (r). Following the principle of this decision the same High Court has held that an idiot (even where the idiocy is congenital) who marries and has children is a coparcener with his father (though he cannot claim a share by partition) and that a will executed by the father during the lifetime of the son is invalid (s). The Supreme Court has now confirmed the latter view (ss).

A, his son B, and his brother C, are members of a Mitakshara joint family. B is insane. A dies, and on his death his undivided coparcenary interest passes to his brother C by survivorship. After A's death, a son is born to B. B's son sues C to recover the half share of his grandfather A in the joint family property. He is entitled to the share.

Under the Mitakshara law as applied in Madras prior to the coming into operation of the Hindu Inheritance (Removal of Disabilities) Act, 1928, the Supreme Court held that a disqualified heir who was congenitally a deaf-mute became by birth a coparcener with his father and on death of his father without other male issue the ancestral property vested in him as the sole surviving coparcener (ss).

MISCELLANEOUS

110. Maintenance of disqualified heirs.—Where a person is excluded from inheritance on account of a disability, he and his wife and children are entitled to maintenance out of the property which he would have inherited but for the disability and where he is excluded from a share on partition, he and his wife and his children are entitled to have a provision made for their maintenance out of the joint family property (t).

111. Adoption of religious order.—Where a person enters into a religious order renouncing all worldly affairs, his action is tantamount to civil death,

---

(o) Ratneshwari Nandan v. Bhagawati (1949) 11 F.C.R. 715, ('50) A.F.C. 142.

(*o*1) Vedavyas Rao v. Narayana Rao ('62) A. Mys. 18. Reference may also be made to Parameswaram v. Parameswaram ('61) A.M. 345.

(p) Mitakshara, chap. ii, s. 10, paras 6-7.

(q) Bapuji v. Pandurang (1882) 6 Bom. 616; see also Pawadewa v. Venkatesh (1908) 32 Bom. 455.

(r) Krishna v. Sami (1886) 9 Mad. 64 [F.B.].

(s) Amrithammal & Ors. v. Vallimayil Ammal (1942) Mad. 807, 203 I.C. 648, ('42) A.M. 693.

(ss) Kamalammal v. Venkatalakshmi ('65) A.S.C. 1349.

(t) Ram Sahye v. Lalla Lalice (1882) 8 Cal. 149; Ram Soonder v. Ram Sahye (1882) 8 Cal. 919, Mitakshara, chap. ii, s. 10.

and it excludes him altogether from inheritance and from a share on partition (u).

All property which belongs to such a person at the time of renunciation passes immediately on his renunciation to his heirs, but property acquired by him subsequent to the renunciation passes to his spiritual heirs [§ 58]. A person does not become a sanyasi by merely declaring himself a sanyasi or by wearing clothes ordinarily worn by sanyasi. He must perform the ceremonies necessary for entering the class of sanyasis: without such ceremonies he cannot become dead to the world (v).

Sudras.—The Hindu texts applicable to the disinheritance of ascetics do not apply to Sudras, unless a usage to that effect is established. The reason is that a Sudra cannot enter the order of Yati or Sanyasi (w).

(u) Teeluck v. Shama (1964) 1 W.R. 209.

(v) Baldeo Prasad v. Arya Priti Nidhi Sabha (1930) 52 All. 789, 124 I.C. 761, ('30) A.A. 643; Kondal Row v. Swamulavaru (1917) 33 Mad. L.J. 63, 40 I.C. 535, ('18) A.M. 402; Ramdhan v. Dalmir (1909) 14 C.W.N. 191, 2 I.C. 383; Satyanarayana v. H.R.E. Board ('57) A. Andh. Pra. 824; Rammakrishan Rao v. Srinivasarao ('60) A.A.P. 449. Madhusudhan v. Gobind ('65) A. Orissa 54.

(w) Harish Chandra v. Atir Mahmud (1913) 40 Cal. 545, 18 I.C. 474; Somasundaram v. Vaithilinga (1917) 40 Mad. 846, 41 I.C. 546, ('18) A.M. 794; Krishna Singh v. Mathura Ahir ('72) A. All. 273,

CHAPTER X

WOMEN'S PROPERTY: PART I—STRIDHANA

LAW PRIOR TO HINDU SUCCESSION ACT, 1956

1. Stridhana according to the Smritis, the Commentaries, and Judicial Decisions (§§ 112-123).
2. Peculiar features of stridhana (§ 124).
3. Enumeration of stridhana (§§ 125-140).
4. Rights of a woman over her stridhana (§§ 141-144).
5. Succession to stridhana (§§ 145-157).
6. Rules common to all the schools (§§ 158-165).

Note.—The subject of stridhana is by far the most difficult branch of Hindu law. The difficulty of the subject may be gauged from what Jimutavahana says in the Dayabhaga after finishing his discourse on stridhana: "Thus has been explained the most difficult subject of succession to a childless woman."

Section 14 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, subject to certain qualifications, now confers full and heritable capacity on a female heir in respect of all property acquired by her whether before or after the commencement of that Act with the result that by retroactive operation of that section she holds the property in her possession as full owner and not as a limited owner.

I.—STRIDHANA ACCORDING TO THE SMRITIS, THE COMMENTARIES AND JUDICIAL DECISIONS.

112. Different meanings of stridhana.—The word "stridhana" is derived from stri, woman, and dhana, property. It means, literally, woman's property. It is used, however, in different senses in different schools. In order to understand the precise meaning of stridhana according to the various schools, it is necessary to know what kinds of properties were recognised as stridhana in the Smritis, that is to say, by the Rishis or sages of antiquity (§ 8).

We shall, therefore, take the reader as briefly as possible through the definitions, or rather descriptions of stridhana, as given by some of those sages, beginning with Manu and ending with Yajnavalkya (§ 113). Next we shall state the definition of stridhana as given in the Mitakshara. We shall then see how Vijnaneswara, the author of the Mitakshara, seized on one particular word in Yajnavalkya's definition of stridhana, (the word, or rather the suppletive term, ádya, which means 'and the rest' or 'et cetera', and used it as a handle for extending the scope of stridhana so as to include in it several descriptions of property which were not recognized as stridhana before (§ 115). We shall next proceed to consider to what extent the definition of stridhana as given in the Mitakshara has been adopted in the four Mitakshara sub-schools (§§ 116-119). Therefore, we shall deal with the Bengal or Dayabhaga school, and note how Jimutavahana, the founder of that school, boldly rejected the Mitakshara definition of stridhana, and formulated a definition of his own (§ 120). Lastly, we shall note how the Judicial Committee has, notwithstanding repeated warnings given by it that the Courts of India should take the Hindu law not from the Smritis, but from the commentaries (§ 9), brushed aside the whole of Vijnaneswara's expansion of the word ádya (§ 122). After this preliminary inquiry, we shall proceed to deal with the subject of stridhana in the light of decided cases.

113. Stridhana according to the Smritis, that is, the sacred writings of Rishis or sages of antiquity.—Manu enumerates six kinds of stridhana:

1. Gifts made before the nuptial fire, explained by Katyayana to mean gifts made at the time of marriage before the fire which is the witness of the nuptial [adhyagni].

2. Gifts made at the bridal procession, that is, says Katyayana, while the bride is being led from the residence of her parents to that of her husband [adhyavahanika].
3. Gifts made in token of love, that is, says Katyayana, those made through affection by her father-in-law and mother-in-law [pritidatta], and those made at the time of her making obeisance at the feet of elders [padavandanika].
4. Gifts made by father.
5. Gifts made by the mother.
6. Gifts made by a brother (Manu, ix, 194).

All the commentators are agreed that the above is not an exhaustive enumeration of stridhana.

To the above list Vishnu adds—

1. Gifts made by a husband to his wife on supersession, that is, on the occasion of his taking another wife [adhivedanika].
2. Gifts, subsequent, that is, says Katyayana, those made after marriage by her husband's relations or her parent's relations [anwadheyaka].
3. Sulka, or marriage-fee, a term which is used in different senses in different schools [see §§ 147, 150, 152, 153 and 154].
4. Gifts from sons and relations.

Vishnu does not make any specific mention of gifts made at the bridal procession.

Katyayana mentions the same six kinds of stridhana as Manu, and he defines the first three enumerated by Manu, and "gifts subsequent" and "sulka" mentioned by Vishnu. Those definitions have already been given above except that of sulka. It is of importance to note that Katyayana's definition of adhyagni, gifts before the nuptial fire, and that of adhyavahanika, gifts at the bridal procession are wide enough to include gifts from strangers. These definitions have been accepted by all the schools including the Dayabhaga school, with the result that they all recognize as stridhana gifts from strangers when they are made before the nuptial fire or at the bridal procession. But Katyayana expressly excludes from the category of stridhana gifts made by strangers during coverture, as also property acquired by a woman during coverture by mechanical arts. Thus he says:—

"The wealth which is earned by mechanical arts, or which is received through affection from a stranger, is subject to her husband's dominion. The rest is pronounced to be stridhana." [Katyayana, cited in the Dayabhaga, chap. 4, sec. 1, para 19.]

Gifts from strangers referred to in the above text are, of courses, exclusive of gifts made before the nuptial fire and at the bridal procession. Such gifts are undoubtedly stridhana.

The words, "subject to her husband's dominion", indicate that the text cited above is evidently not applicable to gains of art or to gifts from strangers either during maidenhood or during widowhood. The said words refer to acquisitions and gifts from strangers during coverture. Therefore acquisitions and gifts from strangers during maidenhood or widowhood would constitute stridhana.

It is not necessary to notice here the definitions of stridhana given by Narada, Apastamba, Vyasa, and Devala except that Devala refers to "food and vesture" [§ 119] as constituting a woman's stridhana [Colebrooke's Digest, Book V, pp. 471, 478].

It may be observed before passing further that almost all the Smriti writers mention ornaments given by a husband to his wife as her stridhana.

Yajnavalkya defines stridhana thus:—"What was given (to a woman) by the father, the mother, the husband, or a brother, or received by her before the nuptial fire, or presented to her on her husband's marriage to another wife, and the rest (ádya) is denominated stridhana. So, that which is given by kindred, as well as her marriage-fee (sulka) and anything bestowed after marriage." [Note particularly the word "ádya" in the above definition.]

Though there are about eighty different Rishis (sages) or writers of Smritis (institutes), the texts of the belownamed eight rishis are the only ones to which reference is made by the Commentators in their disquisitions on the definition of stridhana. Those eight sages are: (1) Manu, (2) Narada, (3) Vishnu, (4) Katyayana, (5) Apastamba, (6) Vyasa, (7) Devala and (8) Yajnavalkya.

Summarizing the Smriti texts, we may say that it is only gifts obtained by a woman from her relations and her ornaments and apparel which constitute her stridhana and that the only sorts of gifts from strangers which came under that denomination are presents before the nuptial fire and those made at the bridal procession. But neither gifts obtained from strangers at any other time, nor her acquisitions by labour and skill, constitute her stridhana (x). This is stridhana in its technical sense. The Mayukha calls it technical stridhana; it comprises only those kinds of property which are expressly called stridhana by the old sages or Smriti writers.

114. Stridhana according to the Commentators (§§ 115-120). It is well established that whatever may be the law intended to be laid down by the Smriti writers, that law must be sought for in the writings of the Commentators. In determining what is stridhana according to a particular school, the Court has to look to what the Commentators, who are authorities in that particular school, have said on the subject (y). It is not open to a Judge to put his own interpretation on the Smriti texts. If the texts have received a particular interpretation in a particular school, and that interpretation has been accepted as the law of that school, he must take it as the law of that school and administer it as such (z) [§ 9]. To this extent then the Smritis have been pushed into the background.

115. Stridhana according to the Mitakshara.—The following is the definition of stridhana as given by Vijnaneswara in the Mitakshara:—

"That which was given by the father, by the mother, by the husband, or by a brother; and that which was presented by the maternal uncles and the rest at the time of wedding before the nuptial fire; and a gift on a second marriage or gratuity on account of supersession; and, as indicated by the word ádya (and rest), property obtained by—

(1) inheritance;
(2) purchase;
(3) partition;
(4) seizure, e.g., adverse possession (a);
(5) finding;

and this is stridhana according to Manu and the rest."

It will thus be seen that the first portion of the above definition is a reproduction of the definition of stridhana as given by Yajnavalkya. The second part of the above definition is the expansion by Vijnaneswara of the word ádya which occurs in Yajnavalkya's definition of stridhana, so as to include in stridhana five distinct kinds of property which were not recognized as stridhana by the early sages. Neither Manu nor the other sages ever recognized those kinds of property as stridhana. Manu recognized only six kinds of stridhana, but this Vijnaneswara explains by saying that all that was meant by Manu's text is that the number cannot be less than six, not that it cannot be more than six. And, further, he expressly says that the term stridhana conforms in its import with its etymology, and is not technical. The result is that according to the Mitakshara, property of any

---

(x) See Banerjee's "Hindu Law of Marriage and Stridhana," 5th ed., p. 327.

(y) Salemma v. Lutchmana (1898) 21 Mad. 100, 102.

(z) Collector of Madura v. Moottoo Ramalinga (1868) 12 M.I.A. 397, 436.

(a) Subramaniam v. Arunachelam (1905) 28 Mad. 1, 7.

description belonging to a woman is stridhana. It may be a gift from relations or a gift from strangers (b). It may be property acquired by inheritance, or property obtained on partition. It may be her earnings (b) or it may be property acquired by her from any other source [Mitakshara, chap. 2, sec. 11, paras 2-4].

Referring to the above definition, the High Court of Madras said: "It is scarcely necessary to say that Vijnaneswara's statement that stridhana is not to be understood in a technical sense was not mere philological observation. By laying down that proposition, Vijnaneswara and other great commentators, who followed him, succeeded in effecting a beneficial change in the archaic Smriti law and placed women almost on a footing of equality with men as regards the capacity to hold property" (c).

[It may just as well be noted here that since the decision of the Privy Council in 1912 (§ 122), the whole of Vijnaneswara's "expansion" has been discarded.]

116. Stridhana according to the Bombay School.—We next turn to the four divisions of the Mitakshara school (§ 12). It will be seen that some of them adopt the Mitakshara definition while others do not.

The Mayukha, which is held in high esteem in the town of Bombay, in Gujerat and in the North Konkan, would seem to adopt the definition of stridhana as given in the Mitakshara [§ 115].

For the purposes of succession, the Mayukha divides stridhana into two classes, namely, (1) technical, and (2) non-technical. Technical stridhana refers to the kinds of property expressly recognised as stridhana by the old sages [§ 113], that is to say, (1) gifts from relations made at any time, and (2) gifts from strangers if made before the nuptial fire or at the bridal procession. Non-technical stridhana comprises every other kind of property belonging to a woman. This is a classification peculiar only to the Mayukha [Mayukha, chapter iv, sec. 10, paras. 1-2 and 26]. It is not followed in any other part of the Bombay State where the Mitakshara alone is the governing authority.

117. Stridhana according to the Benares School.—The Viramitrodaya, a commentary held in high esteem in the Benares school, adopts and supports the definition of stridhana given in the Mitakshara.

118. Stridhana according to the Madras School.—The principal treatises of the Madras school are the Smriti Chandrika and the Parashara Madhaviya. These treatises do not give any definition of stridhana. Nor do they adopt the definition of stridhana given in the Mitakshara. The Smriti Chandrika enumerates certain kinds of property as stridhana, being the kinds of property recognised as stridhana by the Smriti writers. The Parashara Madhaviya puts its own interpretation on the suppletive term ádya in the text of Yajnavalkya, and says that it refers to property purchased by a woman with gifts made to her at the bridal procession, etc.

Besides the two works mentioned above, there are other works which are of more or less authority in the Madras school namely the Sarasvati Vilasa and the Vyavaharanirnaya. These four treatises, however, do not agree with each other on all points, least of all on questions relating to stridhana. This has led the High Court of Madras to hold that in determining the question whether a particular kind of property is stridhana or not, the Court should follow the comprehensive definition of stridhana given in the Mitakshara and hold that it is stridhana, unless it is shown that the said treatises are unanimous in holding that it is not stridhana (d). It has accordingly been held by that Court following the definition of stridhana given in the Mitakshara, that money given absolutely to a woman for her maintenance, and purchases made with such money, constitute her stridhana and descend to her heirs (e). Similarly, it has been held that gifts from strangers, though made during coverture, constitute her stridhana, there being no consensus of opinion among the said treatises that such gifts are not to be regarded as stridhana (f). As to a wife's earning, the same Court has expressed a strong opinion that they are her stridhana and descendible to her heirs (g). A similar opinion has been expressed as to property acquired by a woman by "seizure", that is, adverse possession, and that acquired by finding (h). Property inherited by a woman, however, stands on a different footing, for as to that it has been settled by a long line of decisions that it is not stridhana according to the Madras school. As to property obtained by a woman on partition, no question can arise in the Madras school as to whether or not it is stridhana, for the practice of allotting shares to a woman on partition has become obsolete in the Madras State (i). This completes the list of the additional sorts of stridhana specifically enumerated in the Mitakshara [§ 115]. In fact, the tendency of the Madras High Court is to follow the Mitakshara in determining whether a particular kind of property is stridhana or not. Even as to rules of succession to stridhana, that Court has followed the Mitakshara where the said four commentaries are silent (j) or do not all agree with each other (k). Referring to the definition of stridhana given in the Mitakshara that Court said: "It is scarcely necessary to say that Vijnaneswara's statement that stridhana is not to be understood in a technical sense was not mere philological observation. . . . A departure from the law, laid down by such a high authority, must not be made unless supported by adequate grounds" (l). And as to the rules of succession to stridhana, the same Court said: "While the other commentators, in their attempt to reconcile the various Smritis, complicate the matter by prescribing different lines of devolution—those too not complete—according to the class of stridhana to which the particular property belongs, the Mitakshara lays down rules which are easy of application, complete in themselves and on the whole equitable" (m).

---

(b) Salemma v. Lutchmana (1898) 21 Mad. 100, 103-105.

(c) Salemma v. Lutchmana (1898) 21 Mad. 100, 103-104.

The position, then, as regards the Madras school, so far as the Madras decisions go, is this that the Mitakshara definition of stridhana is to be applied in every case, unless the commentaries prevalent in that school unanimously exclude the kind of property in question from the category of stridhana. Since the decision, however, of the Privy Council, in 1912 (§ 122), the whole of Vijnaneswara's "expansion" [§ 115] has been discarded, and such of the Madras decisions which recognized as stridhana any description of property comprised in the "expansion" cannot now be accepted as good law.

119. Stridhana according to the Mithila School.—The Vivada Chintamani is the leading authority of the Mithila school. This work also does not give any definition of stridhana, but it enumerates eleven kinds of property, namely:

(1-6) the six kinds as enumerated by Manu and defined by Katyayana [§ 113 ];

(7-9) gifts made on supersession, gifts subsequent, and sulka [§ 113];

(10) ornaments; and

(11) "food and vesture" mentioned by Devala and interpreted to mean "funds appropriated to a woman's support" [§ 113].

---

(d) Salemma v. Lutchmana (1898) 21 Mad. 100, 103-104.

(e) Subramanian v. Arunachelam (1903) 28 Mad. 1.

(f) 21 Mad. 100, supra.

(g) 21 Mad. 100, 103, supra.

(h) 28 Mad. 1, 7, supra.

(i) Subramanian v. Arunachelam (1903) 28 Mad. 1, 8.

(j) Salemma v. Lutchmana (1898) 21 Mad. 100, 104.

(k) Raju v. Ammani (1906) 29 Mad. 358; Muthappudayan v. Ammani (1898) 21 Mad. 58.

(l) 21 Mad. 100, 103-104, supra.

(m) 21 Mad. 100, 104, 105, supra.

Gifts from strangers made before the nuptial fire and at the bridal procession are also recognized as stridhana. The author then concludes his enumeration by saying: "These are the several kinds of stridhana." It will thus be seen that the Vivada Chintamani confines stridhana within the definition of the Smriti writers and excludes property acquired by inheritance and the other kinds of property mentioned as stridhana in the Mitakshara (n). [Vivada Chintamani, P. C. Tagore's Translations, pp. 256-263.]

120. Stridhana according to the Dayabhaga or Bengal School.—The Dayabhaga of Jimutavahana is the leading authority of the Bengal school. To understand the definition of stridhana as given in the Dayabhaga it is important to note the following two propositions which have been accepted by all the Mitakshara sub-schools:—

(a) every kind of stridhana belonging to a woman passes on her death to her heirs;

(b) but every kind of stridhana cannot be disposed of by a woman at her pleasure.

The only kinds of stridhana which she can dispose of at her pleasure and without her husband's consent are gifts from relations. She cannot dispose of any other kind of stridhana such as gifts from strangers, or property acquired by her by mechanical arts, without her husband's consent [§ 143].

This is based upon certain texts of Katyayana and Narada. The texts run as follows:

(1) "What a woman, either after marriage or before it, either in the mansion of her husband or of her father, received from her lord or her parents, is called saudayika (gift from affectionate kindred); and such a gift having by them been presented through kindness, that the woman possessing it may live well, is declared by law to be her absolute property. The absolute exclusive dominion of women over such a gift is perpetually celebrated; and they have power to sell or give it away as they please, even though it consist of lands and houses. Neither the husband, nor the son, nor the father, nor the brother, has power to use or to alienate the legal property of a woman"—Katyayana [Colebrooke's Digest, Book V, p. 475].

(2) "The wealth which is earned by mechanical arts, or which is received through affection from a stranger, is subject to her husband's dominion. The rest is pronounced to be stridhana" [Katyayana, cited in the Dayabhaga, chap. 4 sec. 1, para 19]

(3) "Property given to her by her husband through pure affection she may enjoy at her pleasure after his death, or may give it away, except land or houses"—Narada [Colebrooke's Digest, Book V, p. 477].

Jimutavahana first examines the various definitions, or rather descriptions, of stridhana given in the old Smriti texts [§ 113]. He alters the text of Yajnavalkya by substituting the expletive eva for ádya so as to confine the term stridhana 'to the kinds of property specifically enumerated by Yajnavalkya' [§ 113]. He rejects the definition of stridhana given in the Mitakshara, and defines stridhana in these words:—

"That alone is stridhana which she (a woman) has power to give, sell, or use independently of her husband's control."

Jimutavahana, however, does not say what kinds of property can be disposed of by a woman without her husband's consent but immediately after defining stridhana, he cites the texts of Katyayana and Narada quoted above. In the light of those texts, and from what more he says in the chapter on stridhana it may be said—

(1) affirmatively, that all gifts from relations constitute stridhana, except a gift of immoveable property made by the husband; and that gifts from strangers also constitute stridhana if made before the nuptial fire or at the bridal procession;

---

(n) Bhugwandeen v. Myna Baee (1867) 11 M.I.A 487, 511.

(2) negatively, that the following properties are not stridhana, namely—

(i) property inherited by a woman;

(ii) property obtained by her on partition;

(iii) gifts from strangers, except those made before the nuptial fire or at the bridal procession; and

(iv) property acquired by her by mechanical arts (o) [Dayabhaga, chap. 4, sec. 1].

121. Distinction between Mitakshara stridhana and Dayabhaga stridhana.—In Sheo Shankar v. Debi Sahai (p), their Lordships of the Privy Council referring to the term stridhana said: "The Bengal school of lawyers have always limited the use of the term narrowly, applying it exclusively, or nearly exclusively, to the kinds of woman's property enumerated in the primitive sacred texts. The author of the Mitakshara and some other authors (that is of the Viramitrodaya and the Mayukha) seem to apply the term broadly to every kind of property which a woman can possess, from whatever source it may be derived."

122. The Privy Council and Mitakshara Stridhana.—(1) Property inherited by a woman.—A woman may inherit the ordinary property of a male, that is of her husband, father, son, etc. She may also inherit the stridhana of a female, that is of her mother, mother's mother, or daughter. Both these kinds of inherited property are stridhana according to the Mitakshara [§ 115], but the Privy Council has held as to both these kinds of property that they are not stridhana. In one set of cases before that tribunal, the question was whether property inherited by a widow from her husband, that is property inherited by a woman from a male, was her stridhana. Their Lordships held that it was not, and that on her death it passed not to her heirs, but to the next heir of her husband (q). In the other set of cases the question was whether stridhana inherited by a daughter from her mother, that is property inherited by a woman from a female, was her stridhana. Their Lordships held that it was not, and that it did not descend to her (daughter's) stridhana heirs, but to the next heir of the mother (r).

The cases referred to above were cases from the Benares school. The law as now settled in the Madras, Mithila and Bengal schools is the same, that is to say that property inherited by a woman, whether from a male or from a female, does not constitute her stridhana in any case [§§ 168-169]. According to the Bombay school, however, it becomes her stridhana in all cases, except where the property is inherited by a widow, mother, or other female who enters the gotra (family) of the deceased by marriage [§§ 170-171]. This rule is firmly established in Bombay by a long current of decisions and it remains unaffected by the decisions of the Privy Council referred to above (s). [See § 130.]

(2) Share obtained by a widow on partition.—As to the share obtained by a widow on partition of the joint family property, it has been held by the

---

(o) Ram Gopal v. Narain (1906) 33 Cal. 315, 319-320.

(p) (1903) 25 All. 468, 30 I.A. 202, 205-206.

(q) Bhugwandeen v. Myna Baee (1867) 11 M.I.A. 487; Mst. Thakur Deyhee v. Rai Baluk Ram (1866) 11 M.I.A. 140.

(r) Sheo Shankar v. Debi Sahai (1903) 25 All. 468, 30 I.A. 202, as explained in Subramanian v. Arunachelam (1905) 28 Mad. 1, 9-12; Ram Kali v. Gopal Dei (1926) 48 All. 648, 652-653, 96 I.C. 757, ('26) A.A. 557, and Hukum Chand v. Sital Prasad (1928) 50 All. 232, 236, 237, 107 I.C. 244, ('28) A.A. 52; Sheo Pertab v. The Allahabad Bank (1903) 25 All. 476, 30 I.A. 209; Gaya Din v. Badri Singh (1943) All. 230.

(s) See (1903) 25 All. 468, 474, 30 I.A. 202, supra; Balwant Rao v. Baji Rao (1920) 47 I.A. 213, 223, 48 Cal. 30, 57 I.C. 545, ('21) A.PC. 59; Bhau v. Raghunath (1906) 30 Bom. 229, 236-237; Gadadhar v. Chandrabhagabai (1893) 17 Bom. 690, 708 [F.B.]; Kasserbai v. Hunsraj (1906) 30 Bom. 431, 452.

Privy Council in Debi Mangal Prasad v. Mahadeo Prasad (t), that it is not her stridhana even under the Mitakshara law. The actual point decided in that case was that there was no substantial difference in principle between a woman's property acquired by inheritance and that acquired by partition (u). It does not therefore pass on her death to her stridhana heirs, but reverts on her death to the next heirs of her husband in the absence of an express agreement amongst the co-sharers to the contrary.

It will be noted that property acquired by a woman by inheritance and that acquired by her on partition are two of the five additional sorts of stridhana comprised in Vijnaneswara's "expansion" of ádya [§ 115]. As to both these it has been held by the Privy Council that they do not constitute her stridhana in such sense that on her death it passes to her stridhana heirs. The true view would now appear to be that the whole of Vijnaneswara's expansion has been discarded.

123. The schools and stridhana.—A summary of §§ 113 to 122 is given below:—

(1) The Smriti writers confine stridhana to gifts from relations made at any time and to gifts from strangers made before the nuptial fire and at the bridal procession. This is called technical stridhana [§ 113], and it is stridhana according to all the schools.

(2) Property acquired by a female during maidenhood or widowhood, though it be acquired by gift from strangers or by mechanical arts, constitutes her stridhana according to all the schools [§§ 127-132].

(3) Though according to the Mitakshara every kind of property howsoever acquired by a woman would appear to be her stridhana, the effect of the decisions of the Privy Council referred to in § 122 is to curtail the definition of stridhana as propounded by Vijnaneswara by excluding from it in effect the five additional sorts of stridhana enumerated by him [§ 115].

(4) The law of the Benares school is that stated in sub-sec. (3) [§§ 117 and 122].

(5) Every description of property which is stridhana according to the Mitakshara as interpreted by the Privy Council would seem to be stridhana according to the Bombay school. That school also recognizes as stridhana every kind of property inherited by a woman, except where the woman inheriting the property is a widow, mother, or other female who entered the gotra of the deceased owner by marriage [§ 130]. See §§ 116 and 122.

(6) Having regard to the Madras decisions set forth in § 118, it would seem that every description of property which is stridhana according to the Mitakshara as interpreted by the Privy Council, is stridhana according to the Madras school.

(7) The Mithila school confines stridhana within the definitions of the Smriti writers; it does not recognize non-technical stridhana [§ 119].

(8) According to the Dayabhaga or Bengal school, that alone is stridhana which a woman has power to dispose of without the consent of her husband [§ 120].

(9) Property which comes within any of the descriptions of stridhana is not the less stridhana, because it happens to be a kind of property which was not known to the Hindu law when the Commentaries were written. "We are not prepared," said the High Court of Calcutta in a Dayabhaga case, "to hold that the rules of Hindu law are so inelastic as to be capable of application only to such descriptions of interests in property as formed the subject-matter of transactions at the time when the rules were first formulated." Thus a gift by a father to his daughter is stridhana according to all the schools: and it is not the less stridhana, because the gift is of a maurasi mokarari lease, a sort of interest in property unknown to the Hindu law when the Dayabhaga was written (v).

(10) It will be seen from what is stated above, that the stridhana of the Bombay school is more extensive than the stridhana of every other school, for the Bombay school, while recognizing as stridhana every kind of property which is stridhana according to the other schools, recognizes in certain cases inherited property also as stridhana, which no other school does.

---

(t) (1912) 34 All. 234, 39 I.A. 121, 14 I.C. 1000.

(u) Kamla Devi v Bachulal ('57) A.S.C. 434, 440.

(v) Ram Gopal v. Narain (1906) 33 Cal. 315, 319.

To say of a property possessed by a woman that it is her stridhana is the same thing as saying that she is the full owner thereof. To say that the stridhana of the Dayabhaga school is less comprehensive than that of the Bombay school, is equivalent to saying that the Dayabhaga school does not recognize the full ownership of women in as many kinds of property as the Bombay school; but though this is so, females governed by the Dayabhaga school possess an advantage which females subject to the Mitakshara law do not. For while according to the Mitakshara law, the interest of a coparcener in ancestral property passes on his death to his coparceners by survivorship, according to the Dayabhaga law, it passes to his heir by succession. The result is that according to the Mitakshara law, a widow, daughter, mother, etc., can never succeed to ancestral property so long as a single coparcener is in existence; while according to the Dayabhaga law, their succession is not impeded by the existence of any coparcener. Thus if two brothers A and B are joint, and A dies leaving a widow, or a daughter, or a mother, according to the Mitakshara law, A's interest in the joint property will pass on his death not to his widow, or daughter, or mother, but to B by survivorship, while according to the Dayabhaga law, it will pass to his widow, daughter or mother as the case may be, though, it may be noted, none of them takes as a full owner [§§ 177-180].

II.—SPECIAL FEATURES OF STRIDHANA

124. Peculiar features of Stridhana.—A Hindu female may acquire property from various sources. She may acquire it by gift, or by inheritance, or on partition. She may also acquire it by her own labour and skill. But all property acquired by her is not stridhana. Whether a particular kind of property is stridhana or not, depends on—

(1) the source from which the property was acquired.

(2) her status at the time of acquisition, that is whether she acquired it during maindenhood, coverture, or widowhood; and lastly,

(3) the school to which she belongs.

What is stridhana, and what is not, according to the different schools, we have already stated in section 123 and the earlier sections. We shall elucidate this subject still further by treating it from a practical point of view, that is, by enumerating all possible descriptions of property that may be lawfully acquired by a Hindu female, and dealing with each one of these descriptions separately in separate sections, and stating which of them are stridhana and which are not according to the different schools [§§ 125 to 135]. In the meantime it may be asked, what is the practical importance of the distinction between proporty which is stridhana and property which is not stridhana? The answer is that the distinction is important in two ways: first, as regards succession and, secondly, as regards the power of alienation.

Stridhana of every description belonging to a woman passes on her death to her heirs [§§ 145-157]. It is not so with regard to women's property which is not stridhana.

Stridhana belonging to a woman is property of which she is the absolute owner, and which she may dispose of at her pleasure, if not in all cases during coverture, in all cases during widowhood [§§ 141 to 144]. But a woman is not the absolute owner of property which is not her stridhana, nor can she dispose of it at her pleasure even during widowhood. She is merely a qualified owner of such property; in other words she takes only a limited interest in the property, the nature and extent of which depend on the character of the property.

III.—ENUMERATION OF STRIDHANA.

125. Sources of woman's property.—A Hindu female may acquire property from diverse source. Several descriptions of property that may be lawfully acquired by a Hindu female are:

(1) Gifts and bequests from relations [§ 126].
(2) Gifts and bequests from strangers [§ 127].
(3) Property obtained on partition [§ 128].
(4) Property given in lieu of maintenance [§ 129].
(5) Property acquired by inheritance [§ 130].
(6) Property acquired by mechanical arts [§ 131].
(7) Property obtained by compromise [§ 132].
(8) Property acquired by adverse possession [§ 133].
(9) Property purchased with stridhana or with savings of income of stridhana [§ 134].
(10) Property acquired from sources other than those mentioned above [§ 135].

Bequests stand on the same footing as gifts (w).

126. Gifts and bequests from relations.—Property given or bequeathed (x) to a Hindu female, whether during maidenhood, coverture, or widowhood, by her parents and their relations, or by her husband and his relations (y), is stridhana according to all the schools, except that the Dayabhaga does not recognize immoveable property given or bequeathed by a husband to his wife as stridhana (z) [§ 120].

Gifts from relations.—Gifts from relations constitute "technical" stridhana [§ 113]. These gifts bear various names according to the occasion on which they are made. Those names are—

(1) adhyagni, that is, gifts made before the nuptial fire;
(2) adhyavahanika, that is, gifts made at the bridal procession;
(3) padavandanika, that is, a gift made to a woman when she makes obeisance at the feet of elders;
(4) anwadheyaka, that is, gift made after marriage;
(5) adhivedanika, that is, gifts made on supersession;
(6) sulka, that is, gratuity or marriage-fee;
(7) pritidatta, that is, gifts of affection made by the father-in-law or mother-in-law;
(8) bhartridatta, that is, gifts from the husband.

The above terms are explained in § 113.
See § 401, "Gifts and bequests to widows, daughters, and other females."

127. Gifts and bequests from strangers.—A gift may be received by a Hindu female from a stranger, that is, from one who is not a relation, (1) during maidenhood, or (2) at the time of marriage, or (3) during coverture, or (4) during widowhood.

(1) Property given or bequeathed to a Hindu female by strangers during maidenhood is her stridhana according to all the schools (a).

The principal text which excludes gifts from strangers from the category of stridhana is that of Katyayana. It runs thus:—

"The wealth which is earned by mechanical arts, or which is received through affection from a stranger, is subject to her husband's dominion. The rest is pronounced to be stridhana."

---

(w) Judoo Nath v. Bussunt Coomar (1873) 19 W.R. 264.

(x) (1873) 19 W.R. 264, supra (bequest from father); Damodar v. Parmanandas (1883) 7 Bom. 155 (bequest from husband); Basanta Kumari v. Kamikshya (1906) 33 Cal. 23, 32 I.A. 181 (bequest from brother); Atul v. Sanyasi (1905) 32 Cal. 1051 (bequest from son).

(y) See Sambasiva v. Venkataswara (1908) 31 Mad. 179. Also see § 226.

(z) See Dayabhaga, ch. 4, sec. 1 paras. 18 and 21. See also Venkata v. Venkata (1877) 1 Mad. 281, 286, 287.

(a) See Dayabhaga, chap. 4 sec. 1, para. 20 and Venkata v. Venkata (1877) 1 Mad. 281, 286.

The words "subject to her husband's dominion," in the above text show that the text does not apply to acquisitions or gifts from strangers during maidenhood or during widowhood. The words refer to acquisitions and gifts from strangers during coverture only (a).

(2) Property given by strangers to a Hindu female before the nuptial fire or at the bridal procession is stridhana according to all schools. Such property, like property given by relations, constitutes "technical" stridhana [§ 113].

(3) Property given or bequeathed by strangers to a Hindu female during coverture is stridhana according to the Bombay, Benares, and Madras (b) schools [§§ 116-118], but not according to the Mithila and Dayabhaga schools [§§ 119-120].

Even according to the Dayabhaga, such property becomes her stridhana after her husband's death, as appears from the fact that the Dayabhaga recognizes the ownership of the wife in such property even during coverture, though it says it is not her stridhana because it is subject to her husband's control. It is difficult to say whether, according to the Mithila school, such property becomes stridhana after the death of the husband.

Dayabhaga school.—The Dayabhaga first cites the text of Katyayana relating to gifts from strangers and acquisitions by mechanical arts quoted above, and then says: "He (the husband) has a right to take it, even though no distress exists. Hence though the property is hers, it does not constitute stridhana because she has no independent power over it": Dayabhaga, chap. 4, sec. 1, para. 20.

The meaning of the above text is that though the ownership of the property is in the wife, it is not her stridhana for, according to the Dayabhaga definition of stridhana, that alone is stridhana which a woman can dispose of independently of her husband's consent. On this point Jagannatha say:—

"But according to Jumutavahana, Raghunandana, and the rest, the wife is the sole owner of wealth acquired by her even during coverture; yet she has not independent power over it so long as her husband lives. It must therefore be understood, that the legal heirs of stridhana succeed also to this wealth, even if the wife dies in the lifetime of the husband." Colebrooke's Digest, Book V, 515, commentary, Vol. II, p. 628.

Mithila school.—It is difficult to say whether according to the Mithila school a gift from a stranger received during coverture becomes the stridhana of the wife on her husband's death. The trend of modern decisions is to follow the Mitakshara unless the special commentaries of the school in question expressly declare that a particular kind of property is not stridhana.

(4) Property given (c) or bequeathed (d) to a Hindu female during widowhood is her stridhana. Where a father made a gift of certain properties to his widowed daughter for life with remainder to his heirs, the rents and profits accruing from such properties, including all accumulations thereof are her stridhana, though the corpus is not (e).

See notes to sub-section (1).

128. Share on partition.—(1) According to the Dayabhaga school, where a share is allotted to a mother or father's mother on partition of joint family property, it is given to her by way of provision for her maintenance for which

---

(a) See Dayabhaga, chap. 4, sec. 1, para. 20. and Venkata v. Venkata, supra.

(b) Salemma v. Lutchmana (1898) 21 Mad. 100, a case of service inam enfranchised by Government in favour of a married woman during coverture.

(c) Brij Indar v. Janki Koer (1877) 5 I.A. 1, 1 Cal. L.R. 318 [property acquired by a widow under a sannad from Government, which conferred upon her a full proprietary and transferable right in the property is her stridhana. It was a Mitakshara case, but the Dayabhaga has been freely cited in the judgment of the Privy Council].

(d) Bai Narmada v. Bhagwantrai (1881) 12 Bom. 505.

(e) Mohini Mohan Basu v. Rashbihari Ghose (1937) 2 Cal. 97, 169 I.C. 519, ('37) A.C. 229.

the family property is bound. It is not, therefore, her stridhana, and it does not pass on her death to the stridhana heirs, but reverts to the sons or grandsons out of whose portion it was taken out (f).

(2) Even in cases governed by Mitakshara, the Privy Council have held in Debi Mangal Prasad v. Mahadeo Prasad (g) that a share allotted to a mother on partition is not her stridhana, but stands on the same footing as property inherited by her from her husband (h), and that on her death it passes not to her stridhana heirs, but to the sons or grandsons.

(3) According to the Mithila school, the share allotted to a woman on partition is not stridhana (i). The reason is that it is not one of the eleven kinds of stridhana enumerated in the Vivada Chintamani [§ 119].

(4) As regards the Madras school, the practice of allotting a share to females on partition has become obsolete. No question can, therefore, arise in that school as to whether such share is stridhana or not [§ 118].

The question whether the share allotted to a mother on partition is stridhana or not according to the Benares school was left open by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Bhugwandeen v. Myna Baee (j), the very case in which they held that property inherited by a woman was not stridhana according to the Mitakshara. In Debi Mangal Prasad's case, the Allahabad High Court, after a review of all the authorities on the subject, held that it was stridhana, but the Privy Council held that it stood on the same footing as property inherited by a woman and that it was not stridhana [sub-sec. (2)].

Where a deed of partition confers in terms an absolute estate upon the mother in the share allotted to her, she takes the share as her stridhana (k). In Debi Mangal Prasad's case the Privy Council said: "Of course, the members of a joint family effecting a partition may agree that a portion of the property shall be transferred to the widow by way of absolute gift, as part of her stridhana, so as to constitute a provision for her stridhana heirs; but in the absence of any such intention, their Lordships do not feel justified in putting property acquired by a widow, on a partition of the joint estate, upon a footing different from that on which property coming to her by way of inheritance has been placed." In a later case, where a share was given by the step-sons to their step-mother and the agreement provided that she was to be responsible for a definite share of the debts, their Lordships of the Privy Council held that the step-mother took an absolute interest in the share allotted to her (l)

129. Property given in lieu of maintenance.—Money paid to a Hindu female periodically for her maintenance (vritti), and the arrears of such maintenance, or a lump sum of money given to her in lieu of maintenance, constitute stridhana according to all the schools (m). So too does immoveable property transferred to a woman by way of absolute gift in lieu of maintenance (n).

---

(f) Sorolah v. Bhoobun (1888) 15 Cal. 292; Hridoy Kant v. Behari Lal (1906) 11 C.W.N. 239; Hemangini v. Kedarnath (1889) 16 Cal. 758, 16 I.A. 115; Sashi Bhusan v. Hari Narayan (1921) 48 Cal. 1059, 1065, 1066, 66 I.C. 705, ('21) A.C. 202; Hira Lal Mandal v. Sankar Lal Mandal (1938) 2 Cal. 250.

(g) (1912) 34 All. 234, 39 I.A. 121, 14 I.C. 1000, Reversing 32 All. 253, 5 I.C. 208; Munni Lal v. Phula (1928) 50 All. 22, 105 I.C. 322, ('27) A.A. 679.

(h) Bhagwantrao v. Punjaram (1938) Nag. 255 174 I.C. 201 ('38) A.N. 1; Sital Prasad v. Sri Ram (1944) Luck. 450.

(i) Krishna Lal v. Nandeshwar (1919) 4 Pat. L.J. 38, 45, 44 I.C. 146, ('18) A.P. 91 (Share allotted to grandmother).

(j) (1876) 11 M.I.A. 487, 514.

(k) Bolye Chund v. Khetterpaul (1873) 11 Beng. L.R. 459.

(l) Sahab Rai v. Shafiq Ahmad (1927) 31 C.W.N. 972, 101 I.C. 426, ('27) A.PC. 101.

(m) Doorga v. Teju (1866) W.R. Mis. 53 (gift of money by son to mother for maintenance); Court of Wards v. Mohessur (1871) 16 W.R. 76 (Dayabhaga case); Nellaikumaru v. Marakathammal (1876) 1 Mad. 166; Subramanian v. Arunachelam (1905) 28 Mad. 1: Manilal v. Bai Rewa (1893) 17 Bom. 758; Gunpat Rao v. Ram Chunder (1889) 11 All. 296. See particularly 28 Mad. 1. supra, at pp. 7 and 8; Janardhan v. Sonalai (1942) Nag. 16, 198 I.C. 293, ('42) A.N. 30.

(n) Debi Mangal Prasad v. Mahadeo Prasad 1912) 34 All. 234, 39 I.A. 121, 131, 14 I.C. 000.

It does not make any difference whether the maintenance is awarded during coverture (o) or during widowhood. Nor does it make any difference that it is awarded under an agreement between the parties or by a decree of the Court (p). The transfer of property given absolutely in lieu of maintenance is not void under sec. 6 of the Transfer of Property Act (q).

Arrears of maintenance constitute stridhana, though the maintenance is payable by the husband under a decree obtained by the wife against him. If the wife dies in the lifetime of the husband, such stridhana passes to her stridhana heirs, so that if she has a daughter, she will inherit it and she can claim it from the woman's husband, even if he happens to be her own father.

As to the law of the Mithila school, see § 119.

130. Property acquired by inheritance.—(1) A woman may inherit the ordinary property of a male such as her husband, father, son and the rest. She may also inherit the stridhana of a female such as her mother, daughter, and the rest.

(2) According to the Dayabhaga school, as well as the Benares, Mithila, and Madras schools, property inherited by a woman whether from a male or from a female, does not become her stridhana. She takes only a limited interest in the property [§§ 177-180], and on her death the property passes not to her heirs, but to the next heir of the person from whom she inherited it [§§ 168-169].

If the property is inherited from a male, it will pass to his sapindas, sakulyas and samanodakas, if the parties are governed by the Dayabhaga law [§§ 88-90], and to his sapindas, samanodakas and bandhus if the parties are governed by the Mitakshara law [§§ 43 to 50]. And if the property is inherited from a female, it will pass to the next stridhana heirs of such female [§§ 145-157].

Illustration

A Hindu dies leaving a widow and a brother. The widow will inherit his property as his heir. She takes only a limited interest in the property, that is, she can enjoy only the income of the property. She cannot alienate the property except in the cases mentioned in §§ 178-179. On her death, the property will pass not to her stridhana heirs, but to the next heir of her husband, that is, his brother. The same rule applies where a female inherits property from her father, son, son's son, or son's son's son, that is, where she inherits it as daughter, mother, grandmother, or great-grandmother respectively. As to property inherited from a female see the illustration to § 169 below.

(3) According to the Bombay school, property inherited by a woman from a female becomes her stridhana in all cases. She can dispose of it by act inter vivos [that is, by sale, mortgage, gift, etc.] or by will, and on her death intestate the property passes to her stridhana heirs (§ 171).

As regards property inherited by a female from a male, the Bombay school divides female heirs into two classes, namely—

(a) those who are introduced into the gotra or family of the deceased owner by marriage, such as the deceased's wife, mother, father's mother, etc.; and

(b) other female heirs, being females born in the family, such as the daughter, sister, brother's daughter, sister's daughter, etc.

---

(o) (1893) 17 Bom. 758, supra.
(p) (1893) 17 Bom. 758, and (1905) 28 Mad. 1, supra.
(q) Dhup Nath v. Ram Charitra (1932) 54 All. 366, 138 I.C. 556, ('32) A.A. 366.

Property inherited by a female who belongs to class (a) does not become her stridhana. She takes only a limited interest in such property, and on her death it passes to the next heir of the male from whom she inherited it.

Property inherited by a female who belongs to class (b) becomes her stridhana in all cases. She can dispose of it by an act inter vivos or by will, and on her death it passes to her own stridhana heirs (§ 170).

The result is, as regards property acquired by inheritance, that according to the Dayabhaga, Benares, Mithila, and Madras schools, it does not become stridhana in any case, while according to the Bombay school, it becomes stridhana in all cases except where it is inherited by the deceased's widow, mother, or other female relation who entered his gotra (family) by marriage.

The illustrations to §§ 170 and 171 may be read.

Females who enter the gotra of a Hindu by marriage.—These are his wife, his father's wife (i.e., his mother), his father's father's wife (i.e., his grandmother), his father's father's father's wife (i.e., his great-grandmother), and the wives of other ascendants; also the wives of collaterals, a class of heirs recognized in the Bombay school only, namely his brother's wife, his nephew's wife, his uncle's wife, his cousin's wife etc. [§ 68]. In snort the females who enter the gotra of a Hindu by marriage are his own wife, and the wives of all his sapindas and samanodakas. All these take a limited interest in the property inherited by them from a male sapinda or samanodoka, and on their death the property passes not to their stridhana heirs, for it is not their stridhana but to the next heir of the male from whom they inherit it.

Females born in the family.—Turning now to the other female heirs in the Bombay State, that is, females other than those who enter the gotra of a person by marriage, it will be seen that they are either females born in his gotra or the daughters of such females. Thus a daughter, sister (father's daughter), niece (brother's daughter), are "daughters born in the gotra": while a daughter's daughter, sister's daughter, etc., are the daughters of "daughters born in the gotra." Property inherited by these female heirs from any male member of the gotra in which they are born, becomes their stridhana. Thus a daughter inheriting to a father, a sister inheriting to a brother, a niece inheriting to an uncle, all take the property absolutely as their stridhana. They can dispose of it in any way they like and on their death it passes to their own stridhana heirs.

What is stated above may be explained by a diagram thus:—

According to the Bombay school, A and *B*2 are stridhana; *B*1 is not stridhana. According to the other schools no inherited property can be stridhana at all.

131. Property acquired by mechanical arts.—A Hindu female may acquire property by mechanical arts or otherwise by her own exertions during maidenhood, or she may do so during coverture, or during widowhood.

(1) Property acquired by a Hindu female by mechanical arts or otherwise by her own exertions during maidenhood or widowhood is stridhana according to all the schools. The reason is, that the text of Katyayana which excludes such property from the category of stridhana applies only to property acquired during coverture [§ 127, sub-§ (1), notes].

(2) Property acquired by a Hindu female by mechanical arts or otherwise by her own exertions during coverture is stridhana according to the Bombay, Benares, and Madras (r) schools [§§ 116-118], but not according to the Mithila and Dayabhaga schools [§§ 119-120].

But if the woman survives her husband, then, it seems that according to the Dayabhaga law such property becomes her stridhana, for the Dayabhaga distinctly recognizes the wife's ownership in the property even during coverture. It is difficult to say whether it becomes stridhana according to the Mithila law.

The notes to § 127, sub-§§ (1) and (3) may be read. Mechanical arts include spinning, painting, etc.

132. Property obtained by compromise.—As to properties obtained by a woman under a compromise or a family arrangement, there is no presumption that she takes only a life estate. What estate she takes depends on the terms of the deed and other circumstances (s). Accordingly, where one of two brothers living jointly died and his share was claimed by right of survivorship by the other brother, while the widow claimed it as his heir and the matter was referred to arbitration and under the award certain property was allotted to her, it was held by the Privy Council that she took an absolute estate in the property allotted to her on the ground that there were no words in the award to narrow her interest (t). Property obtained by a woman under a compromise in consideration of her giving up her rights in relation to her stridhana is stridhana according to all the schools (u). Property obtained by a widow under a compromise with her adopted son, is her absolute property (v). Where a daughter, not an heir by custom, obtains property from a reversioner by a compromise, it is her stridhana (w).

133. Property obtained by adverse possession.—Property acquired by a Hindu female, whether during coverture (x) or widowhood (y), by adverse possession, becomes her stridhana according to all the schools. See § 211 below.

A Hindu female executes a deed of gift of her stridhana in favour of her daughter, but the deed is not registered. The daughter enters into possession of the property In such a case if the mother dies after the daughter's possession has become adverse, the daughter is entitled to the property as her stridhana, the same having been acquired by adverse possession, and on her death it will pass to her heirs. But if the mother dies before twelve years' adverse possession has been completed leaving the daughter as her heir, and the daughter continues in possession, her possession after her mother's death is the possession of an heir, and she takes a limited interest in it, and at her death the property will pass not to her heirs, but to the next stridhana heirs of the mother (z) See § 169.

---

(r) See Salemma v. Lutchmana (1896) 21 Mad. 100, at p. 105; Muthu Ramakrishna v. Marimuthu (1915) 38 Mad. 1036, 24 I.C. 363, ('14) A.M. 128 [property acquired by husband and wife by joint trade].

(s) Pandit Adya Shankar Tewari v. Mst. Chandrawati (1935) 10 Luck. 35, 150 I.C. 519, ('34) A.O. 265.

(t) Nathu Lal v. Babu Ram (1936) 63 I.A. 155, 38 Bom. L.R. 462, 151 I.C. 33, ('36) A.PC. 103.

(u) Sowdaminee Dossee v. Administrator-General of Bengal (1893) 20 Cal. 433, 438-439, 443, 20 I.A. 12. See also Sambasiva v. Venkataswara (1908) 31 Mad. 179.

(v) Parshottam v. Keshavlal (1932) 56 Bom. 164, 137 I.C. 561, ('32) A.B. 213.

(w) Rai Rajeshwar v. Har Kishen (1933) 8 Luck. 538, 150 I.C. 346, ('38) A.O. 170

(x) Mohim Chunder v. Kashi Kant (1897) 2 C.W.N. 161, 162.

(y) Sham Koer v. Dah Koer (1902) 29 Cal. 664, 29 I.A. 132; Kanhai Ram v. Amri (1910) 32 All. 189, 5 I.C. 207; Mohim Chunder v. Kashi Kant (1897) 2 C.W.N. 161; Bheron Singh v. Ramchandra Bai ('57) A. Madh. Bha. 138.

(z) Dhurjati v. Ram Bharos (1930) 52 All. 222, 121 I.C. 701, ('30) A.A. 109. Atchanna v. Appanna ('67) A.A.P. 147.

134. Property purchased with stridhana.—Property purchased by a woman with her stridhana, and the savings of the income of stridhana, constitute stridhana according to all the schools (a).

It does not make any difference that the property purchased is immovable property [§ 177]. Nor does it make any difference that it was purchased by her in the exercise of a right of pre-emption, though she could not have claimed the right had she not been in possession of her husband's property which adjoined the property purchased by her. If it was purchased with her stridhana, it is her property (b). The mere fact that she could not have acquired the property had she not been in possession of her husband's estate does not make it part of her husband's estate (c). Where the main estate was in the hands of a receiver appointed under a decree and the widow was only receiving a pension, purchases of properties made by the widow out of her savings would be her stridhana and would pass to her stridhana heirs (d).

If a woman obtains property in exchange for property which is her stridhana or advances money which forms her stridhana on a mortgage, or takes an assignment of leasehold property with her stridhana, all such property constitutes her stridhana.

135. Property acquired from other sources.—We have enumerated in §§ 126 to 134 the principal sources from which property may be acquired by a Hindu female. Whether property acquired by her from any other source constitutes her stridhana or not, is to be determined with reference to the provisions of § 123 above.

We have already stated in § 124 that stridhana has two peculiarities attached to it, namely, (1) that the woman has absolute power of disposal over it except in certain cases during coverture, and (2) that it follows a special order of succession. We shall deal with the first of these in §§ 141 to 144, and with the second in §§ 145 to 164. In fact, the question whether a particular kind of property is stridhana or not becomes important only when the question arises as to her power to dispose of it or as to the line of succession thereto.

136. Stridhana by custom.—The widow of a separated Hindu who dies without leaving male issue may, by custom, inherit his estate as stridhana (e).

In the case referred to above the parties were Jains governed by the Mitakshara law.

137. Maiden's property.—It is clear from what has been stated in the foregoing sections that except property inherited by her all property of a maiden, however acquired, whether by way of gift or bequest from relations or from strangers, or by mechanical arts or otherwise by her own exertions, constitutes her stridhana. But in the Bombay school, even property inherited by her is her stridhana, for a maiden does not come within the category of females who enter the gotra of the owner by marriage [§ 130, sub-§ (4)].

See notes to § 127, sub-§ (1).

The word rikhta (property) is perhaps more appropriate to be applied to the property of a maiden than the word stridhana.

138. Property acquired during widowhood.—It follows from what has been stated in the preceding sections, that all property of a widow acquired

---

(a) Luchman v. Kalli Churn (1873) 19 W.R. 292 [P.C.]: Venkata v. Venkata (1880) 2 Mad. 333 [P.C.] affirming Venkata v. Venkata (1877) 1 Mad. 281; Nellaikumaru v. Marakathammal (1876) 1 Mad. 166; Subramanian v. Arunachelam (1905) 28 Mad. 1.

(b) Sri Ram v. Jagdamba (1921) 43 All. 374, 61 I.C. 3, ('21) A.A. 11 [F.B.].

(c) Mahna Singh v. Thaman Singh (1931) 11 Lah. 393, 128 I.C. 293, ('30) A.L. 1010.

(d) Ayiswaryanandaji v. Sivaji (1926) 49 Mad. 116, ('26) A.M. 84.

(e) Hukum Chand v. Sital Prasad (1928) 50 All. 232, 107 I.C. 244, ('28) A.A. 52.

by her during widowhood (whether by way of gift or bequest from relations or from strangers, or by mechanical arts, or by way of maintenance, or by adverse possession, or under a compromise), constitutes her stridhana except—

(i) according to the Bombay school, property inherited by her as a widow, mother, grandmother, etc.; and, according to other schools, all property inherited by her in any capacity [§ 130]; and

(ii) property obtained by her on partition [§ 128].

See § 127 and notes thereto, and also §§ 129, 131, 132 and 133.

139. Unchastity.—Unchastity does not disqualify a woman from inheriting stridhana property (f).

140. Presumption as to property found in widow's possession.—Where a widow is found in possession of property of the acquisition of which no account is given, then the mere fact that her husband died possessed of considerable property raises no presumption that the property found in her possession was originally that of her husband (g). Nor is there any presumption that the money with which a widow in possession of her husband's estate makes a purchase of property came out of the savings from her husband's estate (h). Generally where a woman has been in possession of property, there is no presumption that she had only a limited estate in it (i).

IV.—RIGHTS OF A WOMAN OVER HER STRIDHANA

141. Texts bearing on the subject.—The whole law relating to the rights of women over their stridhana has been evolved from the following four texts, of which the first three are the texts of Katyayana, and the last is the text of Narada:

(1) "What a woman, either after marriage or before it, either in the mansion of her husband or of her father, receives from her lord or her parents is called saudayika, that is, a gift from affectionate kindred; and such a gift having by them been presented through kindness, that the woman possessing it may live well, is declared by law to be her absolute property. The absolute exclusive dominion of women over such a gift is perpetually celebrated; and they have power to sell or give it away as they please, even though it consists of lands and houses. Neither the husband, nor the son, nor the father, nor the brother, has power to use or to alienate the legal property of a woman."—Katyayana [Colebrooke's Digest, Book V, p. 475].

(2) "The wealth which is earned by mechanical arts or which is received through affection from a stranger is subject to her husband's dominion."—Katyayana [cited in the Dayabhaga, chap. 4, sec. 1, para. 19].

(3) "What a woman has received as a gift from her husband she may dispose of at pleasure after his death, if it be movable; but as long as he lives, let her preserve it with frugality or she may commit it to his family."—Katyayana [Colebrooke's Digest, Book V, p. 477].

(4) "Property given to her by her husband through pure affection she may enjoy at her pleasure after his death, or may give it away except land or houses."—Narada [Colebrooke's Digest, Book V, p. 476].

---

(f) Mst. Ganga v. Ghasita (1875) 1 All. 46; Nogendra v. Benoy Krishna (1903) 30 Cal. 521; Angammal v. Venkata (1903) 26 Mad. 509.

(g) Diwan Ram Bijai v. Indrapal (1899) 26 Cal. 871, 26 I.A. 226; Ganpat v. Secretary of State (1921) 45 Bom. 1106, 62 I.C. 109 ('21) A.B. 138; Narayana v. Krishna (1885) 8 Mad. 214; Chowdrani v. Tariny Kanth (1882) 8 Cal. 545.

(h) Baikunth Nath v. Jai Kishun (1929) 51 All. 341, 113 I.C. 266, ('29) A.A. 449.

(i) Balo v. Parbati (1940) All. 371, 190 I.C. 634, ('40) A.A. 385.

It follows from the above texts—

(i) that during maidenhood, a Hindu female can dispose of her stridhana of every description at her pleasure;

(ii) that during coverture, she can dispose of only that kind of stridhana which is called saudayika, that is, gifts from relations except those made by the husband;

(iii) that during widowhood, she can dispose of her stridhana of every description at her pleasure including movable property given by the husband, but not immovable property given by him.

When we turn to judicial decisions on the subject, we find that the distinction between saudayika, that is gifts from relations, and non-saudayika is still maintained, but the distinction between saudayika given by the husband and that given by other relations no longer stands. Instead we have now a simple rule for all kinds of saudayika based upon the distinction between an absolute grant and a limited grant. In order to determine whether saudayika, that is property given to a female by her relations, can be disposed of by her at her pleasure, the rule now adopted by our Courts is to ascertain whether the gift passes an absolute estate or a limited estate. If the gift passes an absolute estate, she can dispose of the property at her pleasure whether the gift be from her husband or other relations. But if the gift passes a limited estate only in the property, e.g., a life-estate, she cannot alienate the property though she may alienate her life-estate. Thus if A gives property to his daughter for life, and the remainder to his nephew on the death of his daughter, the daughter takes only a life-estate. She cannot therefore alienate the corpus of the property, though she may alienate her life interest. We now proceed to state the rules on the subject, so far as they are settled by judicial decisions.

142. Rights over stridhana during maidenhood.—There is no limitation to the power of a Hindu female to dispose of her stridhana during maidenhood, whatever be the character of the stridhana, qualification attaching except the disqualification to her by reason of minority.

So long as a Hindu maiden is a minor, she cannot alienate her property except through her guardian, nor can she dispose of it by will.

Note that the texts cited in § 141 refer only to the case of a married woman.

143. Rights over stridhana during coverture—Saudayika and non-saudayika.—The power of a woman to dispose of her stridhana during coverture depends on the character of the stridhana. For this purpose stridhana is divided into two classes, namely, (1) saudayika, and (2) other kinds of stridhana. Saudayika means, literally, a gift made through affection. It is a term applied to gifts made to a woman at, before, or after marriage, by her parents and their relations, or by her husband and his relations; in other words it means gifts from relations as distinguished from gifts from strangers (j). It also includes bequests from relations (k).

Saudayika alienable at pleasure.—A woman has absolute power of disposal over her saudayika stridhana even during coverture. She may dispose of it by sale, gift, will, or in any other way she pleases, without the consent of her husband (l). Her husband has no control over it. He cannot bind her by any dealings with it (m). But he can "take" it in case of distress, as in a famine, or during illness or imprisonment. This right to

---

(j) Muthukaruppa v. Sellathammal (1916) 39 Mad. 298, 26 I.C. 785, ('15) A.M. 475; Bhau v. Raghunath (1906) 30 Bom. 229; Rajamma v. Varadarajulu ('57) A.M. 198.

(k) Damodar v. Parmanandas (1883) 7 Bom. 155 [bequest from husband]; Judoo Nath v. Bussunt Coomar (1873) 11 Beng. L.R. 286, 295 [bequest from father].

(l) Venkata v. Venkata (1880) 2 Mad. 333 [P.C.] [affirming Venkata v. Venkata (1877) 1 Mad. 281] [gifts of moveables from husband]; Munia v. Puran (1883) 5 All. 310 [immoveable property acquired from brother]; Bhau v. Raghunath (1906) 30 Bom. 229; Sham Shivendar v. Janki Koer (1909) 36 Cal. 311, 36 I.A. 1; Emperor v. Sat Narain (1931) 53 All. 437, 130 I.C. 693, ('31) A.A. 265; Venkaraddi v. Hanmantgowda (1933) 57 Bom. 85, 141 I.C. 682, ('32) A.B. 559; Rajamma v. Varadarajulu ('57) A.M. 198; Hanmant v. Rango ('61) A. Mys. 206 [decree for arrears of maintenance].

(m) Mohima Chunder v. Durga Monee (1875) 23 W.R. 184 [P.C.]

take the wife's property is personal to him, and if he does not choose to take it, it cannot be taken by his creditors in execution of a decree against him (n). The word "take" in the text of Yajnavalkya does not mean "physical taking," but means "taking and using." Hence if the husband takes his wife's property in circumstances such as the above, but does not actually use it or dispose of it in his lifetime, his creditors are not entitled to it after his death (o).

Property inherited by a married daughter from her parents is her "Saudayika" stridhana, and she can dispose it of in any way she likes even during coverture, and no consent of her husband is necessary to validate any act of alienation (p). The contrary view taken in Bhau v. Raghunath (q) is no longer good law.

Stridhana other than saudayika.—Saudayika stridhana, we have seen, can be disposed of by a woman at her pleasure and without the consent of her husband. As regards stridhana other than saudayika, at times referred to as non-saudayika stridhana, e.g., gifts from strangers, property acquired by mechanical arts, etc., the rule is that she has no power to dispose of it during coverture without the consent of her husband (q). It is subject to her husband's dominion, and he is entitled to use it at his pleasure even if there be no distress. In a case where, though the wife was not living with the husband for 20 or 25 years, she was living in a separate room in a temple and the husband lived in the same temple it was held that she was under coverture and the rule was applied (r). The rule was, however, not applied where the husband and wife had drifted apart and the wife was not under the control of the husband (*r*1). The non-saudayika stridhana referred to above is subject only to her husband's control and not to the control of any other person. After the husband's death, her power to dispose of it becomes absolute, and she may dispose of it by act inter vivos or by will.

When it is said that stridhana other than saudayika (gifts from relations), cannot be disposed of by a woman without her husband's consent, it is meant that in her lifetime she cannot sell it, or make a gift of it, or bequeath it by her will, or otherwise deal with it without her husband's consent. On her death whether she dies before (s) or after her husband, it passes to her stridhana heirs.

144. Rights over stridhana during widowhood.—A Hindu female has during widowhood absolute power of disposal over every kind of stridhana, whether acquired, before or after her husband's death (t).

V.—SUCCESSION TO STRIDHANA

145. Succession to maiden's property.—Succession to a woman's stridhana varies according as she was married or unmarried, and according as she was married in an approved or in an unapproved form. It also varies according to the source from which the stridhana came. The rules of descent, again, are different in different schools. But the schools do not differ as to succession to the property of a maiden (u). A maiden's property, according to all the schools, passes in the following order:—

(1) uterine brother;
(2) mother;
(3) father;

---

(n) Tukaram v. Gunaji (1871) 8 Bom. H.C.A.C. 129.

(o) Nammalwar v. Thayarammal (1927) 50 Mad. 941, 105 I.C. 793, ('27) A.M. 1031.

(p) Gajanan v. Pandurang (1950) Bom. 386, 52 Bom. L.R. 238, (1950) A.B. 178 (F.B.). [This was the view taken by Sen J. in Dhondrappa v. Kasabai (1948) Nag. 936].

(q) (1906) 30 Bom. 229. See Salemma v. Lutchmana (1898) 21 Mad. 100, 105.

(r) Sarubai Balakdas v. Narayandas Bairagi (1943) Bom. 314, 209 I.C. 620, ('43) A.B. 224.

(*r*1) Shantabai v. Ramchandra ('60) A.B. 408, (1959) Bom. 1120, 61 Bom. L.R. 627; Bhagwanlal v. Divali ('25) A.B. 445.

(s) Salamma v. Lutchmana (1898) 21 Mad. 100; Banerjee's "Hindu Law of Marriage and Stridhana", 5th ed., pp. 382-383 [as to gifts from strangers and property acquired by mechanical arts].

(t) Brij Indar v. Janki Koer (1877) 1 Cal. L.R. 318, 325, 5 I.A. 1, 15; Venkata v. Venkata (1877) 1 Mad. 281, 286.

(u) Annagouda v. Court of Wards (1952) S.C.R. 208, 54 Bom. L.R. 395, ('52) A.SC. 60.

(4) father's heirs in order of propinquity (v); e.g., the full sisters of maiden's father were preferred to the half sisters (w);

(5) kinsmen of the deceased herself, that is, her mother's heirs in order of propinquity (v).

Death of girl after betrothal and presents received from bridegroom.—Where a girl dies after betrothal, all presents received from the bridegroom are to be returned to him, after deducting all expenses incurred by the bride or her parent or guardian. Similarly presents received by the bridegroom must be returned (x).

The order of succession down to no. 3 (father) is based upon a text of Baudhyayana which is followed by all the schools. The line of descent is not carried any further in that text. The Viramitrodaya of the Benares school, after citing the said text adds: "On failure of the mother and the father, it goes to their nearest relations." This has been interpreted by the High Court of Bombay to mean that it goes, first, to the father's sapindas, and then to the kinsmen of the deceased herself, that is, to the mother's sapindas. Thus where a maiden died leaving her father's mother's sister and her mother's mother, it was held by the High Court of Bombay that the former being a sapinda of the father, was entitled to succeed in preference to the latter who was a sapinda of the mother (y). It has similarly been held by the High Court of Madras that a step-mother (father's wife) is entitled to succeed in preference to a mother's sister (z).

Father's heirs in order of propinquity.—In the Bombay State a father's sister is entitled to succeed to a maiden's stridhana in preference to the father's male gotraja sapindas five or six degrees removed (a); see § 56 and § 74. But in Madras a sister is a bandhu [§ 56]; hence in that State, the father's male gotraja sapindas, e.g., his paternal uncle's son, would be preferred to his sister (b).

Under the Mitakshara law as applied by the High Court of Calcutta, a sister (father's daughter) and a sister's son (father's daughter's son) are entitled to succeed to a maiden's stridhana in preference to a father's brother's son (c).

It has been held by the Privy Council (d) that as under the Mitakshara law the stridhana property of a maiden dying without leaving uterine brothers or parents goes to her father's heirs in the order laid down for succession to the property of a male, a Sagotra Sapinda of the father within seven degrees is to be preferred to a nearer Bhinnagotra Sapinda.

146. Succession to shulka.—(1) The term shulka is differently interpreted in different schools [see §§ 147, 150, 152, 153 and 154]. According to the Benares, Bombay, Madras and Mithila schools, shulka passes in the following order:—

1. uterine brother;
2. mother;

   in default of these, it is conceived that it passes to—

3. father;
4. father's heirs, that is, his sapindas, samanodakas and bandhus.

(2) According to the Dayabhaga, shulka passes in the following order:—

---

(v) Annagouda v. Court of Wards (1952) S.C.R. 208 (paternal uncle's son in preference to sister's sons); Janglubai v. Jetha (1908) 32 Bom. 409, 413; Shamarao v. Raghunandan (1939) Bom. 228, ('39) A.B. 194.

(w) Shakuntalabai v. The Court of Wards (1942) Nag. 629, 199 I.C. 379, ('42) A.N. 57.

(x) Kunwar Rajendra Bahadur Singh v. Kunwar Roshan Singh, I.L.R. (1952) 2 All. 681.

(y) (1908) 32 Bom. 409, supra.

(z) Kamala v. Bhagirathi (1915) 38 Mad. 45, 16 I.C. 939, ('16) A.M. 925.

(a) Tukaram v. Narayan (1912) 36 Bom. 339, 14 I.C. 438 [F.B.].

(b) Sundaram v. Ramasamia (1920) 43 Mad. 32, 52 I.C. 821, ('20) A.M. 728.

(c) Dwarka Nath v. Sarat Chandra (1912) 39 Cal. 319, 11 I.C. 872.

(d) Chhaterpati v. Lachmidhar, 25 Pat. 649 (P.C.), (1946) A.PC. 189, 51 C.W.N. 121, 73 I.A. 231.

1. whole brother;
2. mother;
3. father;
4. husband.

A.—SUCCESSION TO STRIDHANA ACCORDING TO THE MITAKSHARA

147. Succession to stridhana according to the Mitakshara.—For the purposes of succession, the Mitakshara divides stridhana [§ 115] into two classes, namely—

(1) shulka, which is defined as a gratuity for which a girl is given in marriage; and

(2) other kinds of stridhana.

(1) Shulka.—Shulka devolves in the order mentioned in § 146, sub-§ (1).

(2) Other kinds of stridhana.—Stridhana other than shulka passes in the following order:—

1. unmarried daughter;

She takes before married daughter. The rule applies to Jains in the absence of a special custom (e).

2. married daughter who is unprovided for (f);
3. married daughter who is provided for (g);
4. daughter's daughter (h);
5. daughter's son (h);
6. son (i);
7. son's son (j).

If there be none of these, in other words, if the woman dies without leaving any issue, her stridhana, if she was married in an approved form (k), goes to her husband (l), and, after him, to the husband's heirs in order of their succession to him (m) [see note (1) below]; on failure of the husband's heirs, it goes to her blood relations in preference to the Government (n).

---

(e) Jaiwanti v. Anandi Devi (1938) All. 196, 173 I.C. 356, ('38) A.A. 62.

(f) Srimati Wooma Daee v. Gokoolanund (1878) 3 Cal. 587, 5 I.A. 40; Kammathi v. Padmavathi ('52) A. Tra.-Co. 501. Also see cases cited under § 43, No. 5, note (t) at p. 113, supra. Also see Sarala Bala v. Banamali ('64) A. Orissa 140.

(g) See Totawa v. Basawa (1899) 23 Bom. 229.

(h) Matru Mal v. Mehri Kunwar (1940) All. 416, 189 I.C. 600, ('40) A.A. 311; Subramanian v. Arunachelam (1905) 28 Mad. 1 [daughter's daughter takes before daughter's son]; Amarjit v. Algu (1929) 51 All. 478, 113 I.C. 765, ('29) A.A. 71.

(i) Karuppai v. Sankaranarayanan (1904) 27 Mad. 300 [two or more sons take as tenants in common].

(j) Sham Bihari Lal v. Ram Kali (1923) 45 All. 715, 75 I.C. 495, ('24) A.A. 15 [daughter's daughter is a nearer heir than son's son]; Ram Kali v. Gopal Dei (1952) 48 All. 648, 96 I.C. 757, ('26) A.A. 557 [ditto]; Hukum Chand v. Sital Prasad (1928) 50 All. 232, 107 I.C. 244, ('28) A.A. 52 [ditto].

(k) Gurdial v. Bhagwan Devi (1927) 8 Lah. 366, 101 I.C. 850, ('27) A.L. 441.

(l) Bhimacharya v. Ramacharya (1909) 33 Bom. 452, 3 I.C. 750 [husband takes before his son by another wife].

(m) Bai Kesserbai v. Hunsraj (1906) 30 Bom. 431, 451, 33 I.A. 176; Javitri v. Gendan Singh (1927) 49 All. 779, 102 I.C. 167, ('27) A.A. 767; Jodha v. Darbari Lal (1927) 2 Luck. 612, 104 I.C. 193, ('27) A.O. 339; Srimati Krishna v. Bhaiya Rajendra (1927) 2 Luck. 43, 89-90, 104 I.C. 155, ('27) A.O. 240.

(n) Kanakammal v. Ananthamathi (1914) 37 Mad. 293, 25 I.C. 901, ('15) A.M. 18; Ganpat v. Secretary of State (1921) 45 Bom. 1106, 62 I.C. 109. ('21) A.B. 138.

But if she was married in an unapproved form (o) it goes to her mother, then to her father, and then to the father's heirs (p) [see note (2)], and then to the husband's heirs in preference to the Government (q).

In a recent decision the Supreme Court referred to § 147 (2) above and expressed the view that the daughters of a predeceased son of a Hindu woman married in approved form is not entitled to succeed to her stridhan other than shulka in preference to the son of the brother of her deceased husband (*q*1).

There was conflict of decisions on whether in determining the heirs of the father or the husband for the purpose of ascertaining the stridhana heirs of a woman reference is to be made to the provisions of the Hindu Law of Inheritance Act (Act II of 1929) or the heirs are to be ascertained in accordance with the ordinary rules of Hindu law. The High Courts of Lahore (r), Allahabad (s) and Bombay (t) held that the determination should be according to the Hindu Law of Inheritance Act if the succession opened out after the Act was passed. The Madras High Court (u) held that the Hindu Law of Inheritance Act was applicable only to the property of males. The High Courts of Nagpur and Patna also took the Madras view (v). This view has now been confirmed by the Supreme Court (w).

Inherited property.—Property inherited by a female can be stridhana only in the Bombay school, and that too in the cases specified in § 130, sub-§ (3). How does this kind of stridhana devolve in Bombay? The answer is that if the case is governed by the Mitakshara, it devolves in the order given in sub-§ (2) above, and if it is governed by the Mayukha, it devolves in the order given in § 151, clause II. See §§ 170-171.

1. Husband and his heirs.—Where the marriage is in an approved form, the stridhana goes, in default of issue, to the husband and his heirs, that is to say, it descends in the same way as if it had belonged to the husband himself. The husband's heirs are not enumerated in the Mitakshara. They may, however, be ascertained from § 43 above. Following the lines of the order there given, the successive heirs to a woman's stridhana, after the husband would be (x):

1. his (husband's) son by another wife (y), i.e., the deceased woman's step-son;

Note.—The illegitimate son is not entitled to succeed to the stridhana of his father's wife (z);

2. his grandson by another wife (a);
3. his great-grandson by another wife;
4. his other wives (b);
5. his daughter by another wife, i.e., the deceased woman's step-daughter (c);

---

(o) Janglubai v. Jetha (1908) 32 Bom. 409, 412, 413.

(p) Raju v. Ammani (1906) 29 Mad. 358 [sister as father's daughter takes before sister's son]; Chunilal v. Surajram (1909) 33 Bom. 433, 3 I.C. 765; Govind v. Savitri (1919) 43 Bom. 173, 47 I.C. 883, ('18) A.B. 93 [sister before paternal uncle].

(q) Chandulal Asharam v. Bai Kashi (1939) Bom. 97.

(*q*1) Shamlal v. Amar Nath ('70) A.S.C. 1643.

(r) Mt. Charjo v. Dina Nath ('37) A.L. 196.

(s) Indrapal v. Mst. Humangi (1949) All. 816.

(t) Shamrao v. Raghunandan (1939) Bom. 228.

(u) Mahalakshmamma v. Surya Narayana (1947) Mad. 23; Kuppuswami v. Manickasari (1950) A.M. 196.

(v) Shakuntalabai v. Court of Ward (1942) Nag. 629; Taluk Raj v. Bacha, 26 Pat. 150.

(w) Annagouda v. The Court of Wards (1952) S.C.R. 208.

(x) Krishnaswami Chettiar v. S. S. Chettiar I.L.R. (1956) Mad. 324, ('55) A.M. 702, 704, 705 (The doctrine of representation has no application to stridhana succession).

(y) (1909) 33 Bom. 452, 3 I.C. 750, supra (step son takes after the husband).

(z) Ayiswaryanandaji v. Sivaji (1926) 49 Mad. 116, 92 I.C. 928, ('26) A.M. 84.

(a) Gojabai v. Shrimant Shahajirao (1893) 17 Bom. 114.

(b) Krishnai v. Shripati (1906) 30 Bom. 333 affirming co-widow's right to succeed; Kesserbai v. Hunsraj (1906) 30 Bom. 431, 33 I.A. 176 (co-widow takes before husband's brother and his nephew).

(c) Nanja v. Sivabagyathachi (1913) 36 Mad. 116, 12 I.C. 128 (co-wife's daughter before father's brother's son).

6. the son of his daughter by another wife, that is, step-daughter's son;
7. his mother;
8. his father;

} but in cases governed by the Mayukha } 7. father; 8. mother;

9. his brother (d); but in cases governed by the Mayukha, the full brother succeeds along with sons of full brothers who are dead, see § 77 and notes to No. 9 at p. 150 supra.
10. his brother's son;

then his other sapindas, then his samanodakas, and then his bandhus (e).

According to the Bombay school, the widows of gotraja sapindas would also be heirs [§ 68].

2. Father and his heirs.—When the marriage is in an unapproved form, the stridhana goes, in default of issue, not to the husband and his heirs, but to the mother, father, and father's heirs, as in the case of stridhana belonging to a maiden [§ 145]. The reason is that a woman married in an unapproved form is deemed to continue to belong to her father's family, because in such a marriage there is no giving away of the bride by the father to the bridegroom (f). The successive heirs after the father would be the deceased woman's brother, brother's son, step-mother (g), sister, sister's son, grandmother, paternal uncle, and her father's other sapindas, samanodakas and bandhus.

3. Presumption as to form of marriage.—When the question arises as to whether a marriage was in an approved or in an unapproved form, the presumption is that it was in an approved form, unless the contrary is proved (h).

4. Preference of female issue to male issue.—As regards succession to stridhana it should be noted that according to the Mitakshara it goes to the female issue of the deceased woman in preference to the male issue; see sub-§ (2).

5. Issue born of a woman by adulterous intercourse.—It has been seen that where a woman dies leaving a husband and a son, the son is entitled to succeed to her stridhana in preference to the husband. The reason is that the issue of a woman is entitled to succeed to her stridhana before the husband. But issue means issue born in lawful wedlock. Therefore, if a woman dies leaving a husband and a son born of her by adulterous intercourse the husband is entitled to succeed to her stridhana in preference to the son (i). See § 163.

6. Married and unmarried daughter's daughter.—There is no distinction between married and unmarried daughter's daughters as there is in the case of daughters (j).

B.—SUCCESSION TO STRIDHANA—BENARES SCHOOL

148. Succession to stridhana—Benares school.—Succession to stridhana according to the Benares school is governed entirely by the law as expounded in the Mitakshara and set forth in § 147 above.

C.—SUCCESSION TO STRIDHANA—BOMBAY SCHOOL

149. Succession to stridhana—Bombay school.—The Mayukha is of paramount authority in the island of Bombay, Gujarat and the Northern Konkan. In other parts of Bombay State the authority of the Mitakshara is supreme [§ 12]. The result is that in cases governed by the Mitakshara succession to stridhana is governed by the rules laid down in the Mitakshara [§ 147], while in cases governed by the Mayukha, it is governed by the rules laid down in the Mayukha and set forth in the next two sections.

---

(d) Parmappa v. Shiddappa (1906) 30 Bom. 607 (full brother takes before half-brother). See note (b) above.

(e) Ganeshi Lal v. Ajudhia Prasad (1906) 28 All. 345 (husband's sister's son takes before the deceased woman's sister's son).

(f) Janglubai v. Jetha (1908) 32 Bom. 409, 413.

(g) Dubhin Parbati Kuer v. Baijnath Prasad (1935) 14 Pat. 518.

(h) Jagannath v. Runjit Singh (1898) 25 Cal. 354; Bijay Lal v. Bhubaneswar ('63) A.C. 18; Authikesavulu v. Ramanujam (1909) 32 Mad. 512, 3 I.C. 541; Chuni Lal v. Surajram (1909) 33 Bom. 433, 3 I.C. 765; Jagannath v. Narayan (1910) 34 Bom. 553, 7 I.C. 459 [even among Sudras belonging to a respectable family].

(i) (1910) 34 Bom. 553, 7 I.C. 459, supra.

(j) Ram Kali v. Gopal Dei (1926) 48 All. 648, 96 I.C. 757, ('26) A.A. 557.

150. Classification of stridhana—Mayukha Law.—For the purposes of succession the Mayukha divides stridhana into two classes, namely:—

(i) technical or proper; and

(ii) non-technical or improper.

(i) Technical stridhana is confined to gifts and bequests from relations made at any time, and gifts from strangers made before the nuptial fire or at the bridal procession [§ 113]. It is sub-divided, for the purposes of succession, into four classes, namely:—

(1) shulka, which is defined as property given as the equivalent of household utensils, of beasts of burden, of milch cattle, or ornaments;

(2) yautaka, that is gifts made to a woman at the time of her marriage, whilst seated with her husband on one seat, the word being derived from yuta, that is, 'joined together';

(3) bhartridatta, that is property given or bequeathed to a woman by her husband; and anwadeyaka, that is property given or bequeathed to a woman subsequent to her marriage by her relations or by her husband's relations (l); and

(4) other kinds of technical stridhana [§§ 116 and 126].

(ii) Non-technical stridhana includes property inherited by a woman (m) in cases where she takes such property as stridhana [§ 130], the earnings of a woman, the maintenance (if any) fixed for her (n), property given or bequeathed to her by strangers (o) excepting that given before the nuptial fire and at the bridal procession and other kinds of property not included in technical stridhana.

151. Succession to stridhana—Mayukha Law.—The Mayukha prescribes different lines of descent for the four classes of technical stridhana [§ 150], and a further different line of descent for non-technical stridhana, in all five different lines.

I. Succession to technical stridhana—

(1) Shulka [§ 150(1)] devolves in the order mentioned in § 146, sub-§ (1).

(2) Yautaka [§ 150(2)] goes to unmarried daughters (p).

But what if there be no unmarried daughters? Is it to go at once to the relations named in cl. III below? It is suggested by an eminent writer that it should go in default of unmarried daughters, to married daughters and their issue as under the Mitakshara [see § 147], and, if there be none of these, then to the relations specified in cl. III of this section. See Banerjee's "Hindu Law of Marriage and Stridhana," 5th ed., p. 402.

(3) Bhartridatta [gift or bequest from husband], and Anwadheyaka [gift from relations subsequent to marriage], pass in the following order (q):—

(1) sons and unmarried daughters, taking together in equal shares (r); failing unmarried daughters,

(2) sons and married daughters, taking together in equal shares; failing sons and daughters,

(3) daughters' issue, that is, daughters' daughters and daughters' sons [§ 160]; next,

(4) son's sons [§ 160];

(5) failing these, the persons mentioned in cl. III below.

(4) Other kinds of technical stridhana (§§ 116 and 126) pass in the following order:—

(1) unmarried daughters;

(2) married daughters who are unprovided for;

---

(l) See Gopal Chandra v. Ram Chandra (1901) 28 Cal. 311; Ram Gopal v. Narain (1906) 33 Cal. 315; Basanta v. Kamikshya (1906) 33 Cal. 23, 32 I.A. 181. All these are Dayabhaga cases.

(m) Vijiarangam v. Lakshuman (1871) 8 Bom. H.C.O.C. 244.

(n) Manilal v. Bai Rewa (1893) 17 Bom. 758.

(o) Bai Narmada v. Bhagwantrai (1888) 12 Bom. 505.

(p) Ashabai v. Haji Tyeb (1885) 9 Bom. 115, 126.

(q) 9 Bom. 115, 126, supra.

(r) Dayaldas v. Savitri Bai (1910) 34 Bom. 385, 6 I.C. 533.

(3) married daughters who are provided for;
(4) daughters' issue, that is, daughters' daughters and daughter's sons [§ 160];
(5) sons;
(6) sons' sons [§ 160];
(7) failing these, the persons mentioned in cl. III below.

II. Succession to non-technical stridhana—

Non-technical stridhana, that is, stridhana other than the four kinds of stridhana mentioned above [§ 150], passes in the following order (s):—

(1) sons;
(2) sons' sons [§ 160];
(3) sons' sons' sons;
(4) daughters;
(5) daughters' sons [§ 160];
(6) daughters' daughters [§ 160];
(7) failing these, the persons mentioned in cl. III below.

Property inherited by a female can be stridhana only in the Bombay school, and that too only in the cases specified in § 130, sub-§ 3. Such property, in cases governed by the Mayukha, devolves as non-technical stridhana (t).

III. Succession to stridhana where no issue.—Where a woman dies without leaving any issue, her stridhana of every description (except sulka) goes, if her marriage took place in an approved form to her husband, and failing him, to her heirs in her husband's family, who, however, are no other than her husband's heirs [mentioned in note (1) to § 147 above]. But if the marriage took place in an unapproved form, it goes to her mother, then to her father, and then to her father's heirs (u) [§ 147, note (2)].

Non-technical stridhana.—The Mitakshara prescribes only one line of succession for all kinds of stridhana except sulka. The Mayukha draws a distinction between technical and non-technical stridhana. As to bhartridatta and anwadheyaka, it is to be observed that according to the Mayukha it goes to the male and female issue together; while non-technical stridhana goes, first to the male issue, and then to the female issue. The Mitakshara draws no such distinction. According to that authority non-technical stridhana, like technical, goes first to the female issue (v). In a Bombay case (w), under the Mitakshara, where a woman, married in an approved form, succeeded to her mother's Stridhana property and then died without leaving any descendants or any heir in her husband's family but leaving a brother and a sister it was held that (1) the property should go to her father's heirs and (2) that the brother and sister took equally. The first part of the decision is correct, but it is submitted that the second part is not and the learned Judge ought to have held that the brother took in preference to the sister.

Where the woman dies childless.—It will be observed on comparing § 147(2) with cl. iii of this section that when a woman dies childless, and the marriage was in an approved form, her Stridhana according to the Mitakshara goes to her husband's heirs while under the Mayukha it goes to her heirs in her husband's family. Notwithstanding this seeming dissimilarity between the language of the Mitakshara and the Mayukha, the heirs both under the Mitakshara and the Mayukha are the same (x). The reason is that a woman's heirs in her husband's family are no other than her husband's heirs. These are enumerated in note (1) to § 147 above.

How is it that a woman's heirs in her husband's family are the same as her husband's heirs? The reason is that it is a leading doctrine of the Mitakshara school that a wife becomes on marriage the sapinda of the husband, and her individuality is merged in him. The wife, by her marriage is born again in the husband's family, and becomes half the

---

(s) Manilal v. Bai Rewa (1893) 17 Bom. 758; Bai Raman v. Jagjivan Das (1917) 41 Bom. 618, 41 I.C. 277, ('17) A.B. 229 [sons take before grandson].

(t) (1893) 17 Bom. 758, 768, supra.

(u) See Kesserbai v. Hunsraj (1906) 30 Bom. 431, 451, 33 I.A. 176, 197; Laxman v. Gangabai ('55) A. Madh. Bha. 138, 142.

(v) Jankibai v. Sundra (1890) 14 Bom. 612; Gulappa v. Tavawa (1907) 31 Bom. 453.

(w) Vithal Tukaram v. Balu Bapu (1936) 60 Bom. 671, 38 Bom. L.R. 520, 164 I.C. 268, ('36) A.B. 283.

(x) Vijiarangam v. Lakshuman (1871) 8 Bom. H.C.O.C.J. 244. See particularly remarks of West, J., at p. 257 et seq. where he compares both the Mitakshara and the Mayukha law bearing on the subject of Stridhana.

body of the husband. It is by virtue of the doctrine that the husband's sapindas become the sapindas of his wife. The wife's sapindas, however, in her father's family do not become the husband's sapindas. The reason for this lies in the wife's subordinate position and dependence (y).

D.—SUCCESSION TO STRIDHANA—MADRAS SCHOOL

152. Succession to stridhana—Madras school.—We propose, first, to state the rules of succession given in the Smriti Chandrika (*y*1), and then to consider which of them have been rejected by the High Court of Madras. We select the Smriti Chandrika, for though by no means exhaustive on the question of succession to stridhana, it is more comprehensive than the other commentaries.

The Smriti Chandrika recognizes technical stridhana only, in other words it confines stridhana to gifts from relations made at any time, and gifts from strangers if made before the nuptial fire or at the bridal procession [§ 118]. It does not recognize non-technical stridhana.

Like the Mayukha the Smriti Chandrika divides stridhana, that is technical stridhana, into four classes, namely:—

(1) shulka;
(2) yautaka;
(3) bhartridatta and anwadheyaka; and
(4) other kinds of technical stridhana.

Shulka is defined as wealth received as "the price of household utensils, of beasts of burden, of milch cattle, or ornaments." Yautaka, bhartridatta and anwadheyaka, have already been defined in § 150.

(i) Shulka, devolves in the order mentioned in § 146, sub-§ (1).
(ii) Yautaka passes to—
  (1) unmarried daughters; and then to
  (2) sons.
(iii) Bhartridatta and anwadheyaka pass to sons and daughters, all inheriting together in equal shares. Daughters include maiden daughters and married daughters whose husbands are alive, but not widowed daughters.
(iv) Other kinds of technical stridhana pass in the following order—
  (1) maiden daughters and married daughters (z), who are not provided for, all taking in equal shares;
  (2) married daughters who are provided for;
  (3) daughters' daughters [§ 160];
  (4) daughters' sons [§ 160];
  (5) sons;
  (6) sons' sons [§ 160].

If the woman dies without leaving issue, her stridhana of all descriptions (except shulka) passes, if she was married in an approved form, to her husband, and if she was married in an unapproved form, to her mother, and then to her father. There is no provision in the Smriti Chandrika for the case in which there is a failure of husband or mother and father. But the Parashara Madhaviya cites a text of Brihaspati which is supposed to give a right of succession to certain relations named therein, immediately after the husband or father as the case may be [see § 153].

As to yautaka, bhartridatta, and anwadheyaka, it will be observed that the Smriti Chandrika makes no provision for the case in which there is a failure of sons and daughters.

---

(y) Janglubai v. Jetha (1907) 32 Bom. 409, 413; Gojabai v. Shrimant Shahajirao (1893) 17 Bom. 114, 118.

(*y*1) See Introduction pp. 54-55 supra.

(z) Rajamma v. Padmavatamma (1952) Mad. 668, ('51) A.M. 1047.

Having noted the order of succession according to the Smriti Chandrika we proceed to consider the judicial decisions on the subject. Before doing so, however, it may be as well as to remember that according to the Mitakshara stridhana of every description (excepting shulka) goes, first, to daughters, then to daughters' children, and it is only on failure of these that it goes to sons.

1. Yautaka, that is, gifts made at the time of marriage.—There is no recent decision as to succession to yautaka.

2. Bhartridatta, that is, gift or bequests from the husband, and anwadheyaka, that is, gifts from relations made after marriage.—These two kinds of stridhana pass, according to the Smriti Chandrika, to sons and daughters jointly, but according to the Mitakshara they pass to daughters in the first instance. The Madras High Court has preferred the order of succession given in the Mitakshara (a).

3. As to the text of Brihaspati referred to above, the Madras High Court has refused to give effect to it on the ground that it is differently interpreted in the said four commentaries, and it has held that where a woman dies without leaving issue, her stridhana devolves according to the Mitakshara (b) [§ 147].

4. The Smriti Chandrika does not recognize non-technical stridhana; therefore, there are no rules in that work for the descent of such stridhana. But the Madras High Court, following the Mitakshara, has recognized as stridhana certain kinds of property which come within the category of non-technical stridhana, namely property given to a woman for her maintenance (c) and gifts from strangers though made during coverture (d), and has held that they pass according to the Mitakshara.

E.—SUCCESSION TO STRIDHANA—MITHILA SCHOOL

153. Succession to stridhana—Mithila school.—The Vivada Chintamani, which is one of the leading authorities of the Mithila school, recognizes technical stridhana only; in other words, it confines stridhana to gifts from relations, and to gifts from strangers if made before the nuptial fire at the bridal procession. It does not recognize non-technical stridhana [§ 119]. For the purpose of succession, it divides stridhana into three classes, namely:—

(1) shulka, which is defined as property received by a woman at the time of her marriage, where the marriage has been celebrated in an unapproved form;

(2) yautaka, defined in § 150; and

(3) technical stridhana of other descriptions.

---

(a) Muthappudayan v. Ammani (1898) 21 Mad. 58 [gift from father after marriage]; Bhujanga v. Ramayamma (1884) 7 Mad. 387 [gift from husband of immoveable property].

(b) Raja v. Ammani (1906) 29 Mad. 358; Nanja v. Sivabagyathachi (1913) 36 Mad. 116, 12 I.C. 128.

(c) Subramanian v. Arunachelam (1905) 28 Mad. 1.

(d) Salemma v. Lutchmana (1898) 21 Mad. 100.

Shulka devolves in the order mentioned in § 146(1).

Yautaka passes to unmarried daughters. Failing these, it is conceived that it passes to married daughters, then to daughters' daughters, and then to daughters' sons, as in the Mitakshara (e).

Technical stridhana of other descriptions passes to sons and unmarried daughters, all taking together in equal shares. Failing these, it is conceived that it passes to sons and married daughters jointly, then to daughters' daughters, and then to daughters' son.

If the woman dies without leaving any issue, her stridhana (except shulka) devolves as under the Mitakshara [§ 147].

It has been so held by the High Court of Calcutta in a case from Mithila (f), though in a subsequent case (g) the same Court gave effect to a text of Brihaspati cited in the Vivada Ratnakara which is another leading authority of the Mithila school. The effect of that text is stated to be that if a woman married in an approved form dies without leaving any issue or husband, her stridhana does not go to the husband's heirs in the order of propinquity to him as under the Mitakshara, but to three special heirs named in the said text in preference to any other of the husband's heirs, namely the husband's sister's son, husband's brother's son, and husband's younger brother. If she is married in an unapproved form, and dies without leaving any issue or mother or father, her stridhana does not pass to her father's heirs in the order of propinquity to him as under the Mitakshara, but to the three special heirs named in the said text in preference to any other of the father's heirs, namely her sister's son, her brother's son, and her son-in-law. But it is not at all clear in what order the said three relations in each set are to take (h). The Patna High Court recently followed the earlier Calcutta case and dissented from the later case (i).

F.—SUCCESSION TO STRIDHANA—DAYABHAGA SCHOOL

154. Classification of stridhana.—Stridhana according to the Dayabhaga school [§ 120] may be divided, for the purposes of succession, into four classes, namely:—

(1) Shulka, that is, a present to induce the bride to go to her husband's house.

(2) Yautaka, that is, gifts made at the time of marriage. This term has been interpreted by the High Court of Calcutta as including not only gifts made before the nuptial fire [§ 113, sub-§(1)], but gifts made during the continuance of the marriage ceremonies (j), that is the ceremonies beginning with shraddha and ending with that of prostrating before the husband (k). It is conceived that it includes gifts from strangers made before the nuptial fire and at the bridal procession.

(3) Gifts and bequests from the father made after marriage. [Gifts made by relations subsequent to marriage are called anwadheyaka. The present class relates to anwadheyaka from father.]

(4) Ayautaka, that is, gifts and bequests from relations made before or after marriage. This class includes gifts and bequests from the father made

---

(e) Kamla Prasad v. Murli Manohar (1934) 13 Pat. 550, 152 I.C. 446, ('34) A.P. 398.

(f) Bachha v. Jugmon (1886) 12 Cal. 348.

(g) Mohun Pershad v. Kishen (1894) 21 Cal. 344.

(h) See Kesserbai v. Hunsraj (1906) 30 Bom. 431, 445-451, 33 I.A. 176, 190-197 where the text of Brihaspati is fully discussed.

(i) Kamla Prasad v. Murli Manohar (1934) 13 Pat. 550, 152 I.C. 446, ('34) A.P. 398.

(j) Bistoo Pershad v. Radha Soonder (1871) 16 W.R. 115.

(k) See Raghunandana's Dayattattwa, G. C. Sastri's Translation, chap. ix, 15.

before marriage, but not those made after marriage. The latter come under the third class. Gifts from the father at the time of marriage fall within the second class.

Shulka devolves in the order mentioned in § 145, sub-§ (2).

We proceed to state in the next three sections the order of succession to yautaka, anwadheyaka from the father, and ayautaka.

155. Succession to yautaka.—Yautaka [§ 154 (2)] passes in the following order:

(1) unbetrothed daughters;
(2) betrothed daughters;
(3) married daughters who have (l), or are likely to have, sons;
(4) barren married daughters and childless widowed daughters taking together in equal shares;
(5) sons;
(6) daughter's sons [§ 160];
(7) sons' sons [§ 160];
(8) sons' sons' sons;
(9) step-sons;
(10) step-sons' sons;
(11) step-sons' sons' sons.

If there be none of these, the succession depends upon the form of marriage. If the deceased was married in an approved form, the yautaka passes to the following heirs in succession, namely:—

(1) husband;
(2) brother;
(3) mother;
(4) father.

If she was married in an unapproved form, it passes in the following order, namely:

(1) mother;
(2) father;
(3) brother;
(4) husband;

if there be none of these, the successive heirs are—

(5) husband's younger brother;
(6) husband's brother's son;
(7) sister's son (m);
(8) husband's sister's son;
(9) brother's son;
(10) daughter's husband;

The heirs beginning with the husband's younger brother and ending with the daughter's husband are heirs mentioned in a text of Brihaspati, as to which see the observations of the Privy Council in Kesserbai v. Hunsraj (n), which was a case from the Bombay State governed by the Mayukha law. See § 153, last paragraph.

---

(l) The expression "married daughters who have a son," includes a "widowed daughter having a son," Charu Chunder v. Nobo Sunderi (1891) 18 Cal. 327.

(m) Sister's son includes step-sister's son; Dasharathi v. Bipin Behari (1905) 32 Cal. 261; Shashi Bhushan v. Rajendra Nath (1913) 40 Cal. 82, 15 I.C. 225 [step-sister's son excludes daughter's son of great-grandson of great-great-grandfather of deceased's husband].

(n) (1906) 30 Bom. 431, 441-452, 33 I.A. 176, 190-197.

(11) husband's sapindas, sakulyas and samanodakas;
(12) father's kinsmen.

156. Gifts and bequests from father after marriage.—Property given or bequeathed by the father after marriage passes in the same order as yautaka [§ 55], with this difference that—

(i) sons take before married daughters, and not after them as in the case of yautaka (o); and that

(ii) where the woman dies without leaving issue the four immediate heirs take, not in either of the two orders given in § 155 but in the following order, namely:

(1) brother (p);
(2) mother (q);
(3) father;
(4) husband.

In the case of Pritidatta Stridhana, Kanya or the maiden daughter is the successor in the 1st instance, under the Dayabhaga law; Kanya does not, however, mean or include a step-daughter and consequently in case of conflict between husband's brother and step-daughter the former succeeds (r).

157. Succession to ayautaka— Ayautaka [§ 154 (4)] passes in the following order:

(1) sons (s) and maiden (t) daughters (u), taking together in equal shares;
(2) married daughters who have, or are likely to have, sons;
(3) son's son [§ 160];
(4) daughters' sons [§ 160];

Daughter's son does not include step-daughter's son (v).

(5) barren married daughters and childless widowed daughters.

The above order is according to the Dayabhaga. The Dayakrama Sangraha places the (1) son's son's son, (2) step-son, (3) step-son's son, and (4) step-son's son's son before barren married and childless widowed daughters. But this enumeration being contradictory to that in Dayabhaga cannot be accepted. According to Dayabhaga, in first group of heirs to succeed to the Ayautaka property of a woman are her descendants and the co-wife's son does not come under this category; on failure of descendants the property goes to her kindred i.e. her brother, mother and father. On a competition between step-son and mother, the mother succeeds. The step-son if he is an heir at all would come after the husband (w). The brother is preferential heir to a step-son (x).

If there be none of the above relations ayautaka passes to the following heirs in succession, irrespective of the form of marriage, namely:

(1) brother (y);
(2) mother;

---

(o) Prosanno Kumar v. Sarat (1909) 36 Cal. 86.
(p) Gopal Chandra v. Ram Chandra (1901) 28 Cal. 311 [brother takes before husband].
(q) Ram Gopal v. Narain (1906) 33 Cal. 315 [mother takes before husband].
(r) Provashini v. Jogeswar (1950) 55 C.W.N. 61, ('51) A.C. 375.
(s) Sons of a predeceased son of a widow cannot, on her death, succeed when her other sons are living, Prakash Chandra v. Nandrani Debi (1951) 1 Cal. 581.
(t) It has been held that a maiden (coomaree) daughter means one not only unmarried but also unbetrothed; Sreenath v. Surbo (1868) 10 W.R. 488. If so, a betrothed daughter would take after the sons and unbetrothed daughters, but before married daughters.
(u) Basania v. Kamikshya (1906) 33 Cal. 23, 32 I.A. 181. Sankara Dome v. Kalidasi Dasi ('70) A.C. 461 (husband's daughter by another wife gets preference over husband's brother's son s son).
(v) Krishnabihari v. Sarojinee (1933) 60 Cal. 1061, 347 I.C. 473, ('33) A.C. 858.
(w) Chamatkari v. Narendra (1947) 1 Cal. 173.
(x) Kenaram v. Maniklal (1953) 2 Cal. 178.
(y) See f.n. (x) above.

(3) father;
(4) husband;
(5) husband's younger brother (z);
(6) husband's brother's son;
(7) sister's son;
(8) husband's sister's son;
(9) brother's son;

In the absence of the earlier preferential heirs, succession to Ayautaka Stridhana under the Dayabhaga law is governed by Para 29 of Dayabhaga Chap. IV, Sec. III, that is to say it goes first to brother of full blood, in the absence of brothers to the mother, in her absence to the father, and failing all these to the husband. The step-brother does not come in this class of heirs at all, and the principle of religious benefit has nothing to do with determination of heirship (a).

A brother's son is preferred to a step-daughter's son (b), as the latter is not included in the term 'daughter's son.' Step-daughter's son comes under (11) below.

(10) daughter's husband;
(11) husband's sapindas, sakulyas and samanodakas;
(12) father's kinsmen.

VI.—RULES COMMON TO ALL THE SCHOOLS

158. Escheat.—On failure of her husband's heirs, the stridhana of a widow goes to her blood relations in preference to the Government (c).

159. Stridhana heirs take as tenants-in-common.—Two or more stridhana heirs inheriting stridhana together take as tenants-in-common without benefit of survivorship, even if they are members of a joint family (d).

Illustration

A female Hindu dies leaving two sons who are members of a joint family. The sons inherit the stridhana. They take as tenants-in-common, and not as joint tenants. The result is that on the death of either of them, his share of the stridhana will pass to his heirs, and not to the survivor.

160. Stridhana heirs take per stirpes.—Stridhana heirs in the second generation, that is, son's sons, daughter's sons, and daughter's daughters, take per stirpes, and not per capita (e).

Illustration

A female Hindu dies leaving two sons by a daughter A, and three sons by another daughter B. Her stridhana will be divided into two parts, of which one will go to the two sons of A, and the other to the three sons of B. To divide it per capita would be to divide it into five equal parts, and to give one share to each of the five grandsons.

---

(z) Succeeds before the deceased woman's step-brother; Debiprasanna v. Harendra (1910) 37 Cal. 863, 6 I.C. 534.

(a) J. P. Banerjee v. B. Banerjee (1949) 28 Pat. 75.

(b) Krishnabihari v. Sarojinee (1933) 60 Cal. 1061, 147 I.C. 473, (33) A.C. 858.

(c) Kanakammal v. Ananthamathi (1914) 37 Mad. 293, 25 I.C. 901, ('15) A.M. 18; Ganpat v. Secretary of State (1921) 45 Bom. 1106, 62 I.C. 109, ('21) A.B. 138; Kundan v. Secretary of State (1926) 7 Lah. 543, 96 I.C. 865, ('26) A.L. 673.

(d) Bai Parson v. Bai Somli (1812) 36 Bom. 424, 15 I.C. 774; Karuppai v. Sankuranarayanan (1905) 27 Mad. 300; Jagannath v. Narayan (1910) 34 Bom. 553, 558, 7 I.C. 459.

(e) Mitakshara, chap. ii, sec. ii, para. 16; Mayukha chap. 4, sec. 10, para. 21; Smriti Chandrika, chap. 9 sec. 3, para. 26; Banerjee's "Hindu Law of Marriage and Stridhana," 5th ed., pp. 411, 421. But see also Karuppai v. Sankaranarayanan (1904) 27 Mad. 300, 308, and Nagesh v. Gururao (1893) 17 Bom. 303, 305-306.

161. Where stridhana heir a male.—A male inheriting stridhana takes it absolutely, and on his death it passes to his heirs.

Stridhana heirs are either males, such as sons, daughter's sons, son's sons, etc., or they are females, such as daughter, daughter's daughters, etc.

162. Where stridhana heir a female.—According to the Bombay school a female inheriting stridhana takes it absolutely, and on her death it passes to her heirs [§ 171].

According to all other schools a female inheriting stridhana takes a limited interest in it, and on her death it passes not to her heirs, but to the next stridhana heir of the female from whom she inherited it (§ 169).

163. Illegitimate children: succession to stridhana.—(1) The illegitimate children of a Hindu woman are not excluded from inheritance to their mother's stridhana (f). But when a woman dies leaving both legitimate and illegitimate children, the legitimate children are preferred to the illegitimate (g).

(2) The illegitimate sons of a Hindu woman are entitled to succeed to each other (h). But an illegitimate daughter's daughter cannot succeed to her grand-mother's stridhana (i).

(3) The illegitimate son of a daughter of a Sudra woman cannot succeed to the latter's stridhana in preference to the husband of the latter (j).

See note (5) to § 147. Also see § 43 No. 5 'daughter' note (vi).

164. Succession to property of dancing girls (naikins) and prostitutes.—Though prostitution, according to the Hindu law, entails degradation and loss of caste, it does not sever the tie which connects the prostitute to her kindred by blood, nor does it sever the tie of kindred between her and the members of her husband's family when she becomes a prostitute after marriage. Consequently, the property of a prostitute devolves as if it were her stridhana, so that her brother, her sister, her brother's son and other relations by blood, and her husband, her step-son and her husband's other sapindas are entitled to inherit to her (k).

Under the Bengal School of Hindu Law a sister is not heir to the stridhana property of her degraded sister (l). It has been held by the Madras High Court, that when a dasi leaves a dasi daughter as well as a married daughter both of them would take the mother's property in equal shares (m).

---

(f) [Ghose's Hindu Law, 3rd ed., p. 763; Arunagiri v. Ranganayaki (1898) 21 Mad. 40; Dundappa v. Bhimawa (1921) 45 Bom. 557, 59 I.C. 561, ('21) A.B. 137 (Sudra)]; Sunder Devi v. Jhaboo Lal ('57) A.A. 215 [Muslim mistress of a Hindu converted to Hinduism); Y. Venkanna v. N. Narayanamma (1953) 1 M.L.J. 697, ('54) A.M. 136.

(g) Meenakshi v. Muniandi (1915) 38 Mad. 1144, 25 I.C. 957, ('15) A.M. 63 [legitimate son preferred to illegitimate daughter]; Jagannath v. Narayan (1910) 34 Bom. 553, 559, 7 I.C. 459. Reference may also be made to Sudarshan v. Suresh ('60) A.P. 45.

(h) Myna Boyee v. Ootaram (1861) 8 M.I.A. 400; Mayna Bai v. Uttaram (1864) 2 Mad. H.C. 196.

(i) Meenakshi Ammal v. Murugayya Mooppanar (1940) Mad. 739, 191 I.C. 60, ('40) A.M. 463, (1940) 1 M.L.J. 288.

(j) Sadu Ganaji v. Shankerrao ('55) A.N. 84.

(k) Subbaraya v. Ramasami (1900) 23 Mad. 171 [step-son]; Narain Das v. Tirlok (1907) 29 All. 4 [husband]; Hiralal v. Tripura (1913) 40 Cal. 650, 19 I.C. 129 [F.B.] [brother's son]; Narayan v. Lakshman (1927) 51 Bom. 784, 106 I.C. 87, ('27) A.B. 456. See also Adyapa v. Rudrava (1880) 4 Bom. 104.

(l) Sarna Moyee v. Secretary of State (1897) 25 Cal. 254; Chandra Bala v. Province of Bengal 54 C.W.N. 940, ('50) A.C. 473.

(m) Jagadambal v. Saraswati Ammal (1950) Mad. 755.

Adoption of daughters by naikins (dancing girls): See § 487.

Where a married woman becomes a prostitute after her husband's death and dies leaving a son born in lawful wedlock and a daughter born in prostitution, the legitimate son excludes the illegitimate daughter (n).

The sons of a dancing woman, though by different fathers, are entitled to succeed to each other. Similarly, the legitimate son of one of such sons is entitled to succeed to them and also to their legitimate sons (o).

In the absence of any custom succession to a dasi (dancing girl) must be governed by the rule of propinquity as a rule of justice, equity and good conscience and her dasi daughters and married daughters will succeed to her property in equal shares (p).

Where a woman of the "dancing girl" caste does not follow her traditional calling but marries and leads the life of an ordinary married woman and reverts to her original calling after widowhood, it has been held that her position is not different from that of an unchaste married woman and her property devolves on her heirs according to ordinary Hindu law, that is, when it descends to daughters they take only a limited estate and a mortgage by them does not bind the reversions (q).

Illustrations

(a) A and B are the two sons of a prostitute by different fathers. A dies leaving B. B is entitled to succeed to A.

(b) A and B are the two sons of a prostitute by different fathers. A dies leaving a legitimate son C. Then B dies leaving C. C is entitled to succeed to B.

(c) A and B are the two sons of a prostitute by different fathers. A dies leaving a legitimate son C. Then B dies leaving a legitimate son D. Then D dies leaving C. C is entitled to succeed to D. The same principle applies to the remote legitimate descendants of A and B.

165. Contracts by married women.—A Hindu wife is competent to contract and the amount due by her in respect of her contractual liability can be recovered from her stridhan (r).

---

(n) Mecnakshi v. Muniandi (1915) 38 Mad. 1144, 25 I.C. 957, ('15) A.M. 63.

(o) Viscanatha v. Doraiscami (1925) 48 Mad. 944, 91 I.C. 193, ('26) A.M. 289.

(p) Saraswathi Ammal v. Jagadambal (1953) S C.R. 939, (1953) 1 M.L.J. 697.

(q) Balasundaram v. Kamakshi Ammal (1937) Mad. 257, ('36) A.M. 958.

(r) Nathubhai v. Jacher (1876) 1 Bom. 121; Govindji v. Lakmidas (1880) 4 Bom. 318; Narotam v. Nanka (1882) 6 Bom. 473; Radhi in re the petition of (1888) 12 Bom. 228.

CHAPTER XI

WOMEN'S PROPERTY: PART II—PROPERTY ACQUIRED BY A WOMAN BY INHERITANCE

LAW PRIOR TO HINDU SUCCESSION ACT, 1956

1. Devolution of property inherited by female—§§ 168-173.
2. Power of female heirs over such property—§§ 174-199.
3. Remedies against unauthorised acts of female heirs—§§ 202-210.

Note.—Section 14 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, subject to certain qualifications, now confers full and heritable capacity on a female heir in respect of all property acquired by her whether before or after the commencement of that Act with the result that by retro-active operation of that section she holds the property in her possession as full owner and not as a limited owner.

166. Property inherited by males.—When a male succeeds, as heir, whether to a male or to a female, he becomes full owner of the property inherited by him, and the property at his death passes to his heirs. The only recognized exception to this rule is where property is inherited by a Hindu governed by the Mitakshara law from his father, paternal grandfather or great-grandfather.

Illustrations

(a) A male Hindu dies leaving a brother. The brother will succeed to his property, and he will take it as full owner and on his death it will pass to his heirs. [This is an illustration of property inherited by a male from a male.]

(b) A female Hindu, who is possessed of stridhana, dies leaving a son. The son, as stridhana heir, will succeed to the property, and he will take it as full owner thereof, and on his death it will pass to his heirs. [This is an illustration of property inherited by a male from a female.]

Except in the cases mentioned in the section, a Hindu male inheriting property whether from a male or from a female, has all the powers of a full owner over that property. He can sell it, or dispose of it by gift or by will, at his pleasure. Further, he becomes a fresh stock of descent, that is to say, the property at his death passes to his heirs. The rule of Hindu law is different in the case of property inherited by female heirs, as will be seen presently.

167. Property inherited by females.—The present chapter deals with property inherited by females from males as well as females. It may be considered under three heads, namely:—

(1) Devolution of property inherited by females.

(2) Powers of female heirs over such property.

(3) Remedies against unauthorized acts of a widow and other female heirs.

I.—SUCCESSION TO PROPERTY INHERITED BY FEMALES

168. Property inherited by females from males—in territories other than the Bombay State.—(1) According to the Bengal school, the only females who can inherit the property of a male are (1) the widow, (2) daughter, (3) mother, (4) father's mother, and (5) father's father's mother [§ 61].

(2) Before the Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act, 1929, the only females who could inherit to a male were the five mentioned in sub-§ (1). By that Act three more females were constituted heirs, namely, the son's daughter, daughter's daughter, and sister.

(3) The Madras school recognizes not only the said five female heirs, but others also, being those mentioned in § 56. These include the son's daughter, daughter's daughter and sister who are now expressly mentioned as heirs in the Act of 1929. The only difference is that while before the Act they succeeded as bandhus, under the Act they inherit with gotraja sapindas. See § 43, nos. 13A, 13B, and 13C. See also §61A.

(4) According to the Bengal, Benares, Mithila and Madras schools, every female, whether she be a widow (t), daughter (u), mother (v), father's mother (w), or father's father's mother, who succeeds as heir to the property of a male, takes only a limited estate in the property inherited by her, and at her death the property passes not to her heir, but to the next heir of the male from whom she inherited it. [As to Bombay school, see § 170.]

The son's daughter, daughter's daughter, and sister, who are now expressly mentioned as heirs in the Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act, 1929, also take a limited estate, according to those schools, in the property inherited by them from the last male owner.

Illustrations

(a) A, a Hindu male governed by the Bengal school of Hindu Law, dies leaving a widow and a brother. On A's death, the widow succeeds as his heir. The widow then dies leaving a daughter's daughter. The widow's stridhana will pass to the daughter's daughter as her stridhana heir, but the property inherited by her from her husband A will pass to the next heir of her husband, namely, his brother.

(b) A, a Hindu male governed by the Benares school of Hindu Law, dies in 1928 leaving a daughter and a paternal uncle. On A's death the daughter succeeds as his heir. The daughter then dies leaving a daughter. The daughter's stridhana will pass to her daughter as her heir, but the property inherited by her from her father A will pass to the next heir of her father, namely, his paternal uncle. If A's daughter dies in 1930, after the Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act, 1929, came into force the daughter's daughter, and not the uncle, will succeed to A's estate as A's heir. [Vide notes to § 43, 13(C).]

According to all the schools other than the Bombay school a female inheriting to a male [§ 168] or to a female [§ 169] is not full owner of the property inherited by her. Her power to deal with the property is limited. She cannot alienate it except for legal necessity. Nor does she become a fresh stock of descent. At her death the property passes not to her heirs, but to the next heir of the last full owner. This result has been arrived at by construing the texts of Katyayana cited above as imposing a limitation on the powers of a widow to deal with property inherited by her from her husband, and the rule is then applied to other female heirs by construing the word "widow" in those texts as referring to other female heirs also, namely, daughter, mother, father's mother, father's father's mother, etc.

Survivorship as between daughters.—See § 43, n. 5, note (2).

---

(t) Collector of Masulipatam v. Cavaly Vencata (1861) 8 M.I.A. 529; Mst. Thakur Devhee v. Rai Baluk Ram (1867) 11 M.I.A. 140; Bhugwandeen v. Myna Baee (1866) 11 M.I.A. 487.

(u) Chotay Lall v. Chunnoo Lall, (1878) 4 Cal. 744, 6 I.A. 15; Mutta v. Dorasinga (1881) 3 Mad. 290, 8 I.A. 99; Venkayyamma v. Venkataramanayyamma (1902) 25 Mad. 678, 29 I.A. 156; P. Venkateswarlu v. D. Chinna Raghavulu ('57) A.A.P. 604.

(v) Bachiraja v. Venkatappadu (1865) 2 Mad. H.C. 88; Kutti v. Rudakrishna (1875) 8 Mad. H.C. 88; Jullessur v. Uggur (1883) 9 Cal. 725; Hemlatta v. Goluck Chunder (1842) 7 Ben. Sel. R. 108 (new edition 127).

(w) Phukar Singh v. Ranjit Singh (1878) 1 All. 661.

Custom.—A Hindu widow may by custom be entitled to her husband's property absolutely (x).

Jains.—According to the custom prevailing in U.P. and Bengal, a Jain widow takes an absolute interest in the self-acquired property of her husband inherited by her (y), but in U.P., not in ancestral property left by him (z).

Mithila law.—It is not correct to say that according to Vivada Chintamani which is the authority of the Mithila School, when a mother succeeds to the property of her deceased son, the property goes after her death to her husband's heirs. It goes to her son's heirs (a)

169. Property inherited by females from females—in territories other than the Bombay State.—According to the Bengal, Benares, Mithila and Madras schools, the rule laid down in § 168, sub-§ (3), as to property inherited by a female from a male, applies also to property inherited by her from a female. Consequently a female inheriting property [stridhana] from a female takes only a limited estate in such property, and at her death the property passes not to her heirs, but to the next stridhana heir of the female from whom she inherited it (b). [As to Bombay school, see § 171.]

Illustration

A, a female Hindu, who is possessed of stridhana, dies leaving a daughter. On A's death her stridhana passes to her daughter as her stridhana heir. The daughter, however, takes a limited estate in the stridhana. She does not become the full owner of the property. It is not stridhana in her hands, and on her death it will pass not to her heirs, but to the next stridhana heirs of A to whom it originally belonged. As to who those heirs are depends on the character of the stridhana.

It will be seen from what is stated above that according to all the schools except the Bombay school there is no distinction between property inherited by a female from a male and that inherited by her from a female. Both these kinds of property pass to the next heirs of the last full owner.

170. Property inherited by females from males—in the Bombay State.—(1) Besides the five females who can inherit to a male in all schools, namely (1) the widow, (2) daughter, (3) mother, (4) father's mother, and (5) father's father's mother, the Bombay school recognises other females as heirs, namely, daughters of descendants, ascendants and collaterals within five degrees, and widows of gotraja sapindas. These include the three females specifically mentioned as heirs in the Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act, 1929, namely, the son's daughter, the daughter's daughter, both these being daughters of descendants, and the sister, she being a daughter of an ascendant (father).

(2) As regards property inherited from males, female heirs under the Bombay school are divided into two classes, namely:—

---

(x) Krishna Bai v. Secretary of State (1920) 42 All. 555, 57 I.C 520, ('20) A.A. 101 [Bikanir].

(y) Sheo Singh v. Dakho (1878) 5 I.A. 87, (1876) 1 All 688; Shimbhu Nath v. Gayan Chand (1894) 16 All. 379; Harnabh v. Mandil (1900) 27 Cal. 379.

(z) Pahar Singh v. Shamsher Jang (1931) 29 All. L.J. 314, 133 I.C. 785, ('31) A.A. 695; Allah Diya v. Sona Devi (1942) All. 745, 204 I.C. 133, ('42) A.A. 331.

(a) Ram Khelawan v. Lakshmi (1950) A. Pat 194, (1949) 28 Pat. 1008.

(b) Sheo Shankar Lal v. Debi Sahai (1903) 25 All. 468, 30 I.A. 202 [daughter succeeding to her mother] explained in Subramanian v. Aruna-chelam (1905) 28 Mad. 1, 9-12; Lal Sheo Pertab v. Allahabad Bank (1903) 25 All. 476, 30 I.A. 209; Venkatarama Krishna v. Bhujanga (1896) 19 Mad. 107; Virasangappa v. Rudrappa (1896) 19 Mad. 110; Raju v. Ammani (1906) 29 Mad. 358; Janakisetty v. Miriyala (1909) 32 Mad. 521, 3 I.C. 281; Huri Doyal v. Grish Chunder (1890) 17 Cal. 911; Jogendra v. Phani (1916) 43 Cal. 64, 33 I.C. 810, ('16) A.C. 928, Sham Biharilal v. Ram Kali (1923) 45 All. 715, 75 I.C. 495, ('24) A.A. 15; Matru Mal v. Meheri Kunwar (1940) All. 416, 189 I.C. 600, ('40) A.A. 311; P. Venkateswarlu v. D. Chinna Raghavulu ('57) A.A.P. 604; Soma v. Brij Lal ('65) A. Punj. 110.

(i) those who come into the gotra of the deceased owner, by marriage, that is, the wife of the deceased and the wives of his sapindas and samanodakas [§ 68]; and

(ii) those who are born in the gotra of the deceased owner, but pass by marriage into a different gotra, and their daughters. This class includes a daughter, son's daughter, daughter's daughter, sister, niece, grandniece, father's sister, and the like (c). See notes to § 130.

The son's daughter, daughter's daughter, and sister are now expressly mentioned as heirs in the Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act, 1929. See § 43, nos. 13A, 13B, and 13C.

Females coming under class (i), such as widow (d), mother (e), father's mother (f), father's father's mother, and widows of gotraja sapindas (g), e.g., son's widow (h), brother's widow, uncle's widow, etc., take a limited estate in the property inherited by them from males, and on their death the property passes not to their heirs, but to next heir of the male from whom they inherited it (i). And this is so even if such a female succeeds immediately after the death of another female who was the widow of a gotraja sapinda and who had previously inherited the property [See ill. (2)].

Females coming under class (ii), such as a daughter (j), son's daughter, daughter's daughter, sister (k), father's sister, niece (l), grandniece (m), sister's daughter and the like, take the property inherited by them from males absolutely, that is, they become full owners thereof. Such property becomes stridhana in their hands, so that in cases governed by the Mitakshara law (n), it passes to the stridhana heirs mentioned in § 147, cl. (2), and in cases governed by the Mayukha (o), it passes to the stridhana heirs mentioned in § 151, cl. II.

Illustrations

(1) A male Hindu, governed by the Bombay school, dies leaving a daughter. On his death, the daughter succeeds to the property as his heir. She takes the estate absolutely. She can dispose of it by gift or will. If she dies intestate, the property will go to her stridhana heirs, and not to the next heirs of her father. Thus if she dies leaving a son and

---

(c) West and Buhler, 4th ed., p. 120 f.n. (n); Tuljaram v. Mathuradas (1881) 5 Bom. 662, 670, 672.

(d) Bhaskar v. Mahadev (1869) 6 Bom. H.C.O.C. 1.

(e) Vrijbhukandas v. Bai Parvati (1908) 32 Bom. 26; Narsappa v. Sakharam (1869) 6 Bom. H.C., A.C. 215; Vinayak v. Lakshmibai (1861) 1 Bom. H.C. 117.

(f) Dhondi v. Radhabai (1912) 36 Bom. 546, 16 I.C. 343; Madhavram v. Dave (1897) 21 Bom. 739, 744.

(g) Lalloobhai v. Mankuvarbai (1878) 2 Bom. 388. affd. subnom; Lallubhai v. Cassibai (1881) 5 Bom. 110, 7 I.A. 212; (1897) 21 Bom. 739, supra.

(h) Gadadhar v. Chandrabhagabai (1882) 17 Bom. 690 [F.B.].

(i) Bhau v. Raghunath (1906) 30 Bom. 229, 237, per Jenkins, C.J.

(j) Balwant Rao v. Baji Rao (1920) 47 I.A. 213, 48 Cal. 30, 57 I.C. 545, ('21) A.PC. 59; Pranjivandas v. Devkuvarbai (1859) 1 Bom. H.C. 130; Haribhat v. Damodarbhat (1879) 3 Bom. 171; Bulakhidas v. Keshavlal (1882) 6 Bom. 85; Babaji v. Balaji (1881) 5 Bom. 660; Bhagirthibai v. Kahnujirav (1887) 11 Bom. 285; Jankibai v. Sundra (1890) 14 Bom. 612; Gulappa v. Tayawa (1907) 31 Bom. 453; Vithappa v. Savitri (1910) 34 Bom. 510, 7 I.C. 445; Jawahir Lal v. Jarau Lal (1924) 46 All. 192, 79 I.C. 861, ('24) A.A. 350 [Nagar Brahmans].

(k) Vinayak v. Lakshmibai (1861) 1 Bom. H.C. 117, affirmed in Venayeck v. Luxemeebaee (1864) 9 M.I.A. 516, Rindabai v. Anacharya (1891) 15 Bom. 206.

(l) (1897) 21 Bom. 739, 744, supra.

(m) Tuljaram v. Muthuradas (1881) 5 Bom. 662.

(n) (1907) 31 Bom. 453, supra.

(o) Vijiarangam v. Lakshuman (1871) 8 Bom. H.C.O.C. 244. So much of this decision as lays down that the property will descend as if the daughter was a male is no longer law, having regard to the decision in Manilal v. Bai Rewa (1893) 17 Bom. 758 which was approved by the Privy Council in Kesserbai v. Hunsraj (1906) 30 Bom. 431, 33 I.A. 176.

a daughter, then, if she is governed by the Mitakshara law, the property will pass to her daughter, and if she is governed by the Mayukha, the property will pass to her son. [Contrast this with ill. (b) to § 168.]

(2) N and H are divided brothers. H dies leaving a son T. Then N dies leaving a widow J. Then T dies leaving widow M. Then J dies and on her death M succeeds to N's property as N's brother's [H's] son's [T's] widow. Here M inherits the property of N, a male and she inherits it as a widow of a gotraja sapinda. She therefore takes only a limited estate though she succeeds immediately after the death of another female J. J as N's widow, took only a Hindu widow's estate. She could not, therefore, be a fresh stock of descent. What M inherits is not the property of J, but of her husband N (p).

According to the Bombay school, two or more daughters, sisters, or nieces, take an absolute estate in severalty, and not as joint tenants (q). Any one of them may, therefore, alienate her share by sale or gift or give it by will.

It will be seen from what has been stated above that in the Bombay State, the general leaning is in favour of women's proprietary capacity. In other parts of India, the principle is that property inherited by a woman cannot stay in the family into which she has married, but must revert in every case to the family in which she was born.

171. Property inherited by females from females—in the Bombay State.—(1) According to the Bombay school, a female inheriting property from a female takes it absolutely, that is, she becomes full owner thereof. Such property becomes stridhana in her hands, so that in cases governed by the Mitakshara, it passes to the stridhana heirs mentioned in § 147, cl. (2), and in cases governed by the Mayukha it passes to the stridhana heirs mentioned in § 151, cl. II. [See ill. (1).]

(2) The same rule applies though the female inheriting from a female inherits as the widow of a gotraja sapinda. [See ill. (2).]

Illustrations

(1) A, a Hindu male, governed by the Bombay school, dies leaving a daughter and mother. The daughter succeeds to A's property as his heir. Being a daughter she takes the property absolutely [§ 170], and on her death it will pass to her stridhana heir. Suppose now that the daughter dies a maiden, leaving her father's mother as her only heir. The father's mother will take [§ 145] the property absolutely as stridhana under the present section with power to dispose of it by gift or will, and on her death intestate the property will pass to her stridhana heirs (r). [Note that a father's mother inheriting to her grandson takes a limited estate, and on her death the property passes not to her heirs, but to the next heirs of the grandson. In the case given in the illustration, she inherits to her granddaughter. Contrast this with the illustration to [§ 169].

(2) A, a Hindu male, governed by the Bombay school, dies leaving a son S, and a widow W, of a predeceased son. On A's death S succeeds to his estate. Then S dies leaving a daughter D. D, as a daughter, takes an absolute estate in the property of her father S. D then dies a maiden. On her death W succeeds to her estate as the nearest sapinda of D's father S, being D's father's brother's widow [§ 145]. W takes an absolute interest in D's property, though she inherits as the widow of a gotraja sapinda, that is as D's uncle's widow (s).

(3) P died in 1890. In 1904, his widow U adopted B. A suit between U and B was compromised, U being given a life interest in the immovable property and the remainder being vested in B. B died in 1916 leaving his widow L who died in December 1916, and an infant daughter who died in January 1917. Here when B died his widow L took a limited estate in his property. When L died his infant daughter succeeded to it absolutely and U succeeded to her under the rule in this section. U, therefore, takes an absolute

---

(p) Madhavram v. Dave (1897) 21 Bom. 739.

(q) Vithappa v. Savitri (1910) 34 Bom. 510, 7 I.C. 445; Rindabai v. Anacharya (1891) 15 Bom. 206.

(r) Gandhi Maganlal v. Bai Jadab (1900) 24 Bom. 192 [F.B.] (case of grandmother inheriting granddaughter's stridhana); Parshottam v. Keshavlal (1932) 56 Bom. 164, 137 I.C. 56, ('32) A.B. 213, see Bhau v. Raghunath (1906) 30 Bom. 229, 236, 237.

(s) Narayan v. Waman (1922) 46 Bom. 17, 63 I.C. 1001 ('22) A.B. 134.

estate in the remainder belonging to B. This added to her life estate, makes her absolute owner of the property. It must be observed that U does not succeed to B but to his infant daughter (t).

172. Share allotted to a woman on partition.—The share allotted to a wife, mother or father's mother on partition is not her stridhana, unless it was given absolutely to her, and it descends on her death not to her heirs, but to the sons or grandsons out of whose portion it was taken. See § 128 above.

173. Summary of sections 168 to 171.—The following is a summary of the rules contained in §§ 168 to 171:

(1) According to the Bengal, Benares, Mithila and Madras schools, every female who succeeds as an heir whether to a male or to a female, takes a limited estate in the property inherited by her, and on her death the property passes not to her heirs, but to the next heir of the last full owner.

(2) According to the Bombay school—

(a) Property inherited by every female from a female, and property inherited from a male by female heirs other than those who come into the gotra of the deceased owner by marriage, is stridhana, and the provisions of the last chapter apply to it; but

(b) Females who come into the gotra of the deceased owner by marriage take a limited estate in the property inherited by them from a male, and on their death the property passes to the next heir of the last full owner.

(3) The expression "limited estate" in this section is used in contradiction to "stridhana" or "absolute estate". The rest of this chapter deals with the incidents of "limited estate."

II.—POWERS OF FEMALE HEIRS OVER INHERITED PROPERTY

174. Limited heirs.—(1) According to the Bengal, Benares, Mithila and Madras schools every female who succeeds as an heir, whether to a male or to a female, takes a limited estate in the property inherited by her [§§ 168-169].

Thus a widow, daughter, mother, father's mother, father's father's mother, son's daughter, daughter's daughter, and sister take a limited estate. So do female bandhus in the Madras State. And so do all female stridhana heirs.

(2) In the Bombay State, every female who succeeds as an heir to a female takes the property absolutely [§ 171]. But as regards property inherited from a male, those females who by marriage have entered into the gotra (family) of the deceased owner take a limited estate, while other female heirs take absolutely (u).

Thus a widow, mother, father's mother, father's father's mother, and widows of gotraja sapindas, e.g., son's widow, brother's widow, uncle's widow, etc., take a limited estate. All these are females who come into the gotra of the deceased by marriage. All other female heirs, such as a daughter, sister, niece, etc., take absolutely [§ 170].

(3) It follows from what has been stated above that the following females, inheriting from a male, take a limited estate according to all the schools, namely, (1) widow, (2) mother, (3) father's mother, and (4) father's father's mother. The daughter takes absolutely in the Bombay school; in

---

(t) Parshotam Bechardas v. Keshavlal Dalpatram (1932) 56 Bom. 164, 137 I.C. 561, ('32) A.B. 213.

(u) Gandhi Maganlal v. Bai Jadab (1900) 24 Bom. 192, 214 [F.B.].

every other school she takes a limited estate. The son's daughter, daughter's daughter, and sister, who are expressly mentioned as heirs in the Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act, 1929, also take absolutely in the Bombay school; in every other school they take a limited estate.

(4) Females who take a limited or restricted estate in property inherited by them are hereinafter called "limited heirs."

175. Reversioners.—(1) The heirs of the last full owner, who would be entitled to succeed to the estate of such owner on the death of a widow or other limited heir, if they be then living, are called "reversioners". A reversioner may be a male or a female (v).

(2) Interest of reversioners.—The interest of a reversioner is an interest expectant on the death of a limited heir. It is not a vested interest. It is a spes successionis or a mere chance of succession within the meaning of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, sec. 6. It cannot, therefore, be sold, mortgaged or assigned, nor can it be relinquished. A transfer of a spes successionis is a nullity, and it has no effect in law (w).

The widow as guardian of a minor reversioner and not as representing the estate cannot enter into a compromise or agreement to refer disputes to arbitration so as to affect the minor's rights when the estate comes into the minor's possession (x). But the interest of a reversioner is an interest within the meaning of s. 174 Bengal Tenancy Act and the reversioner is a person "interested" within the meaning of s. 17 of the same Act (y).

(3) Where there are several reversioners entitled successively to succeed to an estate held for life by a Hindu widow, no one of such reversioners can be said to claim through or derive his title from another reversioner, but each derives his title from the last full owner (z).

Illustrations

(a) A Hindu, A, dies leaving a widow, a brother, a son of that brother, and an uncle. Here the brother, his son, and the uncle are all reversioners. The brother is the "next" or "presumptive" reversioner. The other reversioners are "remote" or "contingent" reversioners. If the brother dies in the widow's lifetime, his son becomes the "next" reversioner. Suppose now that the brother dies first, and then the widow. In that case the brother's son will succeed to A's estate, not as the heir of his father, for A's property never vested in his father, but as the heir of his uncle, A.

---

(v) Moniram v. Keri Kolitani (1880) 7 I.A. 115, 154, 5 Cal. 776, 789-790; Sham Sunder v. Achhan Kunwar (1899) 21 All. 71, 25 I.A. 183.

(w) Janaki Ammal v. Narayanaswami (1916) 43 I.A. 207, 209, 39 Mad. 634, 638, 37 I.C. 161 ('16) A.PC. 117; Venkatnarayana v. Subbammal ('15) 42 I.A. 125, 128, 38 Mad. 406, 410-411, 29 I.C. 298, ('15) A.PC. 124; Amrit Narayan v. Gaya Singh (1918) 45 I.A. 35, 45 Cal. 590, 44 I.C. 408, ('17) A.PC. 95 [renunciation]; Jagan Nath v. Dibbo (1909) 31 All. 53, 1 I.C. 818; Nund Kishore v. Kanee Ram (1902) 29 Cal. 355; Annada v. Gour Mohan (1921) 48 Cal. 536, 65 I.C. 27, ('21) A.C. 501; Manickam v. Ramalinga (1906) 29 Mad. 120; Muthuveeru v. Vythilinga (1909) 32 Mad. 206, 3 I.C. 476; Pindiprolu v. Pindiprolu (1907) 30 Mad. 486; Ramchandar v. Kallu (1908) 30 All. 497; Bhana v. Guman (1918) 40 All. 384, 44 I.C. 629, ('18) A.A. 184; Gangabai v. Hari Ganesh (1921) 45 Bom. 1167, 62 I.C. 680, ('21) A.B. 446; Dhoorjeti v. Dhoorjeti (1907) 30 Mad. 201 [renunciation]; Musammat Bhagwati v. Jagdam (1921) 6 Pat. L.J. 604, 621-622, 62 I.C. 933, ('21) A.P. 260; Harnath Kuar v. Indar Bahadur Singh (1923) 50 I.A. 69, 45 All. 179, 71 I.C. 629, ('22) A.PC. 403 [limitation]; Annada Mohan v. Gour Mohan (1923) 50 I.A. 239, 50 Cal. 929, 74 I.C. 499, ('23) A.PC. 189 [limitation]; Thakur Prasad v. Mussammat Dipa Kuer (1931) 10 Pat. 352, 365, 134 I.C. 129, ('31) A.P. 442. See also Ma Yait v. Mahomed (1927) 5 Rang. 145, 102 I.C. 690, ('27) A.R. 165.

(x) Amrit Narayan Singh v. Gaya Singh, 45 I.A. 35, 45 Cal. 590, 44 I.C. 408; Musammat Har Narain Kunwar v. Sajjan Pal Singh & Ors. (1940) All. 719, (1940) Kar. 366, 190 I.C. 184, 67 I.A. 386, ('40) A.PC. 181.

(y) Susheelasundaree v. Bishnupada De (1933) 60 Cal. 636, 146 I.C. 641 ('33) A.C. 622.

(z) Bhagwanta v. Sukhi (1900) 22 All. 33 [F.B.]; Bahadur Singh v. Mohar Singh (1901) 29 I.A. 8-9, 24 All. 94; Lala Soni Ram v. Kanhaiya Lal (1915) 40 I.A. 74, 35 All. 227, 19 I.C. 291; Srimutty Manokarani Debi v. Haripada (1914) 18 C.W.N. 718, 24 I.C. 311, ('14) A.PC. 164; Rangaswami v. Nachiappa (1919) 46 I.A. 72, 83-84, 42 Mad. 523, 536, 50 I.C. 498, ('18) A.PC. 198.

(b) A Hindu, F, dies leaving a widow, A, a mother, B, a father's mother, C, and a father's brother, D. Here there are three reversioners of whom two, namely, B and C are females, and one, namely, D, is a male. On F's death, his widow, A will succeed to his property. On A's death, F's property will revert or pass to F's next heir, B, if she is then living. On B's death, F's property will revert to his next heir C, if she is then living. On C's death, F's property will revert or pass to D, if he is then living. D, however, will take the property as full owner and on his death it will pass to his own heirs and not to F's heirs.

Spes successionis.—"Under the Hindu law the death of the female owner opens the inheritance to the reversioners, and the one most nearly related at the time to the last full owner becomes entitled to possession. In her lifetime, however, the reversionary right is a mere possibility or spes successionis" (a). "A Hindu reversioner has no right or interest in praesenti in the property which the female owner holds for her life. Until it vests in him on her death, should he survive her, he has nothing to assign or to relinquish or even to transmit, to his heirs (b). His right becomes concrete only on her demise; until then it is mere spes successionis" (c). No effect can be given to a contract for sale of a reversion made by a reversioner before the reversion has fallen in even though the reversioner succeeds to the reversion on the widow's death (d). Further, the interest of a reversioner being a mere spes successionis, he is not entitled to redeem a mortgage of the estate, executed by the widow's husband, in the lifetime of the widow (e). When at the request of a Hindu widow, who had mortgaged her husband's property to pay off her husband's debts, the plaintiff her daughter who was the immediate reversioner paid off the mortgage debt, and the mortgagee delivered over to her the mortgage deed with an endorsement of satisfaction upon it, and she was given possession of the mortgaged property but was later on dispossessed by the sons of her deceased sister in whose favour the widow had executed an unregistered deed of gift; it was held, on a suit brought by the plaintiff against her sister's son, for recovery of possession of the property, that although as a reversioner pure and simple the plaintiff could not claim any right of subrogation, yet she was entitled to a possessory lien both as a matter of law and equity on the strength of which she could claim to recover property from the defendants who were mere trespassers (f).

Jats.—Among Jats who have migrated to the district of Meerut from the Punjab there exists a custom by which reversioners irrespective of degree succeed equally to the last male owner, each branch of the family taking its share per stirpes (g).

Burden of proof.—It is incumbent on a plaintiff seeking to succeed to property as a reversioner to establish affirmatively the particular relationship which he puts forward. He is also bound to satisfy the Court that to the best of his knowledge there are no nearer heirs (h).

176. Widow's estate.—A widow or other limited heir is not a tenant-for-life, but is owner of the property inherited by her, subject to certain restrictions on alienation, and subject to its devolving upon the next heir of the last full owner upon her death (i). The whole estate is for the time vested in her, and she represents it completely (j). As stated in a Privy Council case (k), "her right is of the nature of a right of property; her position is that of owner; her powers in that character are, however, limited; but . . . so

---

(a) Venkatanarayana v. Subbammal (1915) 42 I.A. 125, 128, 38 Mad. 400, 410, 411, 29 I.C. 298, ('15) A.PC. 124; Lakshmi v. Anantharama (1937) Mad. 948 [F.B.], 171 I.C. 7, ('37) A.M. 699; Ramaswamy v. Arumanayagam ('55) A. Tra. Co. 20; Subbareddi v. Govindareddi ('55) A. Andhra 49.

(b) Sm. Shakuntala Devi v. Kaushalya Devi (1936) 17 Lah. 356, 162 I.C. 718, ('36) A.L. 124.

(c) Amrit Narayan v. Gaya Singh (1918) 45 I.A. 35, 39, 45 Cal. 590, 603, 44 I.C. 408, ('17) A.PC. 95.

(d) Jaganadha v. Prasada Rao (1916) 39 Mad. 554, 29 I.C. 241, ('16) A.M. 579; Ram Gopal v. Gurbux Singh ('55) A. Punj. 215.

(e) Chhotey Singh v. Surat Singh (1930) 5 Luck. 691, 12 I.C. 211, ('30) A.O. 294. Vide in this connection the observations of Ray. C.J., in Mitra v. Mt. Gurubari ('50) A. Orissa 150.

(f) Mitra v. Gurubari ('50) A. Orissa 150.

(g) Dharam Singh v. Hira (1922) 44 All. 390, 65 I.C. 828, ('22) A.A. 141.

(h) Rama Row v. Kuttiya (1917) 40 Mad. 654, 34 I.C. 294, ('17) A.M. 872; Javitri v. Gendan Singh (1927) 49 All. 779, 102 I.C. 167, ('27) A.A. 767; Mt. Barro v. Narain Prasad (1938) 13 Luck. 167, 167 I.C. 72, ('37) A.O. 243.

(i) Bijoy Gopal v. Krishna (1907) 34 Cal. 329, 34 I.A. 87, 91-92.

(j) Moniram v. Keri Kolitani (1880) 5 Cal. 776, 789, 7 I.A. 115, 154; Jagdish Prasad v. Shreedharpant ('55) A.A. 625.

(k) Janaki Ammal v. Narayanasami (1916) 43 I.A. 207, 209, 39 Mad. 634, 637, 37 I.C. 171, ('16) A.PC. 117; Kalishanker Das v. Dhirendra Nath (1955) 1 S.C.R. 467.

long as she is alive no one has any vested interest in the succession." The principles relating to the nature of a widow's estate were recently reiterated by the Supreme Court (*k*1).

A widow under the Hindu law takes a special and qualified estate, and she has a limited power of disposition of her husband's property. The restrictions on her power of alienation are inseparable from her estate, and their existence does not depend on that of heirs capable of taking on her death. If, for want of heirs, the right to the property passes to the Government, the Government has the same power that an heir would have of protecting its interests by impeaching any unauthorized alienation by the widow (l). See § 185A.

The estate taken by a Hindu widow in property inherited by her from her husband is called "Widow's estate", or "Woman's estate." The estate taken by every other limited heir is similar in its incidents to a widow's estate. The incidents of a widow's estate are set forth in §§ 177 to 201.

See Note at the beginning of this chapter and s. 14, Hindu Succession Act, 1956.

A widow or other limited heir does not take merely an estate for life, for, as will be seen presently, she can in certain cases dispose of the whole estate inherited by her which she could not do if she were a mere life-tenant. What vests in her is not a mere life-estate, but the whole estate. Further, she represents the estate completely, and it is for this reason that in certain cases a decree passed against her with reference to property inherited by her binds not only herself, but also the reversioners, though the reversioners were not parties to the suit. In other words the estate of a Hindu widow is an absolute one subject to certain restrictions.

Incidents of widow's estate.—The expression "stridhana" predicates an absolute estate; the expression "widow's estate" implies a limited estate. A female takes an absolute estate in her stridhana, but she takes a qualified estate in property inherited by her except in certain cases governed by the Bombay school [§ 173]. When she takes a qualified estate, it is said that she takes a widow's estate. The following is a brief statement of the peculiar features of a widow's estate:—

(1) The estate taken by a widow in property inherited by her from her husband may best be described by saying that she is the owner thereof, except that she cannot sell the corpus of the property or mortgage it, or make a gift of it, or grant leases thereof for a long term, or otherwise alienate it, unless it be for legal necessity or for the benefit of the estate or with the consent of the next reversioners. Where an alienation is made by her for a legal necessity or with the consent of the next reversioners, it passes an absolute estate to the alienee to the same extent as an alienation made by a full owner [§§ 178-185].

A widow inheriting her husband's property takes it and holds it as his legal representative. Rents accruing from it are to be considered as part of his estate and as such are liable to pay his debts and to be attached in execution of simple money decree obtained against him (m).

(2) Subject to the above restrictions on alienation, she holds the property absolutely, and she completely represents it. She may, therefore, institute suits in respect of the property, and she may be sued in respect thereof, and decrees passed against her as representing the estate in respect of debts or other transactions binding on the estate, are binding not only on her, but on the reversioners, though the reversioners are not parties to the suit [§ 199].

(3) If she is dispossessed of any portion of the property by a third person, she can sue to recover it, but if she fails to sue and allows the possession of such person to become adverse to her, the reversioners are not affected by such adverse possession for they succeed not as her heirs, but as her husband's heirs, and they may, therefore, sue for possession within 12 years from the date of her death [§ 201].

---

(*k*1) Jaisri v. Rajdewan ('62) A.S.C. 83. Jagat Singh v. Teja Singh ('70) A. Punj. & H. 309.

(l) Collector of Masulipatam v. Cavaly Vencata (1861) 8 M.I.A. 529, 553; Kalishanker Das v. Dhirendra Nath (1955) 1 S.C.R. 467, 479, ('54) A.SC. 505. Also see Natvarlal v. Dalubhai (1934) S.C.R. 339, 355, 356, 56 Bom. L.R. 447, ('54) A.SC. 61.

(m) Phool Kunwar v. Rikhi Ram (1935) 57 All. 714, 153 I.C. 865, ('35) A.A. 261.

Where a widow or other limited female owner sues for arrears of profits against a sharer and obtains a decree and executes it but on appeal the amount is reduced, the liability to refund is personal to her and does not attach to the estate so as to bind the reversioner after her death (n).

(4) She can sell her life interest in the property or mortgage it or make a gift of it to anyone she likes. She is entitled to the whole income of the property. She may spend the income in any way she likes. She is not bound to pay her husband's debts out of the income, nor is she bound to maintain the members of her husband's family out of the income, or to perform their marriage ceremonies out of the income. She can throw the burden of all these charges on the corpus of the property, and sell or mortgage the same to meet those expenses, such expenses being regarded in law as legal necessities (o) [§§ 177 to 181].

(5) The entire estate being vested in her, she is entitled to manage the same. But she must manage it as a prudent owner would do. She must not commit waste or do any act injurious to the reversion [§ 198].

(6) The limitations imposed upon her estate are not imposed upon her for the benefit of reversioners. They are inseparable from her estate, so that even if there be no reversioners, she cannot alienate the corpus of the property except for a legal necessity. If she does alienate it without legal necessity, then if there be no reversioners, the alienation may be set aside by the Government taking the property by escheat (p).

(7) A widow cannot by any act or declaration of her own, while retaining possession of her husband's estate, give her possession or estate a character different from that attaching to the possession or estate of a Hindu widow (q).

The incidents of the estate taken by other limited heirs, such as the mother, father's mother, daughter (except in the Bombay school), are similar to those of the widow's estate.

177. Income and savings from income.—A widow or other limited heir is not a trustee for the reversioners (r). She has absolute power of disposal of the income of the property inherited by her. She is not bound to save the income. She may spend the whole income upon herself, or give it away as she likes during her life (s).

But difficult questions arise when the income is accumulated either when the estate is in her possession or in the possession of others. Where the property was not inherited by her but a life estate is given to her by deed, no question of an intention to treat the accumulated income as an accretion to the main estate can arise inasmuch as there is a separation of the income from the date of the deed and she is not the representative of the last male owner (t) [Vide § 127(4) ante].

The law as to the right of a widow or other limited heir to accumulations of the income of the estate of the last male holder may be considered under six heads namely:—

(1) Accumulations of income which accrued during the life of her husband or other male whom she succeeds.

(2) Accumulations of income after his death and before delivery of the estate to her.

(3) Accumulations of income of the estate made by herself personally.

---

(n) Kishan Lal v. Muhammad Ishaq (1938) All. 761 (F.B.), 176 I.C. 509, ('38) A.A. 426.

(o) Debi Dayal v. Bhan Pertap (1904) 31 Cal. 433.

(p) Collector of Masulipatam v. Cavaly Vencata (1860) 8 M.I.A. 520; Kundan v. Secretary of State (1926) 7 Lah. 543, 96 I.C. 865, ('26) A.L. 673.

(q) Sham Lall v. Amarendro (1896) 23 Cal. 460, 473; Kanni Ammal v. Ammakannu (1900) 23 Mad. 504. See also Brij Indar v. Janki Koer (1877) 5 I.A. 1, 1 C.L.R. 318; Kashi Prasad v. Inda Kunwar (1908) 30 All. 490.

(r) Viraraju v. Venkataratnam (1939) Mad. 226.

(s) Hurrydoss v. Sreemutty Uppoornah (1856) 6 M.I.A. 434; Biswanath v. Khantomani (1870) 6 Beng. L.R. 747; Grose v. Amritamayi (1869) 4 Beng. L.R.O.C. 1, 40-41; Sarat Chandra v. Charusila (1928) 55 Cal. 918, 112 I.C. 508, ('28) A.C. 794.

(t) Mohini Mohan Basu v. Rashbihari Ghosh (1937) 2 Cal. 97, 169 I.C. 519, ('37) A.C. 229.

(4) Arrears of income and income held in suspense.

(5) Accumulations of income where the income is given to her by her husband by deed or will.

(6) Accretion to the estate in other cases.

(1) Accumulations which accrued during husband's life.—Accumulations which accrued during the husband's life form part of the corpus of the estate. They are accretions to the estate, and the widow succeeds to both for a woman's estate (u).

(2) Accumulations between death and delivery and afterwards realised by the limited owner.—Cases have arisen in which possession of the estate has been withheld from the widow, and the estate together with the accumulations of income is eventually handed over to her long after her husband's death; or in which the corpus of the estate is bequeathed by the husband to others, but there is an intestacy as to the income and the income which has accumulated owing to litigation or other causes is handed over to the widow long after the husband's death. As these accumulations accrue after the husband's death, the widow does not take them by succession. She takes them as she would have taken the income itself had she been let into possession at once, that is, as Stridhana (v) and she may spend them as she chooses.

But the question still remains whether, if she keeps them distinct for some time she is entitled to deal with and dispose of the accumulations as she would have been entitled to do with the income if she has been let into possession at once and there had been no accumulation. This question should be determined by the intention of the widow to treat the accumulations as accretions to the estate or as her own absolute property. If she does nothing to indicate an intention to make the fund received, or the interest on it, part of her husband's estate (which was in other hands) or to justify the inference that she wished it to revert to her husband's heirs, the fund is her stridhana which she may dispose of by deed or will. But if she does indicate such intention or does any act to justify such inference, she takes only a widow's estate in the fund, and she cannot dispose of it except for legal necessity, and on her death it passes to her husband's heirs. This was the view taken by the Judicial Committee in Sawdamini Dasi v. Administrator-General of Bengal (w).

(3) Accumulations made by the widow personally.—The third case is where the accumulations are made by the widow herself personally, and either are invested by her or remain uninvested in her hands. A widow, as stated above, may spend her whole income either upon herself, or by giving it away as she likes during her life. She is not bound to make any savings. But if she does make savings, the question arises whether she has the same power of disposal of the savings as she has of the income, or whether the savings are to be treated as accretions to the estate, that is, as part of the corpus of the estate, so as to be subject to the same restraint on alienation as the corpus itself [§ 178]. The trend of decisions is that the case should be determined by the intention of the widow. If she does nothing to indicate an intention to make the savings part of her husband's estate, or to justify the inference that she wished them to revert to her husband's heirs, the savings

---

(u) Chandrabulee v. Brody (1868) 9 W.R. 584, 585; Sreemutty Soorjeemoney Dossee v. Denobundoo (1862) 9 M.I.A. 123; Sreemutty Soorjeemoney Dossee v. Denobundoo (1857) 6 M.I.A. 526.

(v) Sreemutty Sorjeemoney Dossee v. Denobundoo (1862) 9 M.I.A. 123, 138-139; Isri Dut v. Hansbutti (1883) 10 Cal. 324, 335, 10 I.A. 150.

(w) (1892) 20 I.A. 12, 20 Cal. 433 [estate in hands of executor—settlement by widow of accumulations upheld].

are her stridhana (x) which she may dispose of by deed or will. But if she indicates any such intention or does anything to justify any such inference, she takes only a widow's estate in them, and she cannot dispose of them except for legal necessity, and on her death they will pass to her husband's heirs.

Thus if she invests the savings in the purchase of land or securities, and makes no endeavour or attempt for the purpose of distinguishing the original estate from the after-purchases, but deals with the after-purchases in the same manner as the original estate, it is an indication of intention on her part to treat the after-purchases as accretions to the original estate, and she cannot alienate them for any purpose which would not justify alienation of the original estate. But if there is no evidence of any dealing on her part which would show that she intended to treat the after-purchases as accretions to her husband's estate, then the savings are her stridhana which she may dispose of by deed or will, and on her death intestate they will pass to her stridhana heirs (y).

It has thus been held that where a widow inherits landed property in a village from her husband, and with the savings of the income of that property she purchases other lands in the same village, and long after the purchase she makes a gift both of the original estate and the after-purchases to one and the same person (being the daughter in that case), only reserving to herself a life-interest in part of them, the after-purchases constitute accretions to the estate which she has no power to alienate except for a purpose which would justify alienation of the original estate (z). It has similarly been held, that where the widow erects buildings on land belonging to the husband's estate (a), or deposits money belonging to her husband's estate with a banker upon the understanding that the interest at the end of every year shall be added to the principal and the amalgamated sum should be treated as a fresh deposit (b), the buildings and the accumulations of the interest must be deemed to be accretions to the estate, and descendible to the husband's heirs.

In Sheolochun Singh v. Saheb Singh (c) their Lordships said: "Where a widow comes into possession of the property of the husband, and receives the income and does not spend it, but invests it in the purchase of other property, their Lordships think that, prima facie, it is the intention of the widow to keep the estate of the husband as an entire estate, and that the property purchased would, prima facie, be intended to be accretions to that estate. There may be, no doubt, circumstances which would show that the widow had no such intention, that she intended to appropriate the savings in another way."

On the other hand, if she advances the savings made by her on a mortgage of land and subsequently assigns the mortgage for value (d), or purchases land with the savings and not very long after the purchase mortgages it as her own and afterwards makes a gift of it (e), or purchases land with the savings and soon after the purchase makes a gift of it (f), the subsequent acquisitions cannot be treated as accretions to the original estate, her conduct in all these cases being consistent only with an intention to treat them as her own absolute property.

In Akkanna v. Venkayya (g) the High Court of Madras observed with reference to the dictum in Sheolochun Singh v. Saheb Singh above quoted:—"This was only a dictum which must be understood with reference to the facts and circumstances of that case which it was held indicated that it was the intention of the widows to keep the estate entire, and that the same should descend in one line of succession" and further proceeded as follows:—

---

(x) Prabhakar v. Sarubai (1943) Nag. 779, 208 I.C. 211, ('43) A.N. 253; Lalsingh v. Vithalsingh ('50) A.N. 62, (1950) Nag. 176; Ganu Purnaji v. Shriram (1954) Nag. 646, ('54) A.N. 353; Ajit v. Nagendra ('60) A.C. 484.

(y) Isri Dut v. Hansbutti (1883) 10 Cal. 324, 337, 10 I.A. 150; Sheolochun v. Saheb Singh, (1887) 14 Cal. 387, 393-394, 14 I.A. 63; Nirmala v. Deva Narayan (1928) 55 Cal. 269, 276, 104 I.C. 284, ('27) A.C. 868; Dulhin Parbati Kuer v. Baijnath Prasad (1935) 14 Pat. 518, 155 I.C. 213, ('36) A.P. 200; Tustu Charan v. Kali Kumar ('57) A.C. 122; Sitaji v. Bijendra (1949) 28 Pat. 447, ('51) A.P. 356; Sumantrabai v. Rishabhkumar (1953) Nag. 69, ('52) A.N. 295; Hariharsingh v. Deonarayan (1954) Nag. 692, ('54) A.N. 319.

(z) (1883) 10 Cal. 324, 10 I.A. 150, supra; (1887) 14 Cal. 387, 14 I.A. 63, supra.

(a) Venkata v. Surenani (1908) 31 Mad. 321.

(b) Narayana v. Suppiah (1920) 43 Mad. 629, 58 I.C. 639, ('20) A.M. 983.

(c) (1887) 14 Cal. 387, 393, 14 I.A. 63; Nabakishore v. Upendrakishore (1922) 42 Mad. L.J. 253, 74 I.C. 612, ('23) A.PC. 563.

(d) Akkanna v. Venkayya (1902) 25 Mad. 351.

(e) Wahid Ali v. Tori Rama (1913) 35 All. 551, 21 I.C. 91.

(f) Keshav v. Maruti (1922) 46 Bom. 37, 62 I.C. 954, ('22) A.B. 144.

(g) (1902) 25 Mad. 351.

"The acquirer of property presumably intends to retain dominion over it, and in the case of a Hindu widow the presumption is none the less so when the fund with which the property is acquired is one, which though derived from her husband's property, was at her absolute disposal....Her absolute power of disposition over the income derived from [her] limited estate being now fully recognized, it is only reasonable that, in the absence of an indication of her intention to the contrary, she must be presumed to retain the same control over the investment of such income. The mere fact that properties thus acquired by her are managed and enjoyed by her without any distinction, along with properties inherited from her husband, can in no way affect this presumption." In a case where the widow purchased a house and within less than 4 months sold the property it was held by the Allahabad High Court that it is for the person who alleges that she meant to keep the property as her Stridhana to prove that it is so (h). It is submitted that this decision is inconsistent with the later decisions of the Privy Council.

Where the widow lends part of her savings on mortgage to the next reversioner, and afterwards obtains a decree against him for the amount of the loan and takes proceedings in execution, but dies pending execution, the person entitled to proceed with the execution is her stridhana heir, her conduct manifesting a clear intention to treat the decretal amount representing the savings as her own absolute property (i). A purchase of property by a widow out of the savings of the income in the name of another person, affords an indication of an intention to treat the property as her own (j). Where there is nothing to indicate the intention of a limited owner about the immovable properties acquired by her out of the savings of the property of the last male holder the presumption is that she intended to keep them at her absolute disposal (k).

When a woman's stridhana was inherited by her two minor daughters but was managed for them by their guardians who purchased some additional property out of its income and one of the daughters died before obtaining possession of the estate, her share of the property purchased was held to belong to her absolutely as stridhana and descended to her heir and not to the other daughter (l).

(4) Income held in suspense or unrealized by the limited heir.—A widow or other limited heir may not have recovered the rents of the estate inherited by her, or she may have obtained decrees for arrears of rent and may not have realised them, or she may have recovered the arrears of rent and realised the decrees but may not have invested the amount. In cases such as these the question arises whether on her death the arrears of income or the decrees held by her or the income held in suspense constitute her stridhana or whether they constitute "savings" or "accumulations." Dealing with this question, the High Court of Bengal in a case decided in 1876 said: "But what are accumulations in the view of these cases? Not surely the accidental balances, of one or two years of the widow's income, but a fund distinct and tangible. There is nothing whatever in this case to indicate that any such fund ever had been formed or had existed" (m). In another case, the High Court of Bombay said: "In the present case the cash balance in question does not amount to more than half the yearly payment and had not been separated so as to form a distinct fund" (n). In Venkatadri v. Parthasarathi (o) the Rani of Medur who became entitled to the estate on the death of her son and its income till her death filed a suit to recover the estate. Pending the disposal of the suit the estate was in the hands of a receiver appointed by the Court. Before the suit was disposed of she died leaving a will bequeathing the income of the estate. The Judicial Committee observed

---

(h) Bhagwan Das v. Bittam (1945) All. 148.
(i) Sita Ram v. Dulam (1919) 41 All. 350, 50 I.C. 372, ('19) A.A. 338.
(j) Nirmala v. Deva Narayan (1928) 55 Cal. 269, 275, 104 I.C. 284, ('27) A.C. 868.
(k) Prabhakar v. Sarubai (1943) Nag. 779, 208 I.C. 211, ('43) A.N. 253.
(l) Kailasanatha Mudaliar v. Vadivammi (1935) 58 Mad. 488, ('35) A.M. 749.
(m) Sreemutty Puddo v. Dwarka Nath Biswas (1876) 25 W.R. 335, 341.
(n) Rivett-Carnac v. Jivibai (1886) 10 Bom. 178.
(o) 48 Mad. 312, 52 I.A. 214, ('25) A.P.C. 105.

"that income or any part of it she could while she remained entitled to it, have added as an accretion to the Medur estate if she had wished to do so. There is no evidence to suggest that she had ever added any part of that income as an accretion to the Medur estate. She was consequently entitled to dispose of it by will or otherwise."

In Balasubrahmanya v. Subbayya (p) the estate was under the court of wards who were in possession of the savings of the income. The Rani could not make any attempt to dispose of it during her life time, but left a will bequeathing the accumulations. Their Lordships observed "The High Court held that the savings were the personal property of the Rani and would pass under her will. Their Lordships see no reason to differ from the High Court's findings". Following Isri Dutt v. Hunsbutti cited above, it has been held in Calcutta (q) that if the widow does not dispose of in her lifetime the arrears of income or the decrees held by her or the income held in suspense, she cannot dispose of them by her will and they pass on her death to her husband's heirs. But the decision in Venkatadri v. Parthasarathi was not referred to by Page J. and in a later Calcutta decision (r) it was observed "He held her Will to be ineffective. It would, however, be difficult to agree with all his reasonings on the latter point." But, when there is no will and the income is unrealised (e.g., when due under decrees not yet executed) it is held in Calcutta and in Oudh (s) that the right to the income will not pass to the stridhana heirs of the limited owner.

(5) Accumulations of income granted by husband by deed or will.—Where by a deed or will the husband grants the income of his property to his wife for her life, and the corpus is given to others, the savings from such income and the property purchased out of such savings are her stridhana, and they pass to her stridhana heirs.

They are not accretions to the estate for the simple reason that the corpus of the estate is in other hand (t). The widow takes the income not as a widow, but as a taker of a life estate under the settlement or will (u). Similarly, savings from maintenance allowance directed to be paid to a widow under a decree out of the husband's estate and property purchased out of such savings are her stridhana, and they pass to her stridhana heirs (v).

(6) Enlargement of estate inherited by a widow.—The estate inherited by a widow from her husband may be enlarged otherwise than by savings from the income. Thus it may be enlarged by action of Government (w), or by compromise with the superior owner (x), or otherwise (y). In such cases the enlarged estate is still a widow's estate.

The enlargement is no more than an accretion to her husband's estate; it does not change the character of the estate so as to convert the widow's estate into stridhana. It has been held in the undermentioned cases that a female heir derives no stronger title from the fact that the Inam Commissioner has enfranchised in her name property inherited from a male, and has given a new title deed in her name. In Venkata v. Veerabhadrayya (z), the Judicial Committee held that when karnam service lands have been enfranchised, a quit rent being imposed in lieu of the service, and an inam title deed is granted comprising the lands to the holder of the office, his representatives and

---

(p) (1938) Mad. 551, 65 I.A. 93, ('38) A.PC. 34.

(q) Sarat Chandra v. Charusila (1928) 55 Cal. 918, 112 I.C. 508, ('28) A.C. 794.

(r) Surendra Nath Basu v. Radha Rani Debi (1940) 2 Cal. 415, 187 I.C. 108.

(s) Sarnam v. Raja Bisheshwar (1930) 5 Luck. 608, 125 I.C. 161, ('31) A.O. 66.

(t) Srimati Krishna v. Bhaiya Rajendra (1927) 2 Luck. 43, 82-89, 104 I.C. 15, ('27) A.O. 240 [legacy]; Bhugbutti Das v. Bholanath (1875) 2 I.A. 256, 25 W.R. 168.

(u) Isri Dut v. Hansbutti (1883) 10 Cal. 324, 336, 10 I.A. 150.

(v) Subramanian v. Arunachelam (1905) 28 Mad. 1.

(w) Vangala v. Vangala (1906) 28 Mad. 13; Kashi Prasad v. Inda Kunwar (1908) 30 All. 490; Subbaroya v. Aiyaswami (1909) 32 Mad. 86, 1 I.C. 749.

(x) Ram Shankar v. Lal Bahadur (1926) 1 Luck. 98, 92 I.C. 637, ('26) A.O. 277.

(y) Chandrakisor v. Upendra Chandra (1923) 37 Cal. L.J. 319, 74 I.C. 612, ('23) A.C. 563 [purchase by widow of rights of tenants in occupation of her husband's estate].

(z) (1921) 48 I.A. 244, 44 Mad. 643, 61 I.C. 667, ('22) A.PC. 96.

assigns, the lands are his separate property, and are not subject to any claim for partition by other members of the family. Following the principle of this decision, the High Court of Madras has held that where a similar enfranchisement takes place in favour of a widow of karnam service lands and a similar title is given to her, she takes an absolute interest in the lands (a). When the widow, at her husband's wish, rounded off the property by acquiring another portion and treated both as one, it was held that a case of accretion had been established and that she could not alienate the acquired property as if it were her own (b).

177A. Acquisition of new property from sale proceeds of property left by husband.—Where a widow sells the entire property left by her husband and from the sale proceeds acquires new property the property so acquired partakes of the nature of her husband's estate (c).

177B. Doctrine of blending.—The doctrine of blending which applies in case of coparceners where property is thrown into common stock (§ 227) cannot be involved in regard to property held by a Hindu female (e.g., widow) as a limited owner (d).

178. Limited power of disposal of immoveable property.—To uphold an alienation, by a widow or other limited heir, of the corpus of immoveable property inherited by her, it should be shown (e)—

(1) that there was legal necessity (f) (§§ 181-182); or

(2) that the alienee, after reasonable inquiry as to the necessity acted honestly in the belief that the necessity existed (§§ 181-182); or

(3) that there was such consent of the next reversioners to the alienation as would raise a presumption that the transaction was a proper one (§ 183); or

(4) that it was a surrender by her of her whole interest in the whole estate in favour of the nearest reversioner or reversioners at the time of alienation (§ 197).

Where any one of the first three positions is established, the alienation may be of the whole or any part of the estate; but where the fourth alone is proved then the alienation must be of the whole estate.

A widow or other limited heir has no power to dispose of the corpus of immoveable property inherited by her except in the four cases mentioned above.

A widow may alienate her husband's property to pay a debt incurred by her for legal necessity though that debt is barred at the time of alienation (g).

179. Limited power of disposal of moveable property.—In territories other than the Bombay State, a widow or other limited heirs has no greater power of disposal over moveable property inherited by her than over im-

---

(a) Palaniyandi v. Velayudam (1929) 52 Mad. 6, 112 I.C. 320, ('29) A.M. 93.

(b) Bharosa Shukul v. Monbasi Kuer (1932) 54 All. 1014, 143 I.C. 259, ('32) A.A. 690.

(c) Tod Singh v. Begam Bai ('60) A.M.P. 64; Ayyangouda v. Godigeppagouda ('40) A.B. 200.

(d) Mallesappa Bandeppa v. Desai Mallappa (1962) 2 S.C.J. 589.

(e) Debi Prosad v. Golap Bhagat (1913) 40 Cal. 721, 752, 753, 19 I.C. 273 [F.B.]; Rangasami v. Nachiappa (1919) 42 Mad. 523, 46 I.A. 72, 50 I.C. 498, ('18) A.P.C. 196.

(f) Fateh Singh v. Raghubir Sahai (1938) All. 904 (F.B.) (relates to usufructuary mortgage rights inherited by widow).

(g) Darogi Rai v. Basdeo Mahto (1937) 16 Pat. 45, 166 I.C. 555, (37) A.P. 40. Ratilal v. Indravadan ('66) A. Guj. 133.

moveable property, and she cannot dispose of it by deed or will (h). The same is the law in the Bombay State in cases governed by the Mitakshara (i). But in cases governed by the Mayukha, it has been held that she can dispose of moveable property inherited by her by act inter vivos, that is, by sale, gift, or otherwise (j), but not by will, and what remains of the property at her death descends to the next heirs of the last full owner (k). So also moveable property obtained by a Hindu widow in a partition with her son stands on the same footing as moveables acquired by inheritance and therefore, may be disposed of by her during her lifetime unrestricted by any rights of other persons (l). See, however, sec. 2 and sec. 3(3) of the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, supra. The result is somewhat startling.

180. No power to dispose of inherited property by will.—A widow or other limited heir cannot in any case dispose of by will property inherited by her or any portion thereof, whether the property be moveable or immoveable (m).

181. Alienations by widow.—A widow or other limited heir has no power to alienate the estate inherited by her from the deceased owner except for the following purposes, namely:—

(I) Religious or charitable purposes [§ 181A].

(II) Other purposes amounting to legal necessity [§ 181B].

For purposes of the first class she has a larger power of disposition than for purposes of the second class (n).

A surrender by a Hindu widow in favour of the next reversioner is not an alienation of her husband's estate (o).

181A. Alienation by widow for religious or charitable purposes.—(1) Extent of power of alienation.—A widow or other female heir may alienate the estate for certain religious or charitable purposes. These purposes may be divided into two classes, namely:—

(a) The performance of the obsequial ceremonies of the deceased owner mentioned in cl. (i) below, and the payment of his debts (p) mentioned in cl. (iv) below.

(b) The performance of religious ceremonies of persons other than the deceased owner mentioned in cl. (ii) below, and religious or chari-

---

(h) Bhugwandeen v. Myna Baee (1867) 11 M.I.A. 487 (Benares); Durga Nath v. Chintamoni (1904) 31 Cal. 214 (Bengal); Buchi v. Jagapathi (1885) 8 Mad. 304 (Madras).

(i) Pandharinath v. Govind (1908) 32 Bom. 59.

(j) Bechar v. Bai Lakshmi (1863) 1 Bom. H.C. 56; Bhagirthibai v. Khanujirao (1887) 11 Bom. 285, 297.

(k) Chamanlal v. Doshi Ganesh (1904) 28 Bom. 453; Gadadhar v. Chandrabhagabai (1893) 17 Bom. 690; Harilal v. Pranvalavdas (1892) 16 Bom. 229.

(l) Chamanlal v. Bai Parvati (1934) 58 Bom. 246, 150 I.C. 854, ('34) A.B. 151.

(m) Thakoor Deghee v. Rai Baluk Ram (1866) 11 M.I.A. 139; Gadadhar v. Chandrabhagabai (1893) 17 Bom. 690; Durga Nath v. Chintamoni (1903) 31 Cal. 214; Narasimha v. Venkatadri (1884) 8 Mad. 290; Sarat Chandra v. Charusila (1928) 55 Cal. 918, 112 I.C. 508, ('28) A.C. 794; Tirath Ram v. Khan Devi (1920) 1 Lah. 388, 60 I.C. 101, ('21) A.L. 149; Jagleo Singh v. Mussammat Raja Kuer (1927) 6 Pat. 788, 103 I.C. 482, ('27) A.P. 262; Shambhu Dayal v. Basdeo ('70) A.A. 525.

(n) Collector of Masulipatam v. Caraly Venkata (1861) 8 M.I.A. 529, 551.

(o) Kasubai v. Chandrabhaga (1947) Nag. 455.

(p) Ashutosh v. Chidam (1930) 57 Cal. 904, 126 I.C. 263, ('30) A.C. 371.

table acts which are supposed to conduce to the spiritual welfare of the deceased owner mentioned in cl. (iii) below.

The first class relates to acts which are essential and obligatory. The second class relates to acts which although not indispensable or obligatory are still pious purposes which conduce to the benefit of the soul of the deceased. With reference to the first class of acts, the powers of the Hindu female who holds the estate are wider than in respect of the acts which are simply pious. As regards acts of the first class, if the income of the estate or the estate itself is not sufficient to cover the expenses, she is entitled to sell the whole of it. As regards the second class, she can alienate a small portion only of the estate for the pious or charitable purpose she may have in view (q); the expense that is allowable as regards this class of acts must be limited by a due regard to the entire bulk of the estate, and may even be totally disallowed where it is not warranted by the circumstances of the family.

In Kamla Devi v. Bachulal Gupta, the Supreme Court (r) observed that one of the principles which clearly emerged from the decisions on the subject was that a Hindu widow in possession of the estate of her deceased husband can make an alienation for religious acts which are not essential or obligatory but are still pious observances which conduce to the bliss of the deceased husband's soul. In the case of essential or obligatory acts, if the income of the property or the property itself is not sufficient to cover the expenses, she is entitled to sell the whole of it; but for acts which are pious and which conduce to the bliss of the deceased husband's soul, she can alienate a reasonable portion of the property.

To justify an alienation for a religious or charitable purpose, it is not necessary to show any "benefit to the estate," or to prove any "pressure on the estate," such as is necessary in the case of an alienation for other purposes (s) [§ 181B (1)].

(2) What are religious or charitable purposes.—Having stated the extent of the power of disposition of a Hindu widow or other limited heir for religious or charitable acts, we proceed to consider the precise nature of these acts. The religious or charitable acts for which an alienation may be made are as follows:—

(i) Performance of the funeral (t) and shraddha ceremonies (u) of the deceased owner. These acts are essential and obligatory.

Thus a widow may alienate property inherited by her from her husband for the performance of the funeral and shraddha ceremonies of the husband. Similarly, a daughter succeeding as heir to her father may alienate property inherited by her for the performance of similar ceremonies of the father (v). So debts incurred by a daughter for the shraddha ceremony of her father, while the widow is alive, are on the same footing as debts incurred by the widow. Such debts bind the daughter when she succeeds as reversioner (w).

But this principle applies only to a widow or other limited owner or a donee from her in lawful possession. Where the property has devolved from the last owner upon his mother and after her death a person without lawful title enters into possession of the property, and incurs expenses for the funeral ceremonies of the mother, such person cannot claim a charge on the estate for the expenses so incurred against the reversioner (x).

---

(q) Sardar Singh v. Kunj Behari Lal (1922) 44 All. 503, 511, 49 I.A. 383, 391, 69 I.C. 36, ('22) A.P.C. 261; Kashirao v. Motiram (1951) Nag. 284.

(r) ('57) A.S.C. 431, 443.

(s) Collector of Masulipatam v. Cavaly Vencata (1861) 8 M.I.A. 529, 551; Ram Surat v. Hitanandan (1931) 10 Pat. 474, 131 I.C. 137, ('31) A.P. 330; Nandlal v. Hari Prasad ('55) A.P. 251.

(t) Ratanchand v. Jaicherchand (1898) 22 Bom. 818; Lakshminarayana v. Dasu (1888) 11 Mad. 288.

(u) Srimohan v. Brijbehary (1909) 36 Cal. 753, 2 I.C. 152.

(v) Raj Chunder v. Sheeshoo (1865) 7 W.R. 146.

(w) Daroga Rai v. Basdeo Mahto (1937) 16 Pat. 45, 166 I.C. 555, ('37) A.P. 40.

(x) Nand Rani v. Krishna Sahai (1935) 57 All. 997, 156 I.C. 23, ('35) A.A. 698.

(ii) Performance of religious ceremonies of persons whose ceremonies the deceased owner was bound to perform, as for instance, the shraddha of the husband's mother (y) and where a daughter inherits to her father, the performance of her mother's shraddha (z). These ceremonies are not essential or obligatory.

(iii) Religious or charitable acts which conduce to the spiritual welfare of her husband (a). These acts are not essential or obligatory.

No mathematical limit can be fixed to the power of alienation of a widow of her husband's property for the purpose of religious acts which conduce to his spiritual benefit. The question whether the property dedicated or alienated constitutes a reasonable proportion of the whole estate must depend upon the facts and circumstances of each case (c).

An alienation by a widow to pay off debts incurred by her for the Upanayana ceremony (investiture with the sacred thread) and marriage of her daughter's son will be upheld provided the debts are reasonable according to the ordinary notions of Hindus (d).

Following this and other decisions it has been held that an alienation of husband's property by a widow for meeting the marriage expenses of her daughter's son would be binding on the reversioners provided the limited owner acted with the best of motives and without extravagance (e).

The first set of religious acts referred to above relates to the performance of the ceremonies referred to in cl. (i) above, and the payment of debts referred to in cl. (iv) below (f). Both these are religious purposes which a widow is bound to carry out at any expense to the estate as laid down in Sardar Singh's case. These are absolute necessities. The second set of religious acts comprises the ceremonies referred to in cl. (ii) above, and religious or charitable acts which conduce to the spiritual welfare of the husband mentioned in cl. (iii). For these purposes the widow can make a gift of or alienate only a reasonable portion of the estate as laid down in Kamla Devi's case and other cases cited below (g. An endowment by a widow for the upkeep of Thakurdwara out of ail proportion to the estate, was held not to be binding on the reversioners though they raised no objection to the construction of the Thakurdwara (h). The gift may be of movable property, or it may be of immovable property. The circumstance that the widow has sufficient income to provide for the observances without an alienation of the estate is immaterial, for the income is her property (i). Almost all cases under this head relate to acts conducing to the spiritual welfare of the husband. The following are instances of such acts:—

Pilgrimages for the spiritual benefit of her husband and in performance of her duty to his soul, e.g., pilgrimage to Gaya for performing her husband's shraddha (j); performance of Gaya Shraddha of the husband (k); or pilgrimage to Pandharpur (l), but not a

---

(y) Chowdry Jummejoy v. Russomoyee (1868) 11 Beng. L.R. 418; Ramcoomar v. Ichamoyi (1881) 6 Cal. 36.

(z) Srimohan v. Brijbehary (1908) 36 Cal. 753.

(a) Collector of Masulipatam v. Cavaly Vencata (1861) 8 M.I.A. 529, 551; Raj Lukhee Debea v. Gokool Chunder (1866) 13 M.I.A. 209; Sardar Singh v. Kunj Behari Lal (1922) 44 All. 503, 511, 49 I.A. 383, 391, 69 I.C. 36, ('22) A.PC. 261 affirming, (1919) 41 All. 130, 48 I.C. 847, ('18) A.A. 40; Vuppuluri Tatayya v. Garimilla (1911) 34 Mad. 288, 6 I.C. 240; Khub Lal v. Ajodhya (1915) 43 Cal. 574, 31 I.C. 433, ('16) A.C. 792; Rabidat v. Mst. Jawali (1946) All. 580 (F.B.); Mahalakshamma v. Machamma ('61) A.A.P. 263.

(c) Sri Ram v. Chandeshwar Prasad (1952) 31 Pat. 417, ('52) A.P. 438; Nathuni Prasad v. Kachnar Kuer ('65) A.P. 160.

(d) Venkatasubba Rao v. Ananda Rao (1934) 57 Mad. 772, 155 I.C. 79, ('34) A.M. 432.

(e) Parisa Mudaliar v. Nataraja (1950) A.M. 337, (1950) 1 Mad. L.J. 90. Also see § 181B (iv), infra. And see Kamala Devi's case at p. 222, infra (gift on the occasion of marriage of daughter).

(f) Ashutosh v. Chidam (1930) 57 Cal. 901, 126 I.C. 263, ('30) A.C. 351.

(g) Panachand v. Manoharlal (1918) 42 Bom. 136, 43 I.C. 729, ('17) A.B. 155 [gift of four-fifths of the estate held invalid]; Rama v. Ranga (1885) 8 Mad. 552; Bhaskar v. Mahadeo (1869) 6 Bom. H.C.O.C. 1, 13; Ram Kawal v. Ram Kishore (1895) 22 Cal. 506; Kunj Bihari Lal v. Lallu Singh (1919) 41 All. 130, 48 I.C. 847, ('18) A.A. 40; Ram Charan v. Girjanandani Devi ('59) A. All. 473; Thakurji v. Parmeshwar Dayal ('60) A. All. 339; Thakur Indraj Bux v. Thakur Sheo Naresh (1927) 2 Luck. 713, 104 I.C. 676, ('27) A.O. 450; Thakur Prasad v. Musammat Dipa Kuer (1931) 10 Pat. 352, 134 I.C. 129, ('31) A.P. 422; Chandradip Rai v. Mahip Rai ('60) A.P. 112.

(h) Mst. Tulsha v. Lachman Prasad (1943) 18 Luck. 501, 204 I.C. 68, ('43) A.O. 109.

(i) (1922) 44 All. 503, 49 I.A. 383, 69 I.C. 36, ('22) A.PC. 261, infra.

(j) Muteeram v. Gopal (1873) 11 Beng. L.R. 416; Darbari Lal v. Gobind (1924) 46 All. 822, 80 I.C. 31, ('24) A.A. 902.

(k) Maniruddin v. Aminuddin ('56) A.P. 142.

(l) Ganpat v. Tulsiram (1912) 36 Bom. 88, 12 I.C. 271.

second pilgrimage to Gaya (m); a gift to the temple of Jagannath at Puri for bhog (food offerings) to the deity and for the maintenance of the priests there "for the salvation of my husband and his family members and my own salvation" (n); a gift made by a daughter at the time of performing her father's shraddha on the occasion of the Pushkaram, a peculiarly holy event among the Hindus (o); a gift for erecting and maintaining a temple for the benefit of the soul of the husband, though it may be also for the benefit of her soul (p); a gift for the excavation and maintenance of a tank to be attached to a temple founded by the husband (q); a gift for the construction of a tank pursuant to her husband's wishes (r); a gift to the husband's purohit (priest) on the occasion of her visit to Gaya (s); a gift by way of suphal sankalpa to a priest of Gaya (t); a gift to a family deity (u). A gift of a small portion of the estate by a Hindu widow to an educational institution has been held to be valid by the East Punjab High Court on the ground that it is not unrelated to the desire of rendering spiritual welfare to her husband (v).

But it is not competent to a Hindu widow to alienate any portion of her husband's property for her sole spiritual benefit. Hence the following gifts have been held to be invalid:—

A gift by a widow to a favoured idol made sixteen months after her husband's death without any reference to him or his funeral ceremonies (w); a gift to the pujari (worshipper) of a temple established by her husband's mother for which no provision was made by the deceased himself in his lifetime (x); a feast given by a widow on her return from pilgrimage (y); a gift for building a dharamsala about sixteen years after her husband's death, there being nothing to show that the intention was to confer spiritual benefit on her deceased husband (z); a gift for the construction of a temple and installation of idols for her own welfare and salvation in the next world (a), and a dedication of property to the idols installed in such temple (b); a gift to her own Guru nine years after her husband's death (c).

(iv) Payment of debts of the deceased owner, even though barred by limitation whether during his lifetime or after his death (d). Payment of these debts is essential and obligatory.

A widow or other limited female heir is not bound to pay the principal amount of the last male owner's debts, for the income belongs wholly to her (e). She is only bound

---

(m) Gur Prasad v. Ram Sukh ('52) A.A. 938. In the Bombay and Calcutta cases next cited a pilgrimage to Benares was held not to be a pilgrimage for the spiritual benefit of the deceased. It is submitted that there can be no general rule about Benares or any other holy place and each case must turn on its own facts; Shripati Raoji v. Vishwanath (1955) Bom. 1033, ('55) A.B. 457, 57 Bom. L.R. 840; Hari v. Bairand (1909) 13 C.W.N. 544, 547, 1 I.C. 434. Reference may also be made to Sudhir Chandra v. Jagadish Chandra ('59) A. Orissa 112.

(n) Sardar Singh v. Kunj Bihari Lal (1922) 44 All. 503, 49 I.A. 383, 69 I.C. 36, ('22) A.PC. 261.

(o) Tatayya v. Garimilla (1911) 34 Mad. 288, 6 I.C. 240.

(p) Thakur Indraj Bux v. Thakur Sheo Naresh (1927) 2 Luck. 713, 104 I.C. 676, ('27) A.O. 450.

(q) Khub Lal v. Ajodhya (1916) 43 Cal. 574, 31 I.C. 433, ('16) A.C. 792.

(r) Ram Surat v. Hitanandan (1931) 10 Pat. 474, 134 I.C. 137, ('31) A.P. 330.

(s) Gobind v. Lakhrani (1921) 43 All. 515, 63 I.C. 221, ('21) A.A. 109; Ishwari v. Babunandan (1925) 47 All. 563, 571, 88 I.C. 193, ('25) A.A. 495 [gift to a family priest set aside as it was of a large proportion of the estate].

(t) Baldeo Prasad v. Fateh Singh (1924) 46 All. 533, 79 I.C. 654, ('24) A.A. 933.

(u) Madan Mohan v. Rakhal Chandra (1930) 57 Cal. 570, 124 I.C. 327, ('30) A.C. 173.

(v) Prithi Pal v. The Sikh Educational Society for Women ('51) A Simla 175.

(w) Puran Dai v. Jai Narain (1882) 4 All. 482, 484.

(x) Ram Kawal v. Ramkishore (1895) 22 Cal. 506. The property alienated was, moreover, about one-third of the whole.

(y) Makhan Lal v. Gayan Singh (1911) 33 All. 255, 9 I.C. 199.

(z) Sham Devi v. Birbhadra (1921) 43 All. 463, 62 I.C. 432, ('21) A.A. 178; Munshi Lal v. Shiv Devi (1923) 4 Lah. 336, 78 I.C. 266, ('24) A.L. 137.

(a) Bishen Bayal Singh v. Musammat Jaisari Kuer (1918) Pat. 323, 48 I.C. 746, ('17) A.P. 4; Kalandi v. Sadhu ('67) A. Orissa 74 (performance of her obsequies).

(b) Thakur Prasad v. Musammant Dipa Kuer (1931) 10 Pat. 352, 134 I.C. 129, ('31) A.P. 442; Kashirao v. Motiram (1951) Nag. 284, ('51) A.N. 460.

(c) Har Mitra v. Raghubar (1928) 3 Luck. 645, 110 I.C. 618, ('28) A.O. 342.

(d) Ashutosh v. Chidam (1930) 57 Cal. 904, 126 I.C. 263, ('30) A.C. 351; Bhala v. Parbhu (1878) 2 Bom. 67; Chimnaji v. Dinkar (1887) 11 Bom. 320; Kondappa v. Subba (1890) 13 Mad. 189; Udai Chunder v. Ashutosh (1893) 21 Cal. 190; Santu Ram v. Mst. Dodan Bai (1928) 9 Lah. 85, 103 I.C. 706, ('27) A.L. 657; Tulshi Prasad v. Jugmohanlal (1935) 57 All. 422, 152 I.C. 92, ('34) A.A. 1048; Mt. Mallan v. Paramatma Das (1936) 17 Lah. 588, 166 I.C. 421, ('36) A.L. 558; Kammi v. Popur, ('50) A. Hy. 50; Vinayak v. Md. Hanif (1953) Nag. 281, ('54) A.N. 11; Rattan Devi v. Jagadhar Mal ('56) A. Punj. 46; cf. Wamanrao v. Shantabai (1953) Nag. 413, ('52) A.N. 317.

(e) Ramasami v. Mangaikarasu (1893) 18 Mad. 113, 119-120; Debi Dayal v. Bhan Pertap (1904) 31 Cal. 433, 443.

to pay the interest on the same out of the surplus of her income. When an alienation is made to pay off the principal and interest of a debt of the last male owner, it is not for a binding purpose so far as the interest is concerned, when she could have paid it off from her income, but if the proportion of the interest to the whole of the principal amount of the debt is small (e.g., one-fifth) the whole alienation will be upheld (f).

The act being a religious act of the first class, there is no restriction on her power of alienation and she may sell the whole estate for that purpose (h). She may pay even a debt barred by limitation but she is not entitled to pay a time-barred debt which was repudiated by her husband (i). But where a Hindu widow mortgages property to pay off the time-barred debt of her husband, and later on executes another mortgage to pay off the claim under the prior one which had by that time become time-barred, the last mortgage is not binding on the reversioner as it was executed only to pay off her time-barred debt (j). A daughter-in-law also is under a moral obligation to pay the time-barred debt of her father-in-law and she may alienate his property for the payment of such debts (k). But it has been held that a mother who has succeeded to her son's estate is not under any obligation to pay a time-barred debt of her husband, though the estate to which she has succeeded originally belonged to her husband; and alienation, therefore, of any part of the estate for the payment of such a debt is not binding on the reversioner (l). Where a widow has paid her husband's debts with her money in his lifetime, the presumption is that the payment was voluntary; she cannot therefore sell her husband's property after his death to pay herself the amount (m). A widow is not entitled to pay off her husband's debts incurred by him when he was a minor, so as to bind the reversioners of his estate (n).

(3) Widow not in possession.—A widow or other female heir who is not in possession of the estate, but is entitled to maintenance only, cannot burden the estate with any expense for religious or charitable purposes (o). The Court should in fixing the maintenance take into consideration the necessary religious expenses which she has to undergo (p), and if that has not been done she may apply in the suit in which the decree for maintenance was passed for an increase of maintenance so as to provide for those expenses.

181B. Alienation by widow for legal necessity.—(1) Extent of power of alienation.—The power of a widow or other limited heir to alienate the estate inherited by her for purposes other than religious or charitable is analogous to that of a manager of an infant's estate as defined by the Judicial Committee in Hunooman Persaud v. Musamat Babooee (q) [§ 242, note (1)]. That power is a limited and qualified one; it can only be exercised rightly "in a case of need or for the benefit of the estate" [sub-§ (3)]. But where the alienation is one that a prudent owner would make in order to benefit the estate, a bona fide alienee is not affected by the previous mismanagement of the estate. "The actual pressure on estate, the danger to be averted, or the benefit to be conferred upon it, in the particular instance, is the thing to be regarded" (p). If the alienation is for purposes of legal necessity or for the benefit of the estate, it binds not only her interest in the estate, but the whole

---

(f) Jagannadham v. Vighneshwarudu (1932) 55 Mad. 216, 134 I.C. 810, ('32) A.M. 177.

(h) (1930) 57 Cal. 901, 126 I.C. 263, ('30) A.C. 351, supra.

(i) Bhagwat v. Nivritti (1915) 39 Bom. 113, 27 I.C. 346, ('14) A.B. 245; cf. Anganna v. Appasami (1953) 1 M.L.J. 304 ('53) A.M. 106 (son's time barred debt).

(j) Chandrika Prasad v. Bhagwan Das (1940) 15 Lucknow 167; Raja Rao v. Chiranjeevulu ('55) A. Orissa 17.

(k) Bhau v. Gopala (1887) 11 Bom. 325.

(l) Sheo Ram v. Sheo Ratan (1921) 43 All. 604, 63 I.C. 279, ('21) A.A. 163; cf. Lakshminarasayya v. Papayya ('55) A. Andhra 97.

(m) Bhawani v. Himmat (1911) 33 All. 342, 10 I.C. 274 [P.C.], affirming Himmat v. Bhawani (1908) 30 All. 352.

(n) Bajrang Singh v. Govind Prasad (1936) 11 Luck. 11, 154 I.C. 841, ('35) A.O. 373.

(o) Ramabai v. Dattatraya (1931) 33 Bom. L.R. 1244, 135 I.C. 491, ('31) A.B. 497.

(p) Baisni v. Rup Singh (1890) 12 All. 358; Devi Persad v. Gunwanti Kuar (1895) 22 Cal. 410.

(q) (1856) 6 M.I.A. 393; Koneswar Pershad v. Run Bahadur (1881) 6 Cal. 843, 8 I.A. 8.

body of reversioners (r). The principles relating to the widow's power to alienate property were reiterated by the Supreme Court in Jaisri v. Rajdewan (s).

"The touchstone of the authority is necessity" (t). The word "necessity," when used in this connection, has a somewhat special, almost technical, meaning. It does not mean actual compulsion, but the kind of pressure which the law recognizes as serious and sufficient (u). The receipt even of full value for property sold by her, where there is no pressure on the estate, will not justify the sale; otherwise every transaction with a limited heir for full value would be valid (v).

(2) Purposes of legal necessity.—The following purposes have been held to amount to legal necessity for which an alienation may be made:—

(i) Costs of taking out probate, or letters of administration, or a succession certificate in respect of the estate of the deceased owner (w).

(ii) Payment of arrears of Government revenue and of decrees for rent accrued due after the death of the deceased owner, provided she had no funds when she mortgaged or sold the property to pay the revenue or the decrees and the mortgage or sale was absolutely necessary in order to discharge the debt, which if not discharged would have resulted in a forcible sale of the property (x). If there is an actual existing necessity, the circumstance that the necessity was brought about by the mismanagement of the widow does not vitiate the mortgage or sale, unless it is shown that the mortgagee or purchaser himself contributed to the mismanagement [§ 182].

Arrears of Government revenue and of rent due by the deceased owner himself constitute his debts, and they fall under § 181A(2)(iv) and they are payable out of his estate. But arrears of revenue and rent accrued due in respect of her husband's property after his death must be paid out of the gross income (y).

(iii) Maintenance of herself (z), and of persons whom the deceased owner was bound to maintain, such as his mother, paternal grandmother, unmarried daughters, and the like (a), or paying off debts incurred for family expenses (b).

---

(r) Collector of Masulipatam v. Cavaly Vencata (1861) 8 M.I.A. 529, 550-551; Sham Sunder v. Acchhan Kunwar (1898) 25 I.A. 183, 189, 192, 21 All. 71, 80, 83. Widow dying before completion of sale—Doctrine of part performance applied. Ranchhod v. Manubai (1954) Bom. 194, (1953) 55 Bom. L.R. 890, ('54) A.B. 153.

(s) ('62) A.S.C. 83; (1962) 1 S.C.J. 578. Also see Rani v. Shanta Bala ('71) A.S.C. 1028 (strained financial circumstances).

(t) Sham Sunder v. Achhan Kunwar (1898) 25 I.A. 183, 192, 21 All. 71, 83.

(u) Ramsumran Prasad v. Shyam Kumari (1922) 49 I.A. 342, 346, 1 Pat. 741, 745, 69 I.C. 71, ('22) A.PC. 356.

(v) Ravaneshwar v. Chandi Prasad (1916) 43 Cal. 417 [P.C.], 36 I.C. 499, ('15) A.C. 57, affirming same case (1911) 38 Cal. 721, 750, 12 I.C. 931; Chandrakishore v. Upendra Chandra (1923) 37 Cal. L.J. 319, 74 I.C. 612, ('23) A.C. 563.

(w) Srimohan v. Brijbehary (1909) 36 Cal. 753, 2 I.C. 153.

(x) Jagannath v. Gur Charan (1929) 4 Luck. 279, 114 I.C. 783, ('29) A.O. 422; Rameswar v. Provalati (1914) 19 C.W.N. 313, 25 I.C. 84, ('15) A.C. 141; Srimohan v. Brijbehary (1909) 36 Cal. 753, 2 I.C. 153; Ganesh Lal v. Khetra Mohan (1926) 53 I.A. 134, 5 Pat. 585, 95 I.C. 839, ('26) A.PC. 56; Jiban v. Brojo Lal (1903) 30 Cal. 550, 30 I.A. 81; Ghansham v. Badiya Lal (1902) 24 All. 547; Lakshman v. Radha Bai (1887) 11 Bom. 609.

(y) Jagannath v. Gur Charan (1929) 4 Luck. 279, 282-283, 114 I.C. 783, ('29) A.O. 422; Ishwari v. Babunandan (1925) 47 All. 563, 88 I.C. 193, ('25) A.A. 495.

(z) Sadashiv v. Dhakubai (1881) 5 Bom. 450 at p. 460. See also Ramsumran Prasad v. Shyam Kumari (1922) 49 I.A. 342, 346, 1 Pat. 741, 745, 69 I.C. 71, ('22) A.PC. 356; Umakanta v. Satya Charan ('65) A.C. 189; Ratilal v. Indravadan ('66) A. Guj. 133.

(a) Darbari Lal v. Gobind (1924) 46 All. 822, 80 I.C. 31, ('24) A.A. 902.

(b) Venkatasubba Rao v. Ananda Rao (1934) 57 Mad. 772, 155 I.C. 79, ('34) A.M. 432.

No hard and fast rule can be expected on the question whether a widow in possession of very little property left by her husband can or cannot sell the same for her future maintenance. It would be difficult to say with exactitude that she has no such power since ultimately each case must depend on its own facts and circumstances (c).

(iv) Marriages of relations of the deceased owner, such as his daughter, son's daughter, daughter's daughter, grandson's daughter (d), paternal uncle's son's daughter (e), and others, which are a burden on the estate.

A daughter inheriting to her father or mother may defray the marriage expenses of her own daughter or daughter's daughter out of the estate, if the father of the girl to be married, is a man of no means and is unable to defray those expenses (f).

No hard and fast rule can be laid down as to the amount of marriage expenses (g).

(v) Gift by a widow to her daughter on the occasion of her marriage or at her gauna ceremony (h), also a gift to her son-in-law on the occasion of the daughter's marriage (i) or a gift by way of marriage customary present called Bhat on the occasion of the marriage of her niece (husband's sister's daughter) (j), provided that in each case the gift is of a reasonable amount. But there is no rule that the daughter is entitled to no more than $\frac{1}{4}$ share of her deceased father's estate on the occasion of her marriage (k).

In Kamla Devi v. Bachulal Gupta (l) the Supreme Court reviewed a number of decisions on the subject of gift of reasonable portion of property to a daughter on marriage and held that it was competent to a widow to make a gift of a reasonable portion of the estate of her husband to her daughter as a marriage dowry in pursuance and fulfilment of an ante-nuptial agreement, even though the gift was made two years after the marriage ceremony.

In the abovementioned case the gift was of immovable property of the value of Rs. 19,000 which was about $\frac{1}{4}$ of the property allotted to her share out of the estate of her deceased husband. Two of the principles accepted by the Supreme Court as emerging from the decisions on the subject were: Gifts by a widow of landed property to her daughter or son-in-law on the occasion of the marriage or any ceremonies connected with the marriage are well recognised in Hindu law. If a promise is made of such a gift for or at the time of the marriage, that promise may be fulfilled afterwards and it is not essential to make a gift at the time of the marriage but it may be made afterwards

---

(c) Neelambal v. Rajarathnam ('56) A.M. 336 (F.B.).

(d) Ramcoomar v. Ichamoyi (1880) 6 Cal. 36; Debi Dayal v. Bhan Pertap (1904) 31 Cal. 433; Makhan v. Gayan (1911) 33 All. 255, 9 I.C. 199; Ganpat v. Tulsiram (1912) 36 Bom. 88, 12 I.C. 271 [betrothal of daughter]; Bhagwati v. Ram Jatan (1923) 45 All. 297, 73 I.C. 648, ('24) A.A. 23; Mahadeo Prasad v. Musammat Dhanraj (1926) 1 Luck. 477, 95 I.C. 574, ('26) A.O. 425; Krishnamachariar v. Ramabadran (1952) Mad. 318, ('52) A.M. 706; cf. Narainbati v. Ramdhari (1916) 1 Pat. L.J. 81, 34 I.C. 277, ('16) A.P. 178. Also cf. Lacchan Puranik v. Fulkunwar ('61) A.M.P. 239.

(e) Baijnath Rai v. Mangla Prasad (1926) 5 Pat. 350, 90 I.C. 732, ('26) A.P. 1.

(f) Rustom Singh v. Moti Singh (1896) 18 All. 474; Rajagopalachariar v. Sami Reddi (1926) 50 Mad. L.J. 221, 93 I.C. 49, ('26) A.M. 517; Kamla Prasad v. Lalji Prasad (1930) 9 Pat. 721, 127 I.C. 842, ('30) A.P. 600; Srinivasa Rao v. Annadhanam Seshacharulu (1942) Mad. 42, 198 I.C. 169, ('42) A.M. 106.

(g) (1923) 45 All. 297, 299, 73 I.C. 648, ('24) A.A. 23, supra, (1926) 1 Luck. 477, 95 I.C. 574, ('26) A.O. 425, supra; Churaman v. Gopi Sahu (1910) 37 Cal. 1, 5-6, 1 I.C. 945.

(h) (1909) 37 Cal. 1, 1 I.C. 945, supra; Jowala Ram v. Hari (1924) 5 Lah. 70, 80 I.C. 680, ('24) A.L. 429; Udai Dat v. Ambika Prasad (1927) 2 Luck. 412, 100 I.C. 503, ('27) A.O. 110.

(i) Ramasami v. Vengidusami (1898) 22 Mad. 113; Ram Sumran v. Govind Das (1926) 5 Pat. 646, 99 I.C. 789, ('26) A.P. 582.

(j) Gulab Devi v. Banwari Lal (1940) All. 555, 190 I.C. 202, ('40) A.S. 403, (1940) A.L.J. 464. This case seems to go too far though the plaintiff's action in questioning the alienation seems to be without any grace as it was for her own daughter's marriage.

(k) Krishna Pratap Singh v. Prembada Kunwar (1942) All. 708, 203 I.C. 97, ('42) A.A. 365, (1942) A.L.J. 487.

(l) ('57) A.S.C. 434.

in fulfilment of the promise provided the condition that the gift must be of a reasonable portion of the property is satisfied.

(3) Alienation by widow for "the benefit of the estate."—Besides legal necessity a widow or other limited heir may alienate the estate "for the benefit of the estate" [see § 243A]. An alienation of property to meet the costs of litigation necessary for preserving the estate is an alienation "for the benefit of the estate" (m). So too is an alienation for making necessary repairs to properties belonging to the estate. So also is an exchange of land for effective management of the estate (*m*1). But an alienation for developing or improving the properties is not one "for the benefit of the estate," though it may bring additional income, and it does not bind the reversioners (n).

181C. Alienation for legal necessity by one widow without consent of other widows.—If a Hindu dies leaving two widows they succeed as joint tenants with a right of survivorship, but they can partition the property so that each may separately enjoy an equal share of the income [§ 43, no. 4, note (4)]. No agreement to partition is however possible if one of the widows is a minor, and there is no legal guardian to act on her behalf (o).

If they act together, they can alienate the corpus of the estate for debts contracted for necessity, but one of them cannot prejudice the right of survivorship of the other by alienations, even though for a legal necessity, save by the consent of the other, or possibly save where that consent has been applied for and unreasonably withheld. The mere fact that a partition has taken place between them does not imply a right to prejudice the claims of the survivor (p). The arrangement between the two widows may be of such a character that each may relinquish her right of survivorship as to the portions of the estate held by the other. In such a case the alienation (with or without legal necessity and without the consent of the other) cannot be questioned by the other but it will not bind the reversioners (q).

A Hindu dies leaving two widows A and B, and leaving two properties X and Y. The widows divide the properties so that A obtains possession of property X, and B of property Y. A afterwards mortgages property X for debts contracted by her for a legal necessity, and puts the mortgagee in possession. On A's death, B is entitled to possession of property X from the mortgagee.

The same principles apply to two or more daughters (r). See § 31 ante.

181D. Alienation by widow may be by way of mortgage or sale.—Where a case of necessity exists, the widow or other limited heir is not bound to raise money on her personal security. She may sell the property or mortgage it. She is not bound to mortgage it, if a mortgage would be more

---

(m) Karimuddin v. Gobind Krishna (1909) 31 All. 497, 36 I.A. 138, 3 I.C. 795; Debi Dayal v. Bhan Pertap (1904) 31 Cal. 433; Jagdat Singh v. Rawat (1929) 4 Luck. 26, 112 I.C. 238, ('29) A.O. 364; Maniklal v. Kisni (1941) Nagpur 135, 192 I.C. 798, ('41) A.N. 78; Sura Prasad v. Makhna Devi (1945) All. 465; Beni Madho v. Ram Kuer ('54) A.P. 451; Ananto Mohini v. Khalil Sahu ('54) Orissa 107 (criminal case against slanderers).

(*m*1) Kanhaiya Singh v. Ram Kisto ('64) A.P. 254.

(n) Hurry v. Gonesh (1884) 10 Cal. 823; Ganap v. Subbi (1908) 32 Bom. 577; Makhan v. Gayan (1911) 33 All. 255, 9 I.C. 199, supra. In Dayamani v. Srinibash (1906) 33 Cal. 842, the circumstances were special; Sundarmani Devi v. Rupei Dei ('56) A. Orissa 16 (sale of a dilapidated house was an act of prudent management).

(o) Kasubai v. Chandrabhaga (1947) Nagpur 455.

(p) Gajapati v. Pusapati (1892) 19 I.A. 184, 16 Mad. 1; Gauri Nath v. Gaya Kuar (1928) 55 I.A. 399, 111 I.C. 485, ('28) A.PC. 251, overruling Jai Narain v. Munna Lal (1928) 50 All. 489, 107 I.C. 699, ('28) A.A. 92. See also Vallura v. Sasapu (1925) 49 Mad. L.J. 479, 90 I.C. 881, ('26) A.M. 6; Krishna Pratap Singh v. Prembada Kunwar (1942) All. 708; 203 I.C. 97, ('42) A.A. 365, (1942) A.L.J. 487; Chanderjit Das v. Debi Das (1953) 1 All. 437 ('51) A.A. 522; Rajasekaran Pillai v. K. Phillipose ('54) A. Trav. Co. 101.

(q) Dulhin Parbati Kuer v. Baijnath Prasad (1935) 14 Pat. 518, 155 I.C. 213, ('36) A.P. 200; Ammani Ammal v. Periasami Udayan (1923) 45 Mad. L.J. 1, 74 I.C. 58; Beni Madho v. Ram Kuer ('54) A.P. 451. Also see Karpagathachi v. Nagarathinathachi ('65) A.S.C. 1752.

(r) Yelumalai Chetty v. Natesachari (1945) Mad. 35.

prejudicial to her than a sale by reducing her income to a greater extent (s). Even if a mortgage would have been more beneficial than a sale, still if she and the purchaser are both acting honestly, the sale cannot be set aside on the ground solely that she ought to have mortgaged and not sold (t). Where there is a mortgage subsisting on the property, the question whether the widow could sell it in discharge of the liability is a question which must be determined on the facts of each case, there being no absolute prohibition against her effecting a sale in a proper case. What has to be determined is whether the act is one which can be justified as that of a prudent owner managing his or her own property. It was held by the Supreme Court, after reiterating the principles relating to the subject, that a sale by the widow of property which is subject matter of a usufructuary mortgage cannot be said to be beyond her powers though the case may be one where the mortgagee cannot sue to recover the amount due on the mortgage (*t*1). If the property has been mortgaged, but the income of the property is not sufficient to pay the interest on the mortgage-debt, she may sell the property even before the debt is due, if in the circumstances this is a proper, though not a necessary, course to take. "A widow, like a manager of a family, must be allowed a reasonable latitude in the exercise of her powers, provided she acts fairly to her expectant heirs" (u).

182. Burden of proof of necessity: Evidence.—Those who deal with a person who has only a limited interest in the property and who proposes to dispose of a larger interest, are prima facie bound to make out the facts which authorize such a disposition. The power of a widow or other limited heir to sell or mortgage the estate inherited by her is a limited and qualified power. She is at perfect liberty to dispose of her own life-interest in the estate, but if she proposes to alienate the corpus of the estate either by way of sale or mortgage, the purchaser or mortgagee is bound to inquire into the necessity for the sale or mortgage. If the sale or mortgage is impeached, the burden lies on him to prove—

(a) either that there was legal necessity in fact (v); or

(b) that he made proper and bona fide inquiry as to the existence of the necessity, and did all that was reasonable to satisfy himself as to the existence of the necessity (w).

If he proves that there was a necessity in fact, the alienation will be upheld, even though the necessity was brought about by the mismanagement of the limited heir (x), unless it be shown that he himself contributed to the mismanagement (y).

---

(s) Singam v. Draupadi (1908) 31 Mad. 153; Bal Krishna v. Hira Lal (1919) 41 All. 338, 345, 50 I.C. 74, ('19) A.A. 406.

(t) Phoolchand v. Rughoobuns (1869) 9 W.R. 108; Nabakumar v. Bhabasundari (1867) 3 Beng. L.R. (A.C.J.) 375; Kamalini v. Himangshu ('56) A.C. 211 (A Hindu widow has certainly the duty to see that the reversion is not unnecessarily lost).

(*t*1) Jaisri v. Rajdeican ('62) A.SC. 83; (1962) 1 S.C.J. 578; Ramjee Rai v. Gopal Ahir ('63) A.P. 34.

(u) Venkaji v. Vishnu (1894) 18 Bom. 534, 536. See also Niamat Rai v. Din Dayal (1927) 54 I.A. 211, 8 Lah. 597, 101 I.C. 373, ('27) A.PC. 121 [powers of manager].

(v) Bajrang Singh v. Govind Prasad (1936) 11 Luck. 11, 154 I.C. 841, ('35) A.O. 373.

(w) Ramanand Lal v. Damodar Das (1941) All. 820, 199 I.C. 369, ('42) A.A. 110, (1942) A.L.J. 94.

(x) Rai Rajeshwar Bali v. Har Kishen Bali (1933) 8 Luck. 538, 150 I.C. 346, ('33) A.O. 170; Amruti Dei v. Saradamoni ('50) A. Orissa 143.

(y) Birendra Nath v. Domon Chandra, I.L.R. (1953) 1 Cal. 208, ('52) A.C. 473.

Even if he fails to prove that there was a necessity in fact, the alienation will be upheld, if he proves that he made such inquiry as aforesaid, and that the facts represented to him were such as, if true, would have justified the transaction [ill. (1)].

In no case, however, is he bound to see that the money paid by him is applied to meet the necessity. The reason is that he can rarely have the means of controlling the actual application, unless he himself enters on the management (z).

The same rule applies to a transferee from an alienee (a) [ill. (2)].

Illustrations

(1) A, a Hindu widow, whose husband has left collateral heirs (reversioners) alleging that the property held by her as such is insufficient for her maintenance, agrees to sell a field, part of such property, to B. B satisfies himself by honest and reasonable enquiry that the income of the property is not sufficient for A's maintenance and that the sale of the field is necessary, and acting in good faith, buys the field from A. The sale is binding not only on the widow, but on the reversioners, even if it turns out that there was no necessity in fact to sell the property. See the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, s. 38, and § 244 below.

(2) A Hindu governed by the Madras school of Hindu law dies leaving a daughter and her [daughter's] son. The daughter succeeds to his property for a woman's estate. Litigation ensues in respect of the estate between the daughter and a grandnephew M of the deceased. A compromise is arrived at between the daughter and M whereby the estate of the deceased is divided equally between them. M knew that he had no honest claim to the estate. M then mortgages the property that came to his share to K, the mortgage deed stating that the property had been transferred to M under the compromise. The daughter's son sues M and K for a declaration that the compromise and the mortgage are not binding on him. The compromise between the daughter and M is set aside as not binding on the daughter's son. Is K in any better position than M? The Judicial Committee has held that he is not. K had notice that M took from one who was a limited heir, and he was therefore bound to inquire whether the compromise was valid, but he had failed to do so. "Here there is no proof either of necessity or of inquiry validating the compromise." The mortgage to K also was therefore held not to be binding on the daughter's son. The provisions of ss. 89 and 96 of the Indian Trusts Act, 1882, do not apply to such a case: Obala Kondama v. Kandasami (1923) 51 I.A. 145, 47 Mad. 181, 79 I.C. 961, ('24) A.PC. 56.

What the alienee must prove.—"One who claims title under a conveyance from a woman, with the usual limited interest which a woman takes, and who seeks to enforce that title against reversioners, is always subject to the burden of proving not only the genuineness of his conveyance, but the full comprehension by the limited owner of the nature of the alienation she was making, and also that the alienation was justified by necessity, or at least that the alienee did all that was reasonable to satisfy himself of the existence of such necessity" (b). "In order to sustain an alienation by a Hindu widow of the corpus of her husband's estate, it must be shown, either that there was legal necessity for the alienation, or, at least, that the grantee was led on reasonable grounds to believe that there was" (c). Lapse of time does not affect the question of onus of proof regarding necessity except in so far as it might give rise to a presumption of acquiescence,

---

(z) Hunooman Persaud v. Mussamat Babooee (1856) 6 M.I.A. 393; Cavaly Vencata v. Collector of Masulipatam (1867) 11 M.I.A. 619; Kameswar Pershad v. Run Bahadur (1881) 6 Cal. 843, 8 I.A. 8; Hurro Nath v. Randhir Singh (1891) 18 Cal. 311, 18 I.A. 1; Amarnath v. Achan Kuar (1892) 14 All. 420, 19 I.A. 196; Maheshar v. Ratan Singh (1896) 23 Cal. 766, 23 I.A. 57; Sham Sunder v. Achhan Kunwar (1899) 21 All. 71, 25 I.A. 183; Dharam Chand v. Bhawani (1898) 25 Cal. 189, 24 I.A. 183; Bhagwat Dayal v. Debi Dayal (1908) 35 Cal. 420, 35 I.A. 48. Chansham Singh v. Badiya Lal (1902) 24 All. 547; Ram Bilas v. Ramchander ('54) A.P. 455.

(a) Obala Kondama v. Kandasami (1923) 51 I.A. 145, 47 Mad. 181, 79 I.C. 961, ('24) A.PC. 56; Patha Pedda Elliah v. Palagiri Gangamma ('57) A. And. Pra. 776.

(b) Bhagwat Dayal v. Debi Dayal (1908) 35 Cal. 420, 35 I.A. 48, 57-58.

(c) Amarnath v. Achan Kuar (1892) 14 All. 420, 429, 19 I.A. 196, 202; Kalishanker Das v. Dhirendra Nath (1955) 1 S.C.R. 467, 480, (1954) 2 M.L.J. 351, ('54) A.SC. 505.

or save the alienee from adverse inferences arising from the scanty proof which might be offered on his behalf (d).

Recitals of necessity.—Recitals in mortgages or deeds of sale of the existence of necessity are admissible in evidence (e), but they are not evidence by themselves of the act (f). To substantiate the allegation of the existence of necessity there must be some evidence aliunde (g). The reason is that the alienee, to protect his interest, may get false recitals to be made (h). But when by effluxion of time evidence independent of the recitals becomes unavailable, a recital of necessity, consistent with probability and the circumstances, assumes greater importance; it is clear evidence of a representation to the purchaser, and, when evidence of actual inquiry by him has become impossible, the recital, coupled with circumstances which justify a reasonable belief that an inquiry would have confirmed its truth, is sufficient evidence to support the deed (i).

In a recent decision the Supreme Court pointed out that the recitals may be used to corroborate other evidence of the existence of legal necessity and that the weight to be attached to them varies according to the circumstances of the case. Where the evidence which could be brought before the Court and is within the special knowledge of the person who seeks to set aside the sale is withheld, such evidence being normally not available to the alienee, the recitals go to his aid with greater force and the Court may in an appropriate case raise an inference against the party seeking to set aside the sale (ii).

The absence of a recital of necessity in a deed of sale does not vitiate the sale. The necessity may be proved by other evidence (j).

Lapse of time.—Where a long period (82 years) has elapsed since the sale took place, it is not reasonable to expect such full and detailed evidence of the circumstances which gave rise to the sale as in the case of an alienation at a more recent date, and presumptions are permissible to fill in the details which have been obliterated by time (k). But apart from allowing presumptions to fill in details in the evidence which have been obliterated by time, lapse of time does not alter the incidence of the burden of proof, nor does it dispense with evidence direct or circumstantial of justifying necessity (l).

Rate of interest.—See notes to § 244 under the same head.

Burden of proof.—"Consent decree" involving alienation to mortgagee.—It has been held by a Full Bench of the Madras High Court that where a widow who has mortgaged her husband's property is sued by the mortgagee, and the suit is compromised by a transfer of the property by the widow absolutely in consideration of the mortgage debt, the burden of proving that the compromise was valid and binding on the reversioners is on the mortgagee purchaser (m). In a Privy Council case a widow sued upon a mortgage executed to her husband and obtained a decree for sale. She then purchased with the leave of Court some of the mortgaged properties at the auction sale. The

---

(d) Ravaneshwar v. Chandi Prasad (1911) 38 Cal. 721, 12 I.C. 931, affmd. in (1915) 43 Cal. 417, 36 I.C. 499, ('15) A.P.C. 57; Subramaniam v. Chelikani (1950) 1 M.L.J. 527.

(e) Banga Chandra v. Jagat Kishore (1915) 43 I.A. 249, 44 Cal. 186, 36 I.C. 420, ('16) A.P.C. 110; Darbari Lal v. Gobind (1924) 46 All. 822, 826, 80 I.C. 31, ('24) A.A. 902.

(f) Bed Nath v. Rani Rajeshwari Devi (1938) 13 Luck. 357, 168 I.C. 725, ('37) A.O. 406; Kalika Prasad v. Jhenjho Kuer ('64) A.P. 241.

(g) Brij Lal v. Inda Kunwar (1914) 36 All. 187, 23 I.C. 715, ('14) A.P.C. 38; Biswanath v. Kayastha Trading Corporation (1929) 8 Pat. 450, 119 I.C. 405, ('29) A.P. 422; Raj Lukhee Dabia v. Gokool Chunder (1869) 13 M.I.A. 209, 3 Beng. L.R. (P.C.) 57. See also Vasonji v. Chanda Bibi (1915) 37 All. 369, 376, 29 I.C. 781, ('15) A.P.C. 18; Debendranath Sharma v. Nagendranath Datta (1933) 60 Cal. 1158, 149 I.C. 522, ('33) A.C. 900.

(h) Muhammad v. Brij Bihari (1924) 46 All. 636, 82 I.C. 5, ('24) A.A. 939.

(i) Banga Chandra v. Jagat Kishore (1916) 43 I.A. 249, 44 Cal. 186, 36 I.C. 420, ('16) A.P.C. 110; Ram Narain v. Nandrani (1928) 50 All. 823, 114 I.C. 868, ('29) A.A. 128; Thakar Singh v. Mst. Uttam ('29) 10 Lah. 613, 118 I.C. 449, ('29) A.L. 295; Rai Rajeshwar Bali v. Har Kishen Bali (1933) 8 Luck. 538, 150 I.C. 346, ('33) A.O. 170; Somnath v. Ambika Prasad ('50) A.A. 121.

(ii) Rani v. Shanta Bala ('71) A.S.C. 1028.

(j) Womesh Chander v. Digumbure (1865) 3 W.R. 154.

(k) Chintamanibhatla v. Rani of Wadhwan (1920) 47 I.A. 6, 43 Mad. 541, 55 I.C. 538, ('20) A.P.C. 64; Ravaneshwar v. Chandi Prasad (1915) 43 Cal. 417, 36 I.C. 499, ('15) A.P.C. 57 affmg. (1911) 38 Cal. 721, 12 I.C. 931; Ram Narain v. Nandrani (1928) 50 All. 823, 114 I.C. 868, ('29) A.A. 128; Thakar Singh v. Mst. Uttam (1929) 10 Lah. 613, 118 I.C. 449, ('29) A.L. 295; Piari Lal v. Sundar Singh (1922) 44 All. 756, 68 I.C. 805, ('22) A.A. 436; Babulal v. Maniklal (1941) Nagpur 124, 192 I.C. 826, ('41) A.N. 79.

(l) Subramanyam v. Chelikani (1950) Mad. 1053, ('50) A.M. 514, (1950) 1 M.L.J. 527, dissenting from the statement of law made by Leach, C.J. in Govindu v. Venkatapathi, (1947) Mad. 105; Mukabasappa v. Hamantappa (1953) 55 Bom. L.R. 223; Venkateswara Rao v. Venkatasiva Rao ('57) A. Andh. Pra. 945; Sohan Lal v. Chhagan Lal ('57) Raj. 355; cf. Sumantrabai v. Rishabhkumar (1953) A. Nag. 69, ('52) A.N. 295.

(m) Tirupatiraju v. Venkayya (1922) 45 Mad. 504, 57 I.C. 479, ('22) A.M. 131 [F.B.].

mortgagors filed a petition in objection to the sale. The widow then entered into a compromise with the mortgagors. The High Court of Patna held that the burden was on the reversioners impeaching the compromise to show that the compromise was not binding on them. Their Lordships of the Privy Council said: "Their Lordships do not find it necessary to consider whether the judgment of the High Court, in so far as it places the burden of proof upon the present appellants [reversioners], is absolutely and without qualification sound" (n). See also ill. (2) above.

183. Alienation by widow with consent of reversioners, that is, for presumptive legal necessity.—(1) When the alienation of the whole or part of the estate by a Hindu widow or other limited heir is to be supported on the ground of legal necessity, then if such necessity is not proved aliunde and the alienee does not prove inquiry on his part and honest belief in the necessity, the consent of such reversioners as may fairly be expected to be interested to dispute the transaction will be held to afford a presumptive proof which, if not rebutted by contrary proof, will validate the transaction as a right and proper one (o).

Mere consent of the next reversioners does not validate an alienation; it is only of evidential value. It is no conclusive proof of the existence of legal necessity. It raises a presumption of the existence of legal necessity. As the matter rests in presumption only, the actual reversioner at the widow's death is not precluded from questioning the alienation, but the burden lies upon him to show that there was no legal necessity for the alienation [ill. (a)] (p). When he adduces no evidence to rebut the presumption he must fail (q). The mere fact that the consent was given for a consideration does not negative the presumption (r). If the consenting reversioner himself is the actual reversioner, he will be precluded by his consent from questioning the alienation [§ 191] unless he can show that his consent was obtained by misrepresentation of the facts (s). When the presumption, that the alienation was justified by legal necessity, had been displaced, there is no presumption that any of the items constituting the consideration were justified by legal necessity and the onus of proving legal necessity for any item is on the alienee (t). The consent of one of several reversioners does not raise the presumption of the existence of legal necessity (u).

Where an alienation is made without the consent of the next reversioner, the burden lies on the alienee to show that the transaction was one for legal necessity [§ 182].

(2) The quantum of consent necessary to raise this presumption depends upon the facts of each particular case. Ordinarily the consent of the whole body of persons constituting the next reversion should be obtained, though there may be cases in which special circumstances may render the strict enforcement of this rule impossible. In any case there should be such a con-

---

(n) Ramsumran Prasad v. Shyam Kumari (1926) 49 I.A. 342, 349-350, 1 Pat. 741, 749, 29 I.C. 71, ('22) A.PC. 356.

(o) Rangasami v. Nachiappa (1919) 46 I.A. 72, 42 Mad. 523, 50 I.C. 498, ('18) A.PC. 196; Bajrangi Singh v. Manokarnika (1908) 30 All. 1, 35 I.A. 1, overruling Ramphal Rai v. Tula (1884) 6 All. 116; Debi Prosad v. Golap Bhagat (1913) 40 Cal. 721, 19 I.C. 273 [F.B.]; Vinayak v. Govind (1901) 25 Bom. 129; Pilu v. Babaji (1910) 34 Bom. 165, 4 I.C. 584; Ramkrishna v. Tripurabai (1911) 13 Bom. L.R. 940, 12 I.C. 529; Bijoy Gopal v. Girindra Nath (1914) 41 Cal. 793, 805, 23 I.C. 162, ('14) A.PC. 128; Moti v. Laldas (1917) 41 Bom. 93, 37 I.C. 945, ('16) A.B. 85; Ghisiawan v. Mussammat Raj Kumari (1921) 43 All. 534, 63 I.C. 556, ('21) A.A. 33 [presumption rebutted]; Bhup Singh v. Jhamman Singh (1921) 44 All. 95, 64 I.C. 630, ('22) A.A. 619; Darbari Lal v. Gobind (1924) 46 All. 822, 80 I.C. 31, ('24) A.A. 902 [presumption not rebutted]; Muhammad Salid v. Kunwar Darshan (1928) 50 All. 75, 103 I.C: 116, ('27) A.A. 835; Ramamurty v. Bhimasankararao (1938) Mad. 688, 178 I.C. 784, ('38) A.C. 433; Allah Diya v. Sona Devi (1942) All. 745, 204 I.C. 133, ('42) A.A. 331, (1942) A.L.J. 443; Sharm Singh v. Hakim ('50) A.E.P. 1; Munga Kuer v. Domari, I.L.R. (1955) 34 Pat. 317.

(p) Muhammad Said v. Kunwar Durshan (1928) 50 All. 75, 103 I.C. 116, ('27) A.A. 835; Ramamurty v. Bhimasankararao (1938) Mad. 688, 178 I.C. 784, ('38) A.C. 433.

(q) Rai Bajrang Bahadur Singh v. Rameshar Bux Singh (1937) 12 Luck. 684, 166 I.C. 113, ('37) A.O. 189.

(r) Bajrangi Singh v. Manokarnika (1907) 30 All. 1, 35 I.A. 1; Ambika Prasad v. Chandramani (1929) 8 Pat. 396, 117 I.C. 867, ('29) A.P. 289.

(s) Harendra Nath Mukherji v. Hari Pada Mukherji (1938) 2 Cal. 492.

(t) Indarjit Singh v. Jaddu (1933) 55 All. 157, 144 I.C. 108, ('33) A.A. 169.

(u) Chanderjit Das v. Debi Das (1953) 1 All. 437, ('51) A.A. 522.

currence of the members of the family as suffices to raise a presumption that the transaction is a fair one and one justified by Hindu law. The consent may be given at the time of alienation or it may be given even after alienation (v) [ill. (c)].

The consent to be of any effect must be given with full knowledge of the circumstances (w) and of the effect of the transaction and with an intelligent intention to consent to such effect. Mere attestation of a deed does not necessarily import consent to an alienation effected by it (x).

The "next" reversioners referred to above are persons who would be entitled to succeed to the estate of the last full owner if the widow had died at the moment of the alienation. They are also called "next presumptive reversioners" or "immediate" reversioners. The more remote reversioners are called in some cases "contingent", in some cases "subsequent," and in some cases "distant" reversioners.

Where the next reversioner is a female, as, for instance, a daughter, her consent alone is not sufficient to validate an alienation, whether she takes a limited estate (y), or an absolute estate as in Bombay (z).

In such a case the consent both of the female reversioner and the immediate male reversioner is necessary to validate the alienation (a) [ill. (b)]. But though her consent alone would not validate the transaction so as to bind the reversion, it would preclude her from impugning the validity of the alienation on the principle stated in § 191 (b).

The consent of a female reversioner cannot be regarded as affording the slightest presumption that the alienation was a justifiable one. The reason is that by Hindu law all women are supposed to be in a state of dependence (c). An alienation with the consent of a female reversioner and a distant male reversioner will not bind the immediate male reversioner (d).

(3) An alienation made with the consent of reversioners may be of the whole or of a part of the estate; it need not be of the whole estate (e).

Prior to the decision of the Privy Council in Rangaswami's case (f) it was held by the High Court of Madras that, where an alienation made by a widow is sought to be supported on the sole ground that it was made with the consent of the next reversioners, the alienation must be of the whole of the property inherited by her and that an alienation of a portion only of the property is not valid (g). On the other hand, it was held by the Hiigh Courts of Calcutta (h) and Bombay (i), that a valid alienation may be made even of a portion of the property. The Privy Council has rejected the Madras view, and held that the alienation may be partial.

---

(v) (1907) 30 All. 1, 35 I.A. 1, supra; approving Radha Shyam v. Joy Ram (1890) 17 Cal. 896; Raj Lukhee Dabea v. Gokool Chunder (1869) 13 M.I.A. 209, 3 Beng. L.R. (P.C.) 57; Sham Sunder Lal v. Achhan Kunwar (1898) 21 All. 71, 25 I.A. 183; (1914) 41 Cal. 793, 23 I.C. 162, ('14) A.PC. 128, supra; (1913) 40 Cal. 721, 19 I.C. 273, supra.

(w) Harendra Nath Mukherji v. Hari Pada Mukherji (1938) 2 Cal. 492.

(x) Sham Sunder v. Achhan Kunwar (1898) 25 I.A. 183, 189, 21 All. 71, 80; Hari Kishen v. Kashi Pershad (1914) 42 I.A. 64, 42 Cal. 876, 27 I.C. 674, ('14) A.PC. 90; Banga Chandra v. Jagat Kishore (1916) 43 I.A. 249, 255, 44 Cal. 186, 199, 36 I.C. 420, ('16) A.PC. 110; Thakur Prasad v. Mussammat Dipa Kuer (1931) 10 Pat. 352, 362, 134 I.C. 129, ('31) A.P. 442; Har Mitra v. Raghubar (1928) 3 Luck. 645, 110 I.C. 618, ('28) A.O. 342; Rajammal v. Sabapathi (1945) Kar. 260 (P.C.).

(y) Bepin Behari v. Durga Charan (1908) 35 Cal. 1086; Koor Goolab Singh v. Rao Kurun Singh (1871) 14 M.I.A. 176.

(z) Varjivan v. Ghelji (1881) 5 Bom. 563 (daughter); Vinayak v. Govind (1901) 25 Bom. 129, 134-135 (sister); Pilu v. Babaji (1909) 34 Bom. 165, 4 I.C. 584 (daughter). But see Mallik Saheb v. Malikarjunappa (1914) 38 Bom. 224, 22 I.C. 292, ('14) A.B. 187, where it was assumed that a daughter's consent was sufficient.

(a) (1881) 5 Bom. 563, supra; (1901) 25 Bom. 129, 134-135, supra; contra Krushna Behera v. Fakir Mahakud ('53) A. Orissa 290.

(b) Akkawa v. Sayadkhan (1927) 51 Bom. 475, 102 I.C. 232, ('27) A.B. 260.

(c) 5 Bom. 563, at p. 571, supra.

(d) Muhammad v. Brij Bihari (1924) 46 All. 656, 82 I.C. 5, ('24) A.A. 939.

(e) Rangasami v. Nachiappa (1919) 46 I.A. 72, 81-84, 42 Mad. 523, 533-536, 50 I.C. 498, ('18) A.PC. 196; Munga Kuer v. Domari, I.L.R. (1953) 34 Pat. 317.

(f) (1919) 46 I.A. 72, 42 Mad. 523, 50 I.C. 498, ('18) A.PC. 196, supra.

(g) Muthuveeru v. Vythilinga (1909) 32 Mad. 206, 3 I.C. 476; Marudamuthu v. Srinivasa (1898) 21 Mad. 128.

(h) Pulin Chandra v. Bolai Mandal (1908) 35 Cal. 939.

(i) See Vinayak v. Govind (1901) 25 Bom. 129, where a sale of a portion only was upheld.

(4) The alienation must be one for consideration, e.g., a sale, a mortgage or a lease (j). Except in the cases mentioned in § 179, § 181A (2) (iii), and § 181B (2) (v), a gift by a widow or other limited heir of the whole or any part of the estate inherited by her to a third person (that is, a person other than the next reversioner), is not binding on the actual reversioner, even if made with the consent of the next reversioner. The consent of the next reversioner, though it affords good evidence of legal necessity in the case of an alienation for consideration, cannot possibly afford such evidence in the case of a gift, there being no room for the theory of legal necessity in the case of a gift (k).

A gift of the entire estate to the next reversioner or reversioners amounts to a surrender, and is good on that ground [§ 197].

But a gift, though it be of the entire estate, to some only of several reversioners without the consent of the rest (l), or a gift of part of the estate though it be in favour of the whole body of reversioners (m), does not amount to a surrender. It is a gift pure and simple, and it cannot be supported as an alienation under this section (n). It stands on the same footing as a gift to a stranger, and it may be avoided by the actual reversioner at the widow's death.

A deed of gift of part of the estate in favour of the next reversioner where there is only one such, followed by a deed of sale by him of that part to a third party, may be supported as an "alienation with the consent of the next reversionee" under this section, if the two documents are so connected as to form one transaction, that is, a transaction of sale (o). A conveyance of the whole estate by a widow and the next reversioner jointly to a stranger is valid but an alienation by a widow to a stranger and the next reversioner is not valid, especially if the reversioner is a minor (p).

The High Court of Calcutta has held that a gift of the entire estate by a widow to a third person with the consent of the whole body of the next reversioners, may be supported as a surrender under § 197; such a gift, in the view of that Court, amounts in effect to two transactions, namely, (1) a surrender in favour of the next reversioners which would vest the estate in them, and (2) a gift by them of the estate to the third person (q). On the other hand, it has been held by some other High Courts that such a gift is not validated even if made with the consent of the whole body of the next reversioners, and that though it may be binding on the widow and the consenting reversioners, it is not binding on the actual reversioner on the widow's death nor on a son subsequently adopted by her (r). The question arose in a Privy Council case (s), but their Lordships expressed no opinion on it, the transaction having been set aside on the ground that the consent of the next reversioner was not proved. In Mummareddi v. Pitti Durairaja their Lordships of the Supreme Court expressed considerable doubt about the correctness of what has been described as the Bengal doctrine and observed that it may become necessary at some time to reconsider the whole law on the subject (t).

---

(j) Bijoy Gopal v. Girindra Nath (1914) 41 Cal. 793 [P.C.], 23 I.C. 162, ('14) A.PC. 128 [lease for 60 years held valid].

(k) Rangasami v. Nachiappa (1919) 46 I.A. 72, 85, 42 Mad. 523, 537, 50 I.C. 498, ('18) A.PC. 196; Pilu v. Babaji (1909) 34 Bom. 165, 4 I.C. 584; Baklawar v. Bhagwana (1910) 32 All. 176, 5 I.C. 270; Abdulla v. Ram Lal (1912) 34 All. 129, 12 I.C. 129; Khawani Singh v. Chet Ram (1917) 39 All. 1, 37 I.C. 86, ('17) A.A. 341; Harihar v. Udai Nath (1923) 45 All. 260, 74 I.C. 113, ('23) A.A. 190 [next reversioner an insolvent—gift made to his son with his consent—gift held bad—creditor's claim upheld]; Bindeshwari v. Har Narain (1929) 4 Luck. 622, 127 I.C. 20, ('29) A.O. 185.

(l) Khawani Singh v. Chet Ram (1917) 39 All. 1, 37 I.C. 86, ('17) A.A. 341; Raghunandan Singh v. Tulshi Singh (1924) 46 All. 38, 75 I.C. 244, ('24) A.A. 515.

(m) Pilu v. Babaji (1909) 34 Bom. 165, 4 I.C. 584; Lachhman Das v. Chuhra Mal ('52) A. Pepsu 5.

(n) See (1919) 46 I.A. 72, 42 Mad. 523, 50 I.C. 498, ('18) A.PC. 196, supra.

(o) Muhammad Sa'id v. Kunwar Darshan (1928) 50 All. 75, 103 I.C. 116, ('27) A.A. 835.

(p) Bala v. Baya (1936) 60 Bom. 211, 38 Bom. L.R. 1087, 166 I.C. 771, ('37) A.B. 43.

(q) Nobokishore v. Hari Nath (1884) 10 Cal. 1102 [F.B.] explained in Rangaswami v. Nachiappa (1919) 46 I.A. 72, 80-81, 42 Mad. 523, 533, 50 I.C. 498, ('18) A.PC. 196; Radhashyam v. Hari Pada ('62) A.C. 100.

(r) Tukaram v. Yesu (1931) 55 Bom. 46, 129 I.C. 591, ('31) A.B. 100. Also see Mahalu Shidappa v. Shankar Dadu (1953) 55 Bom. L.R. 301, I.L.R. (1953) Bom. 1231, ('53) A.B. 357; Mauji Lal v. Jagnandan Ram ('53) A.A. 78.

(s) Narayanaswami Ayyar v. Rama Ayyar (1930) 57 I.A. 305, 53 Mad. 692, 128 I.C. 261, ('30) A.PC. 297.

(t) 1951 S.C.R. 655, 663-666.

(5) An alienation made by a widow without legal necessity and without the consent of the reversioners does not bind the reversioner (u); it binds only her interest in the property [§ 185].

In Rangasami v. Nachiappa (v) a gift was made by a widow to the nearest reversioner who was the cousin of the last owner. The gift was only of a portion of the property. Their Lordships of the Privy Council held that the transaction being a gift it could not possibly be held to be evidence of an alienation for value for purposes of necessity so as to bind the actual reversioner. Nor could it be supported as a surrender [§ 197], for a surrender must be of the whole estate, and the gift in that case was of part only of the estate.

In Mummareddi v. Pitti Durairaja (w) a widow purported to surrender her estate by executing a deed of release in favour of her daughter and son-in-law. It was held by the Supreme Court that such a transaction could not be treated as a surrender in favour of the female heir and a transfer by the latter to the stranger and that the transaction was not binding upon the ultimate reversioners.

Illustrations

(a) A Hindu dies leaving a widow, three brothers, and a paternal uncle. He leaves three houses. The widow sells one of the houses to X with the consent of all the brothers. Here the brothers constitute the next reversion, while the uncle is a remote reversioner. The sale having been made with the consent of the brothers, it is binding on the whole reversion including the actual reversioner. The result is that if all the brothers die in the lifetime of the widow, and the uncle succeeds to the estate on the widow's death, the sale will bind him, though he was not a consenting party to it unless he proves that there was no legal necessity for the sale and that the purchaser did not bona fide believe that there was such necessity. See sub-§ (1).

(b) A dies leaving a widow, a daughter, a brother and a paternal uncle. The widow succeeds to the estate of A as his heir. She then sells the property with the consent of her daughter. After the death of the daughter and of the brother, the uncle disputes the sale. Here the consent having been given by a female reversioner, there is no presumption that the sale was for legal necessity. The burden, therefore, lies on the purchaser to show that the sale was for legal necessity, or that he had made proper and bona fide enquiries and had satisfied himself as to the existence of the necessity. But if A's brother had consented to the sale, the burden would have been on the uncle to show that there was no legal necessity and that no such enquiries had been made by the purchaser. See sub-§ (2).

(c) A Hindu dies leaving a widow and four male relations who are then the next reversioners. The widow, without the consent of the reversioners, executes several deeds of sale one after another of portions of her husband's estate to her son-in-law. Sometime afterwards all the reversioners pass a writing to the widow ratifying the sales to the son-in-law and agreeing not to dispute their validity. The sales are binding not only on the consenting reversioners, but also on the actual reversioners, unless it is shown by the actual reversioners that the transactions were not proper. It is immaterial that the consent was given after the execution of the deeds: Bajrangi v. Manokarnika (1908) 30 All. 1, 35 I.A. 1. See sub-§ (2).

An alienation without legal necessity and with the consent of some of the reversioners does not bind other reversioners (x).

184. Effect of alienation made for legal necessity or with consent of next reversioner.—An alienation made by a widow or other limited heir of property inherited by her for justifying necessity, or with the consent of the next reversioners as stated in § 183, passes an absolute estate in the property

---

(u) Harendra Nath Mukherji v. Hari Pada Mukherji (1938) 2 Cal. 492.

(v) (1919) 46 I.A. 72, 85, 42 Mad. 523, 537, 50 I.C. 498, ('18) A.PC. 196.

(w) Mummareddi v. Pitti Durairaja (1951) S.C.R. 655.

(x) Laxmi Prasad Singh v. Kunai Singh (1944) All. 484.

to the alienee. It is not only binding on her, but also on the reversioners, including reversioners subsequently born (y) or adopted (z).

184A. Doctrine of part performance.—The doctrine of part-performance contained in s. 53A of the Transfer of Property Act is applicable to an alienation by a widow for legal necessity. The words "claiming under him" in that section can apply to a reversioner on a fair and liberal construction of the same (a).

185. Effect of alienation made without legal necessity and without consent of next reversioner.—An alienation made by a widow or other limited heir of property inherited by her, without legal necessity and without the consent of the next reversioners is not binding on the reversioners, but it is nevertheless binding on her so as to pass her own interest [that is life-interest] to the alienee (b).

Even as regards reversioners it is not absolutely void, but voidable at their option. They may affirm it, or treat it as a nullity without the intervention of a Court, and they show their election to do the latter by commencing an action to recover possession of the property (c). In such a case they are not entitled to mesne profits for a period before the exercise of the election (d). See § 190.

The persons entitled to impeach unauthorized alienation by a widow or other limited heir are obviously the next reversioners. It is not the law, however, that reversioners alone can impeach such alienations. Any person who has an interest in the succession is entitled to impeach them, e.g., the Government taking by escheat (e) [§ 176]. One who is an alienee from a lessor who has a chance of succession on the death of the widow would be a person interested in avoiding a transfer made by the widow, but his right to impeach the transfer would come to an end on the death of his transferor prior to the death of the widow (f). A stranger to the reversion, e.g., a mortgagee from a widow cannot impeach an alienation made by the widow (g). As to suits by reversioners, see § 207.

A Hindu widow mortgages a house forming part of her husband's estate to M (who is not a reversioner). She then conveys the house by way of gift to G. After the widow's death, G sues M for redemption. M contends that the gift is invalid [§ 183(4)], and that G is not therefore entitled to redeem. Is M entitled to challenge the gift? No, because he is a stranger to the reversion: Sitaram v. Khandu (1921) 45 Bom. 105, 59 I.C. 480, ('21) A.B. 413.

As to the remedies of reversioners in cases of unauthorised alienations, see § 205 below. As to limitation, see §§ 208-209.

---

(y) Vinayak v. Govind (1901) 25 Bom. 129.

(z) Rajkristo v. Kishore (1865) 3 W.R. C.R. 14; Pilu v. Babaji (1909) 34 Bom. 165, 4 I.C. 584; Ramkrishna v. Tripurabai (1911) 13 Bom. L.R. 940, 12 I.C. 529.

(a) Ranchhod v. Manubhai (1954) Bom. 194, ('54) A.B. 153, (1953) 55 Bom. L.R. 890 differing from Bhupal Chandra v. Jagad Bhusan (1943) 1 Cal. 56 and agreeing with Balaram v. Kewalram ('40) A.N. 396, 191 I.C. 885. Also see Bobba Suramma v. Chandramma ('59) A.A.P. 568.

(b) Ramchandra v. Bhimrav (1877) 1 Bom. 577; Chidambaramma v. Husainamma (1916) 39 Mad. 565, 30 I.C. 101, ('16) A.M. 347; Dhanji v. Dhuma (1924) 26 Bom. L.R. 277, 80 I.C. 234, ('24) A.B. 382; Gowardhan Das v. Viru Mal (1920) 1 Lah. 48, 55 I.C. 847, ('20) A.L. 397; Salah Mohmed v. Gulab ('70) A.J.&K. 164.

(c) Bijoy Gopal v. Krishna (1907) 34 Cal. 329, 34 I.A. 87; Ramgouda v. Bhausaheb (1927) 54 I.A. 396, 52 Bom. 1, 105 I.C. 708, ('27) A.PC. 227; Kondama Naicker v. Kandasami Goundar (1923) 51 I.A. 145, 47 Mad. 181, 79 I.C. 961, ('24) A.PC. 56; Sivanancha v. Thirunamakarasu ('51) A. Tra-Cochin 26. In Modhu Sudan v. Rooke (1897) 25 Cal. 1, the alienation was affirmed; Mahibub Usman v. Vithal (1954) 56 Bom. L.R. 221, I.L.R. (1954) Bom. 586, ('54) A.B. 311 (Reversioner transferred the property ignoring alienation by limited owner; held this showed intention to avoid the alienation); Jagadindra Nath v. Ulangini Dasi ('55) A.C. 312 (overt act indicating intention to avoid).

(d) Mohanlal v. Jagjiwan (1938) Bom. 292, 40 Bom. L.R. 394, 176 I.C. 76, ('38) A.B. 298.

(e) Thakur Prasad v. Musammat Dipa Kuer (1931) 10 Pat. 352, 359-362, 134 I.C. 129, ('31) A.P. 442; Maharaja Kesho Prasad v. Chandrika (1923) 2 Pat. 217,, 228, 68 I.C. 394, ('23) A.P. 122; Sitaram v. Khandu (1921) 45 Bom. 105, 59 I.C. 480, ('21) A.B. 413; Jhari v. Bijai (1923) 45 All. 613, 616, 74 I.C. 865, ('24) A.A. 109.

(f) Pannalal v. Harna Bai ('50) A. Hy. 37.

(g) Sitaram v. Khandu supra; Bipat Mohton v. Kulpat Mahton (1934) 13 Pat. 182, 153 I.C. 439, ('34) A.P. 498; Ajodhia Prasad v. Mt. Sanjhari Kuer (1931) 6 Luck. 710, 139 I.C. 631, ('32) A.O. 342; Mangilal v. Barkatulla ('56) A.A. 118.

Escheat.—Even if there be no reversioners, a widow or other limited heir cannot alienate property inherited by her without legal necessity. Such an alienation will not bind the Government where the Government is entitled to the property by escheat in default of reversioners (h).

Tenant dying without heir.—A landlord to whom the holding of a tenant reverts on the tenant's death without leaving heirs is entitled to challenge an unauthorized alienation made by the tenant, where the tenant is a Hindu widow or other limited heir (i).

186. Lease by widow.—A widow or other limited heir may in the exercise of her power of management [§ 198] grant leases of properties belonging to the estate. But she has no power to grant a permanent lease or a lease for a long term so as to bind the reversion, unless it is justified by legal necessity (j), or it is for the benefit of the estate (k), or made with the consent of the next reversioners (l).

Apart from such necessity, benefit or consent, to create a new and fixed rent for all time, though such rent be adequate at the time of fixing it, in lieu of giving the estate the benefit of an augmentation of a variable rent from time to time, is a breach of duty on the part of the widow (m). Such a lease, however, is not void, but voidable at the option of the reversioners. It does not come to an end at the death of the widow; it is valid until it is set aside (n). A permanent lease is not justified even if it is granted to improve the land. The expression "for the benefit of the estate" has reference to the preservation and protection of the estate, and not to its improvement (o). See § 243A.

Raiyati settlement by a widow.—A widow may make a raiyati settlement provided the transaction is fair and bona fide (p).

If a widow is appointed as a Lumbardar then no co-sharer can challenge a lease of Khudkasta lands by her unless he can prove that it was not an act of ordinary village management. A reversioner is not in a better position (q).

187. Alienation by widow with leave of Court under the Indian Succession Act, 1925, S. 307.—Where a widow or other limited heir obtains letters of administration, and then obtains leave from the Court under S. 307 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925, to alienate the property, she can confer on the alienee an absolute title to the property irrespective of necessity or of the consent of reversioners. The reason is that alienee is entitled to trust to the order of the Court and he is not bound to go behind it (r).

188. Equities on setting aside alienations by widow.—Where an alienation made by a widow or other limited heir without legal necessity, and without the consent of the next reversioners, is set aside, the question arises

---

(h) Collector of Masulipatam v. Cavaly Vencata (1861) 8 M.I.A. 529; Kundan v. Secretary of State (1926) 7 Lah. 543, 96 I.C. 865, ('26) A.L. 673.

(i) Prasad Nath v. Ambica Prasad (1930) Pat. 515, 117 I.C. 630, ('30) A.P. 407.

(j) Sankar Nath v. Bijoy Gopal (1908) 13 C.W.N. 201 [lease for 60 years]; Bejoy Gopal v. Girindra Nath (1914) 41 Cal. 793, 23 I.C. 162, ('18) A.P.C. 128 [lease for 60 years]; Chandrakisor Datta Majumdar v. Kumar Upendra Chandra Chaudhuri (1923) 37 Cal. L.J. 319, 74 I.C. 612, ('23) A.C. 563.

(k) Bijoy Gopal v. Girindra Nath, supra [lease for 60 years].

(l) (1914) 41 Cal. 793, 23 I.C. 162, ('18) A.P.C. 128; supra; (1908) 13 C.W.N. 201, supra; Upendra Nath v. Bindesri (1915) 20 C.W.N. 210, 32 I.C. 468, ('16) A.C. 483; Dayamani v. Srinibash (1906) 33 Cal. 842 [permanent lease].

(m) Shibessouree Devia v. Mothooranath Acharjo (1869) 13 M.I.A. 270 [permanent lease by a Mohunt]; Raghubir Singh v. Jethu (1923) 2 Pat. 171, 70 I.C. 290, ('23) A.P. 130; Sant Prasad v. Charitar Singh ('51) A.P. 539; Sheodutta v. Akali Bhumijani ('53) A.P. 374.

(n) Modhu Sudan v. Rooke (1897) 25 Cal. 1, 24 I.A. 164; Bijoy Gopal v. Krishna (1907) 34 Cal. 329, 34 I.A. 87; Upendra Kishore v. Nobo Kishore (1918) 23 C.W.N. 64, 48 I.C. 993, ('19) A.C. 746.

(o) Ganap v. Subbi (1908) 32 Bom. 577. The decision in Dayamani v. Srinibash (1906) 33 Cal. 842 turned on the special facts of the case.

(p) Biswanath v. Ram Prasad (1931) 10 Pat. 572, 133 I.C. 673, ('33) A.P. 389.

(q) Ghasiram v. Girdhari (1942) Nagpur 680, 195 I.C. 603, ('42) A.N. 306.

(r) Kamikhya v. Hari Churn (1899) 26 Cal. 607; Annada v. Atul (1919) 23 C.W.N. 1045, 54 I.C. 197; Chuni Lal Haldar v. Srimati Makshada (1919) 23 C.W.N. 652, 52 I.C. 309, ('19) A.C. 2.

whether the alienation should be set aside in its entirety or upon terms and conditions. The following is the result of the decisions on the subject: —

(1) It has been held in Bombay that when a sale is set aside, the Court may direct, as a condition of setting aside the sale, the return of the purchase money if the money is still intact at the death of the widow (s). But see sub-§ (3).

It would seem that a strong case based on equitable considerations would have to be made out before the Court will impose any of the terms or conditions discussed in this paragraph. In Natverlal v. Dadubhai (t) the Supreme Court expressed the following view. Assuming that the Court has the power to impose conditions on the reversioners' right to recover possession during the lifetime of the widow on considerations of equity, justice and good conscience in proper cases, and to prevent the widow, by her own act, from prejudicing the interests she has created, no such equitable considerations arise in favour of persons who have come upon the land as trespassers and claim title by adverse possession.

(2) It has been held by the Judicial Committee that where a Hindu widow sells property inherited by her from her husband, without legal necessity, and the purchaser believes in good faith that he is absolutely entitled thereto and makes any improvement in the property, the Court may in setting aside the sale direct the reversioner to pay to the purchaser the amount expended by him on such improvements as have enhanced the market value of the property (u). The case was one from Lahore where the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, does not apply, but the decision, it seems, would have been the same even if the case had been one under the Act. See sub-§ (3).

The principle of the above decision was followed by the High Court of Bombay in a case of a mortgage by a widow without legal necessity (v), though in an earlier case the Court refused to allow the mortgagee even to remove the structure erected by him on the land after it was destroyed by floods (w). In Allahabad, it has been held that whether the case be one of mortgage (x), lease (y), or gift (z), if the transfer is not one for legal necessity, the transferee is not entitled to any compensation for the improvements made by him even if the improvements were such as have enhanced the market value of the property, the ground of the decision being that s. 51 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, does not apply to alienations made by a Hindu widow without legal necessity. That section, it has been said, "applies only to the case of a transferee of the immovable property who makes any improvement in the property, believing in good faith that he is absolutely entitled thereto. But in the case of a Hindu widow a person dealing with her would ordinarily know that she has only a life-interest and he can reasonably be expected to make inquiries as to whether there was any legal necessity for the mortgage and whether the widow had any right to make the transfer. The mortgagee cannot be said here to have acted in good faith in dealing with such a widow so as to affect more than her life interest" (a). But see sub-§ (3).

The question whether an alienee from a Hindu widow is entitled to compensation for money spent upon the property cannot be raised in a declaratory suit by reversioners

---

(s) Someshwar v. Someshwar (1923) 47 Bom. 1, 67 I.C. 658, ('23) A.B. 16.

(t) (1954) S.C.R. 339, 359, 56 Bom. L.R. 447, ('54) A.SC. 61.

(u) Kidar Nath v. Mathu Mal (1913) 40 Cal. 555, 18 I.C. 946 (P.C.) [cost of erection of temple not allowed but purchaser allowed to remove the materials]. See also Raja Rai Bhagwat v. Ram Ratan (1921) 20 All. L.J. 26, 65 I.C. 69, ('22) A.PC. 91 [P.C.], where there was partial necessity for the sale.

(v) Shiddappa v. Pandurang (1923) 47 Bom. 696, 72 I.C. 626, ('23) A.B. 385. But see Ramappa v. Yellappa (1928) 52 Bom. 307, 109 I.C. 532, ('28) A.B. 150.

(w) Vrijbhukandas v. Dayaram (1908) 32 Bom. 32.

(x) Honsraj v. Musammat Somni (1922) 44 All. 665, 67 I.C. 314, ('22) A.A. 194 [mortgagee allowed to remove structures].

(y) Rajrup v. Gopi (1925) 47 All. 430, 432, 87 I.C. 44, ('25) A.A. 261.

(z) Raghunandan v. Tulshi Singh (1924) 46 All. 38, 75 I.C. 244, ('24) A.A. 315.

(a) (1922) 44 All. 665, 667, 67 I.C. 314, ('22) A.A. 194 supra.

during the lifetime of the widow. It is premature to raise it in such a suit. It can only be raised after the widow's death in a suit by reversioners for possession (b).

(3) It has been held by the Judicial Committee that where a gift is made by a widow of property inherited by her from her husband, to a stranger and the donee sells the property, and the purchaser effects improvements believing in good faith that he was the owner, he is entitled, if the gift is set aside, to the alternative rights mentioned in sec. 51 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, namely, to be paid by the plaintiff at whose instance the gift is set aside the value of the improvements, or to require the plaintiff to sell his interest in the property to him (c).

Mesne Profits.—In a suit by the reversioner to set aside an alienation made by a Hindu widow mesne profits can be awarded to the reversioner from the date of the widow's death even though such an alienation cannot be described as absolutely void. Even in cases where the decree for possession in favour of the reversioner is conditional on his depositing the amount which has been found to have been used for the benefit of the estate, mesne profits can be awarded to the reversioner if he is ordered to pay interest on the amount payable to the alienee (d).

189. Purchase money applied by widow in part only to purposes of legal necessity.—Cases frequently arise in which property inherited by a widow from her husband is sold by her for legal necessity, but the whole of the price is not proved to have been applied to purposes of necessity, and the sale is challenged by the reversioners on that ground. In such cases, if the sale itself is justified by legal necessity, and the purchaser pays a fair price for the property sold, and acts in good faith and after due inquiry as to the necessity for the sale, the mere fact that part of the price is not proved to have been applied to purposes of necessity, would not invalidate the sale, the purchaser not being bound to see to the application of the price. If the above conditions are satisfied, the sale must be upheld unconditionally, whether the part not proved to have been applied to purposes of legal necessity is considerable or small (e).

It is wrong in such cases to draw a distinction, as was done by the Allahabad High Court, between the case where the part not proved to have been applied to purposes of necessity is considerable and the case where such part is small, and in the former case to pass a decree setting aside the sale conditionally upon the reversioner paying to the purchaser the part proved to have been applied to purposes of necessity and in the latter case to pass a decree upholding the sale conditionally upon the purchaser paying to the

---

(b) Rup Narain v. Gopal Devi (1909) 36 Cal. 780, 36 I.A. 103, 3 I.C. 382.

(c) Narayanaswami Ayyar v. Rama Ayyar (1930) 57 I.A. 305, 53 Mad. 692, 128 I.C. 261, ('30) A.P.C. 297.

(d) Mummareddi v. Pitti Durairaja (1951) S.C.R. 655, ('52) A.SC. 109.

(e) Suraj Bhan Singh v. Sah Chain Sukh (1928) 32 C.W.N. 117, 105 I.C. 257, ('27) A.P.C. 244 [price Rs. 19,000—Rs. 1,622 not proved to have been applied to purposes of necessity—sale upheld unconditionally], following Krishna Das v. Nathu Ram (1927) 54 I.A. 79, 49 All. 149, 100 I.C. 130, ('27) A.P.C. 37 [a case of sale by manager—price Rs. 3,500—Rs. 500 not proved to have been applied to purposes of necessity—sale upheld unconditionally]; Ram Gopal Ghose v. Bullodep Bose (1864) W.R. (Sp. No.) 385 [one-third of the price not proved to have been applied to purposes of necessity—sale upheld unconditionally]; Luchmeedhar Singh v. Ekbal Ali (1867) 8 W.R. 75 [price Rs. 65,000—Rs. 14,000 not proved to have been applied, etc.—sale upheld unconditionally]; Chatranarayan v. Uba Kunwari (1868) 5 Beng. L.R. 201 [price Rs. 995—Rs. 321 not proved to have been applied, etc.—sale upheld unconditionally]; Kamikaprasad v. Srimati (1870) 5 Beng. L.R. 508 [sale upheld unconditionally]; Felaram v. Bagalanand (1910) 14 C.W.N. 895, 6 I.C. 207 [permanent lease on a selami of Rs. 125—Rs. 25 not proved to have been applied, etc.—lease upheld unconditionally]; Medai Dalavoi v. Nainar Tevan (1922) 27 C.W.N. 365, 74 I.C. 604, ('22) A.P.C. 307 [price Rs. 5,300—Rs. 712 not proved to have been applied, etc.—sale upheld unconditionally]; Naman Lal v. Har Bhagwan (1921) 2 Lah. 357, 66 I.C. 362, ('22) A.L. 317 [sale upheld unconditionally]; Bal Krishna v. Hira Lal (1919) 41 All. 338, 50 I.C. 74, ('19) A.A. 406 [price Rs. 19,500—Rs. 11,725 not proved to have been applied, etc.—sale upheld unconditionally].

reversioners the price not proved to have been so applied (f). Where the sale was only partially justified by legal necessity, the sale may be set aside conditionally on the reversioner paying to the purchaser that portion of the consideration money which was justified by legal necessity (g). See § 245 and notes where the matter is fully discussed.

The leading case on the subject of alienation for necessity is Hunooman Persaud v. Mussumat Babooee (h), decided by the Judicial Committee in 1856. The question in that case was as to the extent of the power of the mother as manager of the estate of her minor son to mortgage the estate. The principles laid down in that case [see note (1) to § 242] have been applied also to alienations by a Hindu widow of property inherited by her from her husband and to alienations of joint family property by the manager of a joint Hindu family.

The principles to be derived from the cases decided by the Judicial Committee may be stated thus. If a sale by a Hindu widow of property inherited by her from her husband is sought to be set aside by the reversioner, and part of the price is proved to have been applied to purposes of necessity, then if the suit is brought during the widow's life-time, the decree should be one declaring the right of the reversioner to the property on the death of the widow and declaring also that the purchaser is entitled to a charge on the property only for the amount proved to have been so applied (k). If the suit is brought after the widow's death, the decree should be one setting aside the sale and directing the purchaser to deliver possession to the reversioner and to pay to him the balance of mesne profits from the date of the widow's death after deducting therefrom the amount proved to have been applied to purposes of necessity with interest thereon (l). But if the amount proved to have been applied to purposes of necessity exceeds the amount of mesne profits, the decree should be one setting aside the sale and for possession conditionally upon the reversioner paying to the purchaser the difference between the two sums (m).

A widow is not always bound to sell exactly for the amount for which there is legal necessity, and the Courts have to see in each case whether, having regard to the circumstances, the alienation was a proper one. It would manifestly be impossible and possibly prejudicial to the interest of the estate if the widow were held to be bound in every instance to sell the property for payment of a debt due from her husband for exactly the sum due to the creditor (n). See notes to § 181D.

190. Estoppel: Election by reversioner.—(1) An alienation by a widow of her husband's estate without legal necessity or an invalid surrender is not altogether void, but only voidable by the next reversioner. He may affirm it, or he may treat it as a nullity [§ 185]. If he elects to affirm it, he will be precluded from exercising his right to avoid it and from questioning the transaction (o). The election may be made after the reversion has fallen into possession, or even before (p).

---

(f) Jainarain v. Bhagwan (1922) All. 683, ('22) A.A. 321; Sanmukh v. Jagarnath (1924) 46 All. 531, 83 I.C. 838, ('24) A.A. 708; Daulat v. Sankatha (1925) 47 All. 355, 86 I.C. 91 ('25) A.A. 324; Gobind Singh v. Baldeo Singh (1903) 25 All. 330; Ram Dei v. Abu Jafar (1905) 27 All. 494; Dwarka Ram v. Jhulai (1923) 45 All. 429, 72 I.C. 134 ('23) A.A. 248; Ramanand Lal v. Damodar Das (1941) All. 820, 199 I.C. 369, ('42) A.A. 110; Sumantrabai v. Battibai I.L.R. (1956) Nag. 48, ('55) A.N. 299.

(g) Shantikumar Pal v. Mukund Lal Mandal (1935) 62 Cal. 204, 156 I.C. 209, ('35) A.C. 20.

(h) (1856) 6 M.I.A. 393; Tirbeni Sahai v. Ramsingh (1938) 13 Luck. 230, 167 I.C. 925, ('37) A.O. 361.

(k) Mahomed Shumsool v. Shewukram (1874) 14 Beng. L.R. 226, 2 I.A. 7.

(l) Deputy Commissioner of Kheri v. Khanjan Singh (1907) 29 All. 331, 34 I.A. 72. See also Collector of Masulipatam v. Cavaly Vencata (1861) 8 M.I.A. 529, 555-556; Doorga Persad v. Doorga Konwari (1878) 4 Cal. 190, 204, 5 I.A. 149; Madhab Mohapatra v. Bhikari Panda ('64) A. Orissa 26.

(m) Bhagwat Dayal v. Debi Dayal (1908) 35 Cal. 420, 429-430, 35 I.A. 48.

(n) Naman Lal v. Har Bhagwan (1921) 2 Lah. 357, 66 I.C. 362, ('22) A.L. 317; Bal Kishna v. Hira Lal (1919) 41 All. 338, 50 I.C. 74, ('19) A.A. 406; Felaram v. Bagalanand (1910) 14 C.W.N. 895, 6 I.C. 207.

(o) Ramgouda v. Bhausaheb (1927) 54 I.A. 396, 402, 52 Bom. 1, 7, 105 I.C. 708, ('27) A.PC. 227; Ram Bharose v. Bhagwan Din (1944) 19 Luck. 37; Ganga Baksh v. Madho Singh, infra.

(p) Rangasami v. Nachiappa (1919) 46 I.A. 72, 42 Mad. 523, 50 I.C. 488, ('18) A.PC. 196; Akkawa v. Sayad Khan (1927) 51 Bom. 475, 485-486, 102 I.C. 232, ('27) A.B. 260; Patan Dei v. Santoo Prasad (1944) Luck. 557. But see Virayya v. Bapayya (1946) Mad. 276; Ganga Bakhsh v. Madho Singh ('55) A.A. 288 (F.B.); Krishna Reddi v. Yaganti Reddi (1954) 2 Mad. L.J. (Andhra) 251. But a reversioner who has transferred his interest in the property cannot thereafter affirm the alienation by the limited owner to the detriment of the purchaser: Thayammal v. Rangaswami (1955) 2 Mad. L.J. 426, ('56) A.M. 15.

(2) The above rule applies not only to male but also to female reversioners (q).

190A. Estoppel: Election: Ratification.—In a very recent decision the Supreme Court referred to the three types of cases that may arise for consideration in dealing with a reversioner's challenge to the widow's alienation: (1) Estoppel (property so called): (2) Election in the strict sense of the term whereby the person electing takes a benefit under the transaction: and (3) Ratification i.e., agreeing to abide by the transaction (*q*1).

A presumptive reversioner coming under anyone of the aforesaid categories is precluded from questioning the transaction. The Supreme Court in the above decision also considered the position of reversioners who were minors at the time of the challenged transaction (*q*1).

191. Alienation made by widow with consent of reversioner whether binding on him and actual reversioner.—(1) A reversioner, whether a male or female (r), who consents to an alienation by a widow or other limited heir made without legal necessity, or to an invalid surrender, and transferees from him, are precluded from disputing the validity of the alienation (s) [ills. (a) and (b)], though he may have received no consideration for his consent (t). It is immaterial that the alienation is by way of gift [see ills. (a) and (b)].

But if the actual reversioner at the widow's death be a different person, he is not precluded from questioning the alienation, though even as regards him the alienation will stand good unless he proves that the transaction was one without legal necessity [§ 183(1)]. The actual reversioner, even if he be the son of the consenting reversioner, is not bound by his father's consent (u), unless the consent was given for a consideration and the son enjoyed the benefit of it (v) [ill. (c)]. See § 192.

(2) A reversioner who takes from an alienee from a widow a mortgage of the alienated property is not on that ground precluded from questioning the alienation on the widow's death (w) [ill. (d)].

(a) A Hindu widow executes a deed of gift of a portion of her husband's property to D. F who is then the nearest reversioner joins in the deed. After the widow's death F,

---

(q) (1927) 51 Bom. 475, 485-486, 102 I.C. 232, ('27) A.B. 260, supra; Patan Dei v. Santoo Prasad (1944) Luck. 557.

(*q*1) Shanmugam Pillai v. K. Shanmugam Pillai ('72) A.S.C. 2069.

(r) (1927) 51 Bom. 475, 102 I.C. 232, ('27) A.B. 260, supra, Patan Dei v. Santoo Prasad (1944) Luck. 557.

(s) Basappa v. Fakirappa (1922) 46 Bom. 292, 64 I.C. 214, ('22) A.B. 102, explaining Bai Parvati v. Dayabhai (1920) 44 Bom. 488, 58 I.C. 266, ('20) A.B. 355; Bhausaheb v. Ramgauda (1923) 25 Bom. L.R. 813, 76 I.C. 937, ('23) A.B. 471; Fateh Singh v. Thakur Rukmini (1923) 45 All. 339, 72 I.C. 8, ('23) A.A. 387 [F.B.]; Akkawa v. Sayad Khan, supra; Babu Singh v. Rameshwar Bakhsh (1923) 7 Luck. 360, 135 I.C. 881, ('32) A.O. 90; Jiwan Singh v. Misri Lal (1896) 18 All. 146, 23 I.A. 1 [transfer confined to widow's estate]; Rup Narain v. Gopal Devi (1909) 36 Cal. 780, 36 I.A. 103, 3 I.C. 382 [transfer confined to widow's estate]; Baburao v. Tukaram (1931) 33 Bom. L.R. 235, 131 I.C. 660, ('31) A.B. 208; Ram Bharose v. Bhagwan Din (1944) 19 Luck. 37; Mst. Lakhpati v. Bisram (1950) All. 91; Munga Kuer v. Domari I.L.R. (1955) 34 Pat. 317; Jagannath v. Rupnarain ('60) A.P. 564, Ramakottayya v. Viraraghavayya (1929) 52 Mad. 556; Subba Reddi v. Govinda Reddi ('61) A.A.P. 430; Subbamma v. Krishna Murty ('67) A.A.P. 8.

(t) Ramakottayya v. Viraraghavyya (1929) 52 Mad. 556, 119 I.C. 156, ('29) A.M. 502.

(u) Rangasami v. Nachiappa (1919) 42 Mad. 523, 535, 536, 46 I.A. 72, 83, 84, 50 I.C. 498, ('18) A.PC. 196. See also Ramgouda v. Bhausaheb (1927) 54 I.A. 396, 402-403, 52 Bom. 1, 7, 107 I.C. 708, ('27) A.PC. 227, where part of the alienation was in favour of the father; Thakur Prasad v. Musammat Dipa Kuer (1931) 10 Pat. 352, 134 I.C. 129, ('31) A.P. 442. In Baburao v. Tukaram (1931) 33 Bom. L.R. 285, 131 I.C. 650, ('31) A.B. 208, the plaintiffs who claimed to set aside a gift to which their step-mother had consented were not the reversionary heirs of the deceased owner; Debendranath Sharma v. Nagendranath Datt (1933) 60 Cal. 1158, 149 I.C. 522, ('33) A.C. 900.

(v) Vinayak v. Govind (1901) 25 Bom. 129, 136, 141. See also Bahadur Singh v. Ram Bahadur (1923) 45 All. 277, 71 I.C. 405, ('23) A.A. 204.

(w) 42 Mad. 523, 537-539, 46 I.A. 72, 85-87, 50 I.C. 498, ('18) A.PC. 196, supra.

alleging that the gift is invalid [§ 183(4)] sues D for possession of the property. F having consented to the gift is estopped from disputing the validity of the gift: Basappa v. Fakirappa (1922) 46 Bom. 292, 64 I.C. 214, ('22) A.B. 102; Akkawa v. Sayad Khan (1927) 51 Bom. 475, 102 I.C. 232, ('27) A.B. 260; Munga Kuer v. Domari I.L.R. (1955) 34 Pat. 317.

(b) A dies leaving a mother M and two male relations F and G who are then the nearest reversioners. On A's death M succeeds to the estate of her son. M executes a deed of gift of a portion of her son's property in favour of a family idol. F joins in the deed of gift. G sues M and the donee for a declaration that the alienation is invalid, and a decree is passed declaring that the gift is void beyond M's lifetime. After M's death F sues the donee for possession of his one-half share in the property comprised in the gift. F is bound by his consent, and he is precluded from challenging the validity of the gift, though the gift was declared invalid in G's suit and though G would be entitled to recover his one-half share from the donee: Fateh Singh v. Thakur Rukmini (1923) 45 All. 339, 72 I.C. 8, ('23) A.A. 387 [F.B.].

(c) A Hindu dies leaving a widow R, a sister B, and B's son V. R sells a portion of her husband's property with V's consent. The sale is effected to obtain necessary funds for V's marriage. V then marries, and a son G is born to him. After the sale B dies, then V, and then R, the widow. After R's death, G, who is then the actual reversioner, sues the purchaser for possession of the property sold to him. It is proved that there was no legal necessity for the sale. It is not proved that B consented to the sale. Upon these facts the High Court of Bombay held that G was bound by the consent of his father V, Vinayak v. Govind (1901) 25 Bom. 129, 136, 141. See in this connection Bahadur Singh v. Ram Bahadur (1923) 45 All. 277, 71 I.C. 405, ('23) A.A. 204.

(d) A dies leaving a mother M, a paternal cousin R, and a remoter paternal cousin P. On A's death M succeeds to his estate as his heir. M executes a deed of gift of a portion of her son's property to R who is then the nearest reversioner. [The gift is therefore bad in law, § 183(4)]. Afterwards R dies and his estate vests in X. X mortgages to P, the property given by M to R. Then M dies. After M's death P, who is then the actual reversioner, claims the property given by M to R and mortgaged by X to P. P is entitled to recover the property. The fact that he took a mortgage of the property does not preclude him from claiming it as a reversioner. "At the time of the mortgage the plaintiff [P] did not know whether he would ever be such a reversioner in fact as would give him a practical interest to quarrel with the deed of gift": Rangasami v. Nachiappa (1919) 46 I.A. 72, 87, 42 Mad. 523, 50 I.C. 498, ('18) A.PC. 196, with facts simplified.

In an Allahabad case it was held that if the nearest reversioner at the time of an alienation made by a Hindu widow of her husband's property assents to the alienation neither he nor any one claiming through him [in that case, the reversioner's son] can afterwards dispute its validity (x). This ruling, it is submitted, proceeds upon a misapprehension of a passage in the judgment of the Privy Council in Bajrangi's case (y) which is as follows:—"The appellants [plaintiffs] who claim through Matadin Singh and Baijnath Singh must be held bound by the consent of their fathers." Bajrangi's case was considered by their Lordships in Rangasami's case (z).

192. Family Arrangement: Compromise by widow—Reversioner party to and benefiting by the transaction.—Where a widow or other limited heir enters into a family arrangement (b) [ills. (a) and (b)], or into a compromise which involves an alienation of the estate (c) [ill. (c)], the reversioner who has been a party to and has benefited by the transaction is precluded from questioning the alienation; and so are his descendants (d). There is no

---

(x) Mahadeo Prasad v. Mata Prasad (1922) 44 All. 44, 53, 63 I.C. 721, ('22) A.A. 297.

(y) (1907) 30 All. 1, 35 I.A. 1, 16.

(z) (1919) 42 Mad. 523, 535-536, 46 I.A. 72, 83-84, 50 I.C. 498, ('18) A.PC. 196.

(b) Musammat Hardei v. Bhagwan Singh (1919) 24 C.W.N. 105, 50 I.C. 812, ('19) A.P.C. 27; Pulliah Chetti v. Varadarajulu (1908) 31 Mad. 474; Barati Lal v. Salik Ram (1916) 38 All. 107, 31 I.C. 919, ('15) A.A. 441; Chahlu v. Parmal (1919) 41 All. 611, 51 I.C. 919, ('19) A.A. 371; Ramgouda v. Bhausaheb (1927) 54 I.A. 396, 52 Bom. 1, 105 I.C. 708, ('27) A.PC. 227; Sundar Sahu v. Chamra Sahu ('54) A. Orissa 80.

(c) Kanhai Lal v. Brij Lal (1918) 45 I.A. 118, 40 All. 487, 47 I.C. 207, ('18) A.PC. 70.

(d) Ramgouda v. Bhausaheb (1927) 54 I.A. 396, 52 Bom. 1, 105 I.C. 708, ('27) A.PC. 227; Bindeshri Tewari v. Lakhan Tewari (1941) All. 763, 198 I.C. 13, ('42) A.A. 12, (1941) A.L.J. 587; Bachchu Singh v. Harbans Singh ('53) A.A. 213; Krishna Reddi v. Yaganti Reddi (1954) 2 Mad. L.J. (Andhra) 251.

question in a case of this kind of a transfer of spes successionis by the reversioner. The reversioner, being a party to the transaction, cannot repudiate it.

Where a widow entered into a compromise with the presumptive reversioners and she was accepted as absolute owner of a portion of the properties and she gave up her claim in the remaining properties, it was held by the Supreme Court that the presumptive reversioners who themselves ultimately became the reversioners were estopped from challenging the transaction. It was held that the settlement could also be considered as a family arrangement binding on the parties (e).

The Court leans strongly in favour of family arrangements to bring about harmony in a family and do justice to its various members and avoid in anticipation future disputes. In the case of a family arrangement it is not necessary that there should have been any previous dispute as to the rights of the parties (ee).

The expression "family" in the context of family arrangement is not to be understood in a narrow sense of being a group of persons who are recognised in law as having a right of succession or having a claim to a share in the property in dispute. It is sufficient if the dispute is between near relations (f). The subject of family arrangement is further dealt with under § 248A.

Illustrations

(a) A Hindu governed by the Benares school of Hindu law dies leaving a widow and three daughters, D, M and H, and grandsons by D and H. The widow claims an absolute title to certain properties which the daughters allege belonged to their father. An arrangement is then come to between the widow and the daughters whereby certain properties are given to the grandsons and certain other properties are divided among the daughters as their absolute property. The daughters and grandsons enter into immediate possession of their lots, and they deal with their shares as absolute owners. H executes a mortgage of her share. M sells one of the properties which came to her share to R. After the death of the widow and of H and M, D brings a suit against R for recovery of possession of the property sold to him by M, alleging that the property belonged to her father, and that on the death of her mother and sisters she became the sole heir of her father and was entitled to possession. Upon these facts it was held by their Lordships of the Privy Council that D who was a party to the arrangement could not be allowed to repudiate it and impeach a sale made on the faith of it. Their Lordships said: "Whether this arrangement is binding on the grandsons cannot be determined in this suit, and on that question their Lordships express no opinion. But the plaintiff at all events is bound by her own agreement; and in view of this fact, and of the favour shown by the Courts to family arrangements and the long period of time which has elapsed since the arrangement was made, she cannot now be allowed to repudiate the agreement and to impeach a sale which was made upon the faith of it": Mussammat Hardei v. Bhagwan Singh (1919) 24 C.W.N. 105, 109, 50 I.C. 812, ('19) A.PC 27.

(b) A Hindu died in 1846, leaving a widow, who survived until 1912, and a daughter. On the death of the widow A had succeeded to the estate. In 1868 the widow had alienated nearly the whole property by three deeds executed and registered on the same day. By

---

(e) Krishna Beharilal v. Gulabchand ('71) A.S.C. 1041.

(ee) Krishna Beharilal supra; Shanmugam Pillai v. K. Shanmugam Pillai ('72) A.S.C. 2069; Sahu Madho Das v. Pandit Mukund Ram (1955) 2 S.C.R. 22; Pokhar Singh v. Dulari (1930) 52 All. 716; 125 I.C. 1, ('30) A.A. 687; Buchi Bai v. Nagpur University, I.L.R. (1946) Nagpur 433; Chanderjit Das v. Debi Das (1953) 1 All. 437, ('51) A.A. 522. Also see Pullaiah v. Narasimham ('66) A.S.C. 1836; M. N. Aryamurthi v. Subbaraya ('72) A.S.C. 1279. Reference may be made to cases cited under § 248A.

(f) Krishna Beharilal supra; Ram Charan Das v. Girija ('66) A.S.C. 323, 328.

the first deed she gave a property to her brother, by another she sold half of another property to A, and by the third she sold the other half of that property to her son-in-law. The signature on each of the deeds was attested by the two other alienees. A, who survived the widow for six years, did not seek to set aside any of the alienations. After his death his son and grandsons brought a suit to recover the whole property. It was held that the three deeds were to be regarded as forming one transaction entered into by all the persons interested in the properties, and that A, and consequently the plaintiffs, were precluded from disputing the two alienations now sought to be set aside, the alienations being by the widow were avoidable, not void, and A being precluded from questioning them, it was not necessary to consider whether he could deal validity with his reversionary interest. In the judgment their Lordships said: "Their Lordships consider that the decision of this case depends upon how far the three documents can be taken as separate and independent, or so connected as to form one transaction.... Their Lordships conclude that all the circumstances strongly point to the three documents being part and parcel of one transaction by which a disposition was made of [the husband's] estate such as was likely to prevent disputes in the future and therefore for the best interest of all the parties. ...If some person other than A had been at the death of [the widow] the nearest heir of her husband, it might have been open to him to question all or any of the three deeds, but A himself being a party to and benefiting by the transaction evidenced thereby was precluded from questioning any part of it. Nor is it other than a most notable circumstance that he did not, after [the widow's] death, essay to do so": Ramgouda v. Bhausaheb (1927) 54 I.A. 396, 401-402, 52 Bom. 1, 105 I.C. 708, ('27) A.PC 227: Birendra Nath v. Shibaram ('52) A.C. 473, (1953) 1 Cal. 208.

(c) A and B are two Hindu brothers governed by the Benares school of Hindu law. A dies leaving a widow P. On A's death B enters into possession of the family property, claiming it by right of survivorship. P contends that her husband A was separate from B, and she adopts K to her husband. K is P's husband's sister's son. B dies leaving a widow R, a daughter, and K. On B's death, his estate devolves on his widow R. On the widow's death it would pass to the daughter as a limited heir, and on her death, K, if his adoption is valid, would succeed as a reversioner. The daughter is the next or presumptive reversioner, and K is a remote or contingent reversioner.

B's widow, R, institutes two suits, one for a declaration that her husband was the owner of the entire joint family property, and another for a declaration that K's adoption is invalid. A compromise is then entered into by which the property is divided between B's widow, R, her daughter and A's widow, P, and K's adoption is recognised. P transfers the property which she got under the compromise to K as her adopted son. K is a party to the compromise.

Then the daughter dies, and then the widow, R. On the death of R, K claims B's property as B's reversionary heir. Upon these facts it was held by their Lordships of the Privy Council that K was precluded from claiming as a reversioner. Kanhai Lal v. Brij Lal (1918) 45 I.A. 118, 123, 40 All. 487, 47 I.C. 207, ('18) A.PC. 70.

Reversioner's son, whether compromise binding on him.—It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad, that where a reversioner is a party to a compromise and obtains some property under the compromise, his son, if he enters into possession of the property after his father's death and enjoys possession thereof in succession to his father, is precluded from repudiating the compromise and from claiming as a reversioner (g). See also ill. (c) above.

193. Compromise and family arrangement by widow—reversioner not a party—binding on reversioner, though not a party, if transaction bona fide.—(1) A compromise in the nature of a family arrangement entered into by a widow or other limited heir binds the reversioners, though they may not be parties thereto, provided it amounts to a bona fide settlement of disputes in respect of the estate (h) [ills. (a) and (b)]. Even if it is not in the nature

---

(g) Bahadur Singh v. Ram Bahadur (1923) 45 All. 277, 71 I.C. 405, ('23) A.A. 204.

(h) Khunni Lal v. Gobind Krishna (1911) 33 All. 356, 38 I.A. 87, 10 I.C. 477; Hiran Bibi v. Sohan Bibi (1914) 18 C.W.N. 929, 24 I.C. 309, ('14) A.PC. 44; Upendra Nath v. Bindesri Prosad (1915) 20 C.W.N. 210, 32 I.C. 468, ('16) A.C. 843; Birendra Nath v. Shibaram ('52) A.C. 473, (1953) 1 Cal. 208; Bihari Lal v. Daud Husain (1913) 35 All. 240, 18 I.C. 721. In the following cases it was held that the compromise did not bind the actual reversioners; Himmat Bahadur v. Dhanpat Rai (1916) 38 All. 335, 35 I.C. 148, ('17) A.A. 481 [no bona fide dispute and no bona fide settlement]; Kanhaiya Lal v. Kishori Lal (1916) 38 All. 679, 35 I.C. 683, ('16) A.A. 38 [probably no of a family arrangement, a compromise entered into by her bona fide for the benefit of the estate, and not for her personal advantage, binds the reversioners quite as much as a decree against her after litigation, though they may not be parties to the transaction (i) [ill. (c)]. In either case the fact that the compromise involves an alienation of the estate does not affect its validity. An alienation which is the result of a compromise, or the mode by which a compromise is carried into effect, falls within the power of the holder of a Hindu woman's estate either as being an alienation which is to be deemed to be induced by necessity, or as being in a parallel position to an alienation induced by necessity (j). The question whether a compromise is a bona fide settlement of a disputed right between the parties depends on the substance of the transaction and in order that it may bind the estate it should be a prudent and reasonable act (k).

A reversioner would be precluded from questioning the alienation on any such ground if he has in fact elected to assent to the transaction and received benefit under it in circumstances inviting the application of the doctrine of election or ratification (*k*1). The cases on the subject show that the rule of estoppel also has been involved in such cases. In Subbu Chetty's Family Charities v. Raghava Mudaliar the Supreme Court pointed out that the principle of election or estoppel or ratification must be applied with due circumspection and held that the mere fact that the reversioner has received some benefit under the transaction or has not challenged the validity of the transaction when it took place cannot bar his rights as a reversioner when reversion in his favour falls open (*k*2).

(2) An alienation by way of compromise entered into between a limited owner and a person who had no bona fide claim at all to the estate when the compromise was entered into does not bind the reversioners (l). But if the compromise is a bona fide one, entered into by the widow with a rival claimant for the benefit of the husband's estate, it would bind the reversioners. The widow cannot however by such compromise with a person claiming adversely to the estate convert her limited estate into an absolute estate in some of the properties (m). Where a presumptive reversioner sued to set aside a gift by a widow and a compromise was entered into by which longer law]—see (1922) 49 I.A. 342, 1 Pat. 741, 69 I.C. 71, ('22) A.PC. 356 infra; Janak Kishori v. Babu Debi Prasad (1917) 2 Pat. L.J. 370, 39 I.C. 750 ('17) A.P. 490 [compromise by a widow of her claim as a legatee under her husband's will]: Anup Narayan v. Mohabir Prasad (1918) 3 Pat. L.J. 83, 42 I.C. 95, ('17) A.P. 86 [compromise not for the benefit of the estate]; Narain Singh v. Raj Kumar (1922) 44 All. 428, 66 I.C. 82, ('22) A.A. 217 [compromise not for the benefit of the estate]; Musammat Bhagwati v. Jagadam (1921) 6 Pat. L.J. 604, 621-622, 67 I.C. 597, ('22) A.P. 352 [no doubtful claim]; Pullayya v. Appanna ('57) A. Andh. Pra. 846.

---

(i) Ramsumran Prasad v. Shyam Kumari (1922) 49 I.A. 342, 1 Pat. 741, 69 I.C. 71, ('22) A.PC. 356, approving Mohendra Nath v. Shamsunnessa (1915) 21 Cal. L.J. 157, 27 I.C. 954 ('15) A.C. 629; Raoji Rupa v. Kunjalal Hiralal (1930) 57 I.A. 177, 55 Bom. 455, 123 I.C. 709, ('30) A.PC. 163.

(j) Ramsumram Prasad v. Shyam Kumari (1922) 1 Pat. 741, 745-746, 49 I.A. 342, 69 I.C. 71, ('22) A.PC. 356; Babulal v. Maniklal (1941) Nag. 124, 192 I.C. 826, ('41) A.N. 79.

(k) Mst. Phool Kuer v. Mst. Pem Kuer (1952) S.C.R. 793, ('52) A.SC. 207; Karuppa Udayar v. Sellamuthu Udayar (1956) 2 Mad. L.J. 250; Arjun Singh v. Virendra ('71) A.A. 29.

(*k*1) Sahu Madho Das v. Mukund Ram (1955) 2 S.C.R. 22. Also see Ekkari Ghosh v. Chittarekha ('58) A.C. 447.

(*k*2) (1961) 3 S.C.R. 624, 632.

(l) Obala Kondama v. Kandasami (1924) 51 I.A. 145, 47 Mad. 181, 79 I.C. 961, ('24) A.PC. 56; Baijnath Rai v. Mangla Prasad (1926) 5 Pat. 350, 90 I.C. 732, ('26) A.P. 1; Mathukumalli Ramayya v. Uppalapati Lakshmayya (1943) Mad. 1, 202 I.C. 1, 69 I.A. 110, ('42) A.PC. 54.

(m) Perireddi v. Venkatraju (1947) Mad. 681.

a portion of the estate was transferred to him, it was held that the compromise was not binding on the actual reversioner (n). See § 182, ill. (2).

Illustrations

(a) A has a son B, who is joint with him. A adopts the Mahomedan faith, but the management of the joint property remains with him. B then dies leaving a daughter D. Then A dies leaving his grand-daughter, D, and a son S by a predeceased daughter DI. On A's death D claims the whole of the joint family property on the ground that A's conversion operated as a forfeiture of his rights in the property and that the property became immediately on A's conversion the property of B. S claims the property as A's daughter's son. A compromise is then arrived at between the parties under which D obtains 8½ annas of the joint property and S gets 7½ annas. S then alienates his shares to X. After D's death, her son, F, claiming to be the reversionary heir to his grandfather, B, brings a suit against X to recover from him the property transferred to him by S. It is contended on behalf of F that D, as B's daughter, took only a limited interest in the property, and that she had therefore no authority, in the absence of legal necessity, to alienate the 7½ annas share in favour of S.

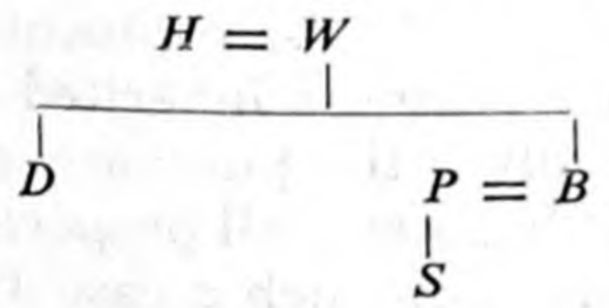
On the above facts it was held by the Privy Council that the compromise was binding upon F and that he was not entitled to recover the property from X. Their Lordships said: "The true test to apply to a transaction which is challenged by the reversioners as an alienation not binding on them is, whether the alienee derives title from the holder of the limited interest or life tenant. In the present case Khairati Lal [S] acquired no right from the daughter [D] of Daulat [B], for the 'compromise', to use their Lordships' language in Rani Mewa Kwar v. Rani Hulas Kwar (o), is based on the assumption that there was an antecedent title of some kind in the parties and the agreement acknowledges and defines what that title is": Khunni Lal v. Gobind Krishna (1911) 33 All. 356, 38 I.A. 87, 102-103, 10 I.C. 471.

(b) A Hindu, H, dies leaving a widow, W, and a daughter, D. After the death of H, W adopted a son P to H. P dies leaving a widow B, and a daughter, S. After P's death D claiming as the heir of her father, H, sues B for possession of certain property alleging that it formed part of the estate of H and that B was not entitled to retain it. B contends that the property in dispute belonged to P as the lawfully adopted son of H, and that on P's death she, as P's widow, became entitled to it. The suit is settled by a compromise by which the property is divided in certain shares between D and B. B then dies, and after her death her daughter S sues D to set aside the compromise entered into by her mother. B, alleging that it involved an alienation of part of the property of her father, P, and that B, as P's widow, had no authority to alienate it without legal necessity and for recovery of the property from D. Upon these facts it was held by the Judicial Committee that the compromise was binding on S, and that she was not entitled to recover from D the property transferred to her by B. Their Lordships said: "The compromise in question is in no sense of the word an alienation by a limited owner of the family property, but a family settlement in which each party takes a share of the family property by virtue of the independent title which is, to that extent, and by way of compromise, admitted by the other parties": Hiran Bibi v. Sohan Bibi (1914) 18 C.W.N. 929, 932, 24 I.C. 309, ('14) A.PC. 44.



(c) A Hindu died leaving a widow and a paternal uncle's son. Prior to his death the deceased had brought a suit for a sale of certain properties mortgaged to him. The suit was continued by the widow, and she obtained a decree for Rs. 1,47,000. Six of the mortgaged properties were then put up for sale by auction, and the widow, having leave to bid, bought them for Rs. 65,075. The mortgagors filed a petition in objection to the sale. The widow entered into a compromise with the mortgagors, one of the terms of the compromise being that the sale should be set aside. It was contended in a suit brought

---

(n) Mt. Rajpali Kunwar v. Surju Rai (1936) 58 All. 1041 (F.B.), 163 I.C. 756, ('36) A.A. 507; Mathukumalli Ramayya v. Uppalapati Lakshmayya (1943) Mad. 1, 202 I.C. 1, (1942) A.L.J. 392, 69 I.A. 110, ('42) A.PC. 54.

(o) (1875) 1 I.A. at p. 166.

by the paternal uncle's son against the widow, the mortgagors and certain persons to whom the properties were sold under the compromise that as the widow had purchased at the auction, the transaction was an alienation of immovable property and therefore could only be justified by strict proof of necessity. Upon the facts the Judicial Committee held that the compromise was bona fide and for the benefit of the estate, and that the widow had power to enter into the compromise: Ramsumran Prasad v. Shyam Kumari (1922) 49 I.A. 342, 1 Pat. 741, 69 I.C. 71, ('22) A.PC. 356.

This section relates to cases of compromise to which the reversioners are not parties. § 192 deals with cases of compromise to which the reversioners are parties.

As to burden of proof in cases of compromise, see notes to § 182 "Burden of proof; 'Consent decree' involving alienation to mortgagee" at p. 226.

194. Compromise by widow of claims made by next reversioner.—Where a widow in possession of her husband's estate has entered into a compromise of a claim made by the next reversioner in respect of the estate, and the compromise is in the circumstances a family settlement which is prudent and reasonable, it is binding upon the estate [that is, the whole body of reversioners] (p). A mere device, however, between the widow and the next reversioner to divide the estate between them cannot be supported on the ground of a family arrangement (q).

Thus a surrender by a widow of the whole of her husband's estate to the next reversioner, coupled with a re-transfer of the estate by him to the widow whereby she is constituted the absolute owner thereof, and a transfer back by the widow to him of part of the estate, cannot be supported as a family arrangement, and it is not binding on the actual reversioner at the widow's death, not even if he is the son of the consenting reversioner. If the widow purporting to be the absolute owner of the properties that came to her share, transfers them to a third person the actual reversioner is entitled to have the transfer set aside (q).

194A. Widow's power of alienation for payment of trade debts.—A widow or other limited heir may alienate or charge the estate for payment of debts properly incurred by her in connection with the business inherited by her from the deceased owner (r). If the business involves the purchase and re-sale of immovable property, she may in the course of business sell properties so purchased by her. No question of legal necessity arises in such a case (s).

195. Unsecured debts incurred by widow for legal necessity.—Debts contracted by a widow or other female heir may be ordinary debts incurred for purposes amounting to a legal necessity, e.g., marriage of her daughter, or they may be trade debts.

As regards ordinary debts incurred for a legal necessity, there is a conflict of opinion whether if the debt is not secured by a mortgage or a charge on the estate, the estate is liable in the hands of the reversioners after the widow's death.

It has been held by the High Courts of Madras (t), and Allahabad (u), that the estate is not liable in such a case, the reason given being that a creditor who has accepted the (p) Mata Prasad v. Nageshar Sahai (1925) 52 I.A. 398, 47 All. 883, 91 I.C. 37, ('25) A.PC. 272 [compromise of suit].

---

(q) Thakur Prasad v. Musammat Dipa Kuer (1931) 10 Pat. 352, 134 I.C. 129, ('31) A.P. 442.

(r) Sham Sunder v. Acchhan Kunwar (1898) 21 All. 71, 25 I.A. 183. See also Amarnath v. Achan Kuar (1892) 14 All. 420, 19 I.A. 196.

(s) Pahalwan Singh v. Jiwan Das (1919) 42 All. 109, 59 I.C. 162, ('20) A.A. 345.

(t) Ramasami v. Sellattammal (1882) 4 Mad. 375. See also Regella v. Nimushakavi (1910) 33 Mad. 492, 5 I.C. 271.

(u) Dhiraj Singh v. Manga Ram (1897) 19 All. 300 [money borrowed by widow for marriage expenses of grand-daughter—no writing]. But see Suraj Prasad v. Makhna (1945) All. 465, which seems to overrule this case.

personal liability of a widow is not entitled to proceed against the estate. On the other hand, it has been held by the High Court of Calcutta (v), that the debt being incurred for a legal necessity the estate is liable even if no mortgage or charge is created on the estate. In a later Calcutta case (w) where necessary repairs were executed to a house inherited by a daughter from her father, it was held that the estate of the father was liable though no charge had been created, the ground of the decision being that the estate had benefited by the repairs. A Full Bench of the Bombay High Court has followed the Calcutta High Court dissenting from other High Courts and overruling its own earlier decision (x). This is also the view taken in Nagpur (y). But if the creditor wishes to proceed against the estate he must frame his suit in a proper manner (z); for if the suit is filed against the widow personally and not as representing the estate, only the widow's interest can be proceeded against in execution (a).

As regards trade debts it has been held that such debts properly incurred by a widow on the credit of the assets of the business inherited by her from her husband are recoverable after her death out of the assets of the business as against the reversioners who have succeeded thereto even in the absence of a specific charge on the estate (b).

A widow who borrows on a simple bond may bind the estate by subsequently creating a mortgage on the estate for payment of the debt comprised in the bond (c). As to alienations for trade debts see § 194A.

196. Acknowledgment of debt by widow.—It was provided by sec. 3 of the Limitation (Amendment) Act, 1927 that an acknowledgment signed, or a payment made, in respect of any liability, by a widow or other limited heir, shall be a valid acknowledgment or payment, as the case may be, as against a reversioner succeeding to such liability (d).

Now see section 21 (3) (a) of the new Limitation Act 36 of 1963.

197. Surrender of estate by widow.—(1) Surrender must be of whole estate.—An alienation by a widow or other limited heir of the estate inherited by her may be validated if it can be shown to be a surrender of her whole interest in the whole estate (e) in favour of the nearest reversioner, if there be only one, or of the whole body of reversioners, if there be more than one (f), at the time of the alienation. In such circumstances the question of necessity does not fall to be considered [ills. (a) to (d) and (f)]. But the surrender must be a bona fide surrender, and not a device to divide the estate with the reversioner (g). It must be noted that surrender by the widow and accept-

---

(v) Ramcoomar v. Ichamoyi (1881) 6 Cal. 36 [money borrowed by widow for marriage expenses of grand-daughter—no writing].

(w) Hurry v. Gonesh (1884) 10 Cal. 823.

(x) Dhondu Yeshwant v. Mishrilal Surajmall (1936) 60 Bom. 311, 38 Bom. L.R. 6, 160 I.C. 1046, ('36) A.B. 59 [F.B.].

(y) Raghoappa v. Balappa (1939) Nag. 347.

(z) Anandrao v. Mt. Annapurnabai (1937) Nag. 1, ('37) A.N. 299.

(a) Vasant Rao v. Beharilal (1938) Nag. 382, ('38) A.N. 225; Sheikh Ghasit Mian v. Thakur Panchanan Singh (1936) 15 Pat. 798, 166 I.C. 594, ('37) A.P. 58.

(b) Sakrabhai v. Maganlal (1902) 26 Bom. 206; Pahalwan Singh v. Jiwan Das (1918) 42 All. 109, 59 I.C. 162, ('20) A.A. 345.

(c) Bhup Singh v. Jhamman Singh (1922) 44 All. 95, 65 I.C. 724, ('22) A.A. 169.

(d) For the view taken before the Amendment Act of 1927 see Soni Ram v. Kanhaiya Lal (1913) 40 I.A. 74 35 All. 227, 19 I.C. 291, affmg. 32 All. 33, 3 I.C. 725.

(e) Mathukumalli Ramayya v. Uppalapati Lakshmayya (1943) Mad. 1, 202 I.C. 1, 69 I.A. 110, ('42) A.PC. 54. Nallaya v. Angaiyammal ('64) A.M. 260.

(f) Manjaya v. Sheshgiri (1925) 49 Bom. 187, 85 I.C. 20, ('25) A.B. 129.

(g) Rangasami v. Nachiappa (1919) 46 I.A. 72, 84, 42 Mad. 523, 537, 50 I.C. 498, ('18) A.PC. 196; Bhagwat Koer v. Dhanukdhari Prashad Singh (1919) 46 I.A. 259, 271, 47 Cal. 466, 483, 53 I.C. 347, ('19) A.PC. 75; Sureshwar v. Maheshrani (1920) 47 I.A. 233, 48 Cal. 100, 57 I.C. 325, ('21) A.PC. 107; Behari Lal v. Madho Lal (1892) 19 Cal. 236, 19 I.A. 30; Rangappa v. Kamti (1908) 31 Mad. 366; Pilu v. Babaji (1910) 34 Bom. 165, 4 I.C. 584; Moti v. Laldas (1917) 41 Bom. 93, 37 I.C. 945, ('16) A.B. 85; Khawani Singh v. Chet Ram (1917) 39 All. 1, 37 I.C. 86 ('17) A.A. 341; Sham Rathi v. Jaichha (1937) 39 All. 520, 40 I.C. 117, ('17) A.A. 300; Diltor Koer v. Harku Singh (1917) 2 Pat. L.J. 578, 41 I.C. 631, ('17) A.P.

ance by the reversioner are not matters of contract. The estate vests in the reversioner by operation of law without any act of acceptance by the reversioner (h). A sale of the estate for consideration cannot be regarded as a surrender (i) [ills. (e), (h) and (i)]. If there are two or more widows, the surrender must be by all of them (j).

Though it is open to a widow to surrender the estate to the next reversioner even where the latter is a female heir [§ 197(2)], a widow cannot validly surrender in favour of the next female heir and her husband jointly. The husband would be a stranger in this context (k). A valid surrender cannot be made in favour of anybody except the nearest reversioner, if there be one, or of the whole body of reversioners (l).

The omission, due to ignorance or to oversight, of a small portion of the whole property, does not affect the validity of the surrender when it is otherwise bona fide (m). Where the husband exchanged one land for another and the deed of surrender by the widow mentioned the survey number of the former but the latter was actually delivered, the surrender was held to be valid (n).

It is settled by long practice and confirmed by decisions that a Hindu widow can renounce in favour of the nearest reversioner if there be only one, or of all the reversioners nearest in degree if they are more than one at the moment. That is to say, she can, so to speak, by voluntary act operate her own death. The principle on which the whole transaction rests is the effacement of the widow—an effacement which in other circumstances is effected by actual death or by civil death—which opens the estate of the deceased husband to his next heirs at that date. Now, there cannot be a widow who is partly effaced and partly not so, and consequently there can be no surrender or renunciation of part of the estate (o). The surrender may be effected by any process having that effect, provided that there is a bona fide and total renunciation of the widow's right to hold the property. Thus a compromise between a widow and the next reversioner may operate as a surrender (p) [see ill. (d)]. It is not even necessary that the limited owner shall purport to transfer the property to the next reversioner (q). Again the surrender need not be effected by a single transfer of all the properties at the same time. It may consist of successive transfers provided the result at the end is a complete effacement of the widow (r). The Bombay High Court has held that a surrender is possible and valid even if the estate of the widow is in the possession of an adverse claimant who has completed his title to it by adverse possession (s).

The Patna High Court has held that a deed of surrender is really a deed of gift and not a deed of release for purposes of stamp (t). The Calcutta High Court has however expressed doubts on the propriety of this view. It has held, that a deed of surrender does not in law or fact purport to transfer any property. The widow merely withdraws herself from the estate and the next heir steps in to the inheritance as a matter of law. At any

---

538; Chunder v. Sarnamoyi (1894) 22 Cal. 354; Thakur Prasad v. Musammant Dipa Kuer (1931) 10 Pat. 352, 134 I.C. 129, ('31) A.P. 442; Ram Karan v. Baidka Singh ('54) A.P. 545; Ashalata v. Amiya Kumar ('58) A.C. 71.

(h) Natvarlal v. Dadubhai (1954) S.C.R. 339, ('54) A.SC. 61.

(i) Shantikumar Pal v. Mukund Lal Mandal (1935) 62 Cal. 204, 156 I.C. 209, ('35) A.C. 20.

(j) Dulhin Parbati Kuer v. Baijnath Prasad (1935) 14 Pat. 518.

(k) Mummareddi v. Durairaja Naidu (1951) S.C.R. 655.

(l) Phool Kuer v. Pem Kuer (1952) S.C.R. 793; Ram Charan v. Girjanandini ('59) A. All. 473.

(m) Gopal Singh v. Ujjar Singh (1955) 1 S.C.R. 86, ('54) A.SC. 579, 581; Haribhai Annaji v. Narayan Hari (1938) Bom. 723; Radhashyam v. Hari Pada ('62) A.C. 100; Brajeshwaree Dasee v. Mano Ranjan Datta (1937) 1 Cal. 690, 171 I.C. 626, ('37) A.C. 167.

(n) Ramayya v. Bapanamma (1937) Mad. 248, 166 I.C. 153, ('37) A.M. 146.

(o) Rangasami v. Nachiappa (1919) 46 I.A. 72, 79-80, 42 Mad. 523, 532, 50 I.C. 498, ('18) A.PC. 196. Also see Kamlabai v. Sheo Shankar ('58) A.SC. 914.

(p) Bhagwat Koer v. Dhanukdhari (1919) 46 I.A. 259, 271, 47 Cal. 466, 483, 53 I.C. 347, ('19) A.PC. 75; Sureshwar v. Maheshrani (1920) 47 I.A. 233, 48 Cal. 100, 57 I.C. 325, ('21) A.PC. 107; Chinnaswami v. Appaswami (1919) 42 Mad. 25, 48 I.C. 147, ('19) A.M. 865; Angamuthu v. Varatharajulu (1918) 42 Mad. 854, 53 I.C. 386, ('20) A.M. 627; Rama Nana v. Dhondi (1923) 47 Bom. 678, 76 I.C. 607 ('23) A.B. 432; Ram Adhar v. Ram Manohar (1923) 45 All. 610, 73 I.C. 990, ('24) A.A. 114.

(q) Prem Narain v. Hansraj (1946) All. 837.

(r) Maru v. Hanso (1926) 48 All. 485, 95 I.C. 543, ('26) A.A. 413.

(s) Natvarlal v. Dadubhai (1949) Bom. 869.

(t) In re: Khetramoni Debya (1937) 17 Pat. 95 (F.B.), 172 I.C. 847, ('38) A.P. 33.

rate if it is not in the form of a deed of gift, it does not require to be stamped and attested as such (u).

Transfer.—If a widow attempts to transfer any property to the next reversioner, and if the transfer is void by reason of any law, no title is conferred upon the transferee, even though she may have an intention to make a valid surrender (v).

It has been held in a case decided by the Patna High Court that surrender not being a transfer is not hit by the doctrine of lis pendens (w).

Surrender by widow coupled with a provision for her maintenance.—A surrender as stated above, must be a bona fide surrender, not a device to divide the estate with the reversioner. To make an arrangement for such a device, it is not necessary that the lady surrendering should part with the property directly. An arrangement, by which the reversioner as a consideration for the surrender promised to convey a portion of the property to a nominee or nominees of the lady surrendering, might well fall under the description of a device to divide the estate. But where disputes arise between a widow and the next reversioner as to title to her husband's property, and a compromise is entered into whereby the widow relinquishes her right of succession to the property in consideration of a small portion of the property being set apart for her maintenance for her life, the compromise is a bona fide surrender of the whole estate, and not a device to divide it with the next reversioner (x) [ills. (d) and (e)]. This decision was treated as an authority in a Bombay case for the proposition that a surrender may be total in spite of a provision for the maintenance of the widow surrendering the estate (y). The surrender amounts to effacement by the widow from the husband's estate and relying on this doctrine it was decided by a Full Bench of the High Court of Andhra Pradesh that a widow after surrendering her estate in favour of the next reversioner cannot claim maintenance out of the estate in the hands of the surrenderee if there was no such arrangement between the parties, and where there is such an arrangement she cannot seek revision of the terms of the arrangement (z). Where the estate consisted of 231 acres of land and the widow reserved 42 acres thereout for her maintenance and purported to surrender the rest to her daughter, the next reversioner, it was held that the transaction did not amount to a valid surrender (a). Where the widow purporting to surrender her estate reserved a life interest for herself, the Privy Council held that there was no valid surrender (b). Where an estate was small and the income was just sufficient for the maintenance of the widow and the deed of surrender stipulated that the entire income after the payment of land revenue should be paid to her, it was held that no valid surrender was possible and that it was therefore invalid (c). When a surrender by a Hindu widow of the entire estate in favour of the next reversioner forms an integral part of an arrangement under which certain named relatives of the widow receive the major portion of the property by transfer from the reversioner and only a small portion of the property is left to the latter, it was held that the surrender was not bona fide at all (d). But from the mere circumstance that other documents such as maintenance deed in favour of the widow and a gift deed in favour of another were executed by the surrenderee on the same day it may not be inferred that the surrender

---

(u) Karunamoyee v. Maya Moyi (1948) A.C. 84; Thiruvenkidaswami v. Pallani Ammal ('61) A.M. 291.

(v) Pandu Mari Lote v. Shripati (1954) Bom. 169, ('53) A.B. 428, (1953) 55 Bom. L.R. 647 (F.B.). Also see Hardeo Singh v. Kaushilla Kunwar (1954) All. L.J. 562.

(w) Julam Missir v. Pradip Missir ('58) A.P. 115.

(x) Sureshwar v. Maheshrani (1920) 47 I.A. 233, 48 Cal. 100, 57 I.C. 325, ('21) A.PC. 107; Naru v. Tai (1923) 47 Bom. 431, 76 I.C. 265, ('23) A.B. 191. See also Hem Chunder v. Sarnamoyi (1894) 22 Cal. 354 [not good law, correct view—alienation wholly void]; Kanuram v. Kashi Chandra (1909) 14 C.W.N. 226, 21 I.C. 660 [a decision of doubtful authority]; Challa Subbiah v. Paluri (1908) 31 Mad. 446 [surrender of entire interest to reversioner—transfer back by reversioner of one-third to widow's brother pursuant to agreement at time of surrender—surrender held valid]; Rangappa v. Kamti (1908) 31 Mad. 366 [not good law—commented on adversely by P.C. in (1919) 46 I.A. 72, 84, 42 Mad. 523, 537, 50 I.C. 498, ('18) A.PC. 196]; Sitanna v. Viranna (1934) 57 Mad. 749, 148 I.C. 828, ('34) A.PC. 105, where the widow reserved only 6 acres of land for her maintenance; Rami Reddi v. Rosamma ('55) A. Andh. Pra. 232 (F.B.); Ashalata v. Amiya Kumar ('58) A.C. 71.

(y) Rama Nana v. Dhondi Murari (1923) 47 Bom. 678, 76 I.C. 607, ('23) A.B. 432, dissenting from Adiveppa v. Tontappa (1920) 44 Bom. 255, 55 I.C. 369, ('20) A.B. 345; Krishna Mhatarba v. Baban Rambhau (1944) Bom. 287.

(z) V. Kondamma v. V. Seshamma ('57) A. Andh. Pra. 156.

(a) Gangadhar v. Prabhudha (1932) 56 Bom. 410, 140 I.C. 884, ('32) A.B. 625.

(b) Behari Lal v. Madho Lal (1891) 19 I.A. 30, 19 Cal. 236.

(c) Anant Nilkanth v. Lala Rupnarayan (1945) Nag. 698.

(d) Chundru Akkamma v. Ohundru Brahmadu (1950) 1 Mad. L.J. 750, ('50) A.M. 617; Reference may also be made to Venkateswarlu v. Challaiya ('53) A.M. 551, (1953) 1 M.L.J. 167 which was dissented from in Kuppanna v. Peruma ('60) A.M. 154, (1960) Mad. 115; Ram Prasad v. Sital Prasad ('65) A.P. 47.

was only a device to divide the property if the facts considered as a whole show that the transactions were bona fide (*d*1). The Court has to consider all the surrounding circumstances, the extent of the estate given to the widow, the status of the widow and also the nature and effect of the understanding arrived at between the parties. The mere fact that the document is described as a "karar" will not affect the substance of the transaction, nor will the fact that the transaction took place at the instance of the then reversioner be determinative of the matter (*d*2).

In a decision of the Madras High Court (*d*2) it was pointed out that once it is recognised that a provision for maintenance or setting apart a portion of the husband's property for the surrenderor to enjoy for maintenance can be made, there is no reason why the mere circumstance that a charge is created on the entire property for securing due payment should make any difference. If the other requirements of the rule are satisfied such a transaction can be regarded as within the rule upholding a surrender. Of course, the amount of maintenance should be reasonable.

Motive.—The widow's motive in making a surrender is immaterial. Therefore, a surrender by her cannot be called into question on the ground of improper motive (e).

(2) Surrender in favour of female reversioners.—A surrender, of the estate may be made even in favour of a female reversioner (f). A surrender, however, to a female reversioner does not enlarge the estate of such reversioner, but merely accelerates it. It does not confer on the female reversioner any larger estate than the limited and qualified estate to which she would have succeeded had she survived the limited heir (g) [ill. (g)].

The estate vests in her as a limited owner and on her death it passes to the next reversioner. It cannot, however, revert to the widow, for the widow has by the surrender completely effaced herself (h). A widow may surrender the estate in favour of the next male reversioner with the consent of an intermediate female reversioner (i) but in such a case the intermediate reversioner cannot reserve for herself a substantial part of the property or stipulate for any benefit except what is necessary for her maintenance. If she does so the surrender is invalid and does not bind the actual reversioners. In such a case a remote reversioner may file a suit for declaration to that effect (j).

(3) Surrender in favour of female reversioners in Bombay.—The provisions of sub-§ (2) do not apply to such females in Bombay as take an absolute interest in property inherited by them from a male, e.g., the daughter, daughter's daughter, and the like. A surrender to such a female passes the whole estate absolutely to her [see ill. (h)].

(4) Gift of whole property to a third party with consent of next reversioner.—There is a conflict of opinion whether a gift by a widow of her entire interest in the whole estate to a stranger with the consent of the next reversioner can be supported as a surrender so as to bind the actual reversioner at the widow's death [§ 183 (4)].

(5) Where surrender follows prior alienations.—Where a portion of the estate was validly alienated by the widow for legal necessity (such as discharge of husband's debts) and the remaining estate was then surrendered it

---

(*d*1) Boddu Veeraiah v. Aripirala Venkata ('68) A.A.P. 276.

(*d*2) Chinnamarappa v. Narayammal ('66) A.M. 169.

(e) Challa Subbiah v. Paluri (1908) 31 Mad. 446; Subbalakshmi v. Narayana Ayyar (1935) 58 Mad. 150, 152 I.C. 391, ('34) A.M. 535; Venkateswarlu v. Challaiya, supra.

(f) Sitanna v. Viranna (1934) 57 Mad. 749, 148 I.C. 828, ('34) A.PC. 105.

(g) Bhupal Ram v. Lachma Kuar (1889) 11 All. 253; Bepin Behari v. Durga Charan (1908) 35 Cal. 1086, 1090; Rup Ram v. Rewati (1910) 32 All. 582, 6 I.C. 541.

(h) Sartaji v. Ramjas (1924) 46 All. 59, 79 I.C. 25, ('24) A.A. 166. But see Chengappa v. Buradagunta (1920) 43 Mad. 853, 60 I.C. 135, ('21) A.M. 246.

(i) Sheo Sankar Dayal v. Kamalabati (1950) Nag. 589. Also see Sumantrabai v. Rishabhkumar (1953) Nag. 69, ('52) A.N. 295.

(j) Janki Nath Ray v. Jyotish Chandra Achariya Choudhuri (1941) I Cal. 231, 193 I.C. 419, ('41) A.C. 41.

was held that the surrender was valid (k). Where a widow alienates a portion of the estate inherited by her from her husband without legal necessity and subsequently surrenders the whole of her interest in the estate to the next reversioner, the surrender itself is valid. But there was a difference of judicial opinion as to whether the reversioner in such a case is entitled to claim immediate possession of the portion alienated or he must wait for possession until the death of the widow. In Natvarlal v. Dadubhai (l) the Supreme Court held that although the widow herself was incapable of disputing the title of the alienee or of the person who has title against her by adverse possession, a like disability did not attach to the reversioner as the latter does not derive title from the widow even in the case of surrender. The reversioner does not take the property subject to the rights created by the widow. The reversioner in such a case is entitled to immediately recover possession of the property from that person as heir of the last small holder.

The contrary view taken by the Madras High Court (m) and accepted by the Allahabad (n) and Patna (o) High Courts was commented upon and the view taken by the Calcutta (p) and Bombay (q) High Courts was referred to with approval by the Supreme Court in that case.

In the above case decided by the Supreme Court (r) and in a number of decisions of the Privy Council it has been reiterated that "the whole doctrine of surrender is based upon the analogy or legal fiction of the widow's death. The widow's estate is an interposed limitation or obstruction which prevents or impedes the course of succession in favour of the heir of her husband. It is open to the widow by a voluntary act of her own to remove this obstruction and efface herself from the husband's estate altogether. If she does that the consequence is the same as if she died a natural death and the next heir of her husband then living step in at once under the ordinary law of inheritance." It was also pointed out by the Supreme Court in that case that "surrender is not really an act of alienation of the widow of her rights in favour of the reversioner. The reversioner does not occupy the position of a grantee or transferee, and does not derive his title from her. It is the self-effacement by the widow that forms the basis of surrender and not the ex facie transfer by which such effacement is brought about."

(6) Surrender followed by adoption.—It has been held by a Full Bench of the Bombay High Court (s) overruling some of its earlier decisions to the contrary (t) that a valid surrender made by a Hindu widow of her husband's estate to the next reversioner can be defeated by a subsequent adoption by her of a son to her husband. The effect of the adoption will be to divest the estate of the surrenderee. In an earlier decision of that Court it had been held that a partial surrender being invalid the right of the surrenderee would be defeated (u). As to rights of the adopted son, see § 509. Also see § 509A.

---

(k) Ramayya v. Bapanamma (1937) Mad. 248, 897, ('26) A.C. 121, 156 I.C. 153, ('37) A.M. 146.

(l) (1954) S.C.R. 339, ('54) A.SC. 61.

(m) Subbamma v. Subramanyam, I.L.R. 39 Mad. 1035, Sundarasiva v. Vivamma (1925) 48 Mad. 933, 91 I.C. 401, ('25) A.M. 1267; Thripurasundara Rao v. Kotayya ('51) Mad. 753; Arunachala v. Arumuga, ('53) A.M. 550. But see Bilige Laxminarayana Rao v. Fernandes (1956) 2 Mad. L.J. 211.

(n) Lachmi v. Lachho (1927) 49 All. 334, 100 I.C. 764, ('27) A.A. 258. But see Raghuraj v. Babu ('52) A.A. 875.

(o) Basudeo v. Baidyanath ('35) A. Pat. 175. But now see Ram Karan v. Baidka Singh ('54) A.P. 545. Also see Julam Missir v. Pradip Missir ('58) A.P. 115.

(p) Ram Krishna v. Kausalya, 40 Cal. W.N. 208. But see Prafulla v. Bhabani, 52 Cal. 1018, 91 I.C. 803, ('50) A.B. 55 (F.B.); Kaliaperumal v. Kuppayee Ammal ('63) A.M. 110.

(q) Natvarlal v. Dadubhai (1949) 51 Bom. L.R.

(r) (1954) S.C.R. 339, ('54) A.SC. 61.

(s) Bahubali v. Gundappa (1954) Bom. 1026, 56 Bom. L.R. 501 (F.B.); Vishnu Pandu v. Mahadu (1950) Bom. 487, (1951) A.B. 170; Tukaram v. Gangi ('57) A.N. 28. Contra Venkateswarlu v. Challiya (1953) 1 Mad. L.J. 167, ('53) A.M. 551.

(t) Rama Nana v. Dhondi (1923) 47 Bom. 678, 76 I.C. 607, ('23) A.B. 432; Yeshwanta v. Antu (1934) 58 Bom. 521, 154 I.C. 252, ('34) A.B. 351; Krishna v. Baban (1944) Bom. 287, ('45) A.B. 24, (1944) 46 Bom. L.R. 634; Shantaram v. Keru Krishna (1948) Bom. 369, ('48) A.B. 381, (1948) 50 Bom. L.R. 283.

(u) Pilu v. Babaji (1910) 34 Bom. 165, 4 I.C. 584.

(7) Limitation.—A surrender operates eo instanti to clothe the reversioner with the right to impugn the widow's act of alienation as laid down by the Supreme Court in Natvarlal v. Dadubhai (v). In a later case it has been held by the High Court of Andhra Pradesh (w), disagreeing with a decision of the Allahabad High Court (x), that since the surrenderee is entitled to recover immediate possession his suit to recover any property belonging to the estate from an alienee is governed by Art. 144 and not Art. 141 of the Limitation Act.

Now see Article 65 of the new Limitation Act, 1963.

Illustrations

(a) A Hindu dies leaving a widow and a daughter's son. The widow surrenders her estate in four out of the five properties inherited by her from her husband to the daughter's son. The surrender is not valid, for it is a surrender only of a portion of the estate: Pilu v. Babaji (1910) 34 Bom. 165, 4 I.C. 584.

(b) A Hindu dies leaving a widow, a daughter and a daughter's son. The widow executes a deed in favour of her daughter's son, whereby she reserves a life-interest for herself in her husband's property, and declares that after her death the property should go to the daughter's son. This is not a valid surrender, for it is not a surrender of the widow's entire estate in the property: Behari Lal v. Madho Lal (1891) 19 Cal. 236, 19 I.A. 30.

(c) A dies leaving a mother M. M succeeds to A's properties for a woman's estate. She then transfers by way of gift a portion of the properties inherited by her to R who was then the nearest reversioner. The alienation is not valid, as it is not a surrender of M's entire interest in the whole estate: Rangasami v. Nachiappa (1919) 46 I.A. 72, 42 Mad. 523, 50 I.C. 498, ('18) A.PC. 196.

(d) A Hindu dies in 1872 leaving a widow and a nephew. The nephew claimed the property as sole survivor of the joint family and applied for a certificate to collect debts due to the estate of A. The widow opposed the application and alleged a partition. The Court found that the alleged partition had not taken place and granted the certificate to the nephew. This decision, being given only on a question of representation, did not preclude the widow from raising the question of title again in a suit properly instituted for that purpose; but the widow accepted the decision and by an agreement made in 1874 she recognized the nephew's title, and was granted by him a maintenance allowance which she continued to receive until her death in 1904. The nephew died in 1894 and the estate passed under his will to B. In 1907 D claiming as the reversionary heir sued B to recover the estate. It was held by the Judicial Committee that the widow's agreement of 1874, in conjunction with her acceptance of maintenance till 1904, amounted to a complete relinquishment of the estate to the nephew, then the next reversioner and that D's claim accordingly failed. Their Lordships of the Privy Council said that there was in this case a complete self-effacement by the widow which precluded her from asserting any further claim to the estate: Bhagwat Koer v. Dhanukdhari Prashad Singh (1919) 46 I.A. 259, 47 Cal. 466, 53 I.C. 347, ('19) A.PC. 75.

(e) A Hindu dies leaving a widow and 4 daughters. By his will he bequeaths his immovable property to the daughters. On his death the daughters take possession of the property under the will. The next reversioner sues the widow and daughters to set aside the will. The parties enter into a compromise by which the daughters give up their rights under the will, the widow surrenders all rights of succession to the immovable property, and the plaintiff who by the surrender becomes entitled as next reversioner transfers half of the property to the daughters and the plaintiff and the daughters each give a small portion of the land to the widow for her life. The compromise is a bona fide surrender of the whole estate, and not a device to divide it with the next reversioner. In the course of the judgment the Judicial Committee said: "Is it then a device to divide the property between the lady and the reversioner? . . . . . It is here

---

(v) (1954) S.C.R. 339, 56 Bom. L.R. 447, ('54) A.SC. 61.

(w) Venkateswara Rao v. Venkatasiva Rao ('57) A. Andh. Pra. 945; Veeraju v. Venkayya ('60) A.A.P. 222. Reference may also be made to Biliga Laxminarayana v. Fernandes ('57) A.M. 90.

(x) Raghuraj Singh v. Babu Singh ('52) A.A. 875.

that the fact of the arrangement being a compromise becomes of importance. Once the bona fide is admitted, we have the situation of a content under which, if decision were one way, the estate was carried to the daughters away from the family, and a litigation in the course of which the estate would probably be much diminished. The situation made it a perfectly good consideration for the lady in order to avoid these results to consent to give up her own rights by surrender. . . . The conveyance of small portions of land to the widowed mother was unobjectionable as it was only for maintenance": Sureshwar v. Maheshrani (1920) 47 I.A. 233, 238, 48 Cal. 100, 57 I.C. 325, ('21) A.PC. 107.

(f) The widows of the late male owner who were each getting rupees 625 a month as maintenance from the Court of Wards which was managing the property executed a deed by which they purported to surrender all their rights in the property inherited from their husband to the next reversioner, the latter agreeing to pay to the widows Rs. 2,000 per month for maintenance, the sum in case of default to be a charge upon the estate. The Privy Council, observing that there was no necessity for the surrender and that in 48 Cal. 100 the giving of a small portion of the estate to the widow for her maintenance was not objectionable, held the surrender to be void in law: Man Singh v. Nowlakhbati (1926) 53 I.A. 11, 5 Pat. 290, 94 I.C. 830, ('26) A.PC. 2.

(g) A Hindu governed by the Benares school of Hindu law dies leaving a widow, a daughter and a paternal uncle's son. The widow surrenders her interest in the property inherited by her to her daughter. The surrender is valid, but since a daughter, according to the Benares school, takes a limited estate, the surrender will not enlarge her estate, in other words, she will not take the property absolutely. The effect of the transaction is simply to accelerate the daughter's succession to the property and to entitle her to immediate possession. On the death of the daughter the property will pass to the uncle's son: Bhupal Ram v. Lachma Kuar (1888) 11 All. 253. It will not revert to the widow though she may then be alive.

(h) A Hindu governed by the Bombay school dies leaving a widow, a daughter and a nephew. In March 1911, the widow executes a deed of gift of the whole estate inherited by her from her husband in favour of her daughter. [A daughter in Bombay takes an absolute estate in the property inherited by her from her father; therefore, sub-§ (2) does not apply.] In December 1912, the daughter transfers the whole estate back to the widow absolutely. The daughter dies in 1915 leaving a daughter. In April 1916, the widow makes a gift of the entire estate to her grand-daughter. On the death of the widow the nephew claims the estate as the reversionary heir. The gift to the grand-daughter is valid and the nephew is not entitled to the property. The Court said: "It cannot be suggested in the present case that in 1911, when the widow was in bad health, and her widowed daughter was staying with her, it was intended to be merely a device to divide the estate with the reversioner": Naru v. Tai (1922) 47 Bom. 431, 437, 76 I.C. 265, ('23) A.B. 191.

(i) A Hindu widow surrenders the whole of her estate to the next reversioner. At the same time the next reversioner transfers it back to the widow, and declares that she is the absolute owner thereof, and the widow in her turn transfers part of the estate to the next reversioner. It is found that there was no dispute of any kind between the parties, and the sole object was to convert the widow's estate into an absolute estate in consideration of a transfer of part of the estate to the next reversioner. The transactions are not binding on the son of the next reversioner, and he is entitled to avoid alienation of the estate purported to have been made by her as the absolute owner thereof: Thakur Prasad v. Musammat Dipa Kuer (1931) 10 Pat. 352, 134 I.C. 129, ('31) A.P. 442.

198. Widow's power of management and investment.—A widow or other limited heir is entitled to manage the estate inherited by her. Her power to manage the estate is similar to that of a manager of an infant's estate as defined by the Privy Council in Hunooman Persaud v. Mussumat Babooee (y). "A widow like a manager of the family, must be allowed a reasonable latitude in the exercise of her powers, provided,. . . . she acts fairly to the expectant heirs" (z). The Court will not interfere with her management, unless there is danger to the estate from the manner in which she is dealing with it (a) [§ 204].

---

(y) (1856) 6 M.I.A. 393; Kameswar Pershad v. Ram Bahadur (1880) 6 Cal. 843, 8 I.A. 8.

(z) Venkaji v. Vishnu (1894) 18 Bom. 534, 536.

(a) Hurrydoss v. Sreemutty Uppoornah (1856) 6 M.I.A. 433.

If the husband has left debts, the widow is not bound to apply the income of the estate in discharge of the principal, but is bound to pay out of the surplus of her net income, only the interest (b). She is entitled to sell or mortgage the estate for the payment of the debts. The net income is her own exclusive property as widow, and she is not bound either to save or apply it for the benefit of the reversioners. At the same time she is not entitled to ignore the charges which are legally payable out of the gross income such as the peishcush and maintenance due to other members of the family and thereby add to the debts left by the husband so as to prejudice the reversioners (c).

The widow is entitled to invest monies forming part of her husband's estate in such securities as she thinks proper so as to realize the highest interest. She is not bound to invest in Government securities. She may lend the monies on a mortgage. The Court must take care not to interfere with or restrict her in the full enjoyment of her rights as conferred upon her by law in order to prevent a possible danger (d).

If the property consists of a quarry, she may work the quarry, and apply the proceeds for her own purposes, provided she does not exhaust the land (e).

199. Decree against widow when binding on reversioners.—A widow or other limited heir represents the whole estate in legal proceedings relating thereto. Therefore, a decree passed against her and a sale of the estate in execution of such decree is binding not only on her, but on the reversioners, even though they were not parties to the suit, provided—

(1) the suit was in respect of a debt or other transaction binding on the estate (f), and

(2) the decree was passed against her as representing the estate, and not in her personal capacity (g), "unless," as laid down by their Lordships of the Privy Council in the Shivagunga case (h), "it could be shown that there had not been a fair trial of the right in that suit." This does not mean that the suit should have been contested to the end as was erroneously held in the under-mentioned cases (i).

The widow is entitled to compromise the suit, and a decree passed against her, though on a compromise or on an award, binds the reversioners as much as a decree in a suit contested to the end, provided the compromise was entered into by her bona fide for the benefit of the estate and not for her personal advantage. This rests on the fundamental principle that a compromise entered into by a Hindu widow bona fide for the benefit of the estate, and not for her own personal advantage, binds the reversioners as

---

(b) Jagannadha v. Vighneswaradu (1932) 55 Mad. 261, 134 I.C. 881, ('32) A.M. 177.

(c) Ramasami Chetti v. Mangaikarsu (1895) 18 Mad. 113, 119-120; Debi Dayal Sahoo v. Bhan Pertap Singh (1904) 31 Cal. 433, 443.

(d) Biswanath v. Khantomani (1870) 6 Beng. L.R. 747-751; Kunjammal v. Malayappa Iyer (1956) 2 Mad. L.J. 67.

(e) Subba Reddi v. Chengalamma (1899) 22 Mad. 126.

(f) Jugul Kishore v. Jotendro Mohun (1884) 10 Cal. 985, 11 I.A. 66. Jhari v. Bijai (1923) 45 All. 613, 74 I.C. 865, ('24) A.A. 109. See also Devji v. Sambhu (1900) 24 Bom. 135; Veerabadra v. Marudaga (1911) 34 Mad. 188, 8 I.C. 1072.

(g) Katama Natchiar v. Raja of Shivagunga (1863) 9 M.I.A. 539, 543, 608 [decree on ground personal to the widow]; Nugender v. Kamince (1867) 11 M.I.A. 241; Baijun v. Brij Bhookun (1876) 1 Cal. 133, 2 I.A. 275; Partab Narain v. Trilokinath (1884) 11 I.A. 197, 207, 11 Cal. 186; Hari Nath v. Mothurmohun (1894) 21 Cal. 8, 20 I.A. 183 [decree against daughter — res judicata]. Risal Singh v. Balwant Singh (1918) 45 I.A. 168, 40 All. 593, 48 I.C. 553, ('18) A.PC. 87 [res judicata]; Ghelabhai v. Bai Javer (1913) 37 Bom. 172, 17 I.C. 866; Tirupatiraju v. Venkayya (1922) 45 Mad. 504, 67 I.C. 479, ('22) A.M. 131 (F.B.) [not sued in representative character]; Sulbi v. Ramkrishnabhatta (1918) 42 Bom. 69, 43 I.C. 233, ('17) A.B. 11; Bai Kanku v. Bai Jadav (1919) 43 Bom. 869, 53 I.C. 164, ('19) A.B. 146 [decree against widow on ground personal to herself]; Pramatha Nath v. Bhuban Mohan (1922) 49 Cal. 45, 64 I.C. 980, ('22) A.C. 321 [res judicata]; Lalit Mohan v. Davamoyi (1927) 45 Cal. L.J. 404, 105 I.C. 469, ('27) A.PC. 41 [personal decree against daughter]; Bishan Dayal v. Lakshmi Narain ('67) A.A. 370.

(h) Katama Natchiar v. Rajah of Shivagunga supra.

(i) Mahadei v. Baldeo (1908) 30 All. 75; Sheo Narain v. Khurgo (1882) 10 C.L.R. 337; Rajlakshmi v. Katyayani (1911) 38 Cal. 639, 672, 674, 12 I.C. 464; Jeram v. Veerbai (1903) 5 Bom. L.R. 885, 887; Ram Sarup v. Ram Dei (1907) 29 All. 239, 241.

much as a decree against her after litigation (j). It is necessary that such compromise should be reasonable and prudent (k). See § 193.

The suit being against the widow in a representative character, that is, as representing her husband's estate, a decree passed against her operates as res judicata against the whole body of reversioners under the Code of Civil Procedure, s. 11, Expl. 6. A decree against the widow in respect of a transaction entered into by her husband binds her as well as the reversioners (l). A decree against the widow in respect of debts contracted for the purpose of carrying on a money-lending business inherited from her husband would not be a mere personal decree but would bind the reversionary estate (m). But a decree passed against a widow personally though it be in respect of debt incurred for legal necessity, does not bind the estate; a sale, therefore, in execution of such a decree can pass no more than the life-interest of the widow (n).

In Ramsumran Prasad's case (o), their Lordships of the Privy Council discussed the principle underlying the widow's authority to compromise. It follows from what has been stated above that a decree on an award (p) and even a consent decree (q) would bind the reversioners if the compromise was for the benefit of the estate. An ex parte decree also may bind the reversioners (r). The principle has been applied in a suit by a widow where the question was whether certain adoption was valid or not and the widow represented the estate (s).

A consent decree in a suit against a widow by her husband's brothers to recover property in her hands on the allegation that it is joint family property, in which she accepts that position and is satisfied with maintenance only, does not bind the reversioners. The reason is that the rule in this section applies only to a widow who represents her husband's estate. The moment she admits that the property is joint, she ceases to represent the estate (t). A widow sued to recover properties belonging to her husband and obtained a decree. In appeal the matter was settled and a consent decree was passed by which a portion of the properties was adjudged to the opposite party who executed the consent decree and obtained possession. The reversioners then obtained a declaration that the consent decree did not bind them. The widow then filed another suit to recover the properties allotted to the opposite party by the consent decree but failed. It was held by the Privy Council that the last decree did not affect the reversioners (u).

A decree against a widow for mesne profits on account of trespass committed by her in her personal capacity can only be executed against her personally and not against her husband's estate (v). But where cess was due in respect of the husband's estate and the estate in the hands of the widow was sold under the Public Demands Recovery Act, it was held that only the widow's interest passed to the purchaser (w). Where the widows sued to set aside a sale of the husband's property for arrears of revenue,

---

(j) Ramsumran Prasad v. Shyam Kumari (1922) 49 I.A. 342, 1 Pat. 741, 69 I.C. 71, ('22) A.PC. 356, approving Mohendra Nath v. Shamsunnessa (1915) 19 C.W.N. 1280, 1285, 27 I.C. 954, ('15) A.C. 629; Subbammal v. Avudaiyammal (1907) 30 Mad. 3 [admission of debt by widow—decree on admission]; Bhogaraju v. Addepalli (1912) 35 Mad. 560, 564-565, 12 I.C. 123; Gur Nanak v. Jai Narain (1912) 34 All. 385, 14 I.C. 814 [appeal filed by widow withdrawn]; Mata Prasad v. Nageshar Sahai (1925) 52 I.A. 398, 47 All. 883, 91 I.C. 370, ('25) A.PC. 272 [compromise of suit between widow and next reversioner].

(k) Kaliammal v. Sundarammal (1949) Mad. 171.

(l) Madivalappa Irappa v. Subbappa Shankarappa (1937) Bom. 906, 39 Bom. L.R. 895, 172 I.C. 184, ('37) A.B. 458.

(m) Barada Prasad Saha v. Krishna Chandra Saha (1934) 38 C.W.N. 33, 151 I.C. 268, ('34) A.C. 414.

(n) Kallu v. Faiyaz (1908) 30 All. 394; Jugul Kishore v. Jotindro (1884) 11 I.A. 66, 73, 10 Cal. 985; Lalit Mohun v. Dayamoyi (1927) 29 Bom. L.R. 759, 105 I.C. 469, ('27) A.PC. 41 [personal decree against daughter]; Vasant Rao v. Beharilal (1938) Nag. 382, ('38) A.N. 225; Sheik Ghasit Mian v. Thakur Panchanan Singh (1936) 15 Pat. 798, 166 I.C. 594, ('37) A.P. 58; Anandrao v. Annapurnabai (1937) Nag. 1, ('37) A.N. 299; Mallikarjungowda-Rudragowda v. Venkawa Ramachandrappa (1940) Bom. 628, 191 I.C. 286, 42 Bom. L.R. 600.

(o) Ramsumran Prasad v. Shyam Kumari (1922) 49 I.A. 342, 346, 1 Pat. 741, 746, 69 I.C. 71, ('22) A.PC. 356; Mohendra Nath v. Shamsunnessa (1915) 21 Cal. L.J. 157, 163, 27 I.C. 954.

(p) Shib Deo v. Ram Prasad (1924) 46 All. 637, 644-646, 87 I.C. 938, ('25) A.A. 79. See Rama v. Daji (1919) 43 Bom. 249, 48 I.C. 125, ('18) A.B. 85.

(q) Subbammal v. Avudaiyammal (1907) 30 Mad. 3.

(r) Sarju Prasad v. Mangal (1925) 47 All. 490, 492, 87 I.C. 294, ('25) A.A. 339.

(s) See Urbasi v. Chandra Dharua ('57) A. Orissa 201 and the other cases cited there.

(t) Nirman Bahadur v. Fateh Bahadur (1930) 52 All. 178, 126 I.C. 337, ('29) A.A. 963.

(u) Sreemathi Rajlakshmi Dasee v. Bhola Nath Sen (1938) 65 I.A. 365, (1938) 2 Cal. 653, ('38) A.PC. 254.

(v) Maharajadhiraj Kameshwar Singh Bahadur v. Beni Madho Singh (1932) 11 Pat. 430, 134 I.C. 425, ('31) A.P. 422.

(w) Mt. Ramjhari Kuer v. Sheonarain Singh (1934) 13 Pat. 297, 155 I.C. 750, ('34) A.P. 609.

obtained a decree in the trial court and got possession but the decree was set aside on appeal, and the widows became liable for mesne profits and costs and a portion of the estate in their possession was sold in execution of the decree, it was held that the entire estate passed under the sale (x).

Even in a case where the decree might have been executed against the whole interest in the estate including the reversion, if what was actually sold, was described as the interest of the judgment debtor, as a widow, only her interest passed (y).

Burden of proof.—In Ramsumran Prasad's case (z) their Lordships kept it open whether in a case of compromise of a suit by a widow the burden lies absolutely and without qualification upon the reversioners impeaching the compromise to show that the compromise was not for the benefit of the estate.

As to debts binding on the estate, see § 195.

200. Decree in reversioner's suit against widow and res judicata.— When in a suit by the next reversioner against a widow relative to her deceased husband's estate an issue is finally determined, the issue is res judicata in any subsequent suit by another reversioner. It is not material that the plaintiff in the second suit does not claim through the plaintiff in the first (a). See § 210.

The reason is that in such a suit the reversioner sues in his representative character and the decree against him operates as res judicata against the whole body of reversioners under the Code of Civil Procedure, s. 11, Expl. 6. The matter is governed by the principles enunciated in § 199.

201. Adverse possession against widow not adverse against next reversioner.—A person who has been in adverse possession for twelve years or upwards of property inherited by a widow from her husband by any act or omission on her part is not entitled on that ground to hold it adversely as against the next reversioner on the widow's death. The next reversioner is entitled to recover possession of the property, if it is immovable, within twelve years from the date of the widow's death under Art. 141 of Schedule I of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, and if it is movable, within six years from that date under Art. 120 of that Act (b). The rule, as was pointed out by the Supreme Court (c), does not rest entirely upon the particular provision of Article 141. It is in accordance with the principles of Hindu law and the general principle that as the right of the reversioner is in the nature of a spes successionis and he does not trace that title through or from the widow, it would be manifestly unjust if he has to lose his rights by the negligence or sufference of the widow. Nor can there be any estoppel under sec. 41 of the Transfer of Property Act against the reversioner by reason of the widow's conduct (d). See § 209.

---

(x) Dulhin Parbati Kuer v. Baijnath Prasad (1935) 14 Pat. 518.

(y) Nagendrabala Dasee v. Panchanan Mourie (1933) 60 Cal. 1236, 149 I.C. 1053, ('34) A.C. 162.

(z) (1922) 49 I.A. 342, 1 Pat. 741, 69 I.C. 71, ('22) A.PC. 356.

(a) Mata Prasad v. Nageshar Sahai (1925) 52 I.A. 398, 47 All. 883, 91 I.C. 370, ('25) A.PC. 272 [consent-decree]; Venkatanarayana v. Subbammal (1915) 42 I.A. 125, 38 Mad. 406, 29 I.C. 298, ('15) A.PC. 124; Bansidhar v. Dulhatia (1925) 47 All. 505, 87 I.C. 235, ('25) A.A. 483.

(b) Runchordas v. Parvatibai (1899) 23 Bom. 725, 26 I.A. 71; Jaggo Bai v. Utsava Lal Bai (1929) 56 I.A. 267, 51 All. 439, 117 I.C. 498, ('29) A.PC. 166; Bankey Lal v. Raghunath (1929) 51 All. 189, 112 I.C. 801, ('28) A.A. 561; Aurobinda Nath v. Manorama (1928) 55 Cal. 903, 112 I.C. 496, ('28) A.C. 670, is no longer good law; Badrinarayan v. Narayansingh (1943) Nag. 213, 206 I.C. 335, ('43) A.N. 193; Nathulal v. Rangoba ('52) A.N. 133; Govind Balkrishna v. Ramchandra (1952) Bom. 621, (1952) 54 Bom. L.R. 263, ('52) A.B. 395.

(c) Kalipada Chakraborti v. Palani Bala Devi (1953) S.C.R. 503, ('53) A.SC. 125; Ram Kristo v. Dhankisto ('69) A.S.C. 204.

(d) Shambu Prasad v. Mahadeo Prasad (1933) 55 All. 554, 144 I.C. 293, ('33) A.A. 493; Chaturbhuj v. Sarbeshwar ('67) A.P. 138.

But where a decree founded upon adverse possession has been obtained against the widow in her lifetime the next reversioner is barred and he does not get the benefit of Art. 141 of the Limitation Act (e).

Now see Articles 65 and 113 of the new Limitation Act, 1963.

A Hindu belonging to the Shudra class died in 1849 leaving a widow A. In 1862, A adopted B as a son to her husband and put him in possession of the properties inherited by her from her husband. At that date there was no person who could give B in adoption and the adoption was invalid. B died in 1864. On his death his nephew, claiming as his heir, entered into possession of the properties. The nephew died in 1881. On his death the nephew's mother M entered into possession of the properties and held them until 1884 when A forcibly ejected her. In 1887, M brought a suit against A for possession of the properties. In 1892 a decree was passed for possession in favour of M, the Court holding that though B's adoption was invalid, M's claim for adverse possession for 12 years was established. A died in 1902. In 1905, the plaintiffs claiming to be the reversionary heirs of the original deceased, sued M for possession of the properties. The High Court dismissed the suit. On appeal to the Judicial Committee it was held that the principle of the Shivgunga case [See § 199] applied and that the decree of 1892 against the widow (A) was binding upon the reversioners, the decree having been passed after a fair trial of the suit, and the appeal was dismissed: Vaithialinga v. Srirangath (1925) 52 I.A. 322, 48 Mad. 883, 92 I.C. 85, ('25) A.PC. 249.

III.—REMEDIES AGAINST UNAUTHORISED ACTS OF WIDOWS AND OTHER LIMITED HEIRS

202. Reversioners and their rights.—A reversionary heir, although having those contingent interests which can be differentiated little, if at all, from a spes successionis [§ 175], is recognized by Courts of law as having a right to demand that the estate be kept free from danger during its enjoyment by the widow or other limited heir. He may therefore sue to restrain a widow or other limited heir from committing waste or injuring the property [§ 204]. The reason why such a suit by a reversionary heir is allowed is that the suit is by him in a representative character and on behalf of all the reversioners, so that the corpus of the estate may pass unimpaired to those entitled to the reversion (f). For the same reason he may bring a suit for a declaration that an alienation effected by her is not binding on the reversion (g) [§ 205].

In both cases the right to sue is based on the danger to the inheritance common to all the reversioners, presumptive and contingent alike, the object being to forestall an injury which threatens the common interest of all the reversioners (h). Where a reversioner brings a representative suit for a declaration that an alienation by the widow is not binding on the reversion and dies, his right of suit survives not to his personal heirs but to the next presumptive reversioner (i).

The next reversioner for the time being to the estate of a deceased Hindu, expectant upon the widow's death, is not entitled to a declaration under the Specific Relief Act, s. 42, that he is the next reversioner, although in that capacity he has the right to sue on behalf of the reversioners for the protection of the estate. Where, therefore, he sues the widow alleging waste [§ 204], but fails to prove any wrongful act on her part, a declaration that he is the next reversionary heir should not be made. The reason is that it is impossible to predicate until the succession opens who is the reversionary heir of the deceased proprietor, and such a declaration, if made, might be rendered valueless by the development of events (j).

---

(e) Shivagunga case (1863) 9 M.I.A. 539; Vaithialinga v. Srirangath (1925) 52 I.A. 322, 48 Mad. 883, 92 I.C. 85, ('25) A.PC. 249.

(f) Janaki Ammal v. Narayanasami (1916) 43 I.A. 207, 209-210, 39 Mad. 634, 638, 37 I.C. 161, ('16) A.PC. 117.

(g) Venkatanarayana v. Subbammal (1915) 42 I.A. 125, 128-129, 38 Mad. 406, 410-411, 29 I.C. 298, ('15) A.PC. 124.

(h) Ibid.

(i) Rameshwar v. Ganapati Devi (1937) Lah. 525, 166 I.C. 753, ('36) A.L. 652.

(j) (1916) 43 I.A. 207, 39 Mad. 634, 37 I.C. 161, ('16) A.P.C. 117, supra; Sheoparsan v. Ramnandan (1916) 43 I.A. 91, 43 Cal. 694, 33 I.C. 914, ('16) A.PC. 78.

203. Suit for a declaration that plaintiff is next reversioner.—The next reversioner for the time being to the estate of a deceased Hindu, expectant upon the widow's death, is not entitled to a declaration that he is the next reversioner, although in that capacity he has the right to sue on behalf of the reversioners for the protection of the estate as stated in §§ 204 and 205 below (k).

Where a suit is brought on behalf of reversioners for a declaration that a transaction by the widow is not binding on them, the defendants may plead that the person whose reversioners the plaintiffs claim to be was not the last male owner and the defendants themselves are the reversioners of the last male owner and the matter may be tried in the suit (l)

If a widow surrenders the whole estate to one of the reversioners [§ 197] and the plaintiffs claiming to be reversionary heirs equally with the grantee sue for a declaration that the surrender is not valid beyond the widow's lifetime, the Court may make the declaration, though it involves a finding that the plaintiffs equally with the grantee are the next reversioners (m).

204. Injunction to restrain waste.—Where a widow or other limited heir in possession of property inherited by her commits waste or does any act which is injurious to the reversion, the next reversioner may institute a suit for an injunction restraining her from doing so. But the Court will not grant an injunction and will not take the management of the property out of her hands, unless the act complained of constitutes "danger to the property" (n).

Where the estate comprises movable property, and the widow has squandered part thereof, the Court may appoint a receiver to prevent further waste of the estate, it may also direct transferees from the widow to replace the property where such property can be traced to their hands (o). If a widow gets bonds renewed in her own name in place of bonds that stood in her husband's favour and the recitals of the new bonds show as if consideration was paid in cash, this is clearly waste as far as the reversioner is concerned, which will justify the reversioner in filing a suit against the widow for a permanent injunction restraining her from withdrawing money deposited by her husband in the Post Office Savings Bank and directing her to renew the Post Office Cash Certificate of her husband or otherwise invest amounts due on them after maturity (p). See § 179.

No injunction can be granted to restrain a widow or other limited heir from making an unauthorized alienation of the estate which she represents. Mere alienation is not waste. In such a case the proper remedy is to bring a suit for a declaratory decree as stated in the next section (q). See § 202.

205. Declaratory suit in cases of unauthorised alienations.—(1) Where a widow or other limited heir alienates property inherited by her in contravention of the provisions of § 178, the next reversioner, though he has no interest higher than a chance of succession, may institute a suit in her lifetime for a

---

(k) Janaki Ammal v. Narayanasami (1916) 43 I.A. 207, 39 Mad. 634, 37 I.C. 161, ('16) A.PC. 117; Patto Padhanuni v. Bhikari Padhano ('54) A. Orissa 211; Rama Rao v. Raja of Pittapur (1919) 42 Mad. 219, 49 I.C. 835 ('19) A.M. 871; Madan Mohan Dhur v. Thakur Sree Sree Natai Gour Jew (1933) 37 C.W.N. 801, 147 I.C. 1247, ('34) A.C. 30.

(l) Desu Reddiar v. Srinivasa Reddi (1936) 59 Mad. 1052, ('36) A.M. 605.

(m) Saudagar Singh v. Pardip Singh (1918) 45 I.A. 21, 45 Cal. 510, 43 I.C. 484, ('17) A.PC. 196.

(n) Hurrydoss v. Sreemutty Uppoornah (1856) 6 M.I.A. 433; Kathama Natchiar v. Dorasinga (1875) 2 I.A. 169, 191, 15 Beng. L.R. 83, 119; Renka v. Bhola Nath (1915) 37 All. 177, 28 I.C. 896, ('15) A.A. 207; Janaki Ammal v. Narayanasami (1916) 43 I.A. 207, 39 Mad. 634, 37 I.C. 161, ('16) A.PC. 117. As to prospective waste, see Gambhirmal v. Hamirmal (1897) 21 Bom. 747, at p. 749. See Specific Relief Act, 1877, s. 54, ill. (m); Kunjammal v. Malayappa (1956) 2 Mad. L.J. 67 [Receiver of business—not appointed]; Ramchandra v. Seeniathal, I.L.R. (1955) Mad. 732, ('54) A.M. 1011. Reference may be made to Kamalabala v. Jiban Krishna (1946) 2 Cal. 32.

(o) Venkanna v. Narasimham (1921) 44 Mad. 984, 66 I.C. 10, ('21) A.M. 234.

(p) Sheo Das Pandey v. Mst. Ram Kali (1936) 11 Luck. 508, 158 I.C. 301, ('36) A.O. 4.

(q) Isri Dut v. Hansbutti (1884) 10 Cal. 324, 332, 10 I.A. 150.

declaration that the alienation is not binding on the reversion, and if the facts are proved, the Court may pass a decree declaring that the alienation is not valid beyond the lifetime of the limited heir (r) [§§ 175, 202]. As to limitation, see § 208.

The position and rights of the reversioners in such a case were summarised by the Supreme Court in the undermentioned decision (*r*1).

(2) The reversioners, however, are not bound to institute a declaratory suit. They are not obliged to take any action in the lifetime of the limited heir. They may wait until the estate vests in them on her death, and then sue the alienee for possession of the property (s). As to limitation, see § 209.

If a widow, without the consent of the reversioners, alienates her husband's property for purposes not sanctioned by law, the reversioners are entitled to bring a declaratory suit against her (t). See § 202 and notes. As to the effect of a decree in a declaratory suit, see § 210 below.

It was held by a Full Bench of the Andhra High Court (u) that a suit by a reversioner for a declaration of the invalidity of an alienation by a person claiming to be the adopted son of the last male owner is maintainable during the lifetime of the female limited owner. The omission to bring a declaratory suit, however, does not stand in the way of the nearest reversioner recovering possession of the property on the death of the female limited owner by a suit filed within the time prescribed by art. 141 of the Limitation Act.

206. Will by widow of property inherited by her from her husband.—The execution of a will by a widow or other limited heir purporting to dispose of property in which she takes a limited interest affords, as a general rule, no sufficient reason for granting a declaratory decree (v).

The reason is that a will made by a limited heir purporting to dispose of property inherited by her from a male does not operate as an alienation of the property. It is no more than an assertion, and a declaratory suit does not lie for the setting aside of a mere assertion (w). For the same reason, where a widow executes a deed by which she acknowledges that A.B. is the next reversioner, which in fact he is not, the Court will refuse to entertain a suit for a declaration by a person claiming to be the next reversioner that the deed is not binding on the estate (x). But where a widow claims property which really forms part of her husband's estate as her absolute property, alleging that she got it under a will of her husband's brother who had treated the property as his own, a suit will lie at the instance of the next reversioner for a declaration that the property belongs to the husband's estate and that she has no more than a widow's estate in it (a).

207. Who may sue for injunction or for declaratory decree.—It is not the law that any one who may have a possibility of succeeding on the death of a

---

(r) Goolab Singh v. Kurun Singh (1871) 14 M.I.A. 176; Jumoona v. Bamasoondari (1876) 1 Cal. 289, 3 I.A. 72; Isri Dut v. Hunsbutti (1884) 10 Cal. 324, 10 I.A. 150; Saudagar Singh v. Pardip Singh (1918) 45 I.A. 21, 45 Cal. 510, 43 I.C. 484, ('17) A.PC. 196. Specific Relief Act, 1877, s. 42, ill. (e); S. Ambalagaran v. Neelamegam ('56) A.M. 160 [deed of settlement with a trespasser]; Bhagwati Charan v. Hirday Singh ('52) A.P. 160.

(*r*1) Radha Rani v. Hanuman Prasad ('66) A.S.C. 216.

(s) Bijoy Gopal v. Krishna (1907) 34 Cal. 329, 34 I.A. 87; Mesraw v. Girjanundan (1908) 12 C.W.N. 857; Raghubir Singh v. Jethu (1923) 2 Pat. 171, 70 I.C. 290, ('23) A.P. 130; Anant Bahadur Singh v. Ashtabhuja Bux Singh (1957) 55 All. L.J. 55; Purna Chandra v. Gouri Pada ('67) A.C. 512 (fraud and collusion).

(t) (1883) 10 Cal. 324, 332-333, 10 I.A. 150, 156, 157, supra.

(u) Jainkamma v. Mattareddi ('56) A. Andh. Pra. 141.

(v) Thakurain Jaipal v. Bhaiya Indar (1904) 31 I.A. 67, 26 All. 238; Umrao Kunwar v. Badri (1915) 37 All. 422, 29 I.C. 302, ('15) A.A. 252; Ganga v. Kanhai Lal (1919) 41 All. 154, 47 I.C. 222, ('18) A.A. 15; Das Mal v. Ram Chand (1923) 4 Lah. 116, 76 I.C. 946, ('23) A.L. 406.

(w) Rajah Nilmoney Singh v. Kally Churn (1874) 23 W.R. 150.

(x) Das Mal v. Ram Chand (1923) 4 Lah. 116, 76 I.C. 946, ('23) A.L. 406.

(a) Surayya v. Subbamma (1920) 43 Mad. 4, 53 I.C. 498, ('20) A.M. 361.

widow or other limited heir can maintain a suit for an injunction or for a declaratory decree; for otherwise every one in the line of succession, however remote, would have a right to sue. The right to sue rests in the first instance with the next reversioner.

The reversioner next after him is not entitled to sue (b), unless—

(i) The next reversioner refuses without sufficient cause to institute proceedings, or has concurred in the act alleged to be wrongful, or has colluded with the limited heir, or is precluded from suing by his own act or conduct (c), or is from poverty not in a position to sue (d); or

(ii) according to the Calcutta (e), Madras (f), and Patna (g) decisions, the next reversioner is herself a female and entitled to a limited interest only. The same view has been taken by the Allahabad High Court in some cases (h); in other cases it has been held that the mere fact that the next reversioner is a female does not give any right of suit to the more distant reversioner, unless it be shown that she was acting in collusion with the widow or other limited heir whose act is impeached (i).

Parties to suit.—Where the plaintiff brought the suit claiming to be the next reversioner and the whole case was tried by the lower courts which declared that the alienation by the widow was not valid beyond her lifetime and in Second Appeal the High Court found that on account of Act II of 1929, the plaintiff was not the nearest reversioner, a sister's son having come into existence after the institution of the suit, it was held that the suit ought not to be dismissed but the case should be sent back for disposal after making the sister's son a party and getting a proper guardian appointed for him (j). Reference may be made to the undermentioned cases (k).

Reference may also be made to the undermentioned decision of the Supreme Court (*k*1).

Where a suit is brought by the next reversioner, there is nothing to preclude a remote reversioner from joining or asking to be joined in the suit, or even obtaining the conduct of the suit on proof of laches on the part of the plaintiff or collusion between him and the widow (l), as for instance, an attempt to compromise the suit with the

---

(b) Rani Anand Kunwar v. The Court of Wards (1881) 6 Cal. 746, 8 I.A. 14; Meghu Rai v. Ram Khelawan (1913) 35 All. 326, 9 I.C. 814; Gumanan v. Jahangira (1918) 40 All. 518, 46 I.C. 186, ('18) A.A. 393; Abinash v. Harinath (1905) 32 Cal. 62 [not good law on the point of limitation, see § 208]; Mussammat Viranwali v. Kundan Lal (1928) 9 Lah. 106, 112 I.C. 35, ('28) A.L. 267; Shankar v. Raghoba (1939) Nag. 383; Matru Mal v. Mehri Kunwar (1940) All. 416, 189 I.C. 600, ('40) A.A. 311, (1940) A.L.J. 403, 13 I.R. 106; Lalta Prasad v. Dwarka Prasad (1941) All. 598, 195 I.C. 492, ('41) A.A. 313, (1941) A.L.J. 392; Raja Seetla Baksh Singh v. Babu Surrendra Bikram Singh (1943) 18 Luck. 521, 205 I.C. 585, ('43) A.O. 68.

(c) Kooer Goolab Singh v. Rao Kurun Singh (1871) 14 M.I.A. 176; Rao Kurun Singh v. Nawab Mahomed (1871) 14 M.I.A. 187, 193; Bakhtawar v. Bhagwana (1910) 32 All. 176, 5 I.C. 270 [gift with consent of next reversioner]; Raja Dei v. Umed Singh (1912) 34 All. 207, 13 I.C. 632; Ghisiawan v. Mst. Raj Kumari (1921) 43 All. 534, 63 I.C. 556, ('21) A.A. 33 [sale with consent of next reversioner]; Bhikaji v. Jagannath (1873) 10 Bom. H.C. 351 [waiver].

(d) Mata Prasad v. Nageshar Sahai (1925) 52 I.A. 398, 47 All. 883, 91 I.C. 370, ('25) A.PC. 272.

(e) Abinash v. Harinath (1905) 32 Cal. 62.

(f) Chidambara v. Nallammal (1910) 33 Mad. 410, 5 I.C. 164.

(g) Ramyad v. Rambhilhara (1919) 4 Pat. L.J. 734, 54 I.C. 357, ('20) A.P. 514; Nathuni Missir v. Ratna Kuer ('63) A.P. 337.

(h) Balgobind v. Ramkumar (1884) 6 All. 431; Lakhpati v. Rambodh (1915) 37 All. 350, 352, 29 I.C. 218, ('15) A.A. 255.

(i) Ishwar v. Janki (1893) 15 All. 132; Madari v. Malki (1884) 6 All. 429; Gumanan v. Jahangira (1918) 40 All. 518, 46 I.C. 186, ('18) A.A. 393. See also Tekchand v. Soman Singh (1916) Punj. Rec. No. 27, 34 I.C. 831, ('16) A.L. 265. Reference may, however, be made to Deoki v. Jwala Prasad (1928) 50 All. 678, 113 I.C. 737 ('28) A.A. 216.

(j) Lakshmi v. Anantharama (1937) Mad. 948, 171 I.C. 7, ('37) A.M. 699. Reference may also be made to Kani Bewa v. Krushna ('53) A. Orissa 39; Shcodutta v. Akali Bhumijani ('53) A.P. 374; Bhagatram v. Bhakluram ('63) A.M.P. 56.

(k) Rani Anand Kunwar v. The Court of Wards (1881) 6 Cal. 764, 772-773, 8 I.A. 14; Meghu Raj v. Ram Khelawan (1913) 35 All. 326, 19 I.C. 814; Jhandu v. Tarif (1915) 37 All. 45, 27 I.C. 892, ('14) A.PC. 34; Sita Saran v. Jagat (1927) 49 All. 815, 102 I.C. 296, ('27) A.A. 811; Mussammat Viranwali v. Kundan Lal (1928) 9 Lah. 106, 112 I.C. 35, ('28) A.L. 267; Samanatha v. Luxman ('62) A. Orissa 38. Reference may be made to Sudehaiya v. Ram Dass ('57) A.A. 270. Also see Suraj Mal v. Nathwa (1923) 45 All. 255, 76 I.C. 983, ('23) A.A. 161. As to minor who is the next reversioner see Kali Charan v. Bageshra (1925) 47 All. 929, 89 I.C. 374, ('25) A.A. 585.

(*k*1) Radha Rani v. Hanuman Prasad ('66) A.S.C. 216.

(l) Venkatanarayana v. Subbammal (1915) 42 I.A. 125, 38 Mad. 406, 29 I.C. 298, ('15) A.PC. 124.

widow in appeal after the lower court had passed a decree granting the declaration prayed for in the suit (m).

208. Declaratory suits and limitation.—(1) A suit by a reversioner for a declaration that an alienation made by a widow or other limited heir is void except for her life must be brought within 12 years from the date of the alienation [the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, Sch. I, art. 125] (n).

A distinction must be made in respect of other suits by a reversioner. It has been held by the Patna High Court that a suit by a Hindu for a declaration that the alienations made by a Hindu female who has a life estate by virtue of a transfer or grant inter vivos or by virtue of a bequest are void and are not binding on him as the next reversioner of the last male owner is governed by Art. 120 and not by Art. 125 (o).

(2) Such a suit is a representative suit on behalf of all the reversioners, then existing or thereafter to be born, and all of them have but a single cause of action, which arises on the date of the alienation. Hence if no suit is brought by the existing reversioners within 12 years, and their right to sue is barred by limitation, reversioners thereafter born are equally barred (p).

The ground of the decision was that the right of the next reversioner to bring a declaratory suit is based on the danger to the inheritance common to all the reversioners, presumptive and contingent alike, and there is therefore one cause of action common to them all (q). See § 202.

The High Court of Calcutta has held that what bars the next reversioner does not bar the contingent reversioner (r).

209. Reversioner's suit for possession and limitation.—A suit by reversioners, entitled to succeed to the estate on the death of a widow or other limited heir, for possession of immovable property from an alienee from her must be brought within twelve years from her death [the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, Sch. I, art. 141], and of movable property, within six years from that date (s) [ib., art. 120]. See § 205(2).

Now see Articles 65, 109 and 113 of the new Limitation Act, 1963.

The reversioner may sue for possession without suing to have the alienation set aside. The reason is that he is entitled to treat the unauthorized alienation as a nullity without the intervention of any Court (t).

Article 141 of Schedule I of the Indian Limitation Act, referred to in this section, provides, a period of 12 years for a suit for possession of immovable property by a Hindu entitled to possession of such property on the death of a Hindu female. In an award arising out of a dispute between a widow and her husband's brothers, certain properties

---

(m) Gokulananda Harichandan v. Iswar Chhotrai (1936) 15 Pat. 379, 166 I.C. 342, ('37) A.P. 11.

(n) See Yagnanarayana v. Lakshminarayana (1951) 1 M.L.J. 502, (52) A.M. 495 and cases there cited. Also see Venkayamma v. Veerayya ('57) A. Andh. Pra. 280.

(o) Kanhya Lal Missir v. Mst. Hira Bibi (1936) 15 Pat. 151, 163 I.C. 940, ('36) A.P. 323 differing from Mt. Nandan v. Wazira (1927) 8 Lah. 215; Mt. Widyavati v. Mt. Rahmat Bi ('37) A. Lah. 760.

(p) Varamma v. Gopaladasayya (1918) 41 Mad. 659, 46 I.C. 202, ('19) A.M. 911 (F.B.), approved and ratio decidendi followed in Kesho Prasad v. Sheo Pargash (1922) 44 All. 19, 29, 64 I.C. 248, ('22) A.A. 301 (F.B.); Chhaganram v. Bai Motigavri (1890) 14 Bom. 1900; Jamnabai v. Dharsey (1902) 4 Bom. L.R. 893 [adoption]; Chiragh Din v. Abdullah (1925) 6 Lah. 405, 90 I.C. 1022, ('25) A.L. 654.

(q) Mata Prasad v. Nageshar Sahai (1925) 32 I.A. 398, 410-411, 47 All. 883, 893-894, 91 I.C. 370, ('25) A.PC. 272.

(r) Abinash v. Harinath (1905) 32 Cal. 62; Das Ram v. Tirtha Nath (1924) 51 Cal. 101, 108-109, 81 I.C. 522, ('24) A.C. 481.

(s) Bijoy Gopal v. Krishna (1907) 34 Cal. 329, 34 I.A. 87; Runchordas v. Parvatibai (1899) 23 Bom. 725, 26 I.A. 71; Ram Dei v. Abu Jafar (1905) 27 All. 494; Rakhmabai v. Keshav (1907) 31 Bom. 1; Mummareddi v. Pitti Durairaja (1951) S.C.R. 655; Govind Balkrishna v. Ramchandra (1952) Bom. 621, (1952) 54 Bom. L.R. 263, ('52) A.B. 395; Sitaram Singh v. Bhikhni Devi ('60) A.P. 452 (defendant claimed to be adopted son).

(t) (1907) 34 Cal. 329, 34 I.A. 87, supra; Obala Kondama v. Kandasami (1923) 51 I.A. 145, 152, 47 Mad. 181, 189, 79 I.C. 961, ('24) A.PC. 56.

were given to her for maintenance and it was provided that she should forfeit her right to the properties if she became unchaste. The widow became unchaste in 1910 or 1912 and died in 1929. It was held that a suit brought in 1932, that is, within 12 years after her death was in time under art. 141 on the ground that the reversioners are entitled to waive the benefit of the forfeiture (u). For an application of this art. 141, see § 210. As to commencement of the period of limitation when there is surrender of the estate after alienation see the undermentioned case (v).

210. Decree in suit between next reversioner and alienee and res judicata.—A suit by the next reversioner against the widow or other limited heir and an alienee from her for a declaration that the alienation is not binding on the reversioner is a representative suit on behalf of all the reversioners, and a decree fairly and properly passed in such a suit, whether it is for or against the next reversioner, operates as res judicata between not only the next reversioner but the whole body of reversioners on the one hand and the alienee and his representatives on the other (a).

This principle applies also when a creditor obtains a decree against a widow and attaches properties inherited by her from her husband; in such a case if the reversioner brings a suit for the release of the property on the ground that debts were not incurred for legal necessity and therefore not binding on the reversion, a fresh suit by him for a declaration that the sale of the property in execution is not binding on him is res judicata (b).

Illustrations

(a) A Hindu dies leaving a widow, a brother, and a paternal uncle. The widow sells property inherited by her from her husband to A, and delivers possession of the property to him. The brother as next reversioner sues the widow and A for a declaration that the sale is not valid beyond the widow's lifetime, and a decree is passed in favour of the brother. After the decree the widow dies, and then the brother. The uncle demands possession of the property from A, but A fails to deliver possession. The uncle sues A for possession. A is precluded from contending that the sale was valid, and the uncle is entitled to possession.

(b) If in the case put in ill. (a) the brother's suit is dismissed and the alienation is upheld, the uncle will be precluded from bringing a fresh suit against A for a declaration that the alienation is not binding on him. The decree of dismissal operates as res judicata against the uncle, who is the ultimate reversioner, though he was not a party eo nomine to the brother's suit, and the alienee is entitled to the benefit of the decree. It may seem hard at first sight that a decree against the next reversioner, whose interest is merely presumptive and may never mature as when he dies before the widow, should operate as res judicata against the ultimate reversioner at the widow's death, for the decree might have been obtained by fraud or collusion. But the hardship is not real, for the decree in such a case may be set aside at the suit of the ultimate reversioner (c).

A decree against the next reversioner in respect of an alienation by the widow of property X to A does not bar a suit by the reversioner in respect of an alienation of property Y to B (d).

For the reason of the rule contained in this section, see § 202. The same principle applies to a suit by the next reversioner for a declaration that an adoption is invalid. If a decree is passed against him, it is binding on the ultimate reversioner (e). The matter is really governed by the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, s. 11, Expln. 6, which relates to res judicata in a representative suit. As to decrees against limited heirs, see § 199.

---

(u) Rashik Lal v. Radha Dulaiya (1937) All. 424, 169 I.C. 586, ('37) A.A. 268.

(v) Veeraju v. Venkayya ('60) A.A.P. 222.

(a) Kesho Prasad v. Sheo Pragash (1924) 51 I.A. 381, 46 All. 831, 82 I.C. 962, ('24) A.PC. 247, [decree for next reversioner] affg. (1922) 44 All. 19, 64 I.C. 248, ('22) A.A. 301 (F.B.); Pramatha v. Bhuban (1922) 49 Cal. 45, 64 I.C. 980, ('22) A.C. 321 [decree against next reversioner]; Khair Muhammad v. Umar (1924) 5 Lah. 421, 84 I.C. 477, ('25) A.L. 89 [decree against next reversioner].

(b) Mst. Seethabai v. Hari (1938) Nag. 498, ('38) A.N. 401.

(c) Kesho Prasad v. Sheo Pragash (1924) 51 I.A. 381, 46 All. 831, 82 I.C. 962, ('24) A.PC. 247.

(d) Thakar Singh v. Mst. Uttam (1929) 10 Lah. 613, 118 I.C. 449, ('29) A.L. 295.

(e) Chiruvolu v. Chiruvolu (1906) 29 Mad. 390 [F.B.]; Gokulanand Harichandan v. Iswar Chhotrai (1936) 15 Pat. 379, 166 I.C. 342, ('37) A.P. 11.

211. Adverse possession by widow.—(1) Property acquired by a Hindu widow or other limited heir by adverse possession [Indian Limitation Act, 1908, sch. I, art. 144], of which she took and retained possession absolutely in her own right, for twelve years or upwards is her stridhana, and she may dispose of it by deed or will; on her death intestate it descends to her stridhana heirs (f). But if the property acquired by adverse possession was claimed and held by her not in her own right, but as a widow representing her husband's estate, it is not her stridhana, but an accretion to her husband's estate, and in it she takes no more than a widow's estate, and it descends on her death to her husband's heirs (g).

The position would be the same even if she was under a mistaken belief that her husband was dead (h). The possession of a person who is not the widow of the last male owner but is the widow of another member of the family is prima facie adverse but if she claims the estate only by inheritance she must be deemed to be claiming only a limited estate (i). Thus, where a Hindu widow in the enjoyment of her husband's estate as heir remarried and had thereby forfeited her title to the estate, but continued in possession without asserting any change in the character of her possession, she acquires title by prescription only to a widow's estate and not to an absolute estate (j).

Now see Article 65 of the new Limitation Act, 1963.

It has accordingly been held that where a Hindu dies leaving a son and a widow and the widow who is entitled to maintenance only out of her husband's estate takes and retains possession of property belonging to her husband's estate adversely to the son, the property is her stridhana, unless it is clearly shown that when she took possession, she professed to do it as claiming only the limited estate of a widow. "The son having the title, she could not take possession excluding him, unless she intended to take an adverse possession, a possession to which she was not in any way entitled" (k). Similarly, where a widow takes possession of the estate of her husband's uncle to which her husband's grandsons are entitled (l), or takes possession of the estate of her husband's brother to which the brother's heirs are entitled (m), and holds it adversely against the rightful heirs, the property is her stridhana. In a Privy Council case where a Hindu widow executed a deed of gift of property which she held absolutely under a will from her husband in favour of her daughter, which gift was not valid as the deed was not registered, but the daughter remained in adverse possession of the property for upwards of 12 years, it was held that the property was her stridhana and that it did not pass on her death to her father's heirs (n). It has been held in a number of cases that where a Hindu female who has no right to a property obtains and holds possession of it for the requisite period, the presumption is that she intended to prescribe for an absolute title, unless it is shown that she wanted to hold it as a limited owner (o).

(2) The possession of a portion of the joint family estate by the widow of a member of a joint Hindu family governed by the Mitakshara law, as of right,

---

(f) Lachhan Kunwar v. Monorath Ram (1895) 22 Cal. 445 [P.C.]; Varada Pillai v. Jeevarathnammal (1920) 43 Mad. 244, 46 I.A. 285, 53 I.C. 901, ('19) A.PC. 44; Bansidhar v. Dulhatia (1925) 47 All. 505, 87 I.C. 235, ('25) A.A. 483; Rikhdeo v. Sukhdeo (1927) 49 All. 713, 102 I.C. 175, ('28) A.A. 45; Suraj Balli v. Tilakdhari (1928) 7 Pat. 163, 107 I.C. 151 ('28) A.P. 220; Musammat Muluka v. Pateshar (1926) 1 Luck. 273, 295-296, 96 I.C. 672, ('26) A.O. 371; Hira Mal v. Rongi Ram I.L.R. (1955) Punj. 1120; Satyanarayana v. Veerraju ('59) A.A.P. 79 (F.B.); Sampat v. Surajmat ('59) A.B. 504; Tilakdhari Rai v. Parma Rai ('63) Pat. 356.

(g) Lajwanti v. Safa Chand (1924) 51 I.A. 171, 5 Lah. 192, 80 I.C. 788, ('24) A.PC. 121; Patipal Singh v. Rampal Singh (1940) 15 Luck. 112, 185 I.C. 157, ('40) A.O. 63; Hiralal v. Rongiram ('51) A. Simla 11; Chattar Singh v. Roshan Singh (1946) Nagpur 159; Gaya Deen v. Amrauti, I.L.R. (1956) 1 All. 193.

(h) Bibhabati v. Ramendra (1947) 1 Cal. 32 (P.C.).

(i) Chandrabali Pathak v. Bhagwanprasad Pande (1944) All. 533.

(j) Parbati v. Ram Prasad (1932) 7 Luck. 320, 141 I.C. 831, ('33) A.O. 92; Bharmanna v. Shiragondappa ('59) A. Mys. 81.

(k) Lachhan Kunwar v. Manorath Ram (1895) 22 Cal. 445, 449; (1925) 47 All. 505, 87 I.C. 235, ('25) A.A. 483, supra.

(l) Rikhdeo v. Sukhdeo (1927) 49 All. 713, 102 I.C. 175, ('28) A.A. 45.

(m) Suraj Balli v. Tilakdhari (1928) 7 Pat. 163, 107 I.C. 151, ('28) A.P. 220.

(n) Varotha Pillai v. Jeevarathammal (1920) 46 I.A. 285, 43 Mad. 244, 53 I.C. 901; Mst. Maluka v. Pateshar (1926) 1 Luck. 273, 96 I.C. 672, ('26) A.O. 371, supra.

(o) Udai Pratap v. Narotam (1946) 21 Luck. 143; Thailambal Ammal v. Kesavan Nair ('57) A. Kerala 86.

for twelve years or upwards, as for instance, where mutation has been effected in her name and she remains in continuous possession, bars the claims of the other members of the family (p).

The reason is that on the death of an undivided member of a joint family, the joint family property passes to the other members of the family by survivorship, and the widow is not entitled to anything more than maintenance out of the joint family property; her possession, therefore, would be adverse to the other members unless it was in lieu of maintenance under an arrangement with them (q). See § 133. But a widow having obtained possession of property under an arrangement with her husband's brothers granting her a widow's estate, cannot by any act or declaration of her own acquire title by prescription. Cf. § 176(7) (r).

(p) Pandit Adya Shankar Tivari v. Mst. Chandrawat (1935) 10 Luck. 35, 150 I.C. 519, ('34) A.O. 265; Bhagwan Das v. Krishen Lal ('56) A.J. & K. 36.

(q) Sham Koer v. Dah Koer (1902) 29 I.A. 132, 29 Cal. 664; Satgur Prashad v. Kishore Lal (1919) 46 I.A. 197, 42 All. 152, 55 I.C. 486, ('19) A.P.C. 60; Uman Shankar v. Musammat Aisha (1923) 45 All. 729, 74 I.C. 869, ('24) A.A. 88; Kali Charan v. Piari (1924) 46 All. 769, 83 I.C. 754, ('24) A.A. 740. Also see Gaya Deen v. Amrauti ('55) A.A. 630.

(r) Rashik Lal v. Radha Dulaiya (1937) All. 424, 169 I.C. 586, ('37) A.A. 268.

CHAPTER XII

COPARCENERS AND COPARCENARY PROPERTY—MITAKSHARA LAW

1. Coparceners—§§ 212-217.
2. Coparcenary property—§§ 218-234.
3. Management and enjoyment of Coparcenary property—§§ 235-254.
4. Alienation of Coparcenary property—§§ 255-257.
5. Alienation of undivided coparcenary interest—§§ 258-266.
6. Setting aside alienations—§§ 267-270.

Note.—The general effect of the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, in case of death of a coparcener in the joint family governed by the Mitakshara law has been pointed out under § 35. The Hindu Succession Act, 1956, has brought about some radical changes in the law of succession without abolishing the joint family and joint family property. Speaking generally it does not interfere with the special rights of those who are members of a Mitakshara coparcenary but it is important to note that section 6 of that enactment recognises the rights upon the death of a coparcener of certain of his preferential heirs to claim an interest in the property that would have been allotted to him if there had in fact been a partition immediately before his death and the principle of devolution by survivorship considered in this Chapter is affected to that extent. The cardinal doctrine of the Mitakshara law that a coparcener in a joint family cannot make a valid gift or bequest of his interest in the coparcenary property so as to defeat the rights of the other members to take by survivorship is partly abolished to the extent that it is now competent to such a coparcener to dispose of by will (s. 30) his undivided interest in the coparcenary property. See sections 6 and 30 of that Act and Notes thereunder for the effect of the new legislation upon the rights of coparceners and the incidents of coparcenary property in case of the joint Hindu family governed by Mitakshara law.

I.—COPARCENERS

212. Joint Hindu family.—(1) A Joint Hindu family consists of all persons lineally descended from a common ancestor, and includes their wives and unmarried daughters (s). A daughter ceases to be a member of her father's family on marriage, and becomes a member of her husband's family.

Reference may be made to notes under sec. 6 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, and sec. 16 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, for the position and rights in a joint Hindu family of a son or daughter born of a marriage which is void or voidable under the latter enactment and who is to be deemed to be a legitimate child of the parents.

(2) The joint and undivided family is the normal condition of Hindu society. An undivided Hindu family is ordinarily joint not only in estate, but also in food and worship (t). The existence of joint estate is not an essential requisite to constitute a joint family and a family which does not own any property may nevertheless be joint (u). Where there is joint estate, and the members of the family become separate in estate, the family ceases to be joint. Mere 'severance in food and worship does not operate as a separation (v).

---

(s) Commissioner of Income Tax v. Luxminarayan (1935) 59 Bom. 618, 37 Bom. L.R. 692, 159 I.C. 424, ('35) A.B. 412; Melagiriyappa v. Lalithamma ('61) A. Mys. 152.

(t) Sri Raghunada v. Brozo Kishor (1876) 1 Mad. 69, 89, 3 I.A. 154.

(u) Janakiram v. Nagamony (1926) 49 Mad. 98, 103, 115, 93 I.C. 662, ('26) A.M. 273; Laldas v. Motibai (1908) 10 Bom. L.R. 175; Pandit Mohan Lal v. Pandit Ram Dayal (1941) 16 Luck. 708, 194 I.C. 61, ('41) A.O. 331.

(v) Chowdhry Ganesh Dutt v. Jewach (1904) 31 I.A. 10.

Possession of joint family property is not a necessary requisite for the constitution of a joint Hindu family. Hindus get a joint family status by birth, and the joint family property is only an adjunct of the joint family (w).

(3) A joint or undivided Hindu family may consist of a single male member and widows of deceased male members. The property of a joint family does not cease to be joint family property belonging to any such family merely because the family is represented by a single male member (coparcener) who possesses rights which an absolute owner of property may possess. Thus for instance a joint Hindu family may consist of a male Hindu, his wife and his unmarried daughter (*w*1). It may similarly consist of a male Hindu and the widow of his deceased brother (*w*2). The basis of this rule is that the joint family property does not cease to be such simply because of the "temporary reduction of the coparcenery unit to a single individual" the character of the property remains the same (*w*3).

213. Hindu coparcenary.—A Hindu coparcenary is a much narrower body than the joint family. It includes only those persons who acquire by birth an interest in the joint or coparcenary property (x). These are the sons, grandsons and great-grandsons of the holder of the joint property for the time being, in other words, the three generations next to the holder in unbroken male descent. See §. 217.

To understand the formation of a coparcenary, it is important to note the distinction between ancestral property and separate property. Property inherited by a Hindu from his father, father's father or father's father's father, is ancestral property. Property inherited by him from other relations is his separate property. The essential feature of ancestral property is that if the person inheriting it has sons, grandsons or great-grandsons, they become joint owners with him. They become entitled to it by reason of their birth (y). Thus if A, who has a son B, inherits property from his father, it becomes ancestral in his hands, and though A, as the head of the family, is entitled to hold and manage the property, B is entitled to an equal interest in the property with his father A, and to enjoy it in common with him. B can therefore restrain his father from alienating it except in the special cases where such alienation is allowed by law, and he can enforce partition of it against his father. On his father's death, he takes the property by right of survivorship and not by succession. It is otherwise, however, as to separate property. A man is the absolute owner of property inherited by him from his brother, uncle, etc. His son does not acquire an interest in it by birth, and on his death it passes to the son not by survivorship but by succession. Thus if A inherits property from his brother, it is his separate property, and it is absolutely at his disposal. His son B acquires no interest in it by birth, and he cannot claim a partition of it, nor can he restrain A from alienating it. The same rule applies to the self-acquired property of a Hindu. But it is of the utmost importance to remember that separate or self-acquired property, once it descends to the male issue of the owner, becomes ancestral in the hands of the male issue who inherits it. Thus if A owns separate or self-acquired property, it will pass on his death to his son B as his heir. But in the hands of B it is ancestral property as regards his sons. The result is that if B has a son C, C takes an interest in it by reason of his birth, and he can restrain B from alienating it, and can enforce a partition of it as against B.

Ancestral property is a species of coparcenary property. We have stated above that if a Hindu inherits property from his father, it becomes ancestral in his hands as regards his son. In such a case it is said that the son becomes a coparcener with the father as

---

(w) (1926) 49 Mad. 98, 103, 115, 93 I.C. 662, ('26) A.M. 273, supra.

(*w*1) Gowli Buddanna v. C.I.T. Mysore ('66) A.S.C. 1523; Sitabai v. Ramchandra ('70) A.S.C. 343; Narendranath v. W.T. Commissioner ('70) A.S.C. 14.

(*w*2) Sitabai v. Ramchandra ('70) A.S.C. 343.

(*w*3) Attorney General of Ceylon v. A. R. Arunachalam Chettiar (1957) A.C. 540 (P.C.); Sitabai v. Ramchandra supra.

(x) Commissioner of Income Tax v. Luxminarayan (1935) 59 Bom. 618, 37 Bom. L.R. 692, 159 I.C. 424, ('35) A.B. 412.

(y) Sundar Lal v. Chhittar Mal (1907) 29 All. 1; Anandrao v. Vasantrao (1907) 9 Bom. L.R. 595 [P.C.].

regards the property so inherited, and the coparcenary consists of the father and the son. But this does not mean that a coparcenary can consist only of a father and his sons. It is not only the sons but also the grandsons and great-grandsons who acquire an interest by birth in the coparcenary property. Thus if A inherits property from his father and he has two sons B and C, they both become coparceners with him as regards the ancestral property. A, as the head of the family, is entitled to hold the property and to manage it, and hence he is called the manager of the property. If B has a son D, and C has a son E, the coparcenary will consist of the father, sons and grand-sons, namely A, B, C, D and E, as shown in the accompanying diagram. Further, if D has a son F, and E has a son G, the coparcenary will consist of the father, sons, grandsons, and great-grandsons, in all it will consist of seven members. But if F has a son X, X does not become a coparcener, for a coparcenary is limited to the head of each stock, and his sons, grandsons, and great-grandsons. X being the great-great-grandson of A cannot be a member of the coparcenary so long as A, the holder of the joint property, is alive.

214. Formation of coparcenary.—(1) The conception of a joint Hindu family constituting a coparcenary is that of a common male ancestor with his lineal descendants in the male line within four degrees counting from and inclusive of such ancestor (or three degrees exclusive of the ancestor). No coparcenary can commence without a common male ancestor, though after his death it may consist of collaterals, such as brothers, uncles and nephews, cousins, etc.

(2) A coparcenary is purely a creature of law; it cannot be created by act of parties, save in so far that by adoption a stranger may be introduced as a member thereof (z).

(3) No female can be a coparcener although a female can be a member of a joint Hindu family [see § 217].

Illustration

The following diagram shows a coparcenary consisting of several families, A with his three sons B, C and D and their sons and grandsons constitute the "main" family. B with his two sons E and F, C with his son G, D with his sons H and I and his grandsons J and K, and I with his sons J and K, constitute "branch" families. All the families have one common ancestor A. Each branch family has also its own head, namely B, C, D and I. On A's death the coparcenary will consist of the three brothers, B, C and D and their male issue. On the death of B and C, the coparcenary will consist of D, his nephews E, F and G and his male issue H, I, J and K who stand in the relation of cousins to E, F and G.

Genesis of coparcenary.—A coparcenary is created in some such way as the following:—A Hindu male A, who has inherited no property at all from his father, grandfather, (z) Sudarsanam v. Narasimhulu (1902) 25 Mad. 149, 154-157. Reference may also be made to Bhagwan Dayal v. Reoti Devi ('62) A.S.C. 287. Also see § 228A infra.

or great-grandfather, acquires property by his own exertions. A has a son B, B does not take any vested interest in the self-acquired property of A during A's liftime, but on A's death he inherits the self-acquired property of A. If B has a son C, C takes a vested interest in the property by reason of his birth, and the property inherited by B from his father A becomes ancestral property in his (B's) hands, and B and C are coparceners as regards the property. If B and C continue joint, and a son D is born to C, he enters the coparcenary by the mere fact of his birth. And if a son E is subsequently born to D, he too becomes a coparcener.

Composite family.—As regards what is described in the South as a "composite family" reference may be made to the undernoted cases (*z*1).

215. Coparcenary not limited to four degrees from common ancestor.—Though every coparcenary must have a common ancestor to start with, it is not to be supposed that every extant coparcenary is limited to four degrees from the common ancestor. A member of a joint family may be removed more than four degrees from the common ancestor (original holder of coparcenary property), and yet he may be a coparcener. Whether he is so or not depends on the answer to the question whether he can demand a partition of the coparcenary property. If he can, he is a coparcener, but not otherwise. The rule is that partition can be demanded by any member of a joint family who is not removed more than four degrees from the last holder, however, remote he may be from the common ancestor or original holder of the property.

When a member of a joint family is removed more than four degrees from the last holder, he cannot demand a partition, and therefore he is not a coparcener [ills. (a) and (b)]. On the death, however, of the last holder, he would become a member of the coparcenary, if he was fifth in descent from him, and would be entitled to a share on partition, unless his father, grandfather and great-grandfather had all predeceased the last holder. The reason is—and here we have another important rule bearing on the subject in hand—that whenever a break of more than three degrees occurs between any holder of property [A in ill. (d)] and the person who claims to enter the coparcenary after his death [E in ill. (d)], the line ceases in that direction [i.e., the direction of C, *D*1 and E in ill. (d)] and the survivorship is confined to those collaterals and descendants [D in ill. (d)] who are within the limit of four degrees (a) [ills. (c) and (d)].

Illustrations

(a) A inherits certain property from his father X. He has a son B and a grandson C, both members of an undivided family. A, B and C are coparceners. A son D is then born to C. D becomes a coparcener by birth with A, B and C. Subsequently a son E is born to D. E is not a coparcener, for being fifth in descent from A, he cannot demand a partition of the family property. On A's death, however, B will become the head of the joint family and E will step into the coparcenary as the great-grandson of B, though he is fifth in descent from A, the original holder. Likewise, on B's death, F (E's son) will step into the coparcenary as great-grandson of C, the head of the family for the time being, though he is sixth in descent from A, the original holder.

A
|
B
|
C
|
D
|
E
|
F

Note that the property inherited by A from his father is ancestral in his hands. He is not the owner of the property: he is entitled merely to hold and manage the property as the head of the family for and on behalf of the family. The ownership of the property is in the joint family consisting of

---

(*z*1) Subbayya v. Sitaramamma ('59) A.A.P. 86; Venkatasubba Reddi v. Pitchamma ('60) A.A.P. 263; Veerapa Naidu v. Venkaiah ('61) A.A.P. 534.

(a) Moro Vishvanath v. Ganesh (1873) 10 Bom. H.C. 444; Yenumula v. Yenumula (1870) 6 Mad. H.C. 93.

himself and his three descendants B, C and D. They are all co-owners, or, as the expression goes, coparceners.

(b) Suppose a coparcenary consisted originally of A, B, C, D, E. F, G and H, with A as the common ancestor.—Suppose A dies first, then B, then C, then D, and then E, and that G has then a son I, and H has a son J, and J has a son K. On E's death the coparcenary will consist of F, G, H, I, J and K. Suppose that G, H and J die one after another, and the only survivors of the joint family are F, I and K. Are I and K coparceners with F? Yes, though I is fifth in descent from A, and K is sixth in descent from A. The reason is that either of them can demand a partition of the family property from F. Here the coparcenary consists of three collaterals, namely, F, I and K (b).

(c) A inherits certain property from his father X. A has a son B, a grandson C, a great-grandson D, and a great-great-grandson E. A, B, C and D are coparceners; E is not. On A's death, however, E will step into the coparcenary of which B will become the head. On B's death after A, the coparcenary will consist of C, D and E with C as the head. On C's death after A and B, the coparcenary will consist of D and E with D as the head. Suppose now that B, C and D all die in the lifetime of A. Does E become a coparcener with A? The answer is, no; for E is fifth in descent from A. The result is that A becomes the sole coparcener, and on his death the coparcenary property will pass by succession to his heirs according to the order given in § 43. If A has left nearer heirs than E, the property will pass to them. If E is the nearest heir of A living at the time of A's death, the coparcenary property held by A will go to him as his heir. The law is that property held by a sole surviving coparcener passes on his death by succession to his heirs.

(d) A inherits certain property from his father X. A has a son B, a grandson C, two great-grandson D and *D*1, and a great-great-grandson E by *D*1, all members of a joint family. Here A, B, C, D and *D*1 are coparceners, E is not, being more than four degrees removed from A. Suppose B dies first. The coparcenary will now consist of A, C, D and *D*1. The death of B does not introduce E into the coparcenary, for A being still alive, his great-great-grandson cannot be a coparcener with him. Suppose C dies next. The coparcenary will now consist of A, D and *D*1. The death of C does not introduce E into the coparcenary, for A being still alive, his great-great-grandson cannot be a coparcener with him. Suppose *D*1 dies next. The coparcenary will now consist of A and D. The death of *D*1 does not introduce E into the coparcenary, for A being still alive, his great-great-grandson cannot be a coparcener with him. Suppose A dies next, D now becomes the sole surviving coparcener, and the joint family property will pass to D by survivorship. The death of A does not introduce E into the coparcenary. The reason is that at the time of A's death, E's father (*D*1), his grandfather (C) and his great-grandfather (B), were all dead.

The following passage from Mayne's "Hindu Law and Usage" (9th ed., s. 271) deals with coparceners:—

"The question in each case will be, who are the persons who have taken an interest in the property by birth. The answer will be, that they are the persons who offer the funeral cakes to the owner of the property, that is to say, the three generations next to the owner in unbroken male descent. Therefore, if a man has living sons, grandsons and great-grandsons, all of these constitute a single coparcenary with himself. Everyone of these descendants is entitled to offer the funeral cake to him, and therefore everyone of them obtains by birth an interest in his property. But the son of one of the great-grandsons would not offer the cake to him, and therefore is out of the coparcenary, so long as the common ancestor is alive. But while fresh links are continually being added to the chain of descendants by birth, so earlier links are being constantly removed from the upper end of the chain by death. So long as the principle of survivorship continues to operate, the right to the property will devolve from those who are higher in the line to those who are lower down. As each fresh member takes a share, his descendants to the third generation below him take an interest in that share by birth."

---

(b) Moro Vishvanath v. Ganesh (1873) 10 Bom. H.C. 444.

216. Undivided coparcenary interest.—The essence of a coparcenary under the Mitakshara law is unity of ownership. The ownership of the coparcenary property is in the whole body of coparceners. According to the true notion of an undivided family governed by the Mitakshara law, no individual member of that family, whilst it remains undivided, can predicate, of the joint and undivided property, that he, that particular member, has a definite share, one-third or one-fourth (c). His interest is a fluctuating interest, capable of being enlarged by deaths in the family, and liable to be diminished by births in the family (d). It is only on a partition that he becomes entitled to a definite share. The most appropriate term to describe the interest of a coparcener in coparcenary property is "undivided coparcenary interest." The nature and extent of that interest is defined in § 235. The rights of each coparcener until a partition takes place consist in a common possession and common enjoyment of the coparcenary property. As observed by the Privy Council in Katama Natchiar v. The Rajah of Shivagunga (e), "there is community of interest and unity of possession between all the members of the family, and upon the death of any one of them the others may well take by survivorship that in which they had during the deceased's lifetime a common interest and a common possession." The latter part of this proposition must now be read in the context of sections 6 and 30 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, in cases where those sections are applicable.

In a recent decision the Supreme Court summarised the position and observed that the coparcenary property is held in collective ownership by all the coparceners in a quasi corporate capacity. The incidents of coparcenary are: first, the lineal male descendents of a person upto the third generation, acquire on birth ownership in the ancestral properties of such person; secondly, that such descendents can at any time work out their rights by asking for partition; thirdly, that till partition each member has got ownership extending over the entire property conjointly with the rest; fourthly, that as a result of such co-ownership the possession and enjoyment of the properties is common; fifthly, that no alienation of the property is possible unless it is for necessity, without the concurrence of the coparceners, and sixthly, that the interest of a deceased member passes on his death to the surviving coparceners (*e*1).

Illustration

Suppose a family to consist of A and his sons B and C; on a partition each will take one-third. But if D was born while the family remained joint, each would take one-fourth. Suppose the family still to remain undivided; on the death of A, the possible shares of the three sons would be enlarged to one-third; and if B were subsequently to die without issue, the shares of C and D would be enlarged to one-half. As C and D married, their sons E, F and G would enter into the family, and acquire an interest in the property, but that interest again would be a shifting interest, depending on the state of the family. If C were to die leaving only two sons E and F and they claimed a partition against D, E and F would each take one-half of one-half, and D would take the other half. But if H had previously been born, E, F and H would each take one-third of one-half, that is, one-sixth each. If they put off their claim for a division till D and G had both died, E, F and H would each take one-third of the whole (f).

(c) Appovier v. Rama Subba (1886) 11 M.I.A. 75, 89.

(d) Sudarsanam v. Narasimhulu (1902) 25 Mad. 149, 154, 156.

(e) (1863) 9 M.I.A. 539, 543, 611.

(*e*1) State Bank of India v. Ghamandi Ram ('69) A.S.C. 1330, 1333.

(f) Mayne's "Hindu Law," 10th ed. 165A.

Note that on a partition between C and D after the death of A and B, C would take one-half and D would take the other half. If C is dead, his issue E, F and H will take per stirpes as regards D, that is, they will take the one-half share of C, and D will take the other half, but as regards each other they will take per capita, that is, each will take an equal one-sixth share

The interest of a coparcener in an undivided Mitakshara family is not individual property (g). But the interest of a coparcener in an undivided Dayabhaga family is individual property (h). See § 279.

217. Females cannot be coparceners.—No female can be a coparcener under the Mitakshara law (*h*1). Even a wife, though she is entitled to maintenance out of her husband's property and has to that extent an interest in his property, is not her husband's coparcener (i). Nor is a mother a coparcener with her sons (j) nor a mother-in-law with her daughter-in-law (k). There can be no coparcenary between a mother and daughter among devadasees (l). Nor can a widow succeeding under the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act to her husband's share in a joint family be a coparcener (m). See Sec. 6 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956.

II.—COPARCENARY PROPERTY

218. Obstructed and unobstructed heritage.—(1) The Mitakshara divides property into two classes, namely, apratibandha daya or unobstructed heritage, and sapratibandha daya or obstructed heritage. Property in which a person acquires an interest by birth is called unobstructed heritage. It is called unobstructed, because the accrual of the right to it is not obstructed by the existence of the owner.

Thus property inherited by a Hindu from his father, father's father, or father's father's father, but not from his maternal grandfather (n), is unobstructed heritage as regards his own male issue, that is, his son, grandson, and great-grandson (o). His male issues acquire an interest in it from the moment of their birth. Their right to it arises from the mere fact of their birth in the family, and they become coparceners with their paternal ancestor in such property immediately on their birth. Ancestral property is unobstructed heritage.

Property, the right to which accrues not by birth but on the death of the last owner without leaving male issue, is called obstructed heritage. It is called obstructed, because the accrual of the right to it is obstructed by the existence of the owner.

Thus property which devolves on parents, brothers, nephews, uncles, etc., upon the death of the last owner, is obstructed heritage. These relations do not take a vested interest in the property by birth. Their right to it arises for the first time on the death of the owner. Until then they have a mere spes successionis or a bare chance of succession to the property, contingent upon their surviving the owner (p).

---

(g) Gharib Ullah v. Khalak Singh (1903) 25 All. 407, 30 I.A. 165.

(h) Sreemutty Soorjeemony Dossee v. Denobundoo (1857) 6 M.I.A. 526, 553.

(*h*1) Commissioner of Income Tax v. Mills ('66) A.S.C. 240. Also see f.n. (i) below. Also see Rajendra Nath v. Shiv Nath ('71) A.A. 448; Dasappa Setty v. Vedavathamma ('72) A. Mys. 283.

(i) Punna Bibee v. Radha Kissen Das (1904) 31 Cal. 476; Srimathi Sabitri v. Mrs. F. A. Savi (1934) 13 Pat. 359, 145 I.C. 1, ('33) A.P. 306.

(j) Hira Singh v. Mst. Mangla (1928) 9 Lah. 324, 330, 106 I.C. 877, ('28) A.L. 122; Sital Prasad v. Sri Ram (1944) Luck. 450.

(k) The Commissioner of Income Tax v. Pannabai (1943) Nag. 458, ('13) A.N. 160.

(l) Gangamma v. Kuppammal (1938) Mad. 789, ('39) A.M. 139.

(m) Seetha Bai v. Narasimha (1945) Mad. 568; Maguni Padhano v. Lokananidhi ('56) A. Orissa 1 [mother cannot act as a de facto manager or Karta]; Radharam v. Jang Bahadur (1945) 20 Luck. 305; Seethamma v. Veerana (1950) Mad. 1076.

(n) Muhamad Husain v. Babu Kishva Nandan Sahai (1937) 64 I.A. 250, (1937) All. 655, 39 Bom. L.R. 979, 169 I.C. 1, ('37) A.PC. 233.

(o) Mst. Sirtaji v. Algu Upadhiya (1937) 12 Luck. 273, 163 I.C. 935, ('36) A.O. 331.

(p) Mitakshara, Ch. I, s. 1, v. 3.

(2) Unobstructed heritage devolves by survivorship; obstructed heritage, by succession. There are, however, some cases in which obstructed heritage also passes by survivorship. (Reference may be made to § 31 above and § 222 below and notes thereunder).

Illustrations

(a) A inherits certain property from his father. A has a son B. The property so inherited is unobstructed as regards B. That is to say, B becomes a coparcener from his very birth in the property with his father A, and on A's death the property will pass to him by survivorship. The result would be the same if A had inherited the property from his paternal grandfather or great-grandfather.

(b) In the case put above, A has a grandson C, but no son. C's rights are the same as those of B.

(c) A inherits certain property from his brother. A has a son B. The property is obstructed in A's hands. B does not take any interest in it during A's life. After A's death, B will take it as A's heir by succession. The existence of A is an obstruction to the accrual of any rights in the property to B.

219. Unobstructed heritage not recognized by the Dayabhaga.—The distinction between obstructed and unobstructed heritage is peculiar only to the Mitakshara School. According to the Dayabhaga, all heritage is obstructed, for, according to the doctrines of that school, no person, not even a son, takes an interest by birth in the property of another. The Dayabhaga does not recognize the principle of survivorship. It recognizes only the right of succession and this right accrues for the first time on the death of the last owner. The Privy Council, however, has applied the doctrine of survivorship to property jointly inherited by two or more widows and two or more daughters even in cases arising under the Dayabhaga law [§ 31].

220. Classification of property.—Property, according to the Hindu law, may be divided into two classes, namely, (1) joint family property, and (2) separate property.

Joint family property may be divided, according to the source from which it comes, into—

(1) ancestral property [§§ 223-225]; and

(2) separate property of coparceners thrown into the common coparcenary stock [§ 227].

Property jointly acquired by the members of a joint family with the aid of ancestral property is joint family property. Property jointly acquired by the members of a joint family without the aid of ancestral property may or may not be joint family property; whether it is so or not is a question of fact in each case [§ 228].

The term "joint family property" is synonymous with "coparcenary property."

"Separate" property includes "self-acquired" property [§§ 222, 231].

221. Incidents of joint family or coparcenary property.—Joint family or coparcenary property is that in which every coparcener has a joint interest and a joint possession (q). The incidents of a coparcenary were summarised in the undermentioned decision of the Supreme Court (*q*1). [See § 216 supra]. The following are the main incidents of joint family or coparcenary property:—

(a) it devolves by survivorship, not by succession [§ 229]: This proposition must now be read in the context of sections 6 and 30 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, in cases where those sections are applicable;

(b) it is property in which the male issue of the coparceners acquire an interest by birth.

The joint family property must be distinguished from the joint property of the English law. The joint property of the English law devolves like joint family property by survivorship. But the male issue of the joint tenants do not acquire any interest in it by birth. Two complete strangers may be joint tenants according to English law, but in no conceivable circumstance could they constitute a joint Hindu family, or hold property as a joint Hindu family. The fundamental principle of a joint Hindu family is the tie of sapindaship without which it is impossible to form a joint Hindu family (r).

Joint family property is purely a creature of Hindu law, and those who own it are called coparceners. The rights of coparceners are set forth in § 235 below. The distinction between joint family property and joint property comes into prominence only in two kinds of cases, namely, the case dealt with in § 223, sub-§ (2) [property inherited from maternal grandfather], and that dealt with in § 228 [joint acquisitions]. After leaving § 228 we shall use the expression "joint property" as equivalent to "joint family property."

222. Incidents of separate or self-acquired property.—A Hindu, even if he be joint, may possess separate property. Such property belongs exclusively to him. No other member of the coparcenary, not even his male issue, acquires any interest in it by birth. He may sell it (s), or he may make a gift of it, or bequeath it by will, to any person he likes (t). It is not liable to partition (u), and, on his death intestate, it passes by succession to his heirs, and not by survivorship to the surviving coparceners (v).

Explanation.—The expression "male issue" in this and subsequent sections means and includes sons, sons' sons, and sons' sons' sons.

It is stated in some decisions of Courts that in the separate or self-acquired property of a Hindu, even if he be joint, no other coparcener, not even his male issue, acquires any interest by birth. The statement, so far as it reaches his coparceners other than his male issue, is unexceptionable. And so far as it relates to his absolute right to deal with such property it does not create any misconception. But some misconception does arise as to the incidents of such property in the hands of his male issue after his death. Although it is at times said that such property passes to the undivided sons by succession, the statement would not be quite accurate. The property would be unobstructed heritage. According to the Mitakshara "property in the paternal or grandpaternal estate is by birth" and the strict legal view is that the undivided sons take a right vested by birth both in the paternal grandfather's property as well as in the separate or self-acquired property of the father. But distinction is drawn between these two by the Mitakshara itself.

---

(q) Katama Natchiar v. The Raja of Shivagunga (1863) 9 M.I.A. 539, 543, 611.

(*q*1) State Bank of India v. Ghamandi Ram ('69) A.S.C. 1330.

(r) Karsandas v. Gangabai (1908) 10 Bom. L.R. 184.

(s) Muddun Gopal v. Ram Buksh (1863) 6 W.R. 71.

(t) Rao Balwant Singh v. Rani Kishori (1898) 20 All. 267, 25 I.A. 54 (gift); Nagalingam v. Ramachandra (1901) 24 Mad. 429; Subbaya v. Surayya (1887) 10 Mad. 251; Somasundara v. Ganga (1904) 28 Mad. 386; Bawa Misser v. Raja Bishen (1868) 10 W.R. 287, s.c. in app. 20 W.R. 137; Sital v. Madho (1877) 1 All. 394; Baboo Beer Pertap v. Rajender (1867) 12 M.I.A. 1, 39; Nana Narain v. Huree Punth (1862) 9 M.I.A. 96; Purshotam v. Vesudeo (1871) 8 Bom. H.C.O.C. 196.

(u) Lochun Singh v. Nemdharee Singh (1873) 20 W.R. 170; Yamunabai v. Manubai (1899) 23 Bom. 608.

(v) Katama Natchiar v. Rajah of Sivagunga (1863) 9 M.I.A. 539, 543, 613.

In case of ancestral property the son can assert an equal right with the father; while in case of his separate or self-acquired property the father has the unqualified right to deal with it as he pleases and in a manner which denies any right of interference by the son either to enforce partition or interdict an alienation (x). It would not be strictly accurate, therefore, to say that the undivided male issue does not take any interest by birth in the separate or self-acquired property of the father. It would be more appropriate to say that when the separate or self-acquired property of a Hindu father passes to his sons, living as members of a joint family, they take it as unobstructed heritage and by virtue of the texts to which reference has been made in f.n. (x) below.

It is now settled law that a father who is joint with his sons may sell his self-acquired property even though such property may be immovable. The father may sell such property without the concurrence of the sons (z). He may make an unequal distribution of such property among his sons (a), and he may make a gift of it to one son to the entire exclusion of the other son (b).

223. Ancestral property.—(1) Property inherited from paternal ancestor.—All property inherited by a male Hindu from his father (c), father's father, or father's father's father, is ancestral property. The essential feature of ancestral property according to the Mitakshara law is that the sons, grandsons and great-grandsons of the person who inherits it, acquire an interest in it by birth. Their rights attach to it at the moment of their birth. Thus if A inherits property, whether movable or immovable, from his father or father's father, or father's father's father, it is ancestral property as regards his male issue (d). If A has no son, son's son, or son's son's son in existence at the time when he inherits the property, he holds the property as absolute owner thereof, and he can deal with it as he pleases. But if he has sons, sons' sons, or sons' sons' sons in existence at the time, or if a son, son's son or son's son's son is born to him subsequently, they become entitled to an interest in it by the mere fact of their birth in the family, and A cannot claim to hold the property as absolute owner nor can he deal with the property as he likes (e).

A father cannot change the character of joint family property into absolute property of his son by merely making a will and bequeathing it or part of it to the son as if it was the self-acquired property of the father. In the hands of the son the property will be ancestral property and the natural or adopted son of that son will take interest in it and be entitled to it by survivorship as joint family property (*e*1).

It is important to note that the only property that can be ancestral is property inherited by a male Hindu from any one of his three immediate paternal ancestors, namely, his father, father's father, and father's father's father, and the only persons who are entitled to an interest in it by birth are the sons, sons' sons, and sons' sons' sons, of the inheritor. No other relation is entitled to any interest in such property by birth. A person inheriting property from his three immediate paternal ancestors holds it, and must hold it, in coparcenary with his sons, sons' sons, and sons' sons' sons, but as regards other relations he holds it, and is entitled to hold it, as his absolute property. The result is that if a person inheriting property from any one of his three immediate paternal ancestors has no son, son's son, or son's son's son, the property is his absolute property, and no relations of his are entitled to any interest in it in his lifetime (f).

---

(x) Mitakshara Placitum 27, Ch. I, sec. 1; Placitum 9, Ch. I, sec. 5. These texts were recently considered by the Supreme Court in Arunachala Mudaliar v. Muruganatha [1954] S.C.R. 243, ('53) A.SC. 495

(z) Muldun Gopal v. Ram Buksh (1863) 6 W.R. 71.

(a) Bawa Misser v. Raja Bishen, supra.

(b) Sital v. Madho (1877) 1 All. 394.

(c) Kundanbai v. Satya Narayen (1950) Nag. 491.

(d) Mst. Sirtaji v. Algu Upadiya (1937) 12 Luck. 273, 163 I.C. 935, ('36) A.O. 331.

(e) Jugmohandas v. Mangaldas (1886) 10 Bom. 528; Raja Ram Narain v. Pertum Singh (1873) 11 Beng. L.R. 397; Chuttan Lal v. Kallu (1911) 33 All. 283, 8 I.C. 719 [alienation before birth].

(*e*1) Valliammai Achi v. Naguppa Chettiar ('67) A.S.C. 1153.

(f) Ajoodhia v. Kasee (1872) 4 N.W.P. 31; Janki v. Nand Ram (1889) 11 All. 194-197, 198 [F.B.]. See Bejai Bahadur v. Bhupindar (1895) 17 All. 456, 22 I.A. 139.

Property inherited by a Hindu male from his father, father's father, or father's father's father, is ancestral as regards his male issue, even though it was inherited by him after the death of a life-tenant (g). Thus if a Hindu settles the income of his property on his wife for her life, and the property after her death passes to his son as his heir, it is ancestral property in the hands of the son as regards the male issue of such son.

Illustrations

(a) A inherits certain property from his father. A has a son B. The property so inherited is ancestral in A's hands, and it must be held by him in coparcenary with B. B can enforce partition of it against A, in which event he will be entitled to one-half. If B continues joint with his father, the whole property will pass to him by survivorship on the father's death.

(b) A inherits two immovable properties from his father. A has no son, son's son, or son's son's son in existence at the time. A can alienate the properties at his pleasure. Suppose A alienates one of the properties, and a son, B, is subsequently born to him. B cannot claim any interest in the property alienated by A before his birth, but as regards the other property which still remains with A, B acquires an interest in it by birth, and A must thenceforth hold it in coparcenary with B.

(c) A inherits certain property from his father. A has no son, grandson or great-grandson, but he has a brother (or a paternal uncle). The brother (or uncle) does not take any interest in the property by birth. As regards the brother or uncle the property inherited by A is his separate property. A may therefore sell or mortgage (h) it, or make a gift of it to any one he likes, or he may dispose of it by will.

Where a number of sons inherit their father's self-acquired property; they hold it as joint family property (i). But now see sec. 19(b) of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956.

(2) Property inherited from maternal grandfather.—In Venkayyamma v. Venkataramanayamma (j), two brothers who were living as members of a joint family inherited certain property from their maternal grandfather. On the death of one of them leaving a widow, the question arose whether his share in the property so inherited passed to his widow by succession or to his brother by survivorship. Their Lordships of the Privy Council held that the property inherited by the two brothers was joint property in their hands, and that the undivided interest of the deceased passed on his death by survivorship to his brother, and not by succession to his widow. The effect of this decision is that the sons of a daughter inheriting to their maternal grandfather take as joint-tenants with benefit of survivorship and not as tenants-in-common. The Privy Council have now held that such property is not ancestral property (k).

The Privy Council explained their former decision thus: "The brothers took the estate of their maternal grandfather at the same time and by the same title and there was apparently no reason why they should not hold that estate in the same manner as they held other joint property. The rule of survivorship which admittedly governed their other property was held to apply also to the estate which had come to them from their maternal grandfather" (l). Their Lordships pointed out further that "it was not contended in that case that the estate was ancestral in the restricted sense in which the term is used in Hindu Law." It is submitted that the decision in the earlier case must

---

(g) Nanabhai v. Achratbai (1888) 12 Bom. 122, 133; Beni Parshad v. Puran (1896) 23 Cal. 262, 273.

(h) Baijnath v. Maharaj Bahadur (1933) 8 Luck. 28, 137 I.C. 814, ('32) A.O. 158.

(i) Shyam Behari Singh v. Rameshwar Prasad Sahu (1941) 20 Pat. 904, 198 I.C. 208, ('42) A.P. 213; Mst. Ram Dei v. Mst. Gyarse (1949) All. 160 (F.B.).

(j) (1902) 25 Mad. 678, 29 I.A. 156.

(k) Muhammad Husain Khan v. Babu Kishya Nandan Sahai (1937) 64 I.A. 250, (1937) All. 655, 39 Bom. L.R. 979, 169 I.C. 1, ('37) A.PC. 233. The decision in Vythinatha Ayyar v. Yeggia Narayana (1903) 27 Mad. 382 must be regarded as overruled, and those in Jamna Prasad v. Ram Partab (1907) 29 All. 677 and Bishwanath v. Ganjadhar (1918) 3 Pat. L.J. 168, 43 I.C. 370, ('17) A.P. 146 must be regarded as approved. Seri Ram v. Chandramma ('52) A. Hyd. 45.

(l) The father of the two brothers was living when they inherited their maternal grandfather's estate and the 'other property' was being enjoyed by three persons.

be confined to its own facts, and it was not necessary there to decide, nor was any opinion expressed on the precise question whether the property which a Hindu inherits from his maternal grandfather is ancestral property in the technical sense. Should this question arise hereafter it will have to be answered in accordance with the decision in the later case (m). A maternal uncle, however, is not an ancestor, and it has accordingly been held by the Madras High Court that property inherited from a maternal uncle is not ancestral property (n).

No such question can arise if the daughter takes an absolute estate as in Bombay, for her sons would then succeed to that property not as the heirs of their maternal grandfather, but as the stridhana heirs of their mother (o). See § 147(2) and § 151(11). Such question is also now not likely to arise in future inasmuch as now a daughter inherits absolutely all over India and her sons will succeed to that property as her stridhana heirs and not as the heirs of their maternal grandfather. See secs. 14, 15 and 16 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956.

(3) Property inherited from collaterals—property inherited from females.—Excluding the case of property inherited from a maternal grandfather, it may be said that the only property that can be called ancestral property is property inherited by a person from his father, father's father, or father's father's father. Property inherited by a person from any other relation is his separate property, and his male issue do not take any interest in it by birth. Thus property inherited by a person from collaterals, such as a brother, uncle, etc., or property inherited by him from a female, e.g., his mother, is his separate property (p).

(4) Share allotted on partition.—The share which a coparcener obtains on partition of ancestral property is ancestral property as regards his male issue. They take an interest in it by birth (q), whether they are in existence at the time of partition or are born subsequently (r). Such share, however, is ancestral property only as regards his male issue. As regards other relations, it is separate property, and if the coparcener dies without leaving male issue, it passes to his heirs by succession (s).

When the share allotted to a coparcener on partition consists of property which is subject to a mortgage, the fact that he subsequently clears it from the mortgage by his own self-acquisitions, does not alter the character of the property. The unencumbered property still remains ancestral, and his male issue acquires an interest in it by birth (t). It is otherwise where the mortgage has been foreclosed, and the mortgaged property is subsequently purchased by the coparcener with his own self-acquisitions (u).

(5) Property obtained by a gift or will from paternal ancestor.—Where a Hindu, instead of allowing his self-acquired or separate property to go by descent, makes a gift of it to his son, or bequeaths it to him by will, the question arises whether such property is the separate property of the son, or whether it is ancestral in the hands of the son as regards his (son's) male issue. This question had been answered in different ways by the different High Courts with the result that there was a considerable diversity of judicial

---

(m) Pandit Mohan Lal v. Pandit Ram Dayal (1941) 16 Luck. 708, 194 I.C. 61, ('41) A.O. 331.

(n) Karuppai v. Sankaranarayanan (1904) 27 Mad. 300.

(o) Manibhai v. Shankerlal (1930) 54 Bom. 323, 125 I.C. 433, ('30) A.B. 296.

(p) Baboo Nund Coomar v. Razeeooddeen (1873) 10 Beng. L.R. 183; Raj Kishore v. Madan Gopal (1932) 13 Lah. 491, 143 I.C. 249, ('32) A.L. 636.

(q) Lal Bahadur v. Kanhaiya Lal (1907) 29 All. 244, 34 I.A. 65; Chatturbhooj v. Dharamsi (1885) 9 Bom. 438; Lakshmibai v. Ganpat (1868) 5 Bom. H.C.O.C.J. 128.

(r) Adurmoni v. Chowdhry (1878) 3 Cal. 1, 8, where the son was born after partition.

(s) See Bejai Bahadur v. Bhupindar (1895) 17 All. 456, 22 I.A. 139.

(t) Visalatchi v. Annasamy (1871) 5 Mad. H.C. 150.

(u) Balwant Singh v. Rani Kishori (1898) 20 All. 267, 25 I.A. 54.

opinion. The question was considered by the Supreme Court in Arunachala Mudaliar v. Muruganatha (v).

In Calcutta (w) it had been held that such property would be ancestral. In Madras (x), upon the whole, the view seems to have been taken that the father can determine whether the property which he has so given shall be ancestral or self-acquired on the principle of "cujus est dare ejus est disponere," but that unless he expresses his wish that it should be deemed self-acquired, it is ancestral. In Bombay (y), on the other hand, the principle of intention seems to have been accepted if it makes the property ancestral, but if there be no expression of intention, it is deemed self-acquired. In Allahabad (z), the decision was that such property was self-acquired. In Oudh (a), it has been held that in the absence of language clearly indicating the testator's intention that the property should be held by the sons subject to the incident of survivorship, it should be presumed that such property is self-acquired. The question was left open by the Judicial Committee in the under-mentioned case (b). In one case in Patna where the donor stated that though the son may be malik after his death he wished to make the son malik in his presence, it was held by a Full Bench that the donee gets the property as ancestral property (c). A Full Bench of the Mysore High Court held that when a father bequeaths his self-acquired property to his son to be enjoyed by the latter exclusively as he likes after the testator's death, it does not become ancestral property in the hands of the son, and his sons cannot acquire any interest in such property by birth (d).

In Arunachala Mudaliar v. Muruganatha (e) the Supreme Court after a consideration of the texts on the subject and the variant opinions of the High Courts took the view that the question was primarily one of the intention of the donor or the testator to be gathered from the terms of the deed of gift or will. If there are no clear words describing the kind of interest intended to be given the Court would have to collect the intention from the language of the document taken along with the surrounding circumstances in accordance with the established canons of construction. The material question in such cases would be whether the grantor really wanted to make a gift of the property to his son or the apparent gift was only an integral part of a scheme to partition the same. There is no presumption that he intended the one or the other [Illus. (a)].

Illustrations

(a) A who had three sons, after giving certain properties to his wife and other relations, provided that the properties in Schedules A, B and C of the will which were his self-acquired properties shall be taken by his eldest, second and third sons respectively, and that the sons shall enjoy the properties allotted to them with absolute rights and with powers of alienation such as gift, exchange, sale, etc. from son to grandson hereditarily. It was held that the property bequeathed to the sons was not ancestral property in their hands vis-a-vis their own male issue: Arunachala Mudaliar v. Muruganatha (1954) S.C.R. 243, ('53) A.SC. 495.

(b) A, by his will, bequeathed the residue of his property to his three sons in the following terms: "My three sons aforesaid who are now alive, together with all the sons who may be born to me hereafter, shall divide all my properties into as many equal shares [as there be sons], and each son should take one share." The will contained a direction that the family house should not be divided between the sons until after the

---

(v) (1954) S.C.R. 243, ('53) A.SC. 495; Parthasarathi v. I.T. Commissioner ('67) A.M. 227.

(w) Muddun Gopal v. Ram Buksh (1863) 6 W.R. 71 [gift]; Hazari Mall v. Abaninath (1912) 17 C.W.N. 280, 18 I.C. 625. But see Mukti Prokash v. Sm. Iswari ('20) A.C. 746.

(x) Tara Chand v. Reeb Ram (1866) 3 Mad. H.C. 50 [will]; Nagalingam v. Ramchandra (1910) 24 Mad. 429 [will]; Velayudhan v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras (1945) Mad. 549; Seeyali Achari v. Doraiswami (1947) 2 M.L.J. 49, ('48) A.M. 46; K. Venkatappayya v. K. Raghavayya ('51) A.M. 318.

(y) Jugmohandas v. Mangaldas (1886) 10 Bom. 528, 579 [will]; Nanabhai v. Achratbai (1888) 12 Bom. 122.

(z) Parsotam v. Janki Bai (1907) 29 All. 354 [will].

(a) Rameshar v. Rukmini (1909) 14 Oudh Cases 244, 12 I.C. 770; Musammat Brij Kunwar v. Rai Bahadur Pandit Sankata Prasad (1929) 5 Luck. 400, 123 I.C. 849, ('30) A.O. 39; Megh Raj v. Relu ('51) A. Pepsu 138.

(b) Lal Ram Singh v. Deputy Commissioner of Partabgarh (1923) 50 I.A. 265, 45 All. 596, 76 I.C. 922, ('23) A.PC. 160.

(c) Bhagwat Shukul v. Mt. Kaporni (1944) 23 Pat. 599.

(d) Syed Abdul Wajid v. Vishwanathan ('50) A. Mysore 33.

(e) (1954) S.C.R. 243, ('53) A.SC. 495; Sidramappa v. Babajappa ('62) A. Mys. 38 [insurance policy—premiums paid by father]; Penukka v. Kelukutty ('59) A. Kerala 212, Srinath Tewary v. Ramsurat Devi ('59) A.P. 116. Also see Karuppa Gounder v. Palaniammal ('63) A.M. 245 (1963) Mad. 434. Reference may also be made to Ram Parkash v. Radhe Shyam ('63) A. Punj. 338.

death of A's wives. Held by the High Court of Madras, that there were no express words in the will indicating an intention that the share bequeathed to each son should be held by him as his self-acquired property: therefore, the share bequeathed to each son was ancestral property in his hands, and the male issue of each son acquired an interest in it by birth: Nagalingam v. Ramchandra (1901) 24 Mad. 429.

(c) A, by his will, bequeathed the residue of his property to his son in the following terms: "After my death my son Mangaldas is the master [owner] of my estate. He is not to dispose of the estate, nor is he to give it in mortgage, but from the produce of rent thereof all the charges of the estate and of the family are to be disbursed, and the balance placed at interest at some proper place, but it is to belong to my son Mangaldas. Should he be under the necessity of giving the estate away by way of mortgage or selling them, he may do so on consulting the herein mentioned executors." Held by the High Court of Bombay, that there were no words in the will indicating an intention that the property should be held by him as ancestral property; therefore, the son took the property as his self-acquired property, and his male issue did not acquire any interest in it by birth: Jugmohandas v. Mangaldas (1886) 10 Bom. 528.

The text of the Mitakshara referred to above is as follows:—"Whatever else is acquired by the coparcener himself without detriment to his father's estate, or as a present from a friend, or a gift at nuptials, does not appertain to the co-heirs": Mitakshara, Chapter I, sec. 4, para 1.

The words "does not appertain to the co-heirs" mean "does not belong to the coparceners." In Muddun Gopal v. Ram Buksh (f), the Calcutta High Court held that the property given by a father to his sons cannot be said to have been acquired by them "without detriment" to their father's estate within the meaning of the above text, because it is not only given out of that estate, but in substitution for the undivided share of that estate: that the son is only getting by his father's gift that which, but for the gift, he would have received by descent; had he received it by descent, it would have been ancestral property in his hands; the character of the property is not changed because he receives it by way of gift.

A gift of property made by a father to his son on the occasion of the son's marriage is not ancestral property in the hands of the son. It comes within the words "gift at nuptials" in the above text, and it is his separate property (g).

(6) Accretions.—Accumulations of income of ancestral property (h), property purchased or acquired out of the income or with assistance of ancestral property (i), the proceeds of sale of ancestral property, and property purchased out of such proceeds (j), or obtained in lieu of such property (*j*1), are ancestral property.

It is well established that sons, grandsons and great-grandsons acquire a vested interest not only in the income and accretions of ancestral property which accrued after their birth, but also in the income and accretions which accrued prior to their birth (k).

224. Character of father's and son's interest in ancestral property.—Under the Mitakshara law each son upon his birth takes an interest equal to that of his father in ancestral property, whether it be movable or immovable. It is very important to note that the right which the son takes at his birth in the ancestral property is wholly independent of his father. He does not claim through the father, and, therefore, a transfer by a father of his own interest in the ancestral property, where such transfer is allowed by law

---

(f) (1863) 6 W.R. 71, 73.

(g) (1863) 6 W.R. 71, 73, supra. See also Adhar Chandra v. Nobin Chandra (1907) 12 C.W.N. 103.

(h) Ramanna v. Venkata (1888) 11 Mad. 246. Dissented from, in Sivaramakrishnan v. Kaveri Ammal, ('55) A. Mad. 705, I.L.R. 1956 Mad. 649.

(i) Lal Bahadur v. Kanhaia Lal (1907) 29 All. 244, 34 I.A. 65; Umrithnath v. Goureenath (1870) 13 M.I.A. 542; Venkataramayya v. Krishna Rao ('63) A.A.P. 305.

(j) Krishnasami v. Rajagopala (1895) 18 Mad. 73, 83.

(*j*1) Maya Ram v. Satnam Singh ('67) A. Punj. 353.

(k) Isree Pershad v. Nasib Kooer (1884) 10 Cal. 1017, 1021; Jugmohandas v. Mangaldas (1886) 10 Bom. 528, 581; Ramanna v. Venkata (1881) 11 Mad. 246.

[§ 257], cannot affect the interest of the son in the property (l). But the father has a special power of disposal of ancestral property for certain purposes specified in §§ 225, 226 and 295.

Authority of father.—There is under the Mitakshara law no distinction between the rights of a father and his sons as regards ancestral property, except that the father can dispose of (1) ancestral property, whether movable or immovable, for the payment of his debts, (2) ancestral movable property for the purposes specified in § 225, and (3) ancestral immovable property for the purposes specified in § 226. Further, the father so long as he is capable is the head and manager of the family. He is entitled to the possession of the joint property. He directs the concerns of the family within itself and represents it to the world. But as regards substantial proprietorship, he has no greater interest in the joint property than any of his sons. If the property is ancestral each son by birth acquires an interest equal to that of the father. And in the same manner his grandsons and great-grandsons take an interest on their respective births in the rights of their fathers who represent them, and therefore in unascertained shares of the entire property.

225. Gift by father within reasonable limits of ancestral movables.—Although sons acquire by birth rights equal to those of a father in ancestral property both movable and immovable, the father has the power of making within reasonable limits gifts of ancestral movable property without the consent of his sons for the purpose of performing "indispensable acts of duty, and for purposes prescribed by texts of law, as gifts through affection, support of the family, relief from distress and so forth" (m).

A "gift of affection" may be made to a wife, to a daughter, and even to a son. But the gift must be of property within reasonable limits. A gift of the whole, or almost the whole, of the ancestral movable property to one son to the exclusion of the other sons, cannot be upheld as a "gift through affection" prescribed by the text of law (n).

In Madras it has been held that a disposition may be made of a small portion of the property in favour of a daughter or other female member even by will, provided the father obtains the consent of his sons to such disposition (o). But the correctness of this decision is open to question, for no member of a joint family not even a father, can dispose of even his own coparcenary interest by will though the other coparceners may consent to the disposition [§ 256]. The soundness of the decision was questioned in the later Madras case of Subbarami v. Ramamma (p). In that case a father who was joint with his minor son bequeathed by his will certain family properties to his wife for her maintenance. There was no question of consent, the son being a minor. It was held that the will was invalid and inoperative as against the son, although it would have been a proper provision if made by the father by a gift during his lifetime. But now see sec. 30 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956.

226. Gift by father or other managing member of ancestral immovable property within reasonable limits.—A Hindu father or other managing member has power to make a gift within reasonable limits of ancestral immovable property for "pious purposes." But the alienation must be by an act inter

---

(l) Anandrao v. Vasantrao (1907) 9 Bom. L.R. 595, at p. 597 [P.C.], affirming (1904) 6 Bom. L.R. 925.

(m) Mitakshara, Chap. I, sec. 1, para 27.

(n) Lakshman v. Ramchandra (1881) 5 Bom. 48, 7 I.A. 181, affirming (1876) 1 Bom. 561 [gift to son set aside]; Nand Ram v. Mangal (1909) 31 All. 359, 1 I.C. 797 [gift to son set aside]; Bachoo v. Mankorebai (1907) 31 Bom. 373, 34 I.A. 107, affirming (1905) 29 Bom. 51 [gift to daughter of Rs. 20,000 made out of income, upheld, the total value of the property being from Rs. 10 to 15 lacs]; Ramalinga v. Narayana (1922) 49 I.A. 168, 45 Mad. 489, 68 I.C. 451, ('22) A.PC. 201 [gift to only daughter who was looking after the father]; Kamakshi v. Chakrapany (1907) 30 Mad. 452 [gift to daughter set aside as it was a considerable portion of the property]; Hanmantappa v. Jivubai (1900) 24 Bom. 547, 552, 555 [gift to daughter-in-law upheld]; Madhusudan v. Ramji (1920) 5 Pat. L.J. 516, 57 I.C. 341, ('20) A.P. 114 [provision before marriage for maintenance of son-in-law and, therefore, also of the daughter, upheld].

(o) Appan Patra v. Srinivasa (1917) 40 Mad. 1122, 40 I.C. 118, ('18) A.M. 531.

(p) Subbarami v. Ramamma (1920) 43 Mad. 824, 59 I.C. 681, ('20) A.M. 637.

vivos, and not by will (q). A member of a joint family cannot dispose of by will any portion of the property even for charitable purposes and even if the portion bears a small proportion to the entire estate (r). But now see sec. 30 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956.

In the undermentioned case (s) the Supreme Court examined the whole question and held that it was competent to a father to make a gift of immovable property to a daughter if the gift is of a reasonable extent having regard to the properties held by the family. In another decision the Supreme Court considered the question of the extended meaning given in numerous decisions to the expression "pious purposes" (*s*1). In a more recent decision the Supreme Court observed: "We see no reason to extend the scope of the words "pious purposes" beyond what has already been done in the two decisions of this Court" and rejected the contention that a husband could make any such gift of ancestral property to his wife out of affection on the principle of pious purposes (*s*2).

It has been held by the High Court of Madras that a father has no power to make a gift of ancestral immovable property to his wife to the prejudice of his minor sons (t). But it has been held by the same Court (u) and the High Court of Orissa (*u*1) that he can make a gift of a small portion of ancestral immovable property to his daughter at or after her marriage if the extent of the gift is reasonable and particularly if she is in poor circumstances. In Bombay, it has been held that a father cannot make a gift of even a small portion of the joint family immovable property to his daughter, though it be on the ground that she was looking after him in his old age (v). This decision was overruled by the Supreme Court in the case mentioned above (*v*1). In an Allahabad case (w) the Court refused to uphold a gift by a father to his daughter's father-in-law of a share in a village, though it was transferred to him as the marriage portion of the daughter. A gift to a stranger is equally invalid and the other members of the family, while in possession, need not sue to set it aside (x). A father has no power to make a gift of even his undivided interest in the joint family property to his concubine and such a gift would not become validated by the subsequent disruption of the family (*x*1).

227. Property thrown into common stock.—(1) Property which was originally the separate or self-acquired property of a member of a joint family may, by operation of the doctrine of blending, become joint family property, if it has been voluntarily thrown by him into the common stock with the intention of abandoning all separate claims upon it. A clear intention to waive his separate rights must be established (y), and it will not be inferred

---

(q) Gangi Raddi v. Tammi Raddi (1927) 54 I.A. 136, 140, 50 Mad. 421, 425, 101 I.C. 79, ('27) A.P.C. 80; Gopal Chand v. Babu Kunwar (1843) 5 S.D.A. p. 24; Raghunath v. Gobind (1886) 8 All. 76 [provision for family idol]; Ramalinga v. Sivachidambara (1919) 42 Mad. 440, 49 I.C. 742, ('19) A.M. 809 [gift to an idol of a temple on the occasion of the donor's father's funeral], doubting Rathnam v. Sivasubramania (1893) 16 Mad. 353 [gift of a silver vehicle to a temple]; Palwanna Nadar v. Annamalai Ammal ('57) A.M. 330; Rathinasabapathy v. Saraswathi ('54) A.M. 307, (1953) 2 M.L.J. 459; Sri Thakurji v. Nanda (1921) 43 All. 560, 63 I.C. 546, ('21) A.A. 333 [gift to an idol]; Kalu v. Barsu (1895) 19 Bom. 803 [gift to plaintiff as worshipper of a deity—gift not upheld]; Tatoba v. Tarabai (1957) 59 Bom. L.R. 633; Amar Chandra v. Saradamayee (1930) 57 Cal. 39, 123 I.C. 660, ('29) A.C. 787. See also West and Buhler, 4th ed., p. 204, note (l), and p. 686, note (g), and Haridas v. Devkuvarbai (1926) 50 Bom. 443, 449, 97 I.C. 820, ('26) A.B. 408 [gift to daughter upheld on the ground that the son had consented to it]; Dhondiram v. Bhagubai ('56) A. Hyd. 118. Also see Lalta Prasad v. Sri Mahadeoji (1920) 42 All. 461, 58 I.C. 667, ('20) A.A. 116.

(r) Jawahar Lal v. Shri Thakur Radha Gopalji Maharaj (1945) All. 177.

(s) Guramma v. Mallappa (1964) A.SC. 5, 10, 66 Bom. L.R. 284.

(*s*1) Kamla Devi v. Bachulal Gupta ('57) A.S.C. 434 (see § 181 B at p. 220) supra.

(*s*2) Perumalakkal v. Kumaresan ('67) A.S.C. 569.

(t) Rayakkal v. Subbanna (1892) 16 Mad. 84; Sivagnana v. Udayar ('61) A.M. 356 [marriage gift to second wife].

(u) Sundaramayya v. Sitamma (1912) 35 Mad. 628, 10 I.C. 56 [gift of 8 out of 200 acres upheld].

(*u*1) Tara Sahuani v. Raghunath ('63) A. Orissa 50.

(v) Jinnappa Mahadevappa v. Chimmava Krishnappa (1935) 59 Bom. 459, ('35) A.B. 324; Jagat Krishna v. Ajit Kumar ('64) A. Orissa 76.

(*v*1) See f.n. (s) above.

(w) Ganga v. Pirthi Pal (1880) 2 All. 635.

(x) Riasat Ali v. Iqbal Rai (1935) 16 Lah. 659, 157 I.C. 75, ('35) A.L. 827.

(*x*1) Nagaratnamba v. Kunuku Ramayya ('68) A.S.C. 253.

(y) Venkata Reddi v. Lakshmama ('63) S.C. 1601, (1964) 1 S.C.J. 45; Narayana Raju v. Chamaraju ('68) A.S.C. 1276; Raj Kishore v.

from the mere fact of his allowing the other members of the family to use it conjointly with himself nor from the fact that the income of the separate property was used to support a son (z) nor from the mere failure of a member to keep separate accounts of his earnings (a). So also acts of generosity or kindness should not be construed as admissions of legal obligation (b). Separate property thrown into the common stock is subject to all the incidents of joint family property (c).

(2) Similarly, where members of a joint family, who have control over the joint estate, blend with that estate property in which they have separate interests, the effect is that all the property so blended becomes joint family property (d).

(2a) The basis of the doctrine is the existence of coparcenary and coparcenary property as well as the existence of the separate property of a coparcener. The doctrine cannot be applied to the case of a Hindu female who has acquired immovable property from her father for she is not a coparcener (*d*1).

(2b) The act by which the coparcener throws his separate property into the common stock is a unilateral act and a matter of individual volition. As soon as he declares his intention to treat his self acquired property as that of the joint family the property assumes the character of joint family property (*d*2).

When a coparcener throws his separate property into the common stock he makes no gift under the law relating to transfer of property for in such a case there is no donor or donee and no question of acceptance of the property thrown into the common stock arises. It was on the basis of these considerations that the Supreme Court held that such an unilateral act of throwing property into the common stock does not invite the operation of gift tax (*d*2).

(3) The above rules apply also to brothers living together and forming a joint family governed by the Dayabhaga (e).

(4) The doctrine of blending on which this paragraph is founded cannot be involved in regard to property held by a Hindu female as a limited owner (*e*1).

---

Madan Gopal (1932) 13 Lah. 491, 143 I.C. 249 ('32) A.L. 636; Chinna Venkata v. Venkata Rama ('57) A. Andh. Pra. 93; D. Sadasiva v. B. Rattain ('58) A. Andh. Pra. 145; Venkataraju v. Yedukondalu ('58) A. Andh. Pra. 147 (the burden of proving such blending is a heavy one); Subramania v. Commissioner of Income-tax ('55) A.M. 623; Bipra Charan v. Mohan Sundar ('60) A. Orissa 109; Mulam Chand v. Kanchhendilall ('58) A.M.P. 304; Pratap Kishore v. Gyanendranath ('51) A. Orissa 313; Narayanan v. Krishnan ('55) A. Tr. Co. 199; Venkatasubramania v. Easwara Iyer ('66) A.M. 266; Mahalaxmiamma v. Radhakrishna Rao ('68) A. Mys. 229; Mohan Rao v. Satyanarayana ('72) A.A.P. 233 [self-acquired property shown by manager as of joint family—no explanation].

(z) Gopal v. Kesheosa (1936) Mad. 65, 165 I.C. 350, ('36) A.M. 185.

(a) Vythianatha v. Varadaraja (1938) Mad. 696, ('38) A.M. 841.

(b) Appalaswami v. Suryanarayanamurti (1948) Mad. 440 (P.C.).

(c) Lal Bahadur v. Kanhaiya Lal (1907) 29 All. 244, 34 I.A. 65; Suraj Narain v. Ratan Lal (1917) 44 I.A. 201, 40 All. 159, 40 I.C. 988, ('17) A.PC. 12; Radhakant Lal v. Nazma Begum (1918) 45 Cal. 733, 45 I.C. 806, ('17) A.PC. 128 [property inherited from brother thrown into common stock]; Lala Muddun Gopal v. Khikhinda Koer (1891) 18 Cal. 341, 18 I.A. 9; Krishnaji v. Moro Mahadeo (1891) 15 Bom. 32, 39-40; Tribhovandas v. Yorke Smith (1897) 21 Bom. 349; Gopalsami v. Chinnasami (1884) 7 Mad. 458 [property inherited from maternal grandfather thrown into common stock]; Tottempudi v. Tottempudi (1904) 27 Mad. 228; Rampershad v. Sheochurn (1866) 10 M.I.A. 490, 505. See also Hurpurshad v. Sheo Dyal (1876) 3 I.A. 259, 26 W.R. 55; Shanker Bakhsh v. Hardeo Baksh (1889) 16 Cal. 397, 16 I.A. 71.

(d) Rajani Kant Pal v. Jaga Mohan Pal (1923) 50 I.A. 173, 50 Cal. 439, 73 I.C. 252, ('23) A.PC. 57.

(*d*1) Mallesappa v. Mallappa ('61) A.SC. 1268.

(*d*2) Goli Eswariah v. Commissioner of Gift Tax ('70) A.SC. 1722.

(e) (1923) 50 I.A. 173, 50 Cal. 439, 73 I.C. 252, ('23) A.PC. 57, supra.

(*e*1) Mallesappa v. Mallappa ('61) A.SC. 1268.

Illustrations

(a) Three Hindu brothers, A, B and C, lived together as members of a joint family in their ancestral house at Nagothna, the house being the only property left by the father. Subsequently A and B went to Baroda and got employment there as clerks. C remained at home to look after the family affairs. Both A and B remitted money from time to time to C for the support of the family living at Nagothna. C applied the income towards the support of the family, and with the savings from such remittances he purchased certain immovable property in his own name. A and B sued C to recover possession of the property from C, alleging that it was their self-acquired property. Held, that the property was the self-acquired property of A and B, and they were entitled to it to the exclusion of C, unless it appeared that the property had been treated by A and B as joint family property. As there was no finding on the point, the High Court referred the following issue to the lower Court, namely, whether as a fact A and B had voluntarily thrown the property into the joint stock with the intention of abandoning all separate claims upon it: Krishnaji v. Moro Mahadev (1890) 15 Bom. 32.

(b) A joint Hindu family, consisting of a father and his three sons, owns certain villages which are the joint property of the family. The father as the head of the family opens an account with a banker with whom he deposits from time to time the income arising from the villages. The father also earns a large sum of money every year, and these earnings also are deposited by him with the banker in the same account. There is nothing to show that he discriminated between the income of the joint properties and his personal income. On the other hand the evidence shows that he blended them both in one general account. Upon these facts it was held by the Privy Council that the self-acquisitions of the father must be treated as joint family property, and that he had no power, therefore, to dispose of them by his will: Lal Bahadur v. Kanhaiya Lal (1906) 29 All. 244, 34 I.A. 65.

Separate property and limitation.—Where a coparcener discontinues his possession of property belonging to him separately in favour of the joint estate, his right to claim the property as separate may be barred by limitation (f).

House built on ancestral land with separate funds.—If a member of a joint family builds a house on ancestral land with his own moneys, the other members have a claim on him only for compensation for their share of the land (g).

228. Property jointly acquired.—(1) Where property has been acquired in business by persons constituting a joint Hindu family by their joint labour, the question arises whether the property so acquired is joint family property, or whether it is merely the joint property of the joint acquirers, or whether it is ordinary partnership property. If it is joint family property, the male issue of the acquirers take an interest in it by birth [§ 221, Sub-§ (1)]. If it is the joint property of the acquirers, it will pass by survivorship, but the male issue of the acquirers do not take interest in it by birth [§ 221, sub-§ (2)]. If it is partnership property, it is governed by the provisions of the Indian Partnership Act, 1932, so that the share of each of the joint acquirers will pass on his death to his heirs, and not by survivorship.

(2) If the property so acquired is acquired with the aid of joint family property, it becomes joint family property (h).

(3) If the property so acquired is acquired without the aid of joint family property, the presumption is that it is the joint property of the joint acquirers (i), but this presumption may be rebutted by proof that the persons

---

(f) Vasudeva v. Maguni (1901) 24 Mad. 387, 28 I.A. 81; Babaji v. Jivaji (1930) 32 Bom. L.R. 314, 127 I.C. 204, ('30) A.B. 333.

(g) Vithoba v. Hariba (1869) 6 Bom. H.C. (A.C.) 54; Periakaruppan v. Arunachelam (1927) 50 Mad. 582, 102 I.C. 290, ('27) A.M. 676 [house built by sole surviving coparcener—subsequent adoption by him—adopted son held entitled to one-half share in the land].

(h) Umrithnath v. Goureenath (1870) 13 M.I.A. 542; Lal Bahadur v. Kanhaiya Lal (1907) 29 All. 244, 34 I.A. 65; Krishnan v. Rangachari ('65) A.M. 340.

(i) Chandrabhaga v. Anandrao (1939) Nag. 293.

constituting the joint family acquired the property not as members of a joint family, but as members of an ordinary trade partnership resting on contract, in which case the property will be deemed to be partnership property (j).

In the absence of any proof of partnership, property jointly acquired by the members of a joint family without the aid of joint family property is, as stated above, to be presumed to be joint. But is it also to be presumed to be joint family property? It was at one time held by the High Court of Bombay that property jointly acquired without the aid of joint family property was not joint family property and that the male issue of the joint acquirers did not acquire an interest in it by birth, unless it was thrown into the common stock (k). In later cases, however, it has been held that such property must be presumed to be joint family property (l), and this has been followed in Lahore (m), Nagpur (n) and Oudh (o). In Madras it has been held that property so acquired must be presumed to be joint family property (p) unless the acquirers intended to hold the property as co-owners between themselves in which case it would be their joint property (q).

228A. Joint acquisitions by some members.—So long as a family remains an undivided family, two or more members of it, whether they are members of different branches or of one and the same branch of the family can have no legal existence as a separate independent unit; but all the members of a branch or of a sub-branch, can form a distinct and separate corporate unit within the larger corporate family and hold property as such. But the law does not recognize some of the members of a joint family belonging to different branches or even to a single branch, as a corporate unit. Any acquisition of property by some such persons could be held by them only as co-sharers or co-tenants and the property would pass by inheritance and not survivorship (*q*1).

229. Survivorship—Devolution of deceased coparcener's interest.—(1) On the death of a coparcener, his interest in the coparcenary property does not pass by succession to his heirs. It passes by survivorship to the other coparceners, subject to the rule that where the deceased coparcener leaves male issue, they represent his rights to a share on partition (r), and are his sole legal representatives for purposes of execution of money decrees passed against him (s). The rule of survivorship here stated was modified by the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937. It is now subject to the provisions of sections 6 and 30 of the Act of 1956 in cases where those sections are applicable. See § 35 ante and sections 6 and 30 of the Act of 1956 and Notes thereunder for their effect upon the rights of coparceners and coparcenary property.

---

(i) Rampershad v. Sheo Churn (1866) 10 M.I.A. 490, 506; Gopalasami v. Arunachelam (1904) 27 Mad. 32; Chatturbhooj v. Dharamsi (1885) 9 Bom. 438, 445; Samalbhai v. Someshwar (1881) 5 Bom. 38; Ganpat v. Annaji (1899) 23 Bom. 144.

(k) Chatturbhooj v. Dharamsi (1885) 9 Bom. 438, 445.

(l) Laldas v. Motibai (1908) 10 Bom. L.R. 175; Haridas v. Devkuvarbai (1926) 50 Bom. 443, 97 I.C. 820, ('26) A.B. 408 [property jointly acquired by father and sons]. See also Karsondas v. Gangabai (1908) 32 Bom. 479.

(m) Sanwal Das v. Kure Mal (1928) 9 Lah. 470, 109 I.C. 779, ('28) A.L. 224.

(n) Sitalprasad v. Ramprasad (1944) Nag. 17.

(o) Lachmi Narain v. Musaddi Lal (1942) 17 Luck. 327, 197 I.C. 247, ('42) A.O. 155.

(p) No such presumption arises where the business is carried on by some only of the members of the joint family; Sudarsanam v. Narasimhulu (1902) 25 Mad. 149.

(q) (1902) 25 Mad. 149, 155-156, supra.

(*q*1) Bhagwan Dayal v. Reoti Devi ('62) A.SC. 287, 304.

(r) Katama Natchiar v. The Rajah of Shivagunga (1863) 9 M.I.A. 539, 543, 615; Musammat Lakhpati v. Parmeshwar (1930) 5 Luck. 631, 125 I.C. 414, ('31) A.O. 108.

(s) Sheo Gopal v. Firm Ganesh Das Ram Gopal (1938) 13 Luck. 241, 168 I.C. 268, ('31) A.O. 327.

(2) The right of a coparcener to take by survivorship is defeated in the following cases:—

(i) Where the deceased coparcener has sold or mortgaged his interest, in States where such sale or mortgage is allowed by law [§ 259]:

(ii) Where the interest of the deceased coparcener has been attached in his lifetime in execution of a decree against him. A mere decree obtained by a creditor, not followed up by an attachment in the lifetime of the debtor, will not defeat the right of survivorship, unless the judgment-debtor stood in the relation of father, paternal grandfather or great-grandfather to the surviving coparceners [§§ 289, 292 (4)]: This rule must be read subject to the provisions of sections 6 and 30 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, in cases where those sections are applicable:

(iii) Where the interest of the deceased coparcener has vested in the Official Assignee or Receiver on his insolvency (t) [§§ 265]. On the annulment of insolvency the interest which vested in the Official Receiver revests under sec. 37 of the Provincial Insolvency Act in the insolvent and if on that date he is not alive, it goes to his heirs under the law (u).

Sub-§ (1).—What passes to the male issue is not a share, but the right to have a share on partition. Suppose A and B are two brothers, and that A has a son C and B has a son D. On A's death, his undivided interest will pass to the surviving coparceners, B, C and D. C cannot, while the family remains joint, claim for himself a moiety of the income alleging that it represents his father's share. But if the family come to a partition, C will take one-half of the property, that being his father's share, and B and D will take the other half: see § 321 below.

Sub-§ (2), clause (i).—According to the Mitakshara law as applied in the Bombay and Madras States, a coparcener can sell or mortgage his interest in the coparcenary property, but not according to that law as applied in Bengal and the Uttar Pradesh (§ 260). Therefore, in Bombay and Madras, if a coparcenary consists of A and B, and A sells his interest to X, and then dies, B cannot claim A's interest by survivorship. That interest has passed to X by purchase. But no Hindu governed by the Mitakshara law can dispose of by gift his undivided interest in coparcenary property in any part of India [§ 258].

Clause (ii).—A and B are coparceners. C obtains a decree against A and attaches A's interest in the coparcenary property. A then dies. A's interest having been attached in his lifetime B is not entitled to that interest by survivorship, see § 289. C is entitled to have A's interest sold in execution even after A's death. But if C had merely obtained a decree against A, and no attachment had been levied on A's interest in A's lifetime, A's interest would pass to B by survivorship unless A happened to be B's father or grandfather or great-grandfather in which case C could attach A's interest even after A's death. [The Code of Civil Procedure, 1908. secs. 50 and 53]. See § 289 below.

230. Separate property.—Property acquired in any of the following ways is the separate property of the acquirer; it is called "self-acquired" property, and is subject to the incidents mentioned in § 222 above:—

(1) Obstructed heritage.—Property inherited as obstructed heritage (sapratibandha daya), that is, property inherited by a Hindu from a

---

(t) Fakirchand v. Motichand (1883) 7 Bom. 438. (1937) Mad. 203, 166 I.C. 378, ('37) A.M. 131.
(u) Lakshmanan Chettiar v. Srinivasa Iyengar person other than his father, father's father, or father's father's father [see §§ 218, 222 and 223 sub-§ (2)].

(2) Gift.—A gift of a small portion of ancestral movable made through affection by a father to his male issue is his separate property (v) [§ 225].

As to gifts and bequests of separate property by a father to his sons see § 223 sub-§ (5).

(3) Government grant.—Property granted by Government to a member of a joint family is the separate property of the donee (w), unless it appears from the grant that it was intended for the benefit of the family (x).

(4) Property lost to family.—Ancestral property lost to the family, and recovered by a member without the assistance of joint family property. See § 232 below.

(5) Income of separate property.—The income of separate property, and purchases made with such income (y).

(6) Share on partition.—Property obtained as his share on partition by a coparcener who has no male issue. See § 223 (4) above.

(7) Property held by sole surviving coparcener.—Property held by a sole surviving coparcener, when there is no widow in existence who has power to adopt (z).

(8) Separate earnings.—Separate earnings of a member of the joint family [§ 231].

(9) Gains of learning.—All acquisitions made by means of learning are now declared by the Hindu Gains of Learning Act, 1930, to be the separate property of the acquirer [§ 231A].

Separate property is also called self-acquired property. Self-acquired property, in its technical sense, means property obtained by a Hindu without any detriment to ancestral property. As to property described in cls. (1), (2), (3) and (5) of this section it is clear that it cannot be said to be acquired at the expense of the patrimony or ancestral estate. Such property is, therefore, self-acquired in the technical sense of the term. As to property described in cl (4), it is a question of fact as to whether it constitutes self-acquired property or not. In practice the expression "self-acquired" property is used as referring to property acquired by a Hindu by his own exertions without the assistance of family funds.

Question sometimes arises whether the proceeds of a life insurance policy effected by a coparcener on his life is joint family property or separate property of the coparcener. The test to be applied in any such case is not whether the policy was taken out by the coparcener for the benefit of his wife and children but whether he did so without detriment to the joint family funds (*z*1). If, however, there are indications that the policy was intended to be the separate asset of the insuring coparcener and treated by the coparceners as such different considerations may arise and this apart from any general presumption which may or may not be permissible in such cases.

231. Separate earnings—gains of science.—The income of a member of a joint family is his separate property, if it has been obtained—

---

(v) See § 225, and the cases there cited.

(w) Katama Natchiar v. Rajah of Shivagunga (1863) 9 M.I.A. 539, 543, 610.

(x) Sri Mahant Govind v. Sitaram (1899) 21 All. 53, 20 I.A. 195.

(y) Krishnaji v. Moro Mahadev (1891) 15 Bom. 373, 34 I.A. 107.

(z) See Bachoo v. Mankorebai (1907) 31 Bom. 32.

(*z*1) Parbati Kuer v. Sarangdhar ('60) A.SC. 403. Reference may be made to Venkata Subbarao v. Lakshminarasamma ('54) A.M. 222 and the observations of the Supreme Court on the same in the abovementioned case. Reference may also be made to Karuppa Gounder v. Palaniammal (1963) 1 M.L.J. 86; (1963) Mad. 434; ('63) A.M. 245; and f.n. (b) below. Also see Narayanlal v. Controller Estate Duty ('69) A.A. Pra. 188.

(a) by his own exertions, and

(b) without "any detriment to the father's estate," that is, without the aid of joint family property (a).

But it is joint family property if it has been earned at the expense of joint family property (b).

Reference may be made to the undermentioned decisions of the Supreme Court (*b*1).

For instance, gifts to a Purohit for private services rendered by him are his separate property (c). When a member of the joint family educates himself with the help of Government stipend and earns money by his own exertion, the fact that money so earned is utilised by him for meeting the necessaries of the joint family would not give rise to any presumption either that the acquisitions were out of the income of the joint property or that he intended to throw all his earnings into the joint stock (d).

A member of a joint family can pre-empt the property of the family sold by the manager provided he does it out of his separate funds and intends to keep it as his separate property (e).

The consent by a member of a joint family to the sale of family property by the manager does not make him vendor and he can pre-empt the property (f).

As to property acquired by a member out of his self-acquired fund and also with aid of some ancestral property see the undermentioned (*f*1).

231A. Gains of learning—gains of science.—By the Hindu Gains of Learning Act it is provided that notwithstanding any custom, rule or interpretation of the Hindu Law, no gains of learning shall be held not to be the exclusive and separate property of the member of the joint family who acquires them merely by reason of—

(a) his learning having been, in whole or in part, imparted to him by any member, living or deceased, of his family, or with the aid of joint funds of his family, or with the aid of the funds of any member thereof, or

(b) himself or his family having, while he was acquiring such learning, been maintained or supported, wholly or in part, by the joint funds of his family, or by the funds of any member thereof.

"Learning" is defined in the Act as meaning education, whether elementary, technical, scientific, special or general, and training of every kind which

---

(a) Somasundara v. Ganga (1904) 28 Mad. 386; Rajamma v. Ramakrishnayya (1905) 29 Mad. 121 [insurance premium paid out of self-acquired property—insurance money held to be separate property]. Also see Sivaramakrishnan v. Kaveri Ammal ('55) A.M. 705, I.L.R. (1956) Mad. 649. In Mangal Singh v. Harkesh ('58) A.A. 42 the Allahabad High Court has taken the extreme view that however small the aid of the joint family property may be property acquired by a member becomes joint family property. Also see Venkatasubramania v. Eswara Iyer ('66) A.M. 266; Mahalaxmiamma v. Radha Krishna Rao ('68) A. Mys. 229.

(b) Tottempudi v. Tottempudi (1904) 27 Mad. 228; Somasundara v. Ganga (1904) 28 Mad. 386; Rajamma v. Ramakrishnayya (1906) 29 Mad. 121 [insurance premium paid out of self-acquired property—insurance money held to be separate property]. Manicka Mudaliar v. Thangavelu (1963) Mad. 955; ('64) A.M. 33 [managing agency given in view of holding of shares in company acquired from family funds]. See f.n. (*z*1) above.

(*b*1) Dhanwatey v. C.I.T. ('68) A.S.C. 683; Commissioner of I.T. v. Kalu Babu ('59) A.S.C. 1289.

(c) Hanso Pathak v. Harmandit Pathak (1934) 56 All. 1026, 151 I.C. 11, ('34) A.A. 851.

(d) Subramonia Pillai v. Padmanabha ('50) A. Tr.-Cochin 52 (F.B.).

(e) Ram Naresh v. Mst. Ganga Dei (1944) Luck. 257.

(f) Hewanchal Singh v. Ajodhiya Singh (1929) 4 Luck. 370 (F.B.).

(*f*1) Mangal Singh v. Harkesh ('58) A. All. 42. Also see Bhagwant Singh v. I.T. Commissioner ('59) A. Punj. 594.

is usually intended to enable a person to pursue any trade, industry, profession or avocation in life.

"Gains of learning" are defined as meaning all acquisitions of property made substantially by means of learning, whether such acquisitions be made before or after the commencement of the Act, and whether such acquisitions be the ordinary or the extraordinary result of such learning.

The Act came into force on the 25th July, 1930. It is set out in Appendix IV, below. Under the Act all gains of learning, whether made before or after the commencement of the Act constitute the self-acquired property of the acquirer.

Before the Hindu Gains of Learning Act, 1930, two propositions were well established, namely, (1) that income earned by a member of a joint family by the practice of a profession or occupation requiring special training was joint family property, if such training was imparted at the expense of joint family property; and (2) that gains made by personal labour and without the aid of joint family funds by a member of a joint family, who was maintained out of joint family funds and received no more than an ordinary education suitable to his position as a member of the family, were the self-acquired property of such member (g).

232. Recovery of ancestral property lost to the family.—Where the members of a joint family have been wrongfully dispossessed or adversely kept out of possession of joint property for a long time, and such property is subsequently recovered by an individual member of the family without the assistance of joint funds, then, if the property is recovered by the father, he takes the whole as his separate or self-acquired property, whether it be movable or immovable; but if it is recovered by any other member of the family, then, if the property be movable, he takes the whole as his separate or self-acquired property, but if it be immovable, he takes one-fourth first as reward for the recovery, and the remainder has to be equally divided among all the coparceners including the recoverer (h).

233. Presumption as to coparcenary and coparcenary property.—Where a suit is brought by a Hindu to recover property, alleging that it is his self-acquired property, and the defendant contends that it is joint family property, or where a suit is brought by a Hindu for partition of property alleging that it is joint family property and the defendant contends that it is his self-acquired property, the question arises upon whom the burden of proof lies. The following are the leading rules on the subject:—

---

(g) Metharam v. Rewachand (1918) 45 I.A. 41, 45 Cal. 666, 44 I.C. 269, ('17) A.PC. 105 [broker and money-lender]; Gokal Chand v. Hukum Chand —Nath Mal (1921) 48 I.A. 162, 2 Lah. 40, 60 I.C. 379, ('21) A.PC. 35 [Indian Civil Service]; Laximon Row v. Muller Row (1831) 21 Knapp. 60 [Prime Minister]; Lakshman v. Jamnabai (1882) 6 Bom. 225 [pleader and Sub-Judge]; Pauliem v. Pauliem (1877) 1 Mad. 252, 4 I.A. 109; Chalakonda v. Chalakonda (1864) 2 Mad. H.C. 56 [dancing girl]; Durvasula v. Durvasula (1872) 7 Mad. H.C. 47 [pleader]; Boologam v. Swornam (1882) 4 Mad. 330 [dancing girl]; Bai Manchha v. Narotamdas (1868) 6 Bom. H.C.A. 1 [vakil]; Dhunookdharee v. Gunput (1868) 11 Beng. L.R. 201, 10 W.R. 122; Jugmohandas v. Mangaldas (1886) 10 Bom. 528, 555-559 [mill manager]; Krishnaji v. Moro Mahadev (1891) 15 Bom. 32 [karkun]; Lachmin Kuar v. Debi Prasad (1898) 20 All. 435 [army contractor]; Durga Dat v. Ganesh Dat (1910) 32 All. 305, 5 I.C. 400 [astrologer].

(h) Bajaba v. Trimbak (1910) 34 Bom. 106, 4 I.C. 255; Visalatchi v. Annasamy (1870) 5 Mad. H.C. 150; Bissessur v. Seetul Chunder (1868) 9 W.R. 69 s.c., 8 W.R. 13; Sham Narain v. Rughoo-burdyal (1878) 3 Cal. 508, 511; Jugmohandas v. Mangaldas (1886) 10 Bom. 528, 551; Bolakee v. Court of Wards (1870) 14 W.R. 34; Naraganti v. Venkatachalapati (1882) 4 Mad. 250, 259.

(i) Neelkisto Deb v. Beerchunder (1869) 12 M.I.A. 523, 540; Naragunty v. Vengama (1861) 9 M.I.A. 66, 92; Rewun Persad v. Radha Beeby (1846) 4 M.I.A. 137, 168. See also Mst. Cheetha v. Miheen Lall (1867) 11 M.I.A. 369; Mst. Bhagwani v. Mohan Singh (1925) 29 C.W.N. 1037, 88 I.C. 385, ('25) A.PC. 132 [P.C.].

(1) Presumption that a joint family continues joint.—Generally speaking, "the normal state of every Hindu family is joint. Presumably every such family is joint in food, worship and estate. In the absence of proof of division, such is the legal presumption" (j). In other words, "given a joint Hindu family, the presumption is, until the contrary is proved, that the family continues joint" (k). The presumption of union is the greatest in the case of father and sons (l). The strength of the presumption necessarily varies in every case.

The presumption is stronger in the case of brothers than in the case of cousins, and the farther you go from the founder of the family the presumption becomes weaker and weaker (m). The reason is that "brothers are for the most part undivided; second cousins are generally separated" (n); and third cousins are for the most part separated (o).

In what cases does the above presumption apply?—The presumption that a Hindu family continues to be joint is mainly available when the question arises whether a specific property which was admittedly joint at one time has continued to be joint or it has ceased to be joint by virtue of a separation. If a joint family possessed property which was admittedly joint, the presumption would be that the property continues to be joint, and the burden would lie upon the member who claims it as his separate property to prove that there was a partition and that he got it on such partition (p). The presumption is peculiarly strong in the case of brothers (q), but almost nil in the case of third and fourth cousins (r).

Mutation entries may not by themselves be evidence of severance (*r*1).

Even when a Hindu undivided family has ceased to be such in law, it may be deemed to be an undivided family for the purposes of the Income Tax Act of 1922 under sec. 25A of that Act (t). [Now see sec. 171 of the Income Tax Act 43 of 1961.]

(2) No presumption that a joint family possesses joint property.—There is no presumption that a family, because it is joint, possesses joint property or any property (u). When in a suit for partition, a party claims that any particular item of the property is joint family property (v), or when in a suit on a mortgage, a party contends that the property mortgaged is joint family property (w), the burden of proving that it is so rests on the party asserting it.

---

(k) Nageshar Baksh Singh v. Ganesha (1920) 47 I.A. 57, 70, 42 All. 368, 381, 56 I.C. 306, ('20) A.PC. 46; Raghubardayal v. Ramdulare (1928) 6 Rang 367, 111 I.C. 839, ('28) A.R. 206; Pandit Mohan Lal v. Pandit Ram Dayal (1941) 16 Luck. 708, 194 I.C. 661, ('41) A.O. 331.

(l) Malak Chand v. Hira Lal (1936) 11 Luck. 449, 157 I.C. 945, (35) A.O. 510. Reference may be made to Indranarayan v. Roop Narayan ('71) A.S.C. 1962, 1967.

(m) Yellappa v. Tippanna (1929) 56 I.A. 13, 19, 53 Bom. 213, 114 I.C. 13, ('29) A.PC. 8.

(n) Moro Vishvanath v. Ganesh (1873) 10 Bom. H.C. 444, 468.

(o) Yellappa v. Tippanna, supra.

(p) See Prit Koer v. Mahadeo Pershad (1895) 22 Cal. 85, 21 I.A. 134.

(q) Nageshar Baksh Singh v. Ganesha (1920) 47 I.A. 57, 42 All. 368, 381, 56 I.C. 306, ('20) A.PC. 46.

(r) Yellappa v. Tippanna (1929) 56 I.A. 13, 53 Bom. 213, 114 I.C. 13, ('29) A.PC. 8.

(*r*1) Bharat Singh v. Bhagirathi ('66) A.SC. 405.

(t) Sardar Bahadur Sardar Indra Singh v. The Commissioner of Income-tax, Bihar & Orissa (1943) 22 Pat. 55, 206 I.C. 609, ('43) A.P. 169.

(u) Shrinivas v. Narayan (1955) S.C.R. 1, 57 Bom. L.R. 678, ('54) A.SC. 379; Kamalakant Gopalji v. Madhavji Meghji (1935) 59 Bom. 573, 37 Bom. L.R. 405, 158 I.C. 145, ('35) A.B. 343.

(v) Annamalai Chetty v. Subramanian Chetty (1929) 31 Bom. L.R. 280, 113 I.C. 897 ('29) A.PC. 1; Jogi Reddi v. Chinnabbi Reddi (1929) 56 I.A. 6, 52 Mad. 83, 114 I.C. 5, ('29) A.PC. 13, is not an authority for the proposition in the text. The suit was by the plaintiff against his brothers and his sister's son who was a Christian, and the contest was as to certain property standing in the name of the sister's son. Krishna Kumar v. Kayastha Pathshala ('66) A.A. 570.

(w) Rai Shadi Lal v. Lal Bahadur (1933) 35 Bom. L.R. 308, 142 I.C. 739, ('33) A.P.C. 85.

To render the property joint the plaintiff must prove that the family was possessed of some property with the income of which the property could have been acquired (x) or from which the presumption could be drawn that all the property possessed by the family is joint family property (y) or that it was purchased with joint family funds, such as the proceeds of sale of ancestral property (z) or by joint labour. None of these alternatives is a matter of legal presumption. It can only be brought to the cognizance of a Court in the same way as any other fact, namely, by evidence (a). There is at times undiscriminated use of the expression 'presumption' in this context. It is to be understood to indicate those presumptions of fact which may be said to arise in considering whether the burden of proof has or has not been discharged by a party. It is not as if there is any general solvent for all cases.

Where it is established or admitted that the family possessed some joint property which from its nature and relative value may have formed the nucleus from which the property in question may have been acquired, the presumption arises that it was joint property and the burden shifts to the party alleging self-acquisition to establish affirmatively that the property was acquired without the aid of the joint family. But no such presumption would arise if the nucleus is such that with its help the property claimed to be joint could not have been acquired. In order to give rise to the presumption the nucleus must be such that with its help the property claimed to be joint could have been acquired. Whether the evidence adduced by a party is sufficient to shift the burden which initially rested on him of establishing that there was adequate nucleus out of which the acquisitions could have been made is one of fact depending on the nature and extent of the nucleus. An important element for consideration is the income which the nucleus yielded. A family house in the occupation of the members and yielding no income could not be a nucleus out of which acquisitions could be made, even though it might be of considerable value. On the other hand, a running business in which the capital invested is comparatively small might conceivably produce substantial income, which may well form the foundation of the subsequent acquisitions. These are not abstract questions of law but questions of fact to be determined on the evidence in the case (b). The wide proposition that once the ancestral nucleus is proved or admitted the onus on a member to prove that the property acquired was his self-acquisition cannot be accepted as correct. The existence of some nucleus is not the sole criterion to impress the subsequent acquisitions with family character. What is to be shown is that the family had as a result of the nucleus sufficient surplus income from which the subsequent acquisitions could be made. Or this may be shown from the nature and relative value of the nucleus itself. This is the second phase in the onus of proof which lies on the person who sets up the family character of the property (c).

---

(x) Venktaramayya v. Seshamma (1937) Mad. 1012, 170 I.C. 107, ('37) A.M. 538; Vythianatha v. Varadaraja (1938) Mad. 696, ('38) A.M. 841; Janakiamma v. Chinnarao (1945) Mad. 378; Chanderdeb v. Nandji ('50) A. Pat. 33.

(y) Kamala Kant Gopalji v. Madhavji Meghji supra.

(z) Ram Nath v. Chiranji Lal (1935) 57 All. 605 [F.B.], 155 I.C. 132, ('35) A.A. 221.

(a) Shiu Golam v. Baran (1868) 1 Beng. L.R.A.C. 164; Moolji v. Gokuldas (1884) 8 Bom. 154; Nanabhai v. Achratbai (1888) 12 Bom. 122 [no presumption that property is ancestral]; Toolseydas v. Premji (1889) 13 Bom. 61; Dwarkaprasad v. Jamnadas (1911) 13 Bom. L.R. 133, 9 I.C. 948; Ram Kishan v. Tunda Mal (1911) 33 All. 677, 10 I.C. 543; Daji v. Laxman (1927) 29 Bom. L.R. 122, 100 I.C. 937, ('27) A.B. 110; Sanwal Das v. Kure Mal (1928) 9 Lah. 470, 109 I.C. 779, ('28) A.L. 224; Musammat Brij Kunwar v. Rai Bahadur Pandit Sankata Prasad (1929) 5 Luck. 400, 123 I.C. 849, ('30) A.O. 39 [no presumption that property ancestral].

(b) Shrinivas Krishnarao v. Narayan (1955) S.C.R. 1, 8; Narayanaswami v. Ramakrishna ('65) A.SC. 289; Venkatasubramania v. Easwara Iyer ('66) A.M. 266.

(c) Shrinivas v. Narayan (1955) S.C.R. 1; Mudigowda v. Ramchandra ('69) A.S.C. 1076; Ramakrishna v. Vishnumoorthi ('57) A.M. 86; Babubhai

Where, however, the existence of the nucleus is shown and no other source of income is disclosed, the presumption may be made that the nucleus was sufficient to enable the property to be acquired (d). Such being the presumption, if any member of the family claims any portion of the property, as his separate property, the burden lies upon him in any such case to show that it was acquired by him in circumstances which would constitute it his separate property.

He may do so by showing that the income of the existing ancestral property was employed in other ways (e), or was kept intact (f). If he adduces no evidence, the presumption that the property was joint family property, must prevail (g). The mere fact that it was purchased in his name and that there are receipts in his name respecting it does not render the property his separate property, for all that is perfectly consistent with the notion of its being joint property. But if, in addition to the fact that certain property stands in the name of one of the members, A.B., there be these further facts, namely, that some other members of the family had acquired separate property with their own moneys and dealt with it as their own without reference to the rest of the family, and that A.B. was allowed by the family to appear to the world to be the sole owner, the presumption that the property is joint is weakened, and the burden of proving that it is joint will lie on those who allege that it is joint (h). There is no presumption in case of property standing in the name of female members (*h*1).

A and his two sons B and C live as members of a joint family. It is proved that in the year 1890 the father had in his hands a considerable nucleus of ancestral property. In the year 1895 the father purchases certain immovable property in his own name, and bequeaths it by his will to B, alleging in the will that it was his self-acquired property. Upon these facts the presumption is that the property was purchased by the father out of the income of ancestral property, and the property is therefore joint. The burden of proving that the subsequently acquired property was the separate property of the father lies on him who alleges that it was his separate property, that is it lies on B (i). The statement in the father's will that the property was his self-acquired property is not evidence upon the question whether the property was joint or self-acquired (j).

(3) A member of a joint family who engages in trade can make separate acquisitions of property for his own benefit; and unless it can be shown that the business grew from a nucleus of joint family property, or that the earnings were blended with joint family estate, they remain his self-acquired property (k). See § 234(4). Once however it is proved that the old family

---

Girdharlal v. Ujamlal Hargovandas (1937) Bom. 708, 39 Bom. L.R. 846, 171 I.C. 623, ('37) A.B. 446; Karoo Singh v. Ujagir Singh ('54) A.P. 524; Rajmal Mishrimal v. Rajmal Khemchand ('54) A.M.B. 28; Charandasi v. Kanai Lal ('55) A.C. 206, 58 C.W.N. 980; Kameshwar Nath v. Raghubir ('64) A.P. 290; Jagat Krishna v. Ajit Kumar ('64) A. Orissa 76; Tribeni Mishra v. Rampujan ('70) A.P. 13.

(d) Shrinivas v. Narayan (1955) 1 S.C.R. 1, ('54) A.SC. 379; Mallappa Girimallappa v. R. Yellappagouda ('59) A.S.C. 906; Bhagwant Kishore v. Bishambhar ('50) A.A. 54; Darshan Singh v. Parbhu Singh (1946) All. 130.

(e) Sher Muhammad Khan v. Ramratan (1938) Nag. 233, 172 I.C. 572, ('38) A.N. 87.

(f) Appalaswami v. Suryanarayanamurti (1948) Mad. 440 (P.C.), 52 C.W.N. 505.

(g) Madho Tewari v. Mata Din Tewari (1935) 10 Luck. 61, 149 I.C. 244, ('34) A.O. 293.

(h) Dhurm Das v. Shama Soondri (1843) 3 M.I.A. 229, 240; Gopeekrist v. Gungapersaud (1854) 6 M.I.A. 53 [purchase in name of son], Prankishen v. Mothooramohun (1865) 10 M.I.A. 403, 411-412: Umrithnath v. Goureenath (1870) 13 M.I.A. 542; Stree Raja Yanumula v. Yanumula (1870) 13 M.I.A. 533; Bodh Singh v. Gunesh Chunder (1874) 12 Beng. L.R. (P.C.) 317; Bissessur Lall v. Luchmussur Singh (1879) 5 Cal. L.R. 477, 479, 6 I.A. 233, 236; Gajendar v. Sardar Singh (1896) 18 All. 176; Abhaidat Singh v. Ragho (1926) 1 Luck. 1, 91 I.C. 976, ('26) A. O. 77; Johnston v. Gopal Singh (1931) 12 Lah. 546, 555-556, 133 I.C. 628, ('31) A.L. 419. See also Atar Singh v. Thakar Singh (1908) 35 I.A. 206, 35 Cal. 1039.

(*h*1) See Nagayasami v. Kochadai ('69) A.M. 329 and cases there cited.

(i) Lal Bahadur v. Kanhaiya Lal (1907) 29 All. 244, 34 I.A. 65.

(j) Tottempudi v. Tottempudi (1904) 27 Mad. 228; Venkata Chenchayya v. Ramalingam ('57) A. Andh. Pra. 744.

(k) Annamalai Chetty v. Subramanian Chetty (1929) 31 Bom. L.R. 280, 113 I.C. 897, ('29) A.PC. 1; Jagmohan v. Ranchhoddas (1945) Nag. 892; Venkataramayya v. Venkataramappa (1953) 1 M.L.J. 508, ('53) A.M. 723 (financial assistance from joint family funds for starting independent business not regarded as nucleus); Naim Singh v. Tikam Singh ('55) A.A. 388; S. Anup Singh v. Sardarni Hanbans Kaur ('58) A. Punj. 116; Mallakarjuniah v. Kanniah ('61) A. Mys. 64. Reference may also be made to cases in Syed Abdul Wajid v. R. Vishwanathan (1950) A. Mysore 33 (F.B.). See also Official Assignee v. Neelambal (1933) A.M. 920: Deonarain v. Agyan Ram (1927) 31 C.W.N. 533, 101 I.C. 249, ('27) A.PC. 52.

firm was joint or started with a nucleus of joint property, it is for the plaintiff who alleges it to be separate to prove it (l).

(4) Where it is proved or admitted that a partition has already taken place, the burden lies upon him who alleges that a portion of the family property is still joint property (o). There is no presumption that property which is acquired by a member after severance must be regarded as acquired for the family even if he has been in possession of family property. If rents and profits of such property are received by him he would be liable to account for the same but the funds do not become impressed with any trust in favour of the other members (p).

(5) Onus, however, as a determining factor of the whole case, can only arise if the Court finds the evidence pro and con so evenly balanced that it can come to no definite conclusion. Then the onus will determine the matter. But if the Court after hearing and weighing the evidence comes to a definite conclusion, the need for placing the onus does not arise (q). In other words, the question of onus, at the close of a case, only becomes important if the circumstances are so ambiguous that a definite conclusion is impossible without resort to it (r).

234. Ancestral business and its incidents.—(1) In Hindu law a business is a distinct heritable asset. Where a Hindu dies leaving a business, it descends like other heritable property to his heirs. If he dies leaving male issue, it descends to them. In the hands of the male issue it becomes joint family business, and the firm which consists of the male issue becomes a joint family firm. The joint ownership so created between the male issue is not an ordinary partnership arising out of a contract, but a family partnership created by the operation of law (s). Therefore, the rights and liabilities of the coparceners constituting the family firm are not to be determined by exclusive reference to the provisions of the Indian Partnership Act, 1932, but must be considered also with regard to the general rules of Hindu law which regulate the transactions of joint families (t).

A Hindu joint family business does not cease to be so if in addition to the heirs of the deceased owner, it is also owned by his daughter married to a Gharjamai and by other members and relations who are de facto members of the family, provided the proceeds of such business are utilised for the legitimate expenses of the family (u).

The following are the points of distinction between a partnership and a joint Hindu family firm:—

(i) Dissolution by death.—A joint family firm is not dissolved by the death of a coparcener (v). An ordinary partnership is dissolved by the death of a partner.

---

(l) Durga Prasad v. Ghanshiam Das, 53 C.W.N. 118 (P.C.).

(o) Vinayak v. Dattoo (1901) 25 Bom. 367.

(p) Aryamurthi v. Subbaraya ('72) A.S.C. 1279.

(q) Robins v. National Trust Co. (1927) App. Cas. 515, 520.

(r) Sime Darby & Co. v. Official Assignee (1928) 30 Bom. L.R. 290, 107 I.C. 233 ('28) A.PC. 77; Yellappa v. Tippanna (1929) 56 I.A. 13, 53 Bom. 213, 114 I.C. 13, ('29) A.PC. 8.

(s) Lala Baij Nath Prasad v. Ram Gopal Lachmi Narayan (1938) 1 Cal. 369; Gulab Chand Lala v. Manni Lal Lala (1941) 16 Luck. 302, 192 I.C. 643, ('43) A.O. 230.

(t) Ramlal v. Lakhmichand (1861) 1 Bom. H.C. App. li; Nachiappa v. Muthukaruppan (1946) Mad. 858.

(u) Nibaran Chandra Shaha v. Lalit Mohan Brindaban Shaha (1938) 2 Cal. 368.

(v) Samalbhai v. Someshwar (1881) 5 Bom. 38; Haroon Mahomed in the matter of (1890) 14 Bom. 189, 194; Lala Baij Nath Prasad v. Ram Gopal Lachhmi Narayan (1938) 1 Cal. 369.

(ii) Right to accounts.—A coparcener is not entitled, on severing his connection with the family firm, to ask for accounts of past profits and losses (w) [§ 238]. It is otherwise in the case of a partner.

(iii) Power to contract debts.—The manager of a joint family has an implied authority to contract debts and pledge the credit and property of the family for the ordinary purposes of the family business (x). Such debts, if incurred in the ordinary course of business, are binding on the family property including the interest of the minor coparceners therein (y). But the manager alone has such authority; no other coparcener has it (z). In the case of an ordinary partnership, any partner can bind his coparceners by debts incurred in the ordinary course of the partnership business (the Indian Partnership Act, 1932, s. 19). See § 240.

(iv) Extent of liability for debts.—In the case of an ordinary partnership, it is not only the share of each partner in the partnership property which is liable for the payment of the partnership debts, but the separate property of each partner is also liable. In the case of debts contracted by a manager, in pursuance of his implied authority in the ordinary course of the family business, there is a distinction between the liability of a manager and the liability of his coparceners. The manager is liable not only to the extent of his share in the joint family property, but being a party to the contract, he is liable personally, that is to say, his separate property is also liable. But as regards the other coparceners, they are liable only to the extent of their interest in the family property, unless, in the case of adult coparceners, the contract sued upon, though purporting to have been entered into by the manager alone, is in reality one to which they are actual contracting parties, or one to which they can be treated as being contracting parties by reason of their conduct, or one which they have subsequently ratified (a); and, in the case of minor coparceners, unless the contract has been ratified by them on attaining majority (b). See cl. v. below, and § 240(4).

Liability for torts.—The sons who inherited a mining lease from their father were held liable for damages to the buildings above the mine caused by the working of the mine by the father, but only to the extent of the effects of the joint family in their hands (c).

(v) Minors.—In the case of an ordinary partnership where a partner is a minor, his share (d) alone in the partnership property is liable for the partnership debts. His separate property is not liable, unless he accepts the partnership on attaining the age of majority. [Indian Partnership Act, 1932, s. 30]. The same rule applies to the case of minor coparceners. That is to say, the manager can pledge the family property including the minor's interest therein for the purposes of the family business (e). But the minor is liable to the extent only of his interest in the family property (f); his separate pro-

---

(w) 5 Bom. 38, supra; Ganpat v. Annaji (1899) 23 Bom. 144. As to the rights of a minor coparcener, see Damodardas v. Uttamram (1893) 17 Bom. 271, 279.

(x) Ramlal v. Lakhmichand (1861) 1 Bom. H.C. App. li; Bemola v. Mohun (1880) 5 Cal. 792; Rampartab v. Foolibai (1896) 20 Bom. 767, 777-779; Sakrabhai v. Maganlal (1902) 26 Bom. 206, 215; Morrison v. Verschayle (1901) 6 C.W.N. 429; Ram Krishna v. Ratan Chand (1931) 58 I.A. 173, 53 All. 190, 132 I.C. 613, ('31) A.PC. 136; Bishen Singh v. Kidar Nath (1921) 2 Lah. 159, 62 I.C. 800 ('21) A.L. 61; Mt. Champa v. Official Receiver, Karachi (1934) 15 Lah. 9, 144 I.C. 636, ('33) A.L. 901.

(y) Ram Nath v. Chiranji Lal (1935) 57 All. 605 (F.B.), 155 I.C. 136, ('35) A.A. 221.

(z) Krishna v. Krishnasami (1900) 23 Mad. 597, 600.

(a) Gokal Chand v. Hukam Chand—Nath Mal 1921) 48 I.A. 162, 174, 2 Lah. 40, 52, 60 I.C. 379, ('21) A.PC. 35; Chalamayya v. Varadayya (1899) 22 Mad. 166; Samalbhai v. Someshwar (1881) 5 Bom. 38; Sakrabhai v. Maganlal (1902) 26 Bom. 206 at p. 215 [F.B.]; Baldeo v. Mobarak (1902) 29 Cal. 583; Gokal v. Amarchand (1907) 9 Bom. L.R. 1289; Joharmal v. Chetram (1915) 39 Bom. 715, 28 I.C. 538, ('15) A.B. 115; Shiv Bhagwan v. Onkarmal (1952) 54 Bom. L.R. 330, ('52) A.B. 365; Shamrao v. Saraswatibai ('54) A.N. 38, (1953) Nag. 364; Shiv Charan Das v. Hari Ram (1936) 17 Lah. 395, 170 I.C. 418, ('37) A.L. 247; V.R.C.T.V.R. Chettiar v. C.A.P.C. Chettiar (1936) 14 Rang. 122, 162 I.C. 184, ('36) A.R. 160; Rm. L.M.L.U. Alagammal Ashi & Ors. v. Vr. P.L.M. Palaniappa Chettiar & Ors. (1940) Mad. 1012, ('40) A.M. 580; Kishan Gopal v. Suraj Mal ('64) A. Raj. 218.

(b) Haroon Mahomed, in the matter of (1890) 14 Bom. 189; Official Assignee v. Palaniappa (1918) 41 Mad. 824, 49 I.C. 220, ('19) A.M. 690. See also cases cited in the preceding note.

(c) Ambalal Khora v. Bihar Hosiery Mills, Ltd. (1937) 16 Pat. 545, 172 I.C. 19, ('37) A.P. 657.

(d) The share of which s. 247 of the Contract Act speaks is no more than a right to participate in the property of the firm after its obligations have been satisfied; Sanyasi Charan Mandal v. Krishnadhan Banerji (1922) 49 I.A. 108, 49 Cal. 560, 67 I.C. 124, ('22) A.P.C. 237.

(e) Ramlal v. Lakhmichand (1861) 1 Bom. H.C. App. li; Ragunathji v. The Bank of Bombay (1910) 34 Bom. 72, 2 I.C. 173; Sanka v. The Bank of Burmah (1911) 35 Mad. 692, 694-696, 11 I.C. 79; Sanyasi Charan v. Asutosh (1915) 42 Cal. 225, 233, 26 I.C. 836, ('16) A.C. 482.

(f) Chockalingam v. Muthukaruppan (1938) Mad. 1019, ('38) A.M. 849.

perty is not liable for the payment of debts contracted by the manager, unless the minor accepts the partnership on attaining majority (g). See note below, "Minor's share."

(2) New Business.—In Sanyasi Charan Mandal v. Krishnadhan Banerji (h), a Dayabhaga case, the Judicial Committee held that the manager of a joint family cannot impose upon a minor member of the family the risk and liability of a new business started by himself and the other adult members. On the ground that the reasons for the decision equally govern Mitakshara families also, this principle has been applied to them by the Indian High Courts (i) and in Benares Bank Ltd. v. Hari Narain (j) by the Judicial Committee. Where a father was carrying on brokerage business in agricultural commodities and the son was doing similar business though the commodities were not exactly identical, it was held that the latter business was not a new business (k). The extension of a joint family business for the manufacture of articles, ejusdem generis with the articles previously manufactured, i.e., when the class of persons who manufacture the one usually manufacture the other is not a new business (l). A family carrying on trade in a particular commodity may legitimately extend it to another commodity, and whether such extension would amount to a new business or not depends upon the nature or type of the extended business and not on the particular commodities it deals with. If the family is a trading family and the extended business is not more hazardous or speculative than the one previously existing, it may not be regarded as a new business (m). Even where the father is the manager, he is not entitled to mortgage the joint family estate in order to provide money for one of his sons to start a new business. Such a mortgage is wholly invalid against minor coparceners (n).

Some of the senior members of a joint family took a lease of some lands and later on executed a mortgage as security for the payment of the rent. Default having been made in the payment of rent, the mortgagee brought a suit on the mortgage and in execution of the decree made in the suit, some of the property was purchased by an auction purchaser. The latter having sued for possession it was held that as the transaction was a prudent venture and for the benefit of the family, the mortgage was binding on the family (o).

As regards adult members it has been held in India that the manager cannot impose even upon them the risk and liability of a new business started by him (p), unless the business is started or carried on with their consent,

---

(g) Bishambhar v. Sheo Narain (1907) 29 All. 166; Bishambhar v. Fatch Lal (1907) 29 All. 176; Joykisto v. Nittyanund (1878) 3 Cal. 738; Rampartab v. Foolibai (1896) 20 Bom. 767, 777-779 [business inherited by a minor carried on by his guardian]; Lutchmanen v. Siva (1899) 26 Cal. 349; Nunna v. Chidaraboyina (1903) 26 Mad. 214.

(h) (1922) 49 I.A. 108, 49 Cal. 560, 67 I.C. 124, ('22) A.PC. 237.

(i) Vithal v. Shivappa (1923) 47 Bom. 637, 72 I.C. 659, ('23) A.B. 265; Inspector Singh v. Kharak Singh (1928) 50 All. 776, 112 I.C. 881, ('28) A.A. 403, commented upon in Jagat Narain v. Mathura Das (1928) 50 All. 969, 116 I.C. 484, ('28) A.A. 454; Biswanath Singh v. Kayastha Trading Corporation (1929) 8 Pat. 450, 119 I.C. 405, ('29) A.P. 422. But see Official Assignee v. Palaniappa (1918) 41 Mad. 824, 835, 49 I.C. 220, ('19) A.M. 690; Ram Nath v. Chiranji Lal (1935) 57 All. 605, 155 I.C. 136, ('35) A.A. 221; Jagmohan v. Ranchhoddas (1945) Nag. 892.

(j) Benares Bank Ltd. v. Hari Narain (1932) 54 All. 564, 59 I.A. 300, 137 I.C. 781, ('32) A.PC. 182. See also Ram Krishna v. Ratan Chand (1931) 58 I.A. 173, 53 All. 190, 132 I.C. 613, ('31) A.PC. 136.

(k) Bhagwan Singh v. Beharilal (1938) Nag. 221, 172 I.C. 43, ('37) A.N. 237.

(l) Bahadursingh v. Girdharlal (1942) Nag. 543, 200 I.C. 166, ('42) A.N. 39. But starting of a flour mill cannot be regarded as extension of an old money lending business; Makhanlal v. Harnarain ('60) A.MP. 56.

(m) Desu Rattamma v. Narayanarao, (1947) Mad. 567, ('47) A.M. 232; Angney Lal v. Angney Lal ('51) A.A. 400.

(n) Gurmukh Singh v. Shiv Ram (1936) 17 Lah. 53, 157 I.C. 416, ('35) A.L. 482; Ganesh Prasad Singh v. Sheogobind Sahoo (1937) 16 Pat. 719, 173 I.C. 242, ('38) A.P. 40.

(o) Chhotey Lal Chaudhury v. Dalip Narain Singh (1938) 17 Pat. 386, ('38) A.P. 562.

(p) Babu Lal v. Babu Lal (1941) All. 343, 193 I.C. 571, ('41) A.A. 194, (1941) A.L.J. 217.

express (q) or implied (r) or though started by the manager only, joint funds were afterwards utilised for the business to the advantage of the joint family or its continuance was found beneficial to the family (s) or it was adopted as a family business by the other members who continued to enjoy the benefits of the same (t).

The rule of law laid down in Benares Bank Ltd. v. Hari Narain (u) and in other cases of a like nature cannot apply to a new business started by the sole surviving coparcener of a Mitakshara family. Such business becomes from its origin a family business and the minor members of the family born subsequently are not competent to say that the risk of the new business cannot be imposed on them. The risk and liability having been already taken by the family the new comers must share them along with other assets and liabilities of the family (v).

It has been held in Madras (w) that where a joint family consists of a father and sons, and the father starts a new trading business, the business must be deemed to be ancestral, and the sons whether they be adults or minors are liable for debts incurred in the business to the extent of their shares in the joint family property; and, further, that even if such business be not regarded as ancestral, the sons shares are liable for the debts incurred by the father in the business, and this liability arises out of the pious obligation of the sons to pay their father's debts. If this decision is deemed to be authority for the proposition that a new business started by a father is ancestral for all purposes as regards his sons, then, it is submitted it is no longer good law (x). When the sons merely give some help to the father in business, it does not become joint family business but after the sons grow up the father and sons by their conduct may make it apparent that it has become a joint family business (y). See note below, "New business."

(3) Partnership with outsiders.—The principle is now well established that a joint Hindu family as such cannot be a partner in a firm but it is competent to the manager or Karta acting on behalf of the family to enter into a valid partnership with a stranger or with the Karta of another family (z). In Kshetra Mohan v. E. P. T. Commissioner (*z*1) the Supreme Court pointed out that when two Kartas of different families constituted a partnership the other members of the families do not become partners though the Kartas are accountable to their families. Not all members of the joint family, but only such of its members as have, in fact, entered into partnership with the stranger, become partners (a). The manager, no doubt, is accountable to the family, but the partnership is exclusively one between the contracting members including the manager and the stranger. Such a partnership would be governed by the provisions of the Indian Partnership Act, 1932, with the result that if the manager died, the partnership would be dissolved on his death. The surviving members of the family cannot claim to continue as

(q) Tammireddi v. Gangireddi (1922) 45 Mad. 281, 70 I.C. 337, ('22) A.M. 236; Nathubhai v. Chhotubhai ('62) A. Guj. 68.

(r) Mahabir Prasad v. Amla Prasad (1924) 46 All. 364, 79 I.C. 517, ('24) A.A. 379; [consent of adults to be presumed if family maintained out of the profits].

(s) Ram Nath v. Chiranji Lal (1935) 57 All. 605, 155 I.C. 136, ('35) A.A. 221.

(t) Budh Karam Chaukhani v. Thakur Prasad Shah (1942) 1 Cal. 19, ('42) A.C. 311.

(u) Supra.

(v) Angney Lal v. Angney Lal ('51) A.A. 400; Canara Banking Corp. Ltd. v. S.I. Bank ('58) A.M. 132; Sreeramaraju v. Pullam Raju ('63) A.A.P. 403.

(w) Venkatasami v. Palaniappa (1929) 52 Mad. 227, 117 I.C. 716, ('29) A.M. 153 [suit on mortgage and as to a portion of the amount there was no antecedent debt].

(x) Benares Bank Ltd. v. Hari Narain (1932) 59 I.A. 300, 54 All. 564, 137 I.C. 781, ('32) A.PC. 182.

(y) Kailashi v. Shanker (1945) All. 135.

(z) Ramlal v. Lakhmichand (1861) 1 Bom. H.C. App. li; Bhagwan Singh v. Beharilal (1938) Nag. 221, 172 I.C. 43, ('37) A.N. 237.

(*z*1) See f.n. (a) below; Commissioner of I.T. v. Govindram Sugar Mills ('66) A.SC. 24.

(a) Pichappa Chettiar v. Chockalingam Pillai (1934) 36 Bom. L.R. 976 (P.C.), 150 I.C. 802, ('34) A.PC. 192; Kshetra Mohan v. E.P.T. Commissioner (1954) S.C.R. 268, ('53) A.SC. 516; Nawaneetdas v. Gordhandas ('55) A.M.B. 113, 116. Also see Ramakrishna Transports v. C.I.T. ('68) A.A.P. 34.

partners with the stranger (b), nor can they institute a suit for a dissolution of the partnership their position being no higher than that of sub-partners (c). Nor can the stranger partner sue the surviving members as partners for the manager's share of the loss. His only remedy is to proceed against the manager's estate, if any (d).

When a manager of a trading joint family enters into a partnership with strangers for the purpose of carrying on the same kind of business the other members are liable to the extent of their interest in the family property (e). On a partition between the members of a joint family of which the manager is a partner with a stranger, the manager is bound to realize his share of the partnership assets for the benefit of the family, and for distribution among the members thereof (f). But this, it is conceived, he cannot do until the term of the partnership has expired.

There can be a valid partnership between the Karta of a Joint Hindu family, as representing the undivided family on the one hand, and a member of the family in his individual capacity on the other. In such a case the individual member retains his interest in the family property, and at the same time enjoys the fruits of his investment and the benefit of his separate property, and for this purpose it is not necessary for him to separate himself from the family (g).

(4) Presumption as to business carried on by a member.—There is no presumption that a business carried on by a member of a joint family, is joint family business (h). Nor is there any presumption that a business carried on by such a member in partnership with a stranger is joint family business (i). There is no presumption that a business standing in the name of or started by even a manager is joint family business (j), but if the joint family funds are utilised in opening a new branch then the new branch will be regarded as part of the old business (k).

See § 240 below and notes thereto.

Minor's share.—The reason why even a minor's share is liable for payment of debts contracted by a manager in the course of the family business is that, if it were otherwise property in a family firm which is recognized by the Hindu law to be a valuable inheritance would become practically valueless to the family wherever a minor was concerned, for no one would deal with a manager if the minor were to be at liberty on coming of age to challenge the trade transactions which took place during his minority (l).

New business.—The first proposition in sub-§ (2) is based on the decision of the Privy Council in Sanyasi Charan Mandal v. Krishnadhan Banerji (m). That was a Dayabhaga case. In that case the joint family consisted of brothers and the new business was started by the adult brothers. In the course of the judgment, their Lordships said: "The

---

(b) Sokkanadha v. Sokkanadha (1903) 28 Mad. 344. Reference may be made to Commissioner of I.T. v. Govindram Sugar Mills supra.

(c) Gangayya v. Venkataramaih (1918) 41 Mad. 451, 43 I.C. 9, ('18) A.M. 37. As to the rights of the surviving coparceners in case of death of the Karta partner as his representatives to recover the share of the deceased see Gopi Nath v. Satish Chandra ('64) A. All. 53.

(d) See Kharidar Kapra Co. v. Daya Kishan (1921) 43 All. 116, 58 I.C. 765, ('21) A.A. 306.

(e) Chocklingam v. Muthukaruppan (1938) Mad. 1019, ('38) A.M. 849; Tulsiram v. Anni Bai ('63) A. Orissa 11.

(f) 41 Mad. 454, 43 I C. 9 ('18) A.M. 37, supra; Krishnan v. Rangachari ('65) A.M. 340 [modus operandi of granting relief].

(g) Lala Lachhman Das v. Commissioner of Income-tax (1947) 74 I.A. 277.

(h) Vadilal v. Shah Khushal (1903) 27 Bom. 157. See also Haroon Mahomed, in the matter of (1890) 14 Bom. 189. See Grey v. Walker (1913) 40 Cal. 523, 18 I.C. 753; Gokal Chand v. Hukum Chand —Nath Mal (1921) 48 I.A. 162, 171, 2 Lah. 40, 49, 60 I.C. 379, ('21) A.PC. 35; Chattanatha v. Ramchandra ('55) A.S.C. 799; Srinibas v. Hariran ('50) A. Assam 195; Parikshita v. Sita Dei ('71) A. Orissa 204.

(i) Mirza Mal v. Rameshar (1929) 51 All. 827, 118 I.C. 145, ('29) A.A. 536; Mangilal v. I.T. Commissioner ('55) A.P. 366.

(j) Chattanatha v. Ramchandra (1952) 2 S.C.R. 477, ( 55) A.SC. 799 [it makes no difference in this respect that the manager is the father]; Naim Singh v. Tikam Singh ('55) A.A. 388. Also see Narayana Raju v. Chamaraj ('68) A.SC. 1276.

(k) Ram Nath v. Chiranji Lal (1935) 57 All. 605, 155 I.C. 136, ('35) A.A. 221.

(l) Ramlal v. Lakhmichand (1861) 1 Bom. H.C. App. li, lxxii, lxxiii.

(m) (1922) 49 I.A. 108 114-115, 49 Cal. 560, 567-568, 67 I.C. 124, ('72) A.PC. 237.

distinction between an ancestral business and one started like the present after the death of the ancestor as a source of partnership relations is patent. In the one case these relations result by operation of law from a succession on the death of an ancestor to an established business, with its benefits and obligations. In the other they rest ultimately on contractual arrangement between the parties." The decision proceeds on the ground that a minor could not become a partner by contract [Indian Contract Act, 1872, s. 11], though he might be "admitted to the benefits of the partnership" [Indian Partnership Act, 1932, s. 30]; and since a new business could rest only on contractual arrangement, a minor could not be a partner in such business.

Whether a business is a new business is in each case a question of fact. The fact that it had ceased to be carried on for a few years in the grandfather's lifetime does not make it a new business if it is started by the father again (n). Where a joint family carries on business in partnership with a stranger in a particular name, and the stranger retires, and on his retirement the family carries on the same business in another name, it does not make it a new business (o). Where the family never exported any commodity to foreign countries, the starting of a business for exporting goods to foreign countries like America was held to be a new business and not an extension of the existing one (p). Where, however, the father carried on business in money lending, cloth and corn, and on his death the business was discontinued for a while, and later on the guardian of the infant son started business in cloth and kirana on behalf of the minor, it was held that the family being a trading family this could be regarded as an extension of the existing business and not the starting of a new one (q).

Trading family: Kulachara.—A distinction has to be drawn between a trading and a non-trading family. In the former case where the business started by a member is not speculative then the shares of his sons will be liable for the debts incurred by their father. Heredity in business is the touchstone and not necessarily the difference or novelty in the nature of the commercial undertaking (r).

234A. Notice of severance in status.—Prima facie, when there is a division in status of members of a joint Hindu family, no matter how brought about, there is no obligation on any member to publish a notice of such division. A person dealing with the manager of a joint family does so with the knowledge of the limitations on his powers. But where the members of a joint Hindu family business appear to have taken active part in it or been associated in conducting it, their liability is analogous to that of partners and arises from their conduct. They would in such a case be estopped from denying the character assumed by them and on the faith of which third parties may be presumed to have acted, so that persons dealing with such a firm will not be affected by a separation of which no notice has been given. It may be doubted whether in such a case the members of the joint family who have done nothing to invite the operation of the rule of estoppel can also be held liable on the ground that the ordinary presumption of continuity casts on them the duty or obligation to inform the outside creditors who had dealings with the joint family through the Karta, that there has been a severance of the joint status (s).

---

(n) Damodaram v. Bansilal (1928) 51 Mad. 711, 111 I.C. 297, ('28) A.M. 566.

(o) Ram Krishna v. Ratan Chand (1931) 58 I.A. 173, 53 All. 190, 132 I.C. 613, ('31) A.PC. 136.

(p) Desu Rattamma v. Narayanarao (1947) Mad. 567, ('47) A.M. 252. For other instances see Shivramsa v. Gurunathsa (1956) 58 Bom. L.R. 239 and cases in f.n. (q) and (r) below.

(q) Angney Lal v. Angney Lal ('51) A.A. 400. For a discussion of the case-law on the subject see Kulitalai Bank v. Nagamanickam ('55) A.M. 670, 673-675 and the case cited in f.n. (r) below.

(r) Kumbakonam Bank v. Shanmugam ('56) A.M. 306, 308, 309; Canara Banking Corporation Ltd. v. South Indian Bank Ltd. ('58) A.M. 132; Purnachandrarao v. Mallikharjuna Rao ('61) A.A.P. 247. Also see Debilal v. Damodar Das ('63) A.P. 270.

(s) Pramod Kumar v. Damodar Sahu, A.I.R. (1953) Orissa 179; Ramaswami v. Srinivasa A.I.R. (1936) Mad. 94, Cf. Kashiram v. Bhaga (1945) 47 Bom. L.R. 470, (1945) Bom. 976, ('45) A.B. 511.

III.—MANAGEMENT AND ENJOYMENT OF COPARCENARY PROPERTY

235. Rights of coparceners.—(1) Community of interest and unity of possession.—No coparcener is entitled to any special interest in the coparcenary property, nor is he entitled to exclusive possession of any part of the property (t). As observed by their Lordships of the Privy Council, "there is community of interest and unity of possession between all the members of the family" (u).

(2) Share of income.—A member of a joint Mitakshara family cannot predicate at any given moment what his share in the joint family property is. His share becomes defined only when a partition takes place (v). As no member, while the family continues joint, is entitled to any definite share of the joint property, it follows that no member is entitled to any definite share of the income of the property (w). The whole income of the joint family property must be brought, according to the theory of an undivided family, to the common chest or purse, and there dealt with according to the modes of enjoyment by the members of an undivided family (x).

It is competent to the manager to allot to any individual member a portion of the family property to enable him to maintain himself out of its income. Any savings out of the income and investments of such savings will be the separate property of the member (y).

(2a) Joint possession and enjoyment.—Each coparcener is entitled to joint possession and enjoyment of the family property. If any coparcener is excluded from joint possession or enjoyment, he is entitled to enforce his right by a suit. He is not bound to sue for partition.

There is no reason why a Hindu coparcener, who is excluded from the enjoyment of his joint rights, should be compelled at the instance of the other coparceners and against his will to break up the joint family by bringing a suit for partition (a). Where a coparcener is excluded from joint possession, the proper decree to pass is to declare his right to joint possession, and, further, to direct that he be put into joint possession. A mere declaratory decree is of no use (b).

Unauthorized acts.—A coparcener has no right without the consent of the other coparceners, to erect a building on land belonging to the joint family or any portion thereof, so as to alter materially the condition of the property or to do anything with the property which would interfere with the joint enjoyment thereof. If he does so, he may be restrained by an injunction (g). But the remedy by way of injunction is not appropriate, if the act done is of such a character that the condition of the property is not materially altered thereby as where a well is erected which does not interfere with the enjoyment of the property (h). A contract of suretyship entered into by a coparcener other than the manager is void and cannot be ratified (f).

---

(t) Naranbhai v. Ranchod (1902) 26 Bom. 141, 144.

(u) Katama Natchiar v. Rajah of Shivagunga (1863) 9 M.I.A. 539, 543, 615.

(v) Appovier v. Rama Subba Aiyan (1866) 11 M.I.A. 75, 89.

(w) Ganpat v. Annaji (1899) 23 Bom. 144.

(x) (1866) 11 M.I.A. 75, 89, supra.

(y) Bengal Insurance and Real Property Co. Ltd. v. Velayammal (1937) Mad. 990, ('37) A.M. 571, 170 I.C. 279; Ramayya Goundan v. Kolanda Goundan & Ors. (1940) Mad. 322, ('39) A.M. 911, (1939) 2 M.L.J. 639; Latchandhora v. Chinnavadu ('63) A.A.P. 31 [income from property allotted to branches of the family for maintenance].

(a) (1902) 26 Bom. 141; supra; Ramchandra v. Damodhar (1896) 20 Bom. 467.

(b) (1902) 26 Bom. 141, 145, supra.

(g) Sheopersad v. Leela Singh (1874) 12 Beng. L.R. 188; Guru Das v. Bijaya (1898) 1 Beng. L.R.A.C. 108; Vithoba v. Hariba (1869) 6 Bom. H.C.A. 54. See also Shadi v. Anup Singh (1890) 12 All. 436; Najju Khan v. Imtiaz-ud-din (1896) 18 All. 115.

(h) Biswambhar v. Rajaram (1869) 3 Beng. L.R. Ap. 67.

(f) Malak Chand v. Hira Lal (1936) 11 Luck. 449, 157 I.C. 945, ('35) A.O. 510.

(3) Exclusion from joint family property.—Where a coparcener is excluded by other coparceners from the use or enjoyment of the joint property or any portion thereof, and the act of the defendants amounts to an ouster of the plaintiff from his enjoyment of the property, the Court may by an injunction restrain the defendants from obstructing the plaintiff in the enjoyment of the property (c). Clear and strong evidence would be required before a person can be said to have suffered his own exclusion and acquiesced in the continuation of it without asserting his rights. Once a party establishes his claim to a share in the joint family property the onus is on the opposite party to establish exclusion to the knowledge of the claimant for the requisite period of limitation (*c*1).

Article 127 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, provides a period of twelve years for a suit by a person excluded from joint family property to enforce a right to share therein from the date when the exclusion becomes known to the plaintiff. The fact that a coparcener voluntarily resides separately from the family and does not ask to be maintained by the family, does not amount to an exclusion from the joint family property (d). Nor does a refusal to partition, where there is no denial of the right to a partition (e).

Now see Article 110 of the new Limitation Act, 1963.

Illustrations

(a) A and B are members of a joint family. A prevents B from using a door or a staircase, which is the only means of access to the rooms in B's occupation. A's act amounts to ouster. He may, therefore, be restrained by an injunction from disturbing B in the use of the door or staircase: Anant v. Gopal (1895) 19 Bom. 269; Soshi v. Ganesh (1902) 29 Cal. 500.

(b) A and B are members of a joint family which owns a shop in Poona. A prevents B from entering the shop, inspecting the account books, and taking part in the management of the shop. A may be restrained by an injunction from excluding B from the joint possession and management of the shop: Ganpat v. Annaji (1899) 23 Bom. 144.

(4) Every coparcener in an undivided family is entitled to be maintained out of the family estate. See further § 543.

(5) Right to enforce partition.—Subject to the provisions of § 307, every adult coparcener is entitled to enforce a partition of the coparcenary property.

(6) Alienation of undivided interest.—No coparcener can dispose of his undivided interest in coparcenary property by gift [§ 258]. Nor can he alienate such interest even for value except in Bombay, Madras and Madhya Pradesh [§§ 259, 260].

(7) Right of survivorship.—Where a coparcener dies before partition of the coparcenary property, his undivided interest in the property devolves, not by succession upon his heirs, but by survivorship upon the surviving coparceners (i) [§ 229]. The modifications engrafted on this rule have been indicated in § 229 ante and the Note at the beginning of this Chapter.

(8) Manager.—A coparcener who is a manager has certain special powers of disposition over the coparcenary property which no other coparcener has [§§ 237-251].

---

(c) Anant v. Gopal (1895) 19 Bom. 269; Soshi v. Ganesh (1902) 29 Cal. 500, (1899) 23 Bom. 144, supra.

(*c*1) See Marudanayagam v. Sola Pillai ('63) A.M. 200 and the cases there cited.

(d) Sitalprasad v. Ramprasad (1944) Nag. 17.

(e) Radhoba v. Aburao (1929) 56 I.A. 316, 53 Bom. 699, 118 I.C. 1, ('29) A.P.C. 231.

(i) Katama Natchiar v. Raja of Shivagunga (1863) 9 M.I.A. 539, 543, 615.

(9) Father.—A father has certain special powers of disposing of coparcenary property which no other coparcener has [§ 256].

Partition and survivorship.—The right to enforce a partition and the right to take by survivorship go hand in hand. In fact, as observed by the Privy Council, "it is the right to partition which determines the right to take by survivorship" (j).

Injunction.—In disputes between members of a joint Hindu family relating to joint property, the exercise of the Court's jurisdiction to grant relief by injunction should be confined to acts of waste, illegitimate use of the joint property and acts amounting to ouster (k).

Joint possession.—The members of a joint family may agree between themselves without coming to a partition, to occupy for their convenience separate portions of the joint property. In fact, this is the general practice. It amounts to exclusive possession of the separate portion enjoyed by each member by the consent of all; it may be terminated and a completely new arrangement may be made, at any time, by the members of the family, if they think fit to do so (l).

236. Manager.—Property belonging to a joint family is ordinarily managed by the father or other senior member for the time being of the family. The manager of a joint family is called karta.

The father is in all cases naturally, and in the case of minor sons necessarily, the manager of the joint family property (m).

In the undermentioned case (*m*1) the Supreme Court observed: "We are not prepared to express any definite opinion on the question whether there can be two kartas of a joint Hindu family." It was also observed that the very idea of there being two kartas did not appear, prima facie, consistent with the concept of a karta. Two persons may look after the affairs of the joint family on the basis of the members of the family clothing them with authority to represent the family but that would not make them kartas of the family. Their power to represent the family would depend on the terms of the authority conferred on them.

It was held by the Nagpur High Court, that a mother though not a coparcener in the joint family was in the absence of adult male members competent to act as manager of the family. Her acts as manager if they are for legal necessity or benefit to estate, would be binding on the joint family (n). The Madras High Court and some other High Courts did not agree with the view that the mother can be regarded as a Karta (o). A wife cannot act as karta of the joint family on the ground of her husband's absence (*o*1).

The Supreme Court has now held that only a coparcener can be the karta or manager of a joint family. Since a widow or a mother is not a coparcener she cannot be the manager of a joint family (*o*2).

A minor can act as a karta of the joint family through his natural guardian, his mother, where father's whereabouts are not known at the time (*o*3).

"The joint and undivided family is the normal condition of Hindu society. An undivided Hindu family is ordinarily joint not only in estate, but also in food and worship; therefore, not only the concerns of the joint property, but whatever relates to their commensality and their religious duties and observances, must be regulated by its members

---

(j) Venkayyamma v. Venkataramanayyamma (1902) 25 Mad. 678, 687.

(k) Anant v. Gopal (1895) 19 Bom. 269.

(l) Sheopersad v. Leela Singh (1874) 12 Beng. L.R. 188, 195.

(m) Suraj Bunsi Koer v. Sheo Persad (1880) 5 Cal. 148, 165, 6 I.A. 88.

(*m*1) Union of India v. Shree Ram ('65) A.SC. 1531.

(n) Pandurang v. Pandurang (1947) Nag. 299; Commissioner of Income-tax v. Luxminarayan (1948) Nagpur 775.

(o) Radha Ammal v. I.T. Commissioner (1930) 1 M.L.J. 399, ('30) A.M. 538; Rakhmabai v. Sitabai (1932) Bom. 455, ('32) A.B. 160, (1932) 54 Bom. L.R. 55; Maguni Padhano v. Lokananidhi ('56) A. Orissa 1. In a later case it has been held by the Orissa High Court that under certain circumstances a mother can exercise the powers of a manager, Budhi Jena v. Dhobai Naik ('58) A. Orissa 7.

(*o*1) Sheogulam v. Kishun Chaudhuri ('61) A.P 212. But see Budhi Jena v. Dhobai Naik ('58) A. Orissa 7 and also see Trutia v. Basudev Singh ('64) A. Orissa 123.

(*o*2) Commissioner of Income Tax v. Govindram Sugar Mills ('66) A.SC. 24.

(*o*3) Jaggernath Singh v. Narayan ('65) A.P. 300.

or by the manager to whom they have expressly or by implication delegated the task of regulation" (p).

"So long as the members of a family remain undivided, the senior member of the family is entitled to manage the family properties," including even charitable properties (q); and is presumed to be the manager until the contrary is shown (r). But the senior member may give up his right of management, and a junior member may be appointed manager (s).

Though a son acquires by birth an interest equal to that of the father in ancestral property, yet the father by reason of his paternal relation and his position as the head of the family and its manager, is entitled to make lawful disposition of the family property in the interest of the family. Therefore, a son has no right against the will of his father to occupy any specific portion of the family property and if he does so the father may sue to eject him from it (t). If the son does not approve of the management of the family property by the father, his remedy is to ask for a partition of the property against the father.

It is not to be supposed that a member of a joint family who is a manager has a larger proprietary interest or has larger rights to enjoy the joint property than any other member. The only respect in which he has a superior right is that he has a power of disposition for causes recognised as just and proper under Hindu law of the whole family property, including the interest of the junior members (u) [§ 242].

It is well-established that at times the other members of the family participate in the management of a joint family business. In any such case it may be said that there can be more than one manager and the acts of each of them would be binding on the joint family including the minor members (*u*1).

237. Manager's power over income.—The manager, as the head of the family, has control over the income and expenditure, and he is the custodian of the surplus, if any. So long as he spends the income for the purposes of the family, he is not under the same obligation to economise or save as a paid agent or trustee would be. If he spends more than the other members approve, their remedy is to demand a partition (v). On the other hand, he is liable to make good to them their shares of all sums which he has misappropriated or which he has spent for purposes other than those in which the joint family was interested (w).

The family purposes referred to above are the maintenance, education, marriage, shraddh and other religious ceremonies of the coparceners and of the members of their respective families. In taking accounts at the time of partition, no charge is to be made against any coparcener, because in consequence of his having a larger family to maintain than others, a larger share of the joint income was spent on his family. Such expenditure is considered to be the legitimate expenditure of the whole family (x).

Manager not an Agent.—A manager is not an agent within the meaning of Chapter X of the Indian Contract Act, 1872 (y), or of cl. 12 of the Letters Patent (z). His position is more like that of a trustee (z). But it is not precisely the same as that of a trustee, for if it were so, he would be bound to economise and save, as a trustee is, which, it has been held, he is not (a).

---

(p) Sri Raghunada v. Sri Brozo Kishoro (1876) 1 Mad. 69, 81, 3 I.A. 154, 191.

(q) Thandavaroya v. Shunmugam (1909) 32 Mad. 167, 169, 2 I.C. 34.

(r) Varada Bhaktavatsaludu & another v. Domojipurapu Venkata Narasimha Rao (1940) Mad. 752, 191 I.C. 369, ('40) A.M. 530.

(s) Mudit v. Ranglal (1902) 29 Cal. 797.

(t) Baldeo Das v. Sham Lal (1876) 1 All. 77.

(u) Nunna v. Chidaraboyina (1903) 26 Mad. 214, 221; Chidambaram v. Subramanian ('53) A.M. 492, (1952) 2 M.L.J. 524.

(*u*1) Chunnilal v. Kalu ('66) A. Raj. 208.

(v) Bhowani v. Juggernath (1909) 13 C.W.N. 309, 3 I.C. 241; Tara Chand v. Reeb Ram (1866) 3 Mad. H.C. 177.

(w) Abhaychandra v. Pyari Mohan (1870) 5 Beng. L.R. 347, 349.

(x) (1870) 5 Beng. L.R. 347, 349, supra.

(y) Muhammad v. Radhe Ram (1900) 22 All. 307, 317; Sirkant Lal v. Sidheshwari Prasad (1937) 16 Pat. 441, 170 I.C. 367, ('37) A.P. 455.

(z) Annamalai v. Murugesa (1903) 26 Mad. 544, 553, 30 I.A. 220, 228.

(a) Perrazu v. Subbarayadu (1921) 48 I.A. 280, 287-288, 44 Mad. 656, 663, 61 I.C. 690, ('22) A.P.C. 71.

238. Manager's liability to account on partition.—(1) In the absence of proof of misappropriation or fraudulent and improper conversion by the manager of a joint family estate he is liable to account on partition only for assets which he has received, not for what he ought or might have received if the family money had been profitably dealt with (b). Further, in the absence of any such proof, a coparcener seeking partition is not entitled to require the manager to account for his past dealings with the family property (c). All that he is entitled to is an account of the family property as it exists at the time he demands a partition (d). But it is open to him to show that the expenditure which the manager alleges he has incurred has not in fact been incurred, or that more properties are available for partition than those disclosed by him (e). See § 305 below.

(2) Since the institution of a suit for partition amounts to a severance of joint status, the manager is, from and after the date of such a suit, strictly bound to account for all receipts and expenses, and can take credit only for such expenses as have been incurred for the benefit or necessity of the estate, and the net income after deducting such expenses is to be divided among the coparceners according to their shares (f).

Form of decree.—As to the form of the decree, see the undermentioned case (g).

Minor coparceners and accounts.—A distinction has been drawn in some cases between the rights of those members who were adults and those who were minors during the management, and it has been held that since minors could not be deemed to have consented to the management, they are entitled when they attain majority, to hold the manager liable not only for acts amounting to fraud, but also where the management has been grossly negligent and prejudicial to their interest, the presumption, however, being that in the absence of evidence the property available for partition is such as exists at the date of the suit for partition (h). This distinction, it is submitted, cannot be sustained on principle. The liability to account must be the same whether the other coparceners were minors or adults during the management (i)

Special Agreement.—By a special agreement between the coparceners, the manager may be rendered liable to account on the footing of an ordinary agent (j).

239. Manager's liability to account otherwise than in a partition suit.—It has been held in Bengal that any coparcener may, without bringing a suit for partition, require the manager to account for his dealings with the copar-

---

(b) (1921) 48 I.A. 280, 287-288, 44 Mad. 656, 663, 61 I.C. 690, ('22) A.PC. 71, supra; Laxminarayan v. Dinker (1943) Nag. 390, 205 I.C. 279, ('43) A.N. 101; Ramanathan v. Narayanan (1955) 2 M.L.J. 414, ('55) A.M. 629; Nepur Kuer v. Shivchand ('61) A.P. 57. Also see Narayanaswami v. Ramakrishna ('65) A.SC. 289; Appalanarasimha v. Mahadevalla ('67) A.A.P. 247 case law discussed [specific allegations should be made and proved before accounts can be reopened].

(c) Sukhdeo v. Basdeo (1935) 57 All. 949, 157 I.C. 1013 ('35) A.A. 594; Bappu Ayyar v. Renganayaki (1955) 2 M.L.J. 302, ('55) A.M. 394 (onus of proof); Manikrao v. Deorao (1954) Nag. 709, ('55) A.N. 290. Also see Narayanaswami supra; Damodar v. Banamali ('67) A. Orissa 61.

(d) Parmeshwar v. Gobind (1916) 43 Cal. 459, 33 I.C. 190, ('16) A.C. 500; Balakrishna v. Muthusami (1909) 32 Mad. 271, 3 I.C. 878; Damodardas v. Uttamram (1893) 17 Bom. 271; Narayan v. Nathaji (1904) 28 Bom. 201, 208; Jugmohandas v. Mangaldas (1886) 10 Bom. 528, 560-562, 581; Konerrat v. Gurrat (1881) 5 Bom. 589, 595; Ramnath v. Goturam (1920) 44 Bom. 179-183, 54 I.C. 115, ('20) A.B. 236; Jyotibati v. Lakshmeshwar (1929) 8 Pat. 818, 120 I.C. 770, ('30) A.P. 1; Nepur Kuer v. Shivchand ('61) A.P. 57; Gopal v. Trimbak ('53) A.N. 195, (1953) Nag. 130; [Manager liable to account as a trustee from date of severance]. Ramanathan v. Narayanan supra.

(e) Tammireddi v. Gangireddi (1922) 45 Mad. 281, 70 I.C. 337, ('22) A.M. 236; (1916) 43 Cal. 459, 33 I.C. 190, ('16) A.C. 500; supra; Manharanlal v. Jagjiwanlal (1951) Nag. 937, ('52) A.N. 73.

(f) Sri Ranga v. Srinivasa (1927) 50 Mad. 866, 873-874, 104 I.C. 472, ('27) A.M. 801; Gopal v. Trimbak, ('53) A.N. 195.

(g) (1886) 10 Bom. 528, at pp. 562, 581, supra.

(h) Damodardas v. Uttamram (1893) 17 Bom. 271, 278-279; Chuckun v. Poran (1868) 9 W.R. 483.

(i) See Sri Ranga v. Srinivasa (1927) 50 Mad. 866, 873-874, 104 I.C. 472, ('27) A.M. 801.

(j) Raja Setrucherla v. Raja Setrucherla (1899) 22 Mad. 470, 26 I.A. 167.

cenary property and the income thereof. If the manager refuses to render the account he may be compelled by suit to render such account (k).

240. Power of manager to contract debts for family purposes and family business.—(1) Implied authority to borrow money for family business [vide § 234, (1) (iii), (iv), (v) and § 270 below].

(2) Implied authority to borrow money for family purposes.—A joint Hindu family may have no business at all, and yet debts may be contracted by the manager for a joint family purpose [§ 243]. Such debts also are binding on the other coparceners to the extent mentioned in the section referred to in sub-§ (1) (m). The liability of a coparcener in such a case does not cease by subsequent partition (n).

When a sole surviving coparcener incurs a debt, he must be deemed to have done so in a representative capacity, that is to say, as representing a potential joint family, which is capable by expansion of comprising more than one member (o).

(3) Burden of proof of necessity for a loan for a family purpose or for family business.—Where money has been borrowed by the manager on the representation that it is required for a family purpose (p), or for family business (q) and the lender seeks to render the whole family property including the shares of other members of the family liable for the debt, he is not entitled to a decree against the whole family property, unless he shows that there was a necessity for the loan, or that he made reasonable inquiry as to the necessity for the loan (r) the mere existence of the business not being enough or that it is for the benefit of the family (s).

(4) Promissory note passed by manager for family business in his own name.—It has been held in several cases that where the manager of a joint family borrows money on a promissory note for a joint family business or to meet a joint family necessity, the other members of the joint family may be sued on the note, though they are not parties to the note, but their liability is limited to their share in the joint family property (t), unless they can be

---

(k) Abhaychandra v. Pyari Mohan (1870) 5 Beng. L.R. 347 [a Mitakshara case]; Benoy Krishna Ghosh Chaudhuri v. Amarendra Krishna Ghosh Choudhri (1940) 1 Cal. 183, 186 I.C. 546, ('40) A.C. 51 [a Dayabhaga case]. See also (1857) 6 M.I.A. 526, 539-540, supra [a Dayabhaga case]. Satish Chandra v. Binapani ('64) A.P. 473.

(m) Gharibillah v. Khalak Singh (1903) 25 All. 407, 414-415, 30 I.A. '165; Dwarka Nath v. Bungshi (1905) 9 C.W.N. 879 [a case under the Dayabhaga law]; Chalamayya v. Varadayya (1899) 22 Mad. 166.

(n) Bankey Lal v. Durga Prasad (1931) 53 All. 868 [F.B.], 135 I.C. 139, ('31) A.A. 512.

(o) Ramanathan Chettiar v. S.R.M. Ct. M. Firm (1937) Mad. 376, 168 I.C. 734, ('37) A.M. 345. See also Maharaja of Bobbili v. Zamindar of Chundi (1912) 35 Mad. 108. Both are cases of adoption.

(p) Soiru Padmanabh v. Narayanrao (1894) 18 Bom. 520; Krishna v. Vasudeo (1897) 21 Bom. 808, 815; Sukur v. Goury Pershad (1880) 5 Cal. 321; Mela Mal v. Gori (1922) 3 Lah. 288, 66 I.C. 485, ('22) A.L. 200; Khazana Mal v. Jagan Nath (1923) 4 Lah. 200, 74 I.C. 484, ('24) A.L. 44; Sotam Ram v. Pardhuman Ram (1927) 8 Lah. 673, 105 I.C. 785, ('28) A.L. 103.

(q) Ram Krishna v. Ratanchand (1931) 58 I.A. 173, 53 All. 190, 132 I.C. 613, ('31) A.P.C. 136; following Hunooman Persuad v. Musammat Babooee (1856) 6 M.I.A. 393; Nagendra v. Amar Chandra (1903) 7 C.W.N. 725; Ganpat Rai v. Munni Lal (1912) 34 All. 135, 13 I.C. 34, (1923) 4 Lah. 200, 74 I.C. 484, ('24) A.L. 44, supra; Girdhari Lal v. Kishen Chand (1924) 5 Lah. 511, 85 I.C. 463, ('25) A.L. 240; Vithal v. Shivappa (1923) 47 Bom. 637, 72 I.C. 659, ('23) A.B. 265, dissenting from Raghunathji v. Bank of Bombay (1910) 34 Bom. 72, 2 I.C. 173.

(r) Mussammat Mauli v. Brij Lal & Ors. (1942) Lah. 345, 205 I.C. 37, ('43) A.L. 33 (F.B.).

(s) Ram Nath v. Chiranji Lal (1935) 57 All. 605 [F.B.], 155 I.C. 136, ('35) A.A. 221; Mutsaddi Lal v. Sakhir Chand (1936) 17 Lah. 311, ('35) A.L. 735; Pramod Kumar v. Damodar ('53) A. Orissa 179.

(t) Krishna v. Krishnasami (1900) 23 Mad. 597; Krishi-Baisnab v. Ramdhon (1906) 11 C.W.N. 139; Krishnanand v. Raja Ram Singh (1922) 44 All. 393, 66 I.C. 150, ('22) A.A. 116; Raghunath v. Sri Narain (1923) 45 All. 434, 73 I.C. 1018, ('23) A.A. 424.

treated as contracting parties (u). If the suit is filed before partition, the creditor may sue the manager only and seek for a declaration that the whole joint family property is liable or he may implead the other members also. After partition, he must implead the other members in order to enable him to proceed against the portions allotted to them (v). In such cases there is no presumption that the borrowing was for the purposes of the joint family business and the lender must prove it (w). In Bombay it has been held that the proper course in such a case is to sue the manager on the note and the other members on the pre-existing debt, the defences open to the parties being distinct (x).

Where the suit is by the endorsee of a promissory note his remedy is against the maker only unless the endorsement is so worded as to transfer the debt also and complies with the stamp law (y). A decree passed against the manager of a joint family (who is not the father) on a promissory note executed by him, in his personal capacity, containing no direction that it shall be granted out of family property cannot be executed against the family property (z).

It has been held that where a decree has been obtained on such a note against the manager and a minor coparcener, it cannot be executed against the minor personally, his liability in law being confined only to his share in the joint family property, and that he cannot be arrested under such a decree either before or after he has attained majority (a).

In a Patna case, there was a suit upon a handnote executed by the father as Karta of a family. His sons and grandsons were made parties to the suit, and a decree obtained against all of them. In the execution proceedings, only some of the sons were made parties. The other sons were left out and so also were all the grandsons. It was held that on sale of a property in execution of the decree, the interest of the grandsons and those of the sons who were not made parties could not pass, for it could not be said that in such cases the decree was against the father in his representative capacity (b).

(5) New business.—As to the power of a manager to start a new business, see § 234 (2).

Illustration

Three brothers A, B and C, managing members of a joint Hindu family, borrow money from D for purposes of the joint family business, and execute a promissory note in favour of D. After the death of B and C, D sues A and the sons of A, B and C on the note. D is entitled to a decree enabling him to recover the money from the joint family property. He is also entitled to a personal decree against A, A being a contracting party, so as to enable him to proceed against the separate property of A. But he is not entitled to a personal decree against the sons of A, B or C for they are not parties to the note.

As to ancestral business and its incidents see §§ 234 and 240.

Contribution.—A manager has power to borrow money for a joint family purpose on the security of the family property. But he may also borrow on his personal security. When he borrows money on his personal security, but for a family purpose and spends it for the benefit of the family, he is entitled to contribution from the other members.

---

(u) Sirikant Lal v. Sidheshwari Prasad (1937) 16 Pat. 411, 170 I.C. 357, ('37) A.P. 455; Mutsaddi Lal v. Sakhir Chand (1936) 17 Lah. 311, ('35) A.L. 735.

(v) Pangudaya v. Uthandiya (1938) Mad. 968, 177 I.C. 188, ('38) A.M. 774. See Gendulal v. Jangli (1947) Nagpur 604.

(w) Abdul Majid Khan v. Saraswatnibai (1934) 61 I.A. 90, 36 Bom. L.R. 225, 147 I.C. 1, ('34) A.PC. 4; Shamrao v. Rajaram ('56) A.N. 285.

(x) Vithalrao v. Vithalrao (1923) 25 Bom. L.R. 151, 72 I.C. 242, ('23) A.B. 244. The point was not raised in Krishnashet v. Hari (1896) 20 Bom. 488.

(y) Marutamuthu v. Kadir Badsha (1938) Mad. 568, ('38) A.M. 377; Ramanathan Chettiar v. Muthuraman Naidu & Ors. (1942) Mad. 204, 210 I.C. 3, ('42) A.M. 161, (1941) 2 M.L.J. 816; Ramakrishna v. Sitaram ('62) A.A.P. 255. But see Sreenivasan v. Rangachari ('53) A.M. 815, (1953) 1 M.L.J. 595.

(z) Chippagiri Nagireddi v. Venkadari Somappa (1943) Mad. 248, 204 I.C. 198, ('43) A.M. 1, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 691. But see Shanker Rao v. Vinayak ('51) A.N. 307, (1950) Nag. 806; Phool Chand v. Lalit Kishore ('69) A.A. 155.

(a) Bishen Singh v. Kidar Nath (1921) 2 Lah. 159, 62 I.C. 800, ('21) A.L. 61; Jwala Prasad v. Bhuda Ram (1931) 10 Pat. 503, 134 I.C. 420, ('31) A.P. 328.

(b) Deo Narain v. Bibikhaton ('49) A.P. 401.

The right to contribution arises when he expends the money, and not on the date on which he repays the loan. Therefore limitation runs against his claim from the former, and not from the latter, date (c).

Extent of liability of other members.—It is an elementary proposition of law that A is not bound to pay a debt contracted by B, unless B has been authorised by A to incur the debt. In the case of a manager of a joint Hindu family, the manager has an implied authority to bind the other members by debts contracted by him, provided that in the case of a family business, the debts have been contracted by him for the ordinary purposes of the business, and, in other cases, the debts have been contracted for a family purpose. The authority of the manager, however, extends only to the family property; that is to say, if the manager borrows money within the scope of his authority, and the loan is not repaid, the creditor can proceed only against the family property including the shares of the other members in the property, but the other members are not bound personally so as to entitle the creditor to proceed against their separate property. The creditor can, of course, proceed against the separate property of the manager, for the manager is a party to the contract. Likewise he can proceed against the separate property of any other member if he is a party to the contract, or if he subsequently ratifies the contract.

241. General powers of manager of joint family business.—Besides the power to contract debts for the family business [§ 240], the manager has the power of making contracts, giving receipts, and compromising (§ 248) or discharging claims ordinarily incidental to the business. Without a general power of that kind, it would be impossible for the business to be carried on at all (d).

It was so laid down by the Judicial Committee in a case in which the business was a money-lending business. The principal question in that case was whether the managing members who had entered into ordinary business contracts in their own names on behalf of the family were entitled to sue in their own names or whether the other members were necessary parties. It was held that they could sue in their own names (e). The refusal by the manager of a joint family to purchase properties sought to be preempted binds the coparceners (f).

242. Alienation by manager of coparcenary property for legal necessity.—(1) The power of the manager of a joint Hindu family to alienate joint family property is analogous to that of a manager for an infant heir as defined by the Judicial Committee in Hunooman Persaud v. Musummat Babooee (1856) 6 Moo I.A. 393 [see note (1) below].

(2) The manager of a joint Hindu family has power to alienate for value joint family property, so as to bind the interests of both adult and minor coparceners in the property, provided that the alienation is made for legal necessity (h) [§ 243], or for the benefit of the estate [§ 243A]. A manager (not being the father) can alienate even the share of a minor coparcener to satisfy an antecedent debt of the minor's father (or grandfather) when there is no other reasonable course open to him (i). It is not necessary to validate the alienation that the express consent of the adult members should have been obtained (j). See § 528 and notes,

---

(c) Aghore Nath v. Grish Chunder (1893) 20 Cal. 18.

(d) Kishan Prasad v. Har Narain Singh (1911) 33 All. 272, 38 I.A. 45, 9 I.C. 739.

(e) (1911) 33 All. 272, 38 I.A. 45, 9 I.C. 739, supra.

(f) Kanshi Ram v. Lahori Ram (1939) Lah. 246.

(h) Doulat Ram v. Mehr Chand (1887) 14 I.A. 187, 196, 15 Cal. 70; Sham Sunder v. Achhan Kunwar (1898) 25 I.A. 183, 192, 21 All. 71, 83; Gharibullah v. Khalak Singh (1903) 25 All. 407, 415-416, 30 I.A. 165-169; Biswanath v. Jagdip (1913) 40 Cal. 342, 17 I.C. 577; Hunooman Persaud v. Mussumat Babooee (1856) 6 M.I.A. 393; Soorendro v. Nundun (1874) 21 W.R. 196; Sadhu Saran v. Brahmdeo (1921) 6 Pat. L.J. 256, 61 I.C. 20, ('21) A.P. 99 [taking a lease of property for the family].

(i) Dharmarajsingh v. Chandrasekhar Rao (1942) Nag. 214, 200 I.C. 595, ('42) A.N. 66 (F.B.).

(j) Sahu Ram v. Bhup Singh (1917) 44 I.A. 126, 130, 39 All. 437, 443, 39 I.C. 280, ('17) A.PC.

In Suraj Bunsi Koer v. Sheo Proshad (k), the Judicial Committee stated that it was not clearly settled whether where an alienation is made by a manager for a legal necessity, but without the express consent of the adult coparceners, the alienation is binding on them. But in later decisions of the same tribunal, the view taken is that if legal necessity is established, the express consent of the adult coparceners is not necessary (l).

As to alienation by manager for joint family business, see § 246 below.

Where any such transaction has been entered into for legal necessity by a manager it would be deemed to be on behalf of the family and would bind it. The position is not worsened by the fact that a junior member joins the transaction and the joining by him is abortive by reason of his minority (*l*1).

A manager has got power to alienate joint family property when there is legal necessity, in spite of the existence of a widow in the family, who has, under the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, got an undivided interest in the property and is entitled to partition (m).

(2*a*) Where a joint family consists of adults and minors, the mere fact that all the adult members including the manager have consented to the alienation is not proof of legal necessity. Such consent, however, may supply any lacuna that may exist in the evidence of legal necessity (n).

(3) When an alienation is made by the manager without legal necessity, but with the consent of all other coparceners, they being all adults, the alienation is valid in its entirety (o). If it is made without the consent of all, it would in Bombay and Madras, bind the shares of the consenting members. In West Bengal and Uttar Pradesh, where a coparcener cannot alienate even his own interest without the consent of all other coparceners, the alienation would not bind the shares either of the alienor or of the consenting members [§§ 257, 258 and §§ 268, 269].

As to consent, see also the undermentioned cases (p).

(4) An alienation by the manager of a joint family made without legal necessity is not void, but voidable (*p*1), at the option of the other coparceners. They may affirm it or they may repudiate it (q), but a creditor cannot repudiate it, there being no suggestion that it was in fraud of creditors (r).

1. Hunooman Persaud v. Mussumat Babooee (s).—The leading case on the subject of alienation for necessity is Hunooman Persaud's case. In that case their Lordships of the Privy Council said:—

"The power of the manager for an infant heir to charge an estate not his own is under the Hindu law, a limited and qualified power. It can only be exercised rightly in

---

61, (1898) 25 I.A. 183, 192, 21 All. 71, 83, supra. But see (1903) 30 I.A. 165, 169, 25 All. 407, 415, supra. As to Indian decisions, see Chhotiram v. Narayandas (1887) 11 Bom. 605 [consent presumed]; Miller v. Runga Nath (1886) 12 Cal. 389, 399 [express consent not necessary]; Mudit v. Ranglal (1902) 29 Cal. 797 [express consent not necessary]; Pratab v. Shiam Lal (1920) 42 All. 264, 265, 55 I.C. 37, ('20) A.A. 131 [express consent not necessary]; Karm Chand v. Ram Labhaya (1926) 7 Lah. 476, 96 I.C. 443, ('26) A.L. 468.

(k) (1879) 6 I.A. 88, 101, 5 Cal. 148, 165.

(l) Sahu Ram v. Bhup Singh (1917) 44 I.A. 126, 130, 39 All. 437, 443, 39 I.C. 280, ('17) A.PC. 61; Sham Sunder v. Achhan Kunwar (1898) 25 I.A. 183, 192, 21 All. 71, 83, supra.

(*l*1) Radhakrishandas v. Kaluram ('67) A.S.C. 574.

(m) Mahadu Kashiba v. Gajarabai (1954) Bom. 883, (1954) 56 Bom. L.R. 387, ('54) A.B. 442.

(n) Salamat Khan v. Bhagwat (1930) 52 All. 499, 131 I.C. 608, ('30) A.A. 379; Kushi Ram v. Mehr Chand ('50) A. East Punjab 272.

(o) Kandasami v. Somakanda (1912) 35 Mad. 177, 5 I.C. 922; Shiv Shanker v. Bhola, I.L.R. (1954) Punj. 368.

(p) Gangabai v. Vamanaji (1864) 2 Bom. H.C. 301; Miller v. Runga Nath (1886) 12 Cal. 389.

(q) Subba Goundan v. Krishnamachari (1922) 45 Mad. 449, 68 I.C. 869, ('22) A.M. 112, dissenting from Kandasami v. Somaskanda (1912) 35 Mad. 177, 5 I.C. 922; Jagesar v. Deo Dat (1923) 45 All. 654, 74 I.C. 931, ('24) A.A. 51; Kashinath v. Bapurao (1940) Nag. 573, 191 I.C. 241, ('40) A.N. 305.

(*p*1) See f.n. (*l*1) above. Also see Raghubanchmani v. Ambica Prasad ('71) A.SC. 776.

(r) Imperial Bank of India v. Mt. Maya Devi (1935) 16 Lah. 714, ('35) A.L. 867.

(s) (1856) 6 M.I.A. 393, 423-424.

a case of need, or for the benefit of the estate. But where, in the particular instance, the charge is one that a prudent owner would make, in order to benefit the estate, the bona fide lender is not affected by the precedent mismanagement of the estate. The actual pressure on the estate, the danger to be averted, or the benefit to be conferred upon it, in the particular instance, is the thing to be regarded.... Their Lordships think that the lender is bound to inquire into the necessities for the loan, and to satisfy himself as well as he can, with reference to the parties with whom he is dealing, that the manager is acting in the particular instance for the benefit of the estate. But they think that if he does so inquire, and acts honestly, the real existence of an alleged sufficient and reasonably-credited necessity is not a condition precedent to the validity of his charge, and they do not think that, under the circumstances, he is bound to see to the application of the money.... The purposes for which a loan is wanted are often future, as respects the actual application, and a lender can rarely have, unless he enters on the management, the means of controlling and rightly directing the actual application. Their Lordships do not think that a bona fide creditor should suffer when he has acted honestly and with due caution, but is himself deceived."

The question in Hunooman Persaud's case was as to the extent of the power of a mother as manager of the estate of her minor son to alienate the estate. The case related to a mortgage created by the mother, but the same principles apply to a sale (t). The principles laid down in that case have been held to apply to alienations—

(a) by the manager of a joint family acting on behalf of minor members of the family (u), being the case dealt with in § 242;

(b) by a Hindu widow and other limited heirs of property inherited by them from males [§§ 178-179];

(c) by managers of religious endowments [§ 415]; and

(d) by managers of the estate of lunatics (v).

2. Legal necessity.—See § 243.

3. Alienation "for the benefit of the estate".—See § 243A.

4. Specific performance of contract of sale entered into by manager.—Where a manager enters into a contract for the sale of immovable property belonging to the joint family for a legal necessity, but subsequently refuses to complete the sale the Court may, in a suit for specific performance brought by the purchaser, decree specific performance of the contract, though some of the members of the joint family are minors (v1). But no specific performance can be granted if the contract is for a purpose not binding upon the other coparceners and made without their concurrence (w).

5. Lease: License. The alienation may be one by way of permanent lease (x) or even of a lease for a term (y). Where the practical effect of a license is the same as that of a lease it would be governed by the same rule (z).

See notes to §§ 243 and 244.

243. What is legal necessity.—The following have been held to be family necessities within the meaning of § 242:—

---

(t) Krishna Das v. Nathu Ram (1927) 54 I.A. 79, 84, 49 All. 149, 100 I.C. 130, ('27) A.PC. 37.

(u) Soorendro v. Nundun (1874) 21 W.R. 196; Baboo Kameswar Pershad v. Run Bahadur (1881) 6 Cal. 843, 8 I.A. 8; Sahu Ram v. Bhup Singh (1917) 44 I.A. 126, 130, 39 All. 437, 443, 39 I.C. 280, ('17) A.PC. 61. See also In re Dattatraya Govind Haldankar (1932) 56 Bom. 519, ('32) A.B. 537; Krishnarajan v. Doraswamy ('66) A. Kerala 305 (sale by father).

(v) Goureenath v. Collector of Monghyr (1867) 7 W.R. 5; Kanti Chunder v. Bisheswar (1898) 25 Cal. 585.

(v1) Hari Charan v. Kaula Rai (1917) 2 Pat. L.J. 513, 40 I.C. 142, ('17) A.P. 478 [F.B.]. As to the liability of a manager for damages for breach of contract where there is no legal necessity, see Adikesavan v. Gurunatha (1917) 40 Mad. 338, 39 I.C. 358, ('18) A.M. 315 [F.B.]. See also Jamsetji v. Kashinath (1902) 26 Bom. 326; Dhapo v. Ram Chandra (1935) 57 All. 374, 154 I.C. 235, ('34) A.A. 1019; Ramrao v. Suganchandra (1946) Nagpur 116. Reference may also be made to Sankaralinga v. Ratnaswami (1952) Mad. 508, ('52) A.M. 389 where certain observations in the Bombay case cited above were considered. Also see S. K. Buti v. Shriram (1953) Nag. 579, ('54) A.N. 65; Bhageran Rai v. Bhagwan Singh ('62) A.P. 319; Nathuni Mishra v. Mahesh Misra ('63) A.P. 146.

(w) Shamlal v. Yesaram (1954) Nag. 866, ('54) A.N. 334; Bageshwari Prasad v. Deopati Kuer ('61) A.P. 416.

(x) Bosdeo v. Muhammad (1929) 51 All. 285, 116 I.C. 491, ('28) A.A. 617.

(y) Haribhau v. Hakim ('51) A.N. 249.

(z) Pheku v. Harish Chandra (1954) 1 All. 675, ('53) A.A. 406.

(a) payment of Government revenue and of debts which are payable out of the family property (a);

(b) maintenance of coparceners and of the members of their families (b);

(c) marriage expenses of male coparceners (c), and of the daughters of coparceners (d);

(d) performance of the necessary funeral or family ceremonies (e);

(e) costs of necessary litigation in recovering or preserving the estate (f);

(f) costs of defending the head of the joint family (g), or any other member (h) against a serious criminal charge;

(g) payment of debts incurred for family business or other necessary purpose. In the case of a manager other than a father, it is not enough to show merely that the debt is a pre-existing debt (i) [§ 246].

See § 415, notes under the head "Legal necessity."

It has been held by the Patna High Court that the mortgage of joint family property by the managing member to defray the marriage expenses of his daughter's daughter, when the father of the daughter was not indigent is not justified by legal necessity (j). The expenses of the second marriage of a member of the family have been held not to constitute legal necessity by the Madras High Court (k). Gift of a small portion of the property for educational purposes is not for legal necessity (l).

243A. Alienation by manager for "the benefit of the estate."—There was a conflict of opinion as to the meaning of the words "for the benefit of the estate" which occur in the judgment of the Judicial Committee in Hunooman Persaud's case referred to in note 1 to § 242. One view was that a transaction cannot be said to be for the benefit of the estate, unless it is of a defensive character calculated to protect the estate from some threatened danger or destruction (see cases cited in the note below). Another view was that for a transaction to be for the benefit of the estate it is sufficient if it is such as a prudent owner, or rather a trustee, would have carried out with the know-

---

(a) Gharib-ullah v. Khalak Singh (1903) 25 All. 407, 414-415, 30 I.A. 165; Mudit v. Ranglal (1902) 29 Cal. 797.

(b) See Makundi v. Sarabsukh (1884) 6 All. 417-421; Vijaya Ramraj v. Vijaya Ananda ('52) A.A. 564 (case under Madras Impartible Estates Act).

(c) Sundrabai v. Shivnarayana (1908) 32 Bom. 81; Bhagirathi v. Jokhu (1910) 32 All. 575, 6 I.C. 465; Gopalakrishnam v. Venkatanarasa (1914) 37 Mad. 273, 17 I.C. 308, ('14) A.M. 432, overruling Govindarazalu v. Devarabhotla (1904) 27 Mad. 206; Kameswara v. Veeracharlu (1911) 34 Mad. 422, 8 I.C. 195. Also see Kathaperumal v. Rajendra ('59) A.M. 409, (1958) 2 Mad. L.J. 183.

(d) Chhotiram v. Narayandas (1887) 11 Bom. 605; Vaikuntam v. Kullapiram (1900) 23 Mad. 512 (marriage of niece); Vaikuntam v. Kallapiran (1903) 26 Mad. 497; Ranganaiki v. Ramanuja (1912) 35 Mad. 728, 11 I.C. 570; Ram Charan v. Mihin Lal (1914) 36 All. 158, 22 I.C. 633, ('14) A.A. 23; Sellappa v. Suppan (1937) Mad. 906, 171 I.C. 216; ('37) A.M. 496.

(e) See Nathuram v. Shoma Chhagan (1890) 14 Bom. 562; Lalla Gunput v. Toorun (1871) 16 W.R 52.

(f) Miller v. Runga Nath (1886) 12 Cal. 389.

(g) Beni Ram v. Man Singh (1912) 34 All. 4, 11 I.C. 663; Ramalingam v. Muthayyam (1914) 26 Mad. L.J. 528, 24 I.C. 356 ('15) A.M. 6; Hanumat v. Sonadhari (1919) 4 Pat. L.J. 653, 52 I.C. 734, ('20) A.P. 708. But see Nathu v. Dindayal (1917) 2 Pat. L.J. 166, 39 I.C. 665, ('17) A.P. 504; Said Ahmed v. Raja Barkhandi Mahesh Pratap Narain Singh (1933) 8 Luck. 40, 139 I.C. 64, ('52) A.O. 255 where the next senior member executed the mortgage and it was held to be binding on the family.

(h) Ram Raghubar v. Dip Narain (1923) 45 All. 311, 71 I.C. 749, ('23) A.A. 287; Dhanukdhari v. Rambirich (1922) 1 Pat. 171, 70 I.C. 391, ('22) A.P. 553.

(i) Chiranji Lal v. Bankey Lal (1933) 55 All. 370, 142 I.C. 333, ('33) A.A. 273.

(j) Malik Md. Ibrahim v. Harakh (1947) 26 Pat. 430. But see P. Mudaliar v. Nataraja (1950) Mad. 788.

(k) Patel v. Lakkireddigari (1947) Mad. 379; Bhagirathi v. Jhoku, 32 All. 575.

(l) Lilavatibai v. Takappa (1948) A.M. 301.

ledge that was available to him at the time of the transaction (m). In Balmukund v. Kamla Wati (*m*1) the Supreme Court observed that for a transaction to be regarded as for the benefit of the family it need not be of a defensive character. In each case the Court must be satisfied from the material before it that it was in fact such as conferred or was reasonably expected to confer benefit on the family at the time it was entered into. Where adult members are in existence the judgment is not to be of the manager of the family alone but that of all the adult members of the family including the manager.

Alienation for "the benefit of the estate."—As stated in Hunooman Persaud's case (see note 1 to § 242), the power of the manager to alienate the estate can only be exercised rightly "in a case of need or for the benefit of the estate." Para. 27 of Chapter I of the Mitakshara says that the father has no power to alienate immovable property without the consent of his sons. To this there is an exception mentioned by Brihaspati which is set forth in para. 28 which is as follows:—

> "An exception to it follows: 'Even a single individual may conclude a donation, mortgage, or sale of immovable property, during a season of distress, for the sake of the family, and especially for pious purposes'."

The first authoritative exposition of the expression "for the benefit of the estate" is to be found in Palaniappa v. Deivasikamony (n). The question in that case was as to the power of a mohunt (head of a math) to alienate debuttar land. In the course of the judgment the Judicial Committee observed as follows:—

> "No indication is to be found in any of them as to what is, in this connection, the precise nature of the things to be included under the description 'benefit to the estate'. It is impossible, their Lordships think, to give a precise definition of it applicable to all cases, and they do not attempt to do so. The preservation, however, of the estate from extinction, the defence against hostile litigation affecting it, the protection of it or portions from injury or deterioration by inundation, these and such like things would obviously be benefits. The difficulty is to draw the line as to what are, in this connection, to be taken as benefits and what not."

The above passage gave rise to the conflict of opinion noted in the section. In three Allahabad cases the view taken was that a transaction to be for the benefit of the estate must be of a defensive nature. This view was dissented from in a later case by a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court (o). In that case it was held that a transaction to be for the benefit of the estate need not be of a defensive nature, and that the real test was whether the transaction was one which a prudent owner would have carried out with the knowledge then available to him. As to two (p) of the three earlier cases, the Full Bench said that the actual decision in those cases was correct on the facts. No opinion was expressed as to the decision in the third case (q), where it was held that a mortgage by the manager for starting a new business was not binding on the minor members of the family. As to Palaniappa's case the Full Bench observed that though the instances given by their Lordships in that case were all instances where the transaction was of a defensive nature, there was no justification for the suggestion that their Lordships meant to say that the transactions justifiable on the principle of 'benefit to the estate' were limited to transactions which were of a defensive nature.

The expression "in case of need", in the judgment in Hunooman Persaud's case may be traced to the words "during a season of distress" in verse 28, and the expression "for the benefit of the estate" to the words "for the sake of the family." The originai words "for the sake of the family" in para. 28 is kutumbarthe. As to this word Shah, J., said

---

(m) Jagat Narain v. Mathura Das (1928) 50 All. 969, 116 I.C. 481, ('28) A.A. 454; Tula Ram v. Tulsi Ram (1920) 42 All. 539, 60 I.C. 3, ('20) A.A. 11; Mahabir Prasad v. Amla Prasad (1924) 46 All. 361, 70 I.C. 517, ('24) A.A. 379; Nagindas v. Mahomed (1922) 46 Bom. 312, 64 I.C. 923, ('22) A.B. 122; Bagho v. Zaga (1929) 53 Bom. 419, 118 I.C. 555, ('29) A.B. 251; Nagendranath v. Hemanta Kumari, I.L.R. (1956) Cuttack 433.

(*m*1) ('64) A.SC. 1385 [The Court may in a proper case grant specific performance of the interest of the Karta].

(n) (1917) 44 I.A. 147, 155, 40 Mad. 709, 718, 39 I.C. 722, ('17) A.PC. 33.

(o) Jagat Narain v. Mathura Das (1928) 50 All. 969, 116 I.C. 484, ('28) A.A. 454.

(p) Bhagwan Das v. Mahadeo (1923) 45 All. 390, 71 I.C. 950, ('23) A.A. 298; Shankar v. Bechu (1925) 47 All. 381, 86 I.C. 769, ('25) A.A. 333.

(q) Inspector Singh v. Kharak Singh (1928) 50 All. 776, 112 I.C. 881, ('28) A.A. 403.

in a Bombay case (r) that it must be interpreted with due regard to the conditions of modern life. In a later case (s), Patkar, J., said: "The explanation of the text of Brihaspati by Mitakshara [in v. 29] is by no means to be considered as exhaustive, and may be treated as illustrative and interpreted with due regard to the conditions of modern life."

We now turn to cases decided under the head "benefit to the estate". The manager of a joint family is not entitled to sell joint family land solely for the purpose of so investing the price of it as to bring in an income larger than that derived from the probably safer and certainly more stable property, that is the land itself. Such a sale is not "for the benefit of the estate" (t), nor is the manager entitled to sell land simply for the purpose of purchasing other land (*t*1). A mortgage of family property for the purpose solely of purchasing another property (u), or for the payment of premium for a lease of another property (v), is not for the benefit of the estate. But a sale of a house in a dilapidated condition, in respect of which a notice has been issued by the Municipality to pull it down, is for the benefit of the estate (w). Whether a transaction is beneficial to the estate must depend on the facts and circumstances of the particular case (x). A sale of joint family property which is inconveniently situated and is unproductive, the purchase-money being invested in another property which is a sound investment (y); or in family business (z), is for the benefit of the estate. A sale of such property will be upheld even if the price was subsequently lost to the family owing to the failure of the bank in which it was invested, provided the intention was to invest the price in another more productive immovable property which the manager could look after (a). Similarly a mortgage of family property for the payment of price for the purchase of a share in a village in which the family already possessed a share is for the benefit of the estate (b). A mortgage or sale, however, of family property for the purpose solely of pre-empting another property is not ordinarily for the benefit of the estate (c). A deed of exchange executed by a manager of the joint family with a view to defeat a suit for pre-emption, even though made for property of equal value, was held not to bind the other members of the family (d). But a mortgage for making additions to and improvements in the family house is for the benefit of the estate (e). A mortgage for the purpose of carrying on a speculative litigious suit is obviously not for the benefit of the estate (f). Nor is a mortgage for the purpose of repurchasing or acquiring mortgage rights in the estate of a separated brother (g). A mortgage by seven adult members of the family for acquiring proprietary interests the consolidation of which had the effect of converting them from mere tenants into landlords is for the benefit of the estate (h).

A gift by the manager of a joint family of a small portion of zamindari land purchased by him to a stranger with the object of defeating a claim for pre-emption was held to be a transaction for the benefit of the family and therefore binding on the family (i).

---

(r) Nagindas v. Mahomed (1922) 46 Bom. 312, 316, 64 I.C. 923, ('22) A.B. 122.

(s) Ragho v. Zaga (1929) 53 Bom. 419, 426, 118 I.C. 555, ('29) A.B. 251.

(t) Palaniappa v. Deivasikamony (1917) 44 I.A. 147, 156, 40 Mad. 709, 719, 39 I.C. 722, ('17) A.PC. 33; Vishnu v. Ramchandra (1923) 25 Bom. L.R. 508, 73 I.C. 1017, ('23) A.B. 453.

(*t*1) Nirmal Singh v. Satnam ('60) A. Raj. 313, 10 Raj. 999. Reference may also be made to Helava v. Sesigowda ('60) A. Mys. 231.

(u) Ram Bilas v. Ramyad (1920) 5 Pat. L.J. 622, 627, 58 I.C. 303, ('20) A.P. 441; Sellappa v. Suppan (1937) Mad. 906, 171 I.C. 216, ('37) A.M. 496; Ramkaran Thakur v. Baldeo Thakur (1938) 17 Pat. 168, 173 I.C. 292, ('38) A.P. 44.

(v) Manna Lal v. Karu Singh (1919) 1 Pat. L.T. 6, 39 Cal. L.J. 256, 56 I.C. 766, ('19) A.PC. 108.

(w) Nagindas v. Mahomed (1922) 46 Bom. 312, 64 I.C. 923, ('22) A.B. 122.

(x) Medikenduri v. Venkatayya ('53) A.M. 210; Sengoda v. Muthuvellappa ('55) A.M. 531; Sundarmani Devi v. Rupei Dei ('56) A. Orissa 16 (alienation by widow); Jagdish Prasad v. Shreedharpant ('55) A.A. 625; Radha Krishan v. Bhushan Lal ('71) J. & K. 62 (Repairs).

(y) Jado Singh v. Nathu Singh (1926) 48 All. 592, 98 I.C. 773, ('26) A.A. 511.

(z) Jagmohan v. Prag Ahir (1925) 47 All. 452, 87 I.C. 27, ('25) A.A. 618.

(a) Jagat Narain v. Mathura Das (1928) 50 All. 969, 116 I.C. 484, ('28) A.A. 454.

(b) Beni Madho v. Chander Prasad (1924) 3 Pat. 451, 83 I.C. 603, ('25) A.P. 189; Shaikh Jan v. Bikoo (1928) 7 Pat. 798, 116 I.C. 33, ('29) A.P. 130; Sital v. Ajablal Mander (1939) Pat. 306.

(c) Shankar v. Bechu (1925) 47 All. 381, 86 I.C. 769. ('25) A.A. 333; Kishen Sahai v. Raghunath (1929) 51 All. 473, 116 I.C. 488, ('29) A.A. 139; Amrej Singh v. Shambhu Singh (1933) 55 All. 1, 140 I.C. 509, ('32) A.A. 632; Brij Mohan Lal v. Sarabjit Singh (1938) 13 Luck. 597, 171 I.C. 286, ('37) A.O. 513.

(d) Balzor Singh v. Raghunandan Singh (1932) 54 All. 85, 137 I.C. 191, ('32) A.A. 548.

(e) Ratnam v. Govindarajulu (1878-1881) 2 Mad. 339, 341; Ramrichpal v. Bikaner Stores ('66) A. Raj. 187 (reconstruction of 'kucha' structure).

(f) Bhagwan Das v. Mahadeo (1923) 45 All. 390, 71 I.C. 959, ('23) A.A. 298.

(g) Hans Raj v. Khushal Singh (1933) 14 Lah. 162, 138 I.C. 642, ('32) A.L. 420.

(h) Baijnath Prasad v. Binda Prasad (1938) 17 Pat. 549, ('39) A.P. 97.

(i) Mohib Ali Khan v. Baldeo Prasad (1939) All. 305.

It is submitted that a transaction to be binding on the family must be one which not only confers a benefit upon the estate, but is necessary for its good management (j).

As to alienations by a widow for the benefit of the estate, see § 181B and the Orissa case cited in f.n. (x) above. As to alienations by a natural guardian for the benefit of the estate, see § 528.

244. Burden of proof of necessity.—Where the manager of a joint Hindu family sells or mortgages joint family property, the purchaser or mortgagee is bound to inquire into the necessity for the sale or mortgage, and the burden lies on the purchaser or mortgagee to prove either that there was a legal necessity in fact, or that he made proper and bona fide enquiry as to the existence of such necessity and did all that was reasonable to satisfy himself as to the existence of such necessity (k).

An intending mortgagee cannot escape the duty of inquiring into the legal necessity for a mortgage so as to bind the minor members of the joint family, by inducing the guardian to apply to the Court for permission to raise a loan on mortgage and thus attempting to throw the responsibility on the Court (l). In general, as the power of the manager is a limited power, it is for the mortgagee to show that the transaction was within the authority of the manager (m).

The existence of a necessary purpose is not the same as a legal necessity, for, there may be large resources, a large income making a loan unnecessary. The lender must show necessity for the loan (n).

If the purchaser or mortgagee proves that there was a legal necessity in fact, the alienation will be upheld, even though the necessity was brought about by the previous mismanagement of the manager, unless it be shown that the purchaser or mortgagee himself contributed to the mismanagement.

Even if he fails to prove that there was a necessity in fact, the alienation will be upheld, if he proves that he made such inquiry as aforesaid.

But a purchaser or mortgagee is not bound to see that the money paid or advanced by him is actually applied to meet the necessity. The reason is that he can rarely have the means of controlling and directing the actual application, unless he enters on the management himself (o).

It has been held in a Madras case (p) that though a lender who has made bona fide enquiries, is not bound to see to the application of the money, yet if he makes a case that he knew that the borrowing was for a specific purpose, and that the money was utilised for that purpose, it is incumbent upon him to prove his allegations.

Debts for family business.—As to burden of proof, see § 240(3).

---

(j) Hurry Mohun v. Gonesh Chunder (1884) 10 Cal. 823, 830 [F.B.]; Durgaprasad Barhai v. Jewdhari Singh (1935) 62 Cal. 733.

(k) Kesar Singh v. Santokh Singh (1936) 17 Lah. 824. As to the duty of the alienee see Venkata Chenchayya v. Ramalingam ('57) A. Andh. Pra. 744; Shivashankar v. Raghubansh ('67) A.P. 172 (alienation by limited owner); Kumaraswami v. Rajamanikkam ('66) A. Kerala 266.

(l) In re Dattatreya Govind Haldankar (1932) 56 Bom. 519, 141 I.C. 697, ('32) A.B. 537.

(m) Suraj Bakhsh Singh v. Kedar Nath (1932) 7 Luck. 505, 135 I.C. 379, ('32) A.O. 66.

(n) Ganpat Rao v. Ishwar Singh (1940) Nag. 20, ('38) A.N. 816; Babu Lal v. Satya Narain Prasad (1941) All. 680, 197 I.C. 509, ('41) A.A. 372.

(o) Anant Ram v. Collector of Etah (1918) 40 All. 171, 44 I.C. 290, ('17) A.PC. 188; Hunooman Persaud v. Mst. Babooee (1856) 6 M.I.A. 393; Soorendro v. Nundun (1874) 21 W.R. 196; Lala Bunseedhur v. Bindeseree (1866) 10 M.I.A. 454, 471; Dalibai v. Gopibai (1902) 26 Bom. 433; Kandhia Lal v. Muna Bibi (1898) 20 All. 135; Muddun Thakoor v. Kantoo Lall (1874) 14 Beng. L.R. 187, 199, 1 I.A. 321, 334; Tula Ram v. Tulshi Ram (1920) 42 All. 559, 60 I.C. 3, ('20) A.A. 11; Chintamani v. Satyabadi Kar (1922) 1 Pat. 715, 70 I.C. 226, ('23) A.P. 71; Baijnath v. Gokul (1923) 45 All. 718, 74 I.C. 498, ('24) A.A. 37; Rodha Ram v. Amar Chand (1923) 4 Lah. 208, 77 I.C. 333, ('24) A.L. 141; Bed Nath v. Rani Rajeshwari Devi (1938) 13 Luck. 357, 168 I.C. 725, ('37) A.O. 406; Lalta v. Avadh Naresh Singh (1940) 15 Luck. 68, 185 I.C. 443, ('40) A.O. 59; Dayaram v. Kashiram ('64) A.M.P. 286.

(p) Pethu Reddiar v. Kandaswami (1950) 1 M.L.J. 469, ('50) A.M. 560.

Alienation for purposes of family business.—See § 246 below.

Recital of necessity.—Recitals of legal necessity in mortgages or deeds of sale executed by the father or manager are admissible in evidence, but are not of themselves evidence of such a necessity without substantiation by evidence aliunde (r). They may be corroborated by representation made by the borrower (s). But the recitals are admissions of the manager and they also amount to a representation about the need of the family and where owing to the length of time it is impossible to produce other evidence they have evidentiary value also (t). (See cases under § 182).

Lapse of time.—See notes to § 182 under the same head.

Rate of interest.—Those who support a mortgage of joint family property made by its manager must prove not only that there was necessity to borrow the principal, but that it was not unreasonable to borrow at such rate of interest and upon such terms as are provided by the mortgage (u). If the rate of interest is exorbitantly high although the security is ample, the Court can properly infer that it was unnecessarily high, and can make a mortgage decree allowing a reduced rate (v). Upon a written statement alleging that there was no legal necessity to execute the document sued on, the defendant, while admitting the necessity to borrow the principal, can contend that the rate of interest was unnecessarily high. A plea of no legal necessity for a loan in the written statement opens the door for a defendant to say that the rate of interest is excessive though there is no specific plea in the written statement that there was no necessity to borrow at so high a rate of interest (w). The same rules apply to a mortgage by a Hindu widow or other limited owner of property inherited by her from the last full owner (x).

In two cases the Judicial Committee laid down that the authority of a manager to borrow in a case of necessity was one to borrow "upon reasonable commercial rates" (y). This expression means, as their Lordships observed in a later case, such terms as can be arranged freely between borrower and lender in the circumstances of the particular case; no reference to the current rate of interest upon mercantile transactions is to be understood, especially if the parties belong to a community which is not a commercial community and the transaction is one which no one would call mercantile. In the same case it was held that a previous borrowing upon terms as onerous as those in question may be evidence that those terms are reasonable and proper (z).

In Oudh 12 per cent per annum is looked upon as a normal rate of interest even where the security is abundant (a).

---

(r) Biswanath Singh v. Kayastha Trading Corporation (1929) 8 Pat. 450, 119 I.C. 405, ('29) A.P. 422; Bed Nath Singh v. Rani Rajeshwari Devi (1938) 13 Luck. 357, 168 I.C. 725, ('37) A.O. 206; Nagayya v. Chenganna ('57) A. Andh. Pra. 264.

(s) See Rani v. Santa Bala ('71) A.SC. 1028 referred to under § 182; Padam Singh v. Reoti Saram ('29) A.A. 481.

(t) Dwarka Ram v. Bakshi Parnaw Prasad (1935) 14 Pat. 595, 156 I.C. 859, ('35) A.P. 178. See also Murugesam v. Manickavasaka (1917) 44 I.A. 98. Reference may be made to M.B. Fund Ltd. v. Devarajulu ('55) A.M. 455; Sivarama v. Subramonia ('53) A. Tr. Co. 417.

(u) Jaipal Singh v. Lachman Singh (1934) 9 Luck. 657; Bajrang Singh v. Govind Prasad (1936) 11 Luck. 11, 154 I.C. 841, ('35) A.O. 373.

(v) Nazir Begam v. Rao Raghunath Singh (1919) 41 All. 571, 576, 46 I.A. 145, 149, 50 I.C. 434. ('19) A.PC. 12; Ram Bujhawan Prasad v. Nathu Ram (1923) 50 I.A. 14, 20-21, 2 Pat. 285, 290-291, 71 I.C. 933, ('23) A.PC. 37 [compound interest at 3 per cent per month payable with quarterly rests, reduced to simple interest at 1 per cent per month]; Radha Kishun v. Jag Sahu (1924) 51 I.A. 278, 4 Pat. 19, 80 I.C. 791, ('24) A.PC. 184; Sunder Mull v. Satya Kinker Sahana (1928) 55 I.A. 85, 7 Pat. 294, 108 I.C. 337, ('28) A.PC. 64 [interest and compound interest at 15 per cent per annum rate upheld]; Hurro Nath v. Randhir Singh (1891) 18 Cal. 311, 18 I.A. 1; Nand Ram v. Bhupal Singh (1912) 34 All. 126, 13 I.C. 5; Ram Khelawan v. Ram Naresh (1919) 41 All. 609, 51 I.C. 52, ('19) A.A. 268; Premukhdas v. Rambhujawan (1919) 1 Pat. L.T. 34, 52 I.C. 964, ('20) A.P. 678; Bhikhi v. Kodai (1919) 41 All. 523, 50 I.C. 814, ('19) A.A. 238; Mahadeo v. Bissessar (1923) 2 Pat. 488, 74 I.C. 695, ('24) A.P. 71; Parmeshwar v. Raj Kishore (1924) 3 Pat. 829, 80 I.C. 34, ('25) A.P. 59; Sukh Lal v. Murari Lal (1926) 1 Luck. 160, 95 I.C. 1019, ('26) A.O. 273; Durgaprasad v. Jewdhari Singh (1935) 62 Cal. 733 where 18 per cent compound interest with nine monthly rests was reduced to 18 per cent simple interest.

(w) Ram Bujhawan Prasad v. Nathu Ram (1923) 50 I.A. 14, 22, 2 Pat. 285, 287, 71 I.C. 933, ('23) A.PC. 37; Radha Kishun v. Jag Sahu (1924) 51 I.A. 278, 4 Pat. 19, 80 I.C. 791, ('24) A.PC. 184; Ram Dayal v. Amin Uddin (1931) 29 All. L.J. 29, 133 I.C. 311, ('31) A.A. 203.

(x) Radha Kishun v. Jag Sahu (1924) 51 I.A. 278, 4 Pat. 19, 80 I.C. 791, ('24) A.PC. 184; Ram Dayal v. Amin Uddin (1931) 29 All. L.J. 29, 133 I.C. 311, ('31) A.A. 203.

(y) Nazir Begam v. Rao Raghunath Singh (1919) 41 All. 571, 576, 46 I.A. 145, 149, 50 I.C. 434, ('19) A.PC. 12, (1924) 51 I.A. 278, 4 Pat. 19, 80 I.C. 791, ('24) A.PC. 184, supra.

(z) Sunder Mull v. Satya Kinker Sahana (1928) 55 I.A. 85, 7 Pat. 294, 108 I.C. 337, ('28) A.PC. 64.

(a) Suraj Bakhsh Singh v. Kedar Nath (1932) 7 Luck. 505, 135 I.C. 379, ('32) A.O. 66.

245. Purchase-money or money raised on mortgage applied by manager in part only to purposes of legal necessity.—(1) Sale.—Cases frequently arise in which joint family property is sold by the manager of the family for legal necessity, but the whole of the price is not proved to have been applied to purposes of necessity, and the sale is challenged on that ground by the other members of the family. In such cases, if the sale itself is justified by legal necessity, and the purchaser pays a fair price for the property sold, and acts in good faith and after due inquiry as to the necessity for the sale, the mere fact that part of the price is not proved to have been applied to purposes of necessity would not invalidate the sale, the purchaser not being bound to see to the application of the price. If the above conditions are satisfied, the sale must be upheld unconditionally, whether the part not proved to have been applied to purposes of necessity is considerable or not (b). In Radhakrishandas v. Kaluram (*b*1), the Supreme Court considered the leading decisions of the Privy Council on the subject and expressed agreement with them. See §189.

In an Allahabad case (c), where the sale was for Rs. 6,000 which was a fair price but the amount proved to have been applied for purposes of legal necessity was only Rs. 3,281, and there was no evidence of any inquiry having been made by the purchaser as to the necessity for the loan, it was held that the sale itself was not one which was justified by legal necessity, and that it should be set aside conditionally on payment by the plaintiffs of Rs. 3,281 to the purchaser.

A contract of sale may be justified by legal necessity, as where it is made for payment of a previous mortgage debt. But it may be improvident and therefore beyond the powers of the manager, as where he has entered into a previous agreement for a sale of part of the property and is therefore unable to complete the sale, and the purchaser is thereby placed in a position indefinitely to postpone completion of the purchase and payment of the price, so that the contract may be of no value to relieve the financial necessity existing at its date. In such a case, if the sale is completed at a time when it is deprived of all value as a solvent of the family's financial difficulties the sale should be set aside, but, if the purchase money has been applied by the manager in payment of the mortgage debt, the purchaser should have the full benefit of the mortgage. An example of the commonest kind where the sale would be deprived of all value as a solvent of the family's financial difficulties would be where the price at which the property is agreed to be sold is Rs. 22,500, and the mortgage debt at the date of the contract of sale is Rs. 14,000, but the sale is completed after several years, and the mortgage debt at the date of sale has augmented to a sum equivalent almost to the price of the property, so that at the date of the completion of the sale hardly any surplus is left to the vendor (d).

Although there may be legal necessity justifying alienation, it is not open to a father or other manager to sacrifice family property for an inadequate

---

(b) Krishan Das v. Nathu Ram (1927) 54 I.A. 79, 49 All. 149, 100 I.C. 130, ('27) A.PC. 37 [price Rs. 3,500—Rs. 500 not proved to have been applied to purposes of necessity—sale upheld unconditionally]; Niamat Rai v. Din Dayal (1927) 54 I.A. 211, 8 Lah. 597, 101 I.C. 373, ('27) A.PC. 121 [sale upheld unconditionally]; Masit Ullah v. Damodar Prasad (1926) 53 I.A. 204, 48 All. 518, 98 I.C. 1031, ('26) A.PC. 105 [price Rs. 18,400—Rs. 2,000 not proved to have been applied to purposes of necessity—sale upheld unconditionally]; Gauri Shankar v. Jiwan Singh (1928) 30 Bom. L.R. 64, 107 I.C. 4, ('27) A.PC. 246 [price Rs. 4,000—Rs. 500 not applied to purposes of necessity—sale upheld unconditionally]; Shyam Lal v. Badri Prasad (1929) 51 All. 1039, 122 I.C. 744, ('29) A.A. 789; Ram Sunder v. Lachhmi (1929) 51 All. 430, 160 I.C. 605, ('29) A.PC. 143 [price Rs. 10,767—Rs. 3,033 not proved to have been applied to purposes of necessity—sale upheld unconditionally]; Achutanand v. Surjanarain (1926) 5 Pat. 746, 95 I.C. 991, ('26) A.P. 427 [price Rs. 750—Rs. 200 not proved to have been applied, etc.—sale upheld unconditionally]; Suraj Bhan Singh v. Sah Chain Sukh (1927) 29 Bom. L.R. 1385 [P.C.], 105 I.C. 257, ('27) A.PC. 244 [sale by widow]; Murli v. Ghammar (1929) 51 All. 61, 121 I.C. 285, ('30) A.A. 22; Johnston v. Gopal Singh (1931) 12 Lah. 546, 133 I.C. 628, ('31) A.L. 419; Kalipada v. Purnabala (1948) 2 Cal. 485; Gobindkar v. Mohan (1949) A.O. 218.

(*b*1) ('67) A.S.C. 574.

(c) Sri Nath v. Jagannath (1931) 52 All. 891, 125 I.C. 230, ('30) A.A. 292. See also Lachhman Prasad v. Sarnam Singh (1917) 39 All. 500, 44 I.A. 163, 40 I.C. 284, ('17) A.PC. 41 [mortgage].

(d) Ram Charan v. Bhagwan Das (1926) 53 I.A. 142, 48 All. 443, 95 I.C. 898, ('25) A.PC. 68.

consideration. A transfer in such cases is liable to be set aside at the instance of other coparceners (e).

(2) Mortgage.—It has been held in Oudh that the rule stated in sub-§ (1) applies only to sales, and not to mortgages. The reason given is that it is not always possible for the father [or manager] of a family to sell that share of the property which will bring in the precise sum which is wanted to clear the debts which are binding, while in the case of a mortgage he can borrow the precise amount required to meet the family necessity. The mortgage therefore can be redeemed on payment to the mortgagee of such sum only as was required for legal necessity (f). The decision has been followed by the High Court of Patna (g). In a case where the mortgage was for Rs. 12,000 and it was found that there was justifiable necessity only for Rs. 7,700, the Calcutta High Court held that there was no bona fide inquiry and granted a decree only for the latter sum with the corresponding interest, at the same time observing that it was not necessary to express any opinion on the question discussed above (h).

Illustration of sub-§ (1)

A joint Hindu family consists of a father and his minor sons. The father sells one of the joint family properties for Rs. 3.500 out of which Rs. 3,000 are paid to the creditors of the family. Afterwards the sons sue to set aside the sale on the ground that the surplus of Rs. 500 was not applied to purposes of necessity: It is proved that the price was adequate and that the purchaser had made due inquiry as to the necessity for the sale. The mere fact that the surplus is not proved to have been applied to purposes of necessity is not a sufficient ground in law for setting aside the sale: Krishan Das v. Nathu Ram (1927) 54 I.A. 79, 49 All. 149, 100 I.C. 130, ('27) A.PC. 37. In this leading case on the subject the Privy Council disapproved of the view taken by the Allahabad High Court (i) and held that a sale of joint family property should not be set aside merely because a considerable part of the purchase money is not proved to have been applied to purposes of legal necessity. The real question to be considered is whether the sale itself was justified by legal necessity; if the purchaser has acted honestly and made due inquiry as to the existence of necessity for the sale, he is not bound to account for the application of the price. If the above conditions are fulfilled the sale must be upheld. It was also held that on the same principle a decree upholding a sale conditionally upon the purchaser paying a small part of the price not proved to have been applied to purposes of necessity is also contrary to law; the sale must be upheld unconditionally. In this case (l) the Judicial Committee adopted the principles laid down by the same tribunal in 1856 in Hunooman Persaud v. Musummat Babooee (m). Almost all the cases cited by the Judicial Committee in Krishan Das v. Nathu Ram, as supporting their decision, were cases of sales by a Hindu widow. The point emphasized in both the cases was that the validity of a sale in such cases did not depend upon proof of the application of the price. The reason is that a bona fide purchaser for value is not bound to see the application of the price paid by him; if it were otherwise, he would himself have to enter on the management and direct and control the actual application of the money. Hence it

---

(c) Kailash Nath v. Tulshi Ram (1946) All. 457; Dudh Nath v. Sat Narain Ram ('66) A.A. 315 (F.B.).

(f) Thakar Jai Indira v. Lala Khairati Lal (1929) 4 Luck. 107, 113 I.C. 489, ('28) A.O. 465.

(g) Dwarka Ram v. Bakshi Parnaw Prasad (1935) 14 Pat. 595, 156 I.C. 859, ('35) A.P. 178, distinguishing Hitendra v. Sukhdeb (1929) 8 Pat. 558, 115 I.C. 886, ('29) A.P. 360.

(h) Durgaprasad Barhai v. Jewdhari Singh (1935) 62 Cal. 733, 161 I.C. 595, ('36) A.C. 116.

(i) Gobind Singh v. Baldeo Singh (1903) 25 All. 330 [sale by widow—price Rs. 3,299—Rs. 376 not proved to have been applied to purposes of necessity]; Ram Dei v. Abu Jafar (1905) 27 All. 494 [sale by widow—price Rs. 2,995—Rs. 445 not proved, etc.]; Jainarayan v. Bhagwan (1922) 44 All. 683, 80 I.C. 1006, ('22) A.A. 321 [price Rs. 375—Rs. 101 not proved, etc.]; Dwarka Ram v. Jhulai (1923) 45 All. 429, 431, 72 I.C. 134, ('23) A.A. 248 [price Rs. 600—Rs. 200 not proved etc.]; Daulat v. Sankhata (1925) 47 All. 355, 86 I.C. 91, ('25) A.A. 324 [price Rs. 2,142—Rs. 105 not proved to have been applied to purposes of necessity]; Lal Bahadur v. Kamleshar (1926) 48 All. 183, 90, I.C. 988, ('25) A.A. 624 (F.B.) [price Rs. 5,995—Rs. 259 not proved to have been applied to purposes of necessity].

(l) (1927) 54 I.A. 79, 49 All. 149, 100 I.C. 130, ('27) A.PC. 37.

(m) (1856) 6 M.I.A. 393, 423-424.

has been held that the mere fact that a considerable part of the price, e.g., Rs. 712 out of Rs. 5,000 (n), or Rs. 2,000 out of Rs. 18,400 (o), or Rs. 5,100 out of Rs. 43,500 (p), or even one-third of the whole price (q), is not proved to have been applied to purposes of necessity, is not a sufficient ground in law for setting aside the sale.

The decision in Krishan Das v. Nathu Ram was followed by the same tribunal in Niamat Rai v. Din Dayal (r). In that case the managing member of a joint Hindu family sold part of the joint property for Rs. 43,500, which was the full value. Out of the price Rs. 38,400 was applied to discharge debts incurred in carrying on a business to which the joint family had succeeded and the balance was invested in that business. Two minor members of the family sued to set aside the sale on the ground that the surplus of Rs. 5,100 was not applied to purposes of necessity. It was held that even if there had been no joint family business, proof that pre-existing debts to the amount of Rs. 38,400 had been satisfied out of the price, would support the sale, without showing how the balance had been applied. See § 189 and notes.

246. Alienation by manager of coparcenary property for purposes of family business.—The power of a manager to carry on a family business necessarily implies a power to mortgage or sell the family property for a legitimate and proper purpose of the business. An alienation so made is binding on the family property, including the interest of minor coparceners therein (s). Further, the manager has authority to raise money not only to discharge debts arising out of the family business, but also money needed to carry it on. It is a matter for his decision whether the money necessary should be raised by mortgage or by a sale, and whether it was better to raise money to continue a business which latterly had not been profitable, or to close it down; it would be unreasonable to expect a lender or purchaser to investigate questions of that kind (t): If the lender or purchaser acted honestly and with due caution, and made reasonable inquiries which led him to believe that a sufficient and real necessity for the raising of the money for the purposes of the family business did exist (u), he is not bound to see to the application of the money (v).

Where the alienation was made by a manager who was blind and deaf and practically all the money which had been disallowed by the High Court had been borrowed by the fourth and fifth defendants, who were the eldest members of the family and the manager's right-hand men, their conduct in not giving evidence and remaining as defendants, while causing their sons to file the suit questioning the alienation, was held by their Lordships of the Privy Council to be strong corroborative evidence of legal necessity (w).

A mortgage by the manager for enlarging a family business by the purchase of fresh stocks is binding on the family property including the interest of the minor coparceners therein, provided the transaction is one which a prudent owner would enter into having regard to all the circumstances of the case (x).

---

(n) Medai Dalavoi v. Nainar Tavan (1922) 27 C.W.N. 365, 74 I.C. 604, ('22) A.PC. 307.

(o) Masit Ullah v. Damodar Prasad (1926) 53 I.A. 204, 48 All. 518, 98 I.C. 1031, ('26) A.PC. 105.

(p) Niamat Rai v. Din Dayal (1927) 54 I.A. 211, 8 Lah. 597, 101 I.C. 373, ('27) A.PC. 121.

(q) Ram Gopal Ghose v. Bullodev Bose (1864) W.R. 385.

(r) 54 I.A. 211, 8 Lah. 597, 101 I.C. 373, ('27) A.PC. 121, supra.

(s) Ram Krishna v. Ratan Chand (1931) 58 I.A. 173, 53 All. 190, 132 I.C. 613, ('31) A.PC. 136; Ramlal v. Lakhmichand (1861) 1 Bom. H.C. App. li; Sham Sundar v. Achhan Kunwar (1899) 21 All. 71, 83, 25 I.A. 183, 192; Khem Chand v. Narain Das (1925) 6 Lah. 493, 89 I.C. 1022, ('26) A.L. 41; Mahabir Prasad v. Amla Prasad (1924) 46 All. 364, 79 I.C. 517, ('24) A.A. 379; Narayanan v. Muthiah (1924) 47 Mad. 692, 80 I.C. 654, ('24) A.M. 680; Palanippa v. A. & F. Harvey Ltd. ('53) A. Tr. Co. 481.

(t) Niamat Rai v. Din Dayal (1927) 54 I.A. 211, 8 Lah. 597, 101 I.C. 373, ('27) A.PC. 121.

(u) Ram Nath v. Chiranji Lal (1935) 57 All. 605 (F.B.), 155 I.C. 136, ('35) A.A. 221.

(v) Ram Krishna v. Ratan Chand (1931) 58 I.A. 173, 53 All. 190, 132 I.C. 613, ('31) A.PC. 136.

(w) Jagannath v. Shri Nath (1934) 56 All. 123, 61 I.A. 150, 147 I.C. 903, ('34) A.PC. 55.

(x) Raj Kumar v. Mohan Lal (1931) 29 All. L.J. 219, 131 I.C. 872, ('31) A.A. 253.

A manager in executing a mortgage for a legal necessity may, under section 69, Transfer of Property Act, confer, on the mortgagee, the right of sale without recourse to the court (y).

As to new business, see § 234(2).

247. Reference to arbitration by manager.—A father (z) or other manager has power to refer to arbitration disputes relating to joint family property provided such reference is for the benefit of the family. The other members of the family including minors are bound by the reference and by the award made upon it (a).

The reference may be in respect of disputes between the family and an outsider or disputes between members of the family themselves, e.g., as to shares on partition.

248. Compromise by manager.—A compromise entered into by the manager bona fide for the benefit of the family, binds the other members of the family including minors (b).

But where a suit relating to joint family property, to which a father and his minor sons are parties, is pending and the father himself is the next friend or guardian ad litem of the minors, his powers are controlled by the provisions of O. 32, r. 7, of Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, and he is debarred from entering into any compromise relating to the joint family property without leave of the Court. The minors are not bound in such a case either by the compromise or by a consent decree in terms of the compromise (c). The Court may in such a case set aside the whole compromise (d). A manager of a joint family is subject to O. 32, rr. 6 & 7, Civil Procedure Code (e).

248A. Manager's power to give valid discharge for debts.—The manager has power to give a valid discharge for a debt due to the joint family. Hence if one of the members is a minor, he cannot claim the benefit of sec. 7 of the Limitation Act, 1908 (f).

248B. Family Arrangement or Family Settlement.—In §§ 192 and 193 the subject of Family Arrangement and compromise by a widow has been dealt with. Family Arrangement or Family Settlement as it is sometimes termed, generally meets with approval of the Court and the Court always leans in favour of a transaction relating to any such arrangement which ensures peace and goodwill among the family members. This does not rest on any special rule of Hindu law but flows from general principles and policy of law. Though conflict of legal claims in praesenti or in futuro is generally regarded as a condition for the validity of a family arrangement it is not necessarily so. Even bona fide dispute, present or possible, which may not involve future

---

(y) Paramanand Doss Chota Doss & Sons v. Nannulal Kanji & Ors. (1942) Mad. 287, 201 I.C. 62, ('42) A.M. 232.

(z) Shantilal v. Munshilal (1932) 56 Bom. 595, 139 I.C. 820, ('32) A.B. 498.

(a) Jagan Nath v. Mannu Lal (1894) 16 All. 231; Balaji v. Nana (1903) 27 Bom. 287; Dwarka Das v. Krishan (1921) 2 Lah. 114, 121-124, 61 I.C. 628, ('21) A.L. 34; Guran Ditta v. Pokhar Ram (1927) 8 Lah. 693, 104 I.C. 202, ('27) A.L. 362; Nanak Chand v. Banarsi Das (1931) 12 Lah. 65, 126 I.C. 579, ('30) A.L. 425; Kanshi Ram v. Harnam Das (1940) 21 Lah. 599, 188 I.C. 493, ('40) A.L. 73.

(b) Pitam Singh v. Ujagar Singh (1878) 1 All. 651; Dwarka Das v. Krishan (1921) 2 Lah. 114, 123-124, 61 I.C. 628, ('21) A.L. 34; Dangal Ram v. Jaimangal (1926) 5 Pat. 480, 95 I.C. 1051, ('26) A.P. 361; Bhagwan Singh v. Beharilal (1938) Nag. 221, 172 I.C. 43, ('37) A.N. 237.

(c) Ganesh Row v. Tuljaram Row (1913) 40 I.A. 132, 36 Mad. 295, 19 I.C. 515.

(d) Venkata Row v. Tuljaram Row (1922) 49 I.A. 91, 45 Mad. 298, 74 I.C. 765, ('22) A.PC. 69 [continuation of litigation in 40 I.A. 132, 19 I.C. 515, supra].

(e) Fatmabi v. Tukabai (1945) Nag. 242.

(f) Rati Ram v. Niadar (1919) 41 All. 435, 49 I.C. 990, ('19) A.A. 209; Bapu v. Bala (1921) 45 Bom. 446, 59 I.C. 759 ('21) A.B. 289; Supdu v. Sakharam (1928) 52 Bom. 441, 110 I.C. 276, ('29) A.B. 13; Varada Bhaktavatsaluda v. Damojipurapu Venkata Narasimha Rao (1940) Mad. 752, 191 I.C. 369, ('40) A.M. 530.

claims will suffice. Members of a joint Hindu family may, to maintain peace or to bring about harmony in the family, enter into such a family arrangement (*f*1). The transaction is not the creation of an interest. In such an arrangement, ordinarily, each party takes a share or interest in the property by virtue of the independent title which is admitted to that extent by the other parties. But every party who takes benefit under it need not necessarily be shown to have, under the law, a claim to a share in the property. All that is necessary to show is that the parties are related to each other in some way and have a possible claim or even a semblance of a claim or some other ground as, say affection (*f*2). Also see § 192.

Family arrangement as such can be arrived at orally. Its terms may be recorded in writing as a memorandum of what was agreed upon between the parties. The document which contains the arrangement does not require registration unless, by itself it creates interest in immovable property. A memorandum is usually prepared as a record of what had been agreed upon so that there be no hazy notions about it in future. It is only when the parties reduce the family arrangement in writing with the purpose of using that writing as proof of what they had arranged and, where the arrangement is brought about by the document as such, that the document would require registration (*f*3).

For family arrangement of the nature of a partition created by "will", reference may be made to § 345 post and the undermentioned case (*f*4) and the decisions there cited.

249. Acknowledgment and part payment of debt by manager.—It is competent to a manager to acknowledge a debt, or to pay interest on a debt, or to make part payment of a debt, so as to extend the period of limitation, but he has no power to pass a promissory note so as to revive a debt barred by the law of limitation (g). But he can renew a note, the time for filing a suit on which expired during the summer recess of a court and the suit could therefore be filed on the reopening day (h).

A manager or a member cannot keep a debt alive against the other members of the family by making payment after partition (i). Also see § 234A.

Now see sections 18 and 19 of the new Limitation Act, 1963.

It was expressly provided by sec. 21(3)(b) of the old Indian Limitation Act, 1908 that for the purposes of secs. 19 and 20 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, where a liability had been incurred by or on behalf of a Hindu undivided family as such, an acknowledgment or payment made by, or by the duly authorized agent of, the manager of the family for the time being should be deemed to have been made on behalf of the whole family. Section 19 of the Limitation Act, 1908, dealt with acknowledgments, and sec. 20 with payment of interest as such on a debt and with part payment of principal.

---

(*f*1) Pullaiah v. Narasimham ('66) A.S.C. 1836; Ram Charan v. Girja Nandini ('66) A.SC. 323; Tek Bahadur v. Debi Singh ('66) A.S.C. 292 (compromise by parties in an earlier suit and decree). Reference may be made to Shanmugam Pillai v. K. Shanmugam Pillai ('72) A.S.C. 2069. Also see cases cited under §§ 192, 193 above, Also see Sant Bhushan Lal v. Brij Bhushan Lal ('67) A. Delhi 137 (compromise in partition suit by next friend of minor); Manu Biswal v. Lata Biswalani ('65) A. Orissa 13 (compromise in partition suit by manager of a branch); Mania v. Dep. Director Consolidation ('71) A.A. 151; Jokhan v. Ram Deo ('67) A.A. 212; Laxmi Narayan v. Banshi Lal ('65) A.A. 522.

(*f*2) Ram Charan v. Girja Nandini ('66) A.S.C. 323.

(*f*3) Ram Charan supra; Pullaiah v. Narasimham supra.

(*f*4) Kuppuswami v. Perumal ('64) A.M. 291.

(g) Bhaskar v. Vijalal (1893) 17 Bom. 512; Dinkar v. Appaji (1896) 20 Bom. 155; Chinnaya v. Gurunatham (1882) 5 Mad. 169; Dalip Singh v. Kundan Lal (1913) 35 All. 207, 18 I.C. 726; Sadhu Saran v. Brahmdeo (1921) 6 Pat. L.J. 256, 260-261, 61 I.C. 20, ('21) A.P. 299; Thakar Das v. Mst. Putli (1924) 5 Lah. 317, 82 I.C. 96, ('24) A.L. 611; Nagarmal v. Bajranglal (1950) A.PC. 15; Dasappa Setty v. Vedavathamma ('72) A. Mys. 283.

(h) Subba Reddi v. Venkataramayya (1945) Mad. 634.

(i) Pangudaya v. Uthandiya (1938) Mad. 968, 177 I.C. 188, ('38) A.M. 774; Rengaswami Ayyangar v. Sivaprakasam Pillai & Ors. (1942) Mad. 251, 198 I.C. 177, ('41) A.M. 925.

Revival of time-barred debt.—As to revival of a time-barred debt by passing a promissory note, see the Indian Contract Act, 1872, s. 25(3). If the manager revives a time-barred debt by passing a promissory note he alone is liable on the note (j).

Admissions by father.—"In the case of a Mitakshara father who is the karta, an implied authority to make an admission for the benefit of his minor sons may very well be presumed" (k).

250. Relinquishment of debt by manager.—The manager has no power to give up a debt due to the joint family (l).

251. Parties to suits.—(1) Where the manager of a joint family, having power to do so, enters into a transaction in his own name on behalf of the family, whether it be a contract (m), or a mortgage (n), or a sale (o), he may sue or be sued alone in respect of that transaction. Where the mortgage by the manager extends to the entire interest of the family and is not confined to the manager's share he must be deemed to have acted in the transaction on behalf of the family (p). The other coparceners are not necessary parties to a suit on such a mortgage, as they are effectually represented by him (q) and are bound by the decree in the suit (r). But a member who contends that the action of the manager was beyond his powers is not properly represented by the manager and ought to be joined as a party if he wishes (s).

The above proposition is based upon two decisions of the Privy Council set out in illustrations (1) and (2) below.

Illustrations

(1) A and B are managers of a joint family which carries on the business of money-lenders. As such managers they advance moneys belonging to the joint family to C. A

---

(j) Thakar Das v. Mst. Putli (1924) 5 Lah. 317, 82 I.C. 96, ('24) A.L. 611.

(k) Surendra Nath v. Sambhunath (1928) 55 Cal. 210, 218, 104 I.C. 219, ('27) A.C. 870.

(l) Dasaratharama v. Narasa (1928) 51 Mad. 484, 109 I.C. 329, ('28) A.M. 601.

(m) Kishan Prasad v. Har Narain Singh (1911) 38 I.A. 45, 33 All. 272, 9 I.C. 739, reversing 29 All. 311 [money lending transaction]; Ramnath v. Ramrao (1922) 46 Bom. 358, 64 I.C. 966, ('22) A.B. 281 [promissory note]; Gangaram v. Bapusaheb (1922) 46 Bom. 1022, 84 I.C. 508 ('22) A.B. 354 [rent-note]; Jagabhai v. Rustamji (1885) 9 Bom. 311 [partnership agreement between manager and stranger to family]; Anant Ram v. Channu Lall (1903) 25 All. 378 [partnership between manager and stranger to family]; Gopal Das v. Badri Nath (1905) 27 All. 361 [goods sold and delivered]; Durga Prasad v. Damodar Das (1910) 32 All. 183, 5 I.C. 767 [purchase of silver bars]; Ram Kishan v. Ganga Ram (1931) 12 Lah. 428, 133 I.C. 116, ('31) A.L. 559. The decision to the contrary in Seshan v. Veera (1909) 32 Mad. 284, 4 I.C. 38 [account stated], and Shamrathi v. Kishan (1907) 29 All. 311, 314 [account stated], are no longer good law. The decision in Alagappa v. Vellian Chetti (1895) 18 Mad. 33 [contract of employment], may be supported on the ground that the single plaintiff in that suit was not shown to be the manager—see 38 I.A. 45, 53, 33 All. 272, 278, 9 I.C. 739.

(n) Sheo Shankar v. Jaddo Kunwar (1914) 41 I.A. 216, 220, 36 All. 383, 386-387, 24 I.C. 501, ('14) A.PC. 136 affmg. 33 All. 71, 7 I.C. 902 [a case under Transfer of Property Act, s. 85]; Hori Lal v. Munman Kunwar (1912) 34 All. 549, 15 I.C. 126 [a case under C.P.C. O. 34, r. 1]; Madan Lal v. Kishan Singh (1912) 34 All. 572, 15 I.C. 138 [ditto]; Ramkrishna v. Vinayak (1910) 34 Bom. 354, 5 I.C. 967 [Transfer of Property Act, s. 85]; Chimna v. Sada (1910) 12 Bom. L.R. 811, 7 I.C. 990 [ditto]; Sheik Ibrahim v. Rama Iyer (1912) 35 Mad. 685, 5 I.C. 967; Raghunandan v. Parmeshwar (1917) 2 Pat. L.J. 306, 39 I.C. 779, ('17) A.P. 375 [a case under C.P.C., O. 34, r. 1]; Jag Sah v. Ram Chandra (1921) 6 Pat. L.J. 640, 63 I.C. 564, ('21) A.P. 377 [ditto]; Sheikh Abdul v. Shib Lal (1921) 6 Pat. L.J. 650, 63 I.C. 570, ('22) A.P. 252; Bungsee v. Soodist Lall (1882) 7 Cal. 739; Ramayya v. Venkataratnam (1894) 17 Mad. 122; Pirthipal v. Rameshwar (1927) 2 Luck. 288, 99 I.C. 154, ('27) A.O. 27 [foreclosure suit—O. 34 r. 1]; Madhusudan v. Bhagwan (1929) 53 Bom. 444, 118 I.C. 788, ('29) A.B. 213. The decisions to the contrary in Debi Prosad v. Dharamjit (1914) 41 Cal. 727, 22 I.C. 570, ('14) A.C. 455, and Ramchandra v. Shripatrao (1916) 40 Bom. 248, 33 I.C. 771, ('16) A.B. 278, can no longer be upheld.

(o) (1914) 41 I.A. 216, 36 All. 383, 24 I.C. 504, ('14) A.PC. 136, supra [purchase of equity of redemption], supra.

(p) Daulat Ram v. Mehr Chand (1888) 15 Cal. 70, 14 I.A. 187; Ramanathan Chettiar v. S. Rm. M. Ct. M. Firm (1937) Mad. 376, 168 I.C. 731, ('37) A.M. 345.

(q) Venkatanarayana v. Somaraju (1937) Mad. 880 (F.B.), 171 I.C. 101, ('37) A.M. 610.

(r) Ramnathan Chettiar v. S. Rm. M. Ct. M. Firm (1937) Mad. 376, 168 I.C. 731, ('37) A.M. 345; Bhagwan Singh v. Beharilal (1938) Nag. 221, 172 I.C. 43, ('37) A.N. 237; Buthawan v. Hanuman ('53) A.P. 173.

(s) Motiram v. Lalchand (1937) Nag. 366, 172 I.C. 192, ('37) A.N. 121.

and B are entitled to sue C on an acknowledgment passed to them by C in respect of the money dealings. The other coparceners are not necessary parties to the suit. Accordingly the joinder of the other coparceners as plaintiffs after the statutory period has expired being unnecessary, does not prevent the suit as originally constituted from being in time: Kishan Parsad v. Har Narain Singh (1911) 38 I.A. 45, 33 All. 272, 9 I.C. 739. But after partition the position of the members is that of partners and all must sue (t).

(2) M mortgages two immovable properties to J. He then borrows moneys from H and D, the managing members of a joint Hindu family, and executes a second mortgage of one of the properties to them. He also sells the equity of redemption of the other property to H and D, and executes a sale-deed in their favour. J sues M, H and D on his mortgage, and obtains a foreclosure decree against them. The other members of the joint family are not parties to the suit. H and D do not avail themselves of the right to redeem, and the decree is made absolute. The decree is binding on the other members of the family, and they are not entitled to sue J for redemption: Sheo Shankar v. Jaddo Kunwar (1914) 41 I.A. 216, 220, 36 All 383, 24 I.C. 504, ('14) A.PC. 136. In the course of the judgment their Lordships of the Privy Council said:—

"There seems to be no doubt upon the Indian decisions (from which their Lordships see no reason to dissent) that there are occasions including foreclosure suits when the managers of a joint Hindu family so effectively represent all other members of the family that the family as a whole is bound. It is quite clear from the facts of this case and the findings of the Courts upon them that this is a case where this principle ought to be applied. There is not the slightest ground for suggesting that the managers of the joint family did not act in every way in the interests of the family itself."

It is not necessary that the manager, either when he sues or is sued, should be described as such in the pleadings. But it is always advisable to do so. In a suit by the manager, where it is necessary in order to safeguard the interest of the defendants, to implead the other members of the family, the defendants may apply to bring them on record (u).

(2) Where a transaction purports to have been entered into by two or more persons described as kartas or managers of the joint family, they must all join as plaintiffs in the suit (v). But it is not necessary that all the members of the family must join in the suit (w). Reference may be made to the undermentioned decision of the Supreme Court referred to under § 236 (*w*1).

(3) Even if the suit be one on a contract which is not in writing signed by the manager, the manager may sue alone as representing the family (x).

(4) There is a conflict of opinion whether, as regards immovable property belonging to a joint family, the manager is entitled as such to bring a suit to establish a right in respect of such property without making the other members of the family parties to the suit, it being held in some cases that he is (y), and in others that he is not (a). It would seem from a Privy Council decision that he is (b). [See sub-§ (5) below].

---

(t) Bihari Lal v. Pt. Ram Chandra Sharma (1942) 17 Luck. 702, 200 I.C. 172, ('42) A.O. 335.

(u) Madhgouda Babaji v. Halappa Balappa (1934) 58 Bom. 348, 151 I.C. 370, ('34) A.B. 178, but see Lilabati v. Guruprosad ('47) A.C. 259.

(v) Ramsebuk v. Ramlall (1881) 6 Cal. 815; Imam-ud-din v. Liladhar (1892) 14 All. 524, both explained in 38 I.A. 45, 52, 33 All. 272, 277-278, 9 I.C. 739.

(w) Gendalal v. Nanalal ('56) A.M.B. 58.

(*w*1) Union of India v. Shree Ram ('65) A.SC. 1531.

(x) Bhola Koy v. Jung Bahadur (1914) 19 Cal. L.J. 5, 93, 22 I.C. 798, ('14) A.C. 681 [suit for rent]

(y) Arunachala v. Vythialinga (1883) 6 Mad. 27 [right to drain water of plaintiff's village through defendant's village]; Md. Sadik v. Khedan Lall (1916) 1 Pat. L.J. 154, 36 I.C. 197, ('16) A.P. 251 [suit to eject trespasser].

(a) Kattusheri v. Vallotil (1881) 3 Mad. 234 [against lessees for possession]; Balkrishna v. Municipality of Mahad (1886) 10 Bom. 32 [to remove encroachment—suit by a coparcener]; Hari Gopal v. Gokaldas (1888) 12 Bom. 158 [suit in ejectment]; Balkrishna v. Moro Krishna (1897) 21 Bom. 154 [suit in ejectment]; Kashinath v. Chimanaji (1906) 30 Bom. 477 [declaration of right to immovable property]; Angamuthu v. Kolandavelu (1900) 23 Mad. 190 [ditto].

(b) Lingangowda v Basangowda (1927) 54 I.A. 122, 51 Bom. 450, 101 I.C. 44, ('27) A.PC. 56. Reference may also be made to (1911) 38 I.A. 45, 33 All. 272.

The sons are not necessary parties to a suit brought against the father for possession of joint family property sold by him (f). A decree in a suit would bind all the members of a joint family even though some only were parties, if the interest of those who are not parties are sufficiently and substantially represented by the others and if the common title of all is affected (g).

As to suits on mortgage, see the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, O. 34, r. 1.

(5) It seems that the manager of a joint Hindu family may sue or be sued as representing the family in respect of a transaction entered into by him as manager of the family or in respect of joint family property, and that a decree passed against him in such a suit would bind all other members of the family if, as regards minors, he acted in the litigation in their interest (h), and, as regards adults, with their consent. The consent need not be express; it will be implied if they do not come and apply to be joined as parties to the suit (i), but not if they applied to be made parties in order to contest the manager's action (j). The fact that besides the manager who is sued as such, some other members of the family also are added as parties will not render the suit defective simply on the ground that some other minor member has not been joined. The suit can still be a representative suit (k).

In Lingangowda v. Basangowda (l), their Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows:—"In the case of a Hindu family where all have rights, it is impossible to allow each member of the family to litigate the same point over and over again, and each infant to wait till he becomes of age, and then bring an action, or bring an action by his guardian before; and in each of these cases, therefore, the Court looks to Explanation 6 of sec. 11 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, to see whether or not the leading member of the family has been acting either on behalf of minors in their interest, or if they are majors, with the assent of the majors." There is no right in a minor or an adult member of the family to bring a suit to set aside a decree passed against the manager on the ground that he acted with gross negligence in the conduct of the suit (m).

Where a right to bring a suit was possessed by a father and other members then living and persons who were born later had also acquired the right before the right is barred by limitation the right will continue up to 3 years after majority of the youngest of the sons (n).

(6) A coparcener, who is not the managing member, is not entitled to sue alone as representing the family.

In Alagappa v. Vellian (o) the plaintiff who was a member of a joint family entered into a contract with the defendant in his own name, whereby he appointed the defendant as manager of the family business in Moulmein. The plaintiff sued the defendant for damages for breach of the contract of service. The Madras Court held that the plaintiff alone was not entitled to sue. As to this case their Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows in Kishan Prasad v. Har Narain Singh (p)—

"The decision in the case of Alagappa v. Vellian cited by the respondents may be supported on the ground that the single plaintiff in that case was not shewn to be the managing member of the family or to be the only partner or proprietor of the business with which the litigation was concerned. Their Lordships think, however, that the proposition there laid down to the effect that the manager cannot sue without joining all those interested with him, if literally construed goes too far."

---

(f) Guran Ditta v. Pokhar Ram (1927) 8 Lah. 693, 104 I.C. 202, ('27) A.L. 362.

(g) Kishan Lal v. Ram Chandar, I.L.R. (1944) All. 338.

(h) Venkatanarayana v. Somaraju (1937) Mad. 880 (F.B.) 171 I.C. 101, ('37) A.M. 610. See Budaraju Venkatarathna v. Venkata Subbaiah (1950) A.M. 136; Shankarrao v. Vinayak (1950) Nag. 806; Ishar Singh v. Gajadhar Prosad ('57) A.P. 174.

(i) See Guravayya v. Dattatraya (1904) 28 Bom. 11.

(j) Motiram v. Lalchand (1937) Nag. 366, 172 I.C. 192, ('37) A.N. 121.

(k) Jaigobind v. Nagesar ('53) A.P. 326.

(l) (1927) 54 I.A. 122, 125, 51 Bom. 450, 453, 101 I.C. 44, ('27) A.PC. 56.

(m) Krishnamurti v. Chidambaram (1946) Mad. 670.

(n) Avdesh Kumar v. Zakaul Hasnain (1944) All. 612.

(o) (1895) 18 Mad. 33.

(p) (1911) 38 I.A. 45, 53, 33 All. 272, 278, 9 I.C. 739.

Where a promissory note was taken by a father, the son cannot sue on it during the father's life-time without proof of renunciation by the father amounting to civil death (q). A suit was filed by all the members of the joint family on a promissory note executed in favour of one of the members. The defendant denied that the family was joint and contended that the suit was not maintainable. The court held (1) that the family was joint; (2) the suit should be allowed to proceed by an appropriate amendment of the description of the plaintiffs and (3) in any event the suit was maintainable (r).

(7) Where a joint family carries on a business, the members of the family who are minors and who are not shown to have been admitted into the trading firm or to have taken any part in the business or exercised any control therein, need not be joined as plaintiffs in a suit to recover moneys due to the family trading firm (s).

(8) Death of manager.—On the death of the manager pending a suit or appeal to which he is a party as representing the joint family, the coparcener succeeding him as manager may be brought on the record, and the suit or appeal proceeded with. It is not necessary to bring his sons on the record (t). Where one manager obtained a decree and, after realising a portion of the amount, disappeared, the next manager of the family is entitled to be brought on the record for the purpose of continuing the execution proceedings (u).

(9) Where a promissory note is taken by a manager but by a subsequent arrangement between the coparceners he becomes entitled only to a portion of the amount due under it, he can recover only this share (v). To such a suit the other sharers must be joined as parties.

(10) As to suits on promissory notes signed by the manager alone, see § 240 (4).

Illustrations

(1) L and R two brothers, constitute a joint family. The joint family carries on business as money-lenders in the name of R.C. S borrows moneys from time to time from the firm. Then R dies leaving a minor son. After R's death there are further dealings between the firm and S. An account of the dealings is made up, and S passes a promissory note to the firm of R.C. for Rs. 12,000. L, the surviving brother, sues S upon the note. L had three minor sons at the date of the suit, and one was born to him after the institution of the suit. It is not proved that either the minor son of R or the minor sons of L were admitted into the family firm. None of them is a necessary party to the suit: Lutchmanen v. Siva (1899) 26 Cal. 349, 355 Sale, J., said: "Decrees obtained in such suits by or against the managers of the business will be presumed to have been obtained by or against them in their representative capacity, and will be binding on the whole joint family."

(2) If in the case put above L and R were both dead at the date of the suit, all the sons of L and R must be joined as plaintiffs to the suit: Kalidas v. Nathu (1883) 7 Bom. 217.

252. Adding new plaintiff and limitation.—Where coparceners who ought to have been joined as plaintiffs to a suit are not made parties to the suit, the Court may order that they be added as parties. But if the suit as

---

(q) Krishnaji v. Hanmaraddi (1934) 58 Bom. 536, 153 I.C. 800, ('34) A.B. 385.

(r) Chaudhri Atma Ram v. Umar Ali (1941) Lah. 39, 190 I.C. 78, ('40) A.L. 256.

(s) Lutchmanen v. Siva (1899) 26 Cal. 349; Anant Ram v. Channu Lal (1903) 25 All. 378; Lalji v. Keshowji (1913) 37 Bom. 340, 17 I.C. 193.

(t) Atma Ram v. Banku Mal (1930) 11 Lah. 598, 125 I.C. 369, ('30) A.L. 561; Ganeshram v. Mangilal (1953) Nag. 248, ('52) A.N. 390. Reference may also be made to Kedarnath v. Khaitan Sons & Co. ('59) A.C. 368.

(u) Narain Sarup v. Daya Shankar (1938) All. 425, 175 I.C. 390, ('38) A.A. 256.

(v) Gopalu Pillai v. Kothandarama Ayyar (1934) 57 Mad. 1082, 153 I.C. 916, ('34) A.M. 529.

regards them would then be barred by limitation, the whole suit must be dismissed as time-barred (w).

It has been held by the High Court of Bombay, that where a suit is brought by the manager of a joint family as representing the family (in that case the suit was for recovery of possession of family property) the question of the right of a manager to sue in that capacity is rather one of authority, if the other co-sharers are adults, and that the right to insist on the other coparceners being brought on the record is for the benefit of the defendant so as to insure himself against further litigation and is therefore dependent on the objection being taken at an early stage, the objection on the score of want of authorization being one of a character which it would clearly be open to the defendant to waive. If the defendant takes objection to non-joinder of parties at a late stage of the suit, the objection may be disregarded and the suit proceeded with (x). The same view has been taken by the High Court of Allahabad (y). The High Court of Calcutta has held, purporting to follow the Bombay decision, that the addition even of a minor coparcener after the expiry of the period of limitation as plaintiff to a suit on a mortgage is not fatal to the suit (a).

Now see section 21 of the new Limitation Act, 1963.

Illustration

A and B are members of a joint family which owns a house in Bombay. A alleging that C is in wrongful occupation of the house, alone sues C to recover possession of the house. The suit is instituted on January 1, 1911. The last date for instituting the suit is August 15, 1911. The suit comes on for hearing on 1st September 1911. C contends at the hearing that B is a necessary party to the suit. Here B is obviously a necessary party to the suit, and if he were to be added as a plaintiff the suit as regards him would be deemed to have been instituted on that date [the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, sec. 22], and this would clearly be after the expiration of the period of limitation for instituting the suit. The suit must therefore be dismissed. But if A was the manager and B was an adult at the date of the suit the Court could direct B to be joined as a plaintiff even after the expiry of the statutory period unless C objected to B's non-joinder at an early stage of the proceedings: Guravayya v. Dattatraya (1904) 28 Bom. 11.

It will be seen from what is stated above that the question as to who should be joined as plaintiffs, dealt with in the preceding section is important because of the provisions of sec. 22 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908.

253. Decree against manager and res judicata.—A decree passed against the manager of a joint family as representing the family for a debt contracted by him for family necessities, or for the family business, or in respect of family properties, operates as res judicata under the Code of Civil Procedure, sec. 11, Explanation 6, and is binding upon all members of the family including minors, and it may be executed against the whole coparcenary property,

---

(w) Kalidas v. Nathu (1883) 7 Bom. 217; Ramsebuk v. Ram Lall (1881) 6 Cal. 815; Seshan v. Veera (1909) 32 Mad. 284, 4 I.C. 38; Girwar v. Makbunessa (1916) 1 Pat. L.J. 468, 36 I.C. 542, ('16) A.P. 310 [Limitation Act, 1908, s. 22].

(x) Guravayya v. Dattatraya (1904) 28 Bom. 11 [suit for possession of land], following Hari Gopal v. Gokaldas (1888) 12 Bom. 158. Also see Devidas v. Shrishailappa ('61) A.SC. 1277.

(y) Pateshri v. Rudra Narain (1904) 26 All. 528 [suit for possession], s.c. on app. to P.C. sub-nominee Imdad Ahmad v. Pateshri (1910) 37 I.A. 60, 52 All. 241, 6 I.C. 981. See also Chetan Singh v. Sartaj Singh (1924) 46 All. 709, 79 I.C. 1001, ('24) A.A. 908.

(a) Thakur Mani v. Dai Rani (1906) 33 Cal. 1079, 1093.

although the other members were not parties to the suit (b). It is otherwise, if the decree is against the manager personally. A decree, even for a family debt, passed against the manager personally, cannot be executed against the whole coparcenary property; it can be executed only against his interest in the property (c).

It is not necessary, in order that a decree against the manager may operate as res judicata against coparceners who were not parties to the suit, that the plaint or written statement should state in express terms that he is suing as manager or is being sued as a manager. It is sufficient if the manager is in fact suing or being sued as representing the whole family (d). See § 251(5).

Illustration

A, B and C are members of a joint family. A and B are the managing members. A and B borrow Rs. 5,000 from P for the necessities of the family. P sues A and B as managers, and obtains a decree against them as such. The decree may be executed against the whole coparcenary property including C's interest therein, though C was not a party to the suit, and even if C was a minor: Baldeo v. Mobarak (1902) 29 Cal. 583.

Note.—In the case put above, P is entitled also to a personal decree against A and B, they being parties to the contract. Such a decree will enable P to proceed against the separate properties also of A and B. But P is not entitled to a personal decree against C, even if C was an adult, for C was not a party to the contract. See § 240.

Suit by or against manager in representative capacity.—A suit by or against the manager will be deemed to be one brought by him or against him as representing the family if the circumstances of the case show that he is the manager of the family and the property involved in the suit is family property (e). It is not necessary, where the manager is the plaintiff, that the plaint should state in distinct terms that he is suing as manager or where he is the defendant, that he is being sued as manager. A karta can represent the family effectively in a certificate proceeding though he is not named as such (f).

Decree dismissing manager's suit.—The decree referred to in this section may be one dismissing the suit brought by the manager as plaintiff (g).

Decree against father for injunction.—A and his son B are members of a joint family. A's neighbour C sues A for an injunction restraining A from tethering cows and storing

---

(b) Daulat Ram v. Mehr Chand (1888) 15 Cal. 70, 14 I.A. 187; Lingangowda v. Basangowda (1927) 54 I.A. 122, 51 Bom. 450, 101 I.C. 44, ('27) A.PC. 56; Sheo Shankar v. Jaddo Kunwar (1914) 41 I.A. 216, 36 All. 383, 24 I.C. 504, ('14) A.PC. 136; affirming Jaddo Kunwar v. Sheo Shankar (1911) 33 All. 71, 7 I.C. 902; Sheo Pershad v. Saheb Lal (1893) 20 Cal. 453, 38 I.A. 45, 33 All. 272, 9 I.C. 739; Baldeo v. Mobarak (1902) 20 Cal. 583; Kunjan v. Sidda (1899) 22 Mad. 461; Hari v. Jairam (1890) 14 Bom. 597; Bhana v. Chindhu (1897) 21 Bom. 616; Kashinath v. Chimnaji (1906) 30 Bom. 477; Sakharam v. Devji (1899) 23 Bom. 372. In Channa Basaregowda v. Rangegowda ('51) A. Mysore 38, the manager and the adult member of a joint family were made defendants to a mortgage suit, and it was held that the adult members could be taken to represent their progeny, and the decree was binding on the entire family. In Laxman v. Vinayak (1916) 40 Bom. 329, 33 I.C. 956, ('16) A.B. 262, it was suggested that the rule laid down in this section applied only if the manager was the father, but this view is not correct. See also Jahangir v. Janardhan (1947) All. 218; Gurbasappa v. Vankat ('56) A. Hyd. 146; Ghassu Khan v. Najar Ali ('57) A.N. 91; Kumaji Sare Mal v. Kalwa Devadattam ('58) A. Andh. Pra. 216.

(c) Viraragavamma v. Samudrala (1885) 8 Mad. 208; Guruvappa v. Thimma (1897) 10 Mad. 316; Sathuvayyan v. Muthusami (1889) 12 Mad. 325; Balbir Singh v. Ajudhia (1887) 9 All. 142; Ram Dayal v. Durga Singh (1890) 12 All. 209; Lachmi v. Kunji Lal and anr. (1894) 16 All. 449; Mela Mal v. Gori (1922) 3 Lah. 288, 66 I.C. 485, ('22) A.L. 200.

(d) Hori Lal v. Munman Kunwar (1912) 34 All. 549, 15 I.C. 126; Lalchand v. Sheogovind (1929) 8 Pat. 788, 128 I.C. 331, ('29) A.P. 741; Ram Kishan v. Ganga Ram (1931) 12 Lah. 428, 133 I.C. 116, (31) A.L. 559; Pirthipal v. Rameshwar (1927) 2 Luck. 288, 99 I.C. 154, ('27) A.O. 27; Surendra Nath v. Sambhunath (1928) 55 Cal. 210, 104 I.C. 219, ('27) A.C. 870.

(e) Mulgund Co-operative Credit Society v. Shidlingappa Isvarappa (1941) Bom. 682, 197 I.C. 428, ('41) A.B. 385, 43 Bom. L.R. 807.

(f) Mani Sahoo v. Lokanath ('50) A. Orissa 140; Lalchand v. Seogobind, 8 Pat. 788; Hari Prasad v. Lal Behari, 19 Pat. 618 (F.B.).

(g) See Lingangowda v. Basangowda (1927) 54 I.A. 122, 51 Bom. 450, 101 I.C. 44, (527) A.PC. 56.

fodder close to C's premises, and a decree is passed against A. The decree may be executed after A's death against his son B, though the son was not a party to the suit (h).

Order under sec. 145 of Criminal Procedure Code, 1898.—An adverse order passed under sec. 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code against the manager requiring him to delivery possession of a property to another person binds the other members of the family, though they were not parties thereto (i).

254. Decree against father as manager and res judicata.—A decree obtained against the father as manager of a joint family is binding upon his sons, if in the case of minor sons he was acting in the former litigation on their behalf in their interest (j), and in the case of majors with the assent of the majors. Such a decree operates as res judicata by virtue of the provisions of Explanation VI of sec. 11 of the Code of Civil Procedure (k). See § 251(5).

IV.—ALIENATION OF COPARCENARY PROPERTY

255. Who may alienate coparcenary property.—The following persons alone have power to alienate coparcenary property so as to pass a good title to the alienee:—

(1) the whole body of coparceners, where they are all adults (l);

(2) the manager, to the extent mentioned in § 242;

(3) the father, to the extent mentioned in § 256;

(4) a sole surviving coparcener in the circumstances mentioned in § 257.

No other coparcener is entitled to alienate coparcenary property so as to bind the other coparceners unless he is authorized by them to do so (m).

We are not dealing now with the power of a coparcener to alienate his own interest in coparcenary property. That subject is dealt with in §§ 258-260 below.

256. Alienation by father.—A Hindu father as such has special powers of alienating coparcenary property which no other coparcener has. In the exercise of these powers—

(1) he may make a gift of ancestral movable property to the extent mentioned in § 225, and even of ancestral immovable property to the extent mentioned in § 226;

(2) he may sell or mortgage ancestral property, whether movable or immovable, including the interest of his sons, grandsons and great-grandsons therein, for the payment of his own debt, provided the debt was an antecedent debt and was not incurred for immoral or illegal purposes [§ 295].

---

(h) Manilal v. Kikabhai (1931) 33 Bom. L.R. 1118, 134 I.C. 968, ('31) A.B. 482; Ganesh v. Narayan (1931) 55 Bom. 709, 134 I.C. 961, ('31) A.B. 484.

(i) Venkatasomaraju v. Varahalaraju (1929) 52 Mad. 787, 122 I.C. 17, ('30) A.M. 48.

(j) Venkatanarayana v. Somaraju (1937) Mad. 880 (F.B.), 171 I.C. 101, ('37) A.M. 610. As to consent decree see Basant Lal v. Rameshwar Prasad ('57) A.A. 287.

(k) (1927) 54 I.A. 122, 51 Bom. 450, 101 I.C. 44, ('27) A.PC. 56, supra.

(l) Mahabeer Persad v. Ramyad (1874) 12 Beng. L.R. 90, 94.

(m) Guruvappa v. Thimma (1887) 10 Mad. 316; Sheo Pershad v. Saheb Lal (1893) 20 Cal. 453, 461; Krishna v. Krishnasami (1900) 23 Mad. 597, 600; Puttoo Lal v. Raghubir Prasad (1934) 9 Luck. 237, 147 I.C. 540, ('33) A.O. 535; Gopinath v. Jagannath ('69) A. Orissa 18.

Except as aforesaid, a father has no greater power over coparcenary property than any other manager (o), that is to say, he cannot alienate coparcenary property except for legal necessity or for the benefit of the family [§ 242].

Thus a mortgage by the father for raising moneys for a speculative litigation, which is for his own benefit, is not for legal necessity and, there being no antecedent debt, such a mortgage is not binding on the sons' shares (p).

Where a father was converted to Christianity and afterwards was reconverted to Hinduism a mortgage by him during the minority of his son does not bind the son's share, as the father became divided from his son when he became a Christian and there could be no reunion with his son who was a minor (q).

When the immovable property consists of raiyati interest in lands, a father, if he is unable to cultivate them, may surrender such interest and the surrender would be upheld unless it is shown to be a dishonest transaction intended to prejudice the sons (*q*1).

The father is in all cases naturally, and in the case of minor sons, necessarily the manager of the joint family [§ 236]. As manager, he has the power to alienate coparcenary property, but only in the cases specified in § 242 above. As father, he has power to alienate coparcenary property in the cases mentioned in the present section. Beyond that, he has no power to alienate coparcenary property.

257. Alienation by sole surviving coparcener.—(1) A person who for the time being is the sole surviving coparcener is entitled to dispose of the coparcenary property as if it were his separate property. He may sell or mortgage the property without legal necessity or he may make a gift of it. If a son is subsequently born to him or adopted by him, the alienation, whether it is by way of sale, mortgage or gift, will nevertheless stand, for a son cannot object to alienations made by his father before he was born or begotten [§ 270].

(2) As to dispositions by will, see § 368 below.

(3) As to the rights of a widow sharing her deceased husband's property under the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937 to challenge alienation by sole surviving coparcener of her husband see the undermentioned case (*q*2) and § 35 ante.

V.—ALIENATION OF UNDIVIDED COPARCENARY INTEREST

258. Gift of undivided interest.—(1) According to the Mitakshara law as applied in all the States, no coparcener can dispose of his undivided interest in coparcenary property by gift (r). Such transaction being void altogether there is no estoppel or other kind of personal bar which precludes the donor from asserting his right to recover the transferred property (s). He may,

---

(o) Chinnayya v. Perumal (1890) 13 Mad. 51; Rayakkal v. Subbanna (1893) 16 Mad. 84; Bala v. Balaji (1898) 22 Bom. 825; Ningareddi v. Lakshmawa (1902) 26 Bom. 163 (gift to a concubine); Rottala v. Pulicat (1904) 27 Mad. 162; Mahendra Singh v. Attar Singh ('67) A.A. 488.

(p) Ram Chandra v. Jang Bahadur (1926) 5 Pat. 198, 90 I.C. 553, ('26) A.P. 17.

(q) Vella Venkatasubbayya v. Yella Venkatramayya (1944) Mad. 33.

(*q*1) Sheoprasad Sahu v. Deocharan Sahu (1934) 13 Pat. 390, 151 I.C. 188, ('34) A.P. 212.

(*q*2) Ramalingam v. Ramalakshmi ('58) A.M. 228; (1958) Mad. 7; (1957) 2 Mad. L.J. 382.

(r) Baba v. Timma (1884) 7 Mad. 357 [F.B.]; Ponnusami v. Thatha (1886) 9 Mad. 273; Ramanna v. Venkata (1888) 11 Mad. 246; Rottala v. Pulicat (1904) 27 Mad. 162 at p. 166; Peramanayakam v. Sivaraman (1952) Mad. 835, ('52) A.M. 419 (F.B.); Salvalingam v. Lingamurthy ('62) A.A.P. 173; Uddaram v. Ranu (1875) 11 Bom. H.C. 76; Vendravandas v. Yamunabai (1875) 12 Bom. H.C. 229; Kalu v. Barsu (1895) 18 Bom. 803; Tatoba v. Tarabai (1957) 59 Bom. L.R. 633.

(s) Venkatappayya v. Raghavayya ('51) A.M. 318.

however, make a gift of his interest with the consent of the other coparceners (t).

(2) As to disposition by will after the coming into operation of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, see section 30 of that Act and Notes thereunder. Also see § 368.

Separate and self-acquired property.—A coparcener may dispose of his separate or self-acquired property in any way he likes [§ 222].

259. Sale or mortgage of undivided interest.—Bombay, Madras and Madhya Pradesh.—According to the Mitakshara law as administered in the Bombay and Madras States, a coparcener may sell, mortgage, or otherwise alienate for value his undivided interest in coparcenary property without the consent of the other coparceners (u).

The same rule applies to cases governed by the Mitakshara law as administered in the Madhya Pradesh (v).

260. Sale or mortgage of undivided interest—Other States.—According to the Mitakshara law as administered in West Bengal and Uttar Pradesh no coparcener can alienate even for value his undivided interest without the consent of the other coparceners (w), unless the alienation be for legal necessity [§ 242], or for payment by a father of antecedent debts [§ 295]. The consent of the other coparceners is necessary even if the alienation is made in favour of a coparcener (x).

The same rule applies to cases governed by the Mitakshara law as administered in Bihar and Orissa (y), the Punjab (z), and in Oudh (a).

Also see § 269 (1) and § 270 (4).

According to the strict theory of the Mitakshara law, each coparcener has a proprietary interest in the whole of the coparcenary property. No coparcener, therefore, can alienate his interest in the property without the consent of the other coparceners. This rule has been strictly applied in many States to cases governed by the Mitakshara law.

---

(t) Tagore v. Tagore (1872) 9 Beng. L.R. 377, 396, L.R. I.A. Sup. Vol. 47, 66.

(u) Tukaram v. Ramchandra (1869) 6 Bom. H.C. A.C. 247; Vasudev v. Venkatesh (1873) 10 Bom. H.C. 139; Fakirapa v. Chanapa (1873) 10 Bom. H.C. 162; Pandu v. Goma (1919) 43 Bom. 472, 50 I.C. 765, ('19) A.B. 84; Vitla Butten v. Yamenamma (1874) 8 Mad. H.C. 6; Aiyyagari v. Aiyyagari (1902) 25 Mad. 690, 703; Nanjundaswami v. Kanagaraju (1919) 42 Mad. 154, 49 I.C. 666, ('19) A.M. 500 [settlement on daughter in consideration of marriage]; Peramanayakam v. Sivaraman (1952) Mad. 835, ('52) A.M. 419 (F.B.); Lakshman v. Ramchandra (1880) 5 Bom. 48, 61, 7 I.A. 181; Pandurang v. Bhagwandas (1920) 44 Bom. 341, 55 I.C. 544, ('20) A.B. 341; Suraj Bunsi Koer v. Sheo Persad (1879) 5 Cal. 148, 166, 6 I.A. 88, 101-102; Balgobind Das v. Narain Lal (1893) 15 All. 339, 351, 20 I.A. 116-125. See also Subba v. Venkatrami (1915) 38 Mad. 1187, 1191, 36 I.C. 983, ('15) A.M. 740 [specific performance]; Ganpati v. Motiram (1947) Nag. 172; Narayan v. Namdeo (1955) Nag. 772, ('55) A.N. 208; Rajanna v. Dhondusa ('70) A. Mys. 270.

(v) Syed Kasam v. Jorawar Singh (1922) 49 I.A. 358, 50 Cal. 84, 68 I.C. 573, ('22) A.PC. 353; Bhojraj v. Nathuram (1917) 37 I.C. 498, 12 N.L.R. 161, ('16) A.N. 25.

(w) Madho Parshad v. Mehrban Singh (1891) 18 Cal. 157, 17 I.A. 194; Sadabart Prasad v. Foolbash (1869) 3 Beng. L.R.F.B.R. 31; Kali Shankar v. Nawab Singh (1909) 31 All. 507, 3 I.C. 909; Balgobind Das v. Narain Lal (1893) 15 All. 339, 351, 20 I.A. 116, 125; Manna Lal v. Karu Singh (1919) 1 Pat. L.T. 6, 56 I.C. 766, ('19) A.PC. 108; Chandradeo v. Mata Prasad (1909) 31 All. 176, 1 I.C. 479 [F.B.]. For other cases, see § 269 below.

(x) Chandar v. Dampat (1894) 16 All. 369.

(y) Jwala Prasad v. Maharajah Protap (1916) 1 Pat. L.J. 497, 37 I.C. 184, ('16) A.P. 203; Amar Dayal v. Har Pershad (1920) 5 Pat. L.J. 605, 58 I.C. 72, ('20) A.P. 433; Krishnadeb v. Jokhilal ('56) A.P. 290.

(z) Piare v. Ram (1912) P.R. No. 21, p. 75, 11 I.C. 443; Ralla Ram v. Atma Ram (1933) 14 Lah. 584, 150 I.C. 184, ('33) A.L. 343.

(a) (1891) 18 Cal. 157, 17 I.A. 194, supra; Angraj v. Ram Rup (1931) 6 Luck. 158, 127 I.C. 38, ('30) A.O. 284; Puttoo Lal v. Raghubir Prasad (1934) 9 Luck. 237, 147 I.C. 540, ('33) A.O. 535.

But the rigour of the rule has been relaxed in favour of alienees for value in Bombay, Madras and Madhya Pradesh [§ 261] and in favour of purchasers at an execution sale throughout India [§ 289].

Lease.—A lease stands on the same footing as a sale or mortgage (b).

261. Rights of purchaser of coparcener's interest.—According to the Mitakshara law as applied in Bombay, Madras and Madhya Pradesh a coparcener may alienate his undivided interest in the entire joint family property, or his undivided interest in a specific property forming part of the joint family properties. But he has no right to alienate, as his interest any specific property belonging to the coparcenary, for no coparcener can before partition claim any such property as his own; if he does alienate, the alienation is valid to the extent only of his own interest in the alienated property (c). According to the Mitakshara law as it prevails in West Bengal, Uttar Pradesh and some other States no coparcener can alienate even his own undivided interest in the coparcenary property without the consent of the other coparceners. If he does so, the alienation is not valid even to the extent of his own interest in the property [§ 269]. But the Mitakshara law as administered in all the States allows the sale of the undivided interest of a coparcener in execution of a decree against him [§ 289]. The present section deals with the rights of the purchaser of a specific property, or of a coparcener's interest in the specific property, as to possession and partition, whether the property has been sold by private treaty or in execution. Almost all the cases dealt with in this section relate to the sale of a specific property or the sale of the undivided interest of a coparcener in a specific property. The principles laid down in those cases apply mutatis mutandis to the case of a sale of the undivided interest of a coparcener in all the joint family properties.

(1) Right to joint possession in West Bengal, Uttar Pradesh and Madras. As regards the purchaser's right to joint possession the Bombay decisions differ in certain respects from those of the other High Courts. We shall deal first, with the decisions of High Courts other than Bombay, and next, with Bombay decisions.

The purchaser of the undivided interest of a coparcener (d) in a specific property—

(i) at a sale in execution in West Bengal (e) and Uttar Pradesh, or

(ii) at a private sale or a sale in execution in Madras (f), does not acquire a right to joint possession with the other coparceners. Such a purchaser acquires merely the right to compel a partition which the coparcener whose interest he has purchased might have compelled, had he been so minded, before the sale of his interest took place. That right can only be en-

---

(b) Jadu v. Abdul (1911) C.W.N. 93, 11 I.C. 892.

(c) Vitla Butten v. Yamenamma (1874) 8 Mad. H.C. 6, 11; Venkatachella v. Chinnaiya (1870) 5 Mad. H.C. 166, 171; Patil Hari v. Hakamchand (1886) 10 Bom. 363 [mortgage].

(d) Reference may also be made to s. 44 of the Transfer of Property Act.

(e) Deendayal v. Jugdeep Narain (1877) 3 Cal. 198, 209, 4 I.A. 247; Suraj Bunsi Koer v. Sheo Persad (1880) 5 Cal. 148, 174, 6 I.A. 88; Hardi Narain v. Ruder Perkash (1883) 10 Cal. 626, 636-637, 11 I.A. 26.

(f) Maharaja of Bobbili v. Venkataramanjula (1916) 39 Mad. 265, 267, 25 I.C. 585, ('15) A.M. 453; Manjaya v. Shanmuga (1915) 38 Mad. 684, 22 I.C. 555, ('14) A.M. 440 [private sale]; Jagdish v. Rameshwar ('60) A.P. 54; Laxminarasamma v. Ranganayakamma ('64) A. Orissa 43.

forced by a suit for a general partition to which all the coparceners must be joined as parties (g). The purchaser may in such a suit ask the Court to allot to his vendor the specific property sold to him, and the Court may allot that property to him if the interest of the other coparceners will not be prejudiced thereby [sub-§ 3].

Where the purchaser has not obtained possession, but claims the whole property as his own, the non-alienating coparceners may sue him for a declaration that he is entitled to no more than the undivided interest of the alienating coparcener. The proper decree to be passed in such a suit would be an order declaring that, by virtue of the sale, the purchaser acquired only the undivided share of the alienating coparcener in the property with such power of ascertaining the extent of such share by means of a partition as the alienating coparcener possessed and confirming the possession of the other coparceners subject to such proceedings as the purchaser may take to enforce his rights (h). If the purchaser has obtained possession, the non-alienating coparceners are entitled to sue for and recover possession of the whole of the property for the benefit of the joint family including the vendor. The purchaser is not entitled in such suit to an order for partition either of the specific property sold to him or of the joint family properties in general; he must, if he wants to realize his vendor's interest, bring a suit of his own for a general partition. Where a suit therefore is brought by the non-alienating coparceners for possession, the proper decree to be passed would be an order directing the purchaser to deliver possession to the plaintiffs of the whole property, and declaring that the purchaser is entitled to a declaration that he has acquired the undivided interest of his vendor in the property and that he is entitled to take proceedings to have that interest ascertained by partition (i). But to protect the purchaser a further direction is added that the execution of the decree, so far as it directs the purchaser to deliver possession to the plaintiffs, be stayed for a specified period, and if before the expiry of that period the purchaser brings a suit for a general partition against the plaintiffs then the stay should continue until the disposal of that suit, but if no such suit is brought within that period, then the stay of execution will stand cancelled (j).

In Ramasami v. Venkatarama (k), however, the Madras High Court held, relying upon the observations of the Judicial Committee in Ramkishore v. Jainarayan (l), that when relief by way of general partition can be conveniently given to the purchaser in a coparceners' suit for possession, as where all the coparceners are parties to the suit and the Court is seized of the whole matter, the purchaser should not be driven to a

---

(g) Vitla Butten v. Yamenamma (1874) 8 Mad. H.C. 6. The executing Court has no power to direct a partition; Yelumalai v. Srinivasa (1906) 29 Mad. 294; Brij Lal v. Durga (1920) 1 Lah. 134, 56 I.C. 254, ('20) A.L. 159; V. C. Thani Chettiar v. Dakshinamurthy (1955) Mad. 1278, ('55) A.M. 288 [nature of suit: limitation]; Ganesh v. Radhakrishnan ('69) A.M. 416; Laxminarasamma v. Ranganayakamma ('64) A. Orissa 43.

(h) Suraj Bunsi Koer v. Sheo Persad (1880) 5 Cal. 148, 174-175, 6 I.A. 88.

(i) Deendayal v. Jugdeep Narain (1877) 3 Cal. 198, 209, 4 I.A. 247; Baboo Hurdei Narain v. Ruder Perkash (1883) 10 Cal. 626, 637, 11 I.A. 26; Subba v. Krishnamachari (1922) 45 Mad. 449, 460-463, 68 I.C. 869, ('22) A.M. 112 [private sale]; Kandasamy v. Velayutha (1927) 50 Mad. 320, 328, 96 I.C. 993, ('26) A.M. 774 [private sale]; Medni Prasad v. Nand Keshwar (1923) 2 Pat. 386, 85 I.C. 1014, ('23) A.P. 451 [sale in execution]. Papayamma v. Gopalakrishnamurty ('69) A.A.P. 341.

(j) Kandasamy v. Velayutha (1927) 50 Mad. 320, 328, 96 I.C. 993, ('26) A.M. 774; Hanmandas v. Valabhdas (1919) 43 Bom. 17, 25-26, 46 I.C. 133, ('18) A.B. 101.

(k) Ramasami v. Venkatarama (1923) 46 Mad. 815, 75 I.C. 406, ('24) A.M. 81 [private sale]. See also Sellappa v. Masa (1924) 47 Mad. 79, 76 I.C. 1018, ('24) A.M. 297.

(l) (1913) 40 Cal. 966, 40 I.A. 213, 20 I.C. 958.

separate suit [ill. (a)]. Referring to this case the same High Court said in a later case (m): "The decision in 46 Mad. 815 applies to cases where all the facts are before the Court which would enable it to allow an alienee to retain the property and such a suit is practically a suit for partition." Reference may also be made to the Full Bench decision of the same High Court in Peramanayakam v. Sivaraman (1952) Mad. 835, ('52) A.M. 419. Also see sec. 44 of the Transfer of Property Act.

Right to joint possession in Bombay.—The following principles have been laid down with regard to the rights and remedies of the purchaser and the non-alienating coparceners, whether the sale be one by private contract or in execution of a decree (n):

(1) If the purchaser is a stranger, and has not obtained possession, he should not be given joint possession with the other coparceners, but should be left to his remedy of a suit for general partition (o).

(2) If the purchaser has obtained possession, the non-alienating coparceners are entitled to joint possession of the property with him, and if they sue for it, the Court must decree joint possession to them (p). The reason given is that the purchaser cannot, by obtaining a possession to which he was not entitled without partition, force on the other coparceners the necessity of bringing a suit for partition (q). The proper decree to pass in such a case is one placing the plaintiffs-coparceners in joint possession with the purchaser. A mere declaration of the plaintiff's right to joint possession is not enough (r).

(3) Further, if the purchaser has obtained possession, the non-alienating coparceners may sue for recovery of possession of the whole of the property sold to him; in other words, they may sue for exclusive possession. But the Court is not bound, as in Madras, to eject the purchaser and decree exclusive possession to the plaintiffs, and it may in its discretion declare that the purchaser is entitled to hold the property until partition, as a tenant-in-common with the other coparceners; in other words, the Court may in a proper case allow the purchaser to remain in joint possession with the plaintiffs. Each case as to the propriety or otherwise of allowing the purchaser joint possession should be decided on its own facts (s).

---

(m) (1927) 50 Mad. 320, 324, 96 I.C. 993, 363 [mortgagee with possession from one coparcener dispossesed by purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree against another coparcener—held mortgagee entitled to joint possession with purchaser]; Nana v. Appa (1896) 20 Bom. 627 [suit by purchaser for exclusive possession—joint possession decreed]; Naranbhai v. Ranchod (1902) 26 Bom. 141 [purchaser's suit for exclusive possession —suit dismissed by trial judge—decree reversed and suit remanded for inquiry whether purchaser should be awarded joint possession on the merits of the case]; Bhiku v. Puttu (1906) 8 Bom. L.R. 99, 105-106.

('25) A.M. 774 [private sale], supra.

(n) Bhau v. Budha (1926) 50 Bom. 204, 206, 96 I.C. 166, ('26) A.B. 399 [where the earlier cases are collected].

(o) Pandurang v. Bhaskar (1874) 11 Bom. H.C. 72; Krishnaji v. Sitaram (1881) 5 Bom. 496; Balaji v. Ganesh (1881) 5 Bom. 499; Pandu v. Goma (1919) 43 Bom. 472, 50 I.C. 765, ('19) A.B. 84; Ishwappa v. Krishna (1922) 46 Bom. 925, 931, 67 I.C. 833, ('22) A.B. 413.

(p) Mahabalaya v. Timaya (1875) 12 Bom. H.C. 138 [coparceners suit for joint possession]; Babaji v. Vasudev (1876) 1 Bom. 95 [ditto]; Kallapa v. Venkatesh (1878) 2 Bom. 676, at p. 678; Dugappa v. Venkatramnaya (1881) 5 Bom. 493 [suit by coparceners for possession of entire property—held entitled only to joint possession with purchaser]; Patil Hari v. Hakamchand (1886) 10 Bom.

(q) (1906) 8 Bom. L.R. 99, 106, supra.

(r) (1902) 26 Bom. 141, 145, supra.

(s) Bhau v. Budha (1926) 50 Bom. 204, 96 I.C. 166, ('26) A.B. 399, and the cases cited in f.n. (p) above.

Thus the Court, may not eject the purchaser if he is a relative of the parties and has long been in possession, but may allow him to continue in joint possession with the other coparceners. If they do not like joint possession with the purchaser, their remedy lies in suing for a partition (t). If the case is one in which joint possession should be allowed, the proper decree to pass is one placing the plaintiffs in joint possession with the defendant purchaser. If the case is one in which joint possession should not be allowed, the proper decree to pass would be an order directing the purchaser to deliver possession of the whole property to the plaintiffs, and declaring that the purchaser has acquired the undivided interest of his vendor in the property and that he is entitled to take proceedings to have that interest ascertained by partition, with a further direction that the execution of the decree be stayed for a specified period, and if before the expiry of that period the purchaser brings a suit for a general partition against the plaintiffs then the stay should continue until the disposal of that suit, but if no such suit is brought within that period, then the stay of execution will be cancelled (u).

Difference between Madras and Bombay views.—The main point of difference between the Madras and Bombay High Courts is that while in Madras the purchaser is not entitled in any case to joint possession before partition, in Bombay the Court may in its discretion award joint possession to him. The reasons for this difference are as follows:

(a) According to the Bombay decisions, the purchaser from a coparcener is a tenant-in-common with the other coparceners (v). A similar view was taken by the High Court of Madras in some of the earlier cases, but that view has since been disapproved, and it has been held that the purchaser is not a tenant-in-common, but has only an equity to enforce his rights by partition (w). The same view has been taken by the Patna High Court (x).

(b) The Madras High Court (y) has interpreted the judgments of the Judicial Committee in the undermentioned cases (z) as laying down the broad proposition that the purchaser in possession is liable to be ejected at the instance of the non-alienating coparceners. Commenting on this Fawcett, J., said in a Bombay case that they were all cases from Bengal where one coparcener has not authority, without the consent of his coparceners, to alienate even his own undivided interest in coparcenery property, and that the Privy Council decisions do not amount to saying that in no case can the Court properly allow a stranger purchaser to remain in possession with the non-alienating coparceners (a).

(2) Right to partition.—In Bombay (b) and Madras (c), the purchaser of the undivided interest of a coparcener in a specific property belonging to the joint family is not entitled to a partition of that property alone, for his vendor himself could not have claimed it, unless the other coparceners consent to it. He can only enforce his rights by a suit for a general partition. In Allahabad (d), and in Calcutta (e) it has been held that the purchaser is entitled to a partition of the specific property without suing for a general partition, but these decisions are of doubtful authority.

---

(t) (1926) 50 Bom. 204, 96 I.C. 166, ('26) A.B. 399, supra.

(u) Hanmandas v. Valabhdas (1919) 43 Bom. 17, 25-26, 46 I.C. 133, ('18) A.B. 101.

(v) See Muhabalaya v. Timaya (1875) 12 Bom. H.C. 138, 110, which is the first Bombay case on the subject.

(w) Manjaya v. Shanmuga (1915) 38 Mad. 684, 22 I.C. 555, ('14) A.M. 440; Maharaja of Bobbili v. Venkataramanjulu (1916) 39 Mad. 265, 25 I.C. 585, ('15) A.M. 453. Also see Peramanayakam v. Sivaraman (1952) Mad. 835, ('52) A.M. 419 (F.B.).

(x) Bhubneshwar Prasad v. Sidheswar (1949) A.P. 309.

(y) (1916) 39 Mad. 265, 268-269, 25 I.C. 585, ('15) A.M. 453, supra.

(z) Suraj Bunsi Koer v. Sheo Persad (1880) 5 Cal. 148, 6 I.A. 88; Hardi Narain v. Ruder Perkash (1883) 10 Cal. 626, 11 I.A. 26; Ramkishore v. Jainarayan (1913) 40 Cal. 966, 40 I.A. 213, 20 I.C. 958.

(a) Bhau v. Budhu (1926) 50 Bom. 204, 207-209, 96 I.C. 166, ('26) A.B. 399.

(b) Udaram v. Ranu (1875) 11 Bom. H.C. 76; Murarrao v. Sitaram (1899) 23 Bom. 184; Shivmurdeppa v. Virappa (1900) 24 Bom. 128; Ishrappa v. Krishna (1922) 46 Bom. 925, 67 I.C. 833, ('22) A.B. 413.

(c) Venkatarama v. Mecra (1890) 13 Mad. 275; Palani v. Masakonan (1897) 20 Mad. 243; Manjaya v. Shanmuga (1915) 38 Mad. 684, 22 I.C. 555.

(d) Ram Mohan v. Mul Chand (1906) 28 All. 39.

(e) Tarinicharan Chakrabarti v. Debendralal De (1935) 62 Cal. 655.

The non-alienating coparceners, on the other hand, are entitled in Bombay (f), Madras (g), and Allahabad (h), to sue the purchaser for partition of the alienated property without bringing a suit for a general partition. But one of several non-alienating coparceners cannot sue the purchaser for his own share of the alienated property (i).

Where a suit is brought by the non-alienating coparceners against the purchaser for partition only of the property alienated, as they are entitled to do, the purchaser is not entitled in that suit to counter-claim for a general partition. He must bring a suit of his own for a general partition (j).

Where a suit has been brought by the non-alienating coparceners against the purchaser for partition only of the property alienated, and an unconditional decree is passed for partition of the alienated property and for delivery of their share to them, the share so delivered becomes the separate property of the non-alienating coparceners (k). But it would continue as joint if the relief granted to the non-alienating coparceners is made conditional on their assenting to the results of a suit for general partition which the alience may offer to bring (l).

The share allotted to the non-alienating coparcener is his separate property as between him and the alienating coparcener, but not as between him and his male issue.

(3) Equitable rights of purchaser on partition.—The alienee of a specific property or of the undivided interest of a coparcener in such property has on a general partition an equitable right to have that property (m), or his alienor's share in that property (n), as the case may be, assigned to him if it could be done without injustice to the other coparceners. But there may be equities between the coparceners or liabilities attaching to the alienor's share which may render it inequitable or impracticable to do so (o). In such a case the alienee is entitled to recover from his alienor property of an equivalent value out of the properties allotted to the alienor for his share in substitution of the property alienated (p). In making adjustments, the court will take the value of the properties at the time of the division and not at the time of the sale (q).

It has been held by the Madras High Court in Sabapathi v. Thandavaroya (r) that such equitable relief by way of obtaining substituted property cannot be claimed by or

---

(f) Hanmandas v. Valabhdas (1919) 43 Bom. 17, 26, 46 I.C. 133, ('18) A.B. 101; Naro Gopal v. Paragauda (1917) 41 Bom. 347, 355, 39 I.C. 23, ('16) A.B. 130.

(g) Venkatachella v. Chinnaya (1870) 5 Mad. H.C. 166; Chinna v. Suriya (1882) 5 Mad. 196; Subramanya v. Padmanabha (1896) 19 Mad. 267; Iburamsa v. Theruvenkatasami (1911) 34 Mad. 269 (F.B.), 7 I.C. 559 [suit by purchaser from non-alienating coparcener].

(h) Ram Charan v. Ajudhia (1906) 28 All. 50.

(i) Shyam Sunder v. Jagarnath (1923) 2 Pat. 925, 74 I.C. 758, ('23) A.P. 590.

(j) Kandasamy v. Velayutha (1927) 50 Mad. 320, 96 I.C. 993, ('26) A.M. 774.

(k) Souri v. Pachia (1926) 49 Mad. 483, 91 I.C. 868, ('26) A.M. 241.

(l) See Ramkishore v. Jainarayan (1913) 40 Cal. 966, 40 I.A. 213, 20 I.C. 958; Hanmandas v. Valabhdas (1919) 43 Bom. 17, 46 I.C. 133, ('18) A.B. 101.

(m) Pandurang v. Bhaskar (1874) 11 Bom. H.C. 72; Udaram v. Ranu (1875) 11 Bom. H.C. 76; Aiyyagari v. Aiyyagari (1902) 25 Mad. 690, 718-719 [F.B.]; Chinnu Pillai v. Kalimuthu (1912) 35 Mad. 47, 62, 9 I.C. 596 [F.B.]; Dhulabhai v. Lala Dhula (1922) 46 Bom. 28, 64 I.C. 115, ('22) A.B. 137; Kandasamy v. Velayutha (1927) 50 Mad. 320, 324, 96 I.C. 993, ('26) A.M. 774; Gurlingappa v. Sabu (1931) 33 Bom. L.R. 141, 131 I.C. 886, ('31) A.B. 218.

(n) Venkatarama v. Meera (1890) 13 Mad. 275, (1902) 25 Mad. 690, 718-719 [F.B.], supra; Manjaya v. Shanmuga (1915) 38 Mad. 684, 22 I.C. 555, ('14) A.M. 440; Sitamahalakshmi v. Ramachandra ('57) A. Andh. Pra. 572; Sethu Ramalinga v. Veerasicami ('71) A.M. 174: Also see Ramakrishna v. Suppayya ('65) A. Kerala 77.

(o) (1902) 25 Mad. 690, 718-719, supra.

(p) (1915) 38 Mad. 684, 687, 22 I.C. 555, ('14) A.M. 440; supra; Sabapathi v. Thandavaroya (1920) 43 Mad. 309, 310-311, 54 I.C. 515, ('20) A.M. 316. Also see V. C. Thani Chettiar v. Dakshinamurthy ('55) A.M. 288, (1955) Mad. 1278; Peramanayakam v. Sivaraman ('52) A.M. 419 (F.B.), (1952) Mad. 835; Narasimhaiah v. Chikkathimmaiah ('54) A. Mysore 115. See (1875) 11 Bom. H.C. 76, 83, supra. Padmanabha Pillai v. Abraham ('71) A. Kerala 154.

(q) Virupaksha Reddi v. Chanalal Siva Reddi (1944) Mad. 212.

(r) (1920) 43 Mad. 309, 54 I.C. 515, ('20) A.M. 316, supra.

granted to a purchaser at a Court sale, there being no warranty of title at such sale and no privity of contract between the auction purchaser and the judgment-debtor; and this decision was followed by the Bombay High Court in Chidambargauda v. Channappa (s). The view taken in these cases seems to be rather narrow. Neither the purchaser at a Court sale nor one by private treaty, of the undivided interest of a coparcener in a joint Mitakshara family can acquire title to any specific property; both are entitled to equities, which can and should be granted provided the purchaser is a purchaser for value. The correct view, it seems, has been taken by a division bench of the Bombay High Court (t) which has refused to follow the two cases mentioned above and held that there is no distinction in this respect between a private purchaser and a purchaser at a Court Sale. A Full Bench of the Andhra Pradesh High Court has held that the equity which arises in the case of a first alienee is not available to the alienee from an alienee of a specific item of property from a coparcener and the later alienee cannot maintain a suit for general partition claiming the allotment to him of that specific item (*t*1). Reference may also be made to the undermentioned decisions (*t*2).

Limitation.—There is no article of the Limitation Act which specifically provides for a suit by an alienee from coparcener for general partition or for working out his equities in such suit. A suit for recovery of possession of immovable property by way of substitution by an alienee or transferee for consideration from a coparcener falls under Article 144 of the old Indian Limitation Act, 1908 (u). Now see art. 65 of Limitation Act, 1963. Reference may also be made to the undermentioned case (*t*3).

(4) Right to sue for partition even after vendor's death.—The purchaser of the interest of a coparcener is not bound to sue for partition in the lifetime of the coparcener. He may sue after his death. The right which he has to a partition is not lost by the death of the coparcener (v).

After the death of the alienating coparcener, the purchaser from him suing for partition is not entitled to an equity that the property alienated should be allotted to the share of the alienating coparcener so as to be available to the purchaser (*v*1).

(5) Share to which purchaser is entitled on partition.—The share to which an alienee is entitled on partition is the share which the alienor was entitled at the date of alienation, and not at the date when the alienee seeks to reduce his interest into possession (w) [ills. (c) and (d)]. But this principle applies only to the fraction representing the share of the alienor. As to the actual items of the property in which the purchaser is entitled to a share, it has been held that the family property as existing on the date of the suit, is to be taken (x).

(6) Right to mesne profits.—The purchaser of the interest of a coparcener is not entitled to mesne profits between the date of his purchase and the date of his suit for partition (y). In a recent case the Supreme Court has held that a person who has purchased the interest of a member of the family in execution of a decree against him is not entitled to institute a suit against the other coparceners for recovery of a share of the income of the family

---

(s) 36 Bom. L.R. 694, (1934) A.B. 329.

(t) Vasudeo v. Kankochand (1950) Bom. 777, ('51) A.B. 226.

(*t*1) Gurunadham v. Venkata Rao ('59) A.A.P. 523 (F.B.); Sethu Ramalinga v. Veeraswami ('71) A.M. 174.

(*t*2) Fatimunissa Begum v. Abu Baker ('63) A.A.P. 119; Venkata Subbayya v. Srirangam ('56) A.A.P. 188.

(*t*3) Manikayala v. Narasimhaswami ('66) A.SC. 470.

(u) Sitamahalakshmi v. Ramachandra ('57) A. A. Pra. 572; V. C. Thani Chettiar v. Dakshinamurthy ('55) A.M. 288; Satyanarayana v. Lakshminarayana ('63) A.A.P. 281.

(v) (1902) 25 Mad. 690, supra.

(*v*1) Namdeo v. Mumtaz Begum ('64) A.B. 101.

(w) Chinnu Pillai v. Kalimuthu (1912) 35 Mad. 47, 9 I.C. 596, [F.B.]; Sakarchand v. Narayan (1951) Bom. 217, 52 Bom. L.R. 888, ('51) A.B. 10 [F.B.] approving Naro Gopal v. Paragauda, 41 Bom. 347, ('16) A.B. 130; and overruling Gurlingapa v. Nandapa (1896) 21 Bom. 797 at p. 805; Kumaraswami v. Rajamanikkam ('66) A. Kerala 266.

(x) Muthukumara Sathapathiar v. Sivanarayana Pillai (1933) 56 Mad. 534, 141 I.C. 122, ('33) A.M. 158.

(y) Maharaja of Bobbili v. Venkataramanjulu (1916) 39 Mad. 265, 25 I.C. 585, ('15) A.M. 453; Trimbak v. Pandurang (1920) 44 Bom. 621, 57 I.C. 582, ('26) A.B. 103.

properties from the date of his purchase. He can work out his rights only by a suit for partition and his right to possession would commence only from a period when a specific allotment is made in his favour (z). But where the family had become divided in status without a division of the property by metes and bounds, the purchaser of the undivided share of one of the members of the family is entitled to claim mesne profits from the members in possession thereof (a).

(7) Right to sue for specific performance.—If the coparcener who has sold his interest dies before completion of the sale, the purchaser is nevertheless entitled to specific performance of the agreement for sale (b).

(8) Purchaser takes subject to equities.—The alienee of a single coparcener's interest takes such interest subject to all changes, incumbrances and liabilities, affecting the coparcenary property or that interest (c). Thus the purchaser of the undivided interest of a son in joint family property takes that interest subject to the liability attaching to that interest to pay his father's personal debts not tainted with immorality (d) [§ 290].

(9) Right to impeach previous alienations.—See § 270 (4) below.

Illustrations

(a) A and his son B are members of a joint family. A sells a certain item of the joint family property to C, the sale not being for legal necessity or for payment of antecedent debts, and puts C in possession. The value of the property alienated is less than the value of A's share. There is no person interested in the joint family properties except A and B. A sues B and C for possession of the property. According to a Madras decision, it is competent to the Court in such a case to declare that C is entitled to retain the property as the purchaser thereof, without driving him to the necessity of filing a fresh suit for partition: Ramasami v. Venkatarama (1923) 46 Mad. 815, 75 I.C. 406, ('24) A.M. 81.

(b) A and B are members of a joint Hindu family. C is a bhauband (relation) of A and B. B sells his undivided share in one of the joint family properties to C. C enters into possession of the whole of that property, and continues in possession for several years. Subsequently A sues C for exclusive possession of the property. In such a case, according to the Bombay rulings, the proper decree would be a decree putting A in joint possession with C, leaving A if he is not willing to continue in joint possession with C to file a suit for partition: Bhau v. Budha (1926) 50 Bom. 204, 96 I.C. 166, ('26) A.B. 399. According to the Madras rulings, the proper decree would be one directing C to deliver possession of the whole property to A, and declaring that C had acquired that undivided interest of B in the property with liberty to C to file a suit to have that share ascertained by a general partition. The Court may also stay execution for a fixed period to enable C to bring the suit: Subba v. Krishnamachari (1922) 45 Mad. 449, 68 I.C. 69, ('22) A.M. 112; Kandasamy v. Velayutha (1927) 50 Mad. 320, 96 I.C. 993, ('26) A.M. 774. The decree would be the same in form in Bombay if the Court held upon the facts of the case that the purchaser should not be allowed joint possession with A: Bhau v. Budha (1926) 50 Bom. 204, 96 I.C. 166, ('26) A.B. 399.

(c) A mortgages certain ancestral property to M. Subsequent to the mortgage a son B is born to A. Thereafter a partition takes place between A and B, and the mortgaged property is divided between them equally. M then sues A and B for a sale of the mortgaged property. B objects to a decree against his half share. B's objection must be overruled and a decree passed for the sale of the whole property, as the father was

---

(z) Sidheshwar Mukherjee v. Bhubneshwar Prasad (1954) S.C.R. 177.

(a) Sivaramamurthi v. Venkayya (1934) 57 Mad. 667, 148 I.C. 1086, ('34) A.M. 364.

(b) Bhagwan v. Krishnaji (1920) 44 Bom. 967, 58 I.C. 335, ('20) A.B. 104.

(c) Udaram v. Ranu (1875) 11 Bom. H.C. 76; Narayan v. Nathaji (1904) 28 Bom. 201; Venkureddi v. Venku Reddi (1927) 50 Mad. 535, 538, 100 I.C. 1018, ('27) A.M. 472. Also see Peramanayakam v. Sivaraman ('52) A.M. 419 (F.B.).

(d) (1927) 50 Mad. 535, 100 I.C. 1018, ('27) A.M. 471, supra. Also see In Re Official Assignee, Madras v. Venkayya ('65) A.M. 60.

entitled to the whole of the property at the date of the mortgage: Chinnu Pillai v. Kalimuthu (1912) 35 Mad. 47, 9 I.C. 596. The same principle applies to sales: Naro Gopal v. Paragauda (1917) 41 Bom. 347, 39 I.C. 23, ('16) A.B. 130.

(d) A, B and C are members of a coparcenary. A's interest in the coparcenary property is sold, and it is purchased by P. B dies after the sale. P then sues A and C for partition. P is entitled on partition not to one-half, but to one-third only, the latter being A's share at the date of sale. B's one-third share will pass to A and C by survivorship each taking one-sixth.

(e) A, a member of a joint family, sells one of the joint properties $x$ to B. Afterwards A sues his coparceners for partition, and another property $y$ of an equal value is allotted to him on partition. Is B entitled to recover property $y$ from A? It has been held that he is. But it has been held that if B sells property $x$ to C, and a partition subsequently takes place between A and his coparceners, and property $y$ is allotted to A on partition, C is not entitled to recover property $y$ from A, and that C's only remedy is to sue B for damages for breach of warranty, the reason given being that C never bargained for that property.

Privy Council rulings. The three leading Privy Council cases bearing on the subject dealt with in the present section are—

(1) Deendyal v. Jugdeep Narain (1877) 3 Cal. 198, 4 I.A. 247.

(2) Suraj Bunsi Koer v. Sheo Persad (1880) 5 Cal. 148, 6 I.A. 88.

(3) Hardi Narain v. Ruder Perkash (1883) 10 Cal. 626, 11 I.A. 26.

In cases (1) and (3), a money decree was obtained against the father, and his "right, title and interest" in a specific property belonging to the family was sold in execution of the decree, the decree-holder himself being the purchaser. In both cases, the purchaser obtained possession of the whole property. The cases were governed by the Mitakshara law as applied in Bengal, and the suit was brought by the sons to set aside the sale in its entirety on the ground that the debt incurred by the father was without legal necessity, and the sale therefore was invalid and that it did not, according to the Mitakshara law as applied in Bengal [§ 260], pass even the father's interest in the property as the father himself could not have, according to that law, sold his interest. On the other hand, it was contended for the purchaser that the debt was contracted for a justifying necessity and that he was entitled to the whole property including the sons' interest. It was found in each case that the debt was incurred without legal necessity and it was held that the sale being one in execution of a decree (as distinguished from a voluntary sale), the purchaser acquired the father's interest in the property [§ 289]. But the purchaser did not acquire the sons' interest for what was attached and sold was the "right, title and interest" of the father only in the property. The Judicial Committee accordingly passed a decree directing the purchaser to deliver possession of the whole property to the sons and declaring that the purchaser had acquired the interest of the father and was entitled to take proceedings to have that interest ascertained by partition.

Case (2) was also governed by the Mitakshara law, as applied in Bengal. The suit in that case was brought against the father for a sale of a family property mortgaged by him, and a decree was passed for a sale of the property. The property was put up for sale and was purchased by a stranger. The sons had before the sale objected to the sale on the ground that the debt incurred by the father was for immoral purposes, but they were referred by the executing Court to a regular suit. After the sale, the sons brought a suit to set aside the sale. The purchaser had not entered into possession of the property as in cases (1) and (3). It was found that the debt incurred by the father was for immoral purposes. The Judicial Committee held that the proper decree to be passed was an order declaring that the purchaser acquired the undivided interest of the father in the property with such power of ascertaining the extent of that interest by means of a partition as the judgment-debtor himself possessed before the sale and an order confirming the possession of the sons subject to such proceedings to enforce his right as the purchaser might take.

The form of the decree in cases (1) and (3) applies where the purchaser has obtained possession of the property; that in case (2) applies where he has not obtained possession. The substance of these forms is set out in sub-§ (1) of the present section. Their application is not confined to Court-sales. They also apply to voluntary or private sales. It will be noted that in cases (1) and (3), the Judicial Committee directed the purchaser by their judgment to deliver possession of the whole property to the sons, though they declared that the purchaser was entitled to the undivided interest of the father.

262. Position of coparcener whose undivided interest has been sold.—Where the undivided interest of a coparcener has been sold, but there has been no partition either at the instance of the purchaser or of the other coparceners, the sale does not affect the status of such coparcener in the family, nor does it extinguish his right to take by survivorship the interest of other coparceners on their death (e). Even if the other coparceners sue to set aside the sale and to recover their share of the property sold it does not normally amount to a partition. Whether it does or not depends on the form of the plaint and the relief granted (f).

See ill. (d) to § 261, at p. 329.

263. Rights of mortgagee from a coparcener.—(1) The principles laid down in § 261 above apply mutatis mutandis to a mortgagee of joint family property from a coparcener. When a mortgage executed by a father for himself and an only minor son was found to be not binding on the joint property and when another son was born at the time of suit, the mortgage is binding on a half-share and not merely one-third-share (g).

(2) Where a coparcener mortgages a specific property belonging to the joint family, or his undivided interest in such property, that property may at a partition between the coparceners, be allotted to another coparcener subject to the mortgage (as a part of the partition arrangement) or the latter takes the property free from the mortgage. In the former case the other coparceners have in effect obtained the equity of redemption only and are liable in the first place to the mortgagee who may sue them on the mortgage (h). In the latter case the mortgagee is entitled to recover his claim out of the substituted property which falls to the share of the mortgagor at the partition unless the partition is unfair and in fraud of the mortgagee (i); and may follow it in the hands of a subsequent transferee unless the transfer is shown to be without notice (j). In a proper case the partition may be re-opened (k).

264. Renunciation by coparcener of his share.—A coparcener may renounce his interest in the coparcenary property in favour of the other coparceners as a body but not in favour of one or more of them (l). If he renounces in favour of one or more of them the renunciation enures for the benefit of all other coparceners and not for the sole benefit of the coparcener

---

(e) Gurlingapa v. Nandapa (1897) 21 Bom. 797, 803; Subheti v. Nokhesingh (1946) Nagpur 699, ('46) A.N. 354. Reference may be made to Anjancyulu v. Ramayya ('65) A.A.P. 177 (F.B.).

(f) Chimalakonda Ramasubbaraya Sastri v. Ganapathiraju Venkata Appalanarasimharaju (1940) Mad. 405, 188 I.C. 700, ('40) A.M. 217.

(g) Sree Rajah Vasi Reddi Balachandrasekhara Varaprasad Bahadur Manne Sultan Garu v. Lakshminarasimham & Ors. (1940) Mad. 913, ('40) A.M. 691.

(h) Atmaramrao v. Bhupendranath (1941) Nag. 677, 194 I.C. 537, ('40) A.N. 149, (1940) N.L.J. 365.

(i) Muthia v. Appala (1911) 34 Mad. 175, 6 I.C. 991; Bijnath Lall v. Ramoodeen (1873) 1 I.A. 106, 21 W.R. 233; Hem Chunder v. Thako Moni (1893) 20 Cal. 533; Shahebzada v. Hills (1908) 35 Cal. 388; Amolak v. Chandan (1902) 24 All. 485; Nagendra v. Pyari Mohan (1916) 43 Cal. 103, 30 I.C. 420, ('15) A.C. 339.

(j) Kharag Narayan v. Janki Raj (1937) 16 Pat. 230, 160 I.C. 906, (37) A.P. 546.

(k) Lakshman v. Gopal (1899) 23 Bom. 385.

(l) Peddayya v. Ramalingam (1881) 11 Mad. 406. But see Sudarsanam v. Narsimhulu (1902) 25 Mad. 149, 156, and compare Appa v. Range (1883) 6 Mad. 71, where there was no renunciation in fact. The renunciation, however, must be unequivocal if effect has to be given to it.

or coparceners in whose favour the renunciation is made (m). Such renunciation is not invalid even if the renouncing coparcener makes it a condition that he would be paid something towards maintenance (n). Reference may be made to § 328 (6).

Illustrations

A, B, C and D, four Hindu brothers, are members of a joint family. A and B execute a writing renouncing their interest in the joint property in favour of C alone. Subsequently C sues D for partition of the joint property, and claims three-fourths of the property. According to the Madras High Court, C is entitled to three-fourths and D is entitled to one-fourth. According to the Allahabad High Court, the renunciation by A and B, though made in favour of C alone, enures for the benefit of both C and D and the property should be divided equally between C and D.

In a Bombay case, it was held that where X has two sons A and B and A has a son C, and B has a son D, a release by A of his interest in the coparcenary property in favour of his father X enures for the benefit of all the other coparceners including A's son C (o). In a later Bombay case, the facts were these: A had two sons B and C. C had a son D. C was of weak intellect; he lived separately and his father allotted to him property X being part of the joint family properties for his maintenance. After A's death, B entered into possession of properties Y and Z being the rest of the joint family properties. Afterwards D sued his uncle B and his father C for partition. C died pending the suit. It was held that all the three properties should be thrown into hotchpotch and divided equally between B and D (p). Both these decisions were affirmed on appeal by the Judicial Committee. No assignment of a co-sharer's interest in actionable claims is necessary when he retires from the membership of the family business and renounces his share therein (q).

265. Insolvency of manager, father or other coparcener.—(1) Insolvency of manager not being the father of the other coparceners.—On the insolvency of the manager of a joint Hindu family governed by the Mitakshara law, there vest in the Official Assignee or Receiver—

(a) the separate property of the insolvent manager and his undivided interest in the joint family property; and

(b) it was held in the undermentioned cases (r) that the power of the managing member of a joint Hindu family to sell or mortgage the interest of the other coparceners for the satisfaction of joint family debts vests in the Official Assignee under sec. 52 (2) (b) of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act. It was held however that as there is no provision corresponding to that of sec. 52 (2) (b) of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, in the Provincial Insolvency Act, under the latter Act, on the insolvency of the manager his power to sell the share of other members would not vest in the Receiver (s).

It is well settled since the pronouncements of the Judicial Committee in Sat Narain v. Behari Lal (t) and Sat Narain v. Sri Kishen Das (u) that the power

---

(m) Chandar v. Dampat (1894) 16 All. 369; Anandrao v. Vasantrao, 17 M.L.J. 184 (P.C.); Subbanna v. Balasubba Reddi (1945) Mad. 610 (F.B.).

(n) Guruswami v. Marappa (1950) Mad. 665, ('50) A.M. 140.

(o) Wasantrao v. Anandrao (1904) 6 Bom. L.R. 925, 947, affirmed on appeal to the P.C. sub-nom. Anandrao v. Vasantrao (1907) 9 Bom. L.R. 595. See Shivajirao v. Vasantrao (1909) 33 Bom. 267, 2 I.C. 249, contrast Sivagnana Tevar v. Periasami (1878) 1 Mad. 312, 5 I.A. 61.

(p) Mukund v. Balkrishna (1927) 54 I.A. 413, 52 Bom. 8, 105 I.C. 703 ('27) A.PC. 224.

(q) Brijmohan v. Mahabeer (1936) 63 Cal. 194.

(r) Rangayya v. Thanikachalla (1896) 19 Mad. 74 [elder brother manager]; Sardarmal v. Aranvayal (1897) 21 Bom. 205 [uncle manager]; Nunna v. Chidaraboyina (1903) 26 Mad. 214 [eight uncles managers].

(s) Nori Ramasastrulu v. Teluguntla Balakrishna Rao (1943) Mad. 83, 203 I.C. 507, ('42) A.M. 682 (F.B.).

(t) 52 I.A. 22.

(u) 63 I.A. 384.

of the father, to sell the interest of his sons is not 'property' within the meaning of sec. 17 of the P.T.I. Act. It is not the property itself but the power of the father relating to that property that would vest in and could be exercised by the Official Assignee under sec. 52 (2) (b) of the P.T.I. Act. Accepting that principle, the question would be whether the power of the manager to sell the family property for joint debts could come within sec. 52 (2) (b) of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act. Clause (b) speaks of "the capacity to exercise and to take proceedings for exercising all such powers in, or over or in respect of property as might have been exercised by the insolvent for his own benefit at the commencement of his insolvency or before his discharge." The expression "own benefit" occurring in the clause means the exclusive benefit of the bankrupt. As the right of the manager to sell family property is not exclusively for his benefit but is for the benefit of all the members the proper view to take would be that such power cannot vest in the Receiver under sec. 52 (2) (b) of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (v). With regard to the father the position is undoubtedly different for the father has the power to have the son's interest in the family estate sold for discharge of his own personal debts.

(2) Insolvency of father.—On the insolvency of the father of a joint Hindu family governed by the Mitakshara law, there vest in the Official Assignee or Receiver—

(a) The separate property of the insolvent father and his undivided interest in the joint family property; and

(b) The power which the father has to alienate the joint family property including the interest of his sons therein for paying his antecedent debts not contracted for an immoral purpose. In cases governed by the Presidency-Towns Insolvency Act, 1909, this power vests in the Official Assignee under sec. 52(2) of the Act (w). It does not pass by survivorship to the son and it may be exercised by the Official Assignee or by the Receiver after the father's death (x). As to cases governed by the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920, the law on this point is now settled by legislation and the Provincial Insolvency (Amendment) Act, 1948, which came into force on 12th April 1948, enacts as follows:—

Sec. 28 (A) "Insolvent's Property to comprise certain capacity:—

The property of the insolvent shall comprise and shall always be deemed to have comprised also the capacity to exercise and to take proceedings for exercising all such powers in order or in respect of property as might have been exercised by the insolvent for his own benefit at the commencement of his insolvency or before his discharge." Thus there is no longer any distinction between the provisions of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, and those of the Provincial Act, in this respect and the change of law in the

---

(v) Per Leach, C.J. in Nori Ramasastrulu v. Teluguntla (1943) Mad. 83 (F.B.); Virupaksha v. Chanalal (1943) A.M. 652.

(w) Official Assignee of Madras v. Ramchandra (1923) 46 Mad. 54, 68 I.C. 898, ('23) A.M. 55; Sellamuthu Servai, In re (1924) 47 Mad. 87, 80 I.C. 108, ('24) A.M. 411 [F.B.]; Sat Narain v. Sri Kishen (1936) 63 I.A. 384, (1936) 17 Lah. 644, 38 Bom. L.R. 1129, 164 I.C. 6, ('36) A.PC. 277; Balusami, In re (1928) 51 Mad. 417, 112 I.C. 541, ('28) A.M. 735 [F.B.]; (1903) 26 Mad. 214, supra [Indian Insolvency Act, 1848, s. 30]; Wasudeo v. Devidas (1948) Nag. 85 (F.B.).

(x) Fakirchand v. Motichand (1883) 7 Bom. 438 [Ind. I. Act, 1848, s. 7 applied].

Provincial Act has expressly been made retrospective (c). It was accordingly held by the Supreme Court that where a Hindu father who has mortgaged the joint family property for an antecedent debt which is not illegal or immoral becomes insolvent and the Receiver sells the property, the interest of his sons in the property also vests in the purchaser, even in the case of a sale held before the Amendment Act of 1948 came into force, and the sons cannot redeem the property (d).

(c) As the interest of the son does not vest in the Official Assignee or Receiver, it may be attached even after the insolvency of the father by a creditor of the father in execution of a decree obtained by him against the father or against the father and son in respect of a personal debt of the father, unless, it has been previously sold by the Official Assignee or Receiver, and leave of the Insolvency Court is not necessary for attaching the son's shares (e). After attachment the Official Assignee or Receiver cannot exercise the power of sale as the father himself could not have done so [ill. (a)]; see § 295(5). Where the son's share is attached after the insolvency of the father, the proper procedure is to carry out execution proceedings in combination with the Official Assignee or Receiver so that the entire property may be sold at the same time to the benefit both of the attaching creditor and the father's creditors (f).

(d) As in the case of the father, so in the case of the Official Assignee and Receiver, the power to sell the son's share for paying the father's debts subsists if at all only so long as the family remains joint. After partition the Official Assignee or Receiver cannot sell the son's interest as the father himself could not have done so [§ 294(4)]. It has accordingly been held that if the son sues the father for partition of joint family property pending the insolvency of the father, the Official Assignee or Receiver cannot sell the son's share. The institution of a suit for partition puts an end to the joint family status [§ 325(1)] and with it, to the right also of the father to sell his son's share for his debts, and as a result, extinguishes the right (even if it can pass otherwise) also of the Official Assignee or Receiver to sell the son's share for the father's debts (g). But though the Official Assignee or Receiver cannot sell the son's share after the institution of a suit for partition, he can institute a suit against the son for realizing debts due to the father's creditors and enforce the decree in such suit by selling the son's share or he may apply to be joined as a party in the son's suit for partition and by proper procedure can obtain a decree which he can execute against the son's share (h) [ill. (b)].

---

(c) See Official Receiver of Ramnad v. Devarayan (1948) 2 M.L.J. 415.

(d) Cheruvu Nageswaraswami v. Rajah Vadrevu Viswasundara Rao (1953) S.C.R. 894, ('53) A.SC. 370.

(e) Arunachalam v. Sabaratnam (1939) Mad. 585.

(f) Allahabad Bank Ltd., Bareilly v. Bhagwan Das (1926) 48 All. 343, 92 I.C. 309, ('26) A.A. 262 [Prov. I. Act]; (1925) 49 Bom. 785, 89 I.C. 996, ('25) A.B. 416, supra.

(g) Balusami Ayyar, In re (1928) 51 Mad. 417, 112 I.C. 541, ('28) A.M. 735 [F.B.]; Krishnamurthy v. Sundaramurthy (1932) 55 Mad. 558, 138 I.C. 225, ('32) A.M. 381; Sat Narain v. Sri Kishen Das, 63 I.A. 384, 17 Lah. 644, 38 Bom. L.R. 1129, 164 I.C. 6, ('36) A.PC. 277. This case overrules the contrary decision of the Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court, in Bankey Lal v. Durga Prasad, 53 All. 868, 135 I.C. 139, ('31) A.A. 512, on this point.

(h) (1928) 51 Mad. 417, 443, 467-468, 112 I.C. 541, ('28) A.M. 735 [F.B.], supra; Chatrati Sriramamurthi v. Official Receiver ('57) A. Andh. Pra. 692; Bindya Wasini v. Dharamnath Prasad ('68) A.P. 378.

(3) Insolvency of other coparceners.—On the insolvency of any other coparcener, his separate property and his interest in the joint family property vest in the Official Assignee or Receiver and are available for the benefit of his personal creditors (i). But the creditors of the insolvent's father are not entitled to priority over those of the insolvent (j). The purchaser of the undivided interest of the insolvent coparcener from the Official Assignee is like any other private purchaser and is not entitled to mesne profits prior to a suit for partition (k).

Illustrations

(a) A and his son constitute a joint Hindu family. A is adjudged an insolvent on the petition of his personal creditors, and a Receiver is appointed of his property. The family owns five immovable properties of which two are sold by the Receiver. Afterwards one of A's personal creditors who had obtained a decree against A and his son attaches the son's share in the remaining three properties in execution of the decree. The attachment is valid and the creditor is entitled to sell the son's share in these properties in execution of his decree and apply the sale proceeds in payment of the judgment debt. The Receiver has no right after the attachment to sell the son's share in those properties for the benefit of the general body of A's creditors (l).

(b) A and his sons constitute a joint Hindu family. A is adjudged an insolvent on the petition of his personal creditors, and his property vests in the Official Assignee. Pending A's insolvency A's sons institute a suit against A for partition of the joint family properties. The Official Assignee cannot, after the institution of the suit, sell the son's shares in the joint family properties, though he may seize them in execution of a decree that he may obtain against them in a regular suit to be filed by him against the sons in respect of the father's debts: Balusami Ayyar, In re (1928) 51 Mad. 417, 112 I.C. 541, ('28) A.M. 735 [F.B.]. If the Official Assignee or Receiver himself files a suit for partition against the sons after the insolvency of the father, and allows a decree to be passed allotting separate shares to the sons, and the sons take possession of their shares, he cannot afterwards apply to sell those shares for the benefit of the father's creditors: Trayamkeshar v. Babu Basant (1930) 5 Luck. 248, 123 I.C. 61 ('30) A.O. 36.

Insolvency Acts.—See Indian Insolvency Act, 11 and 12 Vict. c. 21, ss. 7 and 30 [repealed]; Presidency-Towns Insolvency Act, 1909, s. 2(e), and ss. 17, 28, and 52; and Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920, s. 2(d) and ss. 28, 28(A) and 37.

Joint Possession.—According to the Madras High Court the Official Assignee is entitled, on the insolvency of any coparcener, to joint possession with the other coparceners (m). [Contrast s. 261.]

Sat Narain v. Behari Lal (n).—To appreciate the exact point of decision of the Privy Council in this case, it may be necessary to refer briefly to the facts of the case. The plaintiff who was the appellant before the Privy Council filed his suit claiming a right of pre-emption over an adjoining house basing his claim on the ground of contiguity. The defence was that as the father of the plaintiff who was the karta of a joint Mitakshara family, had been adjudicated under the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, the plaintiff's interest in the property by virtue of which the right of pre-emption was claimed vested in the Official Assignee, and hence no longer existed. The trial Court negatived the defence and gave the plaintiff a decree. On appeal to the Lahore High Court the learned Judges who heard the appeal made an order referring to a Full Bench the following question:—

> "Does an order of adjudication against a father vest in the Official Assignee his son's interest in the joint family property?"

The Full Bench presided over by Shadilal C.J. answered the question in the affirmative. Against that an appeal was taken to the Privy Council and the Judicial Committee

---

(i) Nunna v. Chidaraboyina (1903) 26 Mad. 214, 221; Lakshmanan Chettiar v. Srinivasa Iyengar (1937) Mad. 203, 166 I.C. 378, ('37) A.M. 131.

(j) Pr. N. Sm. Chockalingam Chettiar v. Official Assignee of Madras (1943) Mad. 603, 206 I.C. 482, 69 I.A. 157, ('43) A.PC. 15.

(k) Venkatarayudu v. Sivaramakrishnayya (1935) 58 Mad. 126, 153 I.C. 368, ('34) A.M. 676.

(l) Gopalakrishnayya v. Gopalan (1928) 51 Mad. 342, ('28) A.M. 479. The decision is not correct with respect to the first two items.

(m) Official Assignee v. Ramachandra (1923) 46 Mad. 54, 68 I.C. 898, ('23) A.M. 55; Venkatram v. Chokkier (1928) 51 Mad. 567, 109 I.C. 516, ('28) A.M. 531.

(n) (1925) 52 I.A. 22, 6 Lah. 1, 84 I.C. 883, ('25) A.PC. 18, reversing Beharilal v. Sat Narain (1922) 3 Lah. 329, 69 I.C. 486, ('23) A.L. 1.

reversed the decision of the Full Bench and restored the judgment of the trial Judge with slight modification.

Their Lordships referred in their judgment to the provisions of S. 17 and S. 2(e) of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, and held that as the father's power of disposal over the son's property was not absolute but conditional on his having debts of a particular type, it could not be regarded as property as defined in S. 2(e) which contemplates an absolute and unconditional power of disposal. "It may be" so runs the judgment "that under the provisions of sec. 52 or in some other way, that property may in a proper case be made available for payment of the father's just debts; but it is quite a different thing to say that by virtue of his insolvency alone it vests in the Assignee, and no such provision should be read into the Act."

In the second case of Sat Narain v. Sri Kishen (o) it was expressly held by the Privy Council that the capacity of the father of a joint Hindu family governed by the Mitakshara law to exercise his power to sell the joint family estate to enforce the pious obligations of his sons to discharge untainted antecedent debts, vests in the Official Assignee under Sec. 52(2)(b) of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act; and although such power could be exercised subject to all the limitations under which it could be exercised by the father himself it does not militate against the provisions of sec. 49(5) or of sec. 17 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act.

The position therefore is: on the insolvency of the father, the son's share as such does not vest in the Official Assignee. The decisions which took that view must be held to be incorrect (p). What vests in the Assignee is the power to sell, and the power being exercisable for the personal benefit of the father can be regarded as "property" of the father himself and is recognised as such in the recent legislation (q)

(4) Two or more members of a joint family may be adjudicated insolvents on a single petition if they are liable on a joint debt and have committed a joint act of insolvency, but the joint family as such cannot be adjudicated insolvent (r).

(5) See § 522 Mulla's Laws of Insolvency 2nd Edition pp. 490-498. Also see ibid. pp. 498-501.

266. Joint family firm—Minor—Insolvency.—A minor member of a joint family firm cannot as such be adjudged an insolvent (s).

A Hindu dies leaving a business. On his death the business descends to his five sons, A, B, C, D and E. E is a minor. The firm is unable to pay its debts. A, B, C and D may be adjudged insolvents, but not E, as E is a minor. This proceeds on the rule of English as well as Indian law that an infant partner cannot be adjudicated an insolvent (t). But though E cannot be adjudged an insolvent, the Official Assignee succeeds on the insolvency of A, B, C and D, the managing members of the joint firm, to the right of a manager to alienate the joint family property including the share of minor coparceners for the payment of debts incurred in the course of the business (u).

The above observations apply only to an ancestral business. A different rule applies when a new business is started by the adult members of a joint family after the death of the ancestor. In such a case the matter rests purely on contract with the result that on the insolvency of A, B, C and D, the Official Assignee does not succeed to the rights of a manager of a joint family firm, but gets a right merely to recover the minor's share

---

(o) 63 I.A. 384.

(p) See Fakirchand v. Motichand (1888) 7 Bom. 438.

(q) See Provincial Insolvency Amendment Act, 1948,

(r) Mahabir Prasad Poddar v. Ram Tahal Mandar (1937) 16 Pat. 724, 172 I.C. 737, ('37) A.P. 665; Pohlo Mal v. Basant Ram I.L.R. 1941 Lah. 55, 92 I.C. 532.

(s) Sanyasi Charan v. Asutosh (1915) 42 Cal. 225, 26 I.C. 836, ('15) A.C. 482; Hansraj Malji In re (1883) 7 Bom. 411, 413. See also Nobodeep Chunder, In re (1886) 13 Cal. 68.

(t) (1915) 42 Cal. 225, 26 I.C. 836, ('15) A.C. 482, supra.

(u) Nunna v. Chidaraboyina (1903) 26 Mad. 214, but see 42 Cal. 225, 233-240, 26 I.C. 836, ('15) A.C. 482, supra; Mt. Champa v. Official Receiver, Karachi (1934) 15 Lah. 9, 144 I.C. 636, ('33) A.L. 901; Bhola Prasad v. Ramkumar Marwari (1932) 11 Pat. 399, 319 I.C. 31, ('32) A.P. 231.

for the benefit of the creditors of the partnership, if the minor was admitted to the benefits of the partnership within the meaning of sec. 247 of the Contract Act (v).

It is well established that a minor cannot be a partner, but he may be admitted to the benefits of a partnership between the adult members in respect of a new business started by them, in which case the minor's share in the property of the firm is liable for the obligations of the firm. See notes to § 234, "New business," at p. 289.

VI.—SETTING ASIDE ALIENATIONS

267. Setting aside gifts.—A coparcener, according to the Mitakshara law, cannot make a gift of the coparcenary property, not even of his own interest in the property [§ 258]: Therefore, where such a gift is made, and it is objected to by the other coparceners, the Court will set aside the gift in its entirety. The gift is not valid even to the extent of the donor's interest in the property [§ 270, sub-§ (1), ill. (a)].

The above rule does not apply to gifts by a father of ancestral property to the extent mentioned in §§ 225 and 226.

When a coparcener makes a gift of his entire interest in favour of the sole remaining coparcener such gift may be held to be valid either on the principle of renunciation or as a transfer with the consent of all the coparceners, the consent of the other coparcener, who is himself the donee, being presumed (w).

268. Setting aside sales and mortgage—Bombay and Madras.—(1) Where a member of a joint family governed by the Mitakshara law as administered in the Bombay and Madras States sells or mortgages more than his own interest in the joint family property, the alienation not being one for legal necessity [§242] or for payment by a father of an antecedent debt [§ 295], the other members or persons to whom their interests in the property have passed (x), are entitled to have the alienation set aside to the extent of their own interest therein (y). The alienation cannot be set aside in its entirety, for according to the law as prevailing in Bombay and Madras, a coparcener can alienate his own interest in the joint property. If any coparcener has consented to the alienation, the alienation will bind his interest also [§ 242(3)].

(2) Equities on setting aside alienations.—Where an alienation is not for legal necessity or for payment of an antecedent debt, and it is set aside at the instance of the other coparceners as regards their shares, there is no equity entitling the alienee to a refund of a proportionate part of the purchase-money in respect of those shares (z). And it has been held that even if a suit is brought by the sons for a partition and for setting aside an alienation made by their father, the sons are not, as a condition to recovering their share of the property, under a pious obligation to refund to the alienee their share of the consideration received by the father. The ground of the decision is that the pious obligation to pay the father's debts attaches only to a debt existing at the date of the suit, and that the consideration received by the father from the alienee is not in the first instance a debt due from the

---

(v) Sanyasi Charan v. Krishnadhan (1922) 49 I.A. 108, 49 Cal. 560, 67 I.C. 124, ('22) A.PC. 237 [business not ancestral but new—case governed by Contract Act, s. 247, and decided under that section].

(w) Ram Saran Singh v. Prithipal ('50) A.A. 224.

(x) Alla Venkataramanna v. Palacherla Mangamma, (1944) Mad. 867.

(y) Marappa v. Rangasami (1900) 23 Mad. 89; Naro v. Paragowda (1917) 19 Bom. L.R. 69, 39 I.C. 23, ('16) A.B. 130; Ramappa v. Yellappa (1928) 52 Bom. 307, 109 I.C. 532, ('28) A.B. 150.

(z) Virabhadra v. Guruvenkata (1899) 22 Mad. 312.

father; it becomes a debt only when the alienation is set aside and a decree is obtained by the alienee against the father for failure of consideration (a). [See the cases cited in § 269 (2)].

The method of adjusting equities between alienee and non-alienating coparcener was explained in detail in a Full Bench decision of the Madras High Court (b).

Equities on setting aside alienations.—The rule that a coparcener cannot make a gift of his share cannot be evaded by making a sale at a grossly inadequate price (c).

Improvements made by alienee.—See § 185 [Equities on setting aside alienation by widow], and the undermentioned case (d).

Mesne profits on setting aside alienation.—Where an alienation is set aside under this section, and the purchaser is in possession, he may be required to pay mesne profits from the date on which the sale is repudiated by the other coparceners, but not from the date of sale, the sale being valid until it is repudiated (e).

Partition—Shares on partition—Mother.—In a suit by a son for partition and separate possession of his share after setting aside the alienation of joint family property made by his father, the mother who is a party, is entitled to a share, if the Court comes to a conclusion that the alienation is not for a purpose binding upon the family consisting of the father, mother and sons (f).

269. Setting aside sales and mortgages—Other States.—(1) Where a member of a joint family governed by the Mitakshara law as administered in Bengal, Bihar and Uttar Pradesh sells or mortgages the joint family property or any portion thereof without the consent of his coparceners, the alienation is liable to be set aside wholly unless it was for legal necessity [§ 242], or for payment by a father of an antecedent debt [§ 295], and it does not pass the share even of the alienating coparcener. The result is that if the alienation is neither for legal necessity nor for the payment of an antecedent debt, the other coparceners are entitled to a declaration that the alienation is void in its entirety (g). Even in the Punjab where by custom a son cannot claim partition against the father, the son is entitled to joint possession with the father when the alienation is set aside (h). See § 269 above.

It has been held in Allahabad and Patna that the alienation can be impeached only by a coparcener other than the alienating coparcener or by a transferee who has acquired the interest of the entire joint family in the property alienated (i).

---

(a) Srinivasa v. Kuppuswami (1921) 44 Mad. 801, 64 I.C. 698, ('21) A.M. 447; Polavarapu, Lingayya & Ors. v. Vupputuri Punnayya & Ors. (1942) Mad. 502, 198 I.C. 588, ('42) A.M. 183 [F.B.]. Also see Satyanarayanamurthi v. Satyanarayanamurthi ('66) A.A.P. 349 (sale justifiable in part for antecedent debt).

(b) Peramanayakam v. Sivaraman ('52) A.M. 419, (1952) Mad. 835.

(c) Rottala v. Pulicat (1904) 27 Mad. 162.

(d) Ramappa v. Yenappa (1928) 52 Bom. 307, 109 I.C. 532, ('28) A.B. 150.

(e) Ramasami v. Venkatarama (1923) 46 Mad. 815, 822, 75 I.C. 406, ('24) A.M. 81; Gangabisan v. Vallabhdas (1924) 48 Bom. 428, 432, 87 I.C. 703, ('24) A.B. 433.

(f) Parappa v. Mallappa ('56) A.B. 332 (F.B.).

(g) Sadabart Prasad v. Foolbash Koer (1869) 3 Beng. L.R. [F.B.R.] 31 [mortgage]; Madro Parshad v. Mehrban Singh (1891) 18 Cal. 157, 17 I.A. 194 [sale]; Balgobind Das v. Narain Lal (1893) 15 All. 339, 20 I.A. 116 [mortgage]; Chandradeo v. Mata Prasad (1909) 31 All. 176, 208, 1 I.C. 479 [F.B.] [mortgage]; Kali Shankar v. Nawab Singh (1909) 31 All. 507, 3 I.C. 909 [mortgage]; Narain Prasad v. Sarnam Singh (1917) 44 I.A. 163, 39 All. 500, 40 I.C. 284, ('17) A.PC. 41 [mortgage]; Anant Ram v. Collector of Etah (1918) 40 All. 171, 44 I.C. 290, ('17) A.PC. 188 [mortgage]; Sahu Ram v. Bhup Singh (1917) 44 I.A. 126, 39 All. 437, 39 I.C. 280, ('17) A.PC. 61 [mortgage]; Manna Lal v. Karu Singh (1920) 1 Pat. L.J. 6, 56 I.C. 766, ('19) A.PC. 108 [mortgage]; Ram Sahai v. Parbhu Dayal (1921) 43 All. 655, 63 I.C. 358, ('21) A.A. 137 [sale]; Badam v. Madho Ram (1921) 2 Lah. 338, 66 I.C. 19, ('22) A.L. 241 [sale by father]; Daya Ram v. Harcharn Das (1927) 8 Lah. 678, 107 I.C. 781, ('28) A.L. 111 [sale by father]; Ramjee Rai v. Gopal Ahir ('63) A.P. 34; Amar Dayal v. Har Pershad (1920) 5 Pat. L.J. 605, 58 I.C. 72, ('20) A.P. 433 [mortgage]; Ram Bilas v. Ramyad (1920) 5 Pat. L.J. 622, 58 I.C. 303, ('20) A.P. 441 [mortgage]; Mathura v. Rajkumar (1921) 6 Pat. L.J. 526, 62 I.C. 132, ('21) A.P. 447 [F.B.] [mortgage]; Angraj v. Ram Rup (1931) 6 Luck. 158, 127 I.C. 38, ('30) A.O. 284 [suit for possession by mortgagee]; Malak Chand v. Hira Lal (1936) 11 Luck. 449, 157 I.C. 945, ('35) A.O. 510; Makhanlal v. Harnarain ('60) A.M.P. 56.

(h) Raj Kishore v. Madan Gopal (1932) 13 Lah. 491, 143 I.C. 249, ('32) A.C. 636.

(i) Madan Lal v. Gajendrapal (1929) 51 All. 575, 580, 116 I.C. 436, ('29) A.A. 243; Madan

The power of avoidance in such a transferee cannot be greater than that of the coparcenery body at the time of the transfer (j).

(2) Equities on setting aside alienations.—Where in Bengal and Uttar Pradesh an alienation is set aside in its entirety, the question often arises whether the alienee is entitled to any equity or charge on the alienor's share for the consideration paid by him to the alienor. It has been held by the Judicial Committee that he is not (k), except perhaps in special circumstances such as those which existed in Mahabeer Persad v. Ramyad (l). In that case the High Court of Bengal declared a charge on the shares of the mortgagors (being the father and his eldest son) in favour of the mortgagee on the ground that they had represented to him that they had power to charge the joint family property which, in fact they had not [ills. (1) and (3)]. And it has been held by the same court that even where such circumstances exist, the equity (if any) arising out of them cannot be enforced where the coparcener who made the alienation is dead and his share has passed by survivorship to the other coparceners, such as nephews, who are not liable for the personal debts and obligations of the deceased (m). They take the share of the deceased in their right by survivorship, and are not affected by any such equity [ill. (2)].

There is a conflict of opinion whether where a sale is effected by the father, and the suit is brought by the sons in their father's lifetime to set aside the sale, the sale not being one either for legal necessity or for the payment of an antecedent debt, the sons are entitled to a decree without refunding the whole or any part of the purchase money to the purchaser. The High Court of Calcutta has held that they are not entitled to a decree without refunding the whole of the purchase money, the reason given being that immediately the sale is set aside, the purchaser would be entitled to recover the whole of the purchase money from the father, and it would thus become a debt due by the father for which the whole of the joint family property, including the property sold, would be liable by reason of the son's pious obligation to discharge the father's debt, unless it was contracted for an immoral purpose (n). This view has been dissented from by the High Court of Lahore (o), Madras (p), Allahabad (q) and Orissa (*q*1).

---

Lal v. Chiddu (1931) 53 All. 21, 23-26, 128 I.C. 829, ('30) A.A. 852; Kharag Narayan v. Janki Rai (1937) 16 Pat. 230, 169 I.C. 906, ('37) A.P. 546; Shyam Behari Singh v. Rameshwar Prasad Sahu (1941) 20 Pat. 904, 198 I.C. 208, ('42) A.P. 213; Gomti v. Rameshwardas ('71) A. Raj. 211 (F.B.).

(j) Chandradeo v. Mata Prasad (1909) 31 All. 176, 1 I.C. 479.

(k) Narain Prasad v. Sarnam Singh (1917) 44 I.A. 163, 39 All. 500, 40 I.C. 284, ('17) A.PC. 41 [mortgage]; Anant Ram v. Collector of Etah (1918) 40 All. 171, 176, 44 I.C. 290, ('17) A.PC. 188, followed in Ram Sahai v. Parbhu Dayal (1921) 43 All. 655, 63 I.C. 358, ('21) A.A. 137; Amar Dayal v. Har Pershad (1920) 5 Pat. L.J. 605, 58 I.C. 72, ('20) A.P. 433.

(l) (1874) 12 Beng. L.R. 90, as explained in Madho Parshad's case (1890) 18 Cal. 157, 160, 17 I.A. 194, and Narain Prasad's case (1917) 44 I.A. 163, 164, 165, 39 All. 500, 504, 40 I.C. 284, ('17) A.PC. 41; Mahabeer Persad's case was followed in Jamuna v. Ganga (1892) 19 Cal. 401, 410, where the alienation was impeached by a stranger to the family who had succeeded to the rights of all the coparceners including a coparcener who had not consented to the alienation. See also (1920) 5 Pat. L.J. 605, 58 I.C. 72, ('20) A.P. 433, supra.

(m) Madho Parshad v. Mehrban Singh (1891) 18 Cal. 157, 17 I.A. 194.

(n) Koer Hasmat Rai v. Sunder Das (1885) 11 Cal. 396. But see Modhoo Dyal Singh v. Golbur Singh (1868) 9 W.R. 511.

(o) Daya Ram v. Harcharn Das (1927) 8 Lah. 678, 107 I.C. 781, ('28) A.L. 111; Badam v. Madho Ram (1921) 2 Lah. 338, 66 I.C. 19, ('22) A.L. 241.

(p) Srinivasa v. Kuppuswami (1921) 44 Mad. 801, 64 I.C. 698, ('21) A.M. 447; Satyanarayanamurthi v. Satyanarayanamurthi ('66) A.A.P. 349.

(q) Madan Gopal v. Sati Prasad (1917) 39 All. 485, 40 I.C. 451, ('17) A.A. 326; Chandradeo v. Mata Prasad (1909) 31 All. 176, 1 I.C. 479.

(*q*1) Dhanurjay v. Dhano Ganda ('68) A. Orissa 179.

It has been held by the last mentioned Courts that the pious obligation to pay the father's debt does not attach except to a debt existing at the date of the suit, and the price received by the father from the purchaser is in no sense a debt owing by him to the purchaser. It becomes a debt only when the sale is set aside by the Court, for it is only then that the purchaser is entitled to a refund of the price for failure of consideration. It has accordingly been held by those Courts, that the sons are not, as a condition to recovering the property, under a pious obligation to refund any portion of the purchase money, and the sale must be set aside unconditionally.

(3) An alienation which does not bind the share of the alienor himself cannot bind the share of a coparcener consenting thereto [§ 242(3)].

Illustrations

(1) A and his son B are members of a joint family governed by the Mitakshara law as administered in Allahabad. B mortgages his half share to M for his own personal benefit without A's consent and without legal necessity. M sues A and B for a decree for sale on the mortgage. The mortgage is void, and it cannot be enforced even against B's share. But M may obtain a money decree against B personally, and attach and sell B's interest in the property in execution of the decree: Balgobind Das v. Narain Lal (1893) 20 I.A. 116, 15 All. 339. [There were no special circumstances in this case to entitle M to a charge on B's share for the money advanced by him to B.]

(2) A and his brother's son B are members of a joint family governed by the Mitakshara law as administered in Bengal. A sells his undivided interest in the joint family property to P for Rs. 10,000 without the consent of B and without legal necessity. Afterwards A dies, and his share passes by survivorship to his nephew B. After A's death, B sues P to set aside the sale. The sale by A, though it was of his own share, is void and B is entitled to A's share by survivorship. Even if there was any equity in P's favour, B could not be affected by it. B takes A's share in his own right by survivorship and is not liable for the personal debts of his uncle: Madho Parshad v. Mehrban Singh (1891) 17 I.A. 194, 18 Cal. 157.

(3) A joint family consists of three Hindu brothers and their sons, governed by the Mitakshara law as administered in Allahabad. The three brothers mortgage the joint family property without the consent of their sons and without legal necessity. The mortgage is void in its entirety. There being no special circumstances in the case, the mortgagee is not entitled to a charge even on the shares of the mortgagors in the property: Narain Prasad v. Sarnam Singh (1917) 44 I.A. 163, 39 All. 500, 40 I.C. 284, ('17) A.PC. 41.

In Madho Parshad's case (1891) 17 I.A. 194, 18 Cal. 157 [ill. (2)], Lord Watson declined to apply the rule in Mahabeer Persad's case on the ground that no analogy existed between the latter case and the case before the Board. In the case of Narain Prasad v. Sarnam Singh (1917) 44 I.A. 163, 165, 39 All. 500, 40 I.C. 284, ('17) A.PC. 41 [ill. (3)] the Judicial Committee appear to confine the applicability of the rule in Mahabeer Persad's case to cases where an express representation has been made out. Their Lordships declined to hold that such a representation was to be implied in all cases, and observed: "Whether that particular case (i.e., Mahabeer Persad's case) was rightly decided or not it is not necessary to consider here, because the learned judges proceeded upon the footing that there had been the representation referred to. On looking at the facts their Lordships agree with the observation of Mr. Parikh that there was very little, if any, evidence of such a representation, but that there was such a representation was the basis of the judgment, and unless the learned judges had held that an equity arose out of it, their judgment would have amounted to this, that for every mortgage by the head of a joint family the property of the joint family could be made available to the extent of the interest of the mortgagor. Now whatever may happen when there are special circumstances, such as there were in the case referred to, that is not the general law." This decision was followed by the Judicial Committee in Anant Ram v. Collector of Etah (1918) 40 All. 171, 44 I.C. 290 ('17) A.PC. 188. The result is that the rule in Mahabeer Persad's case can no longer be applied except in cases where special circumstances, such as an express representation, exist.

Lease.—A lease stands on the same footing as a sale or mortgage (s).

---

(s) Jadu v. Abdul (1911) 16 C.W.N. 93, 11 I.C. 892.

Mesne profits on setting aside alienation.—Where the purchaser from a coparcener has entered into possession, he may be required to pay mesne profits from the date of repudiation of the sale by the other coparcener (t).

270. Objections to alienations by coparceners existing (born or conceived) at the time of the alienation.—(1) Where an alienation is made by a coparcener in excess of his powers, it may be set aside to the extent mentioned in §§ 268 and 269 at the instance of any other coparcener who was in existence at the time of the completion of the alienation (u). It may also be set aside at the instance of any coparcener who, though born subsequent to the date of alienation, was in his mother's womb at the date of alienation; the reason is that under the Hindu law a son conceived is, in many respects, equal to a son born (v).

Illustrations

(a) A, governed by the Mitakshara law, makes a gift of certain ancestral property to B. A has no son at the date of the gift, but a son is born to him two months later. The gift may be set aside at the instance of the son, as he was in his mother's womb at the date of the gift. The transaction being a gift, it will be set aside altogether, and not merely to the extent of the son's share [§ 267]: Ramanna v. Venkata (1888) 11 Mad. 246.

(b) A, governed by the Mitakshara law as applied in Madras, sells certain ancestral property to B without legal necessity. The sale may be set aside at the instance of a son who, though born subsequent to the date of sale, was in his mother's womb at the time of sale. It will not, however, be set aside altogether but to the extent only of the son's interest in the property [§ 268]: Sabapathi v. Somasundaram (1893) 16 Mad. 76.

(c) A and his son B are members of a joint family governed by the Mitakshara law. A sells certain ancestral property to C including B's interest therein, without B's consent to pay an antecedent debt of his not contracted for immoral or illegal purposes. The sale is valid in its entirety. It cannot be impeached by B, for it is made to pay his father's debts [§ 295]: see Girdharee Lall v. Kantoo Lall (1874) 14 Beng. L.R. 187, 1 I.A. 321.

At the time of completion of the alienation.—See ill. (a) to sub-§ (2) below, and the note appended to the illustration.

Rights of a son in his mother's womb.—Under the Hindu law a son begotten (or conceived, or in his mother's womb) is equal, in many respects, to a son actually in existence. Thus a son in his mother's womb—and this also applies to a daughter—is entitled to inheritance, if born alive. He is also entitled to a share on partition. Further, he is entitled to take coparcenary property by survivorship as against a legatee of such property under his father's will. That is to say, just as a son living at the time of his father's death is entitled on his father's death to take coparcenary property by survivorship, so is a son who is in his mother's womb at the time of the father's death. The father cannot bequeath coparcenary property to a third person so as to defeat the son's right of survivorship whether the son was in existence at the time of his death or was in his mother's womb at the time [§ 256]. Lastly, an alienation that can be impeached by a son actually existing at the time of alienation can also be impeached by a son who was in his mother's womb at the time.

(2) By after-born coparceners.—An alienation of joint family property made by a father, there being no male issue in existence at the date of the alienation, is valid though made without legal necessity. Such an alienation cannot be objected to by a son born after the date of the alienation on the ground that it was made without legal necessity (x). But an alienation made

---

(t) Bhirgu Nath v. Narsingh (1917) 39 All. 61, 35 I.C. 475, ('17) A.A. 479.

(u) Ponnambala v. Sundarappayyar (1897) 20 Mad. 354; Narain Das v. Har Dayal (1913) 35 All. 571, 21 I.C. 830.

(v) Guramma v. Mallappa ('64) A.S.C. 510, 66 Bom. L.R. 284; Sabapathi v. Somasundaram (1893) 16 Mad. 76 [sale]; Ramanna v. Venkata (1888) 11 Mad. 246 [gift]; Girdharee Lall v. Kantoo Lall (1874) 14 Beng. L.R. 187, 1 I.A. 321; Deo Narain v. Ganga Singh (1915) 37 All. 162, 26 I.C. 871, ('15) A.A. 65; Basayya v. Balingayya (1947) Bom. 750; Venkata Chenchayya v. Ramalingam ('57) A. Andh. Pra. 744.

(x) Bholanath v. Kartick (1907) 34 Cal. 372; Suraj Prasad v. Makhan Lal (1922) 44 All. 382, 385, 66 I.C. 134, ('22) A.A. 51; Biswesswar v. Jaineswar ('68) Cal. 213.

by a father who has sons then living not being one for legal necessity, or for payment of an antecedent debt, if made without their consent, may be set aside by one of those sons—partially or wholly according to the state in which the question arises (§§ 259 and 260). If all the sons living at the time of the alienation predecease their father and no other son is born before the death of the last of them so that the father remains the sole coparcener for some time, then the alienation is not liable to be impeached by after-born sons (y). If, before the sons alive at the time of the alienation are all dead, another son is born, in the States referred to in § 260, the alienation may be set aside at the instance of the latter also (z), unless before his birth, the former ratified it (a), or their cause of action is lost by limitation (b). But in the States referred to in § 259, if the cause of action of the coparceners who did not consent to the alienations is barred, the alienation becomes unimpeachable (c). If the coparcener is born before their right is barred, he becomes a coparcener with them in the property, the title to which is not yet lost by the adverse possession of the alienee and all of them can sue to recover their shares or the after-born coparcener alone can sue to recover his share. It is submitted that the principle of the decisions in f.n. (z) on this page applies to these States also; the only difference being that, in the States referred to in § 260 the whole alienation may be set aside whereas in the States in § 259 the plaintiffs can only recover their share or shares. But an opposite view was taken in Bombay and Nagpur (c). The Bombay decision was based on Lal Bahadur v. Ambika Prasad (d) and the Nagpur decision. Mr. Justice Mukherjee, later Chief Justice of India, who edited the eleventh edition of this work expressed the opinion that the Bombay and Nagpur decisions were not correctly decided. In a later decision of the Full Bench of the Bombay High Court the earlier Bombay case was overruled (e).

Illustrations

(a) A, governed by the Mitakshara law, sells certain ancestral property to B, A has no son either born or begotten at the time of the sale. The sale is made without legal necessity. The sale is valid, though made without legal necessity, for the restriction that a coparcener should not sell coparcenary property without legal necessity applies only when there are other coparceners living at the time. Therefore if a son C is born to A two years after the date of the sale, he cannot impeach the sale. Even if there was a son existing at the time of the sale, if the sale had been made with his consent, it would have been valid when made, and therefore not liable to be set aside by C.

Note.—The above case assumes that there has been a complete transfer of the property to the purchaser. If the transfer is not complete, as where there is a mere agree-

---

(y) Hitendra v. Sukhdeo (1929) 8 Pat. 558, 115 I.C. 886, ('29) A.P. 360; Mukund Singh v. Wazir-ruddin (1933) 149 I.C. 506, ('33) A.L. 359; Visweswara Rao v. Surya Rao (1936) 59 Mad. 667, 163 I.C. 712, ('36) A.M. 440.

(z) Bunwari Lal v. Daya Sunkar (1909) 13 C.W.N. 815, 822; Tulshi Ram v. Babu (1911) 33 All. 654, 1 I.C. 908; Bhup Kunwar v. Balbir Sahai (1922) 44 All. 190, 64 I.C. 885, ('22) A.A. 342; Dwarka Das v. Krishan (1921) 2 Lah. 114, 119-120, 61 I.C. 628, ('21) A.L. 34; Bhagwat Prasad Bahidar v. Debichand Bogra (1941) 20 Pat. 727, 199 I.C. 408, ('42) A.P. 99; Narayan v. Namdeo (1955) Nag. 772, ('55) A.N. 208; Varada v. Sriramulu ('53) A.M. 894, (1953) 1 M.L.J. 31; Venkataramayya v. Krishna Rao ('63) A.A.P. 305.

(a) Chuttan Lal v. Kallu (1911) 33 All. 283, 8 I.C. 719.

(b) Raja Ram v. Luchmun (1867) 8 W.R. 15, 21; Lachmi Narain v. Kishan (1916) 38 All. 126, 33 I.C. 913; Ranodip Singh v. Parmeshwar Prasad (1925) 52 I.A. 69, 47 All. 165, 86 I.C. 249, ('25) A.PC. 33; Seshamma v. Venkayya ('57) A. Andh. Pra. 386; Kumaraswami v. Rajamanikkam ('66) A. Kerala 266 [limitation, estoppel, ratification].

(c) Kashinath v. Bapurao (1940) Nag. 573, 191 I.C. 271, ('40) A.N. 305; Gujrath Oil Mills & Mfg. Co. Ltd. v. Patel Shakarabhai (1943) Bom. L.R. 507, ('43) A.B. 239, 1943 Bom. 423, 210 I.C. 122; Bahadursingh v. Girdharilal (1942) Nag. 543, 200 I.C. 166, ('42) A.N. 39.

(d) (1925) 52 I.A. 443, 47 All. 795, 91 I.C. 471.

(e) Shivaji v. Murlidhar (1954) Bom. 794, (1954) 56 Bom. L.R. 426 (F.B.), ('54) A.B. 386.

ment to sell, and a son is born before the sale is completed, the son is entitled to have the sale set aside in its entirety if the parties are governed by the Mitakshara law as applied in Bengal and Uttar Pradesh, and to the extent of the son's interest, if they are governed by that law as applied in Bombay and Madras [see sub-§ (1) above].

(a1) A, who has a son B, sells certain ancestral property to C without B's consent and without justifying necessity. B then dies. A year after B's death a son D is born, D cannot impeach the alienation.

(b) A, who has a son B, sells certain ancestral property to C, without B's consent and without justifying necessity. Two years later, while B is living, another son D is born to A. In States referred to in § 260, the sale not being valid when it was made, D also is entitled to have it set aside. But if the sale is ratified by B before the birth of D, D cannot object to the sale, for ratification validates a sale as much as consent. But no ratification by B after D's birth would deprive D of the right to object to the sale: Tulshi Ram v. Babu (1911) 33 All. 654, 10 I.C. 908; see also Haroddott v. Beer Narain (1869) 11 W.R. 480.

(c) A, his son B, and C alleged to have been adopted by A's paternal uncle as his son, are members of a joint family. During B's minority, A and C divided the family property between them, A transferring certain family property to C. A son D is subsequently born to A. B and D sue A and C to recover from C the property transferred to him by A alleging that though C was treated by A as the adopted son of his uncle, his adoption was invalid, and he was not therefore entitled to any share of the family property. It is clear that if C's adoption was not valid, the transfer to him of a portion of the family property would not be valid, unless it could be supported as a bona fide compromise of a disputed claim. Hence in States referred to in § 260 B as well as D are entitled to impeach the alienation: see Ramkishore v. Jainarayan (1913) 40 Cal. 966, 40 I.A. 213, 20 I.C. 958.

In ills. (b) and (c), in the States referred to in § 259 if B files a suit on behalf of the family excepting the alienor, D may participate in the benefit of the decree as a member of the joint family.

(3) An alienation, valid when it was made, cannot be impeached by a son adopted after the date of alienation (f).

(4) Where an alienation is made in Allahabad of joint family property by an individual coparcener as distinguished from the whole body of coparceners, the question arises as to who is entitled to impeach the alienation [§ 269]. The following is a statement of the law as settled in that State:—

(i) The right to impeach an alienation made by an individual coparcener is not confined to the non-alienating coparceners only. It may also be exercised by a subsequent transferee who has acquired by transfer or by limitation the entire interest of the whole joint family in the property alienated (g).

(ii) The alienor himself cannot impeach his own alienation; nor can a subsequent transferee by private contract of the interest only of the alienor. But a purchaser, though it be of the alienor's interest alone, at a sale in execution of a decree against the alienor, is entitled to impeach a previous alienation made by the alienor (h).

---

(f) Sudanand v. Soorjoomonee (1869) 11 W.R. 456; Rambhat v. Lakshman (1881) 5 Bom. 630; Brij Raj Saran v. Alliance Bank of Simla (1936) 17 Lah. 686, ('36) A.L. 946.

(g) Muhammad v. Mithu Lal (1911) 33 All. 783, 11 I.C. 220 [F.B.]; Inayat v. Hardeo (1923) 45 All. 692, 74 I.C. 325, ('24) A.A. 29; Madan Lal v. Gajendrapal (1929) 51 All. 575, 116 I.C. 436 ('29) A.A. 243; Madan Lal v. Chiddu (1931) 53 All. 21, 128 I.C. 829, ('30) A.A. 852; Ram Kishore v. Baij Nath (1928) 3 Luck. 598, 113 I.C. 410, ('28) A.O. 287; Kharag Narayan v. Janki Rai (1937) 16 Pat. 230, 169 I.C. 906, ('37) A.P. 546; Ram Nath v. Sunderbai (1948) Nag. 310.

(h) (1931) 53 All. 21, 128 I.C. 829, ('30) A.A. 852, supra.

(iii) The reversionary heir to the estate of a non-alienating coparcener is also entitled to impeach an alienation made by another coparcener (i).

(iv) A prior mortgagee of joint family property from a single coparcener is not entitled to impeach a subsequent sale of that property (j).

Illustrations

(a) A, the manager of a joint family, mortgages joint family property to B. A then sells the property to C. C remains in possession of the property adversely to the whole family for upwards of 12 years. C, having acquired ownership of the whole property by adverse possession, is entitled to challenge the validity of the mortgage to B on the ground that it was made without legal necessity (k).

(b) The father of a joint family executes a mortgage of joint family property. He then sells the property to meet an antecedent debt. The purchaser, being a transferee of the entire interest in the property, is entitled to impeach the mortgage on the ground that it was made without legal necessity.

(c) A, the manager of a joint Hindu family, executes a mortgage of joint family property. Subsequently all the coparceners join in selling the property to B. B, being a transferee of the interest of all the coparceners, is entitled to impeach the mortgage on the ground that it was made without legal necessity.

(d) A and his son B are members of a joint Hindu family. A executes a mortgage of joint family property to C. Thereafter A dies. B dies next. On B's death his mother succeeds to the property for a widow's estate. C sues B's mother on the mortgage and D succeeds to the property as the next reversionary heir of B. D is entitled to challenge the validity of the mortgage to C on the ground that it was made without legal necessity. The decree obtained by C against the mother would be binding on D unless it was obtained by fraud or collusion (l).

(e) A, the manager of a joint Hindu family, executes a mortgage of joint family property to B. He then sells the property to C. C sues B for redemption. B is not entitled to impeach the sale on the ground that it was made without legal necessity (l).

A female member of a family who is not a coparcener cannot impeach an alienation (m). But in case of widows governed by Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1917, see pages 95 and 96, and cases cited on foot-notes (w) and (x).

According to some Privy Council rulings and a Full Bench ruling of the Allahabad High Court, an alienation made by a single coparcener neither for legal necessity nor for the payment of an antecedent debt is void. According to later decisions of that Court, such an alienation is voidable: See § 269(1). If it is voidable, it is valid until it is set aside. Most of the cases cited in sub-§ (4) proceeded on the footing that the alienation was voidable. This gave rise to the question as to whether the non-alienating coparceners alone were entitled to avoid it or others also. The answer is as stated in sub-§ (4). If the alienation is void, it confers no title on the alienee, and most of the difficulties which arise if the alienation is treated as voidable especially where the alienation and the subsequent transfer are both made by the same coparcener disappear altogether, and the subsequent transferee would be entitled to contend as a matter of course that the alienation is a nullity (n).

271. Limitation for setting aside sales.—(1) The period of limitation for setting aside an alienation by a father of joint family property is twelve years from the date when the alienee takes possession of the property [Limitation Act, 1908, Sch. 1, art. 126]. If, however, the alienee has not taken possession the only right of the son will be to obtain a declaration

---

(i) Sarju Prasad v. Mangal (1925) 47 All. 490, 87 I.C. 294, ('25) A.A. 339; Jaipal Singh v. Lachman Singh (1934) 9 Luck. 657, 149 I.C. 543, ('34) A.O. 246.

(j) Durga Prasad v. Bhajan (1920) 42 All. 50, 58 I.C. 487, ('19) A.A. 6.

(k) Muhammad v. Mithu Lal (1911) 33 All. 783, 11 I.C. 220 [F.B.].

(l) Sarju Prasad v. Mangal (1925) 47 All. 490, 87 I.C. 294, ('25) A.A. 339.

(m) Mt. Ram Dei v. Mt. Giyorsi ('50) A.A. 76.

(n) See the judgment of Chamier, J., in Muhammad v. Mithu Lal (1911) 33 All. 783, 790-791, 11 I.C. 220 [F.B.].

that the deed of alienation is invalid and the limitation prescribed was six years under Article 120 of the old Limitation Act (*n*1).

Now see Article 109 of the new Limitation Act, 1963.

(2) The bar of limitation against an elder son who was a major at the date of the alienation by the father does not operate as a bar against a younger son, who was then a minor and brings a suit to set aside the alienation within three years of his attaining majority (o).

Illustration

A and his sons B and C are members of a joint Hindu family. In 1906 A sells one of the joint family properties to D, and delivers possession of the property to him. B was a major at the date of the sale. C was born in 1900 and he attained majority in 1918. C brings a suit against the father and D in 1919, that is, within 3 years of his attaining majority, to set aside the sale. If B had sued in 1919, his suit would have been barred. The failure of B to bring a suit within the period of limitation does not bar C's suit (p), [C's suit, it will be noted, is not barred by limitation.]

(3) But if an elder son becomes the manager and so capable of giving a discharge the bar against the elder son would bar the younger son also (q).

(4) The cause of action in a suit to set aside the father's alienation arises when the alienee takes possession of the property. The period of twelve years is therefore to be counted from that date. That is the material date not only as regards the suit of a son in existence at that date, but also the suit of a son not in existence at that date. The extension of three years given by sec. 6 of the Limitation Act cannot be availed of by the sons not in existence at the time of the alienation (r).

Illustration

A and his sons B and C are members of a joint Hindu family. In 1893 A sells one of the joint family properties to D and delivers possession of the property to him. In 1900 another son E is born to A. In 1920 E brings a suit against D to set side the sale. The suit is barred as it is brought more more than 12 years from the date on which D took possession. The period of limitation is not to be computed from the date of E's birth. If it were to be computed from the date of E's birth, the suit would not be barred, as it was brought within 3 years from his attaining majority (r).

271A. Limitation.—A suit by a Hindu to set aside an alienation of joint family property made before his birth by his grandfather without any justifying necessity is governed not by art. 126 but by art. 144. But the same principles apply. If the suit is brought more than 12 years after the date of alienation it is barred (s).

Note.—It may be noticed that the maintainability of the suit was assumed by the Judges and Advocates.

Now see Article 109 of the new Limitation Act, 1963.

---

(*n*1) Chintaman v. Bhagvan ('28) A.B. 383. Also see Bindeshri v. Sital ('27) All. 702 which was a case under Art. 126.

(o) Jawahir Singh v. Udai Parkash (1926) 53 I.A. 36, 48 All. 152, 93 I.C. 216, ('26) A.PC. 16, approving Ganga Dayal v. Mani Ram (1909) 31 All. 156, 1 I.C. 824, and disapproving Vignewara v. Bapayya (1893) 16 Mad. 436, and Dordisami v. Nondisami Saluvan (1915) 38 Mad. 118, 21 I.C. 410, ('15) A.M. 1201.

(p) 53 I.A. 36, 48 All. 152, 93 I.C. 216, ('26) A.PC. 16, supra.

(q) Karan Singh v. Mt. Tetar Kuer (1937) 16 Pat. 422 (F.B.), 170 I.C. 362, ('37) A.P. 435.

(r) Ranodip Singh v. Parmeshwar Prasad (1925) 52 I.A. 69, 47 All. 165, 86 I.C. 249, ('25) A.PC. 33; Seshamma v. Venkayya ('57) A. Andh. Pra. 386; Venugopalaswamy v. Visweswara ('69) A.A.P. 24.

(s) Jivaji v. Venkatesh Krishna (1940) Bom. 109, 187 I.C. 663, ('40) A.B. 136.

CHAPTER XIII

COPARCENERS AND COPARCENARY PROPERTY—DAYABHAGA LAW

Note.—The general effect of the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, in case of death of a coparcener in the joint family governed by the Dayabhaga law has been pointed out under § 35. The Hindu Succession Act, 1956, which applies to Hindus governed by both the schools has brought about some radical changes in the law of succession without abolishing the joint family and joint family property. The effect of that enactment is very far-reaching in case of a Mitakshara coparcenary as will be seen from section 6 of that enactment which applies only to persons governed by the Mitakshara law. But the general rules of succession laid down in that enactment applicable in case of death of a male as well as female Hindu have brought about very important and radical changes having some repercussions also on the rights of coparceners and incidents of coparcenery property in case of persons governed by the Dayabhaga law. The effect of those rules has been pointed out in the following paragraphs. Reference may also be made to Notes under section 16 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, for the position and rights in a Dayabhaga coparcenary of a son or a daughter born of a marriage which is void or voidable under that enactment and who is to be deemed to be a legitimate child of the parents.

272. Distinguishing features of Dayabhaga joint family.—The conception of a coparcenary and of coparcenary property according to the Dayabhaga law is entirely distinct from that according to the Mitakshara law. The object of this chapter is to state the points of distinction between the Mitakshara law and the Dayabhaga law, such as have been noted in the Dayabhaga and in judicial decisions.

273. Sons do not acquire any right by birth.—According to the Mitakshara law, each son acquires at his birth an equal interest with his father in all ancestral property held by the father, and on the death of the father the son takes the property, not as his heir, but by survivorship (§§ 224, 229).

According to the Dayabhaga law, the sons do not acquire any interest by birth in ancestral property. Their rights arise for the first time on the father's death. On the death of the father they take such of the property as is left by him, whether separate or ancestral, as heirs and not by survivorship (t). Since the sons do not take any interest in ancestral property in their father's lifetime, there can be no coparcenary in the strict sense of the word between a father and sons according to the Dayabhaga law, so far as regards ancestral property.

274. Absolute power of father to dispose of ancestral property.—Since the sons do not, according to the Dayabhaga law, acquire any interest by birth in ancestral property held by the father, the father can dispose of ancestral property, whether movable or immovable, by sale, gift, will or otherwise in the same way as he can dispose of his separate property (u).

---

(t) Dayabhaga, chap. i, secs. 11-31, 38, 44, 50, chap. ii, sec. 8.

(u) Ramkishore v. Bhoobunmoyee (1859) Beng. S.D.A. 229, 250-251; Debendra v. Brojendra (1890) 17 Cal. 886. The same rule applies to property the succession to which is governed by the law of primogeniture; Uddoy v. Jadublal (1880) 5 Cal. 113; Narain v. Lokenath (1881) 7 Cal. 461; Kunja Behari v. Gourhari ('58) A.C. 105; Patrik v. Jhulon ('69) A. Manipur 33.

According to the Mitakshara, the powers of a father to dispose of ancestral property are limited [§ 258].

Section 30 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, now enables a male Hindu in a Mitakshara coparcenary to dispose of by will his interest in the coparcenary property. It also recognises in effect the right of a male Hindu governed by the Dayabhaga law to dispose of by will his interest in coparcenary property.

275. No right of partition or to accounts against father.—Since sons, according to the Dayabhaga law, do not acquire any interest by birth in ancestral property, they cannot demand a partition of such property from the father as they can under the Mitakshara law, nor can they call for an account of the management thereof from the father as they can under the Mitakshara law [§ 239]. The father is the absolute owner of the property, and the property being his own, he can manage it in any way he likes (v).

The rules as to the management of ancestral property by a manager, given in the last chapter, do not apply at all to a father under the Dayabhaga law. The reason is that he is not a manager of ancestral property; he is the owner, and sole owner, thereof. Besides, the term "manager" as used in Hindu law refers to the manager of a coparcenary, and as stated in § 273, there can be no coparcenary according to the Dayabhaga law between a father and sons even as regards ancestral property.

276. Conception of ancestral property according to the Dayabhaga law.—As under the Mitakshara law, so under the Dayabhaga law, ancestral property is that which is inherited from a father, paternal grandfather or great-grandfather. Under the Dayabhaga law, however, the male issue of the inheritor do not acquire any interest by birth in such property, as they do under the Mitakshara law [§ 223, sub § (1)].

277. Coparceners according to the Dayabhaga law.—According to the Mitakshara law the foundation of a coparcenary is first laid on the birth of a son. The son's birth is the starting point of a coparcenary according to that law. Thus if a Hindu governed by the Mitakshara law has a son born to him, the father and the son at once become coparceners (w).

According to the Dayabhaga law, the foundation of a coparcenary is that laid on the death of the father. So long as the father is alive, there is no coparcenary in the strict sense of the word between him and his male issue. It is only on his death leaving two or more male issues that a coparcenary is first formed. Before the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, his male issues inherited his property, separate as well as ancestral, as his heirs, but as between themselves they held it as coparceners, and the property inherited from the deceased was coparcenary property. On the death of any one of the coparceners, his heirs succeeded to his share in the coparcenary property [§ 281], and they became members of the coparcenary. Such heirs, in default of male issue, could be his widow or widows, or his daughter or daughters. These two, though females, got into the coparcenary, representing the share of their husband or father as the case might be. A coparcenary (v) Dayabhaga, chap. i, secs. 11-31, 38-44, 50, chap. ii, sec. 8. Reference may be made to Makhan Lall v. Sushama Rani ('53) A.C. 164, 57 C.W.N. 81.

---

(w) Laldas v. Motibai (1908) 10 Bom. L.R. 175.

under the Dayabhaga law could thus consist of males as well as females. Under the Mitakshara law, no female can be a coparcener with male coparceners [§ 217]. But even under the Dayabhaga law a coparcenary could not start with females. Thus if a person died leaving two or more widows, or two or more daughters, they could not constitute a coparcenary.

The effect of the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, was not to abolish or disrupt the Dayabhaga joint family. But the share of a coparcener in the coparcenary property (as in case of his separate property) devolved on his widow along with his male issue and if he did not leave any male issue his share devolved on his widow, daughter and other heirs as before.

The effect of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, is not to abolish or disrupt the Dayabhaga joint family. But the share of a coparcener in the coparcenary property (as in case of his separate property) will devolve by succession according to the provisions of that Act upon the heirs there specified.

In case of a male Hindu governed by the Dayabhaga school dying intestate and leaving ancestral property, of which, according to the Dayabhaga law as interpreted by the Courts, he was in the position of an absolute owner, such property also will (as in case of his separate or self-acquired property) devolve by succession according to the provisions of that Act upon the heirs there specified.

The question of the formation of a coparcenary by operation of law and as to who can be members of such coparcenary in case of a male Hindu governed by the Dayabhaga school dying intestate after the coming into operation of that Act leaving separate or ancestral property and leaving him surviving as his heirs inter alia two or more male issue will depend on the same principles on which under the previous law a coparcenary could be formed consisting of males and females.

Reference may also be made to Notes under section 16 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, for the position and rights in a Dayabhaga coparcenary of a son or daughter born of a marriage which is void or voidable under that enactment and who is to be deemed to be a legitimate child of the parents.

A, a Hindu governed by the Dayabhaga law, dies intestate leaving three sons B, C and D. The three brothers will inherit their father's property, and hold it as coparceners. If B dies leaving a widow, and C dies leaving a daughter, the widow and daughter will become coparceners with D.

Similarly, if A dies intestate leaving a son, a grandson, whose father is dead and a great-grandson whose father and grandfather are both dead, they all will inherit the property left by A (§ 88), and hold it as coparceners.

But if A dies leaving only one son, the son cannot by himself constitute a coparcenary. A must leave him surviving at least two male issue for a coparcenary to be formed as between them.

The formation of a coparcenary does not depend upon any act of the parties. It is a creation of the law. It is formed spontaneously on the death of the ancestor. It may be dissolved immediately afterwards by partition, but until then the heirs hold the property as coparceners. The distinction is this: two or more Mahomedans, Parsis or Christians, succeeding to the estate of a deceased person, take it as co-heirs, while two or more male issues of a Hindu succeeding to the property of their paternal ancestor take it as coparceners, subject to all the incidents of coparcenary property.

It will be seen from what has been stated above that a coparcenary under the Dayabhaga law may consist of brothers, or uncles and nephews, or of cousins and the like but it cannot consist of a father and sons, or of a grandfather and grandsons, or of a great-grandfather and great-grandsons. Thus if A dies leaving three sons B, C and D the brothers will be coparceners. If he dies leaving two grandsons, namely E and F, the cousin (i.e., E and F) will be coparceners. If he dies leaving a son D and two grandsons E and F, the uncle [D] with his nephews [E and F] will be coparceners. If he dies leaving B, C, D, E and F the coparcenary will consists of B, C and D only. E and F do not take any share of the inheritance, as their fathers are alive. Moreover they do not take by birth any interest in the property inherited by their respective fathers from A [§ 273]. They are not therefore coparceners. But if while the family is still joint, B dies leaving E, E will get into the coparcenary, taking B's share.

278. Coparcenary property.—As under the Mitakshara law, so under the Dayabhaga law, coparcenary property may consist of ancestral property, or of joint acquisitions, or of property thrown into the common stock, and accretions to such property (x) [§§ 223, 227, 228].

279. Each coparcener takes a defined share.—The essence of a coparcenary under the Mitakshara law is unity of ownership. On the other hand, the essence of a coparcenary under the Dayabhaga law is unity of possession. It is not unity of ownership at all. The ownership of the coparcenary property is not in the whole body of coparceners. Every coparcener takes a defined share in the property, and he is the owner of that share. That share is defined immediately the inheritance falls in. It does not fluctuate with births and deaths in the family. Even before partition any coparcener can say that he is entitled to a particular share, one-third or one-fourth. Thus if A dies leaving three sons, B, C and D, each son will take one-third, and each one will be the owner of his one-third share. The sons are coparceners in this sense that their possession of the property inherited from A is joint. It is the unity of possession that makes them coparceners. So long as there is unity of possession, no coparcener can say that a particular third of the property belongs to him; that he can say only after a partition. Partition then, according to the Dayabhaga law, consists in splitting up joint possession and assigning specific portions of the property to the several coparceners. According to the Mitakshara law, it consists in splitting up joint ownership and in defining the share of each coparcener.

No doubt, a coparcenary under the Mitakshara law also is characterized by unity of possession, but that is only an appendage to the unity of ownership. Such being the case it is not necessary to constitute a partition under that law that the unity of possession should also be destroyed and specific portions of the property assigned to the coparceners. It is quite enough if the unity of ownership is destroyed. and the share of each coparcener defined, so that any one coparcener can say that he is the owner of a definite share, one-third or one-fourth. Nothing further need be done. The members may continue joint in possession, but the coparcenary is dissolved. Thenceforward the share of each member will on his death pass to his heirs. The members having separated the principle of survivorship ceases to apply [§§ 322, 325].

---

(x) Sreemutty Soorjeemoney Dossee v. Denobundoo (1856) 6 M.I.A. 526, 539.

280. Rights of purchaser of coparcener's interest in execution.—Since a coparcener under the Dayabhaga law takes a defined share in the property, a purchaser at a Court-sale of his share is entitled to be put into physical possession of that share (y). As to Mitakshara law, see § 289.

281. No right of survivorship.—As every coparcener under the Dayabhaga law takes a defined share of the coparcenary property, his share will on his death pass to his heirs in the order mentioned in § 88, and not to his coparceners by survivorship.

282. Absolute power of coparcener to dispose of his share.—Since every coparcener under the Dayabhaga law takes a defined share of the coparcenary property, it follows that a coparcener governed by that law can alienate his share by sale or mortgage, or dispose of it by gift or will, in the same manner as he can dispose of his separate property (z). On his death intestate, his share will go to his heirs.

The right of a coparcener under the Dayabhaga law to dispose of by will, his share of the coparcenary property, is also recognised in effect by sec. 30 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956.

It has been held that where the share of a coparcener governed by the Dayabhaga law is sold in execution of a decree passed against him, the purchaser is entitled to be put into joint possession with the other coparceners (a). Similarly it has been held that a coparcener may lease out his own share, and put his lessee in possession (b).

283. Manager and his power.—It would seem that the powers of a manager under the Dayabhaga law are the same as those of a manager under the Mitakshara law (c). He can contract a debt for a joint family purpose, and a decree passed against him for such a debt as manager will bind the other members, though they are not parties to the suit (d) [§ 253]. He can also mortgage the family property for the purposes of the family business (e) [§ 242].

In a suit on a mortgage by two managing members of the family for a debt due by the family, the other members will not be liable until the remedy on the mortgage is exhausted. After the mortgaged properties are brought to sale, the other members may be liable (f).

284. Enjoyment of coparcenary property.—Since every coparcener under the Dayabhaga law takes a defined share of the coparcenary property, he is entitled to make any use he likes of the portion of the coparcenary property in his occupation (g). He may even lease out his share, and put his lessee in possession (h). But he must not do any act which is injurious

---

(y) Koonwar Bijoy v. Shama Soonduree (1865) 2 W.R. (Mis.) 30; Eshan Chunder v. Nund Coomar (1867) 8 W.R. 239.

(z) Kounla v. Ram Huree (1827) 4 Beng. Sel. R 196 (new ed. 247); Anunchand v. Kishen (1805) 1 Beng. Sel. R. 115 (new ed. 153).

(a) Rajanikanth v. Ram Nath (1884) 10 Cal. 244.

(b) Ram Debul v. Mitterjeet (1872) 17 W.R. 420; Macdonald v. Lalla Shib (1873) 21 W.R. 17.

(c) But see Balakrishna v. Muthusami (1909) 32 Mad. 271, 274, 3 I.C. 878.

(d) Dwarka Nath v. Bungshi (1905) 9 C.W.N. 879.

(e) Bemola v. Mohun (1880) 5 Cal. 792.

(f) Sukhadakanta Bhattacharjya v. Jogineekanta Bhattacharja (1933) 60 Cal. 1197, 149 I.C. 878, ('34) A.C. 73.

(g) Eshan Chunder v. Nund Coomar (1867) 8 W.R. 239.

(h) Ram Debul v. Mitterjeet (1872) 17 W.R. 420.

to the coparcenary property (i), or which amounts to an infringement of the right of the other coparceners. Thus, he cannot enter into possession of a specific portion of joint agricultural land without the consent of the other coparceners, and claim to cultivate it for his own benefit (j). But if he is in occupation of a specific portion of such land by consent he may cultivate it in a proper course of cultivation, and appropriate the income for his sole use (k).

285. Coparcener's right of partition.—As under the Mitakshara law, so under the Dayabhaga law, every adult coparcener has a right to call for a partition of the coparcenary property (l).

286. Presumptions as to coparcenary property.—The presumptions with regard to joint family and joint family property which apply to cases under the Mitakshara law would seem to apply also to cases under the Dayabhaga law (m) [§ 233].

But there is no presumption under the Dayabhaga law that property purchased by a son in his name in the father's lifetime and of which the son has been in possession since the purchase is joint family property. The burden of proof in such a case lies on those who deny the ownership of the son (n). Where the property purchased by one of the sons is a house, even though the father and the sons are living in it, the onus of proving that it was thrown into the common stock, or that they also contributed to the acquisition, is on the other sons (o).

---

(i) Gopee Kishen v. Hem Chunder (1870) 13 W.R. 322 [pulling down a common verandah].

(j) Stalkarti v. Gopal (1873) 20 W.R. 168.

(k) Robert Watson & Co. v. Ramchund (1891) 18 Cal. 10, 21, 17 I.A. 110, 120.

(l) Srcemutty Soorjeemoney Dossee v. Denobundoo (1856) 6 M.I.A. 526, 539.

(m) See Charandasi Debi v. Kanai Lal ('55) A.C. 206, 58 C.W.N. 980.

(n) Sarada v. Mahananda (1904) 31 Cal. 448; Ramesh Chandra v. Hemendra ('49) A.C. 519. Also see Kunja Behari v. Gourhari ('58) A.C. 105.

(o) Hemchandra Ganguli v. Matilal Ganguli (1933) 60 Cal. 1253, 149 I.C. 177, ('34) A.C. 68. Reference may also be made to Kunja Behari v. Gourhari Ram ('58) A.C. 105.

CHAPTER XIV

DEBTS—MITAKSHARA LAW

Note.—The law relating to "Debts" discussed in this Chapter has not been altered by the new legislation. Section 6 of the Hindu Succession Act has, however, bearing on the question of "Debts". Reference may be made to the Notes under that section post. Reference may also be made to sec. 30 of that enactment which now permits a coparcener in a Mitakshara coparcenary to dispose of by will his undivided interest in the coparcenary property.

I. Liability of heirs for debts of ancestor—§ 288.

II. Undivided interest of coparcenary, when liable for his debts—§ 289.

III. Liability of joint family property for father's debts—§§ 290-301.

287. Contents of the Chapter.—The present Chapter deals with "Debts". The subject may be considered under the following heads:—

I. Liability of separate property for debts.

II. Liability of the undivided interest of a coparcener for his debts.

III. Liability of joint family property for father's personal debts—

(i) where the property is sold in execution of a decree obtained against the father alone;

(ii) where the property is alienated by the father for the payment of an antecedent debt.

Of debts in general.—A debt may be contracted by a Hindu male for his own private purposes, or it may be contracted by him for the purposes of the joint family. Debts contracted for joint family purposes have been dealt with in §§ 234, 240-244. This and the next Chapter are confined to debts contracted by a Hindu for his own personal benefit. The present Chapter deals with the Mitakshara law of debts; the next Chapter with the Dayabhaga law of debts.

A Hindu may possess separate property. He may also be entitled to an undivided interest in coparcenary property. The separate property of a Hindu, whether he is joint or separate, is liable for the payment of his debts both in his lifetime and after his death. His undivided coparcenary interest is not liable after his death unless it was attached or sold in his lifetime. To this, however, there is an exception where a father or paternal grandfather or paternal great-grandfather dies leaving private debts. In such a case, if the debts are not of an immoral character, the entire joint family property including his sons' undivided interest therein is liable for the payment of his debts even after his death, though such interest may not have been attached in his lifetime. The reason is that a Hindu male is under a pious obligation to pay the private debts of his father, grandfather and great-grandfather, provided the debts are not of an immoral character. This is a special liability attaching to sons, grandsons, and great-grandsons according to the Hindu law, and it gave rise to several vexed questions which have now been settled by decisions of the highest tribunal. This liability, however, is not a personal liability, that is to say, their separate property is not liable to pay the personal debts of the ancestor. Their liability is confined to their undivided interest in the joint family property.

I.—Liability of separate property for debts

288. Liability of "heirs" for debts.—As regards the liability of an heir of a deceased Hindu to pay the debts of the deceased, it is settled law that he is liable only to the extent of the assets inherited by him from the deceased. The heir is not personally liable to pay the debts of the deceased, not even if he be a son or grandson (p).

The 'heirs' mentioned in this paragraph include all persons upon whom the interest, in the Mitakshara coparcenary property, of a male Hindu, who dies after the commencement of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, devolves by testamentary or intestate succession as laid down in the proviso to section 6 of the enactment.

No distinction is made in this section between debts properly incurred by the deceased and debts incurred for an unlawful or immoral purpose because the debts are to be paid not out of the joint family property, but out of the separate property of the deceased.

A Hindu father passes a promissory note to his creditor in respect of a debt barred by limitation. Afterwards he dies leaving a son. He also leaves separate property. The son is bound to pay the creditor out of the separate estate of the deceased. He is not entitled to object on the ground that the note was in respect of a time-barred debt (s). See the Indian Contract Act, 1872, sec. 25(3).

II.—Undivided coparcener's interest when liable for his debt

289. Undivided coparcenary interest, when liable for coparcener's debt.—(1) According to the Mitakshara law as applied in all the States, the undivided interest of a coparcener may be attached in his lifetime in execution of a decree against him for his personal debt (t). If it is attached in his lifetime, it may be sold after his death whether the order for sale was made in his lifetime (u), or after his death (v). But it cannot be attached after his death (except where the coparcener is the father), for it then ceases to be his interest and passes to the other coparceners by survivorship (w). It is only an attachment effected during the lifetime of the debtor that will prevent the accrual of his interest to his coparceners by survivorship. But see sub-paragraph (3) below.

(2) An attachment before judgment of the undivided interest of a coparcener not followed by a decree in his lifetime does not defeat the right of survivorship of the other coparceners (x). It is not settled whether attachment before judgment operates to defeat the right of survivorship in cases where such attachment is followed by a decree in the lifetime of the defendant. The High Courts of Bombay (y) and Patna (z) have held that

---

(p) Keral v. Ganpati (1884) 8 Bom. 220; Girdharlal v. Bai Shiv (1884) 8 Bom. 309; Udaram v. Ranu (1875) 11 Bom. H.C. 76; Sakharam v. Govind (1873) 10 Bom. H.C. 361; Lallu v. Tribhuvan (1889) 13 Bom. 653.

(s) Narayanasami v. Samidas (1883) 6 Mad. 293; Ram Kishan v. Chhedi (1922) 44 All. 628, 68 I.C. 235, ('22) A.A. 402.

(t) Deendyal v. Jugdeep (1877) 3 Cal. 198, 4 I.A. 247; Udaram v. Ranu (1875) 11 Bom. H.C. 76; Muneswari v. Jugal Mohini ('52) A.C. 368 [effect of attachment]; Bharamappa v. Rudrappa ('55) A. Mys. 13.

(u) Suraj Bunsi Koer v. Sheo Persad (1879) 5 Cal. 148, 174, 6 I.A. 88, 109. See Sheikh Karoo v. Rameshwar Rao (1921) 6 Pat. L.J. 451, 458, 62 I.C. 905, ('23) A.P. 143 [mortgage decree].

(v) Bithal Das v. Nand Kishore (1901) 23 All. 106; Faqir Chand v. Sant Lal (1926) 48 All. 4, 89 I.C. 291, ('26) A.A. 157. See Madho Parshad v. Mehrban Singh (1891) 17 I.A. 194, 197, 18 Cal. 157, 161; Sheo Maheep Bikram Singh v. Mahant Thakur Das (1940) 15 Luck. 503, 187 I.C. 90, ('40) A.O. 200.

(w) See Suraj Bunsi Koer v. Sheo Persad (1879) 5 Cal. 148, 6 I.A. 88; (1891) 17 I.A. 194, 197, 18 Cal. 157, 161, supra.

(x) Ramanayya v. Ragappayya 17 Mad. 144; Kalianna Goundan v. Masayappa Goundan (1943) Mad. 397, 207 I.C. 579, ('43) A.M. 149.

(y) Subrao v. Mahadevi (1914) 38 Bom. 105, 27 I.C. 350, ('14) A.B. 256. See also Laxman v. Vinayak (1916) 40 Bom. 329, 33 I.C. 956, ('16) A.B. 262.

(z) Sunder Lal v. Raghunandan (1924) 3 Pat. 250, 83 I.C. 413, ('24) A.P. 465.

it does not. The High Court of Madras (a) has held that it does. The ground of the Madras decision is that where a decree follows on an attachment before judgment, no reattachment is necessary; therefore, the mere passing of the decree renders the attachment before judgment as effective as an attachment after decree. [See the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, O. 38, r. 11.] But where the attachment comes to an end, the decree cannot be executed against coparceners who would get the property by survivorship (b). But see sub-paragraph (3) below.

(3) The rules stated in this paragraph and the illustrations below must be read subject to the provisions of sec. 6 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, and particularly to the proviso to that section in cases where that proviso is applicable. Reference may be made to Notes under sec. 6 of that enactment. Reference may also be made to sec. 30 of that enactment which now permits a coparcener in a Mitakshara coparcenary to dispose of by will his undivided interest in the coparcenary property.

Illustrations

(a) A and his nephew B are members of a joint Hindu family. A is indebted to C in the sum of Rs. 3,000. C may obtain a decree against A, and may enforce it in A's lifetime by attachment and sale of A's undivided interest in the joint property. But if A's interest in the joint property is not attached in A's lifetime it cannot be attached after his death.

(b) A and his brother B are members of a coparcenary. A is indebted to C in the sum of Rs. 3,000. C obtains a decree against A in A's lifetime. Before any step is taken in execution of the decree, A dies leaving a widow and his brother B. He also leaves separate property worth Rs. 2,000. Here A's separate property will pass to his widow as his heir, and C may enforce the decree by attachment and sale of that property. But he cannot attach A's undivided interest in the coparcenary property for the balance of his debt, for that interest has passed to B by survivorship.

If, in the case put above, no suit was instituted by C against A in A's lifetime, C could institute a suit against A's widow after A's death as his heir and legal representative, and obtain a decree against her, and enforce it by attachment and sale of A's separate property inherited by her. But he cannot bring a suit against B to recover his debt out of the coparcenary property. Similarly, if A dies after suit, but before decree, C may continue the suit against A's widow as his heir, and obtain a decree against her, and enforce it by attachment and sale of A's separate property. But he cannot proceed against A's undivided interest in the joint property. That interest will pass to B who will take it by survivorship free from the burden of the debt.

(c) A and his brother B are members of a joint family. A is indebted to C in the sum of Rs. 3,000. C obtains a decree against A, and in execution of the decree gets A's interest in the joint property attached. A then dies leaving B. The interest of A in the joint property, having been attached in A's lifetime, may be sold in execution after A's death. The point to be noted is that if the share of a coparcener is attached in his lifetime, it may be sold in execution after his death. The sale may take place after the death of the debtor, but the attachment must take place in the lifetime of the debtor.

(d) A coparcenary consists of a father and son. The son dies indebted to C in the sum of Rs. 5,000. The son does not leave any separate property. C cannot proceed against the son's undivided interest in the coparcenary property. It would have been different if C had obtained a decree against the son, and attached his interest in the coparcenary property in his lifetime: Udaram v. Ranu (1875) 11 Bom. H.C. 76 [A father is under no religious obligation to pay the debts of his son].

It will be seen from what has been stated above, that a person lending money to a Hindu who has no separate property of his own, has no chance of recovering back his money, unless he obtains a mortgage or a charge on the undivided interest of the debtor

---

(a) Sankaralinga v. Official Receiver (1925) 49 Mad. L.J. 616, 92 I.C. 504, ('26) A.M. 72.

(b) Rama Asra v. The Official Receiver of South Canara (1948) Mad. 701.

in the joint family property [§§ 268, 269], or where he has not obtained such a mortgage or charge, he obtains a decree against the debtor and attaches his undivided interest in the joint family property in the lifetime of the debtor. It is, however, different where the debtor is a father, grandfather or great-grandfather: see §§ 290-294.

As a general rule, the execution of a decree consists of two steps, namely attachment and sale. Where a creditor obtains a decree against a coparcener, the first step in execution, if he wants to proceed against the undivided interest of his debtor in the joint property, is to apply for attachment of the right, title and interest of the debtor in the joint property. After the right, title and interest is attached, the next step is the sale of such right, title and interest. After the property is sold, the purchaser is entitled to call upon the other coparceners to come to a partition with him, and if they refuse, to bring a suit against them for partition of the coparcenary property [§ 261].

III.—Liability of joint family property for father's debts

290. Pious obligation of son, grandson and great-grandson to pay ancestor's debts.—(1) Where the sons (which expression throughout includes son's sons and son's son's sons) are joint with their father, and debts have been contracted by the father in his capacity of manager and head of the family for family purposes [§ 240], the sons as members of the joint family are bound to pay the debts to the extent of their interest in the coparcenary property [§§ 240-242].

Where the sons are joint with their father, and debts have been contracted by the father for his own personal benefit, the sons are liable to pay the debts provided they were not incurred for an illegal or immoral purpose [§ 293]. The liability to pay the debts contracted by the father, though for his own benefit, arises from an obligation of religion and piety which is placed upon the sons under the Mitakshara law to discharge the father's debts, where the debts are not tainted with immorality (c). The fact that the father was not the karta or manager of the joint family or that the family consisted of other coparceners besides the father and sons, does not affect the liability of the sons in any way. It exists irrespective of these facts (d).

(2) The pious obligation of sons, grandsons, great-grandsons to pay the ancestor's debts to the extent of their interest in the joint family property is not abrogated by the Hindu Succession Act, 1956 (*d*1).

(3) Liability not personal.—The liability of the son, grandson and great-grandson to pay the debts of their ancestor is not a personal one, that is to say, the father's creditor is not entitled to proceed against their person or their separate property. It is limited to their interest in the joint family pro-

---

(c) Hunooman Persaud v. Musumat Babooee (1856) 6 M.I.A. 393, 412; Girdharee Lall v. Kantoo Lal (1874) 1 I.A. 321, 14 Beng. L.R. 187; Suraj Bunsi Koer v. Sheo Persad (1879) 5 Cal. 148, 6 I.A. 88; Muttayan v. Zamindar of Sivagri (1883) 6 Mad. 1, 9 I.A. 128; Maruthappan v. Niraikulathan (1937) Mad. 943, 169 I.C. 292, ('37) A.M. 434; Chockalingam v. Muthukaruppan (1938) Mad. 1019, ('38) A.M. 849; Jagmohan v. Ranchhoddas (1945) Nag. 892; Bithaldas v. Chandratan ('55) A. Raj. 39; Lakshminarasayya v. Papayya ('55) A. Andh. Pra. 97 [liability of heirs of the son]; Ramprasad Firm v. Bai Reva ('70) A. Guj. 269 [Trade Debts—sons of a deceased partner in a firm].

(d) Sidheshwar Mukherjee v. Bhubneshwar Prasad (1954) S.C.R. 177, (1953) 2 M.L.J. 789, ('53) A.SC. 487; Lalta Prasad v. Gajadhar Shukul (1933) 55 All. 283, 199 I.C. 181, ('33) A.A. 235; Virayya v. Pardhasarathi Appa Rao (1934) 57 Mad. 190, 149 I.C. 188, ('33) A.M. 690; Chhotey Lal v. Ganpat Rai (1935) 57 All. 176, 150 I.C. 411, ('34) A.A. 590 (F.B.); overruling Official Liquidator, U.P. Oil Mills Co., Ltd. v. Jamna Prasad (1933) 55 All. 417, 143 I.C. 762, ('33) A.A. 334. This applies to Mithila also where the law is the same as the law of the Mitakshara except in a few matters; Sourendra Mohan v. Hari Prasad (1926) 5 Pat. 135, 91 I.C. 1033, ('25) A.PC. 280.

(*d*1) Reference may be made to Nathubhai v. Chhotubhai ('62) A. Guj. 68.

perty (e), unless there is acceptance of personal liability in the course of judicial proceedings such as Insolvency Proceedings (f).

Brihaspati's text.—"He who having received a sum lent or the like does not repay it to the owner will be born hereafter in his creditor's house, a slave, a servant, a woman, or a quadruped." [Colebrooke, Vol. I, p. 334]. The liability to pay the father's debts arises from the religious obligation to rescue him from the penalties arising from the non-payment of his debt (g).

Illustration

A coparcenary consists of a father and son. The father borrows Rs. 5,000 from C for an immoral purpose. C may obtain a decree against the father and enforce it by attachment and sale of his interest in the joint family property in the father's lifetime. But if the father's interest is not attached in his lifetime, it cannot be attached after his death, and it will then pass to the son by survivorship. See § 289 and § 294(6).

(4) Duration of liability.—The pious obligation of the sons to pay the father's debts lasts only so long as the liability of the father subsists. If the debts are saved from limitation by the father's acknowledgment, the son is bound to pay (h) even though the acknowledgment by the father is after a partition between the father and the son (i). The sons' liability is neither joint nor joint and several as those terms are ordinarily understood in English law (j).

Thus if the father is adjudicated an insolvent for debts contracted by him, and he afterwards obtains his discharge, the effect of the discharge is to release the father from those debts. No suit can therefore be maintained against the father for those debts, and since no suit can be maintained against the father, none can be maintained against the sons in respect of those debts (k).

(5) Liability exists even in father's lifetime.—It is well settled that the liability of the sons to pay the father's debts exists whether the father be alive or dead (l). This liability exists even where by a custom in the Punjab, the son cannot enforce partition during the father's lifetime (m).

There arose a conflict of opinion amongst various High Courts whether there was any pious obligation on the part of the sons to pay the father's debts in the lifetime of the father, or whether the obligation arose for the first time after the father's death. The conflict arose out of some observations of the Judicial Committee in Sahu Ram's case (n). In a later case, that of Brij Narain Rai v. Mangla Prasad (o), their Lordships of the Privy

---

(e) Peda Venkanna v. Sreenivasa (1918) 41 Mad. 136, 142, 43 I.C. 225, ('19) A.M. 1175; Sukhdeo v. Madhusudan (1931) 10 Pat. 305, 132 I.C. 871, ('31) A.P. 177; Bissessor Ram v. Ramakant Dubey (1934) 13 Pat. 7, 151 I.C. 379, ('34) A.P. 187; Devi Das v. Jada Ram (1934) 15 Lah. 50, 147 I.C. 225, ('33) A.L. 857; Maya Debi v. Rajlakshmi ('50) A.C. 1. The creditor can enforce this liability against any of the sons of the debtor, Chandra Bhan v. Misrimal ('55) A. Raj. 11.

(f) Coimbatore Venkataramana Vilas Co. Ltd. v. Official Receiver, Coimbatore (1940) Mad. 191, 186 I.C. 125, ('40) A.M. 30.

(g) For a brief exposition of the subject and the relevant texts, see the decisions of the Supreme Court in Sidheshwar Mukherjee v. Bhubneshwar Prasad (1954) S.C.R. 177 and Pannalal v. Naraini (1952) S.C.R. 544, (1952) 2 M.L.J. 83, ('52) A.SC. 170. Also see Jakati v. Borkar ('59) A.SC. 282.

(h) Lalta Prasad v. Gajadhar Shukul (1933) 55 All. 283, 149 I.C. 181 ('33) A.A. 235.

(i) Muniswami v. Kutti (1933) 56 Mad. 833, 145 I.C. 404, ('33) A.M. 708; Thadi Murali Mohana Reddi v. Medapati Gangaraju (1942) Mad. 95, 197 I.C. 199, ('41) A.M. 772 (F.B.).

(j) Narayanan v. Veerappa (1917) 40 Mad. 581, 35 I.C. 918, ('17) A.M. 989.

(k) (1917) 40 Mad. 581, 35 I.C. 918, ('17) A.M. 989, supra.

(l) Pannalal v. Naraini (1952) S.C.R. 544, 553, (1952) 2 M.L.J. 83, ('52) A.SC. 170; Brij Narain Rai v. Mangla Prasad (1924) 51 I.A. 129, 46 All. 95, 77 I.C. 689, ('24) A.PC. 50; Abdul Karim v. Ram Kishore (1925) 47 All. 421, 86 I.C. 837, ('25) A.A. 327; Badri Prasad v. Madan Lal (1893) 15 All. 75, 79 [F.B.]; Govind v. Sakharam (1904) 28 Bom. 383, 389; Ramasami v. Ulaganatha (1899) 22 Mad. 49-63; Debendra v. Fyzabad Bank (1924) 3 Pat. 63, 75 I.C. 53, ('24) A.P. 94; Thimmegowda v. Dyavamma ('54) A. Mys. 93 (F.B.).

(m) Nihal Chand Gopal Das v. Mohan Lal (1932) 13 Lah. 455, 135 I.C. 197, ('32) A.L. 211.

(n) (1917) 44 I.A. 126, 40 All. 437, 443, 444, 39 I.C. 280, ('17) A.PC. 61.

(o) (1924) 51 I.A. 129, 46 All. 95, 77 I.C. 689, ('24) A.PC. 50.

Council held that the observations in Sahu Ram's case referred to above were not necessary for the decision of the case, and that the sons were liable for the father's debts whether the father was alive or dead when the liability attached.

It may here be observed that under the old Hindu law the liability of the son to pay the father's debt did not arise until after the father's death. Under Hindu law as interpreted by the British Courts the liability exists even in the lifetime of the father. To this extent the British Courts have extended the liability of the son. In another respect, however, that liability has been curtailed, for while under the old Hindu law, the liability extended to the personal property of the son, it is now limited to his interest in the joint family property.

(6) Debt contracted by father after partition.—The son is not liable for a debt contracted by the father after partition.

(7) Liability of son after partition for debt contracted by father before partition.—A son is liable, even after the partition, for the pre-partition debts of his father which are not immoral or illegal and for the payment of which no arrangement was made at the date of the partition (p). Question, however, often arises: How is this liability to be enforced by the creditor?

(i) It is now held by all the Courts in India that if the suit is filed against the father before partition, the son is liable for a debt contracted by the father before partition (q).

(ii) But if the suit is filed after partition against the father the decree cannot be executed against the son (r). The decree against the father after the partition cannot be taken to be a decree against the son and no attachment and sale of the son's separate share would be permissible under sec. 60 of the Civil Procedure Code. A separate and independent suit must be instituted against the son before his share can be reached. This was the view taken in a large number of cases all of which recognised the liability of the son to pay the pre-partition debts of the father. In Pannalal v. Naraini (t) the Supreme Court observed that the principles underlying those decisions were sound.

In Pannalal's case it was observed that the position had been correctly stated by the Nagpur High Court in Jainarayan v. Sonaji (s) in the following passages:

---

(p) Pannalal v. Naraini, supra (at p. 558); Jakati v. Borkar ('59) A.S.C. 282; Sriramamurthi v. Official Receiver ('57) A. Andh. Pra. 692; Nathubhai v. Chhotubhai ('62) A. Guj. 68; Virdhachalam Pillai v. Chaldean Bank ('64) A.S.C. 1425; Ningappa v. Vithappa ('71) A. Mys. 247; Sydulu v. Venkateshwarlu ('65) A.A.P. 318; Varadammal v. Ambalal ('71) A.M. 371; Hanumayya v. Venkata Narasimha ('65) A.A.P. 439 (adequate and sufficient provision).

(q) (Calcutta) Kulada Prasad v. Haripada (1913) 40 Cal. 407, 17 I.C. 257 [a case of partition constituted by conversion of son]. Hari Charan v. Manakmall ('64) A.C. 562.

(Madras) Ramachandra v. Kondayya (1911) 24 Mad. 555; Jagnnatha Rao v. Viswesan (1924) 47 Mad. 621, 80 I.C. 228, ('24) A.M. 682; Subramania v. Sabapathy (1928) 51 Mad. 361, 110 I.C. 141, ('28) A.M. 657 [F.B.].

(Bombay) Annabhat v. Shivappa (1928) 52 Bom. 376, 110 I.C. 269, ('28) A.B. 232.

(Allahabad) Bankey Lal v. Durga Prasad (1931) 53 All. 868 [F.B.], 135 I.C. 139, ('31) A.A. 512 (Settling the conflict between the earlier decisions).

(Patna) Atul Krishna Roy v. Lala Nandanji (1935) 14 Pat. 732 [F.B.], 157 I.C. 53, ('35) A.P. 275 (overruling an earlier decision).

(Lahore) Jawahar Singh v. Parduman Singh (1933) 14 Lah. 399, 141 I.C. 424, ('33) A.L. 116.

(Nagpur) Firm Govindram Dwarkadas v. Nathulal (1938) Nag. 10, 170 I.C. 724, ('37) A.N. 45.

(Oudh) Jageshwar v. Manni Ram (1927) 2 Luck. 561, 101 I.C. 907, ('27) A.O. 180; Raghunandan v. Moti Ram (1931) 6 Luck. 497 (F.B.).

(r) Firm Govindram Dwarkadas v. Nathulal (1938) Nag. 10, 170 I.C. 724, ('37) A.N. 45; Ramayya v. Venkamraju (1954) Mad. 834, ('54) A.M. 864 (F.B.); Kuppan Chettiar v. Masa Goundan (1937) Mad. 1004, 169 I.C. 400, ('37) A.M. 424; Krishnasami v. Ramasami (1899) 22 Mad. 519; Ramachandran v. Ramachandra ('56) A.M. 215; Priya Shankar v. Radhey Shiam (1945) All. 856; Padmavatibai v. Manilal ('59) A.B. 141, (1959) Bom. 81, 60 Bom. L.R. 1015.

(s) (1938) Nag. 136, ('38) Nag. 24, 29.

(t) (1952) S.C.R. 544; (1952) 2 M.L.J. 83, ('52) A.SC. 170.

"To say a son is under a pious obligation to pay certain debts is one thing; to say his property can be taken in execution is another. In our view, property can be attached and sold in execution if it falls within the kind of property that can be attached and sold. What that is, is found by looking at section 60. When one looks at section 60 one finds that the property in question should either belong to the judgment-debtor or he should have a disposing power over it. After partition, the share that goes to the son does not belong to the father and the father has no disposing power over it. Therefore such property does not fall within section 60. . . . It by no means follows that a son cannot be made liable. He could be made liable for his father's debts if he had become a surety; he can be made liable under the pious obligation rule. In neither of the cases put could his liability take the form of having his property seized in execution and sold without any prior proceedings brought against him, leaving him to raise the question whether his liability as surety or under the pious obligation rule precluded him from claiming in execution."

(iii) Another class of cases that falls under this head is where the suit in respect of a pre-partition debt is filed after partition but the father dies pending the suit and his separated son has been brought on record as his legal representative. The question arises whether the liability of the son under the pious obligation rule can be determined in execution proceedings or a separate suit has to be brought for this purpose. The position, here, would be materially different from that under the proposition stated immediately above. In Pannalal v. Naraini (t) the Supreme Court expressed disapproval of the view taken by a majority of judges in a Full Bench decision of the Patna High Court, Atul Krishna v. Lala Nandanji (u) and held that the remedy of the decree-holder in any such case against the share obtained by the son on partition lies in the execution proceedings and not by way of a separate suit. The son would in such proceedings be at liberty to show that the property in his hands is for certain reasons not liable to pay the debts of his father and all these questions would have to be decided by the executing Court under sec. 47 of the Civil Procedure Code.

The questions to be determined by the executing Court were indicated by Their Lordships of the Supreme Court at p. 566 of the report in Pannalal's case (t).

(iv) Also see §292.

290A. Grandfather's share.—Where a decree has been obtained against a Hindu who was a member of a joint family consisting of himself, his father and his son and the judgment debtor and his father died soon after, it was held that the liability of the son to pay the father's decree-debt covers even the share of the judgment debtor's father (x).

291. Extent of liability of grandson and great-grandson.—The son is bound to pay the father's debt with interest. So also is the grandson (y). It was at one time supposed that the pious obligation to pay ancestral debts did not extend beyond the grandson. But it has now been held by the Privy Council that the great-grandson is bound to pay the great-grandfather's debts, and that his liability is co-extensive with that of the son and grandson (z).

---

(t) (1952) S.C.R. 544, (1952) 2 M.L.J. 83, ('52) A.SC. 170.

(u) (1935) 14 Pat. 732 (F.B.).

(x) Shrawan v. Jangalya (1945) Nag. 409.

(y) Lachman Das v. Khunnu Lal (1897) 19 All. 26 [F.B.]; Ladu v. Gobardhan Das (1925) 4 Pat. 478, 481-482, 86 I.C. 721, ('25) A.P. 470.

(z) Masit Ullah v. Damodar Prasad (1926) 53 I.A. 204, 48 All. 518, 98 I.C. 1031, ('26) A.PC. 105; Sheo Ram v. Durga (1928) 3 Luck. 700, 112 I.C. 288, ('28) A.O. 378 [F.B.].

In Chet Ram v. Ram Singh (a), the Judicial Committee observed, upholding the view expressed by the High Court of Allahabad (b), that there was no pious obligation on the grandson to pay the debts of his grandfather while his own father was living. But this view must now be taken to have been superseded by the decision of the same tribunal in Masit Ullah v. Damodar Prasad (c). In that case the joint family consisted of A and his son B. A sold an item of the joint family property to discharge a debt that was contracted by his grandfather. It was held that B's interest in the property was bound by the sale, as the sale was made to liquidate his (B's) great-grandfather's debt which B was under a pious obligation to pay.

It will be seen from §§ 289-291 that no coparcener except a son, grandson or great-grandson is liable for the private debts of any other coparcener. Thus a nephew is not liable for the debts of his uncle; therefore, if an uncle and nephew are members of a joint family, the nephew's interest in the joint property cannot be attached and sold in execution of a decree against the uncle (d).

291A. Wife who has received share on partition.—The doctrine of pious obligation cannot apply to the wife and it would seem that a wife who has received a share on partition between her husband and the sons cannot be liable to the creditor on the principles considered in the preceding paragraphs (*d*1).

292. Creditor's suit.—(1) Suit against father.—In a case where the son is under a pious obligation to pay the father's debt, the creditor may sue the father alone and obtain a decree against him, and he may execute the decree by attachment and sale of the entire interest of the father as well as the son in the joint family property, and the sale will bind the son though he was not made a party to the suit, unless the debt contracted by the father was for an immoral purpose. Even if the son was originally impleaded in the suit and the suit was afterwards withdrawn against him the decree against the father can be executed against the son's interest in the joint family property (e). In Sidheshwar Mukherjee v. Bhubneshwar Prasad (1954) S.C.R. 177, the Supreme Court held that the liability of the son has its basis entirely in the relationship between the father and son and is in no way dependent upon the constitution of the family either at the time when the debt was contracted or when the obligation is sought to be enforced. A person who has obtained a decree against a member of a joint Hindu family for a debt due to him is entitled to attach and sell the interest of his debtor in the joint family property, and, if the debt was not immoral or illegal, the interest of the judgment-debtor's sons also in the joint family property would pass to the purchaser by such sale even though the judgment-debtor was not the karta of the family and the family did not consist of the father and the sons only when the decree was obtained against the father and the properties were sold. It is not necessary that the sons should be made parties to the suit

---

(a) (1922) 49 I.A. 228, 236, 44 All. 368, 375-376, 67 I.C. 569, ('22) A.A. 247.

(b) Ram Singh v. Chet Ram (1919) 41 All. 529, 51 I.C. 119, ('19) A.A. 415.

(c) (1926) 53 I.A. 204, 48 All. 518, 98 I.C. 1031, ('26) A.PC. 105.

(d) Ram Ratan v. Lachman Das (1908) 30 All. 460; Mathura v. Rajkumar (1921) 6 Pat. L.J. 526, 62 I.C. 132, ('21) A.P. 447 [F.B.]; Hari Prasad v. Sourendra (1922) 1 Pat. 506, 525-526, 66 I.C. 945, ('22) A.P. 450.

(*d*1) See, however, Nathubhai v. Chhotubhai ('62) A. Guj. 68, 75, 76.

(e) Krishnan v. Sami (1940) Mad. 815, ('40) A.M. 544; The Kumbakonam Mutual Benefit Fund Ltd. v. C. Ramaswami (1947) Mad. 99; Sreeniwasan v. Rangachari ('53) A.M. 815; Kumaji Sare Mal v. Kalwa Devadattam ('58) A. Andh. Pra. 216; Anantha Pai v. Kesava Pai ('55) A. Tra-Co. 249; Pannalal v. Naraini, supra (at p. 553). The position would be different if the suit as against the son was dismissed on merits. Maha Nirvani v. Bindeshri Prasad ('52) A.A. 337; Ramkrishun Lal v. Ugramohan Dass ('60) A.P. 8. Of course, the rule cannot apply if the son has already parted with his interest in the property to a third party: Jitan Mahto v. Manji Rai ('64) A.P. 240.

or the execution proceedings. This view was re-affirmed by the Supreme Court in Jakati v. Borkar ('59) A.S.C. 282.

The rule laid down by the Privy Council in Mst Nanomi Babuasin's case (f) is not restricted in its application to cases where the father was the head of the family and in that capacity could represent his sons in the suit or execution proceedings, for subject to the right of the sons to assert and prove that the debt contracted by their father was not such as would be binding on them under the Hindu law, the father, even if he was not the karta, could represent his sons as effectively in the sale or execution proceedings as he could do if he was the karta himself.

If there is a partition after the decree, according to one view, the decree may be executed against the joint family property including the son's interest therein (g) but the sons should be made parties to the execution proceedings and unless that is done the father's interest alone would pass (h). According to another view, the creditor should bring another suit against the sons, obtain a decree against them which would be limited to the shares allotted to them on partition and then attach and sell the shares, unless the partition was not bona fide and was made with intent to defraud the general body of creditors, in which case the decree may be executed against the joint family property (i).

The last mentioned two decisions of the Bombay and Madras High Courts, as pointed out by the Supreme Court in Jakati v. Borkar (*i*1), must be confined to their own facts. It was observed in the case: "It is true that the right of the father to alienate for payment of personal debt is ended by partition but. . . . . it does not affect the pious duty of the sons to discharge the debt of the father. Therefore, where after attachment and a proper notice of sale the whole estate including the son's share, which was attached, is sold and the purchaser buys it understanding it to be the whole coparcenary estate, the presence of the sons eo nomine is not necessary because they still have the right to challenge the sale on showing the illegal or immoral purpose of debt. It was held that the partition which had taken place after the decree and pending execution proceedings did not relieve the sons of their pious obligation or their shares of their liability to be sold or be a means of reducing the efficacy of the attachment or impair the rights of the creditor.

If there is a partition during the pendency of the suit against the father, either the son can be made a party and a decree would follow as in sub-§ (2) below or the suit will proceed without the son and the decree will follow as above (j).

Explanation.—The partition that a creditor may have to envisage must, it is said in many decided cases, be bona fide and not made with intent to de(f) (1885) 13 I.A. 1.

---

(g) Kishan Sarup v. Brijraj (1929) 51 All. 932, 955-956, 121 I.C. 257, ('29) A.A. 726; Jageshwar v. Manni Ram (1927) 2 Luck. 561, 101 I.C. 907, ('27) A.O. 180; Nand Kishore v. Madan Lal ('36) A.L. 64, ('decree before partition').

(h) Ganpatrao v. Bhimrao, 52 Bom. L.R. 154, ('50) A.B. 278, (1950) Bom. 114.

(i) Kameshwaramma v. Venkata Subba Row (1915) 38 Mad. 1120, 24 I.C. 474, ('14) A.M. 328 [decree obtained before partition].

(*i*1) ('59) A.SC. 282, 288. Also see, Devadattam v. Union of India ('64) A.SC. 880.

(j) See Raghunandan Pershad v. Moti Ram, 6 Luck. 497, 119 I.C. 449, ('29) A.O. 406, where the decree was in Dec. 1926, the partition was in Aug. 1926 and the suit was probably prior to August. The date of the suit does not appear in the report. See also Jawahar Singh v. Parduman Singh (1933) 14 Lah. 399, 141 I.C. 424, ('33) A.L. 116, where the partition was in Feb. 1927 but the date of the money decree against the father does not appear.

feat or defraud the creditors. In Pannalal's case (k) the Supreme Court pointed out that the expressions "bona fide" and "mala fide" have been frequently used in this connection in various decided cases. The use of such expressions far from being useful does not unoften lead to error and confusion. If by mala fide partition is meant a partition the object of which is to delay and defeat the creditors who have claims upon the joint family property, obviously this would be a fraudulent transaction not binding in law and it would be open to the creditors to avoid it by appropriate means. So also a mere colourable partition not meant to operate between the parties can be ignored and the creditor can enforce his remedies as if the parties still continued to be joint. But a partition need not be mala fide in the sense that the dominant intention of the parties was to defeat the claims of the creditors; if it makes no arrangement or provision for the payment of the just debts payable out of the joint family property, the liability of the sons for payment of the pre-partition debts of the father will still remain (k).

In the above case Their Lordships of the Supreme Court further observed: "We desire only to point out that an arrangement for payment of debts does not necessarily imply that a separate fund should be set apart for payment of these debts before the net assets are divided, or that some additional property must be given to the father over and above his legitimate share sufficient to meet the demands of his creditors. Whether there is a proper arrangement for payment of the debts or not, would have to be decided on the facts and circumstances of each individual case. We can conceive of cases where the property allotted to the father in his own legitimate share was considered more than enough for his own necessities and he undertook to pay off all his personal debts and release the sons from their obligation in respect thereof. That may also be considered to be a proper arrangement for payment of the creditor in the circumstances of a particular case. After all the primary liability to pay his debts is upon the father himself and the sons should not be made liable if the property in the hands of the father is more than adequate for the purpose. If the arrangement made at the time of partition is reasonable and proper, an unsecured creditor cannot have any reason to complain. The fact that he is no party to such arrangement is, in our opinion, immaterial."

In Virdhachalam Pillai v. Chaldean Bank (*k*1) the father created a mortgage on property belonging to the joint family to discharge his antecedent debt and the respondent bank filed a suit on the mortgage, inter alia against the father and his minor son. There was a partition of the joint family properties subsequent to the mortgage and before filing of the suit by the bank. The mortgage was held binding on the son. The primary question for determination was the right of the secured creditor to proceed against the security, ignoring the partition. It was pointed out by the Supreme Court that the mortgage having been executed to secure an antecedent debt of the father the bona fides of the partition had no crucial significance since the mortgage was binding on the son. It was added that the extent to which the question of bona fides could be relevant, the onus was upon the son to establish that the partition was such as made proper and adequate provision for the discharge of the mortgage debt.

It may not be proper to say that a partition is not bona fide merely because it was entered into either pending the creditor's suit or after the decree in that suit, and with the object of avoiding attachment of the joint family property in execution of the decree in the creditors' suit (l).

---

(k) Pannalal v. Naraini (1952) S.C.R. 544, 558, 559; Kaushal Kishore v. Ram Dev ('55) A. Punj. 193. As to renewal of prepartition debt by father see Hanumayya v. Venkata Narasimha ('65) A.A.P. 439.

(*k*1) Virdhachalam Pillai v. Chaldean Bank ('64) A.SC. 1425; Pannalal v. Naraini supra at p. 559. As to adequate and sufficient arrangement see Hanumayya v. Venkata Narasimha ('65) A.A.P. 439.

(l) Balusami Ayyar, In re (1928) 51 Mad. 417, 425, 112 I.C. 451, ('28) A.M. 735 [F.B.]; Subramania v. Sabapathy (1928) 51 Mad. 361, 368, 110 I.C. 141, ('28) A.M. 657; Gaya Prasad v. Murlidhar (1928) 50 All. 137, 104 I.C. 406, ('27) A.A. 714; Kishan Sarup v. Brijraj (1929) 51 All. 932, 936-37, 121 I.C. 257, ('29) A.A. 726; Hirday Narain v. Ram Das ('31) A.A. 606; Khanna and Hari Raj v. Vishnu Datt ('60) A. Punj. 548.

Where a partition between a father and son was not a mere colourable transaction and was in accordance with the proper shares in the property it is not liable to be impeached under section 53, Transfer of Property Act, although it was entered into with a view to prevent attachment of the son's share in execution of decrees obtained against the father after the partition. Only the father's share can be proceeded against (m).

(2) Suit against father and son.—Under similar conditions the creditor may sue both father and son, and obtain a decree against them for the debt due to him (n). It is open to the son in such a suit to show that the debt was incurred by the father (o) for an immoral purpose and to resist a decree against his share on that ground. It is not necessary for the son to show that immoral purpose was known to the lender (p). But a distinct connection must be established between the debt and the father's immorality (q). If he omits to do so, he will be precluded in execution proceedings from pleading that the debt was not binding on him on the ground that it was for an immoral purpose (r).

The son may be joined as a party to a suit on a promissory note executed by the father alone (s). See § 240(4).

If there is a partition between the father and the son after the debt has been incurred but before any suit is filed the creditor can reach the share allotted to the son on partition only by a suit to which the son is a party [vide § 290(7)(ii) and cases cited therein]. Such a suit would in the ordinary course be one both against the father and the son. The decree against the father would be the usual decree but against the son it would be limited to the share allotted to him on partition.

Even where the debt is a secured debt, the creditor may sue both father and son. If the mortgage is binding on the son also, being executed for an antecedent debt [§ 256(2)], or other legal necessity (§ 242) a mortgage decree follows. But if the mortgage was not effected for an antecedent debt or other legal necessity there will be a mortgage decree in Madras and Bombay but not in other States against the father but a money decree against the son (§ 259 and § 260) conditional on the debt not being realised by the sale of the father's share (t). See § 296(i). If there is a partition between the father and the son after the mortgage, the son is still liable to pay the debt unless it is incurred for illegal and immoral purposes. In such a case the son ought to be a party to the suit. As the father does not represent him, the equity of redemption in his share of the property would not be lost unless he is impleaded and is given an opportunity to redeem. If he is not impleaded in the suit against the father, there ought to be another suit against him or other proceeding giving him an opportunity to redeem before he is deprived of his share. There can be no objection to the maintainability of such a suit. If he obstructs delivery of the property to the purchaser, he may be allowed an opportunity to redeem in those proceedings. In such cases, he must redeem the whole of the debt and not merely his own share (u). The son himself may file a suit for a declaration that the mortgage is not binding on him [vide § 296(1)].

(3) Son alone cannot be sued during father's lifetime.—Where a debt has been contracted by the father for his personal benefit, he is primarily liable to discharge it. Such being the case, the son alone cannot be sued

---

(m) Schwebo v. Subbiah alias Shanmugham Chettiar (1945) Mad. 138.

(n) Ramasami v. Ulaganatha (1899) 22 Mad. 49 [F.B.]; Narayanan v. Veerappa (1917) 40 Mad. 581, 582, 35 I.C. 918, ('17) A.M. 989; Debendra v. Fyzabad Bank (1924) 3 Pat. 63, 75 I.C. 53, ('24) A.P. 94.

(o) Sat Narain v. Behari Lal (1925) 52 I.A. 22, 6 Lah. 1, 84 I.C. 883, ('25) A.PC. 18.

(p) Lakshmanaswami v. Raghavacharyulu (1943) Mad. 717, 210 I.C. 98, ('43) A.M. 292; Reference may also be made to Luhar Amrit Lal v. Doshi Jayantilal (1960) 3 S.C.R. 842, 855, 856.

(q) Brijmohan v. Mahabeer (1936) 63 Cal. 194.

(r) Kulitalai Bank v. Nagamanickam (1955) 2 M.L.J. 485, ('55) A.M. 670; Krishnanand v. Raja Ram (1922) 44 All. 393, 66 I.C. 150, ('22) A.A. 116.

(s) Ramasamayya v. Virasami (1898) 21 Mad. 222, 224; Narayanan v. Veerappa (1917) 40 Mad. 581, 582, 35 I.C. 918, ('17) A.M. 989, supra; Ramphul Singh v. Deg Narain (1882) 8 Cal. 517.

(t) Kandasami v. Kuppu (1920) 43 Mad. 421, 55 I.C. 320, ('20) A.M. 479; Sami v. Ponnammal (1897) 21 Mad. 28.

(u) Trimbak v. Narayan Damodar (1884) 8 Bom. 481; Hem Raj v. Bashesher Das (1933) 14 Lah. 22, 147 I.C. 693, ('33) A.L. 253.

during the father's lifetime (v). Nor can a son be rendered liable where the alienation does not bind the father's interest (*v*1).

(4) Father dying pending suit against him: See § 290 (6) (iii) above: Also see § 290 (2).

(4A) Suit against the son after father's death there being no suit against the father.—In such a case, the creditor may file a suit and obtain a decree against the son, and attach the entire interest of the father and son in the coparcenery property, and have it sold in execution of the decree. The son being under a pious obligation to pay the father's debts, he cannot claim the benefit of survivorship. It is assumed that the debt contracted by the father was not for an unlawful or immoral purpose. Such a suit may be filed and a decree obtained against the son, even if, at the time of the suit, the grandfather is living. The decree may be executed against the share of the father and the son in the ancestral property (w). Also see § 290 (2).

(5) In the case of a money claim there cannot be a second suit against the son after the father's death where a decree had been obtained against the father during his lifetime (x).

The decree can only be executed against the son, whether the son is regarded as being represented by the father or as a representative of the father within the meaning of sec. 53 of the Code of Civil Procedure (x), see § 294 (C). The Madras (y) and Allahabad decisions under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, allowing a second suit against the son on the judgment debt are of no practical importance.

292A. Where two brothers contracted a debt in respect of a joint family business the creditor is entitled to a decree against them after their separation in status by a partition (z).

293. Limitation.—(1) Against father.—Where the suit is brought against the father alone to recover a debt contracted by him for his own personal benefit, the period of limitation for the suit is, in the case of an unsecured debt, 3 years from the date when the debt becomes due and payable [Limitation Act, Sch. 1, arts. 57, 58, 66, 67]

(2) Against son.—Judicial opinion on the point is not uniform.

It has been held by the High Court of Madras that whether the suit is brought both against father and son, or it is brought against the son after the father's death, there is only one cause of action which arises equally against father and son at the time when the debt is due and payable, and limitation runs equally against them from that date (a). It has accordingly been held by that Court that a suit against the son after the father's death is governed by the same article of the Limitation Act as would be applicable if the suit were brought against the father himself, the reason given being that the suit against the son is as much a suit on a contract (that is, the father's contract of debt) as a suit against the father (b). According to this view, the period of limitation, in the case of an unsecured debt, is 3 years from the date when the debt becomes due and payable [Limi-

---

(v) Periasami v. Seetharama (1904) 27 Mad. 243, 247 [F.B.].

(*v*1) Muniswamy v. Ramamurti ('70) A.M. 406 [S. 53 Pro. Ins. Act].

(w) Devi Das v. Jada Ram (1934) 15 Lah. 50, 147 I.C. 225, ('33) A.L. 857, dissenting from Binda Prasad v. Raj Ballabh (1926) 48 All. 245, 91 I.C. 785, ('26) A.A. 220.

(x) Venkatanarayana v. Somaraju (1937) Mad. 880 (F.B.), 171 I.C. 101, ('37) A.M. 610.

(y) Periasami v. Seetharama (1904) 27 Mad. 243 [F.B.].

(z) Ram Rakhan v. Raja Lal (1944) Luck. 605.

(a) Mallesam v. Jugala (1900) 23 Mad. 292 [F.B.].

(b) Periasami v. Seetharama (1904) 27 Mad. 243 [F.B.].

tation Act, Sch. I, articles 57, 58, 66, 67]. On the other hand, it has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that the son's liability is not governed by the same article as the father's liability, but by article 120, the reason given being that the son not being a party to the contract, could not be sued on the contract. His liability arises from the pious obligation to pay the father's debt, and the only article applicable to the case is article 120. That article applies to suit for which no period of limitation is provided specifically by the Act, and the period prescribed by that article is 6 years from the date when "the right to sue accrues." Though there is a difference of opinion between the two High Courts as to the period of limitation for a suit against the sons, they are both agreed that the starting point of limitation in respect of the liability both of the father and the son is the same, namely, the date on which the debt becomes due and payable (c). A Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court has held in a case in which a suit was brought against the sons after the father's death, that the case was governed by article 120 of the Limitation Act, but the question whether "the right to sue" accrued on the date on which the debt incurred by the father becomes due and payable, or the date when the creditor after exhausting all his remedies against the father finds that the debt or a portion of it is still unsatisfied, or the date of the death of the father, was left open (d).

Now see Article 113 of the new Limitation Act of 1963, which corresponds to residuary Article 120 of the old Limitation Act, 1908. In view of the fact that the residuary Article 113 of the new Limitation Act, 1963, provides for a period of 3 years the difference of opinion between the High Courts referred to above is not now of any importance.

(3) Where debt is secured by a charge.—Where a debt contracted by the father is secured by a simple mortgage of joint family property or by a charge on such property created by him alone, and a suit is bought to enforce the mortgage or charge, then whether the suit is against the father alone, or both against father and son, or against the son after the father's death, the article of the Limitation Act governing the father's liability is article 132 which prescribes a period of 12 years from the date when the money sued for becomes payable. But the son, not being a party to the mortgage, is not bound by the mortgage, and art. 132 does not apply to his case.

He is liable, however, for the mortgage-debt qua debt, and his liability is governed, according to the Madras decision referred to in sub-§ (2), by one of the articles which prescribes a period of 3 years, and, according to the Allahabad and Calcutta decisions referred to in the same sub-section, by article 120 which prescribes a period of 6 years. According to the Madras decision, the mortgagee's suit against the son would be barred if brought more than 3 years after the accrual of the cause of action; according to the Allahabad and Calcutta decisions, it would be barred if brought more than 6 years after that date (e).

Now see Article 62 of the new Limitation Act, 1963.

294. Sale of coparcenary property in execution of decree against father alone.—The law on the subject-matter of this and paragraph 295 was first expounded by the Privy Council in Muddan Thakoor v. Kantoo Lall (f). The judgment in that case was summarized by their Lordships in Suraj Bunsi Koer v. Sheo Persad (g) in the following terms:—

(a) "That where joint ancestral property has passed out of a joint family, either (1) under a conveyance executed by a father in con-

---

(c) Narsingh v. Lalji (1901) 23 All. 206. See Maharaj Singh v. Balwant Singh (1906) 28 All. 508, 516.

(d) Brijnandan v. Bidya Prasad (1915) 42 Cal. 1068, 29 I.C. 629, ('16) A.C. 279.

(e) Brijnandan v. Bidya Prasad (1915) 42 Cal. 1068, 29 I.C. 629, ('16) A.C. 279; Chandradeo Singh v. Mata Prasad (1909) 31 All. 176, 179, lines 4-10, 1 I.C. 479 [F.B.].

(f) (1874) 14 Beng. L.R. 187, 1 I.A. 321.

(g) 6 I.A. 88, 106, 5 Cal. 148, 171.

sideration of an antecedent debt, or in order to raise money to pay off an antecedent debt [§ 295] or (2) under a sale in execution of a decree for the father's debt [§ 294C] his sons, by reason of their duty to pay their father's debts, cannot recover that property, unless they show that the debts were contracted for immoral purposes, and that the purchaser had notice that the debts were so contracted"; and

(b) "that the purchasers at an execution sale, being strangers to the suit, if they have not notice that the debts were so contracted, are not bound to make enquiry beyond what appears on the face of the proceedings".

The following passage from the Judgment of the Privy Council in Mst. Nanomi Babuasin v. Modhun Mohun (h) has now become classical:—

> "Destructive as it may be of the principle of independent coparcenary rights in the sons, the decisions have for some time established the principle that the sons cannot set up their rights against their father's alienation for an antecedent debt, or against his creditors' remedies for their debts, if not tainted with immorality. On this important question of the liability of the joint estate their Lordships think that there is now no conflict of authority."

When the father became a Christian and was afterwards reconverted to Hinduism a sale in execution of a money decree against him does not pass the minor son's share in the family property, as the joint family was broken up when the father became a convert and there can be no reunion with the minor son (i).

294A. Son's remedies before sale.—(1) A debt contracted by the father for his own personal benefit may be secured by a mortgage of joint family property or it may be unsecured. In either case the creditor may obtain a money decree against the father alone, and may attach and bring to sale the entire joint family property including the son's interest therein in execution of the decree. The sons being under a pious obligation to pay the father's debt, cannot object to the attachment of their interest in the property on the ground that the debt was not for the benefit of the family. Nor can they object on the ground that they were not parties to the suit in which the decree was passed. Prima facie a decree obtained against A cannot be executed by attachment and sale of B's property. But the position of sons in a joint Hindu family is, by reason of their pious duty to pay their father's debt, very different from that of an ordinary third party. The sons being under a pious obligation to pay the father's debt, the entire joint family property is liable to be attached and sold in execution of the decree against the father, unless they show that the debt for which the decree was passed was incurred by the father for an immoral or illegal purpose or successfully challenge the existence of the debt on which the decree is based (j).

There are two courses open to the sons. They may come in under O. 21, r. 58, of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, and object to the attachment and sale on either of the grounds mentioned above. The party against whom the order is made will then,

---

(h) (1886) 13 Cal. 21, 35, 13 I.A. 1, 17, 18.

(i) Vella Venkatasubbayya v. Yella Venkataramayya (1944) Mad. 33.

(j) Lakshmadu v. Ramudu & Ors. (1940) Mad. 123, 187 I.C. 816, ('39) A.M. 867; Maha Deo v. Rambir Singh (1945) Lah. 67 (F.B.); Bhagat Ram v. Ajudhia Parkash ('60) A. Punj. 261. But see Surendra Nath v. Saralia; Hindi Mahajani School ('50) A. East Punjab 282 where it was held that where a creditor obtained a decree for debt against the father the sons cannot question the existence of the debt except by showing that the decree was obtained by fraud or collusion. At any rate the burden of proving non-existence of debt would be upon the sons. Also see § 292 supra and Sidheshwar v. Bhubneshwar Prasad (1954) S.C.R. 177; Udmiram v. Balramdas ('56) A.N. 76.

under O. 21, r. 63, be entitled to bring a suit in which the whole question as to whether there was a debt or not, or whether it was immoral or not, will be determined. If no such suit is filed within one year from the date of the order, the order will be conclusive (k); [see Limitation Act, 1918, Sch. I, art. 11]. The sons, however, are not bound to proceed under O. 21, r. 58. They may bring a suit against the decree-holder for a declaration that they are not bound by the decree and for an injunction restraining the decree-holder from selling the entire property, but their share will not be released from attachment, unless they show that the debt for which the decree was obtained was tainted with immorality (l). And in such a suit ad valorem court fees must be paid (m). It has been held in Bombay that the decree-holder himself may apply under O. 21, r. 66(2)(e) of the Civil Procedure Code to include the sons' interest in the proclamation of sale, and that the Court may on such an application deal with the sons' objection after giving notice to them (n).

(2) In the case of a mortgage by the father of joint family property, the creditor may obtain a mortgage decree against the father alone. Where the property is put up for sale in execution of a mortgage decree, no attachment takes place as in the case of a money decree. The sale is held in such cases under the final decree for sale passed in the mortgage suit. But the sale is always notified by proclamation under O. 21, r. 66, and the sons may at the time of sale give public notice to all intending purchasers that there was in reality no debt owing from the father or that the debt for which the decree was passed was contracted by the father for an immoral or illegal purpose. Where such notice is given, and the property is purchased after such notice, though it may be by a stranger to the suit, the sale will be set aside if the sons show, in a suit subsequently brought by them, that the debt was contracted for an immoral purpose; for the purchaser, though he may be a stranger to the suit, will then be taken to have had notice actual or constructive, of the sons' objection to the result of the sons' suit (o); see § 294E(1), para 2. But the sons are not bound to wait until the property is sold. They may bring a suit against the mortgagee for a declaration that they are not bound by the decree and for an injunction restraining the mortgagee from selling the entire property.

Where such a suit is brought, the question arises whether the sons' suit must fail unless they can establish that the debt for which the decree was passed was for an immoral purpose, as they have to do in a suit to set aside a money decree [see sub-§ (1)], or whether they are entitled to succeed if the mortgage was neither for legal necessity nor for the payment of an antecedent debt, without showing that the debt was contracted for an immoral purpose. It has been held in several cases that as in the case of a simple money decree, so in the case of a mortgage decree, the sons are not entitled to go behind the decree, except for the purpose of showing that the debt was

---

(k) Indar Pal v. The Imperial Bank (1915) 37 All. 214, 28 I.C. 593, ('15) A.A. 126; Mohan Lal v. Bala Prasad (1922) 44 All. 649, 69 I.C. 754, ('22) A.A. 310; Hammant Kashinath v. Ganesh Annaji (1919) 43 Bom. 612, 51 I.C. 612, ('18) A.B. 13; Madhusudan v. Iswari Dayi (1921) 48 Cal. 341, 61 I.C. 25, ('21) A.C. 152; Ram Rattan v. Basant Rai (1921) 2 Lah. 263, 64 I.C. 121, ('21) A.L. 205.

(l) Karam Singh v. Bhup Singh (1905) 27 All. 16 [F.B.]; Abdul Karim v. Ram Kishore (1925) 47 All. 421, 86 I.C. 837, ('25) A.A. 327; Sardari Lal v. Bharat National Bank (1931) 12 Lah. 495 130 I.C. 836, ('31) A.L. 716; Pirthi-Singh v. Man Chand (1935) 16 Lah. 1077, 156 I.C. 539, ('35) A.L. 761.

(m) Vinayakrao v. Mankunwarbai (1943) Nag. 440, 202 I.C. 643, ('43) A.N. 70.

(n) Ramchandra v. Bhagwant (1929) 53 Bom. 777, 121 I.C. 435, ('29) A.B. 465.

(o) Suraj Bunsi Koer v. Sheo Persad (1878) 5 Cal. 148, 173, 6 I.A. 88, 106 (debt held to be immoral); Bhagbut Pershad v. Girja Koer (1888) 15 Cal. 717, 724, 15 I.A. 99, 104 (debt held not to be immoral).

tainted with immorality (p). The cases referred to above were prior in date to the Privy Council case of Brij Narain v. Mangla Prasad (q), decided in 1923. In that case the Judicial Committee laid down five propositions (see note under § 295 at p. 378, infra, or which the following three are material:—

(1) The managing member of a joint undivided estate cannot alienate or burden the estate qua manager except for purposes of necessity [see § 242].

(2) If he is the father and the other members are the sons he may, by incurring debt, so long as it is not for an immoral purpose, lay the estate open to be taken in execution proceedings upon a decree for payment of that debt [see § 294].

(3) If he purports to burden the estate by mortgage, then unless that mortgage is to discharge an antecedent debt, it would not bind the estate [see § 295].

The Supreme Court has in a number of cases expressed agreement with the decision of the Privy Council in Brij Narain's case and adopted the propositions there laid down (qq).

In Fuqir Chand v. Hernam Kaur (qqq) the Supreme Court had occasion to consider certain Full Bench decisions of High Courts on the meaning and effect of the second proposition in the Privy Council case about the effect of which there was difference of opinion. It was pointed out by the Supreme Court that:

(i) the son is under a pious obligation to pay all debts of the father, whether secured or unsecured. The second proposition applies not only to an unsecured debt but also to a mortgage debt which the father is personally liable to pay.

(ii) The second proposition applies in the case of a money decree for payment of debt before the sale is held and similarly it also applies in the case of a mortgage decree and the son is not entitled to interfere with the execution of the decree or with the sale of the property in execution proceedings (unless he can show that the debt was non-existent or tainted with immorality or illegality).

Another question which came up for decision by the Supreme Court in Faqir Chand's case was whether the son is entitled to impeach the mortgage of a joint family property made neither for legal necessity nor for payment of an antecedent debt, and if so, whether the remedy is available to him after the mortgagee has obtained a decree against the father on the mortgage. The question was answered in the affirmative overruling the contrary view taken by the High Court of Punjab (qqqq). It was held that in spite of (p) Beni Madho v. Basdeo Patak (1890) 12 All. 99; Bhawani Baksh v. Ram Dai (1891) 13 All. 216; Pem Singh v. Partab Singh (1892) 14 All. 179 [F.B.]. See also Chandradeo v. Mata Prasad (1909) 31 All. 176, 1 I.C. 479; Raja Raghunandan v. Kumar (1931) 10 Pat. 124, 126 I.C. 377, ('30) A.P. 521.

---

(q) (1924) 51 I.A. 129, 46 All. 95, 77 I.C. 689, ('24) A.PC. 50.

(qq) Faqir Chand v. Harnam Kaur ('67) A.S.C. 727.

(qqq) See f.n. (qq) above.

(qqqq) Faqir Chand v. Harnam Kaur ('61) A. Punj. 325 (F.B.).

the passing of the preliminary or final decree for sale against the father, the mortgage will not, as before, bind the son's interest in the property, and the son will be entitled to ask for a declaration that his interest has not been alienated either by the mortgage or by the decree. It was observed that "the first proposition in Brij Narain's case sets out the general rule regarding the powers of the managing member of a joint family to alienate or burden the estate. The second and third propositions lay down the special rules applicable when the managing member is the father, and deal specially with his powers to mortgage the estate for payment of his antecedent debt. Reading the first and the third propositions together, it will appear that a father who is also the manager of the family has no power to mortgage the estate except for legal necessity or for payment of an antecedent date."

In Oudh and Punjab (r), it was held that the word "debt" in the second proposition referred not only to a simple money debt but also to a mortgage debt, and that the sons' suit must fail unless they establish that the debt was for an immoral purpose. But a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court (s) held that the word "debt" in the second proposition contemplated a simple money debt, and not a mortgage debt; further, that having regard to the first and third propositions, a mortgage by the father could only be upheld if it was made either for a legal necessity or for an antecedent debt, and in no other case, and that if the mortgagee failed to prove that the debt was contracted for either of those two purposes, the sons were entitled to have the mortgage decree set aside without showing that the debt was for immoral purposes.

It is important to note that the ruling in the abovementioned Full Bench case applied only where (1) the suit was to set aside a mortgage decree, and (2) the suit was brought before sale. Reference may also be made to a Full Bench decision of the Madras High Court (t).

In a later case the Bombay High Court agreed with the Full Bench decision of the Allahabad High Court and differed from the Punjab High Court (u), and the same view was taken by the Nagpur High Court in a still later decision (v).

It may be noticed that the above decisions were prior to the Supreme Court's decision in Faqir Chand's case and must be taken to have been overruled to the extent that they go contrary to what has been finally laid down in Faqir Chand's case.

294B. Son's rights after sale.—(1) Money decree against father.—Where the father has contracted a debt for his own personal benefit, the creditor may obtain a money decree against the father alone, and may enforce the decree by attachment and sale of the entire coparcenary property including the son's interest therein. The sons, though not parties to the suit, are bound by the sale by reason of their pious duty to pay their father's debt, and they cannot recover their share of the property unless they prove (and the burden lies upon them to prove) that the debt was contracted by the father for an immoral or illegal purpose. This rests on the theory that as the father can effect a sale without suit of the entire joint family property including his sons' in-

---

(r) Gouri Shankar v. Jang Bahadur (1924) 27 Oudh Cases, 124, 79 I.C. 1008, ('24) A.O. 394; Nand Lal v. Umrai (1926) 1 Luck. 360, 93 I.C. 655, ('26) A.O. 321; Faqir Chand v. Harnam Kaur ('61) A. Punj. 138 (F.B.), (1960) 2 Punj. 325 (F.B.); Jogindar Singh v. The Punjab & Sindh Bank Ltd., Amritsar (1940) 21 Lah. 96, 186 I.C. 357 ('39) A.L. 585; Nathu Lal v. Phool Chand ('55) A.V.P. 6.

(s) Jagdish Prasad v. Hoshyar Singh (1929) 51 All. 136, 115 I.C. 775, ('28) A.A. 596 [F.B.].

(t) Abdul Hameed v. Provident Investment Co. Ltd. ('54) A.M. 961, (1954) Mad. 939, (1954) 2 M.L.J. 416; Jagadesan v. Saraswathi Ammal ('62) A.M. 174 (F.B.). Also see Kalappa v. Venkatesh ('62) A. Mys. 260.

(u) Bharamappa Murdeppa v. Hanmantappa Tippanna (1943) Bom. 568, ('43) A.B. 451.

(v) Ganpat v. Rameshwar (1946) Nagpur 741.

terest therein in favour of the creditor for the payment of an antecedent debt [§ 295], so the creditor may legally procure a sale of it by suit (w). The fundamental principle is that where joint family property is sold in execution of a decree (x), though obtained against the father alone, and for a debt contracted by him for his own personal benefit, the sons cannot claim to recover their share of the property unless they show that the debt was contracted by the father to the knowledge of the lender (y) for an immoral or illegal purpose (a) and that the purchaser had notice that it was so contracted (b).

A distinction has, however, been made by the Judicial Committee between the case where the purchaser at the execution sale is a stranger to the suit and the case where he is the decree-holder himself. The two leading cases on the subject are Muddun Thakoor v. Kantoo Lall (c) and Suraj Bunsi Koer v. Sheo Persad (d). It has been held by the Judicial Committee in those cases that where the purchaser is a stranger to the suit, the sons are not entitled to recover their share unless they prove (1) that the debt was contracted for an immoral or illegal purpose, and also (2) that the purchaser had notice that it was so contracted. It is not necessary for the purchaser to show that he made inquiry before the sale as to the nature of the debt.

The purchaser in execution is not bound to go behind the decree (e) or further back than to see that there was a decree against the father, and that the property sold was properly liable to satisfy the decree if the decree had been properly passed against the father; if he makes an inquiry to that extent and then purchases the property bona fide and for value, the sale is not liable to be set aside at the suit of the sons, and the purchaser is entitled to the entire property including the sons' interest therein. "Purchasers at an execution sale, being strangers to the suit, if they have not notice that the debts contracted for an immoral purpose were so, are not bound to make inquiry beyond what appears on the face of the proceedings."

The abovementioned decisions of the Judicial Committee have been followed in a number of cases (f). The principle on which those decisions rest is that one who has bona fide purchased joint family property under an execution, and bona fide paid a valuable consideration, is protected against the suit

---

(w) Mst. Nanomi Babuasin v. Modhun Mohan (1886) 13 Cal. 21, 36, 13 I.A. 1; Kamasamayyan v. Virasami (1898) 21 Mad. 222, 224; Kunhali v. Keshava (1888) 11 Mad. 64, 76.

(x) Swaminatha v. Krishnaswami (1947) Mad. 471 (decree on a promissory note).

(y) Sat Narain v. Behari Lal (1925) 52 I.A. 22, 6 Lah. 1, 84 I.C. 883 ('25) A.PC. 18; Minakshi Nayudu v. Immudi (1889) 12 Mad. 142, 16 I.A. 1 (original creditor advanced the loan bona fide).

(a) Muddun Thakoor v. Kantoo Lall (1874) 14 Beng. L.R. 187, 200, 1 I.A. 321, 334; Suraj Bunsi Koer v. Sheo Persad (1880) 5 Cal. 148, 171, 6 I.A. 88, 106; Muttayan Chettiar v. Sangili (1882) 6 Mad. 1, 9 I.A. 128; Bhagbut Pershad v. Girja Koer (1888) 15 Cal. 717, 724, 15 I.A. 99, 105; Minakshi v. Immudi (1889) 12 Mad. 142, 16 I.A. 1; Sripat Singh v. Tagore (1917) 44 Cal. 524, 44 I.A. 1, 39 I.C. 252, ('16) A.PC. 220; Brij Narain v. Mangla Prasad (1924) 51 I.A. 129, 46 All. 95, 77 I.C. 689, ('24) A.PC. 50; Karan Singh v. Bhup Singh (1905) 27 All. 16 [F.B.]. See also cases cited in sub-secs. (2), (3), (4) and (5); Bhubaneshwar Prasad Narayan Singh v. Bihari Lal (1935) 14 Pat. 436, 156 I.C. 350, ('35) A.P. 205; Lakshmandas v. Karunakaran ('57) A. Kerala 126.

(b) Suraj Bunsi Koer v. Sheo Persad (1880) 5 Cal. 148, 171, 6 I.A. 88, 106; Bhagut Pershad v. Girja Koer (1888) 15 Cal. 717, 724, 15 I.A. 99, 105; Jahan Singh v. Hardat Singh (1935) 57 All. 357, 152 I.C. 487, ('35) A.A. 247; Krishnaji v. Vithal (1888) 12 Bom. 625.

(c) (1874) 14 Beng. L.R. 187, 1 I.A. 321.

(d) (1880) 5 Cal. 148, 171, 6 I.A. 88, 106. See also Muttayan Chettiar v. Sangili (1882) 6 Mad. 1, 9 I.A. 128, where it was held that the law in the Madras State is not different.

(e) In Mahabir Prasad v. Basdeo Singh (1884) 6 All. 234, 238, it was held that the decree must be read with the plaint, so that the purchaser will be deemed to have notice of the allegation in the plaint.

(f) Bhawani Bakhsh v. Ram Dai (1891) 13 All. 216, 223; Trimbak v. Narayan (1884) 8 Bom. 481; Maharaj Singh v. Balwant Singh (1906) 28 All. 508, 518-519; Krishnaji v. Vithal (1888) 12 Bom. 625; Jahan Singh v. Hardat Singh (1935) 57 All. 357; 152 I.C. 487, ('35) A.A. 247; Suryanarayana v. Ganesulu (1953) 2 M.L.J. 439, ('54) A.M. 203; Girija Sankar v. Nayan Chandra ('52) A. Assam 5.

of the sons seeking to set aside the sale and to recover their share of the property.

But it is different if the decree-holder is himself the purchaser. In that case, all that is necessary for the sons to prove, to entitle them to recover their share, is that the debt for which the decree was passed was contracted for an immoral purpose. It is not necessary for them to prove the further fact that the purchaser had notice that the debt was so contracted. The reason is that where the purchaser is the decree-holder in the suit, he does not stand in the same position as a stranger to the suit, and he cannot therefore protect himself under the plea of being a purchaser without notice (g). It is also well established that even if the purchaser is a stranger to the suit, the sale will be set aside to the extent of the sons' interest in the property, if before the sale took place objection was taken by the sons that the debt for which the decree was obtained was contracted for an immoral purpose, and it is eventually proved that the debt was so contracted. The reason is that in such a case the purchaser will be taken to have had notice, actual or constructive, of the sons' objection, and, therefore, to have purchased with notice of the sons' claim and subject to the result of any suit that may be brought by the sons to recover their share of the property (h).

The same principles apply where the sale is sought to be set aside on the ground that there was in reality no debt owing by the father and that the decree was obtained by collusion between the creditor and the father. In such a case, if the purchaser be the decree-holder himself, the sons must show, to entitle them to succeed, that there was no debt in fact, and that is all that is necessary for them to prove (i). But if the purchaser be a stranger to the suit, the sons must show not only that there was no debt due by the father, but also that the purchaser had notice that there was no such debt (j).

The position, then, is that where joint family property is sold in execution of a decree against the father, then if the purchaser is the decree-holder himself, the sons are entitled to recover their interest merely by proof of the immorality or non-existence (k) of the debt. But if the purchaser is a stranger to the suit, they cannot recover their share unless they prove that the debt was contracted for an immoral or illegal purpose, and also that the purchaser had notice that it was so contracted (l).

The distinction between the case where the purchaser is a stranger and where he is the decree-holder himself was, as stated above, laid down by the Judicial Committee in Muddun Thakoor's case and Suraj Bunsi Koer's case. In some later cases, however, even where the purchaser was a stranger to the suit, the Judicial Committee appears to have

---

(g) Luchmun Dass v. Giridhur (1880) 5 Cal. 855; Ramphul Singh v. Deg Narain (1882) 8 Cal. 517, 522; Beni Parshad v. Puran Chand (1896) 23 Cal. 262; Natasayyan v. Ponnusami (1893) 16 Mad. 99, 103; Ramasamayyan v. Virasami (1898) 21 Mad. 222; Sripat Singh v. Tagore (1917) 44 I.A. 1, 44 Cal. 524, 39 I.C. 352, ('16) A.PC. 220; Trimbak Balkrishna v. Narayan Damodar (1884) 8 Bom. 481 [the purchaser was the decree-holder's son]; Joharmal v. Eknath (1900) 24 Bom. 343; Ram Chandar v. Muhammad (1923) 45 All. 545, 73 I.C. 656, ('23) A.A. 591.

(h) Suraj Bunsi Koer v. Sheo Persad (1878) 5 Cal. 148, 6 I.A. 88 [debt held to be immoral]; Bhagbut Pershad v. Girja Koer (1888) 15 Cal. 717, 724, 15 I.A. 99, 105 [debt held not to be immoral]; Mahabir Prasad v. Basdeo (1884) 6 All. 234 [debt held to be immoral. See also Maharaj Singh v. Balwant Singh (1906) 28 All. 508, 518-519 [debt held to be immoral].

(i) Beni Parshad v. Puran Chand (1896) 23 Cal. 262; Ramasamayyan v. Virasami (1898) 21 Mad. 222; Firm Pirthirajganeshdas v. Kishunlal (1946) 25 Pat. 103.

(j) Beni Parshad v. Puran Chand (1896) 23 Cal. 262, 274-275; Mahabir v. Basdeo Singh (1884) 6 All. 234, 238.

(k) Lakshmadu v. Ramudu & Ors. (1940) Mad. 123, ('39) A.M. 867, 187 I.C. 816; Maha Deo v. Rambir Singh (1945) Lah. 67 [F.B.].

(l) Reference may be made to Abdul Hameed v. Provident Investment Co. Ltd. ('54) A.M. 961 (F.B.) and Ajit Singh v. Hem Raj ('56) A. Punj. 139 where the question of limitation is considered. Also see Jagadesan v. Saraswathi Ammal ('62) A.M. 174 (F.B.).

laid down in general terms and without any reference to the necessity of notice, that the sons could successfully impeach a sale merely by proof of the immorality of the debt (m). But in all these cases, the fact of immorality had been disproved, so that the question of notice could not have arisen. Thus in Mst. Nanomi Babuasin v. Modhun Mohun (n), which was one of such cases, the Judicial Committee observed: "All the sons can claim is that, not being parties to the sale or execution proceedings, they ought not to be barred from trying the fact or the nature of the debt in a suit of their own. Assuming they have such a right it will avail them nothing unless they can prove that the debt was not such as to justify the sale." The debt in that case was held not to be immoral, and the question of notice did not arise. In Sripat Singh v. Tagore (o), their Lordships said "The property in question was joint property, governed by the Mitakshara law. By that law a judgment against the father of the family cannot be executed against the whole of the joint family property, if the debt in respect of which the judgment has been obtained was a debt incurred for illegal or immoral purposes. In every other event it is open to the execution creditor to sell the whole of the estate in satisfaction of the judgment obtained against the father alone." In this case also it was found that the debt was not incurred for an immoral purpose; moreover, the decree-holder himself was the purchaser. In Brij Narain v. Mangla Prasad (p), their Lordships, after reviewing the earlier cases on the subject, laid down five propositions of which the second was as follows: "If he is the father and the other members are the sons, he may, by incurring debt, so long as it is not for an immoral purpose, lay the estate open to be taken in execution proceeding upon a decree for payment of that debt." But that was a case of a mortgage executed by the father for the payment of an antecedent debt and the question of notice was not referred to either in argument or in the judgment. In India too there have been cases in which it has been laid down that where the purchaser is a stranger to the suit, the sons can in a suit of their own successfully impeach the sale or resist the purchaser's suit for possession merely by proof of the immorality of the debt. But in these cases also the fact of immorality had been disproved, and the question of notice did not therefore arise (q).

Illustrations

(a) A and his son B are members of a joint family. A is indebted to C in the sum of Rs. 5,000. C obtains a personal decree against A alone, and in execution of the decree attaches the whole coparcenary property belonging to the joint family. B objects to the attachment of his interest in the property on the ground that the moneys borrowed by his father A from C were borrowed for an immoral purpose. It is proved that the amount was borrowed for an immoral purpose. The Court will set aside the attachment to the extent of the son's interest. Suppose now that B does not object to the attachment, and that the whole property including B's interest is sold in execution of the decree, and it is purchased by C, the decree-holder, and B sues C to set aside the sale on the ground that the debt contracted by his father was for an immoral purpose. If the son succeeds in showing that the debt was so contracted the sale will be set aside to the extent of the son's interest in the property. If the son fails to show that the debt was immoral, the sale will be upheld in its entirety. But if the property is purchased by a stranger to the suit, the son cannot recover his share unless he proves not only that the debt was contracted for an immoral purpose, but that the purchaser had notice that it was so contracted.

(b) A and his son B are members of a joint family. C obtains a personal decree against A for Rs. 5,000 borrowed by A from C for his personal benefit, but not for an immoral purpose. A dies without paying the amount of the decree. C may, after A's death, attach not only A's share but also B's share in the joint property, in other words attach the entire joint family property, and have the same sold in execution of the decree. The debt not having been contracted for an immoral purpose, the son's right to take by survivorship gives way to the supreme obligation to pay the father's debt. But if the debt was contracted for an immoral purpose, C could not after A's death attach the interest either of A or B. The reason is that, as regards A's interest, it will pass by survivorship to B [§ 289(2)], and as regards B's interest, it cannot be held liable, the debt being of an immoral character.

---

(m) Mst. Nanomi Babuasin v. Modhun Mohun (1886) 13 Cal. 21, 13 I.A. 1; Bhagbut Pershad v. Girja Koer (1888) 15 Cal. 717, 724, 15 I.A. 99; Minakshi v. Immudi (1889) 12 Mad. 142, 16 I.A. 1; Mahabir Pershad v. Moheshwar Nath (1890) 17 Cal. 584, 17 I.A. 11.

(n) (1886) 13 Cal. 21, 36, 13 I.A. 1. 18.

(o) (1917) 44 Cal. 524, 532, 44 I.A. 1, 4, 39 I.C. 252, ('16) A.PC. 220.

(p) (1924) 51 I.A. 129, 139, 46 All. 95, 104, 77 I.C. 689, ('24) A.PC. 50.

(q) Mata Din v. Gaya Din (1909) 31 All. 599, 3 I.C. 24 [purchaser's suit for possession]; Dalip Narain v. Parmaoti (1920) 42 All. 58, 67 I.C. 93, ('20) A.A. 310; Gajadhar v. Jadubir (1925) 47 All. 122, 85 I.C. 31, ('25) A.A. 180; Narayanacharya v. Narso Krishna (1876) 1 Bom. 262.

(2) Mortgage decree against father.—The above rules apply not only to a sale in execution of money decree against the father, but to a sale in execution of mortgage decree against him. This happens when the mortgage executed by the father is neither for legal necessity nor for the payment of an antecedent debt. If the mortgage is created either for legal necessity or for an antecedent debt not tainted with immorality, the mortgage itself binds the sons' interest in the property. If the mortgage is neither for legal necessity nor for an antecedent debt, the mortgage as such is not operative on the sons' interest, but the sons are nevertheless under a pious obligation to pay the mortgage debt qua debt. In such a case, if a decree is passed against the father on the mortgage for the sale of the whole of the mortgaged property, and the property is sold in execution of the mortgage decree, the sons, though not parties to the mortgage suit, are bound by the sale, unless they show that there was no debt owing by the father (r), or that the debt in respect of which the mortgage was executed was incurred by the father to the knowledge of the lender (s) for an immoral or illegal purpose (t) and that the purchaser not being the decree-holder had notice that the debt was so incurred [vide cases cited under 294B (1).]. See § 296(1), cl. ii. As to the sons' remedies before sale, see § 294A. As to limitation reference may be made to the undermentioned decision of a Full Bench of the Madras High Court (u).

Illustration

A joint family consists of a father and sons. The father mortgages certain immovable property forming part of the joint family properties to secure a loan raised by him. The loan is not raised either for a legal necessity or for payment of an antecedent debt. The mortgagee sues the father alone and obtains a decree for the sale of the mortgaged property. The property is sold in execution, and it is purchased by the mortgagee himself. The sons, being under a pious obligation to pay their father's debt, are bound by the sale unless they show that the debt was tainted with immorality. There is no distinction in such cases between a debt secured by a mortgage and an unsecured debt: Gajadhar v. Jadubir (1925) 47 All. 122, 85 I.C. 31, ('25) A.A. 180. Had the mortgage been for family necessities or for the discharge of an antecedent debt, the mortgage itself would have bound the sons' interest in the mortgaged property and the sale in execution would have passed the sons' interest not by virtue of the decree, but by virtue of the mortgage.

(3) Execution purchaser's suit for possession.—The rules laid down above apply also to a suit by a purchaser at an execution sale against the sons for possession of the property purchased by him (v).

(4) Burden of proving immorality of debt.—Where in respect of their share the sons claim to set aside a sale in execution of a decree against the father, the burden lies upon them to prove that the debt was contracted for an immoral or illegal purpose (w). It is not necessary for the purchaser to

---

(r) Ramasamayyan v. Virasami (1898) 21 Mad. 222.

(s) Sat Narain v. Behari Lal (1925) 52 I.A. 22, 6 Lah. 1, 84 I.C. 883, ('25) A.PC. 18.

(t) Suraj Bunsi Koer v. Sheo Persad (1878) 5 Cal. 148, 6 I.A. 88; Mst. Nanomi Babuasin v. Modhun Mohun (1886) 13 Cal. 21, 13 I.A. 1; Bhagbut Pershad v. Girja Koer (1888) 15 Cal. 717, 721, 724, 15 I.A. 99, 104, 105; Lala Suraj Prosad v. Golab Chand (1901) 28 Cal. 517; Jamna v. Nain Sukh (1887) 9 All. 493, 494; Beni Madho v. Basdeo Patak (1890) 12 All. 99; Bhawani Bakhsh v. Ram Dai (1891) 13 All. 216; Pem Singh v. Partab Singh (1892) 14 All. 179 [F.B.]; Gajadhar v. Jadubir (1925) 47 All. 122, 85 I.C. 31, ('25) A.A. 180; Kunhali v. Keshava (1888) 11 Mad. 64, 76; Tribeni v. Ramasray (1931) 10 Pat. 670, 136 I.C. 49, ('32) A.P. 80 [F.B.]; Jahan Singh v. Hardat Singh (1935) 57 All. 357, 152 I.C. 487, ('35) A.A. 247; Abdul Hameed v. Provident Investment Co. Ltd. (1954) Mad. 939, ('54) A.M. 961; Jagadesan v. Saraswathi Ammal ('62) A.M. 174 (F.B.).

(u) (1954) Mad. 939, ('54) A.M. 961, supra.

(v) Trimbak v. Narayan Damodar (1884) 8 Bom. 481; Mata Din v. Gaya Din (1909) 31 All. 599, 3 I.C. 24.

(w) Bhagbut Pershad v. Girja Koer (1888) 15 Cal. 717, 724, 15 I.A. 99, 104; Muddun Thakoor show that there was proper inquiry as to the purpose of the loan, or to prove that the money was borrowed in a case of necessity (x).

The burden which lies upon the sons to prove the immorality of the debt is not discharged by showing that the father lived an extravagant and immoral life; there must be a distinct connection between the debt and the immorality set up by the sons (y).

(5) Construction of execution proceedings.—It is stated above that where the father has contracted a debt for his own personal benefit, the creditor may obtain a decree against the father alone, and may enforce the decree by attachment and sale of the entire joint family property including the sons' interest therein. But though the creditor can in execution of his decree sell the entire joint family property, he is not obliged to do so. He may put up only the father's interest for sale. If what is brought and sold is the father's interest alone, the purchaser is not, except in some cases in Bombay, entitled to the possession of any part of the property, and his only remedy is to bring a general suit for partition and for possession of the share which would be allotted to the father on such partition [§ 261 (1)]. But if what is brought and sold is the entire property, the purchaser is entitled to possession of the whole. It is, therefore, important in each case to inquire whether the sale passed the whole property including the sons' interest therein, or only the father's interest in the property. The determination of this question depends mainly on the terms of the execution and sale proceedings, such as the application for execution, warrant of attachment, warrant of sale and sale certificate. The Court will in each case look at the substance of the proceedings to see what the purchaser intended to buy and what he believed he was buying (z). "In cases of this kind it is of the utmost importance that the substance, and not the mere technicalities, of the transaction should be regarded" (a). The price paid by the purchaser is also an element to be taken into consideration (b).

---

v. Kantoo Lall (1874) 14 Beng. L.R. 187, 1 I.A. 321; (1878) 5 Cal. 148, 6 I.A. 88, supra; (1886) 13 Cal. 21, 13 I.A. 1, supra; (1891) 13 All. 216, supra; (1892) 14 All. 179 [F.B.], supra; Brij Narain v. Mangla Prasad (1924) 46 All. 95, 51 I.A. 129, 76 I.C. 689, ('24) A.PC. 50.

(x) (1888) 15 Cal. 717, 724, 15 I.A. 99, 104, supra.

(y) Bhagbut Pershad v. Girja Koer (1888) 15 Cal. 717, 15 I.A. 99; Ram Rattan v. Basant Rai (1921) 2 Lah. 263, 64 I.C. 121, ('21) A.L. 205; Jahan Singh v. Hardat Singh (1935) 57 All. 357, 152 I.C. 487, ('35) A.A. 247; Sydulu v. Venkateshwarlu ('65) A.A.P. 318.

(z) Deendyal v. Jugdeep Narain (1877) 3 Cal. 198, 4 I.A. 247; Baboo Hurdey Narain v. Ruder Perkash (1883) 10 Cal. 626, 11 I.A. 26; Mst. Nanomi Babuasin v. Modhun Mohun (1886) 13 Cal. 21, 13 I.A. 1; Daulat Ram v. Mehr Chand (1888) 15 Cal. 70, 14 I.A. 187; Mahabir Pershad v. Moheshwar Nath (1890) 17 Cal. 584, 17 I.A. 11; Pettachi Chettiar v. Sangili Vira Pandia (1887) 10 Mad. 241, 248, 14 I.A. 84, 85; Simbhunath v. Golap Singh (1887) 14 Cal. 572, 14 I.A. 77; (1888) 15 Cal. 717, 15 I.A. 99, supra; Minakshi v. Immudi (1889) 12 Mad. 142, 16 I.A. 1; Abdul Aziz v. Appayasami (1903) 27 Mad. 131, 31 I.A. 1; Sripat Singh v. Tagore (1917) 44 I.A. 1, 44 Cal. 524, 39 I.C. 252, ('16) A.PC. 220; Trimbak v. Narayan Damodar (1884) 8 Bom. 481; Sakharam Shet v. Sitaram (1887) 11 Bom. 42; Krishnaji v. Vithal (1888) 12 Bom. 625; Maruti v. Babaji (1891) 15 Bom. 87; Cooverji v. Dewsey (1893) 17 Bom. 718; Timmappa v. Narsinha (1913) 37 Bom. 631, 21 I.C. 123, Hanmandas v. Valabhdas (1919) 43 Bom. 17, 46 I.C. 133, ('18) A.B. 101; Dayanand v. Daji Narayan (1926) 50 Bom. 793, 97 I.C. 754, ('26) A.B. 548; Kunhali v. Keshava (1888) 11 Mad. 64; Ramphul Singh v. Deg Narain (1882) 8 Cal. 517, 527; Beni Parshad v. Puran Chand (1896) 23 Cal. 262; Pem Singh v. Partab (1892) 14 All 179 [F.B.]; Sudhakar v. Gobardhan ('52) A. Orissa 212; Anantha Pai v. Kesava Pai ('55) A. Tra. Co. 249.

(a) Sripat Singh v. Tagore (1916) 44 I.A. 1, 44 Cal. 524, 39 I.C. 252, ('16) A.PC. 220; Mahabir Pershad v. Moheshwar Nath (1890) 17 Cal. 584, 17 I.A. 11; Cooverji v. Dewsey (1893) 17 Bom. 718; Dayanand v. Daji Narayan (1926) 50 Bom. 793, 97 I.C. 754, ('26) A.B. 548.

(b) Simbhunath v. Golap Singh (1887) 14 Cal. 572, 14 I.A. 77; Beni Parshad v. Puran Chand (1896) 23 Cal. 262, 278; (1926) 50 Bom. 793, 799, 97 I.C. 754, ('26) A.B. 548, supra.

The following are some of the principles culled from decided cases:—

(i) "If the expressions by which the estate is conveyed to the purchaser [in execution] are susceptible of application either to the entirety or to the father's coparcenary interest alone, the absence of the sons from the proceedings may be one material consideration. But if the fact be that the purchaser has bargained and paid for the entirety, he may clearly defend his title to it upon any ground which would have justified a sale if the sons had been brought in to oppose the execution proceedings" (c).

(ii) The words "right, title and interest" are ambiguous. They may refer to the father's interest only in the property or to the entire property. If it appears from the terms of the execution proceedings and from the intention of the parties that what was put up for sale and what was bought was the entire property, but the property is described in the certificate of sale as "the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor," the sale will nevertheless pass the entire property. The presence of the words "right, title and interest" in a sale certificate is consistent with the sale of every interest which the judgment-debtor might have sold, and does not necessarily import that when the father of a joint family is the judgment-debtor nothing is sold but his interest as a coparcener (d). But if it is clear from the terms of the execution proceedings that what was put up for sale was the "right and share" of the judgment-debtor alone in the property, the sale will pass only the father's interest. The purchaser cannot claim the entire property merely because the decree-holder could have brought the whole property to sale, had he been so minded (e).

(iii) The mere fact that no reference is made in the proclamation of sale to the son's interest does not of itself afford a ground for holding that the son's interest did not pass at the sale (f).

(iv) If the creditor sues the father alone, and a consent decree is obtained against the father, whereby the father agrees to pay a specified sum within a specified period and by way of security mortgages his "right, title and interest" in certain joint family property, and agrees that in the event of non-payment the mortgaged property shall be sold by auction, and the property is afterwards sold, and a certificate of sale is issued to the purchaser stating that "whatever right, title and interest the judgment-debtor had in the said property, being extinguished from the date of the sale, is transferred to the purchaser," the purchaser is entitled to no more than the father's interest in the property. "When a man conveys his right and interest, and nothing more, he does not prima facie intend to convey away also rights and interest presently vested in others, even though the law may give him the power to do so." In such a case, if it is alleged by the purchaser that the sons assented to the decree and the mortgage, he should join them as parties to the execution proceedings (g).

(v) Where a mortgage is executed by the father of joint family property, the Court must take it that the entire property was mortgaged, unless the sons show that what was mortgaged was the father's interest only (h), or unless the mortgage itself purports to be one of the father's interest only (i). Where the mortgage is of the entire property, and a decree is passed for sale of the property, the sale will pass the whole property to the purchaser, notwithstanding the words "right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor" in the certificate of sale (j).

294C. Execution of decree against father after his death.—Where a decree has been passed against the father in respect of a debt incurred by

---

(c) Mst. Nanomi Babuasin v. Modhun Mohun (1886) 13 Cal. 21, 36 13 I.A. 1, 18. In Deendyal v. Jagdeep Narain (1877) 3 Cal. 198, 4 I.A. 247, also there was an ambiguity.

(d) (1890) 17 Cal. 584, 17 I.A. 11, supra; Bhagbut Pershad v. Girja Koer (1888) 15 Cal. 717, 721, 15 I.A. 99; (1886) 13 Cal. 21, 13 I.A. 1, supra; Sakharam Shet v. Sitaram (1887) 11 Bom. 42.

(e) (1877) 3 Cal. 198, 4 I.A. 247, supra; Baboo Hurdei Narain v. Ruder Perkash (1883) 10 Cal. 626, 11 I.A. 26; Pettachi Chettiar v. Gangili Vira (1887) 10 Mad. 241, 14 I.A. 84; Abdul Aziz v. Appayasami (1903) 27 Mad. 131, 31 I.A. 1; Krishnaji v. Vithal (1888) 12 Bom. 625; Maruti v. Babaji (1891) 15 Bom. 87; Timmappa v. Narsinha (1913) 37 Bom. 631, 21 I.C. 123; Hanmandas v. Valabhdas (1919) 43 Bom. 17, 46 I.C. 133, ('18) A.B. 101. As to High Court Circulars, see (1926) 50 Bom. 793, 97 I.C. 754, ('26) A.B. 548, supra.

(f) (1926) 50 Bom. 793, 97 I.C. 754, ('26) A.B. 548, supra.

(g) Simbhunath v. Golap Singh (1887) 14 Cal. 572, 14 I.A. 77, 83.

(h) Pem Singh v. Partab Singh (1892) 14 All. 179 [F.B.]; Bhagbut Pershad v. Girja Koer (1888) 15 Cal. 717, 721, 15 I.A. 99.

(i) See Simbhunath v. Golap Singh, supra.

(j) Trimbak v. Narayan (1884) 8 Bom. 481.

him, and the father dies before the decree has been fully satisfied, the decree may be executed under sec. 53 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, by attachment and sale of the ancestral property in the hands of the sons, as if such property were the property of the deceased father which had come to the hands of the sons as his legal representatives, unless the debt was incurred for an illegal or immoral purpose. If the sons contend that the debt was incurred for an immoral purpose, the question has to be determined in execution proceedings, and not in a separate suit (k). If the contention of the sons is that there is really no debt the question cannot be enquired into in execution proceedings, but only in a regular suit (l).

This paragraph is based on secs. 50 and 53 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908. See Mulla's Civil Procedure Code, notes to sec. 53. No attachment is necessary where a final mortgage decree for the sale of the property has been passed against the father in his lifetime, the property in that case is sold under and by virtue of the decree, without any previous attachment (m).

Section 53 applies in the case of the sons of a judgment debtor only and not in the case of his brother (n).

Section 53 does not apply to a case where the suit on a mortgage by the father was filed against the sons and grandsons, but was dismissed against the latter. The share of the grandsons cannot be attached and sold as it was not covered by the decree (o), but this principle cannot be availed of by after born sons and grandsons (p).

Nor does sec. 53 apply to a case where the suit against the father is filed after partition (q).

If the father dies leaving sons and also his own father, and subsequently the father's father dies, it has been held in Allahabad that the decree cannot be executed against the ancestral property in the hands of his sons (r). But this decision has been dissented from by the Punjab High Court (s). It is submitted that the former case was incorrectly decided.

295. Sale or mortgage of coparcenary property by father for payment of antecedent debt.—(1) Antecedent debt.—The father of a joint Hindu family may sell or mortgage the joint family property including the sons' interest therein to discharge a debt contracted by him for his own personal benefit, and such alienation binds the sons, provided—

(a) the debt was antecedent to the alienation, and

(b) it was not incurred for an immoral purpose (t).

The validity of an alienation made to discharge an antecedent debt rests upon the pious duty of the son to discharge his father's debt not tainted with immorality. The mere circumstance, however, of a pious obligation does not validate the alienation. To validate an alienation so as to bind the son, there

---

(k) Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, s. 53. Umed v. Goman Bhaiji (1896) 20 Bom. 385; Shivram v. Sakharam (1909) 33 Bom. 39, 1 I.C. 459; Amar Chandra v. Sebak Chand (1907) 34 Cal. 642 [F.B.]; Sheikh Karoo v. Rameshwar Sao (1921) 6 Pat. L.J. 451, 460-462, 62 I.C. 905, ('23) A.P. 143 [mortgage-decree against father]; Narayan v. Sagunabai (1925) 49 Bom. 113, 85 I.C. 181, ('25) A.B. 193.

(l) Lakshmadu v. Ramudu & Ors. (1940) Mad. 123, ('39) A.M. 867, 187 I.C. 816.

(m) Sheikh Karoo v. Rameshwar Sao (1921) 6 Pat. L.J. 451, 62 I.C. 905, ('23) A.P. 143.

(n) Sheo Gopal v. Firm Ganesh Das Ram Gopal (1938) Luck. 241, 168 I.C. 268, ('37) A.O. 327.

(o) Raja Ram v. Raja Bakhsh Singh (1938) 13 Luck. 61, 40 Bom. L.R. 277, 172 I.C. 5, ('38) A.P.C. 7; Umakant v. Jitendra (1949) A.P. 97.

(p) Raja Bakhsh Singh v. Ram Swarup (1944) Luck. 481.

(q) Atul Krishna Roy v. Lala Nandanji (1935) 14 Pat. 732 [F.B.], 157 I.C. 53, ('35) A.P. 275.

(r) Binda Prasad v. Raj Belabh (1926) 48 All. 245, 91 I.C. 785, ('26) A.A. 220.

(s) Devi Das v. Jada Ram (1934) 15 Lah. 50, 147 I.C. 225, ('33) A.L. 857.

(t) Sat Narain v. Sri Kishen Das (1936) 63 I.A. 384, 17 Lah. 644, 38 Bom. L.R. 1129, 164 I.C 6, ('36) A.PC. 277.

must also be an antecedent debt (u). Generally, there is no question of legal necessity in such a case (v). But where the antecedent debts carried on compound interest and yet the mortgage effected by the father to discharge them provided for compound interest at a high rate with quarterly rests, to that extent, the onus is on the creditor to show that the loan could be obtained only on such terms and if no evidence is adduced the lender has not discharged the burden (w).

"Antecedent debt" means antecedent in fact as well as in time, that is to say, that the debt must be truly independent of and not part of the transaction impeached (x). A borrowing made on the occasion of the grant of a mortgage is not an antecedent debt (y) [see ills. (1) to (4)].

To constitute a debt an "antecedent" debt it is not necessary that the prior and subsequent creditors should be different persons. All that is necessary is that the two transactions must be dissociated in time as well as in fact (z). Hence where a previous mortgage deed is renewed in favour of the same mortgagee, and the consideration for the subsequent mortgage deed is the amount due on the earlier one, the alienation would be one for an "antecedent" debt (a), unless the first debt was a mere device and was incurred merely for the sake of creating an antecedence in time and with a view to support the subsequent deed (b). Where a mortgage was executed by the members of a joint family in favour of a stranger, who was a partner in a business with the family, in settlement of accounts of the firm, it was held that the debt being antecedent to the mortgage, the mortgage was binding on the son's share also (c). Where a father received certain sums of money on behalf of his minor widowed daughter under a compromise decree and executed an indemnity bond undertaking to indemnify the defendants against all losses resulting from the minor plaintiff raising disputes after attaining majority, charging some immovable property belonging to the joint family, it was held that the sons' share was not liable as there was no antecedence of debt (d).

The antecedent debt may be an unascertained sum of money. It may be a debt incurred in connection with a trade started by the father (e).

---

(u) Brij Narain Raj v. Mangla Prasad (1924) 51 I.A. 129, 46 All. 95, 77 I.C. 689, ('24) A.PC. 50; Narain Prasad v. Sarnam Singh (1917) 44 I.A. 163, 39 All. 500, 40 I.C. 284, ('17) A.PC. 41; Jogi Das v. Ganga Ram (1917) 21 C.W.N. 957, 42 I.C. 791, ('17) A.PC. 76; Chet Ram v. Ram Singh (1922) 49 I.A. 228, 44 All. 368, 67 I.C. 569, ('22) A.PC. 247, affmg. (1919) 41 All. 529, 51 I.C. 119, ('19) A.A. 415.

(v) Rama Rao v. Hanumantha (1929) 52 Mad. 856, 121 I.C. 837, ('30) A.M. 326.

(w) Bal Rajaram Tukaram v. Maneklal Mansukhbhai (1932) 56 Bom. 36, 137 I.C. 717, ('32) A.B. 136.

(x) (1924) 51 I.A. 129, 46 All. 95, 77 I.C. 689, ('24) A.PC. 50, supra.

(y) Chandradeo v. Mata Prasad (1909) 31 All. 176, 190, 1 I.C. 479 [F.B.]; Chaturbhuj v. Govind Ram (1923) 45 All. 407, dissenting from Nathu v. Kundan Lal (1911) 33 All. 242, 8 I.C. 836 [mortgage to pay off pre-emption decree]; Shaikh Jan v. Bikoo (1928) 7 Pat. 798, 116 I.C. 33, ('29) A.P. 130; Buta Mal v. Gopal Singh (1930) 11 Lah. 164, 122 I.C. 480, ('30) A.L. 1040.

(z) Ramkaran Thakur v. Baldeo Thakur (1938) 17 Pat. 168, 173 I.C. 292, ('38) A.P. 44; Bharatpur State v. Sri Kishan Das (1936) 58 All. 804 [F.B.], 162 I.C. 642, ('36) A.A. 327; Thimmegowda v. Dyavamma ('54) A. Mysore 93 [F.B.]; Kalappa v. Venkatesh ('62) A. Mys. 260.

(a) Gopal Das v. Topan Das (1935) 16 Lah. 624.

(b) Ram Rekha Singh v. Ganga Prasad (1927) 49 All. 123, 97 I.C. 514, ('26) A.A. 545 [F.B.]; Badri Prasad v. Madan Lal (1893) 15 All. 75, 80 [F.B.]; Jai Narain v. Mahabir Prasad (1927) 2 Luck. 226, 95 I.C. 857, ('26) A.O. 470; Sheo Ram v. Durga (1928) 3 Luck. 700, 108 I.C. 288, ('28) A.O. 378 [F.B.]; Iqbal Singh v. Jasmer Singh (1934) 15 Lah. 715, 153 I.C. 862, ('34) A.L. 296.

(c) Nachimuthu Goundan v. Balasubramania Goundan (1939) Mad. 422.

(d) Alla Venkataramanna v. Palacherla Mangamma & Ors (1944) Mad. 867.

(e) Bal Rajaram Tukaram v. Maneklal Mansukhbhai (1932) 56 Bom. 36, 137 I.C. 117, ('32) A.B. 136.

(2) Burden of proving immorality of debt.—It is for the alienee to prove that the antecedent debt existed or that after due inquiries he, in good faith, believed that it existed (f). The burden is then shifted upon the sons to prove that the debt was contracted by the father for an immoral or illegal purpose (g) and that the alienee had notice that the debt was so contracted (h). It is not necessary for the alienee to show that he made proper inquiry as to the purpose of the loan, or to prove that the money was borrowed for the benefit of the family (i).

In Luhar Amrit Lal v. Doshi Jayantilal (*i*1) the Supreme Court accepted the proposition that the burden lies on the sons who challenge the alienation to prove not merely that the antecedent debt was immoral but also that the alienee had notice that the debt was so contracted. The Supreme Court also pointed out that the decisions of the Privy Council on the subject made no distinction between an alienation made for the payment of the father's antecedent debt and an alienation made in execution of a decree passed against him and in both cases the sons must prove not only the immoral character of the antecedent debt but also the knowledge of the alienee.

The proposition that "where joint ancestral property has passed out of a joint family, either under a conveyance executed by a father in consideration of an antecedent debt, or in order to raise money to pay off an antecedent debt, or under a sale in execution of a decree for the father's debt, his sons by reason of their duty to pay their father's debts, cannot recover that property, unless they show that the debts were contracted for immoral purposes and that the purchaser had notice that they were so contracted" has been accepted by all Courts in India as the correct statement of the law on the point since 1879 when it was enunciated by the Privy Council in Girdharee Lal v. Kantoo Lal (*i*2) and Suraj Bunsi Koer v. Sheo Pershad Singh (*i*3). In Luhar Amrit Lal v. Doshi Jayantilal mentioned above the Supreme Court accepted that proposition.

The burden which lies upon the sons to prove the immorality of the debt is not discharged by showing that the father lived an extravagant or immoral life; there must be a direct connection between the debt and the immorality set up by the sons (j).

(3) Alienation binds sons' interest.—If the debt is antecedent to the alienation, the alienation is valid in its entirety, and it will pass not only the

---

(f) Jamsetji v. Kashinath (1902) 26 Bom. 326, 336-337; Jamna v. Nain Sukh (1887) 9 All. 493; Chandradeo v. Mata Prasad (1909) 31 All. 176, 198-199, 1 I.C. 479; Sahib Singh v. Girdhari Lal (1923) 45 All. 576, 73 I.C. 1024, ('24) A.A. 24, Subramanya v. Sadasiva (1885) 8 Mad. 75. See Transfer of Property Act, 1887, s. 28; Venkata Chenchayya v. Ramalingam ('57) A. Andh. Pra. 744; Venkateswarlu v. Venkata Narasimhan ('57) A. Andh. Pra. 557; Tolaram v. Beenjraj ('57) A. Raj. 256.

(g) Girdharee Lall v. Kantoo Lall (1874) 14 Beng. L.R. 187, 1 I.A. 321; Suraj Bunsi Koer v. Sheo Pershad (1878) 5 Cal. 148, 6 I.A. 88; Balwant Singh v. Clancey (1912) 39 I.A. 109, 34 All 296, 14 I.C. 629, affmg. 28 All. 508; Joharmal v. Eknath (1900) 24 Bom. 343; Natasayyan v. Ponnusami (1893) 16 Mad. 99; Raj Kishore v. Madan Gopal (1932) 13 Lah. 491, 143 I.C. 249, ('32) A.L. 636.

(h) Suraj Bunsi Koer v. Sheo Persad, 6 I.A. 88, 106, 5 Cal. 148, 171; Darsu Pandey v. Bikarmajit Lal, 3 All. 125. (The first part of the decision that the recital in the sale deed is enough to prove the antecedent debt and other necessities is not correct; but the second part relating to immorality and notice is correct); Hanuman Singh v. Nanak Chand 6 All. 193, 199; Lal Singh v. Deo Narain Singh 8 All. 279, 282.

(i) Bhagbut Pershad v. Girja Koer (1888) 15 Cal. 717, 724, 15 I.A. 99, 104; Bapu Singh v. Bihari Lal (1908) 30 All. 156; Tulshi Ram v. Bishnath Prasad (1928) 50 All. 1, 105 I.C. 885, ('27) A.A. 735.

(*i*1) (1960) 3 S.C.R. 842.

(*i*2) (1874) 1 I.A. 321, 14 Beng. L.R. 187.

(*i*3) (1880) 5 Cal. 148, 6 I.A. 88.

(j) Sri Narain v. Lala Raghubans (1912) 17 C.W.N. 124, 17 I.C. 729 [P.C.]; Chintamanrao v. Kashinath (1890) 14 Bom. 320; Dattatraya v. Vishnu (1912) 36 Bom. 68, 12 I.C. 949; Sita Ram v. Zalim Sing (1886) 8 All. 231; Balu Singh v. Behari Lal (1908) 30 All. 156; Tulshi Ram v. Bishnath Prasad (1928) 50 All 1, 105 I.C. 885, ('27) A.A. 735; Rallia Ram v. Balmokand (1927) 8 Lah. 117, 101 I.C. 830, ('27) A.L. 60; Ulfat Rai v. Tej Narain (1927) 8 Lah. 632, 106 I.C. 176, ('28) A.L. 83; Raj Kishore v. Madan Gopal (1932) 13 Lah. 491, 143 I.C. 249, ('32) A.L. 636; Shankar Rao v. Kanta Prasad I.L.R. (1946) Nagpur 844; Udmiram v. Balramdas ('56) A.N. 76. Also see Sydulu v. Venkateshwarlu ('65) A.A.P. 318.

father's but also the son's interest in the property. Thus if the alienation is a sale of joint family property, the whole property will pass to the purchaser. Again if the alienation is a mortgage, the mortgagee may obtain a mortgage decree against the father alone for the sale of the whole of the mortgaged property including the sons' interest therein, and the sale in execution of the decree will bind the interest both of the father and the sons in the property.

(4) Alienation after partition.—The father has no power to alienate his son's share after a partition between him and the son, although the alienation may be in respect of a debt which was contracted before partition (k).

(5) Alienation after attachment of son's share.—The father has no power to alienate his son's share after it has been attached in execution of a decree. The decree may be one against the son in respect of a personal debt of the son, or it may be one against the father, or both against the father and the son, in respect of a personal debt of the father (l).

(6) Whether a sale or mortgage executed by the father passes the whole family property or only the father's interest therein depends on the terms of the deed (m).

(7) If the alienation be one for legal necessity, it is not necessary, to bind the sons' interest, to have recourse to the doctrine of antecedent debt (n).

(8) The expression "sons" in this section includes grandsons and great-grandsons. The expression "father" includes grandfather and great-grandfather. See § 291. Reference may also be made to Notes under sec. 16 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955.

Illustrations

(1) The father of a joint family lost heavily in speculation in gold and silver and to pay off the losses borrowed moneys on the mortgage of the joint family property. The mortgagee obtained a decree on the mortgage and sought to execute it by sale of the mortgaged property. The sons and wife of the mortgagor then sued for a declaration that the decree was not binding since the debt though antecedent was immoral. It was held that the antecedent debt was immoral but as the plaintiffs had failed to prove that the mortgagee had notice of the immoral character of the debt they were not entitled to succeed: Luhar Amrit Lal v. Doshi Jayantilal (1960) 3 S.C.R. 842: ('60) A.S.C. 964.

(2) The father of a joint family borrows Rs. 2,000 from C for his own use. Subsequently he executes a mortgage of the joint family property to C to secure the debt. It is not proved that the money borrowed was used by the father for immoral purposes. The mortgage binds not only the father's, but also his sons' interest in the property. Here the debt is antecedent of the mortgage in fact as well as in time (o).

(3) The father of a joint family governed by the Mitakshara law as applied in Uttar Pradesh, mortgages the joint family property in 1883 to secure an advance made to him at the time of the execution of the mortgage. In 1910 the mortgagee sues the father and his son for a sale of the mortgaged property. It is proved that the money was borrowed by the father for his own personal benefit, and not for any family necessity. Here the loan having been made at the time of the mortgage, there is no debt antecedent to the mortgage. The mortgage is therefore wholly invalid. It does not bind even the father's

---

(k) Rathna v. Aiyanachariar (1908) 18 Mad. L.J. 599; Krishnasami v. Ramasami (1899) 22 Mad. 519, 521.

(l) Subraya v. Nagappa (1909) 33 Bom. 264, 2 I.C. 268.

(m) Pem Singh v. Partab Singh (1892) 14 All. 179 [F.B.]; Simbhunath v. Golap Singh (1887) 14 Cal. 572, 14 I.A. 77; Pettachi Chettiar v. Sangili Vira (1887) 10 Mad. 241, 14 I.A. 84; Bhagbut Pershad v. Girja Koer (1888) 15 Cal. 717, 15 I.A. 99.

(n) Lal Bahadur v. Ambika Prasad (1925) 52 I.A. 443, 47 All. 795, 91 I.C. 471, ('25) A.PC. 264.

(o) Madhusudan v. Bhagwan (1929) 53 Bom. 444, 118 I.C. 788, ('29) A.B. 213.

share in the property. Nor is the mortgagee entitled even to a personal decree against the father or the sons, the claim for such decree being barred by limitation: Sahu Ram v. Bhup Singh (1917) 44 I.A. 126, 39 All. 437, 39 I.C. 280, ('17) A.PC 61.

(4) S and his sons are members of a joint Hindu family governed by the Mitakshara law as interpreted in Uttar Pradesh. In 1905 S mortgages the joint family property to A. In 1907 S executes a second mortgage of the same property to B. In 1908 S executes a mortgage of the property to C to pay off the earlier mortgages to A and B. C then sues S and his sons on the mortgage of 1908. It is not proved that the mortgages to A and B were executed by S for family necessity. Here the mortgage to C having been made to pay off the antecedent debts due to A and B, it binds the whole property including the sons' interest therein and C is entitled to a decree for sale of the whole property. Brij Narain Rai v. Mangla Prasad (1924) 51 I.A. 129, 46 All. 95, 77 I.C. 689, ('24) A.PC. 50, Anantu v. Ram Prasad (1924) 46 All. 295, 78 I.C. 619, ('24) A.A. 465; Bhim Singh v. Ram Singh (1924) 46 All. 301, 84 I.C. 13, ('24) A.A. 309; Gauri Shanker v. Sheonandan (1924) 46 All. 384, 78 I.C. 911, ('24) A.A. 543; Kanhaiya Lal v. Niranjan Lal (1925) 47 All. 351, 86 I.C. 98, ('25) A.A. 367; Kuldip v. Ram Bujhawan (1924) 3 Pat. 425, 83 I.C. 385, ('24) A.P. 454. [Note.—It is unnecessary in such a case to inquire whether the mortgages to A and B were executed to pay off a debt antecedent to either of the two mortgages. The transaction impeached is the mortgage to C and that mortgage was executed to pay off the antecedent debts secured by the mortgages to A and B.]

(5) The father of a joint family governed by the Mitakshara law executed a usufructuary mortgage of the joint family property to secure an advance then made to him for his own personal benefit. He then sold the equity of redemption to the mortgagee, the mortgage, being discharged out of the price and the balance paid to him. After the father's death, but during the lifetime of his sons, his grandson sued the purchaser to recover the property from him. It was held by the Judicial Committee that there being no debt antecedent to the first alienation, namely the mortgage, the mortgage and the sale were both invalid: Chet Ram v. Ram Singh (1922) 49 I.A. 228, 44 All. 368, 67 I.C. 569, ('22) A.PC. 247. This decision is clearly in conflict with the later decision in Brij Narain's case set forth in ill. (4) above, and it can no longer be regarded as good law. The test now laid down in Brij Narain's case [see ill. (4) above] is whether the transaction impeached, namely, the sale of the equity of redemption, was entered into to pay off an antecedent debt. There is no doubt that it was, the antecedent debt being the debt secured by the mortgage. If the case arose again, the sale would be treated as valid, as it was made to pay off an antecedent mortgage. Whether the mortgage itself was executed to pay off an antecedent debt is not material (p).

(6) The father of a joint family governed by the Mitakshara law as administered in Uttar Pradesh executed a deed of mortgage in 1900 of joint family property. In 1906 he sold the property for Rs. 13,000 of which Rs. 1,400 was paid to the mortgagee, the rest of the mortgage debt having been discharged long prior to 1906. The balance of the purchase money was applied by the father to his own purposes. It was held by the Judiciai Committee that the sale could not be supported as having been made to discharge an antecedent debt, and they upheld the decree of the Allahabad High Court setting aside the sale, upon the sons, who were the plaintiffs in the suit, paying Rs. 1,400 to the purchaser: Jawahir Singh v. Udai Prakash (1926) 53 I.A. 36, 48 All. 152, 93 I.C. 216, ('26) A.PC. 16.

Brij Narain Rai v. Mangla Prasad (1924) 51 I.A. 129, 46 All. 95, 77 I.C. 689, ('24) A.PC. 50.—The leading case on the subject is Brij Narain's case. In that case the Judicial Committee, after observing that Sahu Ram's case (q) must not be taken to decide more than what was necessary for the judgment, namely, that a debt created by the mortgage itself is not an antecedent debt, expressed their dissent from several dicta in that case, and laid down the following propositions:—

(1) The managing member of a joint undivided estate cannot alienate or burden the estate qua manager except for purposes of necessity [see § 242].

(2) If he is the father and the other members are the sons he may, by incurring debt, so long as it is not for an immoral purposes, lay the estate open to be taken in execution proceedings upon a decree for payment of that debt [see § 294].

(3) If he purports to burden the estate by mortgage, then unless that mortgage is to discharge an antecedent debt, it would not bind the estate [see § 295].

---

(p) It is now so held in Anantu v. Ram Prasad (1924) 46 All. 295, 296-297, 78 I.C. 619, ('24) A.A. 465.

(q) (1917) 44 I.A. 126, 39 All. 437, 39 I.C. 280.

(4) Antecedent debt means antecedent in fact as well as in time, that is to say, that the debt must be truly independent of, and not part of, the transaction impeached [see § 295].

(5) There is no rule that this result is affected by the question whether the father who contracted the debt or burdened the estate, is alive or dead.

The law as stated above by the Privy Council has been expressly approved by the Supreme Court in the undermentioned cases (r).

Antecedent.—In Sahu Ram's case their Lordships of the Privy Council speak of the doctrine of antecedent debt as having "arisen from the necessity of protecting the rights of third persons." In Brij Narain's case the doctrine is described as a part of the doctrine of pious obligation. The latter view must be taken to supersede the former view.

There was at one time a conflict of opinion as to the meaning of "antecedent debt." According to the Allahabad and Madras decisions, an antecedent debt meant a debt which existed prior to the date of sale or mortgage; money received at the time of sale or mortgage was not regarded as an antecedent debt (s). According to the Calcutta and Bombay rulings, a debt, though not existing prior to the date of sale or mortgage, was treated as an antecedent debt, if it was put into litigation in a subsequent suit; that is to say, if the father borrowed moneys on a mortgage of joint family property, and the sons subsequently sued to set aside the mortgage, the mortgage was upheld on the ground that the debt secured by it was antecedent to the suit (t). This was too fantastic a view to be taken of an antecedent debt. The earlier cases were reviewed by the Privy Council in Brij Narain Rai v. Mangla Prasad [see ill. (4)]. The test there laid down was whether the transaction impeached was entered into to pay off an antecedent debt, that is, a debt antecedent to the transaction [see the 4th proposition above.]

If the father of a joint Hindu family borrows moneys in 1918 on a promissory note for his own personal benefit, and, being unable to pay the debt, mortgages the joint family property in 1920, it is clearly a case of a debt antecedent to the mortgage and the mortgage binds his sons. But if no debt was contracted by the father antecedent to the mortgage, and a loan was obtained by him for the first time at the time when the mortgage was executed by him, the loan could not be regarded as an antecedent debt.

Suppose now that the father executes a mortgage to A of joint family property to secure an advance of Rs. 1,500 then made to him. [Here the mortgage is invalid, there being no antecedent debt]. He then borrows Rs. 2,000 from B and executes a mortgage to B to pay off the mortgage to A. Is the mortgage to B binding on the sons? Prior to the decision in Brij Narain Rai's case there was a conflict of opinion whether the mortgage to B could be treated as one for payment of an antecedent debt. It was held by the High Courts of Allahabad (u) and Lahore (v), that the mortgage to A not having been made to pay off an antecedent debt, the subsequent mortgage to B also which was made to pay off the mortgage to A could not be treated as one for payment of an antecedent debt; in other words, it was held that for debt to be an antecedent debt, it must be antecedent to the first alienation, namely, the mortgage to A, and not merely antecedent to the alienation impeached, namely, the mortgage to B. On the other hand it was held by the High Courts of Madras (w) and Patna (x), that the mortgage to B was binding on the sons as it was made to pay off an antecedent debt, being the debt secured by the mortgage to A. In Brij Narain Rai's case the Privy Council held that the view taken by the Madras High Court was correct.

The antecedent must be real. The antecedent would be unreal if the father borrowed money on a promissory note with the object when he borrowed that it should form part of a mortgage to be subsequently executed by him (y). Where no mortgage was intended

---

(r) Panna Lal v. Naraini ('52) A.S.C. 170; Virdhachalam Pillai v. Chaldean Bank ('64) A.S.C. 1425.

(s) Chandradeo v. Mata Prasad (1909) 31 All. 176, 190, 1 I.C. 479 [mortgage] [F.B.]; Ram Dayal v. Ajudhia Prasad (1906) 28 All. 328 [sale]; Venkataramanayya v. Venkataramana (1906) 29 Mad. 200 [mortgage] [F.B.].

(t) Luchmun Dass v. Giridhar (1880) 5 Cal. 855 [F.B.]; Khalilul v. Gobind (1893) 20 Cal. 328, 346; Kishun v. Tipan Pershad (1907) 34 Cal. 735, 747; Chintamanrao v. Kashinath (1890) 14 Bom. 320, 324-325; Dattatraya v. Vishnu (1912) 36 Bom. 68, 12 I.C. 949.

(u) Brij Narain v. Mangla (1919) 41 All. 235, 35 I.C. 101, ('19) A.A. 324; Ram Sarup v. Bharat Singh (1921) 43 All. 703, 64 I.C. 763, ('21) A.A. 113.

(v) Lakhu Mal v. Bishen Das (1922) 3 Lah. 74, 66 I.C. 408, ('22) A.L. 291.

(w) Armugham v. Muthu (1919) 42 Mad. 711, 52 I.C. 525, ('19) A.M. 75 [F.B.].

(x) Mathura v. Rajkumar (1921) 6 Pat. L.J. 526, 62 I.C. 132, ('21) A.P. 447 [F.B.]; Hari Prasad v. Sourendra (1922) 1 Pat. 506, 66 I.C. 945, ('22) A.P. 450.

(y) (1921) 43 All 703, 64 I.C. 763, ('21) A.A. 113, supra.

at the time of advance of the loan but there was an agreement to execute a mortgage if and when called upon and a mortgage was subsequently executed, it was held that the mortgage was supported by antecedent debt (z).

In a suit on a mortgage bond dated 16-1-1922 for Rs. 3,000 executed by B and his 3 nephews for purpose of paying off—

(1) Rs. 750 the balance of consideration due under a sale deed dated 30-7-1919 obtained by B and his nephew P (brother of the 3 nephews above mentioned),

(2) Rs. 1,500 balance of consideration dated 19-11-1921 in favour of the aforesaid 3 nephews of B and a minor son of P and a son of B, the suit was contested by the sons of the 3 nephews (defendants 3 to 7) and a grandson of B (defendant 8) (B having died) on the ground that there was no legal necessity. It was held

(1) that there was no real antecedency between the suit mortgage bond and the sale-deed of 1921 but that the balance due under the sale-deed of 1919 was an antecedent debt.

(2) even as to the latter item the mortgage was not valid against the defendants (3 to 7) as their father executed it not for their own antecedent debt but for that of their uncle B and brother P.

(3) that the grandson of B (defendant 8) was not liable as the proportion for which B is liable on the suit mortgage bond could not be determined (a).

There must be a real debt due by the father. Therefore, where the only prior debt was due by a third party and the father executed as surety a hypothecation bond in favour of the creditor, it was held not to be binding on the son's share (b).

Where a father at the time of taking a mortgage agrees to pay off a prior mortgage the obligation so undertaken is an 'antecedent debt' which will support a mortgage of joint family property subsequently executed by the father in favour of the prior mortgagee in fulfilment of the obligation (c).

It has been held that where the father mortgages joint family property to pay off a prior mortgage on his separate property it cannot be said that the mortgage was one for the payment of an antecedent debt (d). In this case the separate property consisted of property which was inherited by the father from his cousin and that property was mortgaged by the cousin during his lifetime.

Time-barred debt.—The antecedent debt may be a time-barred debt. See § 299(2) below.

What is a debt:—

Unliquidated damages.—"Debt" ordinarily means a liquidated or ascertained sum of money as distinguished from unliquidated damages for breach of contract or for a tort. If a decree has been obtained against the father for damages for breach of contract or for a tort, the judgment debt constitutes a debt within the meaning of this section. But what if the amount of damages is not fixed by a decree or otherwise? Is the liability for damages a debt within this section? The question arose in a case before the Judicial Committee, but it was not decided (e). That was a case of a breach of contract by the father. It would seem on principle that a liability for damages constitutes a debt within this section; if the liability is antecedent to the alienation, the alienation will be binding on the sons though the amount of damages is fixed on the very day on which the alienation is made.

Debt due but not payable.—A debt may be an antecedent debt though the due date of payment has not yet arrived. Hence an alienation even before the due date of payment would be an alienation for an antecedent debt (f).

Price payable under a pre-emption decree.—A pre-emption decree does not carry any order for payment. It gives an option to the pre-emptor to obtain the property on making payment. There being thus no obligation to pay, the purchase money fixed by the decree does not constitute a debt (g). See Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, O. 20, r. 14.

---

(z) Venkataramaswami v. Imperial Bank of India (1939) Mad. 7 [F.B.]

(a) Mahabir v. Sukh Ram (1942) All. 498, 201 I.C. 415, ('42) A.A. 361.

(b) Ganga Saran v. Ganeshi Lal ('39) A.A. 225; Kesar Chand v. Uttam Chand (1945) 72 I.A. 165.

(c) Chatar Sen v. Raja Ram (1938) All. 58, 173 I.C. 916, ('38) A.A. 44.

(d) Nand Lal v. Umrai (1926) 1 Luck. 360, 93 I.C. 655, ('26) A.O. 321.

(e) Mian Karim Bakhsh v. Dargah Pir (1931) 35 C.W.N. 1221, 133 I.C. 728, ('31) A.PC. 243.

(f) Damodaram v. Bansilal (1928) 51 Mad. 711, 111 I.C. 297, ('28) A.M. 566.

(g) Kishen Sahai v. Raghunath (1929) 51 All. 473, 116 I.C. 488, ('29) A.A. 139.

The father alone can alienate the son's share. In the case of a joint family, the privilege of alienating the whole of the joint family property for payment of an antecedent debt is the privilege only of the father, the grandfather and the great-grandfather. No other person has any such privilege. Hence if a joint family consists of two brothers A and B of whom B is a minor, A may alienate, if he so desires, his own share in the joint family property to pay off an antecedent debt of his father F, but he has no power to alienate the share of his brother B, in the property though F is also the father of B (h). Similarly if a joint family consists of A and his brother's son B, B being a minor, A may alienate his own share in joint family property to pay an antecedent debt of his father, G, but he has no power to alienate B's share to discharge that debt though G is the grand father of B (i).

Specific Performance.—In a recent case the High Court of Bombay held that a mere agreement to alienate any joint family property cannot be enforced against the son on the ground that the agreement was effected by the father for a consideration which was formed by his own antecedent debts (*i*1).

296. Alienation by father neither for legal necessity nor for antecedent debt—Son's liability.—(1) It is clear from what has been stated above that an alienation by the father of joint family property neither for a legal necessity nor for the payment of an antecedent debt does not bind the son's interest in the property. In Bengal and Uttar Pradesh it does not bind even the father's interest in the property [§§ 268, 269]. But though the alienation as such does not bind the son's interest, the son being under a pious obligation to pay his father's debt not tainted with immorality, and the whole of the ancestral estate being liable for the payment of such debts, the alienee is entitled to realise the debt, that is, the money paid by the alienee to the father in consideration of the alienation, out of the entire ancestral estate (j).

By far the largest number of cases in which the above principle has been applied are cases of mortgage by the father of joint family property belonging to himself and his sons, where the mortgage is neither for legal necessity nor for payment of an antecedent debt. In such a case the son himself may sue for a declaration that the mortgage is not binding on his share and if he proves that the debt was contracted for illegal or immoral purposes to the knowledge of the lender he will be granted a declaration that the mortgage and the debt are not binding on him (k). In all these cases the mortgage qua mortgage cannot be enforced against the sons' interest in the mortgaged property, and no mortgage decree for the sale of that interest can be passed against the son. But the son is nevertheless under a pious obligation to pay the mortgage debt qua debt if it was not contracted for an illegal or immoral purpose. The son may therefore be successfully sued for the father's debt, and the decree passed in such suit may be enforced in execution by sale of

---

(h) Anantu v. Ram Prasad (1924) 46 All. 295, 78 I.C. 619, ('24) A.A. 465.

(i) Rameshra v. Kalpu Rai (1924) 46 All. 264, 84 I.C. 84, ('24) A.A. 538.

(*i*1) Jaiprakash v. Lilabai ('63) A.B. 100.

(j) Sami Ayyangar v. Ponnammal (1898) 21 Mad. 28; Venkataramanaya v. Venkataramana (1906) 29 Mad. 200 [F.B.]; Kandasami v. Kuppu (1920) 43 Mad. 421, 55 I.C. 320, ('20) A.M. 479; Ramasami v. Ulaganatha (1899) 22 Mad. 49 [F.B.]; Periasami v. Seetharama (1904) 27 Mad. 243 [F.B.]; Luchman Dass v. Giridhur (1880) 5 Cal. 855 [F.B.]; Gunga Prosad v. Ajudhia Pershad (1882) 8 Cal. 131; Khalilul Rahman v. Gobind Pershad (1893) 20 Cal. 328; Kishun Pershad v. Tipan Pershad (1907) 34 Cal. 735; Brijnandan v. Bidya Prasad (1915) 42 Cal. 1068, 29 I.C. 629, ('16) I.C. 279 [F.B.]; Jamna v. Nain Sukh (1887) 9 All 493; Chandradeo v. Mata Prasad (1909) 31 All. 176, 194, 208, 1 I.C. 479 [F.B.]; Kali Shankar v. Nawab Singh (1909) 31 All. 507, 3 I.C. 909; Narsingh v. Lalji (1901) 23 All. 206; Dattatraya v. Vishnu (1912) 36 Bom. 68, 12 I.C. 949; Chintamanrao v. Kashinath (1890) 14 Bom. 320; Polavarapu Lingayya & Ors. v. Vupputuri Punnayya & Ors. (1942) Mad. 502, 198 I.C. 588, ('42) A.M. 183, Contra Hiralal v. Jagdish ('59) A. Raj. 254, 8 Raj. 850.

(k) Krishnaji Lakshman v. Vithal (1888) 12 Bom. 625.

the entire ancestral estate including the sons' interest therein (l). Cases under this head may be divided into three classes, namely—

(i) Where the suit to enforce the mortgage is brought both against the father and the sons.

(ii) Where such suit is brought against the father alone.

(iii) Where such suit is brought against the sons after the father's death.

(i) In dealing with these cases it must be remembered that according to the law as administered in Madras and Bombay, a coparcener can mortgage his undivided interest in coparcenary property, and the mortgage binds his interest in the property [§ 268]. In Bengal and Uttar Pradesh no coparcener can mortgage even his own interest in the coparcenary property without the consent of the other coparceners, with the result that the mortgage does not bind even the mortgagor's share in the property [§ 269]. Where a suit, therefore, is brought against the father and sons on a mortgage executed by the father neither for legal necessity nor for payment of an antecedent debt, the mortgagor in Madras is entitled to (1) a mortgage decree against the father for the sale of his interest, and (2) if the net proceeds of the sale of the father's interest are found to be insufficient to pay the amount due to the mortgagee, also to a decree against the father personally under O. 34, r. 6, of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, and a decree for the sale of the entire joint family property including the sons' interest therein (m). In Bombay, the mortgage decree directs a sale in execution of the entire joint family property including the son's interest therein instead of directing a sale piecemeal as in Madras (n). In Uttar Pradesh, the mortgage does not bind even the father's interest in the property. Hence no mortgage decree can be passed for the sale even of the father's interest. The only decree that can be passed is a money decree against the father and a decree for a sale in execution of the entire joint family property including the sons' interest therein (o). The result, it seems, should be the same in Bengal, but it has there been held that the mortgagee is entitled to a mortgage decree against the father for the sale of his interest in the property, and also to a decree, if the net proceeds of the sale of the father's interest be insufficient to pay the amount due to the mortgagee under the decree, for the sale of the sons' interest in the entire joint family property so far as may be necessary to satisfy the amount due (p). But where the mortgagee asks for a money decree against the father only and not against the son or where the suit was dismissed against the sons (q), the decree cannot be

---

(l) Kandasami v. Kuppu (1920) 43 Mad. 121, 55 I.C. 320, ('20) A.M. 479; Chandradeo v. Mata Prasad (1909) 31 All. 176, 194, 1 I.C. 479 [F.B.].

(m) (1920) 43 Mad. 421, 55 I.C. 320, ('20) A.M. 479, supra; Sami Ayyangar v. Ponnammal (1898) 21 Mad. 28; Venkataramanaya v. Venkataramana (1906) 29 Mad. 200 [F.B.].

(n) Dattatraya v. Vishnu (1912) 36 Bom. 68, 12 I.C. 949; Chintamanrav v. Kashinath (1890) 14 Bom. 320.

(o) Kali Shankar v. Nawab Singh (1909) 31 All. 507, 3 I.C. 909; Chandradeo v. Mata Prasad (1909) 31 All. 176, 208, 1 I.C. 479 [F.B.]; Jamna v. Nain Sukh (1887) 9 All. 493; Jai Narain v. Mahabir Prasad (1927) 2 Luck. 226, 236, 95 I.C. 857, ('26) A.O. 470; P. A. Maha Nirvani v. Bindeshri Prasad (1952) 1 All. 109, ('52) A.A. 337.

(p) Kishun Pershad v. Tipan Pershad (1907) 34 Cal. 735; Luchmun Dass v. Giridhur (1880) 5 Cal. 855 [F.B.]; Gunga Prosad v. Ajudhia Pershad (1882) 8 Cal. 131; Khalilul Rahman v. Gobind Persad (1893) 20 Cal. 328; Brijnandan v. Bidya Prasad (1915) 42 Cal. 1068, 29 I.C. 629, ('16) A.C. 279 [F.B.].

(q) Kesho Ram v. Musammat Ram Dulari (1942) 17 Luck. 319, 196 I.C. 680, ('42) A.O. 9; P. A. Maha Nirvani v. Bindeshri Prasad (1952) 1 All. 109, ('52) A.A. 337.

executed against the son's interest in the joint family property (r). See note below, "Consideration of Calcutta cases referred to in the section."

(ii) The next case is where the mortgagee sues the father alone. In such a case the mortgagee may, at his option, obtain a simple money decree against the father for the whole of the mortgage debt, and have the entire joint family property, including the sons' interest therein, sold in execution of the decree (s). The sons, though not parties to the suit, are bound by the sale by reason of their pious duty to pay their father's debt and they cannot recover their share of the property unless they prove that the debt was contracted by the father for an immoral purpose [§ 294].

Or the mortgagee may, at his option, obtain a mortgage decree for the sale of the mortgaged property. In this case also, if the entire mortgaged property is sold in execution of the decree, the sons, though not parties to the suit, are not entitled to recover their share of the property unless the debt was contracted by the father for an immoral purpose [see the cases cited in § 294B(2)]. This rule has not been altered by s. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, now replaced by O. 34, r. 1, of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908. The effect of the decisions since the passing of the Transfer of Property Act is that where ancestral property belonging to a joint-family has been sold in execution of a decree for sale on a mortgage executed by the father for his sole benefit, the son cannot maintain a suit for redemption of their interest in the property sold solely upon the ground that they had not been made parties to the suit of the mortgagee, nor is their position improved by the fact that the property at the execution sale was purchased by the mortgagee. Their suit must be based upon some ground which would free them from liability as sons in a joint Hindu family to pay their father's debts, namely, the non-existence of the debt or the immoral character of the debt (t).

As to the sons' remedy before suit, see § 294A(2).

(iii) The last case is where the suit is brought by the mortgagee against the sons after the father's death. In this case the mortgagee may obtain a money decree against the sons which may be enforced by a sale of the entire joint family property, unless the suit against the sons is barred by limitation [§ 293(2)]. He is also entitled, in Bombay (u) and Madras, to a mortgage decree limited to the father's interest in the mortgaged property, provided that the suit as a mortgage suit is not barred by limitation. In Uttar Pradesh no mortgage decree can be passed against the father's interest whether the father be alive or dead; it follows that if the suit against the sons is barred by

---

(r) Jainarayan Mulchand v. Sonaji (1938) Nag. 136, 174 I.C. 621, ('38) A.N. 24; Bijai Raj Singh v. Ram Padarath (1936) 11 Luck. 523, 58 I.C. 490, ('36) A.O. 139.

(s) Is the mortgagee entitled to have the mortgaged property sold? See Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, O. 34, r. 14.

(t) Debi Singh v. Jia Ram (1903) 25 All. 214 [F.B.]; Lal Singh v. Pulandar Singh (1906) 28 All. 182; Balwant Singh v. Aman Singh (1911) 33 All. 7, 7 I.C. 112; Kehri Singh v. Chunni Lal (1911) 33 All. 436, 9 I.C. 476; Gajadhar v. Jadubir (1925) 47 All. 122, 85 I.C. 31, ('25) A.A. 180; Ramasamayyan v. Virasami (1898) 21 Mad. 222; Palani v. Bangayya (1899) 22 Mad. 207; Ramkrishna v. Vinayak (1910) 34 Bom. 354, 5 I.C. 867; Jahan Singh v. Hardat Singh (1935) 57 All. 357, 152 I.C. 487, ('35) A.A. 247. In Bhawani Prasad v. Kallu (1895) 17 All. 537 [F.B.], the sons' suit was brought before sale. See also Kanhaiya Lal v. Raj Bahadur (1902) 24 All. 211; Lalla Suraj v. Gulab Chand (1901) 28 Cal. 517.

(u) See Chintamanrao v. Kashinath (1890) 14 Bom. 320.

limitation, the mortgagee has no remedy at all in respect of his claim (v). There is no Calcutta decision bearing on the question whether a mortgage decree can be passed against the father's interest after his death (w).

(2) Where the debt is immoral.—If the debt contracted by the father is tainted with immorality, the mortgagee is not entitled to proceed against the son's interest at all. All that he is entitled to, in Bombay and Madras, is a mortgage decree limited to the father's interest in the mortgaged property. So too, it seems, in Bengal. In Uttar Pradesh, a mortgage by the father of his own undivided interest without the consent of the sons does not bind even the father's interest in the property, and the mortgagee is not entitled to a mortgage decree limited even to that interest. But he may obtain a money decree against the father which he may execute by a sale of the father's interest in the joint family estate (x). Also see § 290 (2).

Consideration of Calcutta cases referred to in the section.—The principle that a sale of mortgaged property in execution of a mortgage decree passed against the father alone on a mortgage executed by him neither for legal necessity nor for an antecedent debt, passes not only the father's, but the sons' interest in the property [sub-§ (1) (ii)], was established by the rulings of the Privy Council in Mst. Nanomi v. Modhun (y) decided in 1886 and Bhagbut v. Girja Koer (z), decided in 1888. The principle that no mortgage decree can be passed against the sons in a suit on such a mortgage was first laid down by a Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court in 1880 in the case of Luchmun Dass v. Giridhar (a). In two later cases (b), it was held by the Court of Calcutta that since a sale in execution of a mortgage decree against the father alone passes not only the father's, but the sons' interest in the mortgaged property as decided in the two Privy Council cases, the Court could also pass a mortgage decree against the sons, and that the Full Bench ruling in Luchmun Dass's case (c) was no longer good law since the Privy Council decisions. In both these cases the Court overlooked the fact that there was a distinction between the position of the son where the mortgage created by the father was sought to be enforced against his interest in the property, and his position after the sale in execution of the decree against the father; that distinction, whether it was logical or not, has long since been recognised. In two cases (d), again it was held by that Court that the aforesaid Full Bench ruling was superseded by s. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, now O. 34, r. 1, of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908. All these decisions were subsequently overruled by a Full Bench of the same High Court in Brijnandan v. Bidya Prasad (e), and it was held that there was nothing either in the above mentioned decisions of the Privy Council or in the provisions of s. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act to justify the view that a mortgage created by a father was operative as such against the sons, and that the decision in the Full Bench case that no mortgage decree can be passed against the sons, but only a money decree, was still good law. It was also held that as the charge could not be enforceable against the sons, article 132 of the Schedule to the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, had no application and that article 120 governed the case.

It has been stated above that though according to the Mitakshara law as administered in Bengal, the father cannot alienate his own undivided interest in the coparcenary property without the consent of his sons, the Calcutta High Court has held that the mortgagee is entitled to a mortgage decree against the father. The leading case on the subject is Luchmun Dass v. Giridhur (f) decided by a Full Bench in 1880. The facts of the case are stated in Khalilul Rahman v. Gobind Pershad (1893) 20 Cal. 328, 342-348, and the decree passed by the High Court after the Full Bench had returned the answers to the question

---

(v) See Chandradeo Singh v. Mata Prasad (1909) 31 All. 176, 179, 1 I.C. 479 [F.B.].

(w) See Madho Parshad v. Mehrban Singh (1891) 18 Cal. 157, 17 I.A. 194, which was a case of sale.

(x) Shiva Nath v. Tulshi Ram (1926) 48 All. 1, 89 I.C. 480, ('25) A.A. 801. But see Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, O. 34, r. 14.

(y) (1886) 13 Cal. 21, 36, 13 I.A. 1.

(z) (1888) 15 Cal. 717, 721, 724. 15 I.A. 99.

(a) (1880) 5 Cal. 855.

(b) Maheshwar v. Kishun (1907) 34 Cal. 184; Sheo Narain v. Mokshoda Das (1913) 17 C.W.N. 1022, 19 I.C. 878.

(c) See Jamna v. Nain Sukh (1887) 9 All. 493, 494; Kishun Pershad v. Tipan Pershad (1907) 34 Cal. 735, 745-746.

(d) Biswanath v. Jagdip (1913) 40 Cal. 342, 17 I.C. 577, (1913) 17 C.W.N. 1022, 19 I.C. 878, supra.

(e) (1915) 42 Cal. 1068, 29 I.C. 629, ('16) A.C. 279 [F.B.].

(f) (1880) 5 Cal. 855.

submitted to them is set forth on p. 354 of the report. In Luchmun Dass's case, the lower Court had passed a mortgage decree for the sale of the father's interest but it wholly dismissed the mortgagee's suit against the sons. In so doing the Court purported to follow an earlier ruling of the same High Court (g). The question before the Full Bench was as to the extent of the liability of the sons in respect of the mortgage debt. There was no question as to whether a mortgage decree could be passed against the father. On the question before them the Full Bench held that no mortgage decree could be passed against the sons, but the sons being under a pious obligation to pay the father's debt, their share was liable to be sold if the net sale proceeds of the father's interest were not sufficient to satisfy the mortgagee's claim in full.

297. Where purchase money applied in part only in payment of antecedent debt.—It sometimes happens that joint family property is sold by the father of a joint family for the payment of an antecedent debt, but the whole of the price is not proved to have been applied in payment of such debt, and the sale is challenged by the sons on that ground. In such a case, if the sale was necessary to discharge the debt, and the purchaser pays a fair price for the property sold, and acts in good faith and after due inquiry as to the necessity for the sale, the mere fact that part of the price is not proved to have been applied in payment of the debt does not invalidate the sale, the reason being that the purchaser is not bound to see to the application of the price. If the above conditions are satisfied, the sale must be upheld unconditionally, whether the part not proved to have been applied in payment of the debt is considerable or small (h). See §§ 189, 245.

The above principles have been laid down by the Judicial Committee in cases of sales by the manager of joint family property for legal necessity, but the same principles apply to cases of sales by the father for the payment of an antecedent debt.

In an earlier Privy Council case where one property was sold for Rs. 2,000, and Rs. 338 was not proved to have been applied in payment of the father's debts, and another property was subsequently sold for Rs. 2,000 and Rs. 1,847 was not proved to have been applied in payment of the debts, their Lordships set aside both the sales conditionally on payment by the sons, who were the plaintiffs in the suit, to the purchaser of the sums actually applied in payment of the debts (i). It is conceived that if such a case arose again, both the sales would be upheld if the conditions stated in the section were satisfied. See notes to §§ 189 and 245.

298. Immoral (avyavaharika) debt.—Sons, grandsons and great-grandsons are bound to pay all debts contracted by the father, grandfather or great-grandfather except the following debts (j):—

I: (1) debts for spirituous liquors;

(2) debts due for losses at play;

(3) debts due for promises made without consideration;

A promissory note for a time-barred debt is not a promise without consideration (k).

---

(g) Bheknarain v. Januk (1877) 2 Cal. 438.

(h) Krishna Das v. Nathu Ram (1927) 54 I.A. 79, 49 All. 149, 100 I.C. 130, ('27) A.PC. 37 [case of legal necessity] Niamat Rai v. Din Dayal (1927) 54 I.A. 211, 8 Lah. 597, 101 I.C. 373, ('27) A.PC. 121; Masit Ullah v. Damodar Prasad (1926) 53 I.A. 204, 48 All. 518, 98 I.C. 1031, ('26) A.PC. 105 [case of legal necessity]; Gokha Ram v. Sham Lal (1922) 3 Lah. 426, 77 I.C. 174, ('23) A.L. 268 [antecedent debt]; Buta Mal v. Gopal Singh (1930) 11 Lah. 164, 122 I.C. 480, ('30) A.L. 1040. The decision in Sanmukh v. Jagarnath (1924) 46 All. 531, 83 I.C. 83, ('24) A.A. 708 [antecedent debt], is no longer good law; see the judgment in 54 I.A. 79, referred to above; Bansilal v. Shivlal (1953) 55 Bom. L.R. 350, (1953) Bom. 1045, ('53) A.B. 361.

(i) Banwari Lal v. Mahesh (1918) 45 I.A. 284, 41 All. 63, 49 I.C. 540, ('18) A.PC. 118.

(j) Khalilul v. Gobind (1893) 20 Cal. 328, 336, 337.

(k) Gajadhar v. Jagannath (1924) 46 All. 775, 787, 80 I.C. 684, ('24) A.A. 551 [F.B.].

(4) debts contracted under the influence of lust or wrath;

(5) debts for being surety for the appearance or for the honesty of another (l);

(6) unpaid fines (m);

(7) unpaid tolls; and

(8) any debt which is avyavaharika which is rendered by Colebrooke as equivalent to a debt for a cause "repugnant to good morals."

II: The burden of proving that the debt was avyavaharika or illegal is on the son (*m*1).

Surety.—According to Yagnavalkya there are three classes of sureties, to wit, sureties (1) for appearance, (2) for confidence, and (3) for payment (n). Brihaspati adds a fourth class which is very much similar to the third and differs from it in this respect that whereas a surety for payment binds himself personally to pay the loan, in the other form he undertakes to produce the property of the debtor, out of which the creditor may obtain satisfaction (o). In the first two classes the liability of the surety is purely personal and does not extend to sons except where the surety obtains a pledge from the debtor to ensure his safety, and in such cases the creditor is entitled to realise his claim from the pledge even if the surety is dead. In the other two classes, viz., when the surety undertakes to pay off the debts or to produce the goods of the debtor, the sons are liable to discharge the obligation incurred by the father but their liability extends to making good the principal of the loan and not the interest (p). Under the Mitakshara law the grandsons are not liable in any case for debts contracted by their grandfather as surety (q). The decision in Narayan v. Venkatacharya (r) which held that under the Mitakshara law the grandson would be liable to pay the suretyship debt of the grandfather in case the latter had received consideration for the same is apparently based upon a misapprehension of the texts of Mitakshara which nowhere lay down a proposition of this kind (s). The view of the Bombay High Court however receives some support from a text of Mayukha (t). A guarantee given by the father for payment of rent by a tenant is a guarantee for payment of a debt (u), and so is a guarantee for payment of money that may be decreed against a defendant in a suit (v). A debt incurred by a father as a surety for payment of money is binding on the son as a mere money debt but a hypothecation of the family property for such a debt is not binding on the property (w). But a surety bond hypothecating joint property by which the father guarantees payment of loss that may be caused to the estate of a minor by misappropriation or waste by a guardian is a bond for the honesty of another [see cl. (5) above], and is not binding on the sons (x); unless the security bond is executed for a debt of the father (y); if under such a bond the property is sold, the son is entitled to recover his share therein (z). If the surety bond is executed for payment of a debt due from a third party and the father undertakes no personal liability, the obligation is confined to the property if any that is charged by him for satisfaction of the claim. No question arises in such cases of the son's duty to pay the father's debt

---

(l) Tukarambhat v. Gangaram (1899) 23 Bom. 454, 456, 458. See also Mahabir v. Siri Narayan (1918) 3 Pat. L.J. 396, 46 I.C. 27, ('18) A.P. 345; Dandapani v. Ghumsur ('56) A. Orissa 144.

(m) Nhance v. Hureeram (1814) 1 Bor. 84, 90.

(*m*1) For instance see Sitaram v. Radhabai ('68) A.SC. 534.

(n) Yagnavalkya, Chapter II, v. 53.

(o) Sen's Hindu Jurisprudence, p. 320.

(p) Ibid, pp. 322-323; Sitaramayya v. Venkataramanna, 11 Mad. 373; Chettikulam v. Chettikulam Kumara, 28 Mad. 377; Tukarambhav v. Gangaram, 23 Bom. 454; Rasik Lal v. Singheswar, 39 Cal. 843; Audilaxamma v. Raghurami ('70) A.A.P. 158 (F.B.); Thangathammal v. Arunachalam ('19) A.M. 831.

(q) Sarwan v. Kunji Lal, ('51) A. Madhya Bharat p. 49; Dwarka v. Kishan Das, 55 A.A. 675.

(r) Narayan v. Venkatacharya (1904) 28 Bom. 408.

(s) Dwarka v. Kishan Das, 55 All. 675.

(t) Mayukha Ch. V, s. 3, VI.

(u) Maharaja of Benares v. Ramkumar (1904) 26 All. 611.

(v) Mata Din v. Ram Lakhan (1930) 52 All. 153, 120 I.C. 555, ('30) A.A. 87; Malak Chand v. Hira Lal (1936) 11 Luck. 449, 157 I.C. 945, ('35) A.O. 510.

(w) Thakur Satrohan Singh v. Uma Dutt (1936) 11 Luck. 404, 157 I.C. 653, ('35) A.O. 455; Malak Chand v. Hira Lal (1936) 11 Luck. 449, 157 I.C. 945, ('35) A.O. 510.

(x) Kottapalli Lakshminarayana v. Kanuparti Hanumantha Rao (1935) 58 Mad. 375, 154 I.C. 431, ('35) A.M. 144.

(y) Kesar Chand v. Uttam Chand (1945) 72 I.A. 165, (1945) 2 M.L.J. 160.

(z) Choudhuri v. Hayagriba (1931) 10 Pat. 94, 138 I.C. 414, ('32) A.P. 162; Krishna v. Rama ('64) A. All. 17.

by reason of any pious obligation, because there is no debt due by the father (a). It has been held by the Patna High Court that a debt incurred by a father for standing surety against embezzlement by a tahsildar is not binding on the sons (b) [see cl. (5) above]. But it has been held by the same High Court that the sons are liable for money borrowed by their father to enable his wife's cousin to refund money which he had misappropriated or could not account for (c).

Debt for a cause repugnanat to good morals.—The fundamental rule is that the sons are not liable for debts incurred by a father which are avyavaharika. Colebrooke translates it as "debts for a cause repugnant to good morals." Apararka explains it as not righteous or proper, and Balambhatti as not for the benefit of the family (d). In Jakati v. Borkar (*d*1) the Supreme Court observed that the translation of the term given by Colebrooke may well be taken to represent its correct meaning and that the term did not admit of a more precise definition. The relevant texts on the subject have been examined in numerous decisions. A very recent decision on the subject related to income tax (*d*2).

Where money was borrowed by the father for the purpose of defraying the expenses of the marriage of his concubine's grand-daughter, it is avyavaharika even if the concubine was in his continuous and exclusive keeping (e).

A debt may arise out of a contract as where money is borrowed by the father or it may arise out of an act which amounts to a criminal offence, e.g., theft, or it may arise out of a tort or civil wrong.

Money borrowed by a father for payment to a Hindu woman as a bribe to induce her to take one of his sons in adoption is an avyavaharika debt, and the sons are not liable for it (f). So is money borrowed to pay a fine inflicted for a criminal offence (g). The High Court of Madras has held that money borrowed to pay the cost of a suit in forma pauperis brought by the father knowing it to be false is an avyavaharika debt (h). The Calcutta High Court has held that money borrowed by the father for litigation to set up an adoption is not an avyavaharika debt and that the sons are liable for it (i). It has been held that the sons are liable to pay the costs of a suit decreed against the father, though the litigation was imprudent (j) or the defence raised by him was dishonest (k).

Where money is obtained by a father by committing a criminal offence, e.g., theft and a decree is passed against him for the money so obtained by him, the sons are not liable for the decretal amount (l). The same rule applies in respect of money taken by a father and misappropriated under circumstances which constitute the taking itself a criminal offence (m), e.g., misappropriation by the father as a guardian of money belonging to the minor (n), or a criminal breach of trust (o). No decree can be passed against the sons of a stake-holder of a chit fund in respect of the latter's liability to a subscriber as the debt is illegal (p). [See also Sesha Ayyar v. Krishna Ayyar (1936) 59 Mad. 562, 162 I.C. 68, ('36) A.M. 225, where it was held by a Full Bench that such a fund was a lottery and by three Judges out of five that its promoters were guilty of offences under both parts of section 294A of the Indian Penal Code.] Where the father's debt was, at its inception, a just and true debt, the subsequent dishonest conduct of the father cannot affect its nature. Thus, when the father withheld a promissory note allotted in a partition

---

(a) Lingbhat v. Parappa (1949) 52 Bom. L.R. 846, ('51) A.B. 1. Otherwise where there is personal liability of the father: Hindustan Commercial Bank Ltd. v. Sohanlal ('70) A. Punj. & H. 67 (F.B.).

(b) Satya Charan v. Satpir (1919) 4 Pat. L.J. 309, 51 I.C. 791, ('19) A.P. 422.

(c) Benares Bank Ltd. v. Jagdip (1921) 6 Pat. L.J. 198, 62 I.C. 465, ('21) A.P. 9.

(d) See Bai Mani v. Usafali (1921) 33 Bom. L.R. 130, 133, 136 I.C. 173, ('31) A.B. 229.

(*d*1) ('59) A.S.C. 282, 286.

(*d*2) J. D. Rao v. I.T.O. ('70) A.A.P. 426 (F.B.). See f.n. (*o*1) at p. 389, infra.

(e) Lakshmanaswami v. Raghavacharulu (1943) Mad. 717, 210 I.C. 98, ('43) A.M. 292.

(f) Sitaram v. Harihar (1911) 35 Bom. 169, 8 I.C. 625.

(g) Garuda Sanyasayya v. Nerella Murthenna (1918) 35 Mad. L.J. 661, 48 I.C. 740, ('19) A.M. 943.

(h) Kirit Singh v. Chandra Kali Kaur (1951) 30 Mad. L.J. 89, 41 I.C. 105.

(i) Khalilul v. Gobind (1893) 20 Cal. 328.

(j) Paryag v. Kasi (1909) 14 C.W.N. 659, 6 I.C. 258.

(k) Kirit Singh v. Chandra Kali Kaur (1951) 30 Pat. 826, ('51) A.P. 587. The correctness of certain propositions in this decision was doubted in a more recent case of the same Court, Sudhansu v. Mt. Ramjhari ('57) A.P. 115. The decision in Kirit Singh's case was overruled by a Full Bench of the same High Court in Sheodhar v. Sitaram ('62) A.P. 308. Peerumal Chetty v. Province of Madras (1955) Mad. 1179, ('55) A.M. 382 [court-fees].

(l) Pareman Dass v. Bhattu (1897) 24 Cal. 672.

(m) Mahabir Prasad v. Basdeo Singh (1884) 6 All. 234; McDowell & Co. v. Ragava (1904) 27 Mad. 71; Jagannath v. Jugal Kishore (1926) 48 All. 9, 89 I.C. 492, ('26) A.A. 89; (1931) 33 Bom. L.R. 130, 136 I.C. 173, ('31) A.B. 229, supra.

(n) (1931) 33 Bom. L.R. 130, 136 I.C. 173, ('31) A.B. 229, supra.

(o) Srimati Widyawanti v. Jai Dayal (1932) 13 Lah. 356, 140 I.C. 220, ('32) A.L. 541.

(p) Muniyandia v. Muthusami (1939) Mad. 70.

decree to the opposite party which he was directed to deposit in Court his conduct in first filing a forged note and then filing the real note after it was barred cannot save the son's liability under the decree passed against the father for the loss (q). Where a father is under a civil liability to account for money received by him, e.g., as an administrator of the estate of a deceased person, or as a trustee, or as an agent or manager, and he fails to account, and a decree is passed against him for money not accounted for by him, the sons are liable for the amount of the decree though the father may have retained the money dishonestly, provided the retention itself does not amount to a criminal offence, that is, the offence of criminal breach of trust or criminal misappropriation (r). Where the receipt of the money was lawful at the time of the receipt, even the subsequent commission of an offence by the father does not save the son's liability (s). The burden is on the sons to show that the retention itself amounted to a criminal offence (t). When the removal of certain materials from a mortgaged house by the father amounted to a civil wrong and not a crime, a decree passed against the father personally could be executed against the son, as the debt is not immoral (u).

A Hindu father erects a dam which obstructs the passage of water to the property of his neighbour. The Court finds that the father had no right in law to erect the dam and a decree is passed against the father for damages. Are the sons liable for the amount of the decree? It has been held by the High Court of Bombay in Durbar v. Khachar (v) that they are not liable, the reason given being that such a debt is avyavaharika, that is a debt which the father ought not, "as a decent and respectable man," to have incurred. This interpretation of the word avyavaharika has not been accepted by the High Court of Calcutta. According to that Court, the sons are liable for a decree against the father for damages on account of injury caused to crops by obstruction of a channel (w). They are also liable for a decree against the father for mesne profits (x). The view taken in Durbar's case has also been disapproved by the High Court of Madras (y). The High Court of Allahabad has also dissented from that view, and held that the sons are liable for money borrowed by the father to defend a suit for defamation (z), or to defend himself against charges of forgery and fabrication (a); also that they are liable for a decree against the father for damages for wrongfully cutting down trees (b). The authority of the decision in Durbar's case was treated as doubtful in a later Bombay case where it was held that a debt contracted by father in a trade carried on by him in contravention of the Government Servants' Conduct Rules was not avyavaharika, the liability in such a case being merely civil as distinguished from criminal (c).

In Jakati v. Borkar (c1) the Supreme Court held that the liability of a father who is a managing director of a co-operative bank and who draws a salary or a remuneration, incurred as a result of negligence in the discharge of his duties cannot be termed as "repugnant to good morals."

When a father purported to sell joint property for satisfaction of antecedent debts, and covenanted with the purchaser, that in case any dispute arose regarding the property he would make good the loss, and the son obtained a decree from the Court, that the

---

(q) Hemraj alias Babu Lal & Ors. v. Khem Chand & Ors. (1943) All. 727, 209 I.C. 344, 70 I.A. 171, ('43) A.PC. 142; Loganathan v. Naicker ('69) A.M. 15.

(r) Natasayyan v. Ponnusami (1893) 16 Mad. 99, 104; Kanemar v. Krishna (1908) 31 Mad. 161 [manager]; Gurunatham v. Raghavalu (1908) 31 Mad. 472 [administrator]; Venkatacharyulu v. Mohona (1921) 44 Mad. 214, 61 I.C. 530, ('21) A.M. 407 [agent]; Gursarn Das v. Mohan Lal (1923) 4 Lah. 93, 76 I.C. 907, ('23) A.L. 399 [manager]; Hanmant v. Ganesh (1919) 43 Bom. 612, 51 I.C. 612, ('18) A.B. 13 [trustee]; Toshanpal v. District Judge of Agra (1929) 51 All. 386, 112 I.C. 748, ('28) A.A. 582 [Secretary of a School Committee]. See also Jai Kumar v. Gauri Nath (1906) 28 All. 718, 720; Mohant Gadadhar v. Ghana Shyam Das (1918) 3 Pat. L.J. 533, 47 I.C. 212, ('18) A.P. 391; Venkateswara Temple v. B. Radhakrishna ('63) A.A.P. 425 (F.B.).

(s) Alapati Anandarao & Ors. v. The President, Co-operative Credit Society, Pedatadepalli & Ors. (1941) Mad. 27, 191 I.C. 755, ('40) A.M. 828; Sita Ram v. Tarachand ('62) A. Raj. 136.

(t) Toshanpal Singh v. District Judge of Agra (1934) 56 All. 548, 61 I.A. 350, 151 I.C. 33, ('34) A.PC. 328.

(u) Hiradas v. Jagannath (1945) Nagpur 998.

(v) (1908) 32 Bom. 348.

(w) Chhakauri v. Ganga (1912) 39 Cal. 862, 12 I.C. 609. See Kirpal Singh v. Balwant Singh (1913) 40 Cal. 288, 17 I.C. 666 [P.C.] which turned upon a special custom of agriculturists in the Punjab.

(x) Peary Lal v. Chandi Charan (1906) 11 C.W.N. 163; Ramsubramania v. Sivakami (1925) A.M. 841; Laxmi Pati Rao v. Kristarao, 52 Bom. L.R. 342, ('50) A.B. 356.

(y) Venugopala v. Ramanadhan (1914) 37 Mad. 458, 14 I.C. 705, ('14) A.M. 654 [costs of litigation].

(z) Sumer Singh v. Liladhar (1911) 33 All. 472, 19 I.C. 624.

(a) See Beni Ram v. Man Singh (1912) 34 All. 4, 11 I.C. 663.

(b) Chandrika v. Narain (1924) 46 All. 617, 79 I.C. 1036, ('24) A.A. 745.

(c) Ramkrishna v. Narayan (1916) 40 Bom. 126, 31 I.C. 301, ('15) A.B. 280.

(*c*1) ('59) A.S.C. 282.

sale was not binding on his share of the property, he could still be made liable for the debt of the father arising out of the covenant in the sale deed. To ascertain whether the debt of the father is tainted or not the extent of hardship it imposes upon the sons is not a relevant consideration (d).

The Patna High Court has held that the sons are liable for money borrowed by the father to meet the expenses of defending himself against a charge under the Cattle Trespass Act, 1871 (e), but they are not liable for a decree passed against the father for damages for malicious prosecution (f); nor for the costs of a suit dishonestly brought by the father on the basis of a fraudulent and collusive sale deed (g); nor for mesne profits and costs awarded against the father who had forcibly and wrongfully dispossessed a Math of its properties (*g*1).

Where money was borrowed by the father for assisting in the prosecution of a person accused of the murder of a member of the family, it was held that the debt though not one for a legal necessity was not illegal or immoral (h). Where the father executed a mortgage of the ancestral properties and a major portion of the amount borrowed was spent in defending a criminal charge against him it was held that the debt was binding on the son (i).

Where the father has taken a lease for a term but continued in possession after the expiry of the term, the sons are liable for the mesne profits as the possession is not necessarily immoral (j).

Commercial debt.—The text of Gautama, chapter XII, s. 41, to the effect that the sons are not liable for their father's commercial debts has long become obsolete, and sons are now liable for simple money debts incurred by the father in the course of business even though started by the father himself (k). [§ 240]. A debt incurred by the father in connection with buying and selling of shares which resulted in loss is not an immoral debt (l). If a money decree is passed against the father alone for such debt, the sons cannot resist in execution (m). Such debts though speculative are good as antecedent debts to support a further mortgage (n) as they are not repugnant to good morals (o).

Income Tax.—Income Tax due from a father cannot be regarded as avyavaharika debt on the ground that the assessment was made on the basis of concealment of true income by the father (*o*1).

299. Time-barred debt.—(1) The Hindu law does not recognise any rule of limitation for the recovery of debts. A Hindu, therefore, is bound according to that law to pay a debt owing by him, though it is barred by the statute of limitations; if he dies without paying the debt, his sons are under a moral and religious obligation to discharge the debt. But a Hindu is not bound since the enactment of the Indian Limitation Act, 1963, and the Acts which preceded it, to pay a time-barred debt, and it has accordingly been held that if the debt was barred against the father, the sons are no longer under a

---

(d) Ramamurthi v. Kuppaswami ('50) A.M. 621, (1950) 1 M.L.J. 499.

(e) Hanumat v. Sonadhari (1919) 4 Pat. L.J. 653, 62 I.C. 734, ('20) A.P. 708.

(f) Sunder Lal v. Raghunandan (1924) 3 Pat. 250, 83 I.C. 413, ('24) A.P. 465; Raghunandan Sahu v. Badri Teli (1938) All. 330, 175 I.C. 607, ('38) A.A. 263.

(g) Darbeshwari v. Raghunath (1949) 28 Pat. 165, ('49) A.P. 515.

(*g*1) Sheodhar v. Sitaram ('62) A.P. 308 (F.B.).

(h) Marudhappan v. Niraikulathan (1937) Mad. 943, 169 I.C. 292, ('37) A.M. 434.

(i) Ananga Bhusan v. Uchhab Sahu ('55) A. Orissa 179.

(j) Pashupat Pratap Singh v. Lalat Bahadur Singh (1945) All. 5.

(k) Achutaramayya v. Ratnajee (1926) 49 Mad. 211, 92 I.C. 977, ('26) A.M. 323 [hardware trade]; Annabhat v. Shivappa (1928) 52 Bom. 376, 110 I.C. 269, ('28) A.B. 232; Venkateshwara Rao v. Ammayya ('39) A.M. 561.

(l) Gulalchand v. Vadilal ('50) A. Kutch 78.

(m) Chotkao Singh v. Hasan (1930) 5 Luck. 184, 119 I.C. 458, ('29) A.O. 458; Pirthi Singh v. Mam Chand (1935) 16 Lah. 1077, 156 I.C. 539, ('35) A.L. 761.

(n) Khem Chand v. Narain Das (1925) 6 Lah. 493, 498, 89 I.C. 1022, ('26) A.L. 41; Venkatasami v. Palaniappa (1929) 52 Mad. 227, 117 I.C. 716, ('29) A.M. 153.

(o) Chotkao Singh v. Hasan (1930) 5 Luck. 184, 119 I.C. 458, ('29) A.O. 458; Kalwa Devadattam v. Union of India ('58) A. Andh. Pra. 131.

(*o*1) Radhakrishnam v. Union of India ('59) A.M. 71, (1959) Mad. 181. Also see J. D. Rao v. I.T.O. ('70) A.A.P. 426 (F.B.) [arrears of income-tax in respect of separate business prior to partition].

pious obligation to pay such debt (p). But a Hindu father may, like any other debtor, pass a promissory note for a time-barred debt. Such a note constitutes a binding contract having regard to the provisions of s. 25(3) of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, and it may be enforced against him, and after his death, against the sons. The sons, however, are liable only to the extent of the estate, whether ancestral or self-acquired, which has come to their hands on the father's death (q). The liability in such a case does not rest upon any obligation moral or religious, but on the general principle of the Anglo-Indian law. Even if the sons themselves execute a promissory note for a time-barred debt of their father after the father's death, the note is available only against the ancestral or self-acquired property, which has come to their hands. There is nothing in sec. 25(3) of the Contract Act to render them personally liable on such a note (r).

(2) A time-barred debt, under the Hindu law, is not avyavaharika, that is to say, it is not immoral. It has accordingly been held that when the father alienates joint family property in consideration of a debt that is barred by the law of limitation, the alienation is binding on the sons (s).

300. Debt contracted by father during minority or other disability.— A promissory note passed by the father for a debt contracted by him during his minority or while he was a ward of the Court Wards is void (t), and the son is under no pious obligation to pay it. The pious obligation, however, arises if the note is renewed by the father after attaining majority (u).

301. Summary of the Chapter.—(1) The separate property of a Hindu is liable for the payment of his debts in his lifetime as well as after his death (§ 288).

(2) The undivided interest of a coparcener in coparcenary property is always liable for the payment of his debts in his lifetime (§ 289).

(3) Sons, grandsons and great-grandson are liable to pay the debts of their ancestor if they have not been incurred for an immoral or unlawful purpose. Their liability, however, is confined to their interest in the coparcenary property; it is not a personal liability so that a creditor of the ancestor cannot proceed against the person or against the separate property of the sons, grandsons or great-grandsons. Also see § 290(2).

(4) As sons, grandsons and great-grandsons are liable to pay the lawful debts of their ancestor to the extent of their interest in the coparcenary property, a creditor of the ancestor is entitled to attach and sell not only the

---

(p) Subramania v. Gopala (1910) 33 Mad. 308, 7 I.C. 898; Gajadhar v. Jagannath (1924) 46 All. 775, 782, 80 I.C. 684, ('24) A.A. 551 [F.B.]; Achutanand v. Surjanarain (1926) 5 Pat. 746, 753-754, 93 I.C. 991, ('26) A.P. 427.

(q) Narayanasami v. Samidas (1883) 6 Mad. 293; Ram Kishan v. Chhedi Rai (1922) 44 All. 628, 68 I.C. 235, ('22) A.A. 402.

(r) Asa Ram v. Karam Singh (1929) 51 All. 983, 119 I.C. 109, ('29) A.A. 586.

(s) Gajadhar v. Jagannath (1924) 46 All. 775, 80 I.C. 684, ('24) A.A. 551 [F.B.]; Jagdambika v. Kali (1930) 9 Pat. 843, 129 I.C. 130, ('31) A.P. 40; Parmanand Misir v. Gur Prasad (1936) 11 Luck. 393, 157 I.C. 567, ('35) A.O. 500.

(t) Baldeo v. Bindeshri (1922) 44 All. 388, 66 I.C. 128, ('22) A.A. 215.

(u) Ram Rattan v. Basant Rai (1921) 2 Lah. 263, 64 I.C. 121, ('21) A.L. 205.

interest of the ancestor, but also the interest of the sons, grandsons and great-grandsons in the joint family property in execution of a decree obtained by him against the ancestor alone. Also see §290 (2).

(5) As sons, grandsons and great-grandsons are liable to pay the lawful debts of their ancestor to the extent of their interest in the coparcenary property, the ancestor can sell or mortgage not only his own interest, but the interest of the sons, grandsons, and great-grandsons in the joint family property, to pay an antecedent debt of his own.

(6) The undivided interest of a coparcener in coparcenary property is not liable for payment of his debts after his death if it has devolved by survivorship only upon collateral members of the coparcenary. Reference may be made to § 289 (3).

CHAPTER XV

DEBTS—DAYABHAGA LAW

Note.—As under the Mitakshara law, so under the Dayabhaga law a debt may be contracted by a Hindu for purposes of the joint family or for his own private purposes. Debts contracted for joint family purposes have been dealt with in §§ 234, 240 and 244. The rules laid down in those paragraphs apply to cases both under the Mitakshara and the Dayabhaga law. The present chapter deals with the Dayabhaga law of debts contracted by a Hindu for his own private purposes. The Dayabhaga law of debts is very simple, for no question can arise under that law as to the special liability of sons and grandsons as it does under the Mitakshara law. The reason is that under the Dayabhaga law sons do not acquire by birth any interest in ancestral property as they do under the Mitakshara law [§§ 273-274]. And, further, each coparcener under the Dayabhaga law takes a defined share in the coparcenary property which he can deal with at his pleasure and which on his death passes to his heirs and not to the surviving coparceners [§§ 279-282].

302. Debts—Bengal School.—(1) As under the Mitakshara law, so under the Dayabhaga law, the separate property of a Hindu is liable for the payment of his debts in his lifetime as well as after his death.

(2) As each coparcener under the Dayabhaga law takes a defined interest in the coparcenary property, which on his death passes not by survivorship to his coparceners, but to his heirs by succession such interest is liable for the payment of his debts not only in his lifetime but also after his death, as assets in the hands of his heirs.

(3) Since sons, grandsons and great-grandsons do not under the Dayabhaga law acquire any interest by birth in ancestral property, the father can sell or mortgage the whole of the ancestral property in his hands for the payment of his debts, whatever may be the character of the debts.

On the death of a Hindu governed by the Dayabhaga law, his separate property as well as his undivided interest in coparcenary property passes to his heirs and they become assets of the deceased in their hands. Therefore, if he dies leaving debts, the heirs are bound to pay the debts not only out of the separate property left by the deceased but also out of his undivided interest in the coparcenary property. The heirs, however, are not personally liable for the debts of the deceased, not even if they be the sons, grandsons or great-grandsons of the deceased (v). Compare with this § 288 above.

---

(v) Abdul Rahman v. Gajendra Lal (1938) 1 Cal. 132.

CHAPTER XVI

PARTITION AND REUNION—MITAKSHARA LAW

Note.—The rules relating to joint family and partition really form part of the same branch of law. The Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, in its consequence touched many branches of Hindu law such as joint family and partition, maintenance, etc., and illustrated how piecemeal legislation can result in anomalies and unexpected situations. The general effect of that enactment in case of death of a coparcener in the joint family governed by the Mitakshara law has been pointed out under § 35. The Hindu Succession Act, 1956, has brought about some radical changes in the law of succession without abolishing the joint family and joint family property. Speaking generally it does not interfere with the special rights of those who are members of a Mitakshara coparcenary but it is important to note that section 6 of that enactment recognises the rights upon the death of a coparcener of certain of his preferential heirs to claim an interest in the property that would have been allotted to him if there had in fact been a partition immediately before his death and the principle of devolution as also the rules of partition considered in this chapter are affected to that extent. Certain provisions of the Hindu Adoption and Maintenance Act, 1956, also have bearing on the rules relating to partition and are discussed in this chapter. Reference may be made to that Act and sec. 6 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, and notes thereunder for the changes brought about in the rules relating to partition by the new legislation. Reference may also be made to Notes under sec. 16 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, for the position and rights in a joint Hindu family of a son or daughter born of a marriage which is void or voidable under the latter enactment and who is to be deemed to be a legitimate child of the parents.

I. What property is divisible on partition—§§ 303-305.
II. Persons entitled to a share on partition—§§ 306-318.
III. Restraint against partition—§§ 319-320.
IV. Allotment of shares—§ 321.
V. Partition how effected—§§ 322-335.
VI. Re-opening of partition—§§ 336-339.
VII. Effect of partition—§§ 340-341.
VIII. Re-union—§§ 342-344.
IX. Partition created by so-called will—§ 345.

I. PROPERTY LIABLE TO PARTITION

303. Subject of Partition.—The only property that can be divided on a partition is coparcenary property [§ 221]. Separate property cannot be the subject of partition [§ 222], nor can property which by custom descends to one member of the family to the exclusion of other members, e.g., a Raj or principality (w).

Ancestral property.—It was thought at one time that a son could not enforce a partition of ancestral movables against his father. But it is now established that a son is entitled to a partition of movable (x) as well as of immovable property against his father (y).

Property indivisible from its nature.—Where property is in its nature indivisible as, for instance, in the case of animals, furniture, etc., it may be sold and its value distributed; or it may be valued and retained by one coparcener exclusively and the amount credited to his share. In the case of a well, it may be enjoyed by the coparceners in turns or jointly (z). Where a strip of land is reserved as a common passage by a decree in a suit

---

(w) Ramalakshmi v. Sivanantha (1872) 14 M.I.A. 570; Chintamun v. Nowlukho (1876) 1 Cal. 153, 2 I.A. 263; Adrishappa v. Gurushidappa (1880) 4 Bom. 494, 7 I.A. 162; Kachi Kalitana v. Kachi Yuva (1905) 28 Mad. 508, 32 I.A. 261; Bodhrao v. Nursing Rao (1856) 6 M.I.A. 426.

(x) Jagmohandas v. Mangaldas (1886) 10 Bom. 528, 578; Cassumbhoy v. Ahmedbhoy (1888) 12 Bom. 280.

(y) Suraj Bunsi Koer v. Sheo Prasad (1880) 5 Cal. 148, 165, 6 I.A. 88, 100.

(z) Govind v. Trimbak (1912) 36 Bom. 275, 6 I.C. 521.

for partition for the use of the coparceners, none of them is entitled to a partition of that strip (a). Where a stock broker's card is issued by the Stock Brokers' Association in the name of a coparcener he must account for its value at the time of the partition (b).

Idols and places of worship.—Family idols and places of worship are not divisible [Manu, ch. ix, verse 219]. They may be held by the members by turns, or the Court may direct possession to be given to the senior member with liberty to the other members to have access to them for the purpose of worship (c). A thakurbari is not divisible (d). The High Court of Calcutta has held that in the absence of any dedication of a building for the worship of the family idol, the building should not be excluded from partition merely because it is used for the worship of the idol. The Court may, however, in such a case give an option to a coparcener or coparceners willing to maintain the building as a place of worship to buy it at a valuation (e).

Right of way.—A right of way will be presumed to have remained joint, if there is no evidence that it was allotted to a particular member at the time of partition (f).

Share allotted on partition.—Where a coparcener, who is joint with his male issue separates from his father, brothers, or other coparceners, the property allotted to him at the partition is separate property as regards the divided members, but ancestral as regards his male issue [§ 223, sub-§ (4)]. Such property is, therefore, divisible as between him and his male issue, but, the members who have already separated are not entitled to share in it. If he dies without leaving a male issue, it will descend to his heirs (g).

Separate property.—Coparcenary property alone is liable to partition. Separate property is not liable to partition at all; it belongs absolutely to the owner thereof. As to what is separate property, see §§ 230-232 above.

Mode of allotment.—The principle of partition is that if property can be partitioned without destroying the intrinsic value of the whole property or of the shares, such partition ought to be made. If, on the contrary, no partition can be made without destroying the intrinsic value, then a money compensation should be given instead of the share which would fall to a coparcener by partition (h).

304. Property available for partition.—(1) In order to determine what property is available for partition, provision must first be made for joint family debt which are payable out of the joint family property, personal debts of the father not tainted with immorality (i), maintenance of dependent female members and of disqualified heirs, and for the marriage expenses of unmarried daughters (j). Where a partition takes place between the sons, provision must also be made for the funeral ceremonies of the widow (k) and mother of the last male holder (l). After this is done, an account must be taken of the joint family property in the hands of the manager and other members of the family, according to the rule laid down in the next following section.

Also see the Note at the beginning of this chapter.

---

(a) Shantaram v. Waman (1922) 47 Bom. 389, 68 I.C. 682, ('23) A.B. 85.

(b) Champaklal Chimanlal v. Sodagar Amubhai (1944) Bom. 619.

(c) Damodardas v. Uttamram (1893) 17 Bom. 271; Mitta Kunth v. Neerunjun (1874) 14 Beng. L.R. 166; Pramatha Nath v. Pradyumna Kumar (1925) 52 I.A. 245, 260, 52 Cal. 809, 826, 87 I.C. 305, ('25) A.PC. 139.

(d) Madanmohan v. Shaha (1930) 57 Cal. 570, 124 I.C. 327, ('30) A.C. 173.

(e) Sachindra v. Hem Chandra (1931) 35 C.W.N. 151, 132 I.C. 688, ('31) A.C. 573; Rajcoomaree v. Gopal (1878) 3 Cal. 514.

(f) Nathubhai v. Bai Hansgavri (1912) 36 Bom. 379, 15 I.C. 818.

(g) Kantama Natchiar v. The Rajah of Shivagunga (1863) 9 M.I.A. 539, 543; Sivagnana v. Periasami (1878) 1 Mad. 312, 5 I.A. 61.

(h) Ashanullah v. Kali (1884) 10 Cal. 675.

(i) Venkareddi v. Venku Reddi (1927) 50 Mad. 535, 100 I.C. 1018, ('27) A.M. 471. In Re Official Assignee v. Venkayya ('65) A.M. 60.

(j) Strange's Hindu Law, vol. ii. p. 313; Mussammat Bholi Bai v. Ducarka Das (1924) 5 Lah. 375, 84 I.C. 168, ('25) A.L. 32; Vaikuntam v. Kallapiran (1900) 23 Mad. 512.

(k) See Vaidyanatha v. Aiyasamy (1909) 32 Mad. 191, 200, 1 I.C. 408.

(l) Nand Rani v. Krishna Sahai (1935) 57 All. 997, 156 I.C. 23, ('35) A.A. 698.

(2) Marriage expenses, etc., after a suit for partition.—As to the marriage expenses of male members of the family it has been held by the Judicial Committee (m), reversing a decision of the Madras High Court (n), that since the institution of a suit for partition by a member of a joint family effects a severance of the joint status of the family, a male member of the family who is then unmarried is not entitled to have a provision made on partition for his marriage expenses, although he marries before the decree in the suit is made.

The case, however, of an unmarried daughter stands on a different footing. Her right to maintenance and marriage expenses out of the joint family property is in lieu of a share on partition; provision should accordingly be made for her marriage expenses in the decree (o).

It is only for the marriage expenses of the father's daughters or sisters that provision should be made out of the joint family property. The marriage expenses of the son's daughters form only the liability of his branch and not of the whole joint family unlike the case of the father's daughters (p). Thus if A has a son S and a daughter D by one wife, and a son *S*2 and a daughter *D*2 by another wife, and S brings a suit for partition, and *D*2 is married after the institution of the suit, one-third of her marriage expenses should be deducted out of his one-third share, and as regards one-third of the marriage expenses of D his one-third share in the property may be charged with such expenses. But S is not liable for the marriage expenses of his brother's (*S*2's) daughter, if any, she being the daughter of a collateral. Her marriage expenses should come out of her own father's share (q). The same rule applies to the expenses of betrothal ceremonies of daughters. As regards the expenses of the thread ceremony of the members of the family it has been held that provision should be made for them on partition (r).

As to marriage expenses while the family is joint, see § 440 below.

Also see the Note at the beginning of this chapter.

(3) It is settled law that it is only after provision is made for all these expenses, that what is described as 'taking of accounts' can take place. This expression is apt to be somewhat misleading because as a general rule (apart from exceptions noted in the next section and § 238) this taking of accounts is no more than an inquiry into the extent of the property as it existed when partition was demanded.

Funeral ceremonies of the mother.—Under the Hindu Law, the sons are bound to perform at their expense the funeral ceremonies of their widowed mother even if she leaves stridhana and the stridhana descends to her daughters (s). If no provision is made for expenses of such ceremonies on a partition between the sons, then if one of the sons performs the ceremonies at his own expense, he is entitled to a contribution from his brothers (t).

Adverse possession.—It has been held by the High Court of Madras (u), dissenting from the High Court of Bombay (v), that possession, though exclusive, of a coparcener of

---

(m) Ramalinga v. Narayana (1922) 49 I.A. 168, 45 Mad. 489, 68 I.C. 451, ('22) A.PC. 201; Mussammat Bholi Bai v. Dwarka Das (1924) 5 Lah. 375, 84 I.C. 168, ('25) A.L. 32; Venkatarayudu v. Sivaramakrishnayya (1935) 58 Mad. 126, 153 I.C. 368, ('34) A.M. 676.

(n) Narayana v. Ramalinga (1916) 39 Mad. 587, 36 I.C. 428, ('17) A.M. 477.

(o) Rajagopala v. Venkataraman, 51 C.W.N. 829 (P.C.).

(p) Ramchandra v. Seeniathal (1955) Mad. 732, ('54) A.M. 1011.

(q) Subbayya v. Ananta (1930) 53 Mad. 84, 121 I.C. 113, ('29) A.M. 586.

(r) Jairam v. Nathu (1906) 31 Bom. 54.

(s) Vrijbhukandas v. Bai Parvati (1908) 32 Bom. 26.

(t) Vaidyanatha v. Aiyasami (1909) 32 Mad. 191, 200 I.C. 408. See Contract Act, ss. 69-70.

(u) Kamarappa v. Saminatha (1919) 42 Mad. 431, 52 I.C. 470, ('19) A.M. 531. Reference may also be made to Lakshmi Reddy v. Lakshmi Reddy ('57) A.SC. 314; Bujahwan Singh v. Shyama Devi ('64) A.P. 301.

(v) Vishnu v. Ganesh (1897) 21 Bom. 325.

a portion of the joint property for upwards of 12 years is not adverse against the other coparceners, if all the coparceners are in joint possession of the rest of the joint property. The other coparceners are therefore entitled to partition also of that portion of the property. As to exclusion from joint family, see § 235(3a).

Maintenance and marriage expenses.—Where a coparcener spends his own money for the maintenance of those persons whom the late proprietor was bound to maintain, e.g., his widow and daughters, and for the marriage expenses of the late owner's daughter he is entitled to payment on partition of the amount so spent by him (w).

305. Mode of taking accounts.—(1) No coparcener is entitled to call upon the manager to account for his past dealings with the joint family property, unless he establishes fraud, misappropriation or improper conversion [§ 238].

(2) No charge is to be made against any coparcener because a large share of the joint income was spent on his family in consequence of his having a larger family to support (x). Similarly no credit is to be given to any coparcener because a smaller share of the income was spent on him and his family.

It was held by the Nagpur High Court that an agreement which provides that certain items of expenditure were to be treated as individual and not joint, to be debited at the time of partition to the individual coparcener, is not repugnant to Hindu law (y).

(3) A coparcener who is entirely excluded from the enjoyment of the family property is entitled to an account of the income derived from the family property, and to have his share of the income ascertained and paid to him, in other words he is entitled to what are called mesne profits (z). Mesne profits may also be allowed on partition where the family property or any part thereof has been held by a coparcener who claims it as his exclusive property (a), or where an arrangement has been made between the coparceners to enjoy the family property in specific and distinct shares, and the enjoyment of those shares is disturbed (b). Except in cases of this character, mesne profits are not recoverable in a suit for partition, and the partition must be made of property as it exists at the time when partition was demanded (c).

The above rule does not mean that the parties are bound to accept the statement of the Karta as to what the family properties are. An inquiry in that behalf would be directed by the Court in a manner usually adopted in such cases. In what manner this inquiry should be held would depend on the facts and circumstances of the case (*c*1).

---

(w) Mussammat Bholi Bai v. Dwarka Das (1924) 5 Lah. 375, 84 I.C. 168, ('25) A.L. 32; Rajagopalan v. Venkatarama, 51 C.W.N. 829 (P.C.).

(x) Abhaychandra v. Pyari Mohan (1870) 5 Beng. L.R. 347, 349.

(y) Shridhar v. Martand (1954) Nag. 479, ('54) A.N. 361.

(z) Krishna v. Subbanna (1884) 7 Mad. 564; Venkata v. Narayya (1879) 2 Mad. 128, 136-137, 7 I.A. 38, 51; Venkata v. The Court of Wards (1882) 5 Mad. 236, 9 I.A. 125. See Code of Civil Procedure, s. 2(12) and O. 20, r. 12.

(a) Bhivrav v. Sitaram (1895) 19 Bom. 532.

(b) Shankar v. Hardeo (1889) 16 Cal. 397, 16 I.A. 71.

(c) Pirthi Pal v. Jowahir Singh (1887) 14 Cal. 493, 14 I.A. 37; Lakshman v. Ramchandra (1876) 1 Bom. 561; Konerrav v. Gurrav (1881) 5 Bom. 589; Jugmohandas v. Mangaldas (1886) 10 Bom. 528, 561; Narayan v. Nathaji (1904) 28 Bom. 201, 208; Parmeshwar v. Gobind (1916) 43 Cal. 459, 33 I.C. 190, ('16) A.C. 500; Tammireddi v. Gangireddi (1922) 45 Mad. 281, 70 I.C. 337, ('22) A.M. 236. Also see Laxman v. Bayabai (1955) Nag. 656, ('56) A.N. 241.

(*c*1) Narayanswami v. Ramkrishna ('65) A.SC. 289.

One member is not in general entitled on partition to interest on money collected but not invested by another. Where one member had to pay more income-tax than was really due on behalf of the family by reason of his negligence he is not entitled to a credit for the excess amount (d).

"Money laid out by one member of the family upon the improvement or repair of the property, or for any other object of common benefit, would constitute a debt to him from the rest of the family only if the money which he had expended were advanced out of his separate property, without an intention of making a present of it to the family. He would then be entitled to reimbursement for his outlay as well on partition as before it" (e). This statement of the law is unexceptionable. It must, however, be taken with the corollary that where a manager sues for partition, after his right to contribution in respect of certain money expended by him on account of the joint family is barred by Art. 107 of the Limitation Act, he is not entitled to set off this amount in adjustment of equities between the parties (f).

Interest on mesne profits.—As to interest on mesne profits, see the undermentioned case (g).

II. PERSONS ENTITLED TO A SHARE ON PARTITION

306. Persons entitled to a share.—Every coparcener is entitled to a share upon partition (h). But every coparcener has not an unqualified right to enforce or sue for a partition [see §§ 307-308].

Also see Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, § 35 supra, for the rights of a widow, a predeceased son's widow and the widow of a predeceased son of a coparcener. Reference may also be made to sec. 6 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, and notes thereunder. The rules stated in §§ 307 to 318 below must now be read in the context of sec. 6 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, and particularly the proviso to that section.

307. Sons, grandsons and great-grandsons.—Every adult coparcener is entitled to demand and sue for partition of the coparcenary property at any time. In Bombay it has been held that without the assent of his father a son is not entitled to a partition if the father is joint with his own father, brothers, or other coparceners, though he may enforce a partition against the father if the father is separate from them (i). The other High Courts do not recognize any such exception (j).

It has been held in the undermentioned case (*j*1) decided under the Mayukha School of Mitakshara that assent of the father is not necessary to a suit, against the grandfather and his collaterals, for partition by metes and bounds where there had already been severance of status (*j*1).

Son born of a marriage void or voidable under the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955.—Reference may be made to Notes under sec. 6 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, and sec. 16 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, for the position and rights in a Hindu coparcenary of a son born of a marriage which is void or voidable under the latter enactment and who is to be deemed to be a legitimate child of the parents.

---

(d) Yasobadra Nainar v. Somanthabadran (1936) 59 Mad. 154, 160 I.C. 602, ('36) A.M. 12.

(e) Mayne, 11th ed., p. 517.

(f) Subramanian v. Kumarappa ('55) A.M. 144, (1955) 1 M.L.J. 355.

(g) Ramasamy v. Subramania (1923) 46 Mad. 47, 74 I.C. 804, ('23) A.M. 147.

(h) Sartaj Kuari v. Deoraj Kuari (1888) 10 All. 272, 287, 15 I.A. 51, 64.

(i) Apaji v. Ramchandra (1812) 16 Bom. 29 [Telang, J., dissenting]; Rai Bishen Chand v. Amaida Koer (1884) 6 All. 560, 574, 11 I.A. 164, 179; Jivabhai v. Vadilal (1905) 7 Bom. L.R. 232 [a case under the Mayukha].

(j) Jogul Kishore v. Shib Sahai (1883) 5 All. 430 [F.B.] [Stuart, C.J., dissenting]; Rameshwar v. Lachmi (1904) 31 Cal. 111, 128-129; Subba v. Ganasa (1895) 18 Mad. 179, 183; Digambar v. Dhanraj (1922) 1 Pat. 361, 67 I.C. 156, ('22) A.P. 96.

(*j*1) Jaswantlal v. Nichabhai ('64) A. Guj. 283.

Illustrations

(a) If a joint family consists of a father and sons, the sons can enforce a partition of the joint family property against the father (k). Similarly, if a joint family consists of a grandfather and grandsons, the grandsons can enforce a partition against the grandfather (l). Likewise, if a joint family consists of a great-grandfather and great-grandsons, the great-grandsons can enforce a partition against the great-grandfather (m). Thus far there is no difference of opinion between the various High Courts.

(b) A joint Hindu family consists of A, B and C, A being C's grandfather, and B being C's father. C sues A and B for a partition of the joint family property. Is C entitled to a partition? According to the Bombay High Court he is not, unless his father (B) consents to the partition. In the view taken by that Court the father obstructs the sons's right to a partition. According to the other High Courts, C, taking as he does a vested interest in the ancestral property by birth can compel a partition even during the lifetime of his father [B].

(c) A joint family consists of A, B and C, A being C's father and B being C's uncle. C sues A and B for partition. Is C entitled to a partition? According to the Bombay High Court, he is not, unless his father (A) consents to a partition. According to the other High Courts, he is.

The conflict of decisions referred to above has arisen from different readings of the same text of the Mitakshara; see Mitakshara, chapter I, section 5, verse 3.

In Sartaj v. Deoraj (n), their Lordships of the Privy Council said: "The property in the paternal or ancestral estate acquired by birth under the Mitakshara law is, in their Lordships' opinion, so connected with the right to a partition, that it does not exist where there is no right to it."

The Punjab.—See Hari Kishan v. Chandu Lal (1917) Punj. Rec. No. 105, p. 408, ('18) A.L. 291 [F.B.].

308. Minor coparceners.—(1) Where a suit is brought on behalf of a minor coparcener for partition, the Court should not pass a decree for partition, unless the partition is likely to be for the benefit of the minor by advancing his interests or protecting them from danger (o).

In Pedasubhayya v. Akkamma (*o*1) the Supreme Court pointed out that it is in the exercise of its jurisdiction over minors that the Court requires to be satisfied that the next friend of a minor has in instituting a suit for partition acted in his interest. It also pointed out that what brings about the severance in status is the institution of the suit by the next friend, the decree of the Court merely rendering it effective by deciding that what the next friend had done was for the benefit of the minor. In a recent case the Supreme Court has reiterated that view (*o*2). Reference may also be made to §§ 325 and 330 post.

Where an adult coparcener in possession of the family property is wasting the property, or sets up an exclusive title in himself, or otherwise denies the minor's rights, or declines to provide for the minor's maintenance, it is in the

---

(k) Suraj Bunsi Koer v. Sheo Persad (1880) 5 Cal. 148, 165, 6 I.A. 88, 100; Jugmohandas v. Mangaldas (1886) 10 Bom. 528; Kali Parshad v. Ram Charan (1876) 1 All. 159 [F.B.].

(l) Nagalinga v. Subbiramaniya (1862) 1 Mad. H.C. 77; Laljeet v. Rajcoomar (1874) 12 Beng. L.R. 373.

(m) West and Buhler, 4th ed., p. 622.

(n) (1888) 10 All. 272, 287, 15 I.A. 51, 64.

(o) Mahadev v. Lakshman (1895) 19 Bom. 99 [maintenance refused]; Bholanath v. Ghasi Ram (1907) 29 All. 373 [suit against father]; Thangam v. Suppa (1889) 12 Mad. 401; Kamakshi v. Chidambara (1866) 3 Mad. H.C. 94; Damoodur v. Senabutty (1882) 8 Cal. 537; Nagappa v. Subramanian (1946) Mad. 103; Chinna Venkata v. Venkata Rama ('57) A. Andh. Pra. 93.

(*o*1) ('58) S.C. 1042.

(*o*2) Venkata Reddi v. Lakshmama (1963) A.S.C. 1601, (1964) 1 S.C.J. 45. Also see Nabisha Begum v. Alumiya Thaver ('66) A.M. 111.

minor's interest that the family property should be partitioned, and the minor's share set apart and secured for him (o). But if there be nothing to show that the partition would be for the benefit of the minor, the Court should refuse to direct partition (p).

The reason is that generally speaking "the family estate is better managed and yields a greater ratio of profit in union than when split up and distributed among the several coparceners;" moreover the minor would as the result of a partition lose the benefit of survivorship which he might obtain if the family continued joint (q). The Privy Council has held that the fact that there had been increased estrangement between the father and the two minor sons by his first wife, on whose behalf a suit for partition was brought, and the fact that two sons were born to the second wife of the father were not good grounds for holding that the suit for partition was in the interests of the minor (r).

(2) But though a suit cannot be brought for partition on behalf of a minor except in the cases mentioned above, the minority of a coparcener is no bar to a partition between the coparceners. A partition by agreement, though entered into during the minority of a coparcener, is binding on the minor, unless it is unfair or prejudicial to his interests. If the partition is unfair or prejudicial to the minor's interests, the minor may, on attaining majority, have it set aside by proper proceedings so far as regards himself. He may also, on attaining majority, enforce the agreement by suit, and it is no answer to the suit that he was not a party to the agreement (s). Where the family consists of an adult and a minor, the adult coparcener can put an end to the joint status by his conduct and declaration (t).

Institution of a suit for partition by minor, whether operates as a partition.—See § 325 (I) (ii). As to minor attaining majority pending such suit see the undermentioned cases (u).

309. Son begotten at time of partition, but born after partition.—A son, who was in his mother's womb at the time of partition, is entitled to a share though born after partition, as if he was in existence at the time of partition. If no share is reserved for him at the time of partition, he is entitled to have the partition re-opened and share allotted to him (w).

Illustrations

(a) A and his two sons B and C are members of a joint Hindu family. The father and sons propose to divide the joint family property. A's wife, X, is pregnant at the time, and the pregnancy is known to the family. In such a case, the property should be divided into five parts, of which A, B, C and X will each take one part, and the fifth part should be set apart to abide the event so that if a son is born, it may be allotted to him, and if a daughter is born, it may be divided again between A, B, C and X.

---

(o) See same citation on p. 398.

(p) Bachoo v. Mankorebai (1905) 29 Bom. 51-60, affirmed on appeal (1907) 31 Bom. 373, 379, 34 I.A. 107 [suit by a posthumous son against an adopted son—partition refused]; C. Sriramamurthi v. Official Receiver ('57) A. Andh. Pra. 692.

(q) (1886) 3 Mad. H.C. 94, 96, 98, supra.

(r) Appalaswami v. Suryanarayana Murti (1948) Mad. 440 (P.C.).

(s) Balkishen Das v. Ram Narain (1903) 30 Cal. 738, 30 I.A. 139 [agreement held to be fair]; Chanvirappa v. Danava (1895) 19 Bom. 593 [ditto]; Awadh v. Sita Ram (1907) 29 All. 37 [agreement enforced at suit of minor]; Lal Bahadur v. Sispal (1892) 14 All. 498 [where the full share of the minor was not assigned to him]; Krishna Bai v. Khangowda (1894) 18 Bom. 197 [where no share was reserved for the minor at all]; Hiralal v. Fulchand ('56) A. Sau. 89; Chanam v. Narayan ('57) A. Hyd. 29.

(t) Dnyaneshwar Vishnu v. Anant Vasudeo (1936) 60 Bom. 736, 38 Bom. L.R. 579, 164 H.C. 632, ('36) A.B. 290; Mogalappa v. Vithoba ('55) A. Hyd. 21 (F.B.). [All members were minors].

(u) Rukhmabai v. Ramratan (1951) Nag. 367, ('51) A.N. 350; Rama Rao v. Venkata ('37) A.M. 274, 276.

(w) Yekeyamian v. Agniswarian (1870) 4 Mad. H.C. 307; Kalidas v. Krishan (1869) 2 Beng. L.R. [F.B.] 103, 118-121; Hanmant v. Bhimacharya (1888) 12 Bom. 105, 108-109; Mandliprasad v. Ramcharanlal (1947) Nagpur 848; Jagat Krishna v. Ajit Kumar ('64) A. Orissa 75.

(b) A and his son B are members of a joint family. The father and son divide the joint property between themselves, each taking one-half. Five months after the partition a son C is born to A. The partition should be re-opened and the property should be divided into three parts, each member taking one-third.

After-born sons.—A son born after partition may have been begotten either at the time of partition or subsequent to the partition. The present section deals with the former case; the next section deals with the latter case. As to the rights of a son in his mother's womb see notes to § 270 above.

310. Son begotten as well as born after partition.—A father separating from his sons may or may not reserve to himself a share on partition. The rights of a son born as well as begotten after partition are different according as the father has or has not reserved a share to himself.

(1) Where the father has reserved a share to himself, a son who is begotten as well as born after partition is not entitled to have the partition re-opened; but in lieu thereof he is entitled, after the father's death to inherit not only the share allotted to the father on partition, but the whole of the separate property of the father, whether acquired by him before or after partition, to the entire exclusion of the separated sons (x).

Thus if A has three sons B, C and D, and he separates from them all, reserving one-fourth share to himself, and a son F is born to A three years after the partition, F will take on A's death the one-fourth share allotted to A at the partition and also the whole of A's separate property to the entire exclusion of B, C and D. If A has dissipated his share, and leaves no property, F takes nothing (y). Next suppose, that A does not separate from all the three sons, but separates from B alone and remains joint with C and D, and F is subsequently born to A. In this case C, D and F will, on A's death, all take in equal shares the portion of the joint property allotted to A, C and D at the partition, and also A's separate property; that is to say, the separate property of A and the portion of the joint family property allotted to A, C and D at the partition will be divided equally among C, D and the after-born son F (z). The same principle applies if A separates from B and C, and remains joint with D, and F is subsequently born to A.

But now see sec. 8 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956. Section 8 has now abolished distinction between a divided son and an undivided son in the matter of inheritance of the father's separate property. See commentary on sec. 8 of the Hindu Succession Act.

The rule of Hindu law that where upon a partition, a share has been allotted to the father, a son begotten or born afterwards is not entitled to re-open the partition, applies even when no actual division of the property has taken place and severance of joint status has been effected only by institution of a suit for partition (a).

(2) Where the father has not reserved a share to himself on a partition with his sons, a son who is born as well as begotten after the partition is entitled to have the partition reopened and to have a share allotted to him not only in the property as it stood at the time of the original partition, but in the accumulations made with the help of that property (b).

Where at a partition between a father, his son by the first wife and two sons by the second wife a small item was allowed to the father for maintenance, with a clause that an after-born son should be provided out of the share allotted to his mother and full brothers, it was held that the right of the after-born son to re-open the partition was not affected by the clause (c).

---

(x) Kalidas v. Krishan (1869) 2 Beng. L.R.F.B. 103, 118-121; Nawal Singh v. Bhagwan Singh (1882) 4 All. 427.

(y) Shivajirao v. Vasantrao (1909) 13 Bom. 267, 272, 2 I.C. 294; Anjaneyulu v. Ramayya ('65) A.AP. 177 (F.B.).

(z) Ganpat v. Gopalrao (1899) 23 Bom. 636. See this case criticised in Ghose's Hindu Law, 3rd ed., pp. 572-573. See also Fakirappa v. Yellappa (1898) 22 Bom. 101; Nana v. Ramchandra (1909) 32 Mad. 377, 2 I.C. 519.

(a) Bhagwat Ram v. Ramji Ram (1947) 51 C.W.N. 909 (P.C.). See Venkata Reddi v. Sidda Reddi (1947) Mad. 603.

(b) Chengama v. Munisami (1897) 20 Mad. 75.

(c) Athilinga Gounder v. Ramaswami Goundar (1945) Mad. 297.

311. Adopted son.—As to the share of an adopted son in a partition:—

(1) between him and after-born natural sons of his adoptive father, see § 497;

(2) between him and other coparceners, see § 499(2).

Reference may also be made to § 336 for the right of a son validly adopted by the widow of a deceased coparcener to re-open a partition.

312. Illegitimate son.—(1) An illegitimate son of a Hindu may be a son by concubine who is a dasi, or he may be a son by a concubine who is not a dasi. A dasi is a concubine who is in the exclusive and continuous keeping of a Hindu. An illegitimate son of a Hindu by a dasi is called dasiputra (d). We are here concerned only with a dasiputra.

(1a) Reference may be made to Notes under section 6 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, and section 16 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, for the position and rights in a Hindu coparcenary of a son born of a marriage which is void or voidable under the latter enactment and who is to be deemed to be a legitimate child of the parents.

(2) Illegitimate sons of the three regenerate classes [§ 1] are not entitled to inheritance or to any share on partition; they are entitled to maintenance only (e). This proposition is founded on the Mitakshara, ch. I, s. 12, para 3.

(3) Illegitimate sons of Sudras are entitled to certain rights of inheritance and partition. The text of the Mitakshara bearing on the subject is as follows:

> "The son begotten by a Sudra of a female slave [dasiputra] obtains a share by the father's choice or at his pleasure. But after [the demise of] the father, if there be sons of a wedded wife, let these brothers allow the son of the female slave to participate for half a share; that is let them give him half [as much as is the amount of one brother's] allotment": Mitakshara, chap. i, sec. 12, para. 2.

A Sudra father may be joint with his collaterals or he may be separate from them. The above text refers to the estate of a separated householder (f).

The following propositions are well established:—

(1) The illegitimate son of a Sudra does not acquire by birth any interest in his father's estate. He cannot therefore enforce a partition against his father in his life-time (g). But the father may, in his life-time, give him a share of his property, even a share equal to that of a legitimate son (h). The gift by the father of some property, describing it as his self-acquired property, for maintenance, does not separate the illegitimate sons in respect of the joint family property (i).

---

(d) Rahi v. Govind (1876) 1 Bom. 97, 110; Sadu v. Baiza (1880) 4 Bom. 37 [F.B.]; Krishnayya v. Muttusami (1884) 7 Mad. 407, 412; Brindavana v. Radhamani (1889) 12 Mad. 72, 86; Soundararajan v. Arunachalam (1916) 39 Mad. 136, 33 I.C. 858, ('16) A.M. 1170; Sarasuti v. Mannu (1879) 2 All. 134; Hargobind v. Dharam Singh (1884) 6 All. 329; Rajani Nath Das v. Nitai Chandra Dey (1921) 48 Cal. 643, 63 I.C. 50, ('21) A.C. 820 [F.B.].

(e) Roshan Singh v. Balwant Singh (1900) 22 All. 191, 27 I.A. 51; Chuoturya v. Sahub Purhulad (1857) 7 M.I.A. 18.

(f) Ranoji v. Kandoji (1885) 8 Mad. 557, 561.

(g) Raja Jogendra v. Nityanand (1891) 18 Cal. 151, 155, 17 I.A. 128, (1880) 4 Bom. 37, 44-45, supra.

(h) Karuppanna v. Bulokam (1900) 23 Mad. 16; Packiriswamy v. Doraswamy (1931) 9 Rang. 266, 132 I.C. 817, ('31) A.R. 216.

(i) Sakharam Satu v. Shamrao (1932) 34 Bom. L.R. 191, 137 I.C. 572, ('32) A.B. 234.

(2) On the father's death, however, he succeeds to his estate as a coparcener with the legitimate son of his father, with a right of survivorship, and he is entitled to enforce a partition against the legitimate son (j). In Gur Narain Das v. Gur Tahal Das (k) the Supreme Court held that though an illegitimate son of a Sudra cannot enforce partition during his father's lifetime, he can enforce partition after his father's death if the father was separate from his collaterals and has left separate property and a legitimate son. On a partition between an illegitimate and a legitimate son, the illegitimate son takes only one-half of what he would have taken if he were legitimate, that is, the illegitimate son takes one-fourth, and the legitimate son takes three-fourth (l). If either of them dies before partition, the survivor takes the whole estate (m).

Where a legitimate son has obtained property by way of partition of the joint family property, which he held along with his collaterals, such property would be ancestral property in his hands, obtained by virtue of the right which he possessed to represent his father. Such property would be held by him in coparcenary with his illegitimate half brother, notwithstanding the fact that the father died undivided with his brothers. A claim to a share in such property is within the ambit of the rights given to the illegitimate son under the texts (*m*1).

(3) If the father was joint at his death with his collaterals, e.g., his brothers or their sons, or his uncles or his sons, the illegitimate son is not entitled to demand a partition of the joint family property, but he is entitled as a member of the family to maintenance out of such property, provided his father left no separate estate (n).

See notes to § 43, nos. 1-3, "Illegitimate sons."

313. Absent coparcener.—An absent coparcener stands on the same footing as a minor, and his right to receive a share extends to his descendants (o).

The right of the descendants, however, would be subject to the law of limitation; see the Indian Limitation Act, 1963, Schedule Arts. 65 and 110.

314. Purchaser.—A purchaser of the undivided interest of a coparcener at a sale in execution of a decree can demand partition according to all schools. A purchaser of the interest of a coparcener by private contract can claim partition in Bombay, Madras and Madhya Pradesh, but not in Bengal or Uttar Pradesh. The reason is that according to the Mitakshara law as interpreted in Bengal and Uttar Pradesh, a coparcener cannot sell his interest in the coparcenary [§§ 260 and 261].

A gift or devise by a coparcener of his undivided interest is void according to the Mitakshara law as applied in all the States [§258]. Therefore, a donee or a devisee of

---

(f) Shamrao v. Mannabai (1948) Nag. 678.

(k) (1952) S.C.R. 869, ('52) A.S.C. 225.

(l) Kamulammal v. Visvanathaswami (1923) 50 I.A. 32, 46 Mad. 167, 71 I.C. 643, ('23) A.P.C. 8; Uderam v. Thaggu (1949) Nag. 248; Gur Narain Das v. Gur Tahal Das (1952) S.C.R. 869, 875, ('52) A.S.C. 225.

(m) Raja Jogendra v. Nityanand (1891) 18 Cal. 151, 17 I.A. 128.

(*m*1) Dorai Babu v. Gopalakrishna ('60) A.M. 501.

(n) Vellaiyappa Chetty v. Natarajan (1932) 55 Mad. 1, 53 I.A. 402, 134 I.C. 1084, ('31) A.P.C. 294; Ranoji v. Kandoji (1885) 8 Mad. 557; Sadu v. Baiza (1880) 4 Bom. 37, 44-45 [F.B.]; Thangam v. Suppa (1889) 12 Mad. 401; Karuppa v. Kumarasami (1902) 25 Mad. 429; Gopalasami v. Arunachelam (1904) 27 Mad. 32; Parvathi v. Thirumalai (1887) 10 Mad. 334; Krishna Kumar v. Sheo Prasad (1947) Nag. 162.

(o) Strange's Hindu Law, vol. i, p. 206; vol. ii p. 341.

an undivided interest cannot sue for partition (p). But now see secs. 30 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1965, which permits devise of a coparcenary interest by a coparcener.

315. Wife.—(1) A wife cannot herself demand a partition (q), but if a partition does take place between her husband and his sons, she is entitled to receive a share equal to that of a son and to hold and enjoy that share separately even from her husband (r). Where at a partition between a father and his three sons, the wife was not allotted a share, it was held that she was entitled to reopen the partition, there being no waiver merely by her not asking for a share but that in the partition the value of the ornaments taken by her must be taken into account (s).

Where a son institutes a suit for the partition of joint family property impleading his mother and other members of the family as defendants and a preliminary decree is passed, the mother does not become owner of the share allotted to her until the preliminary decree is carried out and there is a division by metes and bounds. Therefore a mortgagee suing on a mortgage before the property is actually divided can obtain a valid mortgage decree without impleading the mother (t). This does not mean that the sons can defeat the right of the mother merely by omission to apportion her a share and place her in its possession. So where the sons while partitioning the property did not allot any share to the mother and the mother did not give her consent to the same it was held that the share of the mother in the property could not be attached in execution of a decree against the sons (*t*1).

In a suit by a son for partition and separate possession of his share after setting aside an alienation of the joint family property made by his father, the mother who is a party is entitled to a share if the Court comes to the conclusion that the alienation was not binding on the family. The alienation can be upheld only to the extent that it affects the father's interest (u).

(2) The expression "wife" in relation to "sons" includes their step-mother (v).

(3) If the wife has stridhana given to her by her husband or father-in-law, its value should be deducted from her share (w).

(4) The above rules also apply when a father himself makes a partition of ancestral property among his sons [§ 325].

Illustrations

(a) A has two wives B and C, a son D by B, and four sons by C. D sues his father A for partition. Each of these eight persons is entitled to a one-eighth share including B and C: Dular Koeri v. Dwarkanath (1905) 32 Cal. 234. [See as to mother, § 316, below.]

(b) A has a wife B, two sons by B, and a son C by a predeceased wife. C sues his father A for partition. Each of these five persons is entitled to a one-fifth share including B: Jairam v. Nathu (1907) 31 Bom. 54.

Madras State.—In Southern India the practice of allotting shares upon partition to females has long since become obsolete (x).

---

(p) Baba v. Timma (1884) 7 Mad. 357 [F.B.].

(q) Punna Bibee v. Radha Kissen (1904) 31 Cal. 476.

(r) Dular Koeri v. Dwarkanath (1905) 32 Cal. 234 [suit for partition by son against father]; Jairam v. Nathu (1906) 31 Bom. 54 [ditto]; Sunarun v. Chunder Mun (1882) 8 Cal. 17; Partap Singh v. Dalip Singh (1930) 52 All. 396, 125 I.C. 762, ('30) A.A. 537; Dhanabati Bibi v. Pratapmull Agarwalla (1934) 61 Cal. 1056, 154 I.C. 655, ('35) A.C. 131; Jagat Krishna v. Ajit Kumar ('64) A. Orissa 73.

(s) Radhabai v. Pandharinath (1942) Nag. 534, 194 I.C. 724, ('41) A.N. 135.

(t) Pratapmull Agarwalla v. Dhanabati Bibi (1936) 63 I.A. 33, 63 Cal. 691, 38 Bom. L.R. 323, 159 I.C. 1080, ('36) A.P.C. 20; Bhiwra v. Renuka ('52) A.N. 215.

(*t*1) Laltabai v. Krishnarao ('59) A.M.P. 100.

(u) Parappa v. Mallappa ('56) A.B. 332 (F.B.).

(v) (1907) 31 Bom. 54 [Mayukha], supra; Hosbanna v. Devanna (1924) 48 Bom. 468, 80 I.C. 468, ('24) A.B. 444 [Mitakshara].

(w) (1907) 31 Bom. 54, supra.

(x) Subramanian v. Arunachelam (1905) 28 Mad. 1, 8.

Putrabhaga.—When the division is by number of sons it is called putrabhaga; when the division is according to wives, it is known as patnibhaga. Putrabhaga is now the recognized mode of division. But the custom of patnibhaga prevails in some places and in some families especially among Sudras (y).

Whether a share allotted to a wife on partition is her stridhana? The share allotted to a wife (which expression includes step-mother) on partition is not her stridhana unless it be shown that it was given to her absolutely [§ 128].

The present section deals with the rights of a female who occupies the position of a wife. The next two paragraphs deal with the rights of the same female after her husband's death, that is, a female who has become a widow.

315A. Widow.—See Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, § 35 supra for the rights of a widow, a predeceased son's widow and the widow of a predeceased son of a predeceased son of a coparcener.

316. Widow-mother.—(1) A mother cannot compel a partition so long as the sons remain united. But if a partition takes place between the sons, she is entitled to a share equal to that of a son in the coparcenary property (z). She is also entitled to a similar share on a partition between the sons and the purchaser of the interest of one or more of them (a). Where a son sued for partition but died during the pendency of the suit and the mother was brought in as the legal representative she was held entitled only to his share and not to a mother's share (b).

(2) If the mother has received stridhana from her husband or father-in-law, its value should be deducted from her share (c).

(3) The term "mother" in this section includes step-mother (d).

(4) On a partition between sons by different mothers when more than one mother is alive, the rule is first to divide the property into as many shares as there are sons, and then to allot to each surviving mother a share equal to that of each of her sons in the aggregate portion allotted to them (e).

(5) See Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, § 35 supra.

Illustrations

(a) A dies leaving a widow B, three sons by B, and a son X by a predeceased wife. X sues his step-mother B and his three half-brothers for a partition. The property will be divided into 5 parts, each of the 5 persons above-named including B taking one-fifth: Damodardas v. Uttamram (1893) 17 Bom. 271.

(b) A dies leaving two widows, B and C, two sons by B, and three sons by C. On a partition between the sons of B and C, the mode of division is first to divide the pro-

---

(y) Palaniappa v. Alayyan (1921) 48 I.A. 539, 44 Mad. 740, 64 I.C. 439, ('22) A.P.C. 228. Also see Umaraparvathy v. Bhagwathy Amma ('72) A.M. 151.

(z) Damoodur v. Senabutty (1882) 8 Cal. 537; Damodardas v. Uttamram (1893) 17 Bom. 271; Chowdhry Ganesh Dutt v. Jewach (1904) 31 Cal. 262, 271, 31 I.A. 10, 15; Isree Pershad v. Nasib Koer (1884) 10 Cal. 1017 [alleged waiver of right to partition]; Gopal Narain v. Goenka ('71) A. Delhi 61; Saraswathi Ammal v. Anantha ('66) A. Kerala 66.

(a) Blivso v. Dina Nath (1881) 3 All. 88; Amrita Lall v. Manick Lal (1900) 27 Cal. 551; Jogendra v. Fulkumari (1900) 27 Cal. 77 [judgment rested on the Dayabhaga].

(b) Parbatidevi v. Bansidhar (1943) All. 810, ('43) A.A. 350.

(c) Kishori v. Moni Mohun (1886) 12 Cal. 165; Jadoo Nath v. Brojonath (1874) 12 Beng. L.R. 385; Piara Lal v. Hirdey Nath ('53) A.J. & K. 9; Purna Chandra v. Chandramani Debya ('66) A. Orissa 98.

(d) Damoodur v. Senabutty (1882) 8 Cal. 537; Damodardas v. Uttamram (1893) 17 Bom. 271, 286-287; Har Narain v. Bishambhar (1916) 38 All. 83, 31 I.C. 907, ('15) A.A. 340; Tegh Indar v. Harnam (1925) 6 Lah. 457, 90 I.C. 1035, ('25) A.L. 568; Saheb Rai v. Shafiq Ahmad (1927) 31 C.W.N. 972, 101 I.C. 426, ('27) A.P.C. 101.

(e) Kristo Bhabiney v. Ashutosh (1886) 13 Cal. 39.

perty into 5 shares corresponding to the number of sons. The two sons of B will share 2/5 equally with their mother B, each taking 1/3 of 2/5, i.e. 2/15. The three sons of C will share 3/5 equally with their mother C, each taking 1/4 of 3/5, i.e., 3/20. Thus B will take 2/15, and C will take 3/20.

(c) A dies leaving two widows B and C, and two sons D and E by B. C has no son. D sues E, B and C for partition. The property will be divided into 4 parts, there being 2 widows and 2 sons, and each widow will take one-fourth and each son also will take one-fourth. The fact that C has no son does not affect her right to a share: See Damoodar v. Senabutty (1882) 8 Cal. 537.

Partition between paternal uncle and nephew.—The mother of the uncle who is the grandmother of the nephew as well as the mother of the nephew are entitled to a share each. The word 'mother' in Yajnavalkya's text includes grandmother and stepmother (f).

Partition between legitimate and illegitimate sons of a Sudra.—Among Sudras, a mother is entitled to a share on a partition between her sons and the illegitimate sons of her husband (g).

Madras State.—In Madras a mother is not entitled to a share. She is entitled only to a provision for her maintenance which must not in any case exceed the share of a son (h): Smriti Chandrika, chap. iv, paras. 12-17. See also notes to § 315.

Whether the share allotted to a mother on partition is her stridhana.—See § 128 above.

Omission to reserve a share for the mother.—The omission to reserve a share for the mother does not render the partition invalid (i).

Sale of one of the properties before decree in a partition suit.—See § 353(7).

317. Grandmother.—(1) A paternal grandmother (father's mother) cannot herself demand a partition, but when a partition takes place between her son's sons, her own sons being dead, she is entitled to a share equal to that of a son's son (j). She is similarly entitled to a share when a partition takes place between her son and the sons of a deceased son (k). But when partition takes place between her son and his sons, it has been held by the High Courts of Allahabad (l) and Bombay (m) that she is not so entitled; and by the High Courts of Calcutta (n) and Patna (o) that she is; the last decision proceeds on a text of Vyasa which allows her a share on such a partition. But now see § 35 and notes to §§ 43 and 316.

(2) The expression "grandmother" in this section includes step-grandmother (p).

(3) See Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, § 35 supra.

Illustration

A has a son B, a mother M, and two wives W and W1. B sues A for partition. Under the Dayabhaga law, each of these five persons would be entitled to 1/5. Under the Mitakshara law, M would not be entitled to a share and each of the other persons would take 1/4.

---

(f) Rambhau v. Balu (1946) Nag. 732, ('46) A.N. 206.

(g) Manchharam v. Dattu (1920) 44 Bom. 166, 54 I.C. 110, ('20) A.B. 241.

(h) Venkatammal v. Andyappa (1883) 6 Mad. 130; Ramlu v. Vithal (1947) Nag. 267.

(i) Chowdhry Ganesh Dutt v. Jewach (1904) 31 Cal. 262, 271, 31 I.A. 10, 15.

(j) Kanhaiya Lal v. Gaura (1925) 47 All. 127, 83 I.C. 47, ('25) A.A. 19; Vithal v. Prahlad (1915) 39 Bom. 373, 28 I.C. 967, ('15) A.B. 35.

(k) Babuna v. Jagat Narain (1928) 50 All. 532, 109 I.C. 61, ('28) A.A. 330.

(l) Sheo Narain v. Janki Prasad (1912) 34 All. 505, 16 I.C. 88.

(m) Jamnabai v. Vasudeo (1930) 54 Bom. 417, 124 I.C. 793, ('30) A.B. 302; Jotiram Ekoba v. Ramchandra Trimbak (1941) Bom. 638, 197 I.C. 788, ('41) A.B. 382.

(n) Badri Roy v. Bhugwat (1882) 8 Cal. 649.

(o) Krishna Lal v. Nandeshwar (1919) 4 Pat. L.J. 38, 42-44, 44 I.C. 146, ('18) A.P. 91.

(p) Vithal v. Prahlad (1915) 39 Bom. 373, 28 I.C. 967, ('15) A.B. 35; Sriram v. Haricharan (1930) 9 Pat. 338, 125 I.C. 518, ('30) A.P. 315,

Whether the share allotted to a grandmother on partition is her stridhana?—See § 128 above.

No female except those mentioned in §§ 315 to 317 is entitled to a share on partition. Thus daughter, sisters, etc., are not entitled to a share on partition. But on a partition provision must be made for their maintenance and marriage expenses: See § 304.

318. Disqualified coparceners.—Persons who by Hindu law are disqualified by physical infirmity from inheriting are also disentitled to a share on partition. This subject is dealt with in §§ 106 to 109.

III. RESTRAINT AGAINST PARTITIONS

319. Agreement not to partition.—It has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta (q), Allahabad (r) and Madras (s), that an agreement between coparceners not to partition coparcenary property binds the actual parties thereto, but it does not bind their assigns, unless there be a stipulation not to assign. A compromise followed by a decree providing that certain properties should be divided and certain other items should be kept joint for ever, was held to be enforceable in law (t). On the other hand, it has been held by the High Court of Bombay that such an agreement does not bind even the parties thereto, so that any party may, notwithstanding the agreement, sue the other parties for a partition (u).

Illustration

Calcutta decisions.—A and B, two Hindu brothers, agree not to partition the coparcenary property. After the date of the agreement, A sells his interest in the joint property to P. The agreement is not binding upon P, there being no stipulation not to assign. P may, therefore, sue B for partition.

See the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, secs. 10-11.

It is open to Hindu brothers to divide the family property and to agree that upon the death of any one of them without male issue his share shall pass to the surviving brothers. Such an agreement is not in contravention of the provisions of Hindu Law (v). But it is not open to the contracting parties to lay down a rule of inheritance for the property in the hands of the last survivor in derogation from the ordinary rules of Hindu law (w).

An agreement by a coparcener, that he would forego his right to claim partition on receipt of certain properties for his maintenance is a good and binding agreement, and a claim for partition in contravention of such agreement would not be entertained (x).

320. Direction in a will prohibiting partition.—A direction in a will prohibiting a partition, or postponing a partition for an indefinite period, is invalid (y).

See the Indian Succession Act, 1925, ss. 77 and 163.

---

(q) Anand Chandra v. Pran Kisto (1869) 3 Beng. L.R.O.C. 14; Anath Nath v. Mackintosh (1871) 8 Beng. L.R. 60; Rajender v. Sham Chund (1881) 6 Cal. 106; Srimohan v. Macgregor (1901) 28 Cal. 769, 786; Krishendra v. Debendra (1908) 12 C.W.N. 793.

(r) Rup Singh v. Bhubhuti (1920) 42 All. 30, 58 I.C. 632, ('20) A.A. 341.

(s) Arumugha Chetty v. Ranganathan Chetty (1934) 57 Mad. 405, 146 I.C. 1057, ('33) A.M. 847.

(t) Jyotish Chandra Narayan v. Rathika Chandra Narayan (1933) 60 Cal. 1078, 149 I.C. 150, ('33) A.C. 892.

(u) Ramlinga v. Virupakshi (1883) 7 Bom. 538.

(v) Kanti v. Al-i-Nabi (1911) 33 All. 414, 9 I.C. 935; Ram Nirunjun v. Prayag Singh (1882) 8 Cal. 138.

(w) Bageshar Rai v. Mahadevi (1924) 46 All. 525, 79 I.C. 514, ('24) A.A. 461.

(x) Sobhag Singh v. Pirthe Singh ('51) A.N. 259.

(y) Mokoondo v. Gonesh Chunder (1876) 1 Cal. 104; Raikishori v. Debendranath (1888) 15 Cal. 409, 15 I.A. 37; Poorendra Nath v. Hemangini (1909) 36 Cal. 75, at p. 77, 1 I.C. 523.

IV. ALLOTMENT OF SHARES

321. Shares on partition.—On a partition between the members of a joint family, shares are allotted according to the following rules:—

(1) On a partition between a father and his sons each son takes a share equal to that of the father. Thus if a joint family consists of a father and three sons, the property will be divided into four parts, each of the four members taking one-fourth.

(2) Where a joint family consists of brothers, they take equal shares on a partition.

Jyeshtabhagam as understood in ancient Hindu law has become obsolete and the Court will not enforce any claim by the eldest member or manager to a larger share of the joint family property than that allotted to the other coparceners (yy) nor, according to the High Court of Mysore, will the Court confirm any such unequal allotment in every such case simply on the ground that the arrangement had been acted upon (*y*1).

(3) Each branch takes per stirpes (that is, according to the stock) as regards every other branch, but the members of each branch take per capita as regards each other. This rule applies equally whether the sons are all by the same wife or by different wives [ills. (a) and (b)].

It has been laid down by the High Court of Madras following the authority of the Smriti Chandrika, that rule 3 applies to cases in which all the coparceners desire partition at the same time. In cases in which only some of the members of a joint family separate from it at one time and others on a subsequent occasion, regard should be had to the shares allotted at the first partition in computing the shares to be allotted at the second partition (z). On the other hand, it has been laid down by the High Court of Bombay, following the authority of the Vyavahara Mayukha, that in allotting shares at the second partition, regard is to be had to the state of the family at the time of the second partition, and not to the state of the family at the first partition (a). The ordinary rule is that partition should be made rebus sic stantibus as on the date of the suit, i.e. according to the condition of the family as on the date of the suit. According to the Madras High Court, this rule is to be applied at the first partition only and not at the second partition. According to the Bombay High Court, the rule is to be applied at both partitions [see ills (c) and (d)].

Variation in shares after preliminary decree.—Though a suit is generally to be tried in all its stages on the cause of action as it existed at the date of commencement, notice may be taken of events which have happened since the institution of the suit and relief afforded to the parties on the basis of the altered conditions. This may in a proper case be done even after a preliminary decree for partition has been passed. Thus for instance where after the preliminary decree defendant No. 1, the father died and in the course of the darkhast, the plaintiff applied to have the decree amended and to have awarded to him his augmented share it was held that the original decree should be suitably amended (b).

(4) On the death of a coparcener leaving male issue, his right to a share on partition is represented by his male issue, that is it passes to his male issue, provided such issue be within the limits of the coparcenary. This rule was modified by the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937. It must now be read in the context of section 6 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, and particularly the proviso to that section. Reference may be made to the Notes

---

(yy) Siromani v. Hemkumar ('68) A.SC. 1299.

(*y*1) Veerabhadrappa v. Lingappa ('63) A. Mysore 5. Also see Panchanana v. Balursingh ('72) A. Orissa 85.

(z) Manjanatha v. Narayana (1882) 5 Mad. 362; Narayana v. Shankar (1930) 53 Mad. 1, 121 I.C. 1, ('29) A.M. 865 [F.B.].

(a) Pranjivandas v. Ichharam (1915) 39 Bom. 734, 30 I.C. 918, ('15) A.B. 255.

(b) Parashuram v. Hirabai ('57) A.B. 59; Sham Singh v. Lal Singh ('56) A. Pepsu 97, under that section post. The illustrations below must be read in the light of what is stated above.

Illustrations

(a) A dies leaving a son B, two grandsons $C^1$ and $C^2$, three great-grandsons $F^1$, $F^2$ and $F^3$ and one great-great-grandson K.

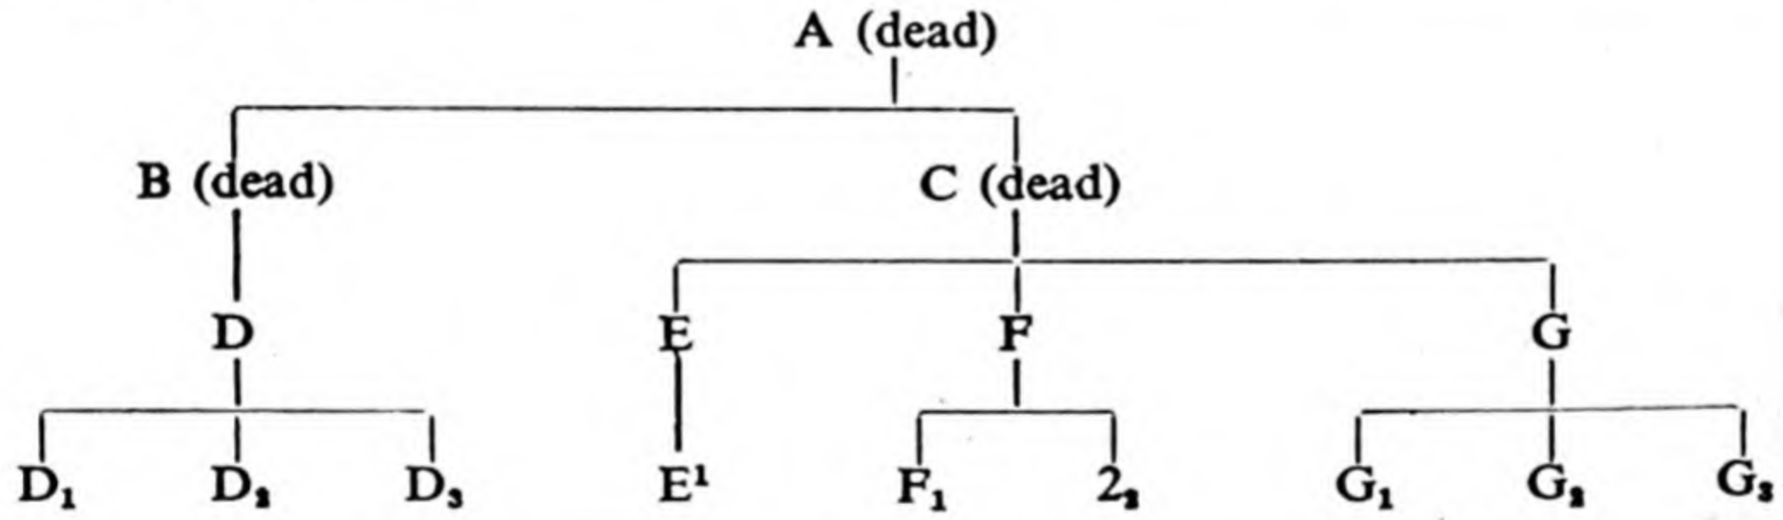
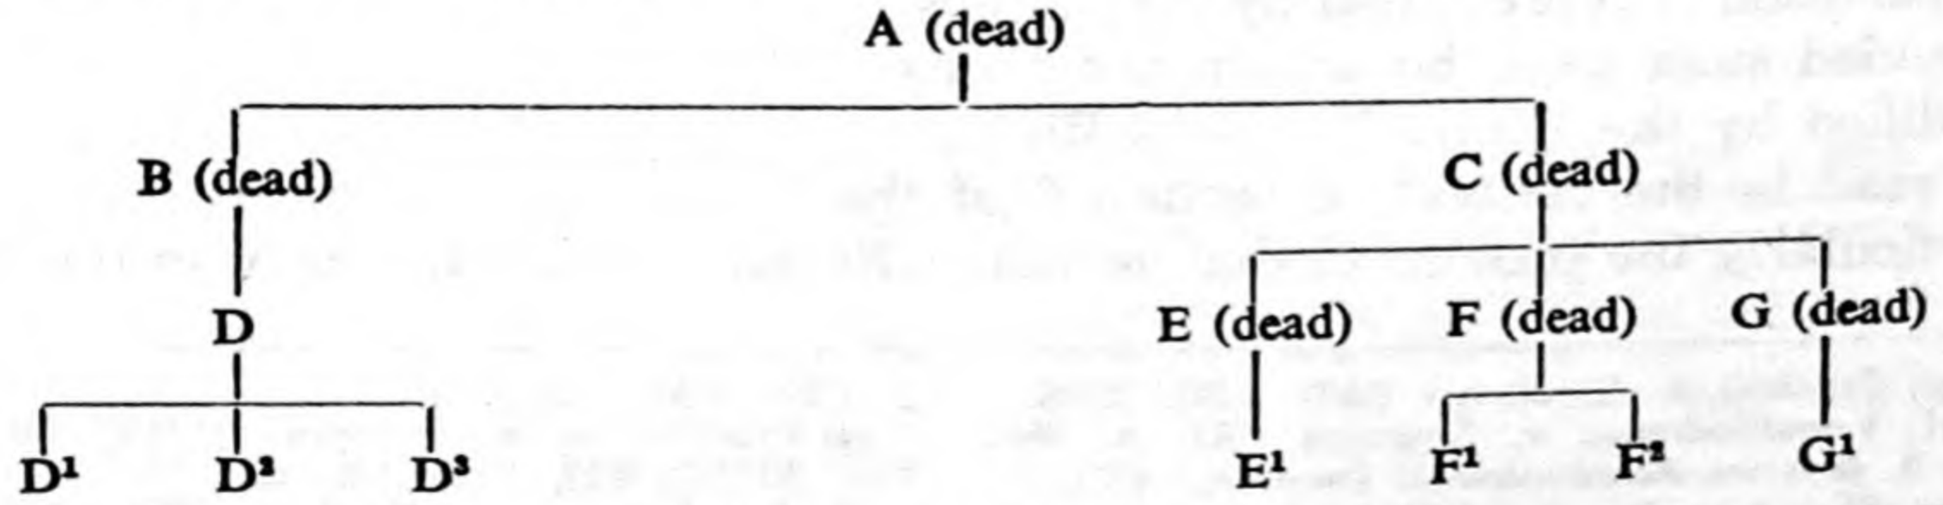
Here there are four branches of the joint family represented respectively by the four sons of A and their descendants. E's branch takes nothing as K, the only surviving member of that branch, is outside the limits of the coparcenary, being beyond the fourth degree of descent from A, the common ancestor [§ 215]. The joint property will therefore be divided per stirpes into three parts corresponding to the remaining three branches, each branch taking 1/3. The result is that B will take 1/3, $C^1$ and $C^2$ will take the one-third share of C equally between them, each taking 1/2 of 1/3, i.e., 1/6 and $F^1$, $F^2$ and $F^3$ will take the one-third share of D equally between them each taking 1/3 of 1/3, i.e. 1/9.

(b) A dies leaving four grandsons, D, E, F and G, and nine great-grandsons as shown in the following diagram:—



All the coparceners are desirous of separating from one another. Here there are two branches of the joint family represented respectively by the two sons of A. The property will, therefore, be divided into two parts, B's branch taking 1/2, and C's branch taking 1/2. As to B's branch, D and his sons $D_1$, $D_2$ and $D_3$ will each take 1/4 of 1/2, i.e., 1/8, each son taking a share equal to that of the father. As to C's branch, each of the three sub-branches represented by E, F and G, will take 1/3 of 1/2, i.e., 1/6, E and $E_1$ will each take 1/2 of 1/6 i.e., 1/12; F, $F_1$ and $F_2$ will each take 1/3 of 1/6, i.e., 1/18 and G, $G_1$, $G_2$ and $G_3$ will each take 1/4 of 1/6, i.e. 1/24.

(c) A Hindu, A, governed by the Mitakshara school of Hindu law, dies leaving a grandson D, and seven great-grandsons as shown in the following diagram:—



$D^1$, $D^2$, $F^1$, $F^2$, and $G^1$ institute a suit against D, $D^3$, and $E^1$ for partition. What are the respective shares of the parties in the property? Here there are two branches of the joint family; the property will therefore be divided into two parts, B's branch taking 1/2 and C's branch taking 1/2. As to B's branch, D and his sons $D^1$, $D^2$ and $D^3$ will each get 1/4 of 1/2, i.e. 1/8. As to C's branch each of the three sub-branches represented by E, F G, will get 1/3 of 1/2 i.e., 1/6, $E^1$ will get 1/6, $F^1$ and $F^2$ will each get 1/2 of 1/6, i.e. 1/12, and $G^1$ will get 1/6. The five plaintiffs take their respective shares, and leave the family. D, $D^3$ and $E^1$ continue joint as before. Their shares, it has been seen, are as follows:—

| | |
|---|---|
| D | 1/8 |
| $D^1$ | 1/8 |
| $E^1$ | 1/6 |
| | 5/12 |

D then dies. After D's death, his son $D^3$ sues $E^1$ to recover his share of the family property. What is the share of $D^3$ in the property? According to the Bombay High Court, $D^3$ as representing B's branch is entitled to 1/2 × 5/12=5/24, and $E^1$ as representing C's branch is entitled to the remaining 5/24. According to the Madras High Court, on the death of D, the right to represent his share passes to his son $D^2$ so that $D^3$ is entitled to get 1/8 + 1/8, i.e., 1/4 and $E^1$ retains his original share 1/6. See rule 3 above.

(d) A Hindu, A, governed by the Mitakshara school of Hindu law, dies leaving four sons, B, C, D and E, five grandsons, $B^1$, $B^2$ $B^3$, $C^1$. and $D^1$, as shown in the following diagram:—

Thereafter B dies. In 1892, $B^2$ receives his share 1/3 × 1/4 = 1/12, and leaves the family. The rest of the family continues joint. Then C dies, then D, then E, and then $B^2$.

In 1911 $B^1$ sues $C^1$ and $D^1$ for a partition. According to the Bombay High Court the property is to be divided into three parts, as there are three branches subsisting at the date of the suit, namely B's branch, C's branch and D's branch, so that $B^1$, $C^1$ and $D^1$ will each take 1/3. According to the Madras High Court $B^1$ is entitled to 1/3 — 1/12 [1/12 being the share allotted to $B^2$ when he left the family] = 1/4, and not 1/3. See rule 3 above.

(5) See Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, § 35 supra for the rights of a widow, predeceased son's widow and the widow of a predeceased son of a predeceased son of a coparcener.

(6) See sec. 6 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, and Notes thereunder.

V.—PARTITION HOW EFFECTED

322. What is Partition.—According to the true notion of an undivided Mitakshara family, no individual member of that family, whilst it remains undivided, can predicate of the joint property, that he—that particular member —has a certain definite share, one-third or one-fourth. Partition, according to that law, consists in a numerical division of the property; in other words, it consists in defining the shares of the coparceners in the joint property; an actual division of the property by metes and bounds is not necessary (c). Once the shares are defined, whether by an agreement between the parties or otherwise, the partition is complete. After the shares are so defined, the parties may divide the property by metes and bounds, or they may continue to live together and enjoy the property in common as before. But whether they do the one or the other, it affects only the mode of enjoyment, but not the tenure of the property. The property ceases to be joint immediately the shares are defined, and thenceforth the parties hold the property as tenants-in-common (d).

(c) Appovier v. Rama Subba Aiyan (1866) 11 M.I.A, 75, 89-90; Ram Pershad v. Lakhpati (1903) 30 Cal. 231, 255, 30 I.A. 1; Sheodan v. Balkaran (1921) 43 All. 193, 59 I.C. 116, ('21) A.A. 337.

Where at a partition between a Hindu, his two sons, and his two wives one-fifth was allotted to each of the sons and three-fifths to the father and his wives, it was held that the father and his wives became tenants-in-common, but though they had not divided their shares by metes and bounds inter se there could be no reunion between them, and the father therefore had no right to sell the properties of the wives and any such alienation by him was not binding on them (e).

323. Partition by father during his lifetime.—The father of a joint family has the power to divide the family property at any moment during his life, provided he gives his sons equal shares with himself, and if he does so, the effect in law is not only a separation of the father from the sons, but a separation of the sons inter se. The consent of the sons is not necessary for the exercise of that power (f). But a grandfather has no power to bring about a separation among his grandsons. Even if he allots shares, they remain joint (g). The right of a father to sever the sons inter se is a part of the patria potestas still recognized by the Hindu law.

When under a partition by a father unequal shares are given to the sons, the transaction will be binding on the sons as a family arrangement, if acquiesced in by them (h). If the partition is unequal and unfair it is open to the sons if they are majors to repudiate the partition; but if they are minors, it is open to them to avoid it after they attain majority. The partition will be good until it is set aside. The right of the minors is a personal right and cannot be exercised by others (i). In any such case it is not necessary for the minor to formally set aside the earlier partition before filing a suit for partition (j).

324. Whether father can effect partition by a will.—No coparcener, not even the father, has a right to make a partition by will of joint family property among the various members of the family except with their consent (k).

325. How partition may be effected.—Partition is a severance of joint status, and as such it is a matter of individual volition (l). All that is necessary, therefore, to constitute a partition is a definite and unequivocal indication of his intention by a member of a joint family to separate himself from the family and enjoy his share in severalty. The Supreme Court pointed out in the undermentioned case (*l*1) that there should be an intimation, indication or representation of such intention and that what form that manifestation should take would depend upon the circumstances of each case. It is implicit

---

(d) Balkishen Das v. Ram Narain (1903) 30 Cal. 738, 751, 752, 30 I.A. 139; Darshan Singh v. Prabhu Singh (1946) All. 130; Narasamma v. Venkata Narasi ('54) A.M. 282, (1953) 2 M.L.J. 695.

(e) Nanuram v. Radhabai (1942) Nag. 24, ('40) A.N. 241.

(f) Kandasami v. Doraisami (1880) 2 Mad. 317, 321; Meyyappa v. I.T. Commissioner ('51) A.M. 506, (1950) 2 M.L.J. 353; Nirman v. Fateh (1930) 52 All. 178, 126 I.C. 337, ('29) A.A. 963; Mulam Chand v. Kanchhendillal ('58) A.M.P. 304; Venkatasubramania v. Easwara Iyer ('66) A.M. 266.

(g) Subbarami Reddi v. Chenchuraghava Reddi (1945) Mad. 1714; Meyyappa v. I.T. Commissioner, supra.

(h) Brijraj Singh v. Sheodan Singh (1913) 35 All. 763, 102 I.C. 66, ('27) A.A. 454.

(i) Meyyappa v. I.T. Commissioner, supra. Reference may also be made to Deveerachar v. Viswesvariah ('68) A. Mys. 211; Gadadhar v. Gangadhar ('72) A. Orissa 24.

(j) Hiralal v. Fulchand ('56) A. Sau. 89.

(k) (1913) 35 All. 337, 346, 40 I.A. 161, 19 I.C. 826, supra; Harkash Singh v. Hardevi (1927) 49 All. 763, 102 I.C. 66, ('27) A.A. 454.

(l) Girja Bai v. Sadashiv (1916) 43 I.A. 151, 161, 43 Cal. 1031, 1049, 37 I.C. 321, ('16) A.P.C. 104.

(*l*1) Raghavamma v. Chenchamma (1964) S.C. 136; Puttrangamma v. Rangamma ('68) A.S.C. 1018 [Relevant texts examined]. Also see Fatechand v. State of W. Bengal ('72) A.C. 177.

in this principle that this manifestation or declaration of intention should be to the knowledge of the persons affected for a mere uncommunicated declaration may amount to no more than merely harbouring an intent to separate. It is immaterial, in such a case, whether the other members assent. Once a member of a joint family has clearly and unequivocally intimated to the other members his desire to sever himself from the joint family, his right to obtain and possess his share is unimpeachable whether or not they agree to a separation, and there is an immediate severance of the joint status. The intention to separate may be evinced in different ways, either by explicit declaration or by conduct (m). It may be expressed by serving a notice on the other coparceners (n), and the severance of status takes place from the date when the communication was sent and not when it was received (o). Once a communication of the intention is made by a member which has resulted in the severance of the joint family status it would not thereafter be open to him to nullify its effect by revoking or withdrawing the notice. He cannot get back to the old position by mere revocation of the intention (*o*1). The notice, however, may be withdrawn with the consent of the other coparceners (p). It may also be expressed by the institution of a suit for partition. An oral request made by an elder brother, at the time of his death, to his younger brother to give half the property to the widow of the former, does not amount to a separation (q). A statement by a member in his will that he is entitled to a particular share does not by itself amount to an expression of intention to separate (*q*1). But a will may contain a clear and unambigous declaration of intention to separate from the family and if the intention is communicated, that may be sufficient (*q*2). Communication of intention to all the members of the family is, however, not essential. It may suffice if it is to the managing member of the family or in the case of tarwad to the karnarvan (r).

Prima facie a document expressing the intention to divide brings about a division in status, but it is open to a party to prove that the document was a sham or a nominal one not intended to be acted upon and executed for some ulterior purpose. It sometimes happens that persons make statements which serve their purpose, or proceed upon ignorance of the true position; and it is not their statements but their relations with the estate which is the determining factor (*r*1).

As to minor coparceners see § 308 ante. Reference may also be made to § 330 post.

Where a simple money decree was obtained against the father and in a suit on behalf of his minor sons for a declaration that the debt for which the decree was passed was immoral, the District Munsiff found that the debt was not immoral but on the ground that the decree was a money decree, declared that the sons' share was not liable

---

(m) Dnyaneshwar Krishna v. Anant Vasudeo (1936) 60 Bom. 736, 38 Bom. L.R. 579, 164 I.C. 632, ('36) A.B. 290; Girdharilal v. Fatechand ('54) A.M.B. 148; Bal Mukandji v. Gokaran Singh ('56) A.A. 124.

(n) Girja Bai v. Sadashiv (1916) 43 I.A. 151, 43 Cal. 1031, 37 I.C. 321, ('16) A.P.C. 104, supra.

(o) Narayana Rao v. Purushothama Rao (1938) Mad. 315, ('38) A.M. 390.

(*o*1) Puttrangamma v. Ranganma ('68) A.SC. 1018.

(p) Banke Bihari v. Brij Bihari (1929) 51 All. 519, 116 I.C. 285, ('29) A.A. 170.

(q) Shivappa Rudrappa v. Rudrava Chanbasappa (1933) 57 Bom. 1, 142 I.C. 164, ('32) A.B. 410.

(*q*1) Mulan v. Kanchhendillal ('58) A.M.P. 304.

(*q*2) Raghavamma v. Chenchamma ('64) A.S.C. 136; Lakshmi Perumallu v. Krishnavenamma ('65) A.S.C. 825.

(r) Katheesumma v. Beechu (1950) Mad. 502, ('51) A.M. 561; Appalanarasimhan v. Udalama ('59) A.A.P. 407.

(*r*1) Rukhmabai v. Laxminarayan ('60) S.C. 335; Mudigowda v. Ramchandra ('69) A.S.C. 1076.

to be sold in execution, it was held that these facts did not constitute separation of the sons from the father (s).

Exercise of volition on behalf of minor.—It has been held by the High Court of Madras (*s*1), disagreeing with the High Court of Andhra Pradesh (*s*2) that a guardian of a minor acting on his behalf can exercise volition on behalf of the minor to effect partition, subject to the condition that such exercise of volition should be approved of by the court and that it is not necessary for the exercise of that volition that any suit or partition suit should be pending before the court.

Date of severance in status.—Question arises as to the date from which severance in status is deemed to have taken place. Is it the date of expression of intention by a coparcener to sever himself from the joint family or the date when such intention is brought to the knowledge of the other coparceners? Obviously the answer would affect rights also of other parties. In Raghavamma v. Chenchamma the Supreme Court held that the date of severance would be that of manifestation of intention to separate by virtue of the doctrine of relation back. Even so the rights accrued to others in the joint family property between such manifestation of intention and the knowledge of it by the other coparceners would be saved (*s*3).

(1) Partition by institution of suit.—(i) Suit by adults.—The institution of a suit for partition by a member of a joint family is an unequivocal intimation of his intention to separate, and there consequently is a severance of his joint status from the date when it is instituted. A decree may be necessary for working out the results of the severance and for allotting definite shares, but the status of the plaintiff as separate in estate is brought about by his assertion of his right to separate, whether he obtains a consequential judgment or not (t). And if the plaintiff dies the suit can be continued by the heir (u). But if the suit is withdrawn before trial, the plaintiff not desiring separation, there is no severance of the joint status (v). Nor is there any severance if the suit is proved to be a sham transaction resorted to for the purpose of creating evidence of separation (w). Or if the defendant dies and the suit is withdrawn on that ground there is no separation (x). The filing of a suit is strong evidence but not conclusive evidence of an intention to separate (y). Even a decree passed by consent does not effect a severance if

---

(s) Patru Lal v. Parbhawati Kuar (1943) All. 205, 207 I.C. 228, ('43) A.A. 214.

(*s*1) Ramaswamy v. Kuppa Chetti ('62) A.M. 31.

(*s*2) Ayyanna v. Kotayya ('60) A.A.P. 70.

(*s*3) (1964) S.C. 136.

(t) Girja Bai v. Sadashiv (1916) 43 I.A. 151, 43 Cal. 1031, 37 I.C. 321, ('16) A.P.C. 104; Kawal Nain v. Prabhulal (1917) 44 I.A. 159, 39 All. 496, 40 I.C. 286, ('17) A.P.C. 39; Suraj Narain v. Iqbal Narain (1913) 40 I.A. 40, 45, 35 All 80, 87, 18 I.C. 30; Ramalinga v. Narayana (1922) 49 I.A. 168, 45 Mad. 489, 68 I.C. 451, ('22) A.P.C. 201; Soundararajan v. Arunachalam (1916) 39 Mad. 136, 33 I.C. 858, ('16) A.M. 1170 [F.B.]; Hazari Lal v. Ram Lal (1925) 47 All. 746, 88 I.C. 422, ('25) A.A. 813. The same rule applies where the estate is impartible; Jagadamba v. Narain Singh (1923) 2 Pat. 319, 50 I.A. 1, 77 I.C. 1041, ('23) A.P.C. 59; Dhanabathi Bibi v. Pratapmull Agarwalla (1934) 61 Cal. 1056, 154 I.C. 655, ('35) A.C. 131; Ramamurthy v. Venkatasubbarayudu ('54) A. Andh. Pra. 34.

(u) Rajrup Rai v. Sheo Shanker Rai (1945) All. 287.

(v) Kedar Nath v. Ratan Singh (1910) 37 I.A. 161, 32 All. 415, 7 I.C. 648; Palani Ammal v. Muthuvenkatacharla (1925) 52 I.A. 83, 48 Mad. 254, 87 I.C. 333, ('25) A.P.C. 49; Shagun Chand v. Data Ram (1927) 49 All. 664, 101 I.C. 868, ('27) A.A. 465.

(w) Bhagwant Kishore v. Bishambhar Nath ('50) A.A. 54.

(x) Shankersingh v. Gulapchand (1945) Nag. 444.

(y) Joala Prasad Singh v. Chanderjet Kuer (1938) 17 Pat. 430, 175 I.C. 783, ('38) A.P. 278.

its terms are not carried out and the members continue to live together having abandoned their decision to separate (z).

When a suit for partition is instituted by a member of a joint family the Court has power not only to divide the properties by metes and bounds, but also to effect a separation of status without actual division of the property. Such direction may be useful when a minor is a party to the partition suit and the declaration is considered beneficial in the interests of the minor (a).

Withdrawal of Suit.—The Madras High Court has held that when in a suit for partition the plaint contains a clear and unambiguous expression of an intention to separate from the date of filing the suit, and summons have been duly served on the other coparceners, division in status is effected from the date of filing the suit, even if the suit is subsequently withdrawn. The reason is that except in case of an agreement to reunite, it is not open to a coparcener to revoke or withdraw an unambiguous expression of and intention to separate which is communicated to the other members (b).

In Palani Ammal's case (c), the Judicial Committee observed that a plaint claiming a partition, even if withdrawn, would, unless explained, afford evidence that an intention to separate had been entertained.

Attachment of undivided share.—In a decision of the Calcutta High Court (d) it has been held that attachment of the undivided share of a coparcener in a Mitakshara family during his lifetime operates as division of interest and causes a severance of status. The correctness of this view, it is submitted, must be doubted. The Patna High Court has expressed disagreement with the Calcutta view (*d*1).

(ii) Minor's suit for partition.—In a suit for partition brought by the father and his minor son as plaintiffs against the other members of the joint family, in which it was contended by the minor's mother as the guardian, and found by the Court that the separation was not in the interests of the minor, it was held, that the institution of the suit does not effect a separation of the minor from the rest of the family, though it may operate as a separation of the father from the rest of the family (f). Where the Court dismisses the suit on the ground that a partition was not beneficiai to the minor plaintiff, no severance is effected (g). If the Court holds that a division is necessary in the interests of the minor and passes a preliminary decree for partition, the divided status of the minor dates from the date of the institution of the suit and not from the date of the preliminary decree (h).

In a suit for partition filed on behalf of the minor son against the father the plaint was returned to be presented to the proper Court and, after an interval, was re-presented and the Court found that the partition was beneficial to the interests of the minor. In the interval the father executed a mortgage. It was held that the son became divided from the father only from the date of re-presentation of the plaint and that it could not be contended that the mortgage was not binding on the son on the ground that they were divided when it was executed. It was also held that the document was not affected by the principle of lis pendens (i). In a minor's suit for partition, where another son was born to the plaintiff's father even before the preliminary decree, it was held by the High Court of Patna that the institution of the suit itself effected a severance of the joint status

---

(z) Chokalingam v. Muthukaruppan (1938) Mad. 1019, ('38) A.M. 849.

(a) Bhagirathibai v. Manohar (1950) Nag. 698, ('51) A.N. 164.

(b) Radhakrishna v. Satya Narayan (1949) Mad. 229.

(c) (1925) 52 I.A. 83, 48 Mad. 254, 87 I.C. 333, ('25) A.P.C. 49, supra.

(d) Muneswari v. Jugal Mohini ('52) A.C. 368.

(*d*1) Sheonandan v. Ugrah Sao ('60) A.P. 66.

(f) Ganapathy v. Subramanyam (1929) 52 Mad. 845, 122 I.C. 167, ('29) A.M. 738.

(g) C Sriramamurthi v. Official Receiver ('57) A. Andh. Pra. 692.

(h) Krishnaswami v. Pulukaruppa (1925) 48 Mad. 465, 88 I.C. 424, ('25) A.M. 717; Sri Ranga v. Srinivasa (1927) 50 Mad. 866, 104 I.C. 72, ('27) A.M. 80; Atul Krishna Roy v. Lala Nandanji (1935) 14 Pat. 732 [F.B.], 157 I.C. 53, ('35) A.P. 275; Ram Singh v. Fakira (1939) Bom. 256; Mandliprasad v. Ramcharanlal (1947) Nag. 848. Reference may be made to Varadammal v. Ambalal Vyas ('27) A.M. 371.

(i) Nathusingh v. Anandrao (1941) Nag. 652, 186 I.C. 688, ('40) A.N. 185.

and that the minor's share did not suffer a diminution by reason of the birth of another son (j).

There was divergence of judicial opinion (*j*1) about the effect of the death of a minor plaintiff pending any such suit. It has now been held by the Supreme Court (*j*2) that any such suit instituted on behalf of a minor coparcener brings about a division in status. What brings about the severance in status is the action of the next friend in instituting the suit, the decree of the court merely rendering it effective by deciding that what the next friend has done is for the benefit of the minor. Such a suit does not abate on death of the minor but can be continued by his legal representative.

Reference may also be made to §§ 308 and 330.

According to a Patna decision, his interest will pass to his heirs unconditionally (p). As to the effect on the minor plaintiff's shares by subsequent births and deaths; see also § 330 below.

(2) Partition by agreement.—A partition may also be effected by an agreement between the parties [§ 326]. In some cases it is stated that a severance of joint status can take place only by agreement between the parties or by a decree of the Court [§ 329]. But this is a mistaken view (q). As stated above, a definite and unambiguous indication by one member of his intention to separate and to enjoy his share in severalty may amount to a partition.

(3) Partition by arbitration.—An agreement between the members of a joint family whereby they appoint arbitrators for dividing the joint family properties among them amounts to a severance of the joint status of the family from the date thereof (r). The mere fact that no award has been made is not evidence of a renunciation of the intention to separate (s). Where a father refers the family dispute between himself and his minor son (represented by his mother) to an arbitrator, the award of the arbitrator directing a partition effects a severance between the father and the son from its date (t). A reference to arbitration for effecting partition made on his behalf by his natural guardian must be for the benefit of the minor. If not so, it will not in any event bind him (u).

(4) It is a mistake to suppose that there can be no partition until there is a division of the joint family property by metes and bounds. It is very important to keep the two considerations quite distinct from each other, namely, partition, that is, the severance of the joint status, which is a matter of individual decision, and the de facto division of the property, that is, the allotment of shares which may be effected by different methods, e.g., by

---

(i) Krishna Lal v. Nandeshwar (1919) 4 Pat. L.J. 38, 46-48, 44 I.C. 146, ('18) A.P. 91.

(*j*1) Rangarsayi v. Nagaratnamma (1934) 57 Mad. 95 [F.B.], 146 I.C. 769, ('33) A.M. 890; Ramsingh v. Fakira (1939) Bom. 256, ('39) A.B. 169; Mandliprasad v. Ramcharanlal (1947) Nag. 848. Contra see Chelimy Chetty v. Subamma (1918) 41 Mad. 442, 42 I.C. 860, ('18) A.M. 379; Lalta Prasad v. Sri Mahadeoji (1920) 42 All, 461, 58 I.C. 667, ('20) A.A. 116; Hari Singh v. Pritam Singh (1936) Lah. 504.

(p) Krishna Lal v. Nondeshwar (1919) 4 Pat. L.J. 38, 46-48, 44 I.C. 146, ('18) A.P. 91.

(q) Girja Bai v. Sadashiv (1916) 43 I.A. 151, 162, 43 Cal. 1031, 1050, 37 I.C. 321, ('16) A.P.C. 104.

(r) Syed Kasam v. Jorawar Singh (1922) 49 I.A. 358, 50 Cal. 84, 68 I.C. 573, ('23) A.P.C. 353; Kashinathsa v. Narsingsa ('61) A.S.C. 1077; Krishna v. Balaram (1896) 19 Mad. 290; Subbaraya v. Sadashiva (1897) 20 Mad. 490; Balmukund Lal v. Musammat Sohano (1929) 8 Pat. 153, 119 I.C. 817, ('29) A.P. 164; Ramadin v. Gokulprasad ('59) A.M.P. 25.

(s) Ram Kali v. Khamman Lal (1929) 51 All. 1, 111 I.C. 33, ('28) A.A. 422; Panchpagesa v. Kalyanasundaram ('57) A.M. 472 (Revocation of arbitration after severance).

(t) Shantilal Meucaram v. Munshilal Kewalram (1932) 56 Bom. 595, 139 I.C. 820, ('32) A.B. 498.

(u) Kamal Singh v. Sekhar Chand ('52) A.C. 447.

private agreement, by arbitrators appointed by the parties, or, in the last resort, by the Court (v).

(5) A coparcener does not on insolvency cease to be a member of a joint family, nor does the fact that a coparcener has alienated the whole or part of his undivided share, effect a partition between him and his family (w).

Illustrations

(a) A and his brothers B and C are members of a joint Hindu family. A sues B and C for partition. After the suit, but before the decree, A dies leaving a widow. A's share does not pass by survivorship to B and C, but it descends to his widow as his heir, and she as such is entitled to continue the suit: Girija Bai v. Sadashiv (1916) 43 I.A. 151, 43 Cal. 1031, 37 I.C. 321, ('16) A.P.C. 104. The result would be the same if A, B and C appointed an arbitrator to partition the property and A died pending arbitration: Syed Kasam v. Jorawar Singh (1922) 49 I.A. 358, 50 Cal. 84, 68 I.C. 573, ('23) A.P.C. 353.

(b) A and his father B are members of a joint Hindu family. A sues B for partition. B admits that he and A are joint, but alleges that the fact stated in the plaint, namely, that B had failed to maintain A is untrue, and asks that A's suit should be dismissed on the ground that the facts alleged by A in his plaint are not proved. Such a dismissal is quite wrong. The institution of the suit operates as a partition between A and B, though the suit is dismissed: Kawal Nain v. Prabhu Lal (1917) 44 I.A. 159, 39 All. 496, 40 I.C. 286, ('17) A.P.C. 39. See sub-§ (1) above.

326. Partition by agreement.—(1) As regards partition, no act done by any member of a joint family, can operate as a partition, unless it has been done with the intention to put an end to his status as a coparcener and acquire a new status, that is, the status of a separate owner (x) [§ 325]. As stated by their Lordships of the Privy Council in the leading case of Appovier v. Rama Subba Aiyan (y), the true test of partition of property according to Hindu law [is] the intention of the members of the family to become separate owners. Intention being the real test, it follows that an agreement between the members of a joint family to hold and enjoy the property in defined shares as separate owners operates as a partition, although there may have been no actual division of the property by metes and bounds. As observed by the Judicial Committee in the case above referred to (z), "when the members of an undivided family agree among themselves with regard to a particular property, that it shall thenceforth be the subject of ownership, in certain defined shares, then the character of undivided property and joint enjoyment is taken away from the subject-matter so agreed to be dealt with; and in the estate each member has thenceforth a definite and certain share, which he may claim the right to receive and to enjoy in severalty, although the property itself has not been actually severed and divided." In such a case the interest of each member is divided though the property remains physically undivided. That interest, therefore, will descend, and may be dealt with, as separate property, except where the separating member remains joint with his own male issue (a) [§ 223, sub-§ (4)]. A partition, if otherwise genuine,

---

(v) (1919) 43 I.A. 151, 161, 43 Cal. 1031, 1049, 37 I.C. 321, ('16) A.P.C. 104, supra; Mukund v. Balkrishna (1927) 54 I.A. 413, 419, 52 Bom. 8, 15, 105 I.C. 703, ('27) A.P.C. 224; Sumi Devi v. Pranakrushna ('56) A. Orissa 68.

(w) Lakshmanan Chettiar v. Srinivasa Iyengar (1937) Mad. 203, 166 I.C. 378, ('37) A.M. 131; Sheonandan v. Ugrah Sao ('55) A.P. 189.

(x) Appovier v. Rama Subba Alyan (1866) 11 M.I.A. 75, 92-93; Baboo Doorga Pershad v. Kundun (1874) 13 Beng. L.R. 235, 239, 1 I.A. 55.

(y) (1866) 11 M.I.A. 75, 90.

(z) Ibid.

(a) Rajah Suraneni v. Venkama Row (1869) 13 M.I.A. 113; Doorga Persad v. Kundun (1873) 13 Beng. L.R. 235, 1 I.A. 55; Balkishen Das v. Ram will sever the joint status even if the motive is to defeat the claims of creditors (b).

Where a member of the joint family executed a sham sale deed in favour of his brother it was held that he did not become divided from the family and on his death his nephews got the property by survivorship and his creditor could not execute a money-decree against the property which so devolved on his nephews (c).

The mere fact, however, that the shares of the coparceners have been ascertained does not by itself necessarily lead to an inference that the family has separated. There may be reasons other than a contemplated immediate separation for ascertaining what the shares of the coparceners on a separation would be. To constitute a partition the shares should be defined with the intention of an immediate separation (d). For an instance where there was no such intention, see Poornandachi v. Gopalasami (1936) 63 I.A. 436, 38 Bom. L.R. 1247, 164 I.C. 26, ('36) A.P.C. 281, and § 327 (3).

(2) An agreement to separate is not required by law to be in writing (e). If it is in writing, and clearly indicates on the face of it an intention to separate and hold the property in defined shares as separate owners, no evidence is admissible of the subsequent acts of the parties to alter or control its legal effect (f). But where the agreement is not in writing, or, where it is in writing, but does not declare on the face of it what the intention of the parties was, evidence of subsequent conduct of the parties becomes very material in order to determine whether there was a partition or not (g). This subject is further explained in the next section in another form.

Illustration

A joint Hindu family consisting of six members is entitled to a moiety of certain villages and to three other properties, namely, x, y and z. All the six members execute a deed whereby they divide the three properties, x, y and z, by metes and bounds into six parts, each taking one-sixth. As to the moiety belonging to the family in the said villages, the deed says: "But inasmuch as it is not convenient to divide now [that is, to divide by metes and bounds] our moiety of the villages, we shall divide every year in six shares the produce of them and enjoy it, after deducting the Sirkar's kist and charges on the villages." The deed concludes with the words "we have henceforward no interest

---

Narain (1903) 30 Cal. 738, 30 I.A. 139; Ram Pershad v. Lakhpati (1903) 30 Cal. 231, 253, 30 I.A. 1, 10; Parbati v. Naunihal Singh (1909) 31 All. 412, 36 I.A. 71, 3 I.C. 195; Mahdo v. Mehrban (1891) 18 Cal. 157, 17 I.A. 194; Sri Raja Viravara v. Sri Raja Viravara (1897) 20 Mad. 256, 24 I.A. 118; Raja Setrucherla v. Raja Setrucherla (1899) 22 Mad. 470, 26 I.A. 167; Gajapathi v. Gajapathi (1870) 13 M.I.A. 497, 517; Babaji v. Kashibai (1880) 4 Bom. 157; Ananta v. Damodhar (1889) 13 Bom. 25; Tej Protap v. Champa (1889) 12 Cal. 96; Sarada v. Umakanta (1923) 50 Cal. 370, 392, 77 I.C. 450, ('23) A.C. 485; Adi Deo v. Dukharan (1883) 5 All. 533; Raghubir v. Moti Kunwar (1913) 35 All. 41, 17 I.C. 766 [P.C.].

(b) Kuppan Chetiar v. Masa Goundan (1937) Mad. 1004, 169 I.C. 400, ('37) A.M. 424; K.S.R.M. Firm v. Subbiah (1945) Mad. 138; Hirday Narain v. Ram Das ('51) A.A. 606.

(c) Merla Ramanna v. Chelikani Jagannadha Rao (1941) Mad. 886, 193 I.C. 1, 68 I.A. 75, ('42) A.P.C. 48.

(d) Palani Ammal v. Muthuvenkatacharla (1925) 52 I.A. 83, 86, 48 Mad. 254, 267, 268, 87 I.C. 333, ('25) A.P.C. 49; Ramabadra v. Gopalaswami (1931) 54 Mad. 269, 129 I.C. 801, ('31) A.M. 404; Kochukutti v. Bhavani Amma ('54) A. Tr. Co. 169; Chandrakanto v. Ram Mohini ('56) A.C. 577 (specification of shares in settlement records); Gangabai v. Punau Rajwa ('56) A.N. 261.

(e) Rewun Persad v. Radha Beeby (1846) 4 M.I.A. 137, 168; Budha Mal v. Bhagwan Das (1891) 18 Cal. 302 (P.C.); (1909) 31 All. 412, 422-423, 36 I.A. 71, 3 I.C. 195, supra; Alamelu v. Balu (1920) 43 Mad. 849, 26 I.C. 455, ('15) A.M. 103; Bhimraj v. I.T. Commissioner ('55) A.P. 172.

(f) Balkishen Das v. Ram Narain (1903) 30 Cal. 738, 752, 30 I.A. 139 [case of an unambiguous ikrarnamah]; Jai Narain v. Baij Nath (1928) 50 All. 615, 108 I.C. 449, ('28) A.A. 419; Hira Singh v. Mst. Manglan (1928) 9 Lah. 324, 106 I.C. 877, ('28) A.L. 122.

(g) Doorga Pershad v. Kundan (1874) 13 Beng. L.R. 235, 239-240, 1 I.A. 55 [case of an ambiguous ukarnamah]; Ram Pershad v. Lakhpati (1903) 30 Cal. 231, 253, 30 I.A. 1, 10 [case of an ambiguous decree], Chowdhry Ganesh Dutt v. Jewach (1904) 31 Cal. 262, 270, 31 I.A. 10 [case where there was no writing].

in each other's effects and debts except friendship between us." The question is whether the deed operates as a partition of the family's interests in the villages, regard being had to the fact that there was no division of the villages by metes and bounds. The answer is that it does, as the effect of the deed is—using the language of the English Law merely by way of illustration—that the joint tenancy is severed and converted into a tenancy in common. In delivering the judgment of the Judicial Committee, Lord Westbury said: "Then, if there be a conversion of the joint tenancy of an undivided family into a tenancy in common of the members of that undivided family, the undivided family becomes a divided family with reference to the property that is the subject of that agreement and that is a separation in interest and in right, although not immediately followed by a de facto actual division of the subject-matter. This may at any time be claimed by virtue of the separate right. . . . We find, therefore, a clear intention to subject the whole of the property to a division of interest, although it was not immediately to be perfected by an actual partition. It [the deed] operated in law as a conversion of the character of the property and an alteration of the title of the family, converting it from a joint to separate ownership, and we think the conclusion of law is correct, viz., that that is sufficient to make, a divided family, and to make a divided possession of what was previously undivided without the necessity of its being carried out into an actual partition of the subject-matter": Appovier v. Rama Subba Aiyan (1866) 11 M.I.A. 75. [It is enough to constitute a partition that there should be a division of title: It is not necessary that there should be an actual division of the property].

Registration.—A mere agreement to divide does not require registration. But if the writing itself effects a division it must be registered (h). It is well settled that the document though unregistered can, however, be looked into for the limited purpose of establishing a severance in status, though that severance may ultimately alter the nature of possession held by members of the separated family as co-tenants (*h*1). Where the plaintiff alleged that all the family properties were divided except one item and the defendant denied the partition, it was held that an unregistered document evidencing the partition may be used for the limited and collateral purpose of showing that the subsequent division of the properties allotted to the defendant's branch was in pursuance of the original intention to divide (i).

An unregistered deed of partition and other deeds of transfer between the parties to the partition though not admissible to prove partition can be referred to under sec. 49 of the Registration Act to show that the parties dealt with the property on the footing that there was a previous partition (j).

327. Evidence of partition and burden of proof.—This branch of the subject may be divided into four parts:—

1. The clearest case is where the members of a joint family divide the joint property by metes and bounds, and each member is in separate possession and enjoyment of the share allotted to him on partition. Permanency is an essential feature, though not the sole test, of an arrangement of outright partition (k).

2. The next case is of the kind dealt with by the Privy Council in Appovier v. Rama Subba Aiyan (l), that is, the case where the coparceners, with a view to partition execute a writing whereby they agree to hold the joint property in defined shares as separate owners. Such a writing operates in law as a partition though the property is not physically divided. This is a case where the agreement declares on the face of it the intention of the parties

---

(h) Rajangam v. Rajangam (1923) 46 Mad. 373, 50 I.A. 134, 69 I.C. 123, ('22) A.P.C. 266; Nani Bai v. Gita Bai ('58) A.S.C. 706; (1958) S.C.J. 925; Chhotalal v. Bai Mahakore (1917) 41 Bom. 466, 40 I.C. 83, ('17) A.B. 206.

(*h*1) Muthyalareddy v. Venkatareddy ('69) A.A.P. 242 (F.B.).

(i) Ganpat v. Namdeo (1942) Nag. 73, 196 I.C. 278, ('41) A.N. 209; Tejraj v. Mohanlal ('55) A. Raj. 157.

(j) Girija v. Girdhari (1950) Pat. 628, ('51) A. Pat. 277. See Subbu Naidu v. Varadarajulu (1947) Mad. 694; Panchapagesa v. Kalyanasundaram ('57) A.M. 472. Also see Ramnagina v. Harihar ('66) A.P. 179.

(k) Kochukutti v. Bhavani Amma, supra.

(l) (1866) 11 M.I.A. 75.

to hold the joint property as separate owners, and no evidence is admissible of the subsequent acts of the parties to control or alter the effects of the document [§ 326, sub-§ (2)].

3. The third case is of the kind dealt with by the Privy Council in Doorga Pershad v. Kundun (m), that is, the case where the agreement is in writing, but the document does not declare on the face of it the intention of the parties to hold the joint property as separate owners. In such a case, when the question arises as to whether the document operates as a partition, the intention of the parties is to be inferred from (1) the document and from (2) their subsequent acts (n) [§ 326, sub-§ (2)']. Where an instrument of partition after giving one member his share provided that the rest of the property was to be divided in a particular manner and that the remaining members should live like an ordinary undivided family subject to survivorship, it was held by the Privy Council that there was no partition between the other members (o).

4. The last case is of the kind dealt with by the Privy Council in Ganesh Dutt v. Jewach (p), that is, the case where there is no writing at all. In such a case, when the question arises as to whether there has been a partition or not, the intention of the parties as to separation can only be inferred from their acts. The question is one of fact to be decided with due regard to the cumulative effect of all the facts and circumstances and primarily the burden of showing that there has been a partition is on the person setting it up.

In case of old transactions when no contemporeneous documents are maintained and when most of the active participants in the transactions have passed away, though the burden still remains on the person who asserts that there was a partition, it is permissible to fill up gaps in the evidence more readily by reasonable inferences from the evidence on record than in a case where the evidence is not obliterated or lost by passage of time (*p*1).

In Ganesh Dutt's case, a Hindu widow alleging that her husband B has separated from his three brothers in Fasli 1295 brought a suit against them to recover her husband's share in the family as his heir. The defence was that B died joint and undivided. The Privy Council held that there was a partition as evidenced by the following five facts: (1) payment of revenue of certain villages belonging to the family, one-fourth in the name of B and three-fourths in the names of his three brothers; (2) crediting to B in Fasli 1295 one-fourth of a share of Rs. 35,000 recovered by the family under a decree and three-fourths to the three brothers: (3) payment of rent by a lessee of a factory belonging to the family as to one-fourth to B and as to three-fourths to the three brothers: (4) purchase in Fasli 1295 by the four brothers of an estate in their names in equal shares; and (5) a suit instituted after B's death by one of his brothers as the adopted son and heir of B to recover a debt due to the family; as to this last fact it is to be observed that if B had died undivided, the suit would have been brought by the surviving brothers and the adopted son as coparceners. In the above case it was also contended on behalf of B's widow that B had become separate from his brother in food and worship in Fasli 1295, and that fact was of itself conclusive proof of partition. As to this contention their Lordships said: "Cesser of commensality is an element which may properly be

---

(m) (1873) 13 Beng. L.R. 235, 1 I.A. 55.

(n) Doorga Pershad v. Kundun (1873) 13 Beng. L.R. 235, 239, 1 I.A. 55.

(o) Poornanandachi v. Gopalasami Odayar (1936) 63 I.A. 436, 38 Bom. L.R. 1247, 164 I.C. 26, ('36) A.P.C. 281.

(p) (1904) 31 Cal. 262, 31 I.A. 10; Durga v. Lal Bahadur (1929) 4 Luck. 138, 112 I.C. 387, ('28) A.O. 509. See also Budha Mal v. Bhagwan Das (1891) 18 Cal. 302 [P.C.].

(*p*1) Bhagwan Dayal v. Reoti Devi ('62) A.S.C. 287, 294; (1962) S.C.J. 348.

considered in determining the question whether there has been a partition of joint family property, but it is not conclusive. It is therefore necessary to consider whether the evidence in other respects supports or negatives the theory that the cesser in this case was adopted with a view to partition in the legal sense of the word." Their Lordships then proceeded to examine the other evidence in the case and came to the conclusion that the five facts mentioned above supported the theory that the cesser was adopted with a view to partition.

Cesser of commensality, it is stated above, is not a conclusive proof of partition; the reason is that a member may become separate in food and residence merely for his convenience (q). Separate residence of the members of the joint family in different places where they are in service does not show separation (r). Similarly, there are other acts which, though standing by themselves, are not conclusive proof of partition, yet may lead to that conclusion in conjunction with other facts. They are separate occupation of portions of the joint property (s), division of the income of the joint property (t), definement of shares in the joint property in the Revenue or Land Registration records (u), etc. "The mere fact that the shares of the coparceners have been ascertained does not by itself necessarily lead to an inference that the family had separated. There may be reasons other than a contemplated immediate separation for ascertaining what the shares of the coparceners on a separation would be" (v). When besides entries in Revenue records showing that the two brothers who constituted a joint family, held separate khatas of sir and khudkasht lands, it was proved that letters were written by the brothers to one of their near relations expressly indicating their intention to effect partition as soon as possible, and separate suits were filed in the name of the individual brothers against the tenants, it was held that from these facts partition could be inferred (w). The burden, however, of proving that the family continued to be joint in such a case lies on the person alleging it (x).

The statements of a particular person that he is separated ffom a joint family of which he was a coparcener, and that he has no further interest in the joint property or claim to any assets left by his father, would be statements made against the interest of such person, and, after such person is dead, they would be relevant under sec. 32(3) of the Evidence Act. The assertion that there was separation not only in respect of himself but between all the coparceners would be admissible as a connected matter and an integral part of the same statement. It is not merely the precise fact which is against interest that is admissible but all matters that are "involved in it and knit up with the statement."

---

(q) Rewun Persad v. Radha Beeby (1846) 4 M.I.A. 137, 168; Anundee v. Khedoo Lal (1872) 14 M.I.A. 412, 422; Suraj Narain v. Iqbal Narain (1913) 35 All. 80, 40 I.A. 40, 18 I.C. 30 [difference in religious opinions]; Kesavan v. Narayanan ('53) A. Tr. Co. 118.

(r) Mohan Lal v. Ram Dayal (1941) 16 Luck. 708, 194 I.C. 61, ('41) A.O. 331.

(s) Runjeet Singh v. Gujrat Singh (1873) 1 I.A. 9; Murari v. Mukund (1891) 15 Bom. 201.

(t) Sonatun v. Juggutsoondree (1859) 8 M.I.A. 66, 86; Appavu v. Manikkam (1946) Mad. 557. An agreement merely to enjoy or share income in a particular manner does not by itself amount to partial partition. Charandas v. Commissioner of Income-tax (1955) 57 Bom. L.R. 430, ('55) A.B. 343. Also see Udayanath v. Ratnakar ('67) A. Orissa 139 [division of a property for convenience].

(u) Gajendar v. Sardar Singh (1896) 18 All. 176; Ram Pershad v. Lakhpati (1903) 30 Cal. 231, 30 I.A. 1; Parbati v. Naunihal Singh (1909) 31 All. 412, 36 I.A. 71, 3 I.C. 195; Nageshar v. Ganesha (1920) 47 I.A. 57, 42 All. 368, 56 I.C. 306, ('20) A.P. 46; Mst. Bhagwani v. Mohan Singh (1925) 29 C.W.N. 1037, 88 I.C. 385, ('25) A.P.C. 132; Dattatraya v. Shakuntalabai ('56) A.N. 95; Bal Mukundji v. Gokaran Singh ('56) A.A. 124; Chanderjit Das v. Debi Das (1951) A. All. 522; Ramchandra v. Keshav ('53) A.M.B. 184; Arjun Mahto v. Monda Mahtain ('71) A.P. 215.

(v) Palani Ammal v. Muthuvenkatachala (1925) 52 I.A. 83, 85, 48 Mad. 254, 257, 87 I.C. 333, ('25) A.P.C. 49. Also see Girijanandini Devi v. Bijendra Narain ('67) A.S.C. 1124. Lingraj v. Ananta ('57) A. Orissa 63 [subsequent conduct].

(w) Shyam Lal v. Ranbir Singh ('51) A.A. 386.

(x) Beti v. Sikhdar Singh (1928) 50 All. 180, 108 I.C. 721, ('28) A.A. 39.

328. Partial partition.—(1) A partition between coparceners may be partial either in respect of the property or in respect of the persons making it (y).

(2) Partial as to property.—It is open to the members of a joint family to make a division and severance of interest in respect of a part of the joint estate, while retaining their status as a joint family and holding the rest as the properties of a joint and undivided family (z). But where there is evidence to show that the parties intended to sever, then the joint family status is put an end to, and with regard to any portion of the property which remained undivided the presumption would be that the members of the family would hold it as tenants-in-common unless and until a special agreement to hold as joint tenants is proved (a). When a partition is admitted or proved, the presumption is that all the property was divided and a person alleging that family property, in the exclusive possession of one of the members after the partition, is joint and is liable to be partitioned, has to prove his case (b).

(3) Partial as to the persons separating.—Just as a partition may be partial as regards the property, so it may be partial as regards the persons separating. This case arises when there is no general partition amongst all the members of the family.

Separation of one coparcener.—When one coparcener separates from the others, the question arises whether the latter are to be deemed to be joint or reunited or separate. This distinction is important, for the devolution of the estate of a Hindu is governed by different rules according as he was joint, reunited, or separate. The view taken in the earlier Calcutta cases was that the separation of one member was a separation of all, but as regards the non-separating members the presumption was that they had reunited immediately after the separation (c). On the other hand the view taken in some of the later Calcutta cases (d), and also in some Madras cases (e), was that when one coparcener separated from the others, the presumption was that the latter remained joint as before. Since then there have been several important pronouncements by the Judicial Committee and by the Supreme Court. The result of the decisions may be stated as follows:—

(1) The general principle is that every Hindu family is presumed to be joint unless the contrary is proved. This presumption, however, does not continue after one member has separated from the others. As observed by

---

(y) Rewun Persad v. Radha Beeby (1846) 4 M.I.A. 137, 168; Appovier v. Rama Subba Aiyan (1866) 11 M.I.A. 75, 90; Muthusami v. Nallakulantha (1895) 18 Mad. 418; Sudarsanam v. Narasimhulu (1902) 25 Mad. 149, 197.

(z) Ramalinga v. Narayana (1922) 49 I.A. 168, 45 Mad. 489, 68 I.C. 451, ('22) A.P.C. 201; Jagmohan v. Ranchhoddas (1945) Nag. 892.

(a) Dagadu v. Sakhubai (1922) 47 Bom. 773, 73 I.C. 369, ('24) A.B. 31, dissenting from Govrishankar v. Atmaram (1894) 18 Bom. 611; Martand v. Radhabai (1930) 54 Bom. 616, 127 I.C. 510, ('31) A.B. 97; Beni Parshad v. Must. Gurdevi (1923) 4 Lah. 252, 73 I.C. 894, ('23) A.L. 497; P. C. Pai v. Agricultural I.T.O. ('70) A. Mys. 168.

(b) Kumarappa Chettiar v. Adaikkalam Chetty (1932) 55 Mad. 483, 137 I.C. 616, ('32) A.M. 207; Nadiammai Achi v. Mariappa ('51) A.M. 625, (1949) 2 M.L.J. 806; Kaulesari v. Ambika Dutt ('50) A. Patna 365; Ramjugeshwar v. Gajadhar (1950) Pat. 980; Tejraj v. Mohanlal ('55) A. Raj. 157; Dwarka Nath v. Kedar Nath ('51) A.P. 445; Chhatradhari v. Akleshwar ('52) A.P. 382.

(c) Jaudubchunder v. Benodbeharry (1863) 1 Hyde. 214; Keshub Ram v. Nand Kishore (1869) 11 W.R. 308; Petambur v. Hurish Chunder (1871) 15 W.R. 200.

(d) Upendra v. Gopee Nath (1883) 9 Cal. 817; Bata v. Chintamani (1886) 12 Cal. 262.

(e) Sudarsanam v. Narasimhulu (1902) 25 Mad. 149, 157; Ranganatha v. Narayanasami (1908) 31 Mad. 482; Rangasami v. Sundarajulu (1916) 31 Mad. L.J. 472, 35 I.C. 52, ('17) A.M. 722.

the Judicial Committee, "There is no presumption when one coparcener separates from the others, that the latter remain united. . . . An agreement amongst the remaining members of a joint family to remain united or to reunite must be proved like any other fact" (f). It is open to the non-separating members to remain joint and to enjoy as members of a joint family what remained of the joint family property after such a partition. No express agreement is necessary for this purpose. The intention to remain joint may be inferred from the way in which their family business was carried on after their former coparcener had separated from them (g), or it may be inferred from other conduct indicating such an intention (h). These principles were stated with approval by the Supreme Court in Bhagwati Prasad v. Dulhin Rameshwari [1951] S.C.R. 603 (*h*1). It was also observed in this case that it would be a question of fact to be determined in each case upon the evidence relating to the intention of the parties whether there was a separation among the other coparceners or they remained united and the burden would lie on the party who asserts the existence of a particular state of things on the basis of which he claims relief. The principles were also stated in the undermentioned case by the Supreme Court (*h*2).

(2) When there has been a separation between the members of a joint family, there is no presumption that there was a separation between one of the members and his descendants. Thus if two brothers A and B separate, there is no presumption that there was a separation between A and his sons, or a separation between B and his sons (i).

(3) A Hindu father may separate from his sons, and the sons may remain joint or he may separate from his sons by one wife, and remain joint with his sons by another wife. Here again, it is conceived, it is a question of their intention to remain joint which must be proved like any other fact (j).

(4) Where in a suit a decree is passed for partition, and the question arises whether the separation effected by the decree was only a separation of the plaintiff from his coparceners or was a separation of all the members of the joint family from each other, the decree alone should be looked at to determine that question. It is the decree alone which can be evidence of what was decreed (k).

---

(f) Balabux v. Rukhmabai (1903) 30 I.A. 130-137, 30 Cal. 725 [brothers]; Jatti v. Banwari Lal (1923) 50 I.A. 192, 4 Lah. 350, 74 I.C. 462, ('23) A.P.C. 136 [brothers]; Bal Krishna v. Ram Krishna (1931) 58 I.A. 220, 53 All. 300, 132 I.C. 613, ('31) A.P.C. 154 [brothers]; Babanna v. Parawa (1926) 50 Bom. 815, 100 I.C. 147, ('27) A.B. 68 [brothers]; Bhimabai v. Gurunathgouda (1928) 30 Bom. L.R. 859, 114 I.C. 392, ('28) A.B. 367; Martand v. Radhabai (1930) 54 Bom. 616, 127 I.C. 510, ('31) A.B. 97 [brothers]. The decision to the contrary in the following cases do not seem to be correct:—Sarju Prasad v. Nand Gopal (1927) 2 Luck. 691, 104 I.C. 315, ('27) A.O. 815; Musammat Menda Kuar v. Mirtunjai Bakhsh (1928) 3 Luck. 220, 105 I.C. 337, ('27) A.O. 580; Ramchandra v. Tukaram (1921) 45 Bom. 914, 61 I.C. 761, ('21) A.B. 276; Bhagwati Prasad v. Dulhin Rameshwari (1951) S.C.R. 603; Pramod Kumar v. Damodar ('53) A. Orissa 179; Sahu Ram Kishen v. State of U.P. ('58) A.A. 35.

(g) Palani Ammal v. Muthuvenkatachala (1925) 52 I.A. 83, 48 Mad. 254, 87 I.C. 333, ('25) A.P.C. 49; J. Seethamma v. J. Veeranna (1950) 2 M.L.J. 21, ('50) A.M. 785.

(h) Ram Pershad Singh v. Lakhpati Koer (1903) 30 I.A. 1, 30 Cal. 231.

(*h*1) Also see Bhagwan Dayal v. Reoti Devi ('62) A.S.C. 287; (1962) I S.C.J. 348; Jaigobind Singh v. Brij Behari Singh ('66) A.P. 168.

(*h*2) Girijanandini v. Bijendra Narain ('67) A.S.C. 1124.

(i) Hari Bakhsh v. Babu Lal (1924) 51 I.A. 163, 5 Lah. 92, 83 I.C. 418, ('24) A.P.C. 126; Deputy Commissioner v. Sheo Nath (1927) 2 Luck. 459, 100 I.C. 689, ('27) A.O. 149.

(j) But see Sengoda v. Muthu (1924) 47 Mad. 567, 78 I.C. 927, ('24) A.M. 625.

(k) Palani Ammal v. Muthuvenkatachala (1925) 52 I.A. 83, 87, 48 Mad. 254, 259, 87 I.C. 333, ('25) A.P.C. 49; Ram Pershad v. Lakhpati (1903) 30 I.A. 1, 10, 30 Cal. 231, 253.

Reference may also be made to the undermentioned decision of the Supreme Court (kk).

The following are the leading Privy Council cases on the subject:

(a) Balabux v. Rukhmabai (1903) 30 I.A. 130, 137, 30 Cal. 725.—In this case three brothers, G, K and L, owned a shop which had been founded by their father. In 1870 K separated from his brothers, took out his share amounting to about Rs. 11,000 and started a shop of his own. In 1894 L's son sued G's widow for possession of property held by her as belonging to her husband, alleging that G and L had continued joint after K's separation, and that on G's death he became entitled to the property by survivorship. The widow denied that her husband continued joint with L. It was held that K having admittedly separated himself in 1870, the burden lay on the plaintiff to prove that there had been an agreement after K's separation between G and L to remain united or to reunite, and that no such agreement having been proved, the plaintiff was not entitled to succeed.

(b) Balkishen Das v. Ram Narain Sahu (1903) 30 I.A. 139, 30 Cal. 738.—In this case a joint family consisted of four cousins. The cousins entered into an agreement which stated that defined share in the whole joint family property had been allotted to the several coparceners. The agreement also gave them liberty either to live together or to separate their own business. It was held that the agreement defining the share effected a partition in estate, and that evidence of some of the coparceners having continued to enjoy their shares in common would not affect the tenure of the property or their interest in it. It was also held that the clause giving the parties the option of being joint or separate was not inconsistent with a separation in estate.

(c) Jatti v. Banwari Lal (1923) 50 I.A. 192, 4 Lah. 350, 74 I.C. 462, ('23) A.P.C. 136.—In this case a joint family consisted of four brothers. The brothers executed a deed by which the joint family property was described as divided between them, and one of them was finally paid out. Thereafter the family business was carried on by the three remaining brothers, and the profits of the business were carried in equal shares to their separate accounts. In subsequent proceedings the question arose whether the remaining three brothers were joint or separate. It was held that the deed coupled with the mode in which the accounts were kept showed that the remaining three brothers had ceased to be coparceners.

(d) Hari Bakhsh v. Babu Lal (1924) 51 I.A. 163, 5 Lah. 92, 83 I.C. 418, ('24) A.P.C. 126.—In this case the Judicial Committee held that the fact of a separation having been effected between brothers raises no presumption that there was a separation of the joint family constituted by one of the brothers and his descendants. Thus if a joint family consists of two brothers A and B, and each brother has a son, and A and B separate, there is no presumption that the separation between A and B involves necessarily a separation between A and his son or between B and his son. To hold otherwise "would be introducing a novel principle into the law of joint Hindu families governed by the law of the Mitakshara."

(e) Palani Ammal v. Muthuvenkatachala (1925) 52 I.A. 83, 48 Mad. 254, 87 I.C. 333, ('25) A.P.C. 49.—In this case their Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows:—"It is also now beyond doubt that a member of such a joint family [that is Mitakshara family] can separate himself from the other members of the joint family and is on separation entitled to have his share in the property of the joint family ascertained and partitioned off, for him, and that the remaining coparceners, without any special agreement amongst themselves, may continue to be coparceners and to enjoy as members of a joint family what remained after such a partition of the family property. That the remaining members continued to be joint may, if disputed, be inferred from the way in which their family business was carried on after their previous coparcener had separated from them. It is also quite clear that if a joint Hindu family separates, the family or any members of it may agree to reunite as a joint Hindu family, but such a reuniting is for obvious reasons, which would apply in many cases under the law of the Mitakshara, of very rare occurrence, and when it happens it must be strictly proved as any other disputed fact is strictly proved. The leading authority for that last proposition is Balabux Ladhuram v. Rukhmabai (l)."

(5) In a suit for partition which proceeds to a decree, the decree for partition is the evidence to show whether the separation was only a separation of the plaintiff from his coparceners or was a separation of all the members of the joint family from each other (m).

---

(kk) Girijanandini v. Bijendra Narain supra.

(l) (1903) 30 I.A. 130, 30 Cal. 725.

(6) A renunciation by a member of his interest in the family property stands on a different footing altogether from the case where one member receives his share in the property and separates from the other members (n) [§ 264]. In the former case, the other members continue joint as before. The effect of renunciation is to reduce the number of persons to whom shares would be allotted if and when a division of the estate takes place.

(7) It has been laid down in some cases that where a partial partition is proved, the presumption is that there has been a complete partition both as to parties and property (o). Pronouncements of the Judicial Committee show that there is no such general presumption (p).

(8) Though a partition may be partial by mutual agreement of parties, no coparcener can by suit enforce a partial partition against the other coparceners. The suit must be one for a complete partition [§ 333].

329. Partition by decree of Court.—There are some decisions which lend colour to the view that where a suit is brought for partition, there is no partition or severance of the joint status until a decree is passed in the suit declaring the rights of the parties interested in the joint family property (q). But this view is no longer tenable; for, as held by the Judicial Committee, the very institution of a suit for partition operates as a partition [except in the case of a minor's suit—[§ 325 (1) (ii)], though a decree may be necessary for working out the results of the severance and for allotting definite shares [§ 325]. Where a decree for partition is passed, the decree is evidence to show whether the separation was only a separation of the plaintiff from his coparceners or was a separation of all the members of the joint family from each other. "It is the decree alone which can be evidence of what was decreed" (r). See § 325(1).

Although a suit does not in terms seek a partition, yet if it indicates a distinct intention to obtain a separation in estate, and the decree gives effect to that intention such decree [it is submitted, the very institution of the suit] effects a partition as regards the joint title (s).

As to decrees in suits for partition, see Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, sec. 54, and O. 20, r. 18.

Births and deaths pending suit

330. Births and deaths pending suit for partition.—(1) The institution of a suit for partition by a member of the joint family effects a severance of the

---

(m) Palani Ammal v. Muthuvenkatachala (1925) 52 I.A. 83, 48 Mad. 254, 87 I.C. 333, ('25) A.P.C. 49.

(n) Sudarsanam v. Narasimhulu (1902) 25 Mad. 149, 156; Parsotam Das v. Jagan Nath (1919) 41 All. 361, 50 I.C. 357, ('19) A.A. 381; Alluri Venkatapathi Raju v. D. Venkatanarasimha Raju (1936) 63 I.A. 397, (1937) Mad. 1, 38 Bom. L.R. 1238, 164 I.C. 1, ('36) A.P.C. 264.

(o) Vaidyanatha v. Aiyasamy (1909) 32 Mad. 119, 1 I.C. 408; Ananadibai v. Hari (1911) 35 Bom. 293, 10 I.C. 911; Ramchandra v. Tukaram (1921) 45 Bom. 914, 61 I.C. 761, ('21) A.B. 276.

(p) Babanna v. Parawa (1926) 50 Bom. 815, 829, 100 I.C. 147, ('27) A.B. 68.

(q) See Chidambaram v. Gauri Nachiar (1879) 2 Mad. 86, 6 I.A. 177; Ram Pershad v. Lakhpati (1903) 30 Cal. 231, 30 I.A. 1; Subbaraya v. Manika (1896) 19 Mad. 345; Lakshman v. Narayan (1900) 24 Bom. 182; Mahadev v. Govind (1912) 36 Bom. 550, 16 I.C. 991; Thandayuthapani v. Raghunatha (1912) 35 Mad. 239, 10 I.C. 660.

(r) Palani Ammal v. Muthuvenkatachala (1925) 52 I.A. 83, 87, 48 Mad. 254, 259, 87 I.C. 333, ('25) A.P.C. 49; (1903) 30 Cal. 231, 253, 30 I.A. 1, 10, supra.

(s) Joy Narain v. Girish Chunder (1878) 4 Cal. 434, 5 I.A. 228.

joint status of the family. His share, therefore, is not liable to be diminished by the birth of another member of the family subsequent to the date of the suit, as the latter is not to be counted for a share; nor is it augmented by the death of any of the members subsequent to that date as his share will pass to his heirs (t). Consequently the heirs of the deceased party are entitled to prosecute the suit for partition (u).

There has been a divergence of judicial opinion as to the legal position where the suit is brought by a minor whether as a sole plaintiff or as a co-plaintiff with an adult coparcener. The question will now require to be determined in accordance with the principle laid down by the Supreme Court in Pedasubhayya v. Akkamma (*u*1) to which reference has been made under § 325. According to the Madras and Bombay High Courts, the mere institution of such a suit does not effect a severance of the joint status, but if a decree is passed in the suit, the partition dates from the date of the suit [§ 325 (1) (ii)]. The result is that if a decree is passed, the minor's share will not decrease by the birth of a member subsequent to the date of the suit; nor will it increase by the subsequent death of a member. But if the Court refuses to decree separation as regards the minor, the minor's share will increase by subsequent deaths (v). According to the Patna High Court, the mere institution of a suit by a minor effects a severance of the joint status as much as a suit by an adult [§ 325 (1) (ii)]. His share, therefore, is not diminished by subsequent births nor is it increased by subsequent deaths (w).

In the undermentioned case (x) the question was left open. Reference may be made to §§ 308 and 325 ante.

(2) See the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act 1937: § 35 supra.

331. Death of a coparcener pending suit for partition.—This section is now amalgamated with § 330.

332. Death of a female entitled to a share pending suit for partition.—The share allotted to a female on partition is not her stridhana [§ 128]. Therefore, if such a female dies before the final decree though after the preliminary decree, her share remains an integral part of the estate available for division among the male members of the family (y), including those born after the suit but before her death (z) and the Court is bound to take notice of such deaths and make the necessary changes in the preliminary decree (a). Also see the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937: § 35 supra. The rule stated above must now be read in the context of sec. 6 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, and particularly the proviso to that section.

---

(t) Girja Bai v. Sadashiv (1916) 43 I.A. 151, 43 Cal. 1031, 37 I.C. 321, ('16) A.P.C. 104; Sayed Kasam v. Jorawar Singh (1922) 49 I.A. 358, 50 Cal. 84, 68 I.C. 573, ('22) A.P.C. 353.

(u) Rajrup Rai v. Sheo Shankar (1945) All. 287.

(*u*1) (1958) S.C. 1042; Natisha Begum v. Alumuga Thaver ('66) A.M. 111.

(v) Ganapathy v. Subramanyam (1929) 52 Mad. 845, 122 I.C. 167, ('29) A.M. 738; Ramsing v. Fakira (1939) Bom. 256. Also see Suryanarayanu v. Ganesulu (1953) 2 M.L.J. 439, ('54) A.M. 203 [property sold in attachment before preliminary decree].

(w) Krishna Lal v. Nandeshwar (1919) 4 Pat. L.J. 38, 46-48, 44 I.C. 146, ('18) A.P. 91.

(x) Palaniappa v. Alayan (1921) 48 I.A. 539, 542, 543, 44 Mad. 740, 743, 64 I.C. 439, ('22) A.P.C. 228.

(y) Sheo Dyal v. Judoonath (1868) 9 W.R. 61; Raoji v. Anant (1918) 42 Bom. 535, 46 I.C. 750, ('18) A.B. 175. Also see Shamrao v. Kashibai ('56) A.N. 110.

(z) Krishna Lal v. Nandeshwar (1919) 4 Pat. L.J. 38, 48-49, 44 I.C. 146, ('18) A.P. 91.

(a) Bhiwra v. Renuka (1949) Nag. 400.

Suit for partition

333. Suit for partition: parties to the suit: what property it should comprise.—Any one of several members of a joint family is entitled to require partition of joint family property, and his demand to that effect, if not complied with, can be enforced by suit (b). The following are the leading points to be noted in connection with a suit for partition:—

(1) Who may sue for partition.—Subject to the provisions of §§ 307 and 308 every coparcener and every purchaser of the interest of a coparcener is entitled to institute a suit for partition.

A suit by a coparcener excluded from coparcenary property to enforce his right to share therein must be brought within 12 years from the date when the exclusion becomes known to him: The Limitation Act, 1963, Schedule Art. 110. See § 235 (3a).

(2) Parties to suit.—(a) The plaintiff in a partition suit should implead as defendants:—

(i) the heads of all branches (c);

(ii) females who are entitled to a share on partition;

(iii) the purchaser of a portion of the plaintiff's share, the plaintiff himself being a coparcener;

(iv) if the plaintiff himself is a purchaser from a coparcener, his alienor.

The above are necessary parties and if any of them is not joined, the suit is liable to be dismissed. The entire joint family must be represented either expressly or implicitly (d). Reference may be made to sec. 6 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, and particularly to the proviso to that section. Also see Notes under that section post.

(b) It is desirable that the following persons should be made parties; though not necessary parties, they are proper parties to such a suit:

(i) a mortgagee with possession of the family property or of the undivided interest of a coparcener (e);

(ii) simple mortgagees of specific items of the family property (e);

(iii) purchaser of the undivided interest of a coparcener (e);

(iv) persons entitled to provision for their maintenance and marriage, that is, widows, daughters, sisters, and such like, and disqualified heirs;

(v) any person entitled to maintenance from the family (f).

The plaintiff may also implead any other coparcener or any person interested in the family property such as a mortgagee or a lessee. Such a person may himself apply and be made a party.

---

(b) Madho Parshad v. Mehrban Singh (1890) 17 I.A. 194, 18 Cal. 157, 161.

(c) Pahaladh v. Luchmunbutty (1869) 12 W.R. 256; Digambar v. Dhanraj (1922) 1 Pat. 361, 67 I.C. 156, ('22) A.P. 96. Also see Bhikulal v. Kisanlal ('59) A.B. 260.

(d) Ramanathan v. Veerappa ('56) A.M. 89.

(e) Sadu v. Ram (1892) 16 Bom. 608; Duri v. Tadepatri (1910) 33 Mad. 246, 4 I.C. 392. See Code of Civil Procedure, O. 1, r. 10. Also see Krishanamachari v. Dhanalakshmi ('68) A.M. 142 [purchaser from a coparcener who claimed a property to be his self acquired property].

(f) Sadu v. Ram (1892) 16 Bom. 608; Jotiram Ekoba v. Ramchandra Trimbak (1941) Bom. 638, 197 I.C. 788, ('41) A.B. 382. See Code of Civil Procedure, O. 1, r. 10.

Illustrations

(1) If A has two sons $S^1$ and $S^2$ and grandsons by $S^1$ and $S^2$, in a suit for partition by $S^1$ against A and $S^2$, the grandsons are not necessary parties though they may be proper parties (g)..

(2) Where the suit is not for partition between all the coparceners inter se but only between the two branches of the families, the heads of each branch are the only necessary parties (h).

(3) Persons entitled to sue and property to be comprised in a suit for partition.—A suit for partition may be instituted—

(i) by a coparcener against the other coparceners;

(ii) by the purchaser of the interest of a coparcener against his vendor and the other coparceners;

(iii) against the purchaser of the interest of a coparcener by the other coparceners;

(iv) by the purchaser of the interest of a coparcener in one of the several joint family properties against the purchaser of the interest of the other coparceners in the same property.

Whether a suit for partition should comprise all the joint family property, in other words, whether the suit should be one for general partition, or whether it can be one for a partial partition only depends upon who the parties to the suit are—

(i) The general rule is that where a suit for partition is brought by a coparcener against the other coparceners, it should embrace the whole family property (i). This rule is subject to certain qualifications. Thus where a portion of the property is not available for actual partition (j) as being in the possession of a mortgagee (k), or where it is held jointly by the family with a stranger (l), a separate suit for partition may be brought in respect of that portion. Similarly, where part of the joint property consists of land situated outside the jurisdiction of the Court in which the suit for partition is brought, a separate suit may be brought in respect of that portion in the Court of the place where that portion is situated (m).

Hotchpot.—A member of a joint family suing his coparceners for partition of family property is bound to bring into hotchpot, in order that there may be a complete and final partition, all family property that may be in his possession (n), even though it be land situated

---

(g) Digambar v. Dhanraj (1922) 1 Pat. 361, 67 I.C. 156, ('22) A.P. 96.

(h) Bishambar Das v. Kanshi Prashad (1932) 13 Lah. 483, 141 I.C. 45, ('32) A.L. 641.

(i) Nanabhai v. Nathabhai (1870) 7 Bom. H.C.A.C. 46; Trimbak v. Narayan (1874) 11 Bom. H.C. 69; Ganpat v. Annaji (1899) 23 Bom. 144; Haridas v. Pran Nath (1886) 12 Cal. 566. See Code of Civil Procedure, O. 2, rr. 1 and 2. The rule, however, is not absolute: Harihar v. Nabakishore ('63) A. Orissa 45.

(j) Pattaravy v. Audimula (1870) 5 Mad. H.C. 419; Balunki v. Benudhar ('67) A. Orissa 30.

(k) Narayan v. Pandurang (1875) 12 Bom. H.C. 148; Kristayya v. Narasimhan (1900) 23 Mad. 608.

(l) Purushottam v. Atmaram (1899) 23 Bom. 597; Lachmi v. Janki (1901) 23 All. 216 [where the property was the exclusive property of some of the coparceners only]; Laxman v. Bayabai (1955) Nag. 656, ('55) A.N. 241.

(m) Subba v. Rama (1867) 3 Mad. H.C. 376 [see Code of Civil Procedure, s. 16]; Punchanun v. Shib Chunder (1887) 14 Cal. 835; Balaram v. Ramchandra (1898) 22 Bom. 922 [See cl. 12, Letters Patent]. See also Abdul Karim v. Badrudeen (1905) 28 Mad. 216. See Jaganath v. Diocession Corporation (1950) 29 Pat. 1065.

(n) Ramlochun v. Rughoobur (1871) 15 W.R. 111; Lallijeet v. Rajcoomar (1876) 25 W.R. 353.

beyond the local limits of the ordinary original jurisdiction of the Court in which the suit is brought (o), provided it is situated within India (p).

(ii) The next case is where a coparcener sells his undivided interest in one of several properties belonging to the coparcenary, and a suit for partition is brought by the purchaser of such interest against his vendor and the other coparceners. In this case there is a conflict of decisions as to whether he can sue for partition of that property alone in which he is interested as a purchaser, or whether he should bring a suit for a general partition of all the family properties. This subject is dealt with in § 261(3).

(iii) The third case is where a coparcener sells his undivided interest in one of several properties belonging to the coparcenary, and a suit for partition is brought by the other coparceners against the purchaser. As to the rights of the other coparceners in such a case, see § 261(3).

(iv) The last case may be put in the form of an illustration. A and B are members of a joint family. The family property consists of three houses X, Y and Z. A sells his interest in house X to C. B sells his interest in the same house to D. In such a case D can sue C for partition of house X, without asking for a partition of houses Y and Z. A and B, no doubt, must be joined as defendants; but the real contest in this case is between strangers to the family, namely, C and D, and there is no reason why such contest should not be determined without reference to the remaining property of the family (q).

Miscellaneous

334. Conversion and Partition.—Conversion of a member of a joint family to Mahomedanism (r), or to Christianity (s), or to any other religion, operates as a severance of the joint status as between him and the other members of the family, but not as a severance among the other members inter se. It extinguishes the right of survivorship as between the convert and his coparceners. He ceases to be a coparcener from the moment of his conversion, and is entitled to receive his share in the joint family property as it stood at the date of his conversion (t).

A member of a joint Hindu family does not by his conversion forfeit his interest in the joint family property. See § 97, ill. (a), and the Caste Disabilities Removal Act, 1850.

334A. Special Marriage Act, 1872: Special Marriage Act, 1954.—By operation of sec. 22 of the Special Marriage Act, 1872, there results severance of status of a person marrying under the Act. The Act of 1954 repeals the

---

(o) Hari v. Ganpatrao (1883) 7 Bom. 272; Balaram v. Ramchandra (1898) 22 Bom. 922, 928.

(p) Ramacharya v. Anantacharya (1894) 18 Bom. 389.

(q) Subbarazu v. Venkataratnam (1892) 15 Mad. 234; Iburamsa v. Thirumalai (1911) 34 Mad. 269, 7 I.C. 559.

(r) Gobind v. Abdul (1903) 25 All. 546, 573; Ram Pergash v. Mussammat Dahan Bibi (1924) 3 Pat. 152, 78 I.C. 749, ('24) A.P. 420.

(s) Khunni Lal v. Gobind (1911) 33 All. 356, 38 I.A. 87, 10 I.C. 477, on app. from 29 All. 487; Kulada v. Haripada (1913) 40 Cal. 407, 17 I.C. 257.

(t) Kulada v. Haripada (1913) 40 Cal. 407, 17 I.C. 257; Vella Venkatasubbayya v. Yella Venkatramayya (1944) Mad. 33.

earlier enactment. The effect of sec. 19 of the Act of 1954 is the same, viz., the marriage results in severance of the person from the joint family. Reference may be made to the case noted below (u).

335. The Partition Act, 1893.—(1) Where in a suit for partition, it appears to the Court that a division of the property cannot reasonably or conveniently be made, and that a sale of the property and distribution of the proceeds would be more beneficial for all the shareholders, the Court may, if it thinks fit, on the request of any such shareholders interested individually or collectively to the extent of one moiety or upwards, direct a sale of the property and a distribution of the proceeds.

(2) Where a share of a dwelling house belonging to an undivided family has been transferred to a person who is not a member of the family, it is open to any member of the family who is entitled to a share in the dwelling house to buy the share of the transferee at a valuation made by the Court.

The partition suit need not be by the transferee (uu).

This section reproduces the provisions of secs. 2 and 4 of the Partition Act, 1893. As to powers of the Court de hors provisions of the Act see the undermentioned case (u1).

Covenant to pre-empt.—An agreement between two brothers at a partition that if one sharer wishes to sell his share in the house or if his share was sold in any other way the other sharer would be entitled to buy it at a certain amount is not void under section 14 of the Transfer of Property Act and is binding on the representative of the party (v).

VI.—REOPENING PARTITION

Note.—Under Hindu law partition is made only once, but there are some exceptions to this rule. The posthumous son can claim a re-partition and so can the heir of a disqualified person and an absent coparcener. The case of the adopted son also must be included amongst the exceptions. A partition may also be reopened on grounds mentioned in §§ 337-339 below.

336. Rights of sons.—A partition may be reopened by an after-born in the circumstances mentioned in §§ 309 and 310 or a person validly adopted to a deceased coparcener (who if existing at the time of the partition would have been entitled to a share) by his widow after the partition (w).

In reopening a partition, made between the surviving members of a joint Hindu family, at the instance of a son adopted by the widow of a deceased coparcener, the adopted son is entitled to claim that the properties alienated not for justifying necessity by the surviving coparceners should be assigned to their shares and that he should be awarded his share in the property existing at the date of his adoptive father's death. Whenever a partition is reopened, shares must be allocated on a fair and equitable principle. Equity in such a case could be satisfied if, in determining the share of the adopted son, the alienation made by one of the coparceners is allotted to his share and the partition is opened on that basis and the properties are re-allotted on that basis. This in no way can be said to interfere with the right of a divided coparcener to deal with his share as his own or of impairing the principle that an adopted son is bound by all lawful alienations made prior to the adoption does arise (x).

Where in a partition between two brothers, one brother transferred a portion of his share to the other in consideration of the fact that the latter had discharged joint family debts out of his separate property, the son of the former cannot question the transfer (y).

---

(u) Girdharilal v. Fatechand ('55) A.M.B. 148.
(uu) Ramaswami v. Subramania ('67) A.M. 156.
(u1) Ramaprasada Rao v. Subbarameiah ('58) A.A.P. 647, (1957) A.P. 566.
(v) Ratanlal v. Ramanujdas (1945) Nag. 174.
(w) Sankaralingam Pillai v. Veluchami Pillai (1943) Mad. 309, 205 I.C. 1, ('43) A.M. 43. See 'Adoption' post.
(x) Krishtappa v. Gopal ('57) A.B. 214 [F.B.].
(y) Ananthachari v. Krishnaswami (1938) Mad. 410, 174 I.C. 599, ('38) A.M. 102.

337. Fraud.—A partition may be reopened, if any coparcener has obtained an unfair advantage in the division of the property by fraud upon the other coparceners (z).

338. Mistake.—Where, after a partition has been made, it is discovered that property allotted to one of the coparceners did not belong to the family, but to a stranger, or that it was subject to a mortgage, the coparcener to whom such property has been allotted is entitled to compensation out of the shares of the other coparceners, and the partition may, if necessary, be reopened for readjustment of the shares (a).

339. Where a portion of joint property was excluded from partition.—Where a portion of the joint property has been excluded from partition by mistake, accident or fraud, such portion continues to be the joint property of the family, and it must be divided amongst the persons who took under the partition (b). It is not necessary in such a case to reopen the original partition (c).

Finality of partition.—"Once is the partition of inheritance made, once is a damsel given in marriage; and once does a man say, 'I give'; these three are by good men done once for all and irrevocably." Manu, IX 47. Therefore, a partition once made cannot be reopened except in the cases mentioned in the above sections. Where a partition is prejudicial to the interests of a minor coparcener, it may be set aside as regards himself; see § 308, sub-§ (2).

VII.—EFFECT OF PARTITION

340. Devolution of share acquired on partition.—The effect of a partition is to dissolve the coparcenary, with the result that the separating members thenceforth hold their respective shares as their separate property, and the share of the each member will pass on his death to his heirs. But if a member while separating from his other coparceners, continues joint with his own male issue, the share allotted to him on partition will in his hands retain the character of a coparcenary property as regards the male issue [§ 223, sub-§ (4)].

341. Whether separating son can inherit as an heir.—(1) It has been held by the High Courts of Bombay, Madras, Allahabad and some other High Courts that on the death of a father leaving self-acquired property, an undivided son takes such property to the exclusion of a divided son. See § 43 "divided and undivided sons," p. 108 ante. But now see Sec. 8 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, which has abolished distinction between a divided son and an undivided son in the matter of inheritance of self-acquired property.

(2) If, however, there is no undivided son, the divided son is entitled to succeed to such property in preference to his father's widow (d).

---

(z) Moro Vishvanath v. Ganesh (1873) 10 Bom. H.C. 444, 451; Lakshman v. Gopal (1899) 23 Bom. 385. Also see § 292 ante. Also see Veerabhadrappa v. Lingappa ('63) A. Mys. 5 [no proof of fraud, unfair dealing or overreaching].

(a) Maruti v. Rama (1897) 21 Bom. 333; Purushottam v. Atmaram (1899) 23 Bom. 597; Balaji v. Annapurnabai (1952) Nag. 99, ('52) A.N. 2; Debabrata Ghose v. Jnanendra ('60) A.C. 381.

(b) Jogendra v. Baladeb (1907) 12 C.W.N. 127; Bhowani v. Juggernath (1908) 13 C.W.N. 309, 316; Lachman v. Sanwal (1878) 1 All. 543; Ganeshi Lal v. Babu Lal (1918) 40 All. 374, 45 I.C. 4, ('18) A.A. 223.

(c) Colebrook's Digest, vol. III, p. 400; Kumaraswami v. Rajamanikkam ('66) A. Kerala 266.

(d) Ramappa v. Sithammal (1879) 2 Mad. 182; Balkrishna v. Savitribai (1879) 3 Bom. 54.

But see sec. 3(1) of the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937 and sec. 8 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, under which the father's widow inherits simultaneously with the son, whether divided or undivided.

(3) If the deceased dies leaving a divided son and a divided grandson by a predeceased son, the divided son does not exclude the divided grandson, but they succeed to the property in equal shares (e).

Propositions (2) and (3) proceed on the ground that partition does not destroy the filial relation nor the rights of inheritance incidental to such relation.

The Patna High Court has applied this principle in favour of a separated grandson in the matter of succession to the separate property of the deceased grandfather (f). In this case the grandfather K partitioned his properties amongst his two sons B and S. Subsequently the plaintiff who was one of the four sons of B separated from his father and his other brothers who continued to remain joint. K then died and the question was whether the plaintiff who was separate from his father and brothers could claim along with them his share of the properties left by K. The High Court held in favour of the plaintiff being of opinion that the right by birth in the grand-father's property which the grandson had under Mitakshara law could not be annulled by partition.

Illustration

A and his son B are members of an undivided family. B receives his share of the joint property, and separates from A. A then dies leaving a widow and his son B. B, as A's son, is entitled to inherit to A in preference to the widow. The fact that B has separated from A does not interfere with his right of inheritance. [Also see 341(2) above].

VIII.—REUNION

342. Who may reunite.—"A reunion in estate properly so called can only take place between persons who were parties to the original partition" (g). It would appear from this that a reunion can take place between any persons who were parties to the original partition. The Commentators, however, are not unanimous on this point. According to the Mitakshara (h), the Dayabhaga (Bengal school), and the Smriti Chandrika (Madras school), a member of a joint family once separated can reunite only with his father, brother or paternal uncle, but not with any other relation, as, for instance, paternal grandfather or paternal uncle's son, though such relation was a party to the original partition. According to the Vivada Chintamani (Mithila school) and the Mayukha (which is the paramount authority in Gujarat, the island of Bombay and the northern Konkan), a person may reunite with any relation who was a party to the original partition (i). Only males can reunite (j).

No writing is necessary for a reunion. Even persons who are parties to a registered deed of partition may reunite by an oral agreement (k).

---

(e) Marudayi v. Doraisami (1907) 30 Mad. 348.

(f) Bhairab v. Birendra (1949) 28 Patna 123, ('50) A. Pat. 1; Jatru Pahan v. Ambikajit Prasad ('57) A.P. 570.

(g) Balabux v. Rukhmabai (1903) 30 Cal. 725, 734, 30 I.A. 130, 136; Akshav v. Hari (1908) 35 Cal. 721; Vishvanath v. Krishnaji (1866) 3 Bom. H.C.A.C. 69; Lakshmibai v. Ganpat (1867) 4 Bom. H.C.O.C. 150, 166.

(h) Hira Singh v. Mst. Mangla (1928) 9 Lah. 324, 106 I.C. 877, ('28) A.L. 122; Ram Narain Chaudhury v. Pan Kuer (1935) 14 Pat. 268, 62 I.A. 16, ('35) A.P.C. 9.

(i) Basanta v. Jogendra (1906) 33 Cal. 371 [Mitakshara]; Vishvanath v. Krishnaji (1866) 3 Bom. H.C.A.C. 69 at pp. 73, 74 [Mayukha]; Bal Kishen Das v. Ram Narain (1903) 30 Cal. 738, 753, 30 I.A. 139 [Dayabhaga]; Abhai Churn v. Mangal (1892) 19 Cal. 634, 638 [Dayabhaga].

(j) Nanuram v. Radhabai (1942) Nag. 24, ('40) A.N. 241.

(k) Mahalakshmamma v. Suryanarayana (1928) 51 Mad. 977, 117 I.C. 113, ('28) A.M. 113. Such an agreement, however, would be a difficult matter to establish. Narasamma v. Venkata Narasi ('54) A.M. 282, (1953) 2 M.L.J. 695.

The leading text on the subject is that of Brihaspati, which runs as follows:—

"He who being once separated dwells again through affection with his father, brother or paternal uncle, is termed reunited."

The conflict of opinion among the Commentators has arisen from the fact that some Commentators regard the list given in the above text as exhaustive, while others regard it as merely illustrative.

343. Effect of reunion.—The effect of a reunion is to remit the reunited members to their former status as members of a joint Hindu family (l). See § 60 and § 94.

The question whether there has been a reunion or not derives its importance from the fact that the devolution of the interest of a reunited member is governed by the special rules laid down in § 60 [Mitakshara law] and § 94 [Dayabhaga law].

344. Intention necessary to constitute reunion.—To constitute a reunion, there must be an intention of the parties to reunite in estate and interest (m). In Bhagwan Dayal v. Reoti Devi the Supreme Court pointed out that it is implicit in the concept of a reunion that there shall be an agreement between the parties to reunite in estate with an intention to revert to their former status. Such an agreement may be express or may be implied from the conduct of the parties. The conduct must be of an incontrovertible character and the burden lies heavily on a party who asserts reunion (n). The mere fact that the parties who have separated live together or trade together after partition, does not amount to reunion (*n*1). Such an intention may be inferred if the parties jointly take a mortgage in which it is recited that they are members of a joint family. provided it is clearly shown that the recital is known to all the parties. If there is no such evidence it cannot be inferred that the parties have reunited (o). There can be no reunion unless there is an agreement between the parties to reunite in estate with the intention to remit them to their former status as members of a joint family (p). But possession of family properties by a reuniting member at the time of reunion is not essential (q). Since a minor is not competent to contract, it follows, that an agreement to reunite cannot be made by, or on behalf of, a minor (r) [§ 328, sub-§ (3)].

Where the parties lived jointly but there was no reunion the ordinary law of inheritance applies (p).

IX.—PARTITION CREATED BY SO-CALLED WILL

345. Partition or family agreement created by so-called will.—(1) No member of a joint family, although he may be the head of the family, has a

---

(l) Prankishen v. Mothooramohun (1865) 10 M.I.A. 403, 406.

(m) Balkishen Das v. Ram Narain (1903) 30 Cal. 738, 753, 30 I.A. 139, 150; Jatti v. Banwari Lal (1923) 50 I.A. 192, 74 I.C. 462, ('23) A.P.C. 136. Very strong evidence would be required when there was a decree for partition, Parashuram v. Hirabai ('57) A.B. 59.

(n) ('62) S.C. 287, 296; (1962) IS.C.J. 348; Ramadin v. Gokulprasad ('59) A.M.P. 251.

(*n*1) Ram Huree v. Trihee Ram (1871) 15 W.R. 442; Gopal v. Kenaram (1867) 7 W.R. 35; Venkata Chenchayya v. Ramalingam ('57) A. Andh. Pra. 744.

(o) Govindoss v. Official Assignee of Madras (1934) 57 Mad. 931, 61 I.A. 257, 150 I.C. 1.

(p) Gokul Pati Datta v. Pashu Pati Nath Datta (1942) 1 Cal. 85, 201 I.C. 642, ('42) A.C. 331; Kaliammal v. Sundarammal (1949) Mad. 171; Manorama Bai v. Rama Bai ('57) A.M. 269.

(q) Godavarthi Venkanna v. G. Venkatanarayana (1947) Mad. 382.

(r) Balabux v. Rukmabai (1903) 30 Cal. 725, 734-735, 30 I.A. 130, 136. See also Kuta v. Kuta (1864) 2 Mad. H.C.A.C. 235; Bhagirathibai v. Manohar (1950) Nag. 698, ('51) A.N. 164; Balasubramania v. Narayana ('65) A.M. 409.

right to make a partition by will of joint family property among the members of the family except with their consent. A document, though called a will, may not be a will in fact, but one intended to operate from the date of its execution; such a document may be good evidence of a family arrangement contemporaneously made and acted upon by all parties, the effect of which may be to create a partition of the joint family property (s).

(2) Similarly, no member of a joint family can dispose of even his own share by will. But now sec. 30 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956 permits a coparcener to dispose of his own share by will. See post. A document, though called a will, may not be a will in fact, but one intended to operate from the date of its execution; if a member of a joint family purports by such a document to dispose of his interest in the joint family property then if the disposition is assented to by the other members of the family, the document may be good evidence of a family arrangement, and effect will be given to the disposition so made (t).

Illustrations

(1) By a document called a "will" the father and head of a joint family recorded a division of the joint family property amongst his 3 sons, giving himself no share, but allotting a double share to his eldest son. The document recited inter alia that he had divided the property among his sons in the proportions mentioned in it, and that in anticipation of the execution of the document the sons had been put into possession of their shares some 2 months previously. The evidence showed that the division had been assented to, acquiesced in and acted upon by the sons for a period of 10 years. It was held that the document was not a will but was intended to operate from its date, and was evidence of a family arrangement contemporaneously made and acted upon by all the parties: Brijraj Singh v. Sheodan Singh (1913) 35 All. 337, 40 I.A. 161, 19 I.C. 826.

(2) Two brothers, having no male issue, and constituting a joint Hindu family governed by the Mitakshara, signed a document, described therein as an agreement by way of will. The document provided in effect that if either party died without male issue, his widow should take a life interest in a moiety of the whole estate, and that if both parties died without male issue, the daughters of each, or their male issue, should divide the father's share. The document was registered. A few days after its execution one brother died, and his widow was entered as owner of a moiety of the estate. Subsequently the other brother sued for a declaration that the document was null and void. It was held that the document could not operate as will; but that, as a co-sharer in a Mitakshara joint family with the consent of all his co-sharers, could deal with the share to which he would be entitled on a partition, the document was an agreement entitling the widow of the deceased brother to a life interest in a moiety: Lakshmi Chand v. Anandi (1926) 53 I.A. 123, 48 All. 313, 95 I.C. 556, ('26) A.P.C. 54.

---

(s) Brijraj Singh v. Sheodan Singh (1913) 35 All. 337, 40 I.A. 161, 19 I.C. 826.

(t) Lakshmi Chand v. Anandi (1926) 53 I.A. 123, 48 All. 313, 95 I.C. 556, ('26) A.P.C. 34; Kuppuswami v. Perumal ('64) A.M. 291.

CHAPTER XVII

PARTITION—DAYABHAGA LAW

Note.—Attention has been drawn to the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, and sec. 16 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, in the Note at the beginning of Chapter XIII supra. Reference may be made to that Note.

346. Scope of the Chapter.—The object of the present chapter is to indicate the points of distinction between the Mitakshara and the Dayabhaga law of partition. Except as to those points, the rules of the Mitakshara law of partition apply mutatis mutandis to cases governed by the Dayabhaga law.

See § 272 and the case there cited.

347. What is partition.—According to the true notion of a Mitakshara family no individual member of that family, whilst it remains undivided, can predicate of the joint property, that he—that particular member—has a certain definite share, one-third or one-fourth. Partition, according to that law, consists in ascertaining and defining the shares of the coparceners; in other words, it consists in a numerical division of the property by which the proportion of each coparcener in the property is fixed [§ 322].

According to the Dayabhaga law, on the other hand, each coparcener has, even whilst the family remains undivided, a certain definite share in the joint property of which he is the absolute owner. The property is held in defined shares, though the possession is the joint possession of the whole family. Partition, according to that law, consists in separating the shares of the coparceners, and assigning to the coparceners specific portions of the property (u).

As under the Mitakshara law, so under the Dayabhaga law, the true test of a partition lies in the intention of the parties to separate [§ 326]. In the case of a joint Mitakshara family, that intention may be manifested by a mere agreement between the coparceners to hold and enjoy the property in defined shares as separate owners without an actual division of the property by metes and bounds (v) [§ 326]. In the case, however, of a joint Dayabhaga family, such an agreement as aforesaid is not a sufficient manifestation of the intention to separate; for according to the Dayabhaga law the joint property is held, even while the family remains joint, in defined and specific shares. To constitute a partition according to the Dayabhaga law, there must be something more than such an agreement (w). There must be a separation of the shares, and the assignment to each coparcener of specific portions of the joint property [see § 279].

348. Persons entitled to partition.—Under the Dayabhaga law, every adult coparcener, male or female (x), is entitled to enforce a partition of the

---

(u) Dayabhaga, Chap. I, paras 8-9.

(v) Appovier v. Rama Subba Aiyan (1866) 11 M.I.A. 75; Balkishen Das v. Ram Narain (1903) 30 Cal. 738, 30 I.A. 139; Parbati v. Naunihal (1909) 31 All. 412, 36 I.A. 71, 3 I.C. 195.

(w) Bata v. Gopal (1907) 5 Cal. L.J. 417.

(x) Durga Nath v. Chintamoni (1904) 31 Cal. 214.

coparcenary property. Also see Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937.

As regards minor coparceners, a suit may be brought on their behalf for a partition in the circumstances mentioned in § 308 above.

The rules stated in §§ 349-354 below and the illustrations thereunder should now be read in the context of the changes brought about in the law of succession by the Hindu Succession Act, 1956.

Illustrations

A, a Hindu, governed by the Dayabhaga school, dies leaving two sons, B and C. On A's death B and C inherit the property left by A as coparceners. B dies leaving a son D. On B's death D inherits B's share in the coparcenary property as B's heir and he becomes a coparcener with C. C dies next leaving a widow W. On C's death, W inherits C's share in the coparcenary as his heir, and she becomes a coparcener with D. The position at this stage is that we have a coparcenary consisting of two members, namely, D and W, the one a male, and the other a female (§ 277). W sues D for partition. Is she entitled to do so? Yes, and the Court will allot to her a moiety of the joint property both movable and immovable. Durga Nath v. Chintamoni (1904) 31 Cal. 214.

349. Sons, grandsons and great-grandsons.—Under the Dayabhaga law a son is not entitled to a partition of the coparcenary property against his father. The reason is that a son, according to that law, does not acquire by birth an interest in ancestral property. The same rule applies to grandsons and great-grandsons [§§ 273-274].

According to the Dayabhaga law, there can be no coparcenary in the strict sense of the term between a father and sons, or between a grandfather and grandsons, or between a great-grandfather and great-grandsons. See note to § 277 above. Under that law, the father has absolute power of disposal of the property, whether ancestral or self-acquired.

350. Illegitimate sons.—According to all the schools, the illegitimate sons of the three regenerate classes [§ 1] are not entitled to any share of the inheritance nor to any share on partition. They are entitled to maintenance only. Reference may also be made to sections 20-22 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956.

As to the illegitimate sons of a Sudra see § 43, nos. 1-2-3, on pp. 108-111 above [as to inheritance] and § 312 [as to partition].

351. Purchaser.—Where a fractional share in a property which forms part of a joint estate has been sold, the purchaser may sue for partition of that property only and for possession of the share brought by him, without asking for partition of the whole joint estate (y).

Illustration

A dies leaving two sons B and C. The family owns two immovable properties X and Y B sells his one-half share in X to D. D may sue for partition of X and for possession of a moiety thereof, without including property Y in the suit.

352. Wife.—According to the Mitakshara law, though a wife cannot herself demand a partition, she is entitled to a share on a partition between her husband and his sons [§ 315]. No such question can arise under the Dayabhaga law, for according to that law, a father is the absolute owner of his property whether ancestral or self-acquired, and the sons not being entitled to any interest in his property in his lifetime, cannot demand a partition against him [§ 273-275].

(y) Barahi v. Debkamini (1893) 20 Cal. 682.

Since a father, according to the Dayabhaga law, has absolute power of disposal over his property, whether ancestral or self-acquired, he may in his lifetime divide his property among his sons in such proportions as he likes. He is not bound to divide it equally between them, not even the ancestral property (z).

See the observations of Wilson J., in Sarolah v. Bhoobun (a).

353. Mother.—(1) As under the Mitakshara law, so under the Dayabhaga law, a mother cannot herself demand a partition; but if a partition takes place between her sons she is entitled to a share equal to that of a son after deducting the value of the stridhana, if any, which she may have received from her husband or father-in-law (b) [§ 316]. Reference may also be made to the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937.

